DUTY AND PLEASURE

VERY often these are not in agreement, but when Love unites the two they agree wonderfully well. So that instead of Duty and Pleasure we now have Duty—Love—Pleasure. Love is the cement which binds two not always congruous elements into a unity which, like some chemical combination, produces, when united, something else. Apart, each element has its uses and each its proper place in the scheme of things.

If you have read thus far, you will be wondering what we are driving at. Well, it is this. We think that we can show you how to produce out of the three elements we have mentioned a force which, if acted upon by every reader, will effect a great transformation.

We will place the cement first of the ingredients—To your "Love" for the Cause of British-Israel Truth add your "Duty" to your neighbour who knows little or nothing of British-Israel blessings, and it will be your "Pleasure" and theirs if you send us a subscription for THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER for 1929 to be sent to your friend or neighbour. The combination of—

Love to the Cause and
Duty to your neighbour brings
Pleasure and blessing to your friend and not least to yourself and to us.

The cost is small—only three shillings for three months, six shillings for six months, or twelve shillings a year. Fifty-two times during 1929 your friend will remember and thank you.

Send your instructions, with remittance, to :—

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

DEAR FRIENDS, AND FELLOW-WORKERS FOR THE KING,

ANOTHER year has gone into history and has brought the completion of another volume of our beloved Journal. The passage of the time, indeed the flight of the time, has been marked by the Calendar; and also by the things which have been attempted and which have been done during that time.

Week by week it has been my pleasure, with my esteemed fellow-contributors, to address you. Week by week we have sought together the old things and the new things of the Kingdom—and now the results are in our hands in the finished volume of A.D. 1928.

I look back also upon a succession of wonderful gatherings in three great branches of the Anglo-Saxon family: namely, Britain, Canada, and the United States of America, all brought together to hear the news of the Kingdom, and all, being so brought together, obtaining a consciousness, in some measure, of the Presence of Our Lord and Master.

What wonderful gatherings we have had in every month of the year, and what fellowship with what multitudes of eager British-Israel followers of Our Lord!

In connection with these travels from place to place, and these gatherings of friends of the Truth, there has been a wonderful fellowship. Men of all ranks, and of all shades of opinion as regards general matters, have met and found themselves brethren in the ranks of our marching armies of the Kingdom. Women, also of every walk in life, have found one great controlling influence and field of labour in our ranks.

What organizations we have seen growing—local, provincial, State, Dominion-wide and national in the year that has gone by! A few more years of effort will see such a strength of manhood and womanhood led forward by the best-informed scholars, the most devoted Christian workers, and the most highly-placed in ecclesiastical, national and social affairs, as will assure the permanence of the work and final triumph of the Gospel of the Kingdom.

What wonderful unfoldings of new riches in the pages of the sacred Book there have been for all of us as each has brought and contributed his, or her, contribution!

What marked progress history has made in the fulfilment of prophecy during the year that has just gone by!

Surely we close the year by inscribing the mile-post we have reached with the ancient word our fathers delighted in, namely, Ebenezer, or, in plain English, "Hitherto the Lord hath helped us."

The New Year will open with the greatest opportunity, and the call to the greatest task our Movement has yet been privileged to answer.

Step by step we are covering all the ground of Biblical exposition in the pages of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE and in the literature produced and on our shelves. This has been an Herculean task, but the completion is in sight.

Step by step we have unthreaded the mazes of secular history so that the progress of Israel through the Continents and through the ages is now being laid bare to the eyes of the historian at every stage.

Withal the spirit of Truth has been present and has multiplied the results of such efforts as we have been able to put forward manyfold, so that the present result of the effort to preach the Gospel of the Kingdom is little short of miraculous.

Digitized by Google

No resources which have been at our disposal, no influence we have been enabled to wield as a body, and no efforts we have been able to make, are at all sufficient to explain the wonderful spread of the glorious Truth.

We are reminded that once in a company of thousands, who accompanied Our Lord into the wilderness, a lad, alone amongst all the multitude, was able to contribute five loaves, or cakes, and two small fishes towards feeding thousands. Jesus took the meagre offering and so multiplied it that five thousand men, not to speak of women and children, ate of the little lad's bounty, blessed and multiplied by Our Lord, and the multitude were satisfied and twelve baskets were left over, upon which the little lad had, of course, first claim.

We have offered our loaves and fishes, and, like the lad, have been privileged to be hosts with Our Lord to feed a multitude of guests. We have all shared this privilege.

It is meal-time again, and the multitude is hungry; it is for us to give of what we have, and to serve, that the people may be fed.

You will join with us in prayer; in service; and in provision during the coming year, and may the Lord's richest blessing be upon our gifts and our labours.

With best wishes for a very Happy New Year, in commemoration of which we will remember the Second Advent which now draws so near.

Yours in the Kingdom Service,

WM. PASCOE GOARD.

"SPEAK UNTO THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL THAT THEY GO FORWARD."

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD, F.R.G.S.

IT is the voice of the Lord God of Israel who issues the command.

The pilgrimage which began in the days of Abraham, nearly two thousand years before Christ, is still being carried forward. "For here we have no continuing city." "For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God."

The national march forward has never come to an end, since the pillar of cloud and the pillar of fire by day and by night began its stately movement at the head of the hosts of Israel in the wilderness.

Ages have passed since the beginning of the majestic movement forward of the hosts of Israel. Generations and dispensations have come and gone, and still there comes to us the steady tramp—tramp—tramp of marching hosts. Many lands have been traversed. Continents have been involved in the movement. The oceans have been whitened with the sails of the fleets carrying the moving peoples, and the islands of the seas have resounded to the sound of the songs of Israel.

Modern days are here, and still the march goes on. From east to west until the western movement has reached the east again. From east to west across the Atlantic, and then across the continent of America, and then across the Pacific to India, to Australia and New Zealand. Then westward still into the Indian Ocean, and the Red Sea, and to the Persian Gulf. From thence overland to Sinai, Aleppo and Jerusalem; and the people who, as a nation, marched out under Moses and Joshua reached home again under Allenby; thus completing the world-girdling course of the movement.

What an age it has been that has seen the closing up of the circle of the girdle of the earth, compassed by the marching hosts of Israel in some thirty-five hundred years of national movement.

The last year has seen a goodly march forward on the part of this Federation. We have seen the Truth preached as a witness over continents and beyond oceans. More; we have seen the Truth gather together a people in many lands who stand for the Truth, and who are taking up the message to carry it forward. We have seen the nations of the earth giving ear to the sound of the message. Some have smiled, some have raved, most have heard, that God is still good to Israel, and that God is leading Israel forward on to its changeless destiny.

The past year has seen the ear of the leaders of our nations turned to catch the message, and its significance, and to weigh their own responsibilities in the light of it.

The past year has seen the ranks of the clergy and ministry penetrated, and many stalwarts have come forward to take a hand in the proclamation of the good news, while a multitude of others are making enquiry into the verities of the matter.

The past year has seen the attention of professional scholars turned in the direction of this department of Truth, with enquiry rather than, as before, with prejudgment and scorn; and a number have come to the knowledge at least that there is Truth in our message. This is next door to the knowledge of the Truth of the message.

We thank God for real advance as never before.

But the task has increased with the development. It is true that still the leadership of the movement of thought in this direction is with us. We are anxiously looking for the time when the leadership will be with the leaders of the Church and of the Universities. That will come; for there are abundance of men of sincere purpose who require only to know, to stand for the Truth. But that time is months, perhaps a few years, off yet. It is not far in advance, for history has nearly caught up with the day of which it is prophesied "Then shall my people Israel know that I am Jehovah their God from that day and forward." Now when Israel knows its God, Israel must, of necessity, also know itself. That day is just ahead. In the meantime, Israel-Britain and Israel-America, and the Lion nations of the Continent who also are of Israel stock, are like sleeping men being awakened, and who at the moment are seeing men as trees walking. Israel is awakening. It is our task to carry on until she is fully awake.

We know what is but dimly anticipated by the leaders of Israel at this time. They are striving to unify Britain, America, Europe, and the other nations by the League of Nations. God is striving to unify Britain, America, Europe, and the other nations by means of the Kingdom administration.

The leaders as yet do not recognize that in the Kingdom and Throne of David there is the Divinely-appointed centre of the administration of the nations.

The League of Nations fails in this, that it does not officially recognize God as the central figure and authority at the Council Board.

Digitized by Google

The Kingdom organization is pivoting upon Jehovah as the God and as the King of the whole organization.

The Celto-Saxon nations, which centre in Britain, and which include all the nations which fly the Lion flag, are built into a great square which is the enlargement of that national square described in the Book of Numbers, and have for their centre the Tabernacle of the Most High.

What a contrast is here. The ideals, up to a point, are the same: the unification in pursuit of peace for the nations of the earth.

The League is striving to do it from the human point of view, without God.

The Kingdom is actually bringing it to pass under the direction of God, the King of Israel, and through Israel, the king of all the nations.

Already there are six hundred and fifty millions (circa) under the two flags of the Kingdom, i.e., the British flag and that of the United States.

All of these many peoples, tongues, and nations, are brought into the liberty of the Common Law. Among them all there is peace. Danger of war is in the earth; but not within this great fold. Bring the other nations into it; let the Common Law prevail among all, bringing equality and justice to all; let the administration of the law be in the appointed hands, namely, the hands of the House of David; let the faith of the nations centre around Israel's God and King: and there will equally be peace in all the earth, and prosperity.

Now there is no way by which this Kingdom rule can be imposed upon the nations. God does not desire that it should be established by aggressive wars upon weaker or stronger peoples. It must come as a gift of God, to be desired and sought after by the nations.

Seeing that we are now traversing the low passage of the Pyramid which is marking out the progress of the present period of prophecy, we are led to believe that the time is upon us when the nations will, one by one, make application for admission into the family of nations as they now are making application for admission into the League of Nations. The latter is an effort in a good direction. But without God it cannot fully succeed, as will shortly be made manifest. The Kingdom, on the other hand, is now demonstrating a wonderful success among, and embracing, a fourth of the human family.

Every Israel nation in the Empire is equally self-governing and free. Every other nation may come in and be equally self-governing and free. And in the meantime, every other nation so coming in will enjoy the mutual protection of the Kingdom, and will add strength to the Kingdom.

The time for such applications is not far distant.

But this will put a task of leadership upon the whole people of Britain, and upon the leaders of Britain, such as has never been put upon her before. Britain and America would fail, miserably fail, were they to attempt the task that is coming from the standpoint of human wisdom, as the League of Nations is doing. Britain and America will succeed because Divine Wisdom has outlined the plan; settled the laws; ordained the administration; appointed the ministering services; and made all provision for abundant success.

What then shall be done in this regard?

The peoples of the British and American nations must be instructed in the verities of the prophets, and of the law, and of the Gospel of the Kingdom, as provided by the Almighty God. It is not a matter of peradventure, but a fact, that the knowledge of these things is confined to those who are in or have been awakened by the various branches of the Movement to which we belong. The treasure which has been committed to us, in the way of knowledge and of doctrine, is second only to that which was committed to the Apostles and disciples at the time of Pentecost. It is the very same treasure of doctrine which Christ first committed to the twelve, and then the seventy, when He sent them forth to preach the Gospel of the Kingdom.

We must master it by the Grace of God. Any man who masters the various threads of truth which go to establish this position will have done such a work in the field of learning as would be the equivalent to a University degree. Every University scholar who has added to his knowledge that which this phase of Truth unfolds will be the best equipped and most valuable scholar in the world to-day. The power in his hands for good will be limitless. We must be at it, day and night, to master all the facts and all the truth involved in this great theme. Not as a special study, but as the general basis of the knowledge of the things of God and of the things which most matter to men.

Having mastered it, we must proclaim it. The time is short. "The King's business requireth haste."

There are many who oppose on imaginary grounds. Perhaps there are some who support on imaginary grounds. This is regrettable; the latter only less than the former. Let us know the facts and be instructed as to the truths, and out of knowledge bring forth instruction.

What a wonderful result there has been, and how widespread, in the last few years.

With the means at the disposal of the Federation the message has been sent forth very widely. With the organization and training now in hand, and the means, this year should see the message go much farther afield than in the last years. Or, at least, if that cannot be, for truly the Gospel of the Kingdom has been sent to the ends of the earth, where there are ones and twos in a whole country or province there should be and shall be multitudes.

To this end let us pray. To this end let us labour. To this end let us sacrifice. To this end let us supply the necessary means; God will supply the spirit of power. He will call the men and women to His standard for the proclamation of the Truth. Many are waiting now to be sent forth. Up to the limit of our means we are doing this. We leave the rest with God and with you. Let us all hear His Voice:

"Speak unto the Children of Israel that they go forward."

Readers of THE MESSAGE, what shall we make this year? Humanly speaking, the measure of our material support will be the measure of the movement forward. Divinely speaking, the labour and sacrifice of the people will be multiplied of God to the accomplishment of miracle results as when the lad gave five loaves and two small fishes, and Our Lord, taking them into His own hands, multiplied them into enough to feed five thousand, and then gave back twelve baskets full. And so, the lad and Jesus were the hosts who fed five thousand guests. How many shall we—and Jesus—feed with the Word of Truth as to the Kingdom this year?

THEOLOGIANS DECLARE BIBLE STORIES ARE "IMPOSSIBLE."

By F. de P. S.

THE Daily Mail of November 30th, 1928, startled many of its million readers by its article under the above headline commenting on a voluminous work lately published, of which the chief editor is Dr. Gore, styled "The Greatest English Theologian Living," assisted by other notable men.

The strongest possible protest against the opinions and statements this work contains will arise in the hearts of faithful Christians, who rightly look upon the Bible as the inspired Word of GOD.

Have Dr. Gore and his co-workers forgotten such passages in it as: "Is anything too hard for the Lord?" (Genesis xviii, 14.) "With God all things are possible." (Matthew xix, 26.) "For with God nothing shall be impossible." (Luke i, 37)?

Pray God that the arrogance and intellectual pride of these "theologians" may not do incalculable harm to those whose faith in the Word of God is not firmly established.

Strange that "some of the most learned and most devout scholars in the Anglican Communion" cast doubt on such facts as the Deluge, when the Lord Jesus Himself confirms the account of it given in Genesis! He said: "As the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. For as in the days that were before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark. And knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." (Matthew xxiv, 37-39.) Jesus Christ said also: "I thank Thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because Thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. Even so, Father: for so it seemed good in Thy sight." (Matthew xi, 25-26.)

Let us read thoughtfully the account of the Deluge given in Genesis, chapters vi to ix inclusive.

First we find that men became so persistently evil in their imagination, purposes and desires that God deemed it necessary to utterly destroy the race, with the exception of Noah and his family, who found grace in the eyes of the Lord—for Noah was a just man and perfect—and walked with God.

But the Lord God did not immediately destroy those evil men; He gave them one hundred and twenty years in which to repent, to "turn from their wickedness and live," and they were constantly warned by Noah, who was "a preacher of righteousness" to them long before the Flood came upon the earth.

And how did the Flood come? It was NOT by tidal waves or ocean storms. Read what the Book says:

"The Lord said unto Noah: Come thou and all thy house into the ark . . . . . for yet seven days and I will cause it TO RAIN upon the earth forty days and forty nights."

The Ferrar Fenton translation of the Scriptures puts it: "I MYSELF will bring a downrush of water upon the earth.—When the seven days had passed then the downrush of water came upon the earth—the belts in the heavens were broken and there was a downrush on to the earth for forty days and forty nights."

The Authorized Version says: "All the fountains of the great deep (space) were broken up and the floodgates of heaven were opened, and the rain was upon the earth forty days and forty nights. And the waters prevailed exceedingly and overwhelmed the earth one hundred and fifty days, and all the high hills and the mountains that were under the whole heaven were covered."

There was one way in which such a cataclysm could have been brought about: by an unprecedented and terrific rain from heaven. And here natural sciences—Astronomy and Geology—explain.

We know that the earth was at one time "without form and void," that is—that it was just a whirling, seething mass of vapours which contained all the elements now known on earth.

By the law of gravitation the heavier substances formed a nucleus or core containing the metals and the material of the igneous rocks; round this core the less heavy matter whirled and in the course of ages fell upon the earth, the lighter falling last, such as clay, lime, chalk, etc., burying the dense tropical vegetation which, becoming carbonized by heat and pressure, formed the coal seams. Thus the geological strata were formed.

But there still remained suspended the water vapours forming a cloak or canopy over the whole earth; just as we now observe by telescope is the case with several planets in our solar system.

Returning to the account of the Creation given in the Bible we find that God made a division or expansion between the waters which were under the "firmament" or expansion and those that were above the "firmament"—which He called "heaven." In that way the seas were formed in which the first living creatures appeared.

But before the creation of man and until Noah's day there still remained a thick canopy of watery vapour enveloping the whole earth. Then the Flood came, "the flood-gates of heaven were opened and the fountains of the great deep were broken up."

Uninterruptedly for forty days and forty nights the condensed vapour fell in an overwhelming downrush of water, covering the highest mountains, and every living creature upon the land was destroyed, the only survivors being those with Noah in the Ark.

It took eight months for the waters to subside and a whole year before they were gathered in their ocean bed. Science proves that at some period of the earth's existence the level of the ocean was greatly raised; that was after the Deluge.

But this "BIBLE STORY" carries us further into the realms of science—Biology and Meteorology. First it gives a reason why men lived before the Flood to such astonishing ages. The canopy of water enfolding the globe, together with the heat of the earth itself, maintained an even temperature on the earth's surface, and the vaporous canopy impeded the action of the sun's actinic rays which cause fermentation and decay. After the Flood direct sunlight fell unimpeded upon the earth, and the Bible tells us that longevity very rapidly diminished.

Then when the flood was over, the Lord God established a covenant with Noah and with his seed after him that "neither shall all flesh be cut off any more by the waters of a flood, neither shall there any more be a flood to destroy the earth." And He gave as a token—the rainbow in the heaven.

GOD always works through nature and in a natural way, however incredible or "impossible" it may seem to great theologians and others blinded by intellectual pride. Never will there be an universal flood again because the natural cause for such a catastrophe no longer exists, the great canopy of vapour is gone!

Until that was removed and the sun shone clearly upon the surface of the earth—MEN NEVER SAW A RAINBOW—because the rainbow is only visible when the sunlight falls upon a local shower of rain! Thus it was an entirely new token of a covenant between the Lord God and the earth.

Will the "theologians" say that is "impossible"?

CONGRESS ADDRESS.

The Rev. W. Pascoe Goard said:

I AM delighted to have the privilege of standing again with my friend, Professor Odlum. He is not a wandering Jew, but he is a wandering Israelite! There is not a sea or a continent that he has not travelled in search after historical, archæological and scientific knowledge which would bring light to bear upon this sacred Book. It has been a great privilege to be with him.

We have had a very wonderful week. There have gathered with us representatives from all the Continents. Professor Odlum and I have had to change our watches every day of travel eastward from the Pacific Coast; in all eight hours. Does that tell you anything? From just one-third of the distance around the world he has travelled in order to attend these meetings. Mr. Springett, from Winnipeg, put his watch forward six hours; Mr. Frame, from Toronto, four hours; Mr. Blackaller, from Victoria, eight hours. We have had representatives from New Zealand and from Africa. It is wonderful how this great message of the Kingdom is going to the very ends of the earth; and God is being glorified, and the faith of His people is being established.

Is it all worth while? Well, one thing we have done, by the grace of God, is that we have demonstrated the literal historicity and dependability of this Book from the first chapter of Genesis to the last chapter of Revelation. I do not ask you to accept that because I say so. Neither will we refrain from accepting the fact because you may not yet recognize it. But after what has been for many of us a lifetime of hard study in order to get our feet upon the solid rock, we have found, as Mr. Gladstone did in his day, that this rock of Holy Scripture is indeed impregnable. Moreover, we have co-ordinated the Scriptures. I have said in my younger days many a time, why was there not order in the preparation of the sacred Scriptures? Why is it such a scrap-book of wonderful and beautiful passages? Well, that was because I read them in a scrappy fashion. Permit a word of personal testimony; there never was a man in the literary field more surprised than myself when sitting down to treat this Book as you would treat any other book—to read it from the beginning to the end. And having one morning given instructions that I should not be disturbed, I started at Genesis, and read rapidly book after book through the Old Testament and then through the New Testament. It took me three days to do that, with little time to eat or sleep. But as I did so the great Divine highway along which God has led His hosts of Israel unfolded before me, without a single detour, just one straight pathway of history and prophecy from the creation of Adam to the Coming again of Our Lord Jesus Christ, and finally His handing of the Kingdom of Israel over to the Father. It is an amazing thing that this Book tells us one story, and tells it perfectly. We are told to-day that the Old Testament, and especially the early books, are myth and fable and folk-lore. Now, there is not a paragraph that you can take out of the wonderful sequence of that Book without taking away a vital link in the chain of knowledge. Moreover, every link that is necessary to the completion of the chain from the beginning to the end is there in the Book. There were contributors to that Book covering a period of 1,200 years; they wrote in different languages, and in different countries; and each made his contribution to one story, the story of God's dealings with Israel. We read all that in this wonderful Book, and that is what we are out to proclaim; that is what our life is dedicated to. And when the Christian world understands that Israel history, that British history, demonstrates the supernatural, Divine inspiration of the Bible, its faith will be re-established, and it will win the world for God.

Then, friends, we have uncovered the dealings of God, the goings forth of God among the nations. Listen to this wonderful phrasing in the 1st chapter of the Epistle to the Ephesians by that great Israelite, the Apostle Paul, that great British covenant man. Let me begin with the 6th verse: "To the praise of the glory of His grace, wherein He hath made us accepted in the beloved; in Whom we have redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of His grace." Who has redemption? All the world? Not at all. Isaiah says it was Israel, divorced from God, according to Hosea, who was redeemed to God by the blood of Jesus Christ Our Lord. For all the world atonement was made, but the redemption—"Thou hast redeemed Thy people Israel." "Wherein He hath abounded toward us in all wisdom and prudence; having made known unto us the mystery of His will, according to His good pleasure which He hath purposed in Himself." Said a brother minister of mine, a theological professor: "Mr. Goard, do you profess to know the will and mind and purpose of God?" "Yes." "How can you know the will of God?" "Simply because He has revealed it to me." There it is. "Having made known unto us the mystery of His will, according to His good pleasure which He hath purposed in Himself; that in the dispensation of the fulness of times He might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in Him; in Whom also we have obtained an inheritance, being pre-destinated according to the purpose of Him Who worketh all things after the counsel of His own will." Pre-destination; fore-ordination. Now forget all the old dry-as-dust discussions on that. Has God pre-destinated? Has God fore-ordained? Yes. You have the outline of the onward march of empires and nations; the nations, beginning with Nebuchadnezzar at Babylon, and ending with the Kaiser. You will read it all there. He did not pre-destinate them to lose their souls. He declared concerning them, "We would have healed Babylon, but she is not healed." He did pre-destinate and fore-ordain that the right to rule in the kingdom of men should be given into the hands of Nebuchadnezzar and his successor during seven times of prophecy, and not longer. We go back to the beginning of that period, and we read history in prophecy, and we take the ancient histories of Asia, and the histories of Europe, and we find that Babylon, Persia, Greece and Rome, and all the modern nations of Continental Europe, have absolutely filled the bill. We find at the same time that He pre-destinated or sentenced Israel to seven times of depression, 2,520 years of suffering. We find that later He sentenced Judah to a similar period of punishment, beginning later and ending later. We read the history of Israel-Britain from 740-721 B.C. to 1779-1800 A.D.—2,520 years of punishment. Then the outburst of blessing in every department of our national and imperial life. We read of Judah from the taking of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar to the delivery of Jerusalem by Allenby, 2,520 years of troubled history, and we see that up-to-date history is absolutely fulfilled prophecy. We look around the nations to-day, and we ask, What is going to happen now? The stone became a great mountain and filled the whole earth. Not all the votes of all the nations gathered around the table of the League of Nations, and around that other League that is centred in Moscow, can change by one iota the purpose of God which He purposed in Himself. Thank God that this earth in which we live is under Divine rule. With David I sing, "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me, bless His holy Name. Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all His benefits. Who forgiveth all thine iniquities; Who healeth all thy diseases; Who redeemeth thy life from destruction; Who crowneth thee with loving-kindness and tender mercies. Who satisfieth thy mouth with good things, so that thy youth is renewed like the eagle's. The Lord executeth righteousness and judgment for all that are oppressed. He made known His ways unto Moses, His acts unto the Children of Israel. . . . The Lord hath prepared His throne in the heavens; and His kingdom ruleth over all. Bless the Lord, ye His angels, that excel in strength, that do His commandments, hearkening unto the voice of His word." Oh, the glory of the day, and the certainty of it. The crashing of empires, the death shriek of nations, the passing of systems, the commotion of nations, but amidst it all: "Let not your hearts be troubled, ye believe in God, believe also in Me." Absolute pre-destination of a race, of a nation. "Ye shall be unto Me a kingdom of priests, a holy nation." That is pre-destination, pre-destined of God. The pre-destination was God laying down a plan for His Kingdom. We have the immediate results of the redemption of Israel told in that wonderful 54th chapter of Isaiah, which ends thus: "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord, and their righteousness is of Me, saith the Lord." It cannot be otherwise. Then there is the invitation, "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters." And then, strangely enough, the Almighty assumes the attitude and the language of prayer. God our Maker; God our Redeemer, praying to us, His sons and daughters: "Incline your ear, and come unto Me; hear, and your soul shall live; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David." What are those? The Throne and Kingdom established for ever. "Behold, I have given him for a witness to the people, a leader and commander to the people." That while the sun and moon and stars endure David shall never want a man to sit upon the throne of the House of Israel. Have you honoured God by believing His simple testimony? Have you honoured Jesus Christ in preaching the Gospel of the Kingdom? Or have you dishonoured Him by saying that Israel has disappeared, and that the throne of David has gone? Now here is a plea: "Incline your ear, and come unto Me; hear, and your soul shall live; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David. Behold, I have given him for a witness to the people, a leader and commander to the people."

My friends, where are you in the political field? Are you following the leadership of Jesus? If so, what is His platform? The Kingdom, the Law, the equitable Administration, the Redemption, the Atonement. There is the basis of the politics of Jesus. If you will turn to this wonderful Book you will find that Jesus Christ is called again and again the Lord of hosts, of the hosts of Israel. He came to Joshua. He appeared again and again to His people. In historic times over yonder in Palestine, when they had no refuge but God, He was all-sufficient. When crossing the Atlantic recently I read once again the story of Wellington. The world has fallen down to worship Napoleon; but Napoleon was a pigmy compared with Wellington. Wellington was never given more than an army of about thirty thousand men by Britain, but with that thirty thousand men, and with a few Continental auxiliaries, upon whom he could never depend, he smashed the whole Napoleonic regime. Think of it. He accomplished mighty ends with altogether insufficient means. Drake and his little ships against the Armada! The "Contemptibles" standing up to the might of the forty years trained military machine of Germany! "Behold, I have given him for a witness to the people, a leader and commander to the people." "I have given him for a leader," out there in the modern wilderness of the New Dominion, so that the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose; it shall blossom abundantly. We have watched the steady march of the millions of Anglo-Saxons from the eastern side of North America right out to the Pacific Coast, and in taking possession of that great heritage out there we have seen the literal fulfilment of the prophecy, in part at least. Our God has appeared in the midst of us.

And now at the end of this wonderful week I cannot do better than quote those wonderful words: "Oh come, let us worship and fall down; let us kneel before Jehovah our Maker. For He is the Lord our God, and we are the people of His pasture and the sheep of His hand." Thank God, redemption has come. "He has visited and redeemed His people."

THE YEARS 1800—1820.

By COLONEL J. C. TYLER.

IN THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER of November 17th, 1928, the Rev. Pascoe Goard mentions the period 1799-1818.

Then, he says, the 2,520 years, by the grace of God, finished. And then, about 1800–1820, Israel emerged from their punishment, and since that time she has been marching on to achievement after achievement . . . blind and deaf . . . led forward by Almighty God.

These words touch a new chord.

Mr. Pascoe Goard implies nothing less than a wonderful transformation in the status of the British at that time, and such was indeed the case.

In those same years some very apropos facts were recorded by a celebrated officer who took part in several campaigns, who was also a keen student and writer.

These are his words, found in his "Essay on the Military Policy and Institutions of the British Empire," written in 1808–9, a book which quickly ran through four editions, so eagerly was it read. For this was a period of great anxiety in England.

In page 319 he says: "We had formed the most magnificent ideas of the Austrian, Prussian and Russian armies; their soldierlike appearance, discipline, valour and tactics were subjects of our enthusiastic admiration; when to our utter astonishment the French came forward and beat them all one after the other. Then French enthusiasm, French valour, French manœuvres, French Generals, in their turn, became the subjects of our amazement and terror, and we talked of the dreadful power of Bonaparte with reverential awe. All the while we looked upon ourselves as a race of pigmies in comparison with these mighty warriors of the continent; and, by other nations, the very name of an English soldier could not be mentioned without a sneer of derision. When lo! to confound the universe, and ourselves most of all, it was proved that the humble, despised, inexperienced British troops could beat these conquerors of the world."

In page 322: "The British troops now strike terror into their enemies, and fill their friends with confidence, wherever they go."

Of the battle of Maida he wrote to a brother officer (1806): "The Light Infantry were the first corps engaged. I had the pleasure of witnessing the famous charge in which they ran down the heroes of Marengo like a flock of sheep."

After taking part, on the staff of Sir John Moore, in the retreat and the battle of Corunna (1808–9) he wrote: "The British Army was exposed to every kind of hardship, to incessant fatigue, hunger and bad weather, the rear-guard every day engaged; and from this the only satisfaction derived is to know the infinite superiority of our soliders to those of the rest of the world. Braver men never existed. In every attack the enemy were baffled and beaten off. They could never make the smallest impression upon our troops, nor did they ever occasion the least terror or confusion. Nor did they boast a single prisoner whom sickness and fatigue did not oblige us to leave behind. Our Dragoons above all must have astonished the haughty conquerors of Europe. They constantly attacked the enemy though double their numbers, and drove them before them like sheep. The French cavalry always fled when it came to the point of the sword. The only part of them that fought tolerably were Bonaparte's Imperial Guards headed by Lefevre, who with many of his men was taken, the rest being driven into a river."

WHO ARE THE SERAPHIMS?

By JOHN H. TENCH.

"IN the year that king Uzziah died I saw also the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and His train filled the temple.

"Above (around—F.F.) it stood the seraphims, each one had six wings; with twain he covered his face, and with twain he covered his feet, and with twain he did fly.

"And one cried unto another and said, Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hosts; the whole earth is full of His glory."

This is the only mention of Seraphims in the Bible. Professor Driver says: "Their presence seems intended to symbolize the adoration unceasingly due from the highest of created beings to the Creator."

What was the vision? Isaiah saw the Holy Place of the Temple, enlarged and glorified, the veil drawn aside, a lofty throne taking the place of the Ark, and upon it the Lord, the Sovereign of the universe. And His attendants filled the Temple.

What is the meaning of the Seraphims' six wings? The first pair indicate reverence, hiding from their eyes the vision of Jehovah. The second pair, covering not only the feet but the loins also (so Cheyne translates it accurately) signify self-forgetfulness. The third, upon which the Seraphims were poised, signify active service, and when engaged on Jehovah's work all six wings come into operation. Dr. Bancroft says: "Mercury would be a snail in comparison with a modern express train when placed beside one of these six-winged Seraphims of Jehovah."

The beloved disciple John has a similar vision recorded in Revelation iv: "I was in the spirit, and, behold, a throne was set in heaven, and One sat on the throne, And He that sat was to look upon like a jasper and a sardine stone; and there was a rainbow round about the throne, in sight like unto an emerald. And round about the throne were four and twenty seats; and upon the seats I saw four and twenty elders sitting, clothed in white raiment; and they had on their heads crowns of gold. And out of the throne proceeded lightnings and thunderings and voices: and there were seven lamps of fire burning before the throne, which are the seven Spirits of God. And before the throne there was a sea of glass like unto crystal: and in the midst of the throne, and round about the throne, were four living creatures (R.V.) full of eyes before and behind. And the first living creature was like a Lion, and the second living creature was like a Calf, and the third living creature had a face as a Man, and the fourth living creature was like a Flying Eagle. And the four living creatures had each of them six wings about him, and they were full of eyes within: and they rest not day and night, saying, Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, which was, and is, and is to come."

"Lord, Thy glory fills the Heaven;
Earth is with its fullness stored;
Unto Thee be glory given,
Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord."

Like Isaiah, John, the beloved disciple, sees the Holy Place of the Temple enlarged and glorified, but a lofty throne takes the place of the Ark and of the Mercy Seat. Instead of the Shekinah, or symbol of the Presence of Jehovah, the Apostle beheld in the midst of the throne and of the four living creatures, and in the midst of the elders, a Lamb as it had been slain, which is the symbol of the Lamb of God, Israel's Redeemer and King.

On turning to the Book of Numbers we find the imagery in the Vision represents the encampment of God's people Israel.

In the centre of the camp there was the Tabernacle containing the Ark of God and the Oracles, and over it was the Shekinah, the Visible Presence of Jehovah. Around the Tabernacle were camped the priests and the Levites, whose function it was in the journeys of Israel to take down the Tabernacle when Moses said "Rise up, Lord, and let Thine enemies be scattered, and let them that hate Thee flee before Thee," and when it was re-erected Moses said "Return, O Lord, unto the many thousands of Israel."

"The Lord spake unto Moses and unto Aaron and said: The children of Israel shall pitch every man by his own standard, with the ensigns of their fathers' houses, far off about the Tabernacle shall they pitch. And on the east side toward the rising of the sun shall they of the standard of the camp of Judah pitch, and they that do pitch next unto him shall be the tribes of Issachar and Zebulun." The standard of Judah was a Lion.

"On the west side about the Tabernacle shall be the standard of the camp of Ephraim, and by him shall be the camps of Manasseh and Benjamin." The standard of Ephraim was a Calf or Bullock.

"On the south side about the Tabernacle shall be the standard of the camp of Reuben, and by him shall be the camps of Simeon and Gad." The standard of Reuben was a Man.

"On the north side about the Tabernacle shall be the standard of the camp of Dan, and by him shall be the camps of Asher and Naphtali." The standard of Dan was a Flying Eagle.

The whole represents the square of Israel's encampment when at rest under the guardianship of Jehovah in the desert. This square formation also reminds us of the Battle of Waterloo when the French cavalry were always foiled whenever the British regiments formed into a square.

Who were the four and twenty elders clothed in white sitting upon four and twenty seats? Our Lord gives the information in regard to twelve of these elders in His answer to Peter, who said to Jesus, "Behold we have forsaken all and followed Thee, what shall we have therefore? And Jesus said unto them, Verily I say unto you, that ye which have followed Me, in the regeneration when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of His glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." No doubt the other twelve are chosen from Old Testament worthies of whom Daniel will be one, for we remember those words spoken to him by an angel of God, "Go thou thy way until the end be; for thou shalt rest and stand in thy lot at the end of the days."

In the vision given to the Apostle John these twenty-four elders sitting on twenty-four seats evidently take the place of the Priests and Levites in the camp formation of Israel, just as the throne, high and lifted up, takes the place of the Ark of the Covenant; and the Lamb of God, as King of Israel, takes the place of the Shekinah.

Who are the four living creatures full of eyes before and behind? They are the four leaders of the twelve tribes of Israel, the first represented as a Lion, the ensign of Judah; the second represented as a Calf, the ensign of Ephraim; the third represented as a Man, the ensign of the tribe of Reuben; the fourth represented as a Flying Eagle, the ensign of the tribe of Dan.

When the vision in the Revelation is compared with that of the prophet Isaiah we notice that the living creatures in the vision of John are identical with the Seraphims of Isaiah, for in each case they have six wings.

What was the song of these Seraphims? One chorus cried "Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hosts!" Then the other chorus would answer "The fulness of the whole earth is His glory!" In the threefold repetition, in the light of later revelation, Christians have not unnaturally seen a foreshadowing of the Holy Trinity.

Why was Isaiah filled with fear at the vision? Because it was a vision of God, and the Hebrews believed that no one could see God and live. So Moses "hid his face, for he was afraid to look upon God." So Job "abhorred himself and repented in dust and ashes." So Peter fell down at his Lord's feet and cried "Depart from me, for I am a sinful man, O Lord," and so Isaiah felt himself to be "a man of unclean lips."

What should be the effect of Isaiah's wonderful vision upon us? That sight of God—the living, holy, loving God—made Isaiah a prophet. The teachers of to-day need just such a sight of God if we are to be prophets. The vision of a holy Saviour, the Lamb of God Who taketh away the sin of the world, should make us long to be a holy people, that we may become a glorified nation.

"Father of Heaven, Whose love profound
A ransom for our souls hath found,
Before Thy throne we sinners bend,
To us Thy pardoning love extend.

Almighty Son, Incarnate Word,
Our Prophet, Priest, Redeemer, Lord,
Before Thy Throne we sinners bend,
To us Thy saving grace extend.

Eternal Spirit, by Whose breath
The soul is raised from sin and death,
Before Thy Throne we sinners bend,
To us Thy quickening power extend.

NEW YEAR MESSAGES.

From MAJOR J. KNOWLES, O.B.E., President, B.-I.-W.F.

DEAR MR. GOARD AND EDITORIAL STAFF,

On behalf of myself and Mrs. Knowles I write to congratulate you once more on the splendid work you have done during the past year in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER. Going as it does to all parts of the Empire and to many foreign countries, our Journal is by far the most effective means of making known the great Truth for which the British-Israel-World Federation stands, as it is eagerly read by many who for various reasons are unable to attend any of our meetings. The standard which was set up seven years ago has been maintained ever since, and we feel confident that so long as the present editors and staff remain, that standard will continue at its present high level.

We wish you all a prosperous and successful New Year.

Yours very sincerely,
JAMES KNOWLES, President, B.-I.-W.F.

AN APPRECIATION.

BY THE REV. ARTHUR PRITCHARD, M.A., Vice-President, B.-I.-W.F.

THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, apart from being a welcome weekly refreshment and stimulus to me and also, I trust, to thousands of other individual readers, continues to be to the United Kingdom and its offshoots what its name, "NATIONAL MESSAGE," was intended to connote when I suggested and proposed it seven years ago, namely, an open communication to our Kingdom-nation concerning itself.

In the first issue, January 7th, 1922, it was my privilege to point out the distinction between the Gospel of individual salvation and the Gospel of the Kingdom, and now I am given the privilege of calling worthy attention to the No. 362, dated December 8th, 1928, which I have just read with interest and with profit. What that Kingdom really is in its visible aspect upon earth is clearly shown by Dr. Mountain, who is courageously devoting the remainder of a long and useful life to its proclamation, the Kingdom (which is not a Church) being neither centred in Rome nor Canterbury, but in Westminster, the heart of the British Empire.

What the Kingdom law is and what a difference its re-institution would make in State and Church is shown in the opening article by brother Pascoe Goard, and how, in consequence, as shown in his second article, the other nations would be allowed by God to see and know modern Britain as ancient Israel continued right down the centuries, to be an Elijah and John Baptist Kingdom, eventually restoring all things according to the purpose of Almighty God, Whose counsels of old are faithfulness and truth

The various names and wanderings of the Ten-tribed Kingdom are shown in Prof. Odlum's striking synopsis of British history over a period of twenty-six centuries, and is a splendid illustration of the "wonderful things" for which British-Israel in the "Isles" and her company of kindred nations will ere long unitedly, under her Davidic king, and as one man, sing the "Psalm of Thanksgiving to God for redeeming Israel," recorded by Isaiah in chapter xxv.

This excellent No. 362, like its predecessors, ends with the Secretary-General's "Notes" which, by the way, should always be regarded as a sort of continuation of that incomplete book of the New Testament that might well be known as "Some Acts of the Holy Spirit through some Apostles and non-Apostles"; for though their successors, the Kingdom missioners, be constantly multiplied, they shall not have gone through the cities of Israel (Judah's comparatively few cities being easily gone through) scattered throughout the world and the generations (so many would there be) until the Son of Man be come again.

Meanwhile the invisible Kingdom of Heaven is undoubtedly evidencing itself as a soul, through its visible body—the ever-growing Israel-British servant-nation which, largely unknown to itself, is, according to Divine plan, preparing the way of the Lord and making His paths straight towards the goal of our Planet's regeneration.

In conclusion I express, if I may, on behalf of myself and my fellow-readers, grateful appreciation to the various producers and purveyors of our unique, official Journal, and, to adopt and adapt the Secretary-General's wish on the first page of the first number :—

"May 1929 bring relief from burdens, give new hope, new light, and be enriched with the Divine blessing!"

From the REV. DINSDALE T. YOUNG, D.D., Vice-President, B.-I.-W.F.

MY hearty greetings and best New Year's wishes to the members of the British-Israel Federation. I rejoice in the excellence of the weekly Journal, and in the noble work of the Federation.

In these days when the historical reliability of the Word of God is so ceaselessly assailed, and assailed in the name of Scholarship, you are rendering priceless service by testifying to the Truth of the Scriptures.

I am more and more persuaded that yours is the true view of the British Empire.

May the British-Israel teaching, for the individual, and for the Empire, find increasing favour, and receive God's prospering blessing.

From COLONEL EDWARD F. GOSSET, Vice-President, B.-I.-W.F.

WHAT a gap there would be in the lives of believers in our British-Israel Truth were the publication of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER suddenly to cease. We have become so accustomed to receiving it week by week that few of us realize all the work and thought and study that go to make its contents what they are.

Digitized by Google

I have had letters from Barbados and Jamaica showing great appreciation of our Journal, and how much it meant to the writers. It is such a link between the scattered portions of the Empire.

THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER has a great mission, and is fulfilling it splendidly; and we honour and admire those who so well contribute to its success, and to the setting forth of the glory of Israel's God, and the wonder of "The Atonement."

Hawkhurst, December, 1928.

From J. ARTHUR JUTSUM, ESQ., Hon. Treasurer, B.-I.-W.F.

AT the beginning of the New Year we shall be renewing our covenant with the God of Israel, and I am wondering if, at that time of real heart-searching, we might not consider if, as British-Israelites, we are conscientiously obeying the invitation of Israel's King, "Bring ye the whole tithe into the storehouse . . . and prove Me."

The fact that, through the work and faith of our Leaders, we have been supplied, almost miraculously, with money for the work so far does not justify us (the rank and file) in taking it for granted that their efforts alone will suffice for all that is needed for the future of our ever-increasing Federation.

Whilst Churches continue to refuse their pulpits to the preachers of British-Israel Truth there will be need for the appointment of more and more Commissioners to organize and instruct those Christians who, without leaving their respective Churches, desire to benefit by the fellowship of the Federation.

To be of real assistance to our Leaders cannot we laymen devise some plan for raising yearly a substantial sum in order to enable our officials to develop this real Home Missionary work? Can it be done along the lines of reviving the Tithe system amongst our membership? That system does not appear to have been abrogated by Christ as were ecclesiastical ordinances. Doubtless many of the Federation's most generous supporters have done much more than the "Whole Tithe" for the work they esteem so important, but is it not likely that many of us have failed to realize that the quickest and surest way of bringing the promised prosperity and spiritual blessing to Israel, and through Israel to all the world, would be to concentrate our "Tithe" on work for which our Federation stands? I would be glad to receive the views of laymen on this matter, or any suggestions along other lines for providing a systematic income for this special advance work, and would duly submit such suggestions to the Federation Authorities.

J. ARTHUR JUTSUM.

From the REV. T. H. WHITEHOUSE.

GREETINGS and fervent good wishes to all in the world-wide Fellowship of the Kingdom at this Festival of the Nativity. A moment's peaceful respite—and then forth again to our happy toil, telling out with gladness the dual Gospel of Divine Sovereignty and Grace: the full, free, imperative, uplifting message to the Race and Empire. The groaning world awaits it.

Tell it forth with gladness that the entire Bible is true—each part indispensable to the completeness of the whole Revelation of God to man; the Old Testament, the foundation of the New, and all the parts interwoven and interdependent, a coherent record of the Divine plan of the ages and its working-out in history.

Tell it forth with gladness that the Lord Jesus will presently sit on the throne of His father David, the Incarnate Christ in the midst of His people, reigning over a Kingdom which shall not end.

Tell it forth with gladness that the Lord hath not cast away His people whom He foreknew, but, according to His age-old promise, has moulded them into this nation and company of nations—His light-bearers, instruments and servant-administrators for the blessing of all the families of the earth. Awaken, O people, from sloth, and burst from lethargy into tireless heralding of the glorious National Message till all our people everywhere be quickened into "life from the dead."

From LANDSEER MACKENZIE, ESQ., Vice-President, B.-I.-W.F.

AS one of the older members of Council of the "Imperial British-Israel Association," out of which grew the World Federation, it is with the greatest satisfaction that I witness the enormous extension of our propaganda which has taken place under the auspices of the later body—an extension which (in the nature of things) was not possible to the older Association.

We all know, and record with gratitude, that this has been due in part to earlier spade-work, and partly to the ability and amazing energy of our Secretary-General and the zealous body of helpers who strengthen his hands.

Let us ascribe praise to God; it is evident that the Movement is approved of Him.

British-Israel Truth is the only penetrating light in a very foggy, theological world.

An hierarchy bubbling over with futile information blots out of our dear old Bible even just what it pleases them to blot out. They believe not Moses and the prophets, neither will they believe though one has risen from the dead. Like a yet older hierarchy, they thrust Him without the gates. And having put Isaiah through a critical mincing-machine, naturally they are indifferent to the word he has addressed to them—"They are shepherds that cannot understand"!

I am not aware that they have been quite so ruthless to Ezekiel; possibly they altogether decline to know him as being an offensive fellow who says rude things to them, as—"Woe to the shepherds of Israel, who feed themselves and not the flock." "Behold, I am against the shepherds."

But we believe Moses and the prophets, for we can see the fulfilment of their words, and we hold fast to Him Who rose from the dead; so we stand on the higher plane!

Consider the difficulties which assail the world at this time. Spiritual difficulties, for instance, the spawn of misguided teachers. Yet these engendered doubts glance harmlessly off our British-Israel armour, and we know our Truth for the only solvent of such doubts.

All honour then to those who work to spread the knowledge of our ennobling and God-given light; may their zeal be enlarged in the coming year!

From HENRY PROCTOR, F.R.S.L., A.V.I.

MY Dear British-Israelites,—We can thank God from the bottom of our hearts that He has dealt bountifully with us throughout the year that has just passed away into eternity. How thankful we ought to be for the fruitful seasons which He has given us here and in Canada and other parts of this vast Empire, for while we hear of earthquakes, volcanic eruptions, famines and devastating civil wars coming upon other nations, yet upon Israel the blessings of Joseph have been mightily manifested :

" With blessings of Heaven above,
Blessings of the deep that coucheth beneath,
Blessings of the breast and of the womb . . . "
" Unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills."

One cloud rests upon our national horizon, in the serious illness of our dearly-beloved King. May God's richest blessings rest upon him and the Queen and Royal Family, and upon the whole Israel of God.

God is arising to shake terribly the earth ; He will shake all nations—" but Jehovah will be a refuge unto His people, and a stronghold for the sons of Israel." (Joel iii. 16.) And to Israel He saith :

" Arise, be glad, your light is dawning,
The Eternal's splendour rises upon you,
Though darkness covers all the earth,
And a black cloud shrouds the nations,
Yet the Eternal shines out upon you,
His splendour on you gleams." (Isa. lx, 1, 2—Moffat.)

And the Children of Israel shall have the Light of God in their dwellings.

From the REV. T. SPARSHOTT JOHNSON, M.A.

" Hark the Herald Angels sing."
Are there angels, and do they sing?
Earth's thronged with angels,
Broadcasted are the songs they sing,
But only listeners-in can catch the tune.

THESE are lines which I wrote some time ago and may well begin a New Year Message to British-Israel. I suppose the wireless will soon be broadcasting our message, but meantime listeners who are aware of their identity with the Israel of God can take heart of grace when the Truth is broadcast without conscious purpose. A short time ago, on a Sunday evening, the last words which rang out over the land from the B.B.C. station were these :

" Rejoice, rejoice, Emmanuel Shall come to thee, O Israel."

The following Sunday the words were from the Word of God and, among others, were these :

" What I say unto you I say unto all, Watch."

In view of the remarkable combination of the number 11 on the 11th December, 1928, when many of us were gazing with rapt attention on Mr. Garrison's beautiful pictures of Jerusalem, how significant these wireless messages are ! The deliverance of Jerusalem, eleven months before he Armistice was signed on the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month, 1918, no doubt signifies that we are nearing the hour of midnight, but the promises to Abraham were confirmed 11 times (7 times to Abraham, 2 to Isaac and 2 to Jacob); so let us take courage in words which were written by a fellow missionary of mine in Ceylon concerning Ceylon, but which apply equally to the whole Empire :

" To Him our land shall hearken,
To Him our land shall kneel,
All right upon His shoulder,
All wrong beneath His heel ;
Oh consummation glorious
Which now by faith we sing,
Come cast we up the highway
Which brings us back our King."

THE YEAR 1929 ! ! !

From the REV. COMMANDER L. G. A. ROBERTS, R.N., Deputy President, B.-I.-W.F.

WE are entering a most remarkable era. Of this everyone of us is sure. We wish you first of all the richest blessings God has in store for His people. Our own progress as a Federation has passed its first nine years of experience following a good fifty years of struggling for its voice to be heard. It may be said by all of us, young and old as well : " What hath God wrought ? " Our sound has now gone out into all the world, and it has reached the uttermost parts of the earth. Surely the Kingdom is near at hand ! It is in our hearts to hasten the completion of this Kingdom. His ten servants will be called before Him to give an account of what each one has done by trading.

How many of us will do so with joy ?

The Kingdom, however, is not yet complete. We lack " Judah and the House of Israel, his companions." Can we not this year enter into the spirit of Our Lord's words, " Verily ye shall not have gone over all the cities of Israel until the Son of Man be come " ?

In the parable, Luke xix, 27, are mentioned : " Those Mine enemies that would not that I should reign over them bring hither and slay them before Me."

We have had our opportunity, and now let us give the same opportunity to those we now call Jews. This year is the commencement of the 70th jubilee since the fall of Jericho. May this year witness the fall of the great enemy of all God's people, so that His Kingdom may come. May we each one buckle to our sword of the Spirit and by faith overcome the opponent. (Isaiah lix, 19-21 ; lx, 3.)

From W. T. CRAIG, ESQ., F.R.G.S., President, Northern British-Israel Council.

IN tendering to THE MESSAGE my hearty congratulations upon its continued and increasing success in the world-wide field which it now occupies, the thought which comes uppermost in my mind at this season is to wish all connected with its production a Happy and a good New Year. How can we help that wish to its fullest realization ? Only by making " Shoulder to Shoulder " our watchword for the coming year, and by straining every effort to combat the Devil's attempt to undermine belief in the Bible, and to destroy the British Empire, whose foundation is the Word of God. To follow the ramifications of the evil spirits thus let loose on humanity would be to repeat much of the news in our daily newspapers, seen and recognized in the light of British-Israel Truth. It means a call for work on the part of those who see the remedy expounded in THE MESSAGE from week to week. The duty of God's Chosen People is apparent, and they can discharge it with success without fear—"Fear not . . . . . I will help thee, saith the Lord thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel." Presented first to the lost sheep of the House of Israel, the Gospel in these latter days is being preached to the ends of the earth; and so the promise is fulfilled "that at evening time it shall be light." Our constant prayer, then, must be that that light should shine into the national heart and bring about the national obedience to be established when "the Isles shall wait upon Me"; but "not unto us, O Lord, not unto us be the glory, but to Thy Name be all the praise."

From GENERAL COVENTRY WILLIAMS, C.B.

HEARTY greetings and best wishes for 1929 to our President and Staff, and all members of the B.-I.-W.F., with great hope and expectation that our faith and teaching may spread even more rapidly in the future than in the past.

I should like to take this opportunity of expressing my ideas with regard to prophecy. It is not wise to search for dates of days, or months, as some are inclined to do. We should confine our studies to the Bible only in seeking for events foretold which must assuredly take place some future time, as others predicted already have done—St. Matt. v, 17, 18, "till all be fulfilled"—at the same time carefully bearing in mind that prophecy conceals facts concerning the future until the time approaches for the fulfilment of what is predicted.

In Rev. i, 3, we read, "Blessed is he that readeth and they that hear the prophecy." We should not read the Bible as if it were only religious literature and a text-book of theology, but rather as an account of God's purpose in working out His scheme, the Divine overruling in human affairs, which together with science is explained and verified more and more as the years pass on, and quite in accordance with the teaching we have from the exponents of B.-I. Truth.

It is neglect of this study of the Bible which accounts for lack of conviction, and failure to see the signs of the Divine purpose, and, may I add, accounts for much of the shallowness which passes for religion.

From HENRY D. HOUGHTON, ESQ., Vice-President, B.-I.-W.F.

WE look for the coming of the "N.M. and B." every week with pleasure, and we read its pages with an increasing delight.

The new and forceful interpretations of Scripture found therein are not only very stimulating and thought-provoking, but are as satisfying to our heart and conscience as they are convincing to mind and intellect.

May your work and usefulness be extended tenfold, till the Truths you teach are generally known, and that through them Israel's ever-faithful God may be magnified, believed and obeyed.

From H. KENDRA BAKER, ESQ.

EVERY succeeding year brings home to one the more forcibly the value and need of British-Israel teaching as an antidote to pessimism, indifference and unbelief.

Its natural foe is Modernism, the most insidious and dangerous of all the influences at work in these dark and difficult days: dangerous, because it suggests doubts to those who already hold and value their beliefs, and, more so, because it fortifies scepticism and indifference in those already inclined that way.

So far from being a food, it seems to me a poison. Its arrogance and pretensions, unless checked, will have the same blighting effect upon the Faith as those of the mediæval Papacy, and, in counteracting its pernicious influence, the B.-I.-W.F. and its widely-read organ, the "N.M. and B.", are doing a great and far-reaching work.

In considering such stupendous mysteries as the Divine plan, "it is better," as a preacher recently said, "to believe too much than too little." We can well afford to leave those matters which are "too high for us" to a fuller understanding in God's good time.

I wish the Federation, which has already achieved so much, unbounded success in the coming year, and surely, if ever an organization had cause for thankfulness and encouragement, the Federation's past wonderful achievements fully justify our hopes for its continued and increased prosperity.

From the REV. WALTER T. MEDHURST.

GREETINGS for this New Year. If I ever appreciated THE NATIONAL MESSAGE at any one time more than another it was during my nine months' residence in the United States, four months in Illinois and five in Wisconsin. Saturday's mail was always anticipated, and it was never disappointing when it included THE NATIONAL MESSAGE. Often have I held before my American audiences its splendid cover, displaying our two GOD-GIVEN BANNERS and quoting Psalm lx, 4; Psalm xx, 5; and as often an opportunity presented itself for the declaration of the facts which our Identity enforces. This use of our flag symbols every time aroused much interest. I am pleased to report that, at least in one instance, a Bible Study Class with an average attendance of 30, meeting each week under the Pastor's guidance, has been started. GOD bless THE NATIONAL MESSAGE with its international message, for I found its pages were being read in several towns, and that by ministers of all denominations. I believe America is anxiously awaiting this latter-day revelation.

The flight of time, to our perception, is becoming more and more abnormal. How quickly the years are passing! As we are entering this passage of time leading from out of the old and into the New Year, surely the necessity for us to buy up the time in active propagation of the Gospel of the Kingdom News must increasingly weigh in upon our souls. How terribly tragic it is that JEHOVAH still has to lament, "Israel doth not know, MY people doth not consider." And this from Him Who declares: "I AM JEHOVAH, your HOLY ONE, the CREATOR of ISRAEL." Are we disappointing HIM? Let us be reminiscent of the past leadings of our TRIUNE CREATOR, and follow how HE has developed this National Life of HIS OWN Creation. Let us be mindful of our immediate future in the which the GLORY of THE JEHOVAH OF HOSTS is destined to be known to all the world-nations. "Then shall they (Israel) know that I AM JEHOVAH, their Triune CREATOR, which caused them to be led into captivity among the nations; but I have gathered them unto their own land." (Ezek. xxxix, 28.) Let this be our double consideration, so that we may, in this present hour understandingly centre our controlled activities unto the fulfilment of our pressing responsibilities which the year 1929 will be placing upon us.

All success to our "NATIONAL MESSAGE" and ORGAN of truly international import. Yours sincerely in this Divine work.

From CAPTAIN THE REV. T. E. GROUT.

I AM indeed grateful for the inspiring and illuminating articles appearing week by week in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE.

In these latter days of religious controversy and apostasy it is a very real boon to clergy, ministers and teachers, to have essential and fundamental Truths so clearly defined, and to feel that behind them stands the great B.-I.-World Federation as an all-powerful auxiliary to the Church Universal.

Thank God, the Federation does not claim to be a sect; it is truly Catholic in the highest sense of the word.

There are still some things "that cannot be shaken," i.e., "immutable things in which it is impossible for God to lie."

THE NATIONAL MESSAGE stands four-square in its challenge to exaggerated schoolmanship and the so-called "Modernism" of our day.

I pray God's blessing may continue, and that the year 1929 may be the greatest yet.

From LIEUT.-COL. G. F. A. SMYTHE, President, Dover Branch, B.-I.-W.F.

OF all the seasons of the year, the birth of a New Year appeals to our feelings with the deepest solemnity; the hopes and disappointments of the former one are in the background, and we look forward with mixed feelings to the unknown of the immediate future.

British-Israelites, however, go forward in the strength of the knowledge that the great God of Heaven has pledged Himself to bring us safely through the storm, however fiercely it may blow—and with the cheering knowledge "that our redemption draweth nigh," even unto the very doors. So let us look up and forward with a cheerful heart, and labour on without ceasing in the Vineyard of our long-absent King.

From LADY PRIESTLEY.

I AM pleased along with many others to send a few words of greeting to all connected with the work of the B.-I.-W.F., and I specially should like to mention THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER, which is such a wonderful help to all who read it, more easily to understand many complicated readings of the Bible. One only regrets such help is not given in every pulpit in our land. May success attend the Federation tenfold greater in 1929 than in any past year.

(Others to follow).

CORRESPONDENCE.

Winnipeg, Canada,
October, 1928.

MY DEAR MR. GARRISON,—I desire to express my very sincere and grateful thanks to Mrs. Garrison and yourself for your great kindness and generous hospitality while I was in London for the Congress.

The experience at the Congress and that derived from meeting so many of the stalwarts of the British-Israel Federation will, I am sure, prove of the greatest possible value to me personally, and, I trust, will be productive of good results in the propagation of the Truth here, for one could not but come away except with the determination to go "all out" in spreading the Gospel of the Kingdom.

I sincerely hope that you will keep before you the proposed visit of Mrs. Garrison and yourself to Canada next year, and will remember that we shall be expecting you at the Dominion Convention which we hope to hold then. I can assure you both of a royal welcome and a further manifestation of that Canadian "breeziness" which you attributed to me in London. Kindest regards to Mrs. Garrison and yourself, Rev. Pascoe Goard, and all whom I met.

Sincerely yours,
(Rev.) ERNEST J. SPRINGETT.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL very cordially wishes our readers a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

An influential citizen of London was visiting a country district and, being there over the Sunday, he attended the local church. He tells us that the first thing to attract his notice on entering the porch were copies of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER. The sermon by the Rector was on "Angels," an article on which appeared in that week's issue of our Journal.

Many years ago the distinguished antiquary, the late Sir W. Betham, Ulster King-at-Arms, said to the Rev. A. King, who had intelligently consulted him respecting a family crest: "I see you are interested in this; I am an old man, you are young; if you will take my advice, you will follow up the study of heraldry, and if you go far enough it will land you in the Camp of Israel."

Overseas, the monthly journal of the Overseas League for November has an unsigned article on "The British Heritage," in which there occurs the following paragraph:—"We are accustomed to vaunt ourselves upon the wide acceptance of the Common Law of England, ruling, as it does, the North American and Australian Continents. It is certainly a curious fact that this body of native law should have grown into that powerful system which now governs the life of most progressive and modern societies, and the fact is more remarkable inasmuch as the English Common Law, unlike the law of Islam, has no religious sanction behind it." !!!

Now, it is obvious the writer has not read the Rev. Pascoe Goard's book on "The Law of the Lord, or the Common Law," or he would surely not have written the last sentence above quoted. The English Common Law has not only a religious sanction, but a Divine sanction, which the law of Islam certainly never had. When all writers are educated on B.-I. Bible lines, we shall be spared a lot of false and mischievous teaching. The O.S. League is a patriotic body doing a useful work, but it is a great pity that sentence escaped the editor's blue pencil. It is a poor service to our young people to tell them that our law has no religious sanction. Fortunately, many of them know better.

Our Southport Branch enjoyed a fine address a while ago by the Rev. W. H. Stuart-Fox, M.A., and expressed keen appreciation of the honour done to them by his travelling all the way from London to visit them.

It is remarkable that the great Protestant House of Campbell have quartered on their escutcheons the symbol of the Patriarch blessing Ephraim and Manasseh with his arms crossed; in heraldry called "Gyronny of eight or sable," to be seen on the Tope gates at Sanchi in India, and the same as our Union Jack, along with a lymphad or galley, sails furled and oars in action, for the lordship of Loran—this being the flag of Zebulon, whose tribeship was situated close to Mount Carmel, of which Stewart is represented by Sir Walter Scott in "Rob Roy" as retaining the pronunciation when he says, "Our loch n'er saw the Cawmil lymphads."

"Lights and Shadows," E. Wilson.

Apropos the contention of some of our opponents that the English people came from Germany, Dr. Latham, in his "Ethnology of the British Isles," says:—"Throughout the whole length and breadth of Germany there is not one village, hamlet or family which can show definite signs of descent from the Continental ancestors of the Angles of England."

Professor Ripley, in his work on "The Races of Europe," says:—"Ethnological comparison proves that the Anglo-Saxon peoples must be of an entirely different stock from the present German race, and that they, therefore, do not belong to the Teuton stock."

Colonel the Rev. A. D. Seton, of Mounie, a member of the B.-I.-W.F., writes as follows to the Grantham Journal:—

SIR,—Eleven years ago General Allenby, with the troops under his command, occupied Jerusalem. It is a very remarkable event in the history of the world, and one that should be taken to heart by all "who profess and call themselves Christians," and which should be (but I fear will not be) remembered at all our Church services on Sunday, seeing that it is an exact fulfilment of Biblical prophecy.

The year 1917 was exactly the date of the "seven times" that the Prophet foretold from the Babylonian captivity of Judah to the time of deliverance of the Holy City. Not only that, but Obadiah gives us exactly the strategical method by which the deliverance would, and did, take place, and Isaiah, in his 31st chapter, tells us exactly the manner in which the event would occur—"As birds flying (aeroplanes), so will the Lord of Hosts defend Jerusalem, defending also, He will deliver it, and passing over, He will preserve it." If anyone wishes to read the full story, they cannot improve on "How Jerusalem was won," by W. T. Massey, who was with Allenby's Army, and who gives a splendid account of it. So did the Lord of Hosts "come down to fight for Mount Zion and for the hill thereof."

When Allenby came to Jerusalem the Turks were convinced that the Holy City never could be taken, because it had been predicted that, unless the waters of the Nile flowed into Palestine, the Turks would hold Jerusalem. What occurred? Our gallant Engineers laid a water-pipe line from the Nile right across the desert, and connected through into the Holy City. When the Turks saw that fulfilment of their own prophecy, they knew all was lost.

The Arabs had also a prophecy. It was that Jerusalem would be delivered one day by the hand of "a prophet of God." Now, General Allenby's name, in Arabic, is "Allah-Nebi," which means a "prophet of God." These two things coinciding completely non-plussed the Turks.

Every city, town, village or hamlet within ten miles of the battle-fronts, from Ostend, through France to Switzerland, and through Italy, were shattered with shot and shell into a pulp of bricks, mortar, and wood splinters, with only one exception. Jerusalem is not defaced with shot or shell. Jerusalem was not charged by tanks, cavalry, nor our infantry. Why? Because God made good His promise to Isaiah. He did defend it, and He did deliver it, in just the manner specified, and in the year specified, and He used the instrument fore-ordained from the foundation of the world to do His work—"Thou, Israel, art My battle-axe and weapons of war."

What was the result? Instead of going into Jerusalem like the German Kaiser, General Allenby entered on foot, in humble submission, as if he understood it was a holy mission. It was not he, nor the British Army, but the act of God; and Allenby went in, not for the conquest of Jerusalem, but for its deliverance.

The late Prince Lichnowsky, German Ambassador in London until the outbreak of the Great War in August, 1914, in "Heading for the Abyss," page 434, writing of the defeat of Germany:

"The new League of Nations will be a League of States; an international organization with measures of compulsion against the individual State.

"In every association there is a President, someone who takes the lead. This function will fall to the Anglo-Americans. We shall be placed under Anglo-American supervision. The Great War has made the Anglo-Saxons masters of the world. We have been side-tracked.

"England has defeated all her rivals, one after the other—the Spanish, the French, the Dutch, the Russians, and now it is our turn."

Prince Charles Max Lichnowsky (b. 1860) was a member of an old and illustrious Polish family, with estates in Austrian and Prussian Silesia. He will be remembered in this country for his desire, in the days before the Great War, to improve Anglo-German relations. In a Memorandum, "My Mission to London," written in 1916 for private circulation, but published in 1918, the Prince charged Germany with having deliberately destroyed the chance of peace, and paid a tribute to Sir Edward Grey's pacific policy. As a result of this, the Prince resigned his ambassadorial rank, and was prohibited from writing articles for the Press.

The excellent little paper, The Patriot, which all good citizens should read, gives a list of 34 subversive and pacifist journals in this country, and a list of seven avowedly Communist publications, with occasional quotations from some of their scandalous statements, which makes one wonder why any Government should allow its citizens' minds to be so poisoned. Liberty, yes, but licence, no.

According to the Internal Revenue Bureau of the U.S.A. the average net income of individuals reporting for 1927 was 5,475.98 dollars; the average amount of tax liability was 200.43 dollars, and the average tax rate 3.66 per cent. Securities yielding an income of 264,265,889 dollars were exempt from taxation. The increase of large personal incomes is attested by the fact that while in 1914 there were only 60 persons receiving a million dollars or more per annum, the year 1927 showed 283 in that category. The wealth of America is colossal, and the taxation is small by comparison with the burden we have to carry in Britain.

Brothers of Manasseh who are fortunately placed: might I ask you to remember us of Ephraim out of your abundance? We must stand together, you know.

General W. H. Fasken, C.B., is rendering our Cause excellent service by his splendid addresses in Gloucestershire, of which the local Press give good reports. The General is a redoubtable champion of B.-I., and we are greatly indebted to him for his convincing and thorough-going way of presenting his facts.

The Rev. Guy Waddington, M.A., gave a lantern lecture at the Central Hall, Liverpool, on December 13th, on "Palestine and the Near East" to a very interested audience. The slides exhibited by the lecturer were from his own photographs taken while in Palestine.

Two lectures were given in the Bath Assembly Rooms on December 19th. That in the afternoon was by Dr. E. Paget Thurstan, a local friend of the Movement, who has become totally blind. His lecture, "The Influence of the Wives in Race Development," was on original lines and aroused great interest. In the evening our old friend, Mr. Henry D. Houghton, created a profound impression by his lecture, "The New World, the New Men, the New Age."

DUTY AND PLEASURE

VERY often these are not in agreement, but when Love unites the two they agree wonderfully well. So that instead of Duty and Pleasure we now have Duty—Love—Pleasure. Love is the cement which binds two not always congruous elements into a unity which, like some chemical combination, produces, when united, something else. Apart, each element has its uses and each its proper place in the scheme of things.

If you have read thus far, you will be wondering what we are driving at. Well, it is this. We think that we can show you how to produce out of the three elements we have mentioned a force which, if acted upon by every reader, will effect a great transformation.

We will place the cement first of the ingredients—To your "Love" for the Cause of British-Israel Truth add your "Duty" to your neighbour who knows little or nothing of British-Israel blessings, and it will be your "Pleasure" and theirs if you send us a subscription for THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER for 1929 to be sent to your friend or neighbour. The combination of—

Love to the Cause and
Duty to your neighbour brings
Pleasure and blessing to your friend and not least to yourself and to us.

The cost is small—only three shillings for three months, six shillings for six months, or twelve shillings a year. Fifty-two times during 1929 your friend will remember and thank you.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

THE SEVENTH MILESTONE.

By HERBERT GARRISON.

THE interests of the British-Israel Movement on the literary side were promoted in years gone by through the medium of a few successive journals and magazines of somewhat limited means and circulation, and by a considerable number of books and pamphlets, some of them excellent.

THE NATIONAL MESSAGE made its bow in the first week of January, 1922, and thus opened a new era. Seven annual volumes have now been completed, containing in all 365 weekly issues, totalling 7,280 double-column pages.

Certain persons with experience of journal publication predicted a life of not more than six months for our venture.

Well, we are still running, and we enter our eighth year with a tenfold increase of circulation, and an ever-rising barometer, or subscription-list-indicator.

We wonder how many journals to-day can record such a rise within seven years. We doubt if any religious journal has even approached it.

To appraise adequately such a remarkable rise, it is absolutely necessary to remember the specialist character of our journal.

To make a success of a general popular religious journal is one thing; to achieve success with a specialist journal such as ours is quite another thing.

In reviewing the past we would state our indebtedness to the more than two hundred contributors, and remark upon the varied character and sustained interest of their articles. We feel sure that both these contributors and our readers will gratefuliy acknowledge their debt of gratitude to the Editor-in-Chief—the Rev. Pascoe Goard—for his very valuable, illuminating and indeed unique articles. When the paper was started he promised the writer that he would be responsible for eight weekly issues. Starting our eighth year, we find him still carrying on and going strong. Altogether he has contributed over 400 articles, and it is not too much to say that these have provided a reconstructed theology which has captivated the minds and hearts of large numbers of clerical, ministerial and lay preachers, professors and teachers, who are using the same as the basis for their preaching and teaching.

We gladly pay tribute also to the valuable work of the Associate Editor, our veteran, the Rev. Commander Roberts, who for some years edited "The Covenant People," the monthly magazine which was incorporated with THE NATIONAL MESSAGE in 1922.

For the information of new readers, it should be mentioned that for a period we had to compete with a privately-owned journal—The Banner of Israel—which, however, was purchased by us and incorporated with THE NATIONAL MESSAGE in 1923.

Our readers now number scores of thousands, and they are found in dozens of countries on each of the continents, and on hundreds of islands in all zones.

This journal may be found not only in thousands of homes, but in public libraries, hospitals, church porches, doctors' and dentists' waiting rooms, hotel lounges, mansions of the nobility, private reading rooms of members of both Houses of Parliament, homes of the nation's pensioners, railway carriages, steamship saloons, lumber camps and settlers' homes of Canada and the United States, bush huts of Australia and Tasmania, shearers' sheds of New Zealand, miners' camps of Africa, planters' bungalows and tents of Ceylon and Malaya, British communities of Jerusalem and Constantinople, etc., etc., barrack rooms of the Homeland, of India and Mesopotamia, Malta, Gibraltar and the outposts of the Empire, cabins, messrooms and lower decks of the Navy, captains' and men's quarters in the merchant service in all waters ; in fact, wherever the English language is spoken.

We have hundreds of letters from the four quarters of the globe bearing voluntary testimony to the good being done, and expressing the deepest gratitude for the comfort, the joy, the enlightenment and uplift received through reading the articles in our journal from time to time. A few extracts from such letters are published occasionally. In addition to these, there are the verbal expressions of our many callers at Headquarters, and they, too, come from the four quarters of the earth.

Apart from the regular weekly issues, there have been three "Special Number" issues totalling 600,000 copies, and these have gone well over the Anglo-Saxon world. As they are passed on from one to another again and again, they must have been read by millions of people.

The Covenant Publishing Company was formed in January, 1922, through a number of devoted British-Israel supporters taking shares without any guarantee of dividends, and for the most part without any thought of such. The enthusiasm at the two meetings in the Central Hall, Westminster, when the first two thousand pounds' worth of shares were subscribed for will never be forgotten by those who were present. The balance required was subscribed within a few weeks. The achievements of the Company in the short period of seven years has astonished men of business and won the admiration of the Auditors—a firm of world-wide repute.

Many new books have been published, and out-of-print works have been reprinted.

The sales and packing departments at 6, Buckingham Gate have been kept very busy. Packages go out daily in great numbers to many parts of the world. Purchasers in the Book Room come from India, the Dominions, Bible Lands and continental centres. Nearly ELEVEN MILLION books, pamphlets, etc., have been sent out.

Of the long list of books and booklets in the catalogue of the Covenant Publishing Company, sixteen have been written by the Rev. Pascoe Goard.

A point to be especially emphasized is this : Our British-Israel literature is not ephemeral. It never dies. It goes on and on doing its work, carrying its life-giving message continually to ever widening circles.

Those who provided the money, and those who have written the books and articles, the Board of Directors who manage the Company and control the output, and all those who have prayed for the Divine blessing or helped in any way, can feel real satisfaction in having contributed to a wonderful success, in enabling uncounted millions to obtain light on the Bible, prophecy, history, and God's Divine plan for our race and for all the world through Jesus Christ Our Lord and King—more soul-satisfying, more intelligent and comprehensive, and more God-honouring than that provided by any other organization in existence, bearing in mind that it stands upon Holy Writ and proclaims the Gospel of the Kingdom of God on earth as well as the Gospel of personal salvation.

The question has been asked by a few : "Why introduce a commercial element into such a Movement as ours by the institution of a Publishing Company?" Our answer is : "While business methods are of necessity employed, the Movement has been in no sense commercialized." The reason for starting the Covenant Publishing Company was as follows :

It was necessary to express British-Israel Truth in writing, and to send it broadcast to the world. To do this through the ordinary publishing houses would mean that for every issue of every book new money would have to be found to pay the publishing house for producing it, and the machinery of the publishing house would have to be used for distributing it to the public, the process of doing which would eat up the full price of the book save a nominal royalty not usually collected.

Such a process would limit the output of our literature to the sums annually collected for paying for its publication and its distribution.

It was seen by the Executive that this process would never bring to us very much success, therefore we organized our own Publishing concern.

In order to do this we required an initial investment of money and a permanent producing and distributing organization. The money was generously provided and not at all on a large scale. The organization consisting of authors, publishers and distributors was formed in the Covenant Publishing Company. We have produced a new literature; we have created a market for that literature which is now world-wide, and for that literature we have charged, not the usual booksellers' rates, but very much less than the usual price. These prices have been made to cover, first, the printing and binding; second, the replacing on our shelves the stock depleted by sale ; and, third, the cost of distribution with a very small margin of profit set aside to increase our stock.

The result of all this is that, with the money raised in 1922, we have produced a stock of literature and a distributing organization ; and, assuming that we have turned over the stock three times each year, we have made the one investment up to date multiply the books and pamphlets 18 times, and at the present moment the full value of the invested money is still to be found in stock-in-trade on our shelves, which will go on reproducing itself indefinitely. The result is that instead of paying for a few thousand books and pamphlets that original investment has made possible the publishing of millions of books and pamphlets at no further cost to the organization.

We think this a matter for which most heartily to give thanks to God.

Having formed the Publishing Company and produced the literature, it was necessary that we should make it known to our people. Rival publishing houses would not help us to do this. Religious journals not in sympathy with our Truth would not give us access to their advertising columns except at exorbitant figures ; it was therefore necessary that we should have our own journal, which should express our own views uncensored by any private agency and which should make known to our people our publications.

Therefore THE NATIONAL MESSAGE was established, and later the Banner of Israel was purchased, so that now we have access to our own people through our own journal, none being in a position to call our literature or actions in question or to commercially "make us afraid."

Our staff of contributors is a voluntary one ; our Board of Directors never ask for a penny of remuneration for their services. Our staff at Headquarters is voluntary to a considerable extent. All are giving of their best to produce the literature and to send it out when ordered, and we look to our readers to secure orders for our journal and for our books, and to become a great world-wide agency for the dissemination of the magnificent volume of literature we are in a position to offer, and which cannot elsewhere be secured.

Will you constitute yourself an active worker in this great association for the distribution of British-Israel Christian literature to the ends of the earth ?

THE CO-RELATED BOOKS OF THE BIBLE.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD, F.R.G.S.

WE intend next week to commence a series of articles which will later appear as a booklet, entitled : "The Documents of Daniel." Before doing so it will be wise to take a rapid survey of the relationship of Daniel to the other books of the Bible.

The Book of Daniel was not intended to stand alone. There are indications in it that it is a sequel to what has gone before ; that it is related to contemporary literature and has a distinct relationship to the future.

To read the book alone, dissociated from the other books of the Bible, would be like setting up a tall flagstaff without supports, to be blown down by the first wind of criticism.

When we read it in relation to preceding books of the Bible, contemporary prophetic works and future history, it is so supported from each direction that no wind of criticism can blow it down. If we take, for instance, Daniel's prayer contained in the ninth chapter we find that the book is directly related to the Mosaic writings, and that the experience Israel and Judah were passing through was directly under the national covenant made with Israel at Sinai as recorded in full in the Pentateuch, and particularly, for instance, in the 26th chapter of Leviticus and 5—7th chapters of Deuteronomy.

If we take again his consideration of the duration of the captivity of Judah, we find that he first studied the books existing on the subject, presumably among them the prophecies of Jeremiah, to determine the period set for the captivity of Judah, namely, seventy weeks.

If we take all the productive element in his writings we find they depended upon ancient mediæval and modern history to show their relationship to the succeeding ages in the world of men and things.

Inasmuch as Daniel is thus related to preceding (contemporary) and future literature, it will be well for us to tabulate that literature and so determine Daniel's place in it.

If we glance at the table of contents in the Bible we find as follows :—

First, the book of beginnings, for that is what the name Genesis means. The first eleven chapters form a synopsis of necessary information, without which all that follows in the Bible would be very largely meaningless, as modern critics, who have eliminated the first eleven chapters from purposeful, meaningful literature, have found to their cost, as a result of their assigning these chapters to the realm of myth, fable and folklore.

The first purpose of these eleven chapters is the revealing of God as the Creator of all the material universe ; the Maker of the solar system ; the Architect of the earth ; the Author of life upon it ; the Creator of man ; the Author of the Adamic race ; the Giver of law to that race ; the Planter of the garden eastward in Eden ; and the Establisher of the first family circle therein.

Thus from the universal to the particular, God marches in majestic progress, and every detail, from the universal to the most minute, is the direct product of His heart, mind and hand.

This is well set forth in the first four words of the great synopsis : "In the beginning God . . ." and is carried on in ceaseless iteration : "And God said . . ." with the expected result : "and . . . became."

So the Personality of God is present in every detail as the basic cause thereof.

So it has been quaintly said : "It takes God and man to grow a crop of potatoes."

The next purpose is to show the foundation of every one of the natural sciences : astronomy, oceanography, geology, botany, biology, zoology, geography, anthropology, etc. Without question the origin of the material which forms the field of enquiry for each of these sciences is indicated here.

The establishment of social order ; of the Divine Law ;—in modern days called the Common Law ;—which should obtain in that society, and of its administration under Divine jurisprudence, are indicated here.

The birth of moral consciousness ; the first act of conscious transgression of Divine Law ; the consciousness of guilt ; consequent impending death ; the indication of a Redeemer is set forth, not as a statement of doctrine but as a narrative of experience in language which has not elsewhere been equalled for brevity of expression and clearness and fullness of meaning.

The personality of the tempter is made manifest by his brief appearances and dialogue, and his continued existence and activity is indicated by the sentence pronounced upon him.

The beginning of human history, with the mending of the genealogical chain which was broken by the death of Abel and the defection of Cain is given to us in chapter v. and the amended chain reads : "From God, Adam, Seth—Noah, Shem —Abraham." In the barest outline the antediluvian period is indicated with all essential details to the carrying forward of the covenant or appointed seed to Abraham over the waters of the Flood, so that this document of the Bible in universal history and Adamic history is sufficiently complete to make all the succeeding narrative of the Bible logical in its sequence.

Upon the pages of it it shows itself to be historic, scientific, doctrinal and dependable in the highest degree.

In the light of what has gone before, the call of Abraham, the dedication of his family to the establishment and making universal of the Kingdom of God in the earth, is beautifully simple, natural and inevitable as the far-off focus-point from which start all the lines of succeeding world activity, truly written secular history, and Biblical Scriptures.

The following chapters of Genesis, from chapter xii to the end, show the establishment of the Abrahamic family which thereafter in the Bible constitutes

THE HOUSEHOLD OF GOD IN THE EARTH.

Carry this thought onward through the Old and the New Testaments, for the tenor of the Scriptures give the exhortation so clearly enunciated by Isaiah as follows :

> " Look unto the rock whence ye were hewn ; the hole of the pit whence ye were digged. Look unto Abraham your father and Sarah that bare you."

Follow the thought through to the New Testament, where it is declared : " If ye are in Christ then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." With El Shaddai, Abraham and Sarah as the head of the household of God on earth into which by birth or adoption all must come, we have the establishment of the family in Genesis from the 12th chapter to the end.

Exodus gives to us the exodus of the family out of Egypt and its organization into the Kingdom of God on earth. See the 19th and 20th chapters of Exodus.

This is the beginning of the national phase, and the organization of the kingdom which forms the second great thought and purpose of God taught by Christ and His disciples and apostles, and by all the prophets in the Old and New Testaments. It is a kingdom which shall become as universal as the household.

The Church is busy establishing the household through the agency of faith ; the State is busy extending the kingdom, and with it the administration of the Divine Law. It is God's purpose, and the expectation of Our Lord, that both the household and the kingdom shall become universal in the earth ; the household embracing all men, and the kingdom all nations.

Leviticus gives to us the organization of the worship in the nation.

Leviticus gives to us the ordination of the family of Aaron for the conduct of the worship of the nation.

Leviticus gives to us the dedication of the Levitical priesthood to carry out the clerical functions of the State.

Numbers gives to us the organization of the departments in the State.

Deuteronomy gives to us the digest of the Constitutional Law for the nation, and through the nation for the world.

There follow the historic books, all dealing with the household and the nation so established.

The administration of the Divine Law forms the most important issue in the life of the individual, for upon it depends his state in life for time and for eternity.

This takes in all the great theme which in our day is usually called " The Gospel."

The administration of the Divine Law forms the supreme issue in the life of the nation, for upon it has depended in the past, and still depends, the status of the nation in the earth among the nations.

There came a time in history when the sanctions of the national covenant as recorded in the Pentateuch were adjudged to go into effect on disobedient Israel and disobedient Judah.

This brings us to the date, approximately, 750 B.C.

Isaiah now gave specific warnings to Judah, the House of David, Israel, and the other nations, of impending judgment.

Over a century later, prophesying at Jerusalem, Jeremiah wrote his prophecies of immediate impending disaster and future administrative punitive experiences for the House of David, Israel and Judah, stretching over the full period of seven prophetic times.

Contemporaneously with him Ezekiel carried forward the story of Israel's punishment and ultimate restoration, prophesying among the captives of Israel on the banks of the River Chebar.

And now comes in the place of the interesting Book of Daniel, for, as the power of Israel and Judah were broken and they were removed from the high place of influence and power they had occupied in the earth, God was about to set up a second organization to keep order among the nations of the earth, other than Israel, during the time of Israel's humiliation and punishment.

The origin and succession of the Continental Empires and the ultimate restoration of Israel is the theme of the prophet Daniel.

In the light of all that has gone before, the Book of Daniel is sequent and logical, and gives explanation of Continental history—ancient and modern—as no other extant literature does. It commands the respect, and compels conviction of its pre-written historicity for every man who sees it in its proper setting.

To the study of this book, which contains the documents of Daniel, we shall now turn our attention.

" I WILL YET FOR THIS BE ENQUIRED OF BY THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL."

BY THE REV. WALTER T. MEDHURST.

THUS saith the Triune Jehovah, placing Himself in this passive attitude awaiting the activities of the House of Israel in seeking after Him, and enquiring of Him. But there is an activity of desire in the heart of the Elohim (Trinity) of Israel, that this seeking of Him should not be delayed : " Then I will increase them." Listen as " the Jehovah thy Elohim, which brought thee out of the Land of Egypt," agonizes as if in pain when beholding our distresses He mourns, " Oh, that My people had hearkened unto Me, and Israel had walked in My ways ! I should soon have subdued their enemies " (Ps. lxxxi, 10-14). Israel must pray ; and so the King of Israel has given us a form of prayer as He earnestly entreats us " after this manner therefore pray ye :

Digitized by Google

" Our Father which art in heaven,
Hallowed be THY name,
THY kingdom come,
THY will be done in earth as in heaven.
Give US this day our daily bread,
Forgive US our debts, as we forgive our debtors,
Lead US not into temptation,
But rescue US from out of the EVIL,
For THINE is the kingdom,
And THINE the power,
And THINE the glory, for ever. Amen."

" When ye pray use not vain repetitions, as the heathen do . . . be not ye therefore like unto them." As children we sang :

" I often say my prayers, but do I ever pray? "

One wonders if our repetitions of this prayer are really with us PRAYER ; or are we like the heathen in " vain repetitions " ? To help us to follow Paul and " pray with the understanding," let us spend a few minutes in noting the construction of this prayer, which Our King asks His Israel to present before God.

There is a recognition of Genesis i, 27 : " So Elohim created man in His own image." Tripart man made in the image of the Triune God. God has elected to reveal Himself through His Son, and that Only-begotten Son elects so to reveal His Father through the power of the Spirit of God. " Hear, O Israel : Jehovah our Elohim is One Jehovah " (Deut. vi, 4). And so this prayer begins with the thrice repeated " Thy." The Father's Name must be Hallowed ; Christ's Kingdom must come ; and " the Spirit of God " must move upon this earth once more. (Gen. i, 2.) Thus ends this model prayer, on the same commencing note, true to Heaven's melody, and in the language of Divine rhythm. Christ's is the Kingdom ; the Spirit's is the Power ; and the Father's is the Glory.

The pivotal construction is just between these two : the apex and the foundation. The Triune God crowns and supports the tripart man ; who, in desire that this tripartness may become triune in uni-plurality of his activities, is solicited to pray :

" Give US our daily bread " —compare
" Forgive US our debts " — ,, } 1 John ii, 16.
" Lead US not into temptation " — ,,
But deliver US from the (emphatic) EVIL.

This EVIL is just that Triple Alliance of SIN, INIQUITY and TRANSGRESSION (Ps. li, 1-4) ; otherwise as 1 John ii, 16, and recognized in the World, Flesh and Devil.

Ah, it is this Triple Alliance of EVIL which is ever seeking to break down man in his tripart likeness to the Triune God, so as to prevent the disciples of the Teacher, the subjects of the King, from being ALL THERE, or in their act of prayer being uni-plural after the pattern of the Triune God. If either the world, the flesh or the devil can divorce the soul from the body, our worship being soulless is as madness before the Triune God : if either the flesh, the devil or the world succeed in depriving such act of spirit, then is death produced. Is it not the all too successful onslaught of this Triple Alliance of EVIL upon man in his tripartness, which has occasioned the Triune God of Israel to say, " Israel doth not know, My people doth not consider. . . . They provoked the Holy One of Israel to anger . . . Bring no more vain oblations . . . when ye spread forth your hands, I will hide Mine eyes from you ; yea, when ye make many prayers, I will not hear " (Isa. i). Is it not thus, that in many of Israel's gatherings, in the Divine Presence mania is evident, there being no soul, even no life, for the heart of Israel is not united, we have need to pray, " Unite my heart to fear Thy Name. I will praise Thee, O Lord my (Triune) God, with ALL my heart : and I will glorify Thy Name for evermore." (Ps. lxxxvi, 11.) It is the disjunctiveness of our tripart being we have to pray against.

Hear the prayer of Our Lord Jesus Christ, as He intercedes upon our behalf : " Holy Father, keep through Thine own Name, those Whom Thou hast given Me, that they may be one, as We are . . Keep them from the EVIL . . . that they all may be one ; as Thou, Father, art in Me, and I in Thee, that they also may be one in Us : that the world may believe that Thou hast sent Me " (John xvii, 11, 15, 21). " KEEP THEM FROM THE EVIL." And thou when thou prayest say, " DELIVER US FROM THE EVIL." We must pray against the disruptive force of this Triple Alliance upon our Triune God-given and constituted tripart being.

Man, like God, must recognize himself as being—one in three, and three in one : he is to be the man-soul revealed through his man-body in the energies of the man-spirit : not three men, but one New man in Christ Jesus.

Therefore we have the Benediction : " May the GRACE of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the LOVE of God, and the COMMUNION of the Holy Ghost, be with you all." The Divine attributal virtues of the Triune God are to be exercised in our tripart being as we combat the Triple Alliance ; so that in our personality before God we may so far exemplify our having become partakers of the Divine Nature by these exceeding great and PRECIOUS promises, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust (2 Pet. i, 4). NOT, mark you, " in equality ; this is only proper to the three Persons of the Blessed Trinity," as the Puritan Thomas Adams saith, " and not communicable to any other " ; but we can become partakers of the Divine nature " by reparation of the Divine Image in us."

Now look at these three in their relatedness to our tripart being. GRACE of Our Lord Jesus Christ is seen in His humility as enforced against the pride of the Devil ; so let us " be clothed with humility." LOVE of God is to be set against the " love of the world," and the COMMUNION of the Holy Ghost must eclipse the lust of the flesh. Only in this manner can we be delivered from the EVIL. Let Christ Jesus Our Lord be to us the Bread, the Daily Bread, of Life : let God Himself be our soul's forgiveness of others : and let the Holy Spirit's Life be the leading power out of all testing, and so shall our tripartness be preserved in this oneness of a whole man in Christ Jesus. When British-Israel shall as one Ish-man in tripart unity thus enquire of the Lord, then shall the Lord deliver us from all this EVIL ; for " Thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory. Amen."

The literal translation of the original Greek as given by Ferrar Fenton is :

"Our Father in the Heavens ; Your Name must be being Hallowed ;
Your Kingdom must be being restored ;
Your Will must be being done both in Heaven, and upon the earth.
Give us to-day our to-morrow's bread ;
And forgive us our faults, as we forgive those offending us ;
For You would not lead us into temptation, but deliver us from its evil."

JONAH AND THE WHALE.

By A. GRESHAM COPELAND.

A LARGE number of people do not credit the account of Jonah and the Whale, or Great Fish, quite unaware of the fact that they must either believe the account or doubt the words of Christ. Matt. xii, 40 : "For as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly ; so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth." It may be of interest, however, to know something of the size and nature of a whale's diet. The following are quotations from "The Cruise of the Cachalot" (Round the World after Sperm Whales), by Frank T. Bullen, F.R.G.S. After describing the chase, the fight, and the final death of a whale, he says :

"During the conflict I had not noticed what now claimed attention—several great masses of white, semi-transparent-looking substance floating about, of huge size and irregular shape. But one of these curious lumps came floating by as we lay, tugged at by several fish, and I immediately asked the mate if he could tell me what it was and where it came from. He told me that, when dying, the cachalot always ejected the contents of his stomach, which were invariably composed of such masses as we saw before us ; that he believed the stuff to be portions of big cuttle-fish, bitten off by the whale for the purpose of swallowing, but he wasn't sure. Anyhow, I could haul this piece alongside now, if I liked, and see. Secretly wondering at the indifference shown by this officer of forty years' whaling experience to such a wonderful fact as appeared to be here presented, I thanked him, and, sticking the boat-hook into the lump, drew it alongside. It was at once evident that it was a massive fragment of cuttle-fish—tentacle or arm—as thick as a stout man's body, and with six or seven sucking discs or acetabula on it. These were about as large as a saucer, and on their inner edge were thickly set with hooks or claws all round the rim, sharp as needles, and almost the shape and size of a tiger's.

"To what manner of awful monster this portion of limb belonged I could only faintly imagine ; but of course I remembered, as any sailor would, that from my earliest sea-going I had been told that the cuttle-fish was the biggest in the sea, although I never even began to think it might be true until now. I asked the mate if he had ever seen such creatures as this piece belonged to alive and kicking. He answered, languidly, 'Wall, I guess so ; but I don't take any stock in fish, 'cept for provisions or ile—en that's a fact.' It will be readily believed that I vividly recalled this conversation when, many years after, I read an account by the Prince of Monaco of his discovery of a gigantic squid, to which his naturalist gave the name of Lepidoteuthis Grimaldii ! Truly the indifference and apathy manifested by whalers generally to everything except commercial matters is wonderful—hardly to be credited. However, this was a mighty revelation to me. For the first time it was possible to understand that, contrary to the usual notion of a whale being unable to swallow a herring, here was a kind of whale that could swallow—well, a block four or five feet square apparently ; who lived upon creatures as large as himself, if one might judge of their bulk by the sample to hand ; but being unable, from only possessing teeth in one jaw, to masticate his food, was compelled to tear it in sizable pieces, bolt it whole, and leave his commissariat department to do the rest. . . ."

"He was indeed a fine catch, being at least seventy feet long. . . ."

"The lower jaw of this whale measured exactly nineteen feet in length from the opening of the mouth, or, say the last of the teeth, to the point, and carried twenty-eight teeth on each side. . . ."

"It would at first sight appear strange that, in view of the enormous traffic of steamships through the Malacca Straits, so easily 'gallied' a creature as the cachalot should care to frequent its waters ; indeed, I should certainly think that a great reduction in the numbers of whales found there must have taken place. But it must also be remembered that in modern steam navigation certain well-defined courses are laid down, which vessels follow from point to point with hardly any deviation therefrom, and that consequently little disturbance of the sea by their panting propellers takes place, except upon these marine pathways ; as, for instance, in the Red Sea, where the examination of thousands of log-books proved conclusively that, except upon straight lines drawn from point to point between Suez to Perim, the sea is practically unused to-day.

"The few Arab dhows and loitering surveying ships hardly count in this connection, of course. At any rate, we had not entered the Straits, but were cruising between Car Nicobar and Junkseylon, when we 'met up' with a full-grown cachalot, as ugly a customer as one could wish. From 9 a.m. till dusk the battle raged—for I have often noticed that unless you kill your whale pretty soon, he gets so wary, as well as fierce, that you stand a great chance of being worn down yourselves before you settle accounts with your adversary. This affair certainly looked at one time as if such would be the case with us ; but along about 5 p.m., to our great joy, we got him killed. The ejected food was in masses of enormous size, larger than any we had yet seen on the voyage, some of them being estimated to be of the size of our hatch-house, viz., 8 feet by 6 feet by 6 feet. . . ."

"A very large sperm whale was locked in deadly conflict with a cuttle-fish, or squid, almost as large as himself, whose interminable tentacles seemed to enlace the whole of his great body. The head of the whale especially seemed a perfect network of writhing arms—naturally, I suppose, for it appeared as if the whale had the tail part of the mollusc in his jaws, and, in a business-like methodical way, was sawing through it. By the side of the black columnar head of the whale appeared the head of the great squid, as awful an object as one could well imagine even in a fevered dream. Judging as carefully as possible, I estimated it to be at least as large as one of our pipes, which contained 350 gallons ; but it may have been, and probably was, a good deal larger. The eyes were very remarkable from their size and blackness, which, contrasted with the livid whiteness of the head, made their appearance all the more striking. They were at least a foot in diameter, and, seen under such conditions, looked decidedly eerie and hob-goblin-like. All around the combatants were numerous sharks, like jackals round a lion, ready to share the feast, and apparently assisting in the destruction of the large cephalopod. So the titanic struggle went on, in perfect silence as far as we were concerned, because, even had there been any noise, our distance from the scene of conflict would not have permitted us to hear it."

The following appeared in the Daily Mail :

SEA MONSTER.

LARGEST EVER CAUGHT. 15 TONS "BABY."

"A mysterious sea monster captured south of Miami, Florida, by Captain Charles H. Thompson is exercising the minds of American piscatorial experts and naturalists. The seas round Florida are famous for their huge tarpon, but this fish makes the tarpon look like a sprat.

"The strange creature, of a species altogether unknown, has after great labour been preserved and mounted by Professor J. S. Wambeth, of Washington, the American taxidermist.

"Everybody who has seen it says the most remarkable feature about the monster is that it is very much like an ordinary fish but thousands of times magnified.

WEIGHS 15 TONS.

"A special feature is a large number of varying spots on the head such as is found in many ordinary fish. It is altogether unlike a whale.

"The following are a few facts about the sea giant :—

Length, 45 ft.
Weight, 15 tons, or 33,600 lb.
Circumference, 23 ft. 9 in.
Diameter, 8 ft. 3 in.
Mouth, 38 in. wide, 43 in. deep.
Tongue, 40 in. long ; several thousand teeth.
Pectoral fin, 5 ft. long, 3 ft. wide.
Dorsal fin, 3 ft. long, 2 ft. 9 in. wide.
Hide, 3 in. thick.

"When opened the mysterious creature was found to have dined on an octopus weighing 400 lb., a black fish weighing 1,500 lb., and 500 lb. of coral.

"As a witty American journalist who viewed the monster wrote, 'It could have swallowed 40 Jonahs without the slightest pangs of indigestion.'

VOLCANIC ERUPTION THEORY.

"Scientific authorities are inclined to believe that the creature was an inhabitant of depths more than 1,500 ft. below the surface, and that it was blown up by some subterranean upheaval, possibly volcanic. Its diving fins had been injured, so that it was unable to return to its usual haunts. The thickness of its hide enabled it to stand enormous water pressure. Its eyes are very small, have no lids, and are never closed, indicating, according to authorities in natural history, that it lived at a depth where eyes were of little or no use.

"The fish is the largest ever captured, but American naturalists are not content with this, and claim that it is only a baby of its kind, and that had it lived it would have become at least twice the size."

PALESTINE: AN ADDRESS AT HEADQUARTERS.

BY DANIEL FARMER.

ALL Christian people are, or should be, deeply interested in what the prophet Zechariah speaks of as "The Holy Land." (Zec. ii, 12.) The land in which Our Lord was born, lived, taught, died and rose again, ascended into Heaven from, and to which He will return. Ezekiel says God "espied it" for His people. (Ez. xx, 6.) It is the land He watches over and careth for, "the eyes of the Lord thy God are always upon it. . . ." (Deu. xi, 12.) In this land He planted His people Israel in the days of Joshua, and though through disobedience they have been driven out and scattered, yet—on the strength of the promises He made to the patriarchs—God has told us by Jeremiah, "Yea, I will plant them in this land assuredly with My whole heart, and with My whole soul." (Jer. xxxii, 41.) It does not denote a very intelligent type of piety which shows no interest in what God has set His "whole heart upon."

II.

ITS VARIOUS NAMES.

Canaan—the low lands, land of the Canaanites (Ex. xv, 15). Palestine (Joel iii, 4.) The Glorious Land (Dan. xi, 16). The Promised Land (Nu. xiv, 40). Palestina (Ex. xv, 14). In the book of Ezekiel, chapter 36, it is spoken of as My (God's) Land, Israel's Land, Israel's Own Land, His Land, and in Scripture the term "Land of Israel" occurs some 30 times.

III.

POSITION AND AREA.

The country into which the Lord brought Abram (Gen. xii) was about the size of Wales, some 150 by 50 miles, equal to 7,500 square miles. Under Solomon's reign it was extended to 170 by 90 miles, or 15,300 square miles. After all, a very small country, but so situated that it is the gateway to the three continents of Europe, Asia and Africa—geographically, the centre of the land surface of the world—a site chosen by infinite wisdom as best suited for propaganda and influence in all the world.

God's people are often referred to as a "separated" people—when in their twelve-tribed period they were protected on the North by a great mountain range ; on the South and East by extensive deserts, and on the West by the Great Sea, and a difficult shore for approach. Thus they were not only protected from actual foes, but also largely kept from the moral contamination of the surrounding Empires. How like our own position and experience, for it is to this "appointed place" (2 Sam. ii, 10) that God brought the principal part of this once united Kingdom of Israel.

George Eliot, in her book "Theophrastus," remarks: "There is more likeness than contrast between the way the English got our island and the Israelites obtained Canaan." True! and how like them have we been, and still are. Who knows how much the influence of Continental thought and conduct has adversely affected our land and religious outlook at this time?

The Western side of Canaan contains the lowlands—next is an elevated plateau, more or less mountainous. Then we reach the Jordan Valley—the deepest river bed in the world—some 1,300 feet—and on the East side further mountainous country.

IV.

FERTILITY.

Moses reminds Israel (Deu. viii, 7) of the goodly land into which God was about to bring them: "A good land of brooks of water, of fountains and depths that spring out of valleys and hills, a land of wheat and barley, and vines and fig trees and pomegranates, of olive oil and honey."

Experts in agriculture tell us that Palestine possesses many kinds of soil, from sand and broken limestone, to rich, red chocolate loam. In all other countries the soil has to be fertilized, here it is done by the limestone. Palestine possesses all the climates of the world—from the snows of Mount Hermon to the tropics of the Jordan Valley—the deepest gorge in the world. Years ago two brothers carried their beehives up the mountain side as the varying flowers bloomed. In one season, with 100 hives, they obtained over six tons of honey, nearly three times that of many of the great bee farms of Australia or America.

The fig tree, the first tree mentioned in the Bible, will grow anywhere; the grape matures without rain or irrigation. Wheat and barley yield a hundredfold.

The Sea of Galilee teems with fish, whilst the Dead Sea basin is rich in all kinds of minerals—sulphur, copper, marble, porphyry, phosphates, coal, oil and salt.

Experts estimate that the plain of Esdraelon, which extends from Cape Carmel to Mount Tabor beyond, could feed all Palestine.

Megiddo, an early Canaanite fortress, originally guarded the Pass from Sharon to Esdraelon—a triangular plain, some 20 miles by 14. On this Plain Saul was slain. Here Saladin defeated the Crusaders in 1186. Also the great Napoleon could get no further in 1799.

V.

CANAAN OCCUPIED.

This land, promised unconditionally to Abram and his descendants—(Cf. Gen. xii, 7; xiii, 15; xvii, 8; xxvi, 3; xxviii, 13)—and of which Abram "beat the bounds" upon his first entry, was in the days of Joshua occupied by the twelve tribes, viz., the united Kingdom of Jacob, but after some 500 years—owing to Israel's discontent the nation was divided by God into two sections—the Northern, consisting of ten tribes revolting to Jeroboam, and the Southern, consisting of Judah and Benjamin, remaining loyal to Rehoboam. (Cf. 1 Ki. xii.) This divided condition lasted for some 250 years, at the end of which the Northern Kingdom was deported to Assyria (2 Ki. xvii), and about 134 years later the Southern Kingdom was taken to Babylon (2 Ki. xxiv, xxv), returning after 70 years, as told by Ezra and Nehemiah, and remaining in Judea until the time of Our Lord, for, be it noted, that whilst the gift of the land to Abram was unconditional, the continuous occupation of it was dependent upon their loyalty to God. So that, failing in that, thus far, the land was only occupied by the ten tribes for 760 years, and by the two tribes for 1,481, viz., up to the time of their overthrow by Titus, A.D. 70. Halt—nay—all the confusion in the study of the history of Israel is caused by the failure to see the distinction between the House of Israel and the House of Judah. Hence learned divines talk about "the Jews being divided into twelve tribes"!

After the division (Cf. 1 Ki. xii), Samaria became the capital of Israel, Jerusalem of Judah. Jeroboam was King of Israel, Rehoboam of Judah. Hoshea was the last King of Israel, Zedekiah of Judah.

Israel had nineteen kings and no queen, of eight dynasties.

Judah had nineteen kings and one queen, all of David's dynasty. The late Professor Totten, of Yale University, said: "I cannot express my thankfulness at being taught the distinction between these two Houses."

VI.

MESOPOTAMIA.

The district to which the ten tribes were deported is spoken of as Halah and Habor (2 Ki. xvii), some 350 miles North by West of Babylon; the great Euphrates River being some 1,800 miles, and the Tigris some 1,100, in length. The modern name of this district is Irak. General Marshall, in his final despatch, said: "Our forces (including labour) were 420,000 men. We occupied 114,000 square miles, took 45,000 prisoners, and 250 guns."

Now Abraham had been promised, not only the little land of Canaan, but the possession of territory "from the river of Egypt unto the Euphrates." How significant that all this vast extent, some 600 by 500 miles, containing 300,000 square miles, forty times larger than any European Kingdom, excepting Russia, should have come under the Union Jack. Holy Scripture said "Israel was to build the old waste places" (Is. lviii, 12); and since she has driven out "the abomination that maketh desolate"—the Turk. (Dan. xii, 11.) Even as far back as 1921, she (Britain) had established 1,000 miles of railway, 3,000 of telegraph, and 1,500 post offices, whilst on the Euphrates and the Tigris a fleet of vessels is to be seen.

Sir Alfred Mond observed: "The British Government and people performed a remarkable and courageous act of far-sighted statesmanship in burdening themselves with the mandate of Palestine." Britain—unaided by any of the Allies—possessed herself not only of Canaan proper, but of the larger district of Mesopotamia, and from there to the Nile. This, God had said, should be done by Israel (Eze. xxv, 14), and if so, who are the British but Israel?

VII.

JERUSALEM.

It is a very noticeable fact that although Palestine has been occupied by Great Powers it has never been sold. (Lev. xxv, 23.) Nor were the Israelites allowed to sell out their various tribal portions.

When we come to the City of Jerusalem, we find, also, that no Great Powers were ever enthroned in it. History tells us it has sustained more sieges and overthrows than any other city, the last when the Roman Emperor Titus razed it to the ground in A.D. 70, and Our Lord said it should be "trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles were fulfilled." (Lu. xxi, 24.) It is, and has been since 1917, in the hands of the British, and instead of being "trodden down" it is rapidly being built up. Such being the case, who are the British if not Hebrews?

In 1824, a student (Cf. Dan. xii) remarked: "If this chapter refers to the Turk, and I fail to see to whom else it can refer, then his hold over Palestine ought to be lifted off by 1917."

The first stage of Judah's captivity, which according to Lev. xxvi, was to last "seven times," or 2,520 years, began in 606 B.C. The second in 603, and last 587.

606 B.C. to A.D. 1914 is 2,520 years.
603 B.C. to A.D. 1917 is 2,520 years.
587 B.C. to A.D. 1933 is 2,520 years.

So that we are rapidly nearing the last stage in the history of this Central City of the world. (Eze. v, 5.) Here are met the three great World-Religions—Jewish, Christian and Mohammedan.

Said Dr. Gasher: "I desire Palestine to be under the control of Great Britain." Many years ago, Benjamin Disraeli said: "England will restore the Jews." Whilst Jeremiah, 600 years before Christ, declared: "The House of Judah (the Jews) shall walk to the House of Israel, and they shall come together to the land that I have given for an inheritance unto your fathers." (Jer. iii, 18.) All this is, of course, hidden to an obscurantic and out of date so-called Higher Criticism, and almost equally misunderstood by those who spiritualize the literal promises of Holy Writ.

The Arabs had a belief that Jerusalem would one day be delivered by a prophet of God. Allenby's name in Arabic is Allah Nebi—meaning a prophet of God—and spelt backwards—ybnella—in Arabic means "Son of God."

The Turks said: "Jerusalem will not be taken until the Nile flows into Palestine." Perhaps that meant by that high improbability, never. But the Nile did flow into Palestine, through the pipes which the British engineers laid to supply the troops as they advanced. The occurrence of these two fulfilments so nonplussed the Turks that they cleared out of Jerusalem without firing a shot.

But this City has yet to see one more attack—its last—and perhaps greatest. The foe is mentioned in Ezekiel xxxviii and xxxix. The strait in which it will be placed Zechariah (xiv) describes. But it is the determination of God that in the very city in which His Son suffered, He shall also reign; and when He whose feet stood upon Mount Olivet, from which He ascended, shall again stand upon the same (Zec. xiv, 4), then Jerusalem's hour of trial ends, and her final and everlasting triumph begins.

This personal return of Our Lord, says the prophet, will be accompanied by an earthquake, which will alter the face of Palestine. The Mount of Olives will divide North and South. Jerusalem is to become a great water-way, Isaiah tells us in chapter 33. That being so the strong probability is that the earthquake will let the waters of the Mediterranean into the Dead Sea, thus forming a passage past Jerusalem, the Peninsula of Sinai being on the right-hand when entering the Red Sea.

How significant that the British Association informs us that the Eastern end of the Mediterranean is an Earthquake Zone; also that a scientific authority has given warning that the Mount of Olives is crossed by a seismic fault, making further building there to be highly dangerous.

Here, then—after the storm—shall Our Lord reign—gloriously. (Is. xxiv, 23.) To this city delegates from all lands shall go up (Is. ii, 3), from it shall go forth the law for all nations.

Its citizens all happy
Because now holy men (Is. ii, 5)
'Neath vine and fig tree sitting (Mic. iv, 4)
They tell what God hath done
This City Abr'am looked for (He. xi, 10)
True home of all that's fair (Is. xxxv, 10)
Earth's centre of attraction (Is. lx, 11)
Because "the Lord is there." (Eze. xlviii, 35.)

NEW YEAR MESSAGES.

From the REV. W. A. CHALLIS.

IT is a great privilege to send a message of greeting to the Editor and readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER for the New Year. Having only become convinced of this great Truth during the last three years, and being no longer young, the revelation, for such it is, of British-Israel Truth is a great upheaval—a turning of one's world upside down in fact. But that is a good thing, for one is in good company past and present. For did not the preachers of the Gospel of the Kingdom of God in Apostolic times earn that distinction, being greeted as "those who turned the world upside down."? So, then, the world was wrong side up, having lost its true centre; and the messengers of the Gospel turned it upside down to face the true Centre of all Creation, namely, Jesus Christ.

Eagerly those Galileans—Benjamites—went forth to the lost sheep of the House of Israel, telling them the glad tidings of the Kingdom of God given so solemnly to them and taken from the Jews. Now that the connotation of the Kingdom of God has been revealed to us, the Israel of the latter days, our Gospel of the Kingdom must turn the world upside down, for it is manifestly wrong side up to-day, being self-centred. Those of us on whom this blessed Truth has dawned become more and more aware of the Christ as the Centre of all, and that our Message faithfully delivered must lead to our being styled "eccentrics." Let us gladly accept this for, as Professor Drummond has pointed out, to be eccentric is to be outside of the centre of self and to be beside Christ. If Christ, our Master, was contented to be styled "beside Himself," we His servants must delight to be so termed, for, beside ourselves, we are beside Christ.

My prayer is that the number of true eccentrics and those beside themselves in this proclamation of the Kingdom of God may increase more and more in the coming year, and the world be more and more turned upside down, and we to whom has been revealed this great Truth of the Kingdom of God may fearlessly proclaim that Gospel and be called beside ourselves and find ourselves beside Christ at His Coming.

From LIEUT.-COL. H. M. MAXWELL.

A BRIGHT and happy New Year to all British-Israel friends, especially to those who have contributed so liberally towards giving us another wonderful volume of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE.

But can we truly wish each other a "bright and happy year" when the heavy clouds of material adversity, and religious unbelief, hang so ominously over our country? When the problems of unemployment and industrial depression baffle our Statesmen, and our spiritual leaders have nothing to offer but a mutilated Bible and a Romanized Prayer Book.

Surely at such a time our hearts should be filled with gratitude to God for the British-Israel-World Federation, where the whole Bible is loved, honoured and believed; and where we can find our religious needs supplied and a cure for all our material wants pointed out.

Thus British-Israelites may truly wish each other "a bright and happy New Year," knowing that it will at least bring us one year nearer to the day when the promise of the New Covenant shall be fulfilled. "And they shall not teach every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for all shall know Me, from the least to the greatest."

But we must do our part. The Bible rings with promises of blessings to Israel, and through Israel to all the families of the earth, but in it God also says, "I will yet be enquired of by the House of Israel to do it for them." Also, "And it shall come to pass that before they call I will answer, and while they are yet speaking I will hear."

Surely, then, if we really believe God, the cure for all our troubles is plain, and at hand. Let us all pray that our nation, led by our King and rulers, may speedily be brought to unite in a day of national repentance and prayer, and then all our troubles will cease.

From J. E. NORMAN, ESQ., J.P.

I AGAIN gladly take the opportunity to wish the Editors and the exceedingly efficient staff of the British-Israel-World Federation my hearty greetings for the New Year. The past year has been one of continued progress, not only in the Homeland, but throughout the whole of our glorious Empire. Surely we can say: "Hitherto the Lord hath helped us."

I quite recently came across a parcel of pamphlets, reports and balance-sheets relating to the formation and early years' working of the first Anglo-Israel Association. It vividly recalled the past and deeply interested me. I think it may also prove of interest to the present members of the B.-I.-W.F., and with your permission I will shortly refer to it.

It is now well over fifty years since I first made a careful study of the subject. My attention was drawn thereto by reading several pamphlets issued by the late Edward Hine, many thousands of which were circulated. There is no date printed on them, but I think it was about the year 1869. Then in 1874 Mr. E. W. Bird, J.P., of Clifton, Bristol, began to write under the pen name of "Philo Israel." He was a retired Indian Judge, and extremely well informed. He wrote many pamphlets on British-Israel and the Great Pyramid, and travelled largely, lecturing and holding discussions in different parts of the country.

Subsequently he became the Editor of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, and in that capacity did yeoman service for the Cause. The BANNER OF ISRAEL and the COVENANT PEOPLE were afterwards incorporated with our splendid NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER.

The Anglo-Israel Association was formed in London just fifty years ago, 1879. The first annual meeting was held in the old Exeter Hall, now converted into the Strand Palace Hotel. The first President was the Rt. Hon. Viscount Folkestone, who occupied that position for several years. Vice-Presidents were appointed, amongst them being Mr. W. H. Peters, J.P., of Exeter. He gave a donation of £300 in order to start the Association. At the next annual meeting it was reported that during the year nine affiliated local Associations had been formed in England, including Exeter, with Mr. W. H. Peters as President, and the present writer Secretary.

In the report for 1883 appears the name of our dear and valued helper, the Rev. L. G. A. Roberts, Commander R.N. He was present at the annual meeting, so that he has kept the British-Israel flag flying for the past forty-five years or more. Long may he live in glorious Devon, where he now resides.

The early days of the Movement were very strenuous. The chief opposition, strange to say, came from the clergy. Pamphlets and letters followed each other in quick succession. The two chief blunders these writers fell into were :—

1. They could not, or would not, distinguish between the Kingdoms of Israel and of Judah.
2. They claimed that the grand national blessings promised to Israel were intended for the Church alone.

Over and over again these blunders were demolished, but in a short time they were in existence again.

It would require a far more able pen than mine to show the extraordinary progress and the present position of the Movement under the fostering care of the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard, and the able and experienced guidance of our Secretary-General, Mr. Herbert Garrison, F.R.G.S. It will suffice for me to say that in every part of our wonderful Empire the B.-I.-W.F. is represented, and the believers now can be counted by the million.

Ere long our enemies will be brought by the course of events to acknowledge that we are verily and in truth "A NATION AND A COMPANY OF NATIONS" and "THE SEED THAT THE LORD HAS BLESSED."

From the REV. H. B. SIMEON, M.A.

MOST heartily do I congratulate the British-Israel-World Federation upon the marvellous progress made during the last year, and on THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER, to the arrival of which towards the end of every week I look forward with eagerness. Interest in it never flags; every article produces some new gem from our great inheritance, the Bible. A strong light on it is being thrown by the scholars who write the articles, especially upon the Old Testament, which is unfortunately too often neglected by the clergy as being of merely an antiquarian interest.

Yet it is, in fact, of the deepest possible concern to the British Empire and America when the true key is applied to the lock; and that key is British-Israel knowledge. Innumerable passages, in the Psalms and Prophetical Books especially, some of which we value for their exceeding beauty, though we may never have understood their meaning, and others which may have been simply ignored as being incomprehensible, appear in an entirely new light when we read them under British-Israel rays. We see then how mistaken have been the ideas in which many of us have been brought up, namely, that they refer to a Church, whereas in fact they refer to a nation, or rather a company of nations; and we realize that we have been trying to force "a left boot on a right foot." It simply will not fit. I sincerely hope that in the coming year great efforts will be made to induce the clergy especially to study British-Israel ideas, and read the Bible in that light. It may be a difficult matter to do this. They will not readily leave the views in which they have been trained, the result being that they condemn British-Israel unheard simply because they are prejudiced against it, though they are quite content to accept as correct Proverbs xviii, 13: "He that answereth a matter before he heareth it, it is folly and shame unto him."

My message therefore is: "Go on and teach the Bible as it is written," and open your columns to explain any difficulties that may be sent in; and do everything that is possible to dispel the clouds of ignorance and prejudice which darken the path to the true understanding of the Bible, which is common to all, High, or Low, or Broad, or Modernist. In these days people will not thank their clergy for exhortatory sermons, or sermons which may sound eloquent but are nothing but froth. What they do want, and will most eagerly listen to, are explanatory sermons on the Bible.

From the REV. JOSEPH GAY, South Wales Commissioner.

A HAPPY and Prosperous New Year is my sincere wish for you and THE NATIONAL MESSAGE. You have passed through a strenuous and important year—the year 1928. The witness of your paper has been, in my judgment, well maintained.

The Commissioners can always refer our people to it with the utmost confidence. It would be asking too much, in fact the impossible, of any journal that it should always carry the assent of all its readers upon every topic dealt with; but I think I can say without fear of contradiction that in a surprising degree THE NATIONAL MESSAGE carries its readers along with it.

May thy bow, dear Mr. Editor, ever abide in strength.

From LIEUT.-COL. H. S. TYNDALL.

ALTHOUGH we are living in troublous times, and the world appears to be full of insoluble problems whichever way we look, to the right-minded man there is much to be thankful for in the spreading of the Gospel throughout the world. The "Gospel of the Kingdom" is, to-day, literally being "preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations." In this connection one of the most striking facts is the growing demand for THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER, and the growth and expansion of our Federation, an organization which has its solid foundations built upon the infallibility of the Bible, and which guides us to a right interpretation of prophecy. May all, especially those in positions of authority, learn to look more and more to the Bible for the solution of all the problems with which we are faced to-day.

From CANON E. SIDNEY SAVAGE.

THE greatest and noblest Empire that Providence has permitted to exist on the face of the habitable globe—the British Empire—is still growing, still developing, still moving and working towards a great destiny. Let us put our shoulder to the wheel and push.

PYRAMID PROPHECY AND THE NEW YEAR.

From D. DAVIDSON, ESQ., M.C., etc.

I FEEL that something more than the ordinary New Year Message is necessary from myself. The present occasion demands a reiteration of certain basic facts and principles, bearing upon the Great Pyramid's prophecy. These basic facts and principles, and the significance of their statement, are clear to many thoughtful people, who are now content, like myself, to await the ultimate verdict of current history concerning the matter. In my case, however, I have a certain personal responsibility that imposes upon me a definite course of action. In spite of publicly-expressed doubts and ridicule I must keep constantly before the public the fact that the existing state of stagnation in the basic industries in this country reached a definite epoch of crisis at the resumption of trade on 29th May, after the 1928 Whitsuntide holiday. The date marks a definite point of economic crisis in our basic industries that are dependent upon the principle of mass-production, precisely as my interpretation of the Great Pyramid's prophecy, published in 1924, stated would be the case. Unfortunately, many enthusiastic theorists attached their own interpretations to the date in question, and formed their own expectations. The present Government knows the serious turn that took place at that time, as will be realized when comparison is made between the provisions of the Budget, introduced on 26th April, 1928, and the astonishing supplementary provisions that have since had to be introduced. I will deal at length with this matter later. My intention now is not so much to convince people as to keep them from forgetting the elementary facts upon which their ultimate conviction must centre. In my own mind, I am more thoroughly convinced at the present moment concerning the truth of the Great Pyramid's Message than I ever have been on any previous occasion. My conviction rests upon the fact that I see my own interpretation of the Pyramid's dated symbolism fulfilled in detail from week to week since 29th May, 1928.

I am, however, no pessimist, nor is the Pyramid's Message a pessimistic one. The Pyramid's Message, confirming as it does the Message of the Bible, is a reliable guide from stagnation and chaos to true national stability and vitality and is a Message of Hope. Those alone are the false prophets who say that stability and prosperity can be regained by this or that political expedient or by any material means whatsoever. We have come to the parting of the ways as a nation and we must choose. The choice before us is as to whether to accept Christ as our national Guide and Mentor and attain the Kingdom on earth He offers us, or refuse Him and continue in stagnation and chaos. We have lost the spiritual vitality upon which our national prosperity depends and upon which it was built. The offer before us is an offer of spiritual vitality of immeasurably greater power than we as a nation have ever known. The Pyramid's Message assures us that we as a nation must accept this offer and that we will accept. Its warning, however, is that we must continue in an ever-increasing state of Tribulation until we are compelled to accept.

This is not to say that we must not work as men doing the work of men in our material world ; nor that we have to refrain from assisting such schemes of political and community expediency as are devised from time to time to lighten the intolerable burden of those upon whom the effects of the current Tribulation fall most heavily. It is part of the national movement towards Christ that we must bear our share in all such efforts to lighten the burden of our afflicted brethren. The Pyramid's warning, however, emphasizes that national regeneration and reconstruction will not be attained by material means, but only by the surge of the national spirit towards Christ.

The entire theme of the Great Pyramid's Revelation, from its beginning to its end, relates to Jesus Christ, to the Power of Jesus Christ, and to the emphatic teaching that nothing is good or permanent but that which is built in His Power. This explains why Isaiah states that the Great Pyramid was to witness unto the Lord of Hosts in the latter days.

It has been my privilege to discover, and to prove by demonstration to others that the Passage system of the Great Pyramid represents a great clock or time-chart of Divine prophecy—enshrined in the structure some 5,000 years ago ; and that this time-chart defines time, accurately by the methods of modern science for defining time, over a period of 6 000 years from 4000 B.C. This convincingly demonstrates that the Great Pyramid's Revelation was to be read in the light of the progressive knowledge of the present day, thus revealing "the latter days" of Biblical prophecy as lying within time now current. For even fifty years ago, science had not sufficiently advanced to read accurately the scientific elements of the Pyramid's Revelation. The accurate knowledge of modern times now enables us to see that the Great Pyramid's definition of precise time is established by eight independent series of astronomical demonstrations.

Amongst the outstanding dates defined we find those of the (a) Exodus, (b) Nativity, (c) Crucifixion, and (d) Great Britain's entry into the Great War. The accompanying structural features symbolize the nature of the events prophetically attached to the respective dates. Thus, for example, the dimensions of the Grand Gallery, which symbolizes the Christian Dispensation, are of expansive proportions, being wide, high and spacious. These indications, together with the ascending plane of direction, symbolize steady and generous progress in spiritual uplift and ideals.

At the commencement of the symbolism of Tribulation, however, at the point beginning 4th-5th August, 1914, the symbolism of spiritual uplift ceases, and the plane of direction lies in the horizontal. Here the symbolism of freedom vanishes, giving place to a symbolism clearly signifying stooping progress under narrow and burdensome conditions within the confines of the low, narrow limestone passage that leads to the narrow and comparatively low Antechamber. The height of this limestone passage is reduced to less than one-eighth the height of the Grand Gallery, and its width is only half that of the Grand Gallery. The passage itself defines the (e) dates and duration of the Great War period as 4th-5th August, 1914, to 10th-11th November, 1918.

At the latter date, height is enlarged, in the Antechamber, to less than two-fifths the Grand Gallery height, without the narrowness of width for freedom of progress being altered. Thus, although the burden of the Great War is symbolized as having been lightened, narrowness is retained to symbolize restriction to expansion and the continuance of troublesome conditions onwards to 29th May, 1928. At the point signifying the latter date, the second low passage is entered. This is constructed in granite. Now there is no structural granite in the Great Pyramid, except at the granite plug sealing the first Ascending Passage, until we enter the Antechamber. Here we are introduced to accumulations of structural granite in the following order :—

(1) The Granite ceiling of the Antechamber.
(2) The Granite floor of the Antechamber.
(3) The Granite leaf of the Antechamber.
(4) The Granite of West Wainscot of the Antechamber.
(5) The Granite of East Wainscot of the Antechamber.
(6) The Second Low (Granite) Passage.
(7) The Superimposed Granite of the King's Chamber North Wall.

In the case of the granite plug, this, by the dates and symbolism, applies to the period of Israel's Divine tuition during the early period of oppressions following Joshua's conquest of Canaan. In the case of the Antechamber, the gradual progressive introduction to a complete granite environment is, in light of the granite plug relationship, significant of the gradual overspreading of depression that has taken place in our basic industries since the war—the accentuation of which, since Whitsuntide, 1928, has caused our Government to undertake temporarily remedial measures that were not foreseen when the Budget was introduced on 26th April, 1928. As Sir Arthur Steel-Maitland (Minister of Labour) stated in the House of Commons on 9th November, 1928, the country is now presented with a problem "equal in intensity and difficulty to any of the great economical changes that had confronted this country in the history of the last 500 years."

In my May, 1928, series of articles in The Morning Post I directed attention to the economic nature of the crisis the Great Pyramid's prophecy indicated as beginning on 29th May, 1928, an indication which in "The Great Pyramid : Its Divine Message," published in July, 1924, I had interpreted as relating to a revolution in British industry reaching its crisis on the date thus specified. In The Morning Post articles mentioned I pointed out that the crisis indicated was one of "Governmental responsibility" to be borne by "the present British Parliament,"—"a responsibility that can be borne equably only by all its members shouldering the burden without party bias, without personal ambition, unselfishly."

Need I say more, beyond the fact that the Pyramid's prophecy indicates we have just entered the Tribulation that is at present, in the words quoted, already "equal in intensity and difficulty to any. . . that had confronted the country during the last 500 years"? Clearly the Message of the Pyramid is yet to be more widely and more accurately known than hitherto. Its Message is addressed to all, for all to believe. At least its warnings may be taken as guidance in watching the "signs of the times." For it is God's own witness to mankind in these days, and confirms to us that salvation is through Our Lord Jesus Christ and through Him only. May the truth of this Message, as it progressively forces itself on suffering humanity —particularly within the British Empire—fall upon fruitful soil, and be the means of helping many to grace and salvation.

From the Rev. H. A. JAMES.

SINCERE greetings to the staff of THE MESSAGE, and its many readers all over the world.

The British-Israel-World Federation is one of the greatest and most progressive Movements of the day, and one of the most essential.

The assaults upon the "Word of God," its inspiration and historical veracity, are becoming more and more concentrated. The German-Jew destructors of the Bible are finding not only sympathizers, but co-operators, within the folds of the Churches. It is necessary to preserve intact the Book which is the authority for all we believe in, and hope for. If the Old Testament is faulty and unreliable, then Our Blessed Lord Himself is untrustworthy, which is an incredible and impossible supposition.

"Attack is the best means of defence." That is the policy of the British-Israel-World Federation. It is not content with building bulwarks around its own position, but it fights the enemy on its own ground, and shows the weakness and the fallibility of the position taken up by the higher critic, the modernist, and others who would destroy critically the trustworthiness of the "Word of God."

Success to the Federation and all concerned, and may it prosper more and more, is the sincere wish and earnest prayer of the writer.

From MR. J. A. FORD.

AS the year of grace 1929 dawns upon us, whole-hearted members of the B.-I.-W.F. in the North send respectful and very cordial greetings to our leaders at Buckingham Gate. The burdens of those charged with leadership of such a Cause as ours in such a time as this, with its innumerable cults and sects, must be heavy indeed. We would assure them in Tennyson's phrase that our prayers "rise like a fountain for them night and day." We honour and love them for the splendid service they render to the Federation, and for the quality of the lead they give to its membership. What we owe to the distinguished Editor of our paper for his unique Bible expositions and his deep spiritual insight is beyond telling. We give them our unstinted confidence and would cheerily exhort them to be of good courage. They have a mighty message for our people and its bold and speedy proclamation is imperative.

We are not insensible to the signs of the times as they present themselves to us from all points of the compass. We have a serene confidence that Buckingham Gate will help us to a sane and sound interpretation of them all. The recent remarkable Conference on Mount Olivet, for instance, points to the way out for missionary problems on the up-to-date lines of British statesmanship—every race and nation, guided by the Holy Spirit, working out its own version of the great dual Gospel, so that the Christ of England's mountains green is absolutely one with the "Christ of the Indian Road."

We would like to send a special word of love and good cheer to the Secretary-General and his able staff. We pray for them a speedy accession in numbers and the increasing power of the Spirit in their labours.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

THE usual weekly meetings at Headquarters will be resumed (D.V.) next week. On Wednesday afternoon, 16th January, at 3 o'clock, Miss B. Maud Beck will speak. On Thursday evening, at 7.30, our Commissioner, the Rev. T. Sparshott Johnson, M.A., will give an address.

A booklet by a retired clergyman attacking British-Israel was issued some time ago, with a "Foreword" purporting to be contributed by the Bishop of a diocese not a hundred miles from London. The Secretary-General wrote to the Bishop asking him to be good enough to say on what he based an extraordinary and utterly unwarrantable statement made in the "Foreword."

Imagine our astonishment on learning from the Bishop that he was not the author of the statement; that in fact only the first ten lines of the co-called "Foreword" were his, the rest being actually the author's preface.

The whole occupies just one page, and there is nothing to distinguish between what was written by the Bishop and what was written by the author. The impression distinctly conveyed is that the whole page is the Bishop's.

What are we to think of such conduct as this?

Mount Pleasant may be described as London's great Postal Clearing House. At normal times 6,000 men are employed there in handling 18,000,000 letters and 400,000 parcels per week. For the Christmas period—about six weeks—1,500 additional men are required to deal with a 40 per cent. increase of letters, and about one million parcels per week, notwithstanding the many ingenious and effective labour- and time-saving devices installed.

The dramatic rescue and safe and rapid conveyance of twenty women and children from the British Legation at Kabul to Peshawar—160 miles in an hour and a half—is a notable instance of the value of aircraft in a work of mercy in a grave emergency. The aeroplane used was a Vickers' "Victoria," which had been designed as a troop carrier and was capable of carrying 25 men with their equipment, including machine guns. It was brought from Irak for its novel and noble mission.

A lively correspondence on British-Israel is going on in the columns of the Middlesex Chronicle, pro and con. A certain minister is repeating the old threadbare arguments that have been answered again and again, and showing that he is in the theological rut which closes the mind to the wider vision. Our British-Israel champions, the Rev. Sparshott Johnson, Mr. A. J. Chapman, Mr. C. A. Theobald, and others, are effectively answering the Rev. gentleman.

Our Commissioners and the Revs. Gilbert Davies, Kenneth Dodds, Mrs. Bloxam, Miss Hamilton Hunter, Dr. Paget Thurston, Messrs. W. H. Hesketh, J.P., H. D. Houghton, Daniel Farmer, John H. Tench, G. R. Gair, Wm. Whitton, and others, have given addresses in various centres during the past few days.

Our South Wales Commissioner, the Rev. Joseph Gay, A.T.S., paid a flying visit to the Midland and Yorkshire areas during the weeks from December 10th to 21st inclusive. He lectured consecutive evenings at Hanley, Coventry, Birmingham, Nottingham and Derby in the Midland area, and Harrogate, Bingley, Ilkley, Halifax and Bradford in the Yorkshire area.

Though the audiences, due doubtless to the near approach of Christmas, were not so large as usual, they were fairly so, and in every way showed that spirit of serious earnestness which always characterizes our Movement. Mr. Gay also preached at the Baptist Church, Bingley, on Sunday evening, December 16th, at the kind invitation of the pastor and deacons, who are certainly interested in our Truth. In many of these places Mr. Gay delivered the message he gave at our last Congress in October, viz.: "The Place of Jesus in British-Israel Teaching," with general appreciation; but the lecture which gripped the most was given under the title, "The Bible, is it true?" in which Mr. Gay makes a closely-reasoned attack upon the Modernist position. He divides his subject into three parts: "Is the Bible true scientifically? Is the Bible true canonically? Is the Bible true historically and prophetically?" With logical precision Mr. Gay marshals his facts so as to carry strong conviction to the minds of his hearers.

He speaks in the highest terms of the excellent work of his fellow Commissioners, the Revs. T. H. Whitehouse and Guy Waddington, M.A.

Mr. Gay will be returning to South Wales after January 9th, where hard and strenuous work awaits him. His address will then be 251, Cowbridge Road, Cardiff, South Wales.

The Rev. Canon Sidney Savage is to lead a party to Egypt and Palestine in April next, in connection with Sir Henry Lunn, Ltd. Mr. J. J. Morey will (D.V.) be a member of the party.

Toronto has been fortunate in having the opportunity of hearing Mr. Fanton Fansher. On December 12th he addressed a crowded meeting at the Toronto East Branch, St. John's (Norway) Parish Hall, taking as his subject, "The Final War." Those who heard him evidently wanted to hear him again, because on the following evening, when he spoke on "Circumstantial Evidence" at the Central Branch, 56, Wellesley Street, the hall was packed. Mr. Fansher, who comes from Aylmer, Ontario, is not only a finished speaker, but is also a student of many years' standing of British-Israel Truth.

Vancouver, B.C., is growing fast. It has fine streets and noble buildings, and very attractive residential areas. The total population has reached nearly 300,000. The city has a great advantage in its splendid harbour—one of the finest on the North American continent, having a total area of nearly fifty square miles, with many bays and inlets. It is Canada's great western outlet to the Pacific Ocean, and the terminus of the Canadian transcontinental railway system, and it has connections and large business with various railways of the United States. Very extensive harbour improvements have recently been carried out, grain elevators erected, new jetties constructed, etc. A special feature is the new Ballantyne Pier, of enormous length, height and width, with huge sheds for goods, railway tracks, vehicular traffic ways, electrically-worked cranes, transporters, elevators, escalators, capstans, and all modern devices for handling cargoes to and from the great liners which lie alongside the pier. The construction of this pier was a colossal undertaking. Visitors to the Port naturally count it one of the particular things to be seen.

Through the energy and persevering efforts of a few enthusiasts a new Branch—the Wandsworth Branch—has been formed. President, Mrs. Brigden ; Vice-President, Mr. H. J. Hellings ; Treasurer, Mrs. Keene ; Secretary, Mrs. A. E. Hellings. We hope all in the district who are interested in the Gospel of the Kingdom will rally to the support of the local Branch, that it may become a powerful centre for the spread of the Good News throughout this heavily-populated area.

Harrogate Branch, on December 17th, enjoyed a most inspiring lecture given by Rev. Joseph Gay, the audience showing their appreciation at the close by the enthusiastic applause. Dr. Rutherford was in the chair.

On December 21st the Rev. Joseph Gay gave an address at the Friends' Meeting House, Bradford, his subject being "The Place of Jesus in British-Israel Teaching." Mr. Gay also touched on his experiences in South Wales. The chairman was Rev. R. G. F. Waddington, M.A.

The Muswell Hill Branch is transferring to Highgate, owing to having been turned out of the hall which they had been using. A weekly prayer meeting has now been instituted, and a new hall most wonderfully provided in answer to prayer. Miss Hamilton Hunter has very kindly consented to give a series of lectures as a start. The hall is situated at 223, Archway Road, Highgate (entrance in Cholmeley Park), quite near "The Winchester." The Secretary will be very glad to have the support of members and friends living in that vicinity, and names of those likely to be interested, in order that a strong and zealous Branch may be established for a real and definite work in the district. Enquiries made through the Secretary-General at Headquarters will be duly forwarded.

We would remind our members and friends that the Reading and Rest Room on the first floor at Headquarters is open daily in the afternoon, from 3 to 6 o'clock (Saturday and Sunday excepted). Visitors are cordially invited. Teas are served from 4 to 5.30. It is hoped that an increasing number who are interested in our teaching will take advantage of this opportunity to read our literature in these fine, comfortable surroundings.

To the late W. T. Stead, of whom he held a high opinion and with whom he discussed many questions when they met, Cecil Rhodes said, during a visit to England : "I have come to the conclusion that the English-speaking race, whether British, American, Australian, or South African, is the type of race which does now, and is likely to continue to do in the future, the most practical and effective work to establish justice, to promote liberty, and to ensure peace over the widest possible area of this planet. Therefore, if God cares anything about what I do, as He is manifestly fashioning the English-speaking race as the chosen instrument by which He will bring in a state of society based on Justice, Liberty and Peace, He must obviously wish me to do what I can to give as much scope and power to the race as possible."

BOOK CIRCLES.

Many people would like to read our literature, but cannot afford to buy all the books we have published, much as they would like to do so.

Here is an idea which is being used to good purpose by some of our friends.

A circle of interested people is formed, the larger the number the better for all concerned. Each member of the circle undertakes to purchase one or more British-Israel books, and after reading lends them to the next member. So, if there are a dozen people, or only half-a-dozen, the purchase of one book by each person ensures each member being able to read and study six or twelve books.

To save expense one person could act for the whole circle and order all the books at once, thus saving the cost of carriage.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

THE DOCUMENTS OF DANIEL.

AN OUTLINE BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD, F.R.G.S.

FOREWORD.

THE following brochure on the Book of Daniel is written with a very distinct and limited purpose.

It is not our purpose to go into the general details of the prophecies of Daniel, nor to critically examine the specific datings to be found in the Book of Daniel further than is necessary to illustrate the things which we desire to place before the reader. Three things we desire to touch:

Firstly, to separate the various documents each from the other as they are presented in the Book.

Secondly, to show how they make connection with the course of world history.

Thirdly, to show the relationship of each contribution to the main course of the prophecies of the Book; which prophecies stretch over a period of SEVEN prophetic times—or 2,520 years, and to do this briefly as a specific contribution.

Because the date-system is so accessible to the general reader, and because it illustrates the separation of each document from the others by the lapse of time, we have used the Ushur Chronology. This chronology will be found in the marginal readings of many issues of the sacred Scriptures. We neither accept nor deny the exactness of the datings of the chronology used.

Many have gone into the details of the prophecies and many more will doubtless do so. Our purpose is to show the order of the prophecies so clearly that it will be easy for the student of the Word to follow up the study of Daniel. By separating the various documents and taking note of their outlines and purpose, this object should be accomplished.

It will be noted that the Book of Daniel speaks of things which were happening in the writer's day, and of things which should take place at various periods during the seven prophetic times, much of which has had fulfilment; but in all this there remains an atmosphere of expectancy as to further fulfilment. There also remain great culminating prophecies of events beyond, and logically succeeding to the transactions of the seven prophetic times.

Daniel's specific account of the details of pre-written history breaks off at the end of the first half of the seven times, and only the outline of the second period is carried on. We have a suggestion to offer in regard to this.

There was a wonderful challenge given at Pentecost, which has held good ever since, and still holds good. It is as follows: "Ye men of Israel . . ." Thus the appeal is addressed by the Apostle Peter. "Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord; And He shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you: Whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began."

Had Israel heard and repented individually and nationally at that time, or at any succeeding time, there can be no doubt but that this challenge would have been made good. God on His side was prepared for that event.

In that case it would be essential that there should not be found in this, nor in any other Book, prophecies which could not have been fulfilled by a rapid progress such as would have immediately preceded the Coming of Our Lord.

At the time the Pentecost challenge was given

EVERY PHASE OF THE BABYLON IMAGE WAS THEN IN FULFILMENT.

Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece, had then been; and all the Daniel prophecies concerning them had received fulfilment. Rome was then in the ascendant. Cæsar Augustus was on the throne when Our Lord was born. This was the last of the four parts of the image, the last of the four beasts.

Therefore the detailed prophecies of Daniel halted there. In the foreknowledge of God the time for Our Lord's return, and the establishment of His reign, has not come. In the purpose of God everything was ready; only Israel's continued sin and rebellion have prevented the Coming of Our Lord. Thus Israel, not God, is shown to be responsible for the delay in Our Lord's return.

When it became manifest that Israel would not repent, and that the Coming of Our Lord would be delayed to the end of the seven times of punishment previously pronounced upon Israel and Judah, a second issue of prophetic revelation was given in the Book of Revelation, which takes up the story in detail where Daniel lays it down. As Daniel furnishes in detail the history, pre-written, of the first "time, times and dividing of a time," so the Book of Revelation furnishes the second "time, times and half a time" of history which should lead up to the end of the seven times. After the end of the seven times, by the terms of the New Covenant, from which the condition of Israel's obedience is removed, the way for the return of Our Lord would be clear. The "Old" Covenant, which continued for the seven times, was contingent upon Israel's obedience—the "New" Covenant rests solely upon the Divine sovereignty; expressed in the terms, "They shall" and "I will."

When, therefore, we fail to find the details of the last half of the seven times in the Book of Daniel, we may look for and find them fully set forth in the Book of Revelation.

What Daniel sealed, Our Lord unsealed, as we read in the fourth chapter of Revelation. What Daniel left untold, Our Lord set forth in "The Revelation of Jesus Christ which God gave unto Him," i.e., in the Book of Revelation, as the seals of the Book were opened by Him.

Perhaps if the challenge of the Pentecost sermons had been taken up, and Israel had repented, the Book of the Revelation would not have been necessary. Instead of it we might have been privileged to read the history of the reign on earth of Our Lord as so much accomplished fact.

So let us read the Book of Daniel, and when we have mastered the contents of that, let us take up the Book of Revelation and continue the study. We shall find the great outlines of the full seven times, and the details of the first half of them, in Daniel. We shall find the outline of the full seven times in the opening of the seven seals; the details of the second half in the sounding of the seven trumpets in the Book of Revelation.

Perhaps we take it too much for granted that such matters as the scope of Biblical history; the scope of Biblical prophecy; and the scope of the "seven times" of prophecy, now translated so largely into history, are well known to the average reader. The Holy Scriptures, after once or twice presenting such things, assume the knowledge thereof by the reader. Unless this should be the case, each of the Biblical writers who used, for instance, the seven times of prophecy as the basis of his presentation, would have been under the necessity of restating the whole of the facts concerning the "seven times." This would have made the sacred Scriptures much more voluminous and much less usable for the purposes for which they have been Divinely prepared. Daniel uses the "seven times" of the Old Covenant with Israel, as stated in Leviticus xxvi, as a matter well known by the readers of the documents he provided. So do other writers of the sacred Scriptures. We have assumed a knowledge of the same on the part of the reader. But lest there be those who have not studied the matter, we briefly outline it here.

The history of the chosen race begins with the call of Abraham, recorded in the twelfth chapter of Genesis. For our purpose, we confine ourselves to that history.

It proceeds to the birth of the seed "Isaac" and his descendants, the "Saxon" race.

It notes the dedication of the race in Isaac, who was at that time "Thine only Isaac," as God called him in addressing Abraham.

It takes up the delivery of the race from Egypt, and the organization of the race into God's Kingdom on earth. "Ye shall be unto Me a kingdom . . ."

It follows the kingdom history in Palestine down to the time of its division into two.

It follows the history of the two kingdoms, still in Palestine, down to the time of the beginning of the "seven times" of punishment upon Israel, when she was carried away into that captivity from which she has never returned.

Historically the House of Israel was dropped out of the Bible historical records.

History, however, continues to follow the House of Judah, resident still in South Palestine, until the time of the going into effect of the "seven times" of punishment upon her. Then she was also carried away captive from Palestine by Nebuchadnezzar. From that captivity, as a nation, the House of Judah never returned.

From that time the movement of the House of Judah is also dropped from the narrative of Bible history.

There returned from the captivity some fifty thousand or less of the people of Judah. These set up, under Divine guidance, THE NATION OF THE JEWS. The history of the beginning of that nation, and of its continuance, until the destruction of the nation in A.D. 70, is contained in the Bible.

After the destruction of the nation, it also ceases to be a part of the historic theme of the Bible.

Thus the history of the chosen race runs like a river with full current, bank high, until Israel drops out into captivity.

Thereafter it continues to run with a stream reduced to two-twelfths of its former strength. That is to say, the current of history now carries forward only two of the twelve tribes, Judah and Benjamin, constituting jointly the House of Judah. Then these also go into captivity, and the history ceases for a time altogether, while all the tribes are in captivity.

The history began again with Ezra and Nehemiah, but carried on with still less strength, having now in its vision only that remnant of the two tribes which returned from the captivity, which formed the nation of the Jews.

At the destruction of Jerusalem and the scattering of the nation of the Jews in A.D. 70, the stream dried up altogether, and there has been no addition to the Biblical history of the chosen race since that time.

But as the Biblical history dried up in its course, the prophecies of the Bible took up the story more and more fully; pre-writing the course which the secular history of the nations of the chosen race should follow during the period in which they should be filling out the measure of their seven times of punishment.

This stream of prophetic Scripture becomes more and more full and strong as its prevision approaches the end of the seven times' period. For with the end of the seven times' period, Israel of the twelve tribes should be fully reunited and restored, and Our Lord Himself should come, and should take to Himself the Throne of His father David, and should "reign over the House of Jacob for ever."

Connected with the history of the chosen seed are historic fragments of other races and nations which have impinged upon and affected the nations of the chosen race. In Daniel the Babylonian succession of Empire takes the leading place.

Thus the period of Bible history, supplemented by prophecy, sweeps on from the call of Abraham to the Coming of the Christ to reign, covering a period of approximately four thousand years.

THE SCOPE OF THE "SEVEN YEARS" OF PROPHECY.

In order to understand the meaning of this period it will be necessary to read the document which contains the "Old" Covenant made with Israel at Sinai. It will be found in the twenty-sixth chapter of Leviticus. Here Israel is promised perpetual blessing if she will obey; but, seven times of punishment, quadrupled in force, if she disobey. For six centuries, or thereabouts, Israel avoided the seven times of punishment, and carried on under the "blessings" of the "Old" Covenant.

Then having boldly put away the Divine Altar and worship, and afterwards, having put away the Divine Law, and set up instead thereof the "Statutes of Omri," which action constituted a revolution against the Kingship and administration of Jehovah, Israel was placed under the punishment clauses of the Covenant, and was carried away into captivity.

Judah saw, but did not heed. She followed Israel in the matter of putting away the Divine Law, and substituting therefor the "Statutes of Omri"; and, while she kept the form of the Divine worship, she utterly corrupted it (see Ezekiel viii), therefore she was also placed under the punishment clauses, and entered upon seven times of punishment. The return of the remnant to Jerusalem and the setting-up of the seventy weeks' nation did not reverse this sentence of the seven times upon Judah.

The periods when the four sets of seven times went into effect against Israel and Judah are as follows:

Against Israel, two sentences: beginning 740 B.C. and 721 B.C., respectively. These are the dates of the movements into captivity.

Against Judah, two sentences; beginning 603 B.C. and 587 B.C., the two movements into captivity.

The length of time signified by seven times is 2,520 years, or seven times three hundred and sixty.

BABYLON'S SEVEN TIMES OF OPPORTUNITY.

Now when Israel and Judah were appointed to seven times of punishment, Babylon and the succeeding Empires were given seven times of opportunity. They were appointed to act for God in keeping order among the nations during the time that Israel was under punishment.

Prophetically the Babylon succession is covered during the seven times, and the end of the Empire succession at the end of that period is most clearly foreshown.

Taking the dates to indicate a very definite period, but not specific days and years necessarily as far as our understanding of them is concerned, we now know that we have come approximately to the end of the seven times of prophecy. There is no end to history of course, so it would be foolish to say that we have come to the end of history. But we know to what point we have reached in the progress of history. History is about to finally catch up with prophecy; and the period through which the world has been passing with so much pain and sorrow is coming speedily to an end. It will not be a sudden end. For as the former period of blessing ended by a process, as we have seen, so is the period of punishment ending by a process which answers to the former in chronological steps, point by point.

Now the Book of Daniel relates itself to the great sweep of that history which began with the call of Abraham. It prewrites the period of that history contained in the "seven times" of prophecy. It will not be hard for the student to make or select a chronological table, and to relate to it the various documents of Daniel, and the events therein portrayed. The predictions have been so fully fulfilled that there can now be no question in the informed mind of the fact that Daniel in his prophecies does indeed deal with very concrete facts, most of which have in due course appeared on the pages of the world's history. So very far has this been the case that we are justified in assuming that all the remaining facts so indicated will appear in due time.

BIBLICAL HISTORY IS OFTEN ALSO PROPHECY.

Another point which might be set forth is this. It seems to be the habit of the Bible to relate facts of history, and of biography, in a very simple and straightforward manner. Such facts, as presented, may be fully depended upon as historical.

The student who has become familiar with the spirit and habit of the Bible will first suspect, and then become assured, that the Bible uses such facts, and the history of them so stated, as signs and symbols of larger and later fulfilments. Thus the history of facts in the past becomes prophecy of facts to be revealed, and of their manner of appearing in later history.

For instance. In the personal experience of Nebuchadnezzar it is told, as a veritable bit of biography, that Nebuchadnezzar rebelled in spirit against the God of Heaven, saying, "Is not this great Babylon which I have builded"; thus placing himself in the seat of God. As a result he was punished "seven times." His reason was dethroned, and he had his place with the beasts in the grass of the field. But after seven times his reason returned, and he was restored to the kingdom.

This is told as being biographical history. And yet the wording of it shows that it had a greater scope than the lifetime of Nebuchadnezzar. In the personal experience of Nebuchadnezzar there was a prophecy concerning the future of his dynasty. That should be cut down, but not destroyed, as a family. At the end of the period of "brass" and "iron" it should arise again, and attain the kingdom. We have elsewhere asked the question, "Did that dynasty arise again in the House of Hohenzollern?" From the father of Frederick the Great to Wilhelm the House of Hohenzollern wrote widely on the page of modern history.

This may suffice to show that, when we read in Daniel prophecies which had a very specific and undoubted fulfilment in the earlier ages of the succession of Empires, we should not assume too quickly that the prophecy is thereby exhausted. We should rather look closely at passing events, as well as scan closely the already written pages of history, to see whether events so prophesied, and now already historic, are not in themselves adumbrations of greater movements to follow in the same succession of happenings.

The spirit of the Book of Daniel will arouse in the careful reader the feeling that this is indeed the case. We may be sure of our facts as far as they have appeared in history; we may be sure of the events prophesied wherever the language is specific and refers to known peoples, persons, or things; and we may also expect further unfoldings of all that God saw when He inspired holy men of God to write and speak as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.

The foregoing is illustrated in the ecclesiastical realm. The system of sacrificial worship had an immediate importance in regard to national and individual approach to God. Striking offerings on particular occasions, and daily offerings, are presented as concrete facts of history. But the matter did not end there, neither in significance, importance, nor fact. The system of offerings, and the actual offerings, were prophetic and typical of Christ, and of His great sacrifice.

As was the case in ecclesiastical things, we may assume, may even perhaps know, that such was also the case in national things, and so look upon history not only as history but as also prophecy for the then future.

It is not likely that Babylonian history foreshadows Israel's future. Babylon's past may adumbrate Babylon's future, and Israel's past may foreshadow Israel's future. We must not cross our lines of sequence in history and prophecy.

The manner of such foreshadowing may be by history repeating itself, perhaps on a larger scale, and it may be by historical contrasts. For instance, Israel went by stages into captivity and punishment. Israel is emerging by similar stages from her experience of punishment. Babylon waxed more and more powerful by stages; and now Babylon has fallen by stages, and is approaching total destruction.

NEW YEAR MESSAGES.

From MR. JOHN H. TENCH, President of the B.-I.-W.F. Branches of Darlington and Durham.

THE need of the British at the present time is to know their origin. So the prophet Isaiah, writing to the people dwelling in the Isles of the Sea, north-west of Palestine, at the ends of the earth, to Israel, My servant, Jacob whom I have chosen, the seed of Abraham My friend, says: "Hearken to me, ye that follow after righteousness, ye that seek the Lord; look unto the rock whence ye are hewn, and to the hole of the pit whence ye are digged. Look unto Abraham your father, and unto Sarah that bare you; for I called him alone, and blessed him, and increased him. Hearken unto Me, My people: and give ear unto Me, O My nation, for a law shall proceed from Me, and I will make My judgment to rest for a light of the people. My righteousness is near; My salvation is gone forth, and Mine arms shall judge the people; the isles shall wait upon Me, and on Mine arm shall they trust."

From MAJOR E. D. PICKARD CAMBRIDGE, J.P., Vice-President, B.-I.-W.F.

THE B.-I.-W.F. has continued its course throughout the year in an ever-increasing volume of efficiency and progress. The addresses given at the Annual Congress have been, if possible, of a higher standard than ever before.

The Secretary-General, whose activities are so remarkable, has continued to guide the Federation with a sure and certain hand, and we must again express to the Rev. Pascoe Goard our deep gratitude for his many able and helpful studies of the Holy Bible.

The Covenant Publishing Co. have given to us during the year many excellent contributions from well-informed and devout authors.

The parable of the wise and foolish virgins may well occupy some of our daily thoughts. The vision of Our Lord's Second Advent to take up His Kingdom on earth fills us with awe and with thoughts of the inexpressible beauty of His Presence.

From the REV. T. H. GOING.

I WOULD like to thank the contributors of many helpful articles in the past year. No teaching can compare with the B.-I. teaching in its power to make the Bible a fresh Book to us all. May I urge all our members to pray that God will in this coming year light up His Word for us more and more. That by His blessing we have stamped on all the work of the Federation the hall-mark of truth, and that in our words His sheep may hear His Voice.

From MRS. A. MACDONALD, Vice-President, B.-I.-W.F.

GREETINGS to all my fellow-readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER. What a refresher it is, week by week, in the dark days through which we are passing.

The text impressed on my mind as the message to me for the coming year is from Eph. v, 14: "Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from (among) the dead, and Christ shall give thee light (shine upon thee)." As the previous verses show, it is written to Christians. It is a glorious but serious thing to be a Christian. It is God Who calls us to awake and "walk circumspectly, redeeming the time, because the days are evil." We, who are British-Israel believers and God's witnesses, and who believe in the near Coming of Our Lord, need all the more to see that we are awake and among the wise virgins with oil in our lamps that we be not taken unawares.

As God's witnesses we are among the dead, who are living heedlessly, caring for none of these things. How responsible we are as to our witness and behaviour among them. It is an empowering call to arise and come out and be separate, and show that we are alive unto God. How gracious God is! He will help us to arise. Christ will shine upon us and fill us with joy and peace, and make us a blessing to others. We have the promise in Rom. viii, 11: "He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies." We have the Spirit within us, quickening our whole nature, vivifying us, perfecting us, so "that as Sons of God we can cry, Abba Father." "The Spirit itself beareth witness that we are the children of God."

From the REV. W. TURPITT, B.A., B.D.

To meet the New Year gladly we must have a lofty conception of human life. Moses' words to Hobab in Numbers x, 29, give us this lofty conception of life. Life is a journey with a plan and purpose in it, and not a mere wandering with no goal in view. "We are journeying (said Moses) unto the place of which the Lord said: I will give it you." It was a literal place that Moses spake of here, and it is inadequate interpretation to forget this. The place referred to was, of course, the literal land of Canaan.

Life is a journey—the scenes of which shift and change from day to day, more so from year to year, and still more so from generation to generation. "Your fathers, where are they? and the prophets, do they live for ever?"

British-Israel teaching in a special way stands for the conception of God's guidance in human affairs. It aims at combating the materialistic view of life which gives us an orphan world. While the materialist might say: "We are wandering," we say: "We are journeying." We are not a host of wandering Jews. Life to us is a journey arranged according to a Divine plan.

> "There is a Divinity that shapes our ends, > Rough-hew them as we will."

And because of the good hand of God upon us, we know that we Anglo-Saxon-Celtic peoples have more abundant reasons than other peoples for believing this. "He hath not so dealt with any nation" as with us.

This truth of our being Divinely led as a nation should deepen our sense of responsibility, arouse us to a moral heroism, intensify our faith and sanctify our lives. And the best is yet to be.

Theodore Monod said he would like the epitaph upon his tombstone to be: "Here endeth the first lesson."

"Thou wilt guide me with Thy counsel and afterwards receive me to glory."

From GENERAL SIR ARTHUR PHAYRE, G.C.B., President, Oxford Branch.

To all British-Israelites. Let us commend the British-Israel Cause to others by leading good Christian lives, and doing all we can to win others for Christ.

From the REV. WM. C. BATTISCOMBE.

MY hearty congratulations to the Editor of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, and to all who are so ably supporting him with their excellent articles, as well as to all so actively engaged in distributing and continually increasing the circulation of our weekly journal. The sound Scriptural teaching which it contains is always something to look forward to every week. One of the many good proofs of the Scriptural soundness of the Truth proclaimed in the British-Israel teaching is the wonderful way in which it opens the eyes and understanding of so many who had hitherto been agnostics, atheists and other doubters in the absolute truth and integrity of the Holy Scriptures, as well as of those who had formerly misunderstood their real meaning and significance. May the good work go forward with still greater vigour; and may our leaders be still more abundantly blessed in their labour of love. Another beneficent result is the good feeling and brotherly fellowship it promotes between all sections of Christian believers. May the circulation of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE be, this New Year, greatly increased.

From ANDREW B. BUCHANAN, ESQ.

". . . . . NEVERTHELESS when the Son of man cometh, shall He find faith on the earth?" How applicable these words to the days in which we are living. The simple faith of our forefathers in the revealed knowledge of God's Word and in worship seems now to be at a very low ebb. And what is it all heading to? Is it not the apostasy, the falling away? The teaching of Higher Criticism, Modernism, New Thought has done its work only too well, and this is evident in the youth of our country to-day. In their critical aspect of Scripture and its apparent unbelief there has followed the mad rush after pleasure and amusement, with its inevitable result—unrest. The eyes of the world to-day see the great field of industrial unrest, all unmindful of the greater field of spiritual unrest and lack of faith. Yet thoughtful men are taking stock. ". . . . . It was most necessary that in Scotland they should look after their own people and they had a great advantage in that Church, when a minister preached the ancient faith.

"They all knew how that faith had been assailed. Even dignitaries of the Church said there were things in the Old Testament they need not believe, although archæologists were finding a surprisingly large amount of evidence of the truth of the Bible.

"The people nowadays wanted to know more about the right Bible and not other people's versions of it. That was where Christianity had its strength." (The Earl of Cassillis at the Highlanders' Institute, Glasgow, 6-12-28. From The Bulletin.)

THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER is accomplishing its mission in sending forth to the nation its trumpet-calls for:

A RETURN TO ISRAEL'S GOD; A RETURN TO GOD'S WORD AS REVEALED BY SCRIPTURE; A RETURN TO GOD'S WORSHIP and A RETURN TO FAITH.

Let these clarion-calls of RETURN resound with renewed fervour through its pages for 1929, and the peals penetrate to the ends of the earth.

To Editors, contributors and readers, best wishes for a bright and happy New Year, filled to the brim with service and FAITH.

From the REV. J. H. SATCHELL, B.A.

IN wishing Divine blessing throughout the coming year upon the British-Israel Federation in general, and in particular its journalistic work and mission as embodied in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, I beg leave to offer a few remarks upon the present Church of England Prayer Book controversy.

Owing to the Parliamentary rejection of the 1927 and 1928 proposed Revision, a desire has been strongly felt and expressed by many members of the Church of England—some high-placed—for deliverance of the Church from all Parliamentary control or interference in matter of doctrine while retaining at the same time the Establishment. "Let the Church have complete liberty, without let or hindrance, to decide her own teaching and doctrinal ritual."

If I understand the mind of the Federation rightly, it is opposed to this view as being diametrically opposite to the British-Israel Federation belief in the national character of the Church of England. If the (so called) Church of England is, and is to continue to be, the Church of England, it would seem that England (and Scotland) must have a voice in declaring what it is willing to accept or reject as its teaching, and the Nation speaks through its King and Parliament. Reject this control and the Church ceases to be the Church of England, which God forbid should happen! Church and Nation, if not already so, yet ideally, ever tend more and more to become one, a climax to be devoutly desired. The Church of old containing both good and bad was the Nation of Israel. "This is he, that was in the church in the wilderness." (Acts vii, 38.) In New Testament days St. Peter calls the Church in Asia Minor "a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation." (1 Peter ii, 9.) Until the separation of the Free Churches the Church in England and the Nation were practically one. We would have it always so, believing this is God's will and intention for England, as for Israel of old. King and Parliament as representing the Nation have, up to now, had much to do with the teaching and practice of the Church of England. May it always be so! Thus may England ever be, by profession at least, a Christian Nation, though in it be mixed up wheat and tares. King and Parliament stand for the whole Nation. Bishops, Church Assembly and Lay Representatives form only a part of the nation, and yet we say "The Church of England." Individuals first, then nations. Then One Nation. "The Kingdom shall be given to a nation." (Matthew xxi, 43.) "All nations shall flow unto it." (Isaiah ii, 2.)

(Rev.) J. H. SATCHELL, B.A.

From COLONEL J. C. TYLER.

I GLADLY avail myself of the opportunity of testifying our indebtedness to your Federation.

The earliest history of the British Isles, the origin of the British, is so clearly shown in the Bible that we look forward to the time when, through your instrumentality, all hard-headed, clear-thinking men and women in this country and overseas will treasure the Book as "The early history of the British Nation and Isles"—the origin of the British race.

The rest of the Book will then take care of itself. There is also so much of romance still to be revealed. No one question, I think, presses more hardly for detailed information than this: "Where was Our Lord during the 18 unrecorded years of His ministry?"

He tells us in two sentences:

"Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" And "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel."

We know something of His opportunities in connection, for instance, with the first English Church at Avalon. His faithful uncle, Joseph of Arimathea, was a rich merchant trading with Cornwall, and known in history in connection with that Church. The tribe of Dan had a fleet of vessels trading for tin and a colony in *Dan*monium (Cornwall and Devon). We may surely therefore, I hope, have no doubt whatever that Our Lord visited England.

From MR. A. H. LORD.

ANOTHER milestone in the history of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER has been reached, and of the Cause which it represents; and as time goes on, so do the proofs of the bases of its interpretations of the prophecies of the Holy Scriptures increase and multiply. We are living in days when it appears to be the aim and even pleasure of all the supposedly wise to urge the human authorship, with all its frailties, of this Divine Book. We are told by some of the responsible leaders of the Church that many of the earlier books are legendary and mythical, and only in so far as they are symbolical of what they consider to be the truth are they worthy of consideration. They say that man has risen, and not fallen, and yet they contend that man still wants Christ.

As a mere man in the street I want to know why? If so much of the Bible is discredited, what about the remainder?

Personally, I discredit that learning and prefer to believe that God's Holy Word means what it says, and I sincerely hope that the New Year will bring forth greater influence and greater circulation to our journal, and a better understanding to the whole of the nation of the Truth for which it stands.

From ALFRED DIXON, ESQ.

I OFFER my heartiest congratulations and greetings to your staff who serve us so splendidly with THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER.

I still read it from cover to cover, and should miss it more than any other paper I get. Your articles beyond all doubt are God-inspired, and full of the light and power of the Holy Spirit. May you all be wondrously helped during the New Year.

How rapidly the time is passing, and how near we seem to be to "the times of restitution of all things" (see Acts iii, 21, and Schofield's note). God only knows. There never was a greater need for the preaching of the truth concerning God's Nation Israel, Israel's King and His Throne on this earth.

There is so much our nation could do and would be used of God in doing for nations still in darkness if only Israel would return and seek the Lord. It is hard to realize that after nearly 2,000 years preaching of the Gospel of Grace almost two-thirds of the world's population are still without a knowledge of the Kingdom of God or of His Son, their Saviour and ours. Who is to tell them if we whom God has chosen for that work fail Him?

May 1929 be remembered in history as the year of a mighty Spiritual Revival such as will cause an awakening throughout all the nations. Thus saith the Lord: "I will yet for this be enquired of by the House of Israel to do it for them." Faithful is He that promised who also will do it. May we also be faithful in doing our part.

From MRS. ZOË W. A. T. BELL.

DEAR Brethren of THE CHRIST and Citizens of GOD'S KINGDOM upon Earth.

Once more OUR GOD has conferred upon us all the great privilege of working and carrying forward HIS ETERNAL DESIGN AND PLAN, in the STRENGTH of HIS HOLY SPIRIT, during the past year, 1928, for which, as individuals, we each give HIM praise and thanks, in THE NAME OF OUR REDEEMER AND KING, THE LORD JESUS CHRIST. Now let us also do this nationally, as HIS OWN PEOPLE-NATION, and invite our brethren of THE HOUSE OF JUDAH to join with us, so that the whole House of Israel may march forward together, shoulder to shoulder, having been made righteous in our RISEN REDEEMER, THE CHRIST, obeying HIS commands (John xv, 12): "That ye love one another, as I have loved you." IN HIS HOLY SPIRIT let the whole House of Israel go forth to meet and welcome their King. Rev. xxii, 20: "HE which testifieth these things saith, Surely I come quickly. AMEN. Even so, come, LORD JESUS." Then indeed we all shall have a New Year of true righteous happiness. GOD grant that this may be some time during this coming New Year, 1929, is my prayer for us all.

From MR. BASIL STEWART ("Discipulus").

I FEEL privileged to be able thus to send greetings and good wishes to the numerous friends and fellow-believers in the Federation.

Where the spoken word reaches its thousands, the written word will reach its tens of thousands, and THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER has played a great part in bringing about the phenomenal spread of British-Israel Truth all over the English-speaking world during the last few years, and this past year in particular. Its articles explain the Bible as no other journal does, and shed light upon passing events in the political world such as the readers of other journals must perforce miss—to their disadvantage.

We have entered upon a period of final trial and testing, but readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE are all optimists, and have no fear of the final outcome. It is a Message of hope, and all who can do so should make a point of increasing its circulation by distributing extra copies to friends and acquaintances. Even a single copy will often pass through many hands, and produce results that are far-reaching in their effects, fulfilling in truth the words of Matt. xiii, 8. The Federation is doing the Empire a very great national service, and the opposition brought against it from certain ill-disposed quarters proves the strength of its Cause and the progress it is making. May the New Year bring increased activity and blessing to all working to make known the Gospel of the Kingdom.

From LADY STANLEY.

"AFTER two days He will revive us: In the third day He will raise us up, and we shall live in His sight." (Hosea vi, 2.)

We, here on earth in these latter days, have the great privilege of living in this wonderful "third day". the curse of the punishment has been removed, it has run its course, and there are signs that we are being "raised up" and are beginning to again "live in His sight."

In this "last time" God is stirring up the hearts and minds of His "chosen servants" to search the Scriptures and expound His Holy Word, and the glorious result is this wonderful, and now world-wide, Movement of the British-Israel-World Federation, the light of which is so shining before men that they are recognizing its good work and glorifying Our Father which is in Heaven.

The mists and darkness of bygone ages are being dispersed, and the life-giving light of Truth is being revealed.

We thank God for all His goodness in so raising up His power amongst us—His "servant nation." We also thank all those who are so lovingly devoting their lives and energies to God's service. As a humble member of the British-Israel Federation, may I add my greeting and good wishes to all its members and all those who are in any way connected with this great work.

From MR. L. W. NOCK.

BIBLICAL chronology, the fulfilment of prophecy as evidenced in the political movements of to-day, and, above all, the widespread and rapidly increasing apostasy, all point to the fact that we are living in the closing hour of this age. Therefore should we look up, and ought also to ponder prayerfully the parable of the talents. It is a glorious Truth we have to proclaim, Truth that is the antidote to the scepticism and lawlessness of to-day; shall we not consecrate our talents, all that we have and are, to this task? We have seen great things. Let us realize blessings far greater shall come if we but go forward in daily dependence upon His guidance and enabling. Let us thank God for our beloved leaders, and pray that His blessing rest upon them. Especially let us remember the faithful shepherds among the clergy and ministry. They have to face the enmity and opposition of the false shepherds, and especially need our prayers. May 1929 be to each of us a year of prayer definite and unceasing, and of activity to His honour and glory

From DR. T. G. WAKELING, O.B.E.

THE message for the New Year must be in two parts, separately given, to the men and women of Britain, inheritors of a great destiny which is even now but dimly perceived.

To our brethren I would say: You believe in God and in our King. Then believe in yourselves and in your country. The need for this belief is urgent. Some thirty years ago it was the custom of Arabs when dealing, over perhaps a horse, to say: "Never mind swearing by the Koran, speak English." This priceless gift, bought dearly, was given by many who died to make the word of an Englishman his bond. This great characteristic of our nation is now going, and in its place there is growing contempt and a lessening of the belief in the word of Britain, which started with the advent of certain politicians, when it became the fashion to run down Britain, to accuse her of every form of trickery and baseness. Men with British names went to India, Africa, Asia, and there to wondering dark races poured out their venom, while official Britain stood silent and let the lie pass on.

There are none so blind as those who do not wish to see. But Britain is the Covenant land, and we are citizens of a no mean Empire.

God has trusted us with the "White man's burden of Empire."

The Old Year has gone, and the future is uncertain and dim, but the New Year brings hope and a return of the Sun.

May we not then covenant together to try and restore the nobleness of the British name, and the trust among the dark races.

Do not let a lie, against the honour of Britain, pass. I could tell you a story of the foulest abuse levelled at England that collapsed immediately on being challenged, and of the whining excuse that "it was only advice from a friend to a friend."

If the word British means anything, it means Covenant Man. Then we are worthy of our trust or we are not.

Let us then make our voices heard when traducers of our country pour out their poison, whether it be in our country or out of it. And let us see to it that those who work for the ruin of our land are not left in doubt as to our feelings.

In the New Year may we all pray in the words of the Apostles: "Lord, increase our faith."

To the women of Britain I would say:

For the first time the destiny of our land will be placed in your hands to uphold or to mar.

There are many whose hearts fail them, for the issue is so great, so world-wide, and carries with it the gift of life or death for many who are now dependent upon us, but through the uncertainty there shines a ray of light. British women are no less loyal than their sisters of France. In those dark days when the religious orders were driven out of France I saw the churches crowded with women praying.

France was saved by her faithful women, who trained up their sons in such a way that when the call upon their manhood came in 1914 they were ready and willing to sacrifice their lives for their country. And France came safely through her trial. The destiny of your country and of the millions of the dark races that trust in her is now in your hands. May God guide you in your decisions.

From DR. HORACE SWORDER.

DEAN INGE quite recently wrote that our Empire grew up in a haphazard fashion, and quoted Seeley that we conquered half the world in a fit of absence of mind. Further, he says, we lost our first Empire before we had learnt our lesson. It is a most pleasing and inspiring thought that multitudes of people, thanks to B.-I. teaching, know that that Divinity which shapes our ends, and Who never slumbers nor sleeps, had a distinct hand in our loss of America and in the acquisition and shaping of our Empire. The loss of America set us colonizing at once, in both instances fulfilling prophecy, see Isaiah xlix, 20. As so many are being led away from Bible Truth by Modernism, and sad to say by many of the leaders of all denominations, it is very gratifying to know that, thanks to our B.-I. leaders, and to our incomparable journal, the knowledge of our Truth is being spread all over our Empire and America. This is the best antidote to that pernicious teaching which so largely obtains to-day, and which also, I believe, fulfils prophecy. Woe to those who have a hand in thus fulfilling it!

From MR. R. T. W. BURRELL, Vice-President on behalf of the Great Yarmouth and District B.-I. Association.

WE acknowledge our great indebtedness to the articles in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER as an indispensable aid to our studies and teaching.

The inroads of so-called "Modern Theology" into our nation's faith by means of teaching from the pulpits and rostrums of many ministers are so serious that those who are seeking a remedy for this destructive teaching simply cannot afford to neglect the power of the arguments contained in our Truth.

Our New Year Message, therefore, we venture to address to those ministers seeking such a remedy that, having satisfied themselves of the integrity of the B.-I. position, they should cease to hesitate, and with the New Year boldly proclaim this Truth, a weapon wrought out of the Living Word, with a vast literature ready to hand, and by its means, the Holy Spirit guiding them, replace on the Rock of Scriptural Faith the feet of those who have fallen into the shoals and quicksands of agnosticism and infidelity.

May this publication increase and reach a yet wider circle of readers is the sincere wish of all at Great Yarmouth and District. [Others to follow].

ADDRESS AT HEADQUARTERS.

BY THE REV. J. LUMLEY DAVIES, L.D.

"I beheld the transgressors, and was grieved; because they kept not Thy word. Thy word is true from the beginning: and every one of Thy righteous judgments endureth for ever."—PSALM CXIX, 158, 160.

THE "transgressors" who "keep not Thy word," but deny the greater part of it, are more numerous to-day than ever.

Although it is not necessary to defend the Bible, it is, however, necessary to defend the unwary and the innocent: it is necessary to defend those who are not able to defend themselves. The daily Press to-day is full of the sayings of the "transgressors who keep not Thy word": thus, the Press shows the trend of its own mind, and these Press notices find their way into every home. Here, in the home, they may do incalculable mischief, and it behoves every Bible believer to do all that is possible to counteract the mischief. These doubts cast upon the Bible to-day are all the more dangerous, because they are often presented in the name of science; and pretend to look down upon all Bible believers as old-fashioned, ignorant, and illiterate. Thus, Dean Inge (when referring to the Commentary edited by Bishop Gore) says "that these opinions have long been held by all educated men, clerical as well as lay."

Modernism, however, is not a new thing, but an old thing. The first Modernist was the Devil in Eden, where he cast doubt upon the Word of GOD. Ever since that time he has had his followers. At times his pains in casting a reflection upon GOD was amply rewarded, but during the last fifty years or so the army of doubters have increased tenfold. Formerly, the doubters were mainly outside the Church, but to-day most of them are inside the Church, while the indifferent and the careless "love to have it so": because, loosing the moorings of religious obligation and belief, they are left free to believe nothing, and they succeed!

Modern scepticism is the more dangerous and alluring because it is presented in a so-called scientific fashion. But, so unscientific is it that it is repeatedly compelled to shift its centre of gravity before the spade of the excavator and the archæologist. The daily Press is loudly proclaiming the "eminence" of Bishop Gore and his fifty contributors to the new Commentary. But the Press is conveniently silent regarding men who are equally "eminent," and who regard the present Commentary as a disservice, and even an insult to Almighty GOD. Without mentioning any names, it can be said that some of the best scholars of to-day eschew Modernism, and this proves conclusively that the argument from scholarship and modern research is not in favour of the so-called Higher Critic. Those who desire to know the weight of names on both sides may be well rewarded by reading a small pamphlet (price 3d.) by Rowland P. Hills, M.A., LL.M., B.C.L., LL.D. (Camb.), published by THE COVENANT PUBLISHING COMPANY, LTD., entitled "HIGHER CRITICISM." In this pamphlet the weight of names on both sides is given; it is also stated that "a roll signed by 617 members of the British Scientific Society, whose testimony is on record in the Bodleian Library, Oxford"—a testimony against Modernism.

Now, let us see (first) WHAT THE "TRANSGRESSORS" SAY WITH REGARD TO THE BIBLE. Have we anything of value preserved for us when the so-called "educated men, clerical as well as lay" (Dean Inge) have placed it under "modern research"?

GENESIS. The opening chapters of this (they say) are legend and myth. Local and personal names, definite figures, and other particulars are no proof that the narratives . . . are historically well grounded. Account has to be taken of the habit of a Semitic writer to throw his thoughts into the form of concrete pictorial history whether that history is real or imagined. "The bulk of the patriarchal narratives can scarcely rest upon any other basis than tradition . . . the product of an imaginative treatment of traditional materials." So, therefore, ABRAHAM, ISAAC and JACOB are mythical characters. MOSES, too, is a mythical character. How then could he have written the Pentateuch? The histories these Books relate are woven from the raw material of myth and legend. It follows, therefore, that the miracles recorded in the five Books of MOSES never happened, because contrary to the common order of things (says the Modernist), and are to be discredited.

JOSHUA, JUDGES, RUTH, SAMUEL, KINGS, CHRONICLES, EZRA, NEHEMIAH and ESTHER.—The same remarks apply to these as to the Pentateuch. The Modernist tells us that the OLD TESTAMENT narratives are not historically well grounded, and that the thoughts are "thrown into the form of concrete pictorial history, whether the history be real or imagined." So then, we brush aside the first seventeen Books of the Bible, because the history they contain cannot be relied upon.

JOB.—Here again we have a mythical character, and the Book called by his name is only a "philosophical drama." It contains "no precise allusions that help us to determine its date."

THE PSALMS have been a comfort to many religious folk in all ages, but a great portion of them is far removed from actual experience, and many of the thoughts found in the PSALMS are not fit for use to-day. The PSALMS are "Jewish poetic utterances or songs," the morality of certain portions is not of a high order.

SONG OF SOLOMON.—This is a love poem, a collection of lyrics sung at bridal festivals.

PROVERBS and ECCLESIASTES.—These are ascribed to SOLOMON, but it is not likely that they are really his: it is more likely that they were written after the Exile—long after SOLOMON'S death.

THE PROPHETS—from ISAIAH to MALACHI. The Books contain some very "glorious imagery" our informant tells us. But term "prophet" was used in early times to describe men possessed with religious frenzy, which was augmented by music, and found expression in wild and fervid utterance, probably delivered in rhythmical cadence, to which the term prophesying was applied. The prophets were frequently assailed with the charge of being madmen."

Now, let me turn aside to remark that I have just been quoting from the Professor who partly trained me at my College. Having been trained as a Modernist, I am able to speak of that movement from the inside, and I remained inside until I saw the husks which it offered as its Gospel, and the utter hollowness of its pretensions. At the time, I thought that it was a mark of high scholarship to be able to endorse its conclusions, but I discovered later that much of it was based on hypotheses.

Coming now to the New Testament, we find that our Modernist friend leads us again into doubts and uncertainties. The authorship of St. JOHN'S Gospel, as well as that of certain of the Epistles, cannot be accepted. The Place of Origin, Date, and Occasion of the Gospels, the Pauline and the Petrine Epistles are questioned, and in some cases stoutly refuted. The CHRIST presented to us by the Modernist is shorn of HIS Divinity. The natural consequence of this is that HIS miracles are discredited, and even HIS words are not trustworthy. Professor G. B. Smith says that "belief in the Godhead of Christ is a myth." All the miracles are denied and pronounced "impossible and unbelievable." Bishop Gore, however, and his fellow-"transgressors" believe the miracles which are recorded in the Creed of the Church. This means that they are willing to disbelieve the Bible, but unwilling to disbelieve the Creed of the Church which they strive to bring into closer union with the Church of Rome. It is strange, too, that this Commentary should have been published now under the pretence that such a work was needed. The writers say in the Preface that "such a Commentary has for many years been both wanted and lacking." And yet Professor Peake and his staff of contributors published a Commentary on the same lines only about eight years ago! What need was there, therefore, for this Commentary?

2. CAN THE MODERNIST BE DISLODGED? Our erudite friend tells us with "scientific" precision that the first Books of the Bible consist of various layers of documents (may be fabricated ones?) written by various writers called "scientifically" E. J., E. 2, J. and D. respectively. We are also impressed upon regarding the lowly origin of man—not made "in the image of GOD," but he is a glorified ape. In order to maintain this theory, it is necessary to place man's origin in an (at least) uncivilized and illiterate condition. The Israelites when coming out of Egypt are called an "undisciplined horde." We are also informed that "there did not exist in ancient times anything equivalent to the encyclopædias and other books of reference . . . a great drawback was the absence of maps . . . and the lack of a recognized chronological era."

But the spade of the excavator and the strides made by archæology have something different to tell us. There is ample evidence to prove that there existed a high civilization in the Ur of the Chaldees where ABRAHAM came from. We read of cities, arts, letters, books, libraries. We read that there existed then books on astronomy, medicine, drawing, arithmetic, grammar, &c. There was also a postal service in those days. Letters can now be read written in those far-off ages. In 1893-95 the remains of a great library was found, which had existed 700 years before ABRAHAM'S time, and which contained 30,000 tablets. Schools abounded; in short, there are traces of a high civilization 2,500 years before ABRAHAM.

In those days a code of laws was issued by a king called Hammurabi. This code consisted of 248 independent items, and these met every emergency in life—even to the fixing of doctors' fees. The fee for an ordinary case was 5 shekels, and 10 shekels for an operation. Half fees were asked of the poor. Wages relating to the various avenues of life were also fixed, such as those for brick-makers, linen-weavers, stone-workers, milkmen, carpenters, and builders. A veterinary surgeon's fee was one-sixth of a shekel for treating an ox or an ass. So then MOSES, "learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians," and who lived in the bloom-tide of civilization, could write (and I believe DID write) the Books ascribed to him.

The 14th chapter of GENESIS has been questioned as being "historically impossible." But the very names of the kings mentioned in that chapter have been identified.

In 2 KINGS IX we read of the king of Assyria attacking the capital of Israel—Samaria. The Modernist asked for proof. The proof came some years ago when the Black Obelisk was found. Inscribed on this was the fact that Shalmaneser fought and vanquished Jehu, the king of ISRAEL. Even the number of chariots and horses captured is recorded.

In 2 CHRONICLES XXXII, 30, we read of HEZEKIAH stopping the upper water-courses of Gihon. "Where is the proof" we are asked. The proof came when the Siloam Inscription was discovered in 1880. The discovery was made in a strange manner. A boy wading in the Pool slipped accidentally into deeper water, and, seeing some strange writing on the rocky side, reported it to his teacher. On examination it was found that the Inscription described the making of the tunnel, 1,700 feet long. It describes the workmen working from different directions, each side hearing the sound of the picks of the other before they met in the centre. Thus this passage of Scripture is now verified, and it indicates how HEZEKIAH made the conduit in order to prevent the water supply from falling into the enemy's hand. "GOD moves in a mysterious way, HIS wonders to perform." A large number of discoveries might be mentioned—all proving and verifying the WORD OF GOD.

3. WHAT WAS OUR LORD'S ATTITUDE TOWARDS THE BIBLE? Were the narratives "historically impossible" in HIS opinion? Did HE deny the miracles? NO. According to our esteemed veteran, Dr. Mountain, Our LORD either quoted or referred to the Old Testament no fewer than 400 times, and HE set HIS seal upon it as a whole, when, after HIS Resurrection, HE said to HIS disciples:

"These are the words which I spake unto you while I was yet with you, that all things must be fulfilled which were written in the Law of MOSES, and in the Prophets, and in the Psalms, concerning Me."—ST. LUKE XXIV, 44.

Our LORD had no doubt with regard to the Old Testament miracles. HE used them as actual historical facts. Why should HIS professed followers deny what HE believed then? HE believed in the miracle of JONAH in the bowels of the fish! The Modernist calls it "a whale" (with no Scripture authority), and he says: "Impossible, the mouth or neck of a whale is not large enough to swallow a man." But what is the truth? Sir Robert Anderson gives the view of a whale-fisher. The whale-fisher states that this monster's mouth is large, and that a shark 15 feet long was found in its stomach. The whale-fisher also affirms that he helped to kill a whale, the monster ejected the food which he had eaten, and some of those ejected pieces measured 8 feet by 6 feet by 6 feet. (Since delivering this address, a member of my congregation has kindly given me a cutting from the Daily Mail for December 14th, which gives even a more striking proof re the question at issue.) But Our LORD'S vindication ought surely to be sufficient to convince every professed follower of HIS! A Welsh woman, when asked whether she believed in "JONAH and the whale," replied: "Of course I believe that the whale swallowed JONAH, and IF THE BIBLE SAID SO, I would believe that JONAH swallowed the whale." Our LORD vindicated the miracles. In Schools and Colleges, however, we find teachers (whose desire to belittle the BIBLE is greater than their knowledge of its contents) teaching young people that the miracles are not true. In denying the miracles we also doubt the veracity and knowledge of CHRIST! What right have Christian people to besmirch the character of their LORD? What right have Christian Ministers and Professors in Universities and Colleges to use their high position as a kind of vantage-ground wherefrom they cast reflection upon GOD and HIS WORD?

Dr. Emil Reich, in his book, "The Failure of the Higher Criticism of the Bible," says: "The Higher Criticism is a perversion of History, and a desecration of Religion: it is bankrupt as a method of research, and pernicious as a teaching of Religious Truth."

HE Who "spake as never man spake" said: "By their fruits ye shall know them." Frequently I stand at the death-bed of parishioners who are soon to pass over to the realm beyond. What have I to offer them? The tenets of Modernism! No: but the words of the good old BIBLE. "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for Thou art with me, Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort me." "The blood of JESUS CHRIST His Son cleanseth us from all sin." The blood of CHRIST to the Modernist is what he terms "the gospel of the shambles."

Let us wash our hands of Modernism, and cling to Our SAVIOUR.

DIVINE AND HUMAN CO-OPERATION. Part I.

AN ADDRESS AT HEADQUARTERS.

BY MR. B. H. NORTON (Editor of The Covenant Race.)

To "Occupy till I come" means here the vesting of Christ's property and authority in others. Let us seek to find to whom, how much of, and for how long a time.

It was for the personal benefit of the recipient Our Lord handed over His peace—"My peace I leave with you"—and His joy—"That My joy may remain in you."

It was, however, for safe-keeping, growth, manifestation and His own ultimate utilization that Our Lord handed over a Kingdom—"the Kingdom of God"—which had been entrusted to the Abrahamic race irrevocably. Although a section have forfeited their privilege to "Occupy" it has not passed, it can never pass, from the Abrahamic custodians.

This arrangement was for defence necessitating "battle-axe and weapons of war" to safeguard and to maintain the dissemination of the property entrusted.

The condition of things which Our Lord's coming had made more acute would necessitate in His absence the maintenance of His authority in the most unequivocal and demonstrative form. This crisis had been prepared for, and the call of Abraham looms large in the great scheme of property and authority protection.

God's work upon earth was not to contract with the withdrawal of His Son, but to advance. Greater things were to be done.

Christ, however, left when the world was as a whirlpool and the real Divine hold upon everything seemed very feeble.

A few years before Christ's birth the Baal system, from which all false religions draw their power, had got a forward move by the promotion of Julius Cæsar in the dual capacity of priest and potentate. Rome military had long been angrily hammering at the gate of Britain, The Scribes and Pharisees sects had just succeeded in occupying a powerful and authoritative position in deteriorated Jewish belief. Egypt had been reduced to a Roman province. Palestine had been swept disastrously by famine and earthquake. Herod, 19 years before Christ came, had rebuilt the Jerusalem temple. Rome had reached its meridian pomp with a population of over four millions. Augustus Cæsar had later been acknowledged pontifex maximus. As Christ entered the temple to debate with the doctors, the Romans and Germans (of that day) were contesting for the mastery of the world.

Christ ascended when on earth confusion reigned. Will He come back when things are similar?

Into this disorder as harbingers of better things came Peter charged with Pentecostal equipment and then Paul. Others nobly rallied. The revival fire had become ignited and was gloriously spreading. Joseph of Arimathea and his colleagues crossed over to Glastonbury, hoisting there the banner of the ascended Christ.

In that sea-submerged soil, perhaps, providentially unnavigable to Roman ships, was laid the Kingdom foundations of that mighty religion safely transferred from Palestine, and a light was kindled which it has been found since impossible to quench.

Here was to mature the victory for "the smoking flax and the bruised reed." Here it was that Jesus Christ depended for victory during His absence upon two great establishments, which have remained operative ever since and which British-Israel to-day is held responsible to maintain.

I.—The Pentecostal enduement for a continuing spiritual mission.

II.—The handing over of Kingdom authority to ten-tribed Israel. The Divine union of Church and State.

He invested His servants (not "the citizens who hated Him") with this dual authority and said "Occupy" (pragmakuomai—do business) "till I come." Now, who can doubt that to-day the British "occupy" beyond any or all other people in things both religious and military?

There had been far back in the distant past preliminary arrangements—three are marvellously important:

I.—The Call of Abraham.

II.—The Choice of Jerusalem.

III.—The Conducting to "the appointed place."

The call of Abraham and his response standardized all later successful service. The choice of Jerusalem picks her out prominently as a geographical gem—"the City of the Great King." The "appointed place" approximates to the British Isles in every way.

The first choice for the manifestations of Divine love in humanity by the Great Creator was the Garden of Eden. The second choice was Jerusalem, the place of the Divine Son's sufferings and His later triumph. The third place was the British Isles. The Jacob-Esau difficulty would cut off Jerusalem for a time, and God knew that London would suit the Divine purpose better than Jerusalem meanwhile, hence Britain became the place of "appointment" for meeting between the absent Lord and the Kingdom "Occupiers," in the spirit of true evangelism and Kingdom extension.

Great Britain is the connecting link between the Eden of the Fall (yet to be repatriated by Israel) and the Eden of the Fulness. London to-day hums while Jerusalem slumbers.

British-Israel bows reverently before the Word of God, admires it in its perfectional beauty, obeys its declarations of obligations, feasts from its garner of satisfying provisions, rejoices in the privileges and accepts the responsibilities it imposes and endeavours to distribute its temporal and eternal blessings. This is the proof of the Divine entrustment to us of the responsibility of occupation, and we seek to show our acceptance thereof by a legitimate study and declaration of the law of the "Appointment" by explicating without Disarrangement, Extraction or Addition the Holy Scriptures committed to our custody as Israel.

There are some portions of Scripture which only the "Israel mind" can interpret, portions which like some cheques need endorsement before payment. Who but the British can endorse these cheques? The Scriptures lend themselves consistently to the payment of cheque promises to Israel when presented for payment by the British. Who can deny this?

To us and to others there remain many things of an extraneous character for ultimate clearing, but do not even our enemies, rather our friends who differ from us, admit our national pre-eminence in the world? Do not they admit it was the British who delivered Jerusalem and who keep it in place to-day? Is it not manifest that the forces of evil are marshalling against us as was prophesied of their doing against Israel in the last days?

We British-Israelites are agreed that what is really required to satisfy us, and to falsify the statements of our opponents, is what both parties are longing for—the return of Our Lord.

THE BRITISH-ISRAEL-WORLD FEDERATION CONGRESS.

AN APPRECIATION BY DANIEL FARMER.

THE Ninth Congress has passed into history, a prolonged series of well-attended gatherings supported by people of the

(1) BEST INTENTIONS, AND WONDERFULLY FRIENDLY.

Men and women of varying ranks in life, belonging to all the Evangelical sections of the Christian Church, having one supreme desire, namely, that of the greatest good for the largest number; first of all for those in the homeland, next in the whole Empire, and lastly of the whole wide world. A wonderfully friendly body of people, for a combined desire to do others good always promotes that spirit. Here is a wide and happy platform on which the union, and re-union, of all souls loyal to God, to the Bible, and to the King and Empire may join hands in a high and hopeful campaign. We had the privilege of listening to some of the of Holy Scripture. How refreshing, after reading in the sacred and secular Press of the mediæval credulities put forth as the meaning of God's Word by one Congress, and from another, on the other side of the hedge, the modernistic-paganism expressed in the language used concerning Holy Scripture; how refreshing to listen to a number of capable, level-headed, clear-thinking men, lay and clerical, handling the Bible in the manner the late Bishop Ryle said it ought to be, namely—simply, naturally, and literally. Listening to such, we felt ourselves delivered from middle-age superstition, the gross ignorance of Modernism, and an obscurantist so-called orthodoxy.

(2) BEST INTERPRETERS, WHEREVER FOUND,

(3) BIBLICAL INSTRUCTION WITHOUT FEAR.

Lord Bacon said: "Of all pleasures that of standing on the vantage ground of truth was the greatest." British-Israelites believe and teach that to behold the promises made to Israel—and never made good to Judah—the Jews, finding their fulfilment in the history of the Anglo-Saxon people, is one of the greatest of all proofs that the Word of God is true, and sounds the death-knell not only of a secular infidelity, but also of a sinister clericalism secretly opposed to the right interpretation of Holy Scripture. The need in our day of pulpit, platform and Press is for men well taught in the doctrinal and historical parts of Holy Writ, and with a clear vision of their past and present application. This enables them to

(4) BUILD INTELLIGENTLY ON A WIDE FOUNDATION.

A great part of the opposition to this line of teaching comes from the type of mind which stands its pyramid on its apex instead of its base. Failing to see the God-made, and God-continued, division between Israel and Judah (1 Kings xii and 2 Kings xvii), they reverse the laws of Euclid, and tell us that the greater—Israel—is included in the lesser, Judah. Our orthodox brethren in the ministry, failing to see the falsity of this reasoning, play into the hands of a formidable conspiracy against Christianity, and the British Empire, by telling their flocks that the Jews are to be the supreme people of the future, whereas Scripture distinctly informs us that they will not even return to Palestine except under the protection of Israel [Britain] (Jer. iii, 18), and never again to be a nation with a king and country except as one-twelfth of "All Israel" (Ezek. xxxvii, 16). A very different order of events.

Further, as we noted the distinction between Israel and Judah, and the great work that during this separated condition Israel is called upon to do, we realized that along the line indicated in Holy Scripture, viz., that of lay the right course of action. The name "British" coming from the Hebrew—"Brit" or "Brith" meaning covenant, and "ish" meaning man, and Abraham being the man with whom God made the Covenant (Gen. xii) telling him that He meant to bless the whole world in and by his posterity. Here lies our power and influence for good amongst the nations and peoples of the world, being during this age the custodians of the Holy Oracles, a guardianship transferred to us when Judah rejected our Lord's Person and claims (Matt. xxi, 43). Nationally established, as promised (2 Sam. vii, 10) in a safe and advantageous geographical position; possessing the material power and wealth which enabled us to carry out Israel's commission to maintain the cause of freedom and right (Isa. lviii); in a word, to use all that we are and possess as a people and world-wide Empire to promote all that is highest and best amongst others less favourably situated. What a call to the Anglo-Saxons! What a stream of "living water" (Ezek. xlvii) to purify our national life, and revivify much in the Christian ministry that has been allowed to become stale, almost stagnant, and sometimes even worse. Thus, in a spirit of peace and goodwill to all—not in entangling alliances—lies our fullest opportunity to carry out the Royal Commission entrusted to us (Isa. xliii). For the furtherance of this the B.-I.-W.F. has become a powerful Movement for making a

(5) BRITISH INTEREST IN WORLD-WIDE FRIENDLINESS,

Digitized by Google

(6) BIG INQUIRY INTO WORLD FACTS.

This should make a strong appeal to all of the Anglo-Saxon race. To the preacher, for its teaching is based on Scripture; to the politician, for it touches upon every phase of National and Imperial experience; to the man of literature, for it presents the most fascinating "cross-world" puzzle and problem that can engage the ablest minds among men; to the "man in the street," for his interests are bound up in its rightful solution, as well as the interests of the King. Do the young men and women of Great (and Greater) Britain love romance? Here is the "Romance of History"—of fact—beside which the romance of fiction is but poor reading. In this interpretation of Scripture—that Britain is literally ancient Israel in present-day history, and God's chief agent for carrying out His beneficent purposes towards all mankind—lies an explosive power that will blow up any sinister clerical and infidel conspiracy against our land and Empire. Here is a strong wind that will blow off the hats of the Popes and Cardinals, who tell us that the Church of Rome has taken Israel's position during this age, and also the un-English birettas of the men in our own Church who see in this line of interpretation a menace to their own secret longings. Many a university and college desk will be blown down by this gale of truth, and many a learned professor who, like Jannes and Jambres, "withstands Moses," will have all he can do to hold on to his cap and gown. North and South, East and West, men are asking for further light on this latter-day question.

Now, gentle reader, whoever you are and however good you may be, let us assure you in the name of the President of the B.-I.-W.F., of the worthy Secretary-General, and of all the members of the British-Israel-World Federation, that if not already a member, you will be

(7) BETTER INSIDE THIS WORTHY FELLOWSHIP.

Your hold on all the great fundamentals of Holy Scripture will be increased. Your knowledge of its historic teaching will be vastly extended. The doctrines of predestination and election—so puzzling to the Bible reader—will be seen in their true relationship, whilst large and important portions of God's Word which, apart from this interpretation, our religious leaders can only "spiritualize," will become clear and understandable. "Come thou with us, and we will do thee good."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

BY THE REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A.

QUESTION.—Can you tell me the meaning of the following words: "And the evil spirit from God came upon Saul" (1 Sam. xviii, 10), and also the meaning of Rev. xviii, 11, 12 and 17?—N. G. F.

ANSWER.—(1) This verse must be compared with a similar expression in 1 Sam. xvi, 14: "But the Spirit of the Lord departed from Saul, and an evil spirit from the Lord troubled him. And Saul's servants said unto him, Behold now, an evil spirit from God troubleth thee," also with that passage about Micaiah (1 Kings xxii, 19-23): "Now therefore, behold, the Lord hath put a lying spirit in the mouth of all these thy prophets, and the Lord hath spoken evil concerning thee."

In these verses there are profound difficulties; but much depends upon the general interpretation of the meaning of "the evil spirit of God" (where the Greek Septuagint, LXX, has "of Jehovah"). It is clear that the "spirit of Jehovah" which came upon David after his anointing was different from that "spirit of God" which came upon Saul at this moment. In fact the latter is also different from that spirit which came upon him earlier (1 Sam. x, 6, 7; cf. Num. xi, 25, 26, 29). The exact phrase, "The spirit of the Lord," occurs first in Jud. iii, 10, and then in Jud. vi, 34; xi, 29; xiv, 19; xv, 14.

This spirit of the Lord which came upon Saul was an evil or melancholy spirit, which was sent as God's messenger and minister to execute his righteous purpose upon Saul (cf. once more, 1 Kings xxii). In utmost probably a diagnosis of Saul's mental condition would show that he suffered from temporary outbursts of insanity, when his stewards and servants knew that the only way in which they could soothe, quieten and appease him was to provide him with suitable and appropriate music. It is thus of greatest interest to have the youthful David introduced to us as employing music for the highest purpose, i.e., that of turning the soul to the harmony of peace and love. Hence, whenever Saul had an "attack," "David took an harp, and played with his hand: so Saul was refreshed, and was well, and the evil spirit departed from him." (1 Sam. xvi, 23.) One peculiar feature about Saul's evil spirit was that when he was thus under its influence he "prophesied in the midst of the house." (1 Sam. xviii, 10.) He was probably in a frenzy, though not raving, this frenzy being the actual result of the evil spirit, just as it was previously when he prophesied (1 Sam. x, 10). On the other hand madness and prophesyings were considered as being closely akin and connected with each other (see Jer. xxix, 26; 2 Kings ix, 11).

(2) "The kings of the earth" may be the allies of the Antichrist, and thus represent the world's secular and political power, opposed to the lawful and established reign of Zion's King over redeemed Israel. "The merchants of the earth" represent all who engage in the world's material struggle for mammon (cf. Ezek. xxvii, 3, 12-25). Some have seen a connection here with St. James iv, 13—v. 6. But there is undoubtedly a close connection between the Babylon of this chapter and the Tyre of Ezek. xxvii. Earthly civilization without Christ is of no avail, hence the real civilization is that of the New Jerusalem, "that great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God." (Rev. xxi, 10-27.)

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

THE speakers at Headquarters for next week will be the Rev. Dr. Mountain on Wednesday afternoon, at 2.45; and Miss Hamilton Hunter on Thursday evening, at 7.30. Dr. Mountain's subject will be: "The Old Lamp and its Lustre," a theme which in his hands we may be sure will be specially valuable in these times.

We wish to call particular attention to a series of ten special meetings to be held (D.V.) in the Central Hall, Westminster, from Monday, February 18th, to Friday, February 22nd, inclusive, at 2.45 and 7.30. It is hoped that all will attend who can possibly do so, and bring their friends.

The youngest and one of the smaller wards of the British Empire, the Holy Land, is second to none in the affection shown for King George during his grave illness, says the Daily Express. Services have been held at the Wailing Wall, presided over by the Chief Rabbi, who also ordered special prayers in the synagogues, as did the Greek Patriarch, who conducted a service at the Holy Sepulchre.

Old Jewish residents of Jerusalem recall with pride and gratitude that forty-seven years ago King George, then Duke of York, on a visit to the Holy City with Prince Albert, was the guest of the Chief Rabbi, in those days having the Turkish title of "Haham Bashi." The Royal Princes took part in the solemn evening feast ushering in the Passover. Their Royal Highnesses had come to Jerusalem unofficially, and the Turkish authorities were uninformed of the visit. The Princes, who were met only by the British Consul, conveyed to the small Jewish community a gracious message from Queen Victoria, and carried back to the Queen the benedictions of the leading Rabbis.

A certain clergyman was requested by his bishop to study British-Israel teaching in order to write and lecture against it. The clergyman started his studies, became interested and then fascinated, and ended by seeing the light, accepting the Truth, and proclaiming it on the platform, in the pulpit, and in the Press. We wish the bishop would follow the example of his honest and courageous clergyman. Perhaps he will some day. At all events all bishops and all clergymen must recognize the Truth of British-Israel sooner or later. If only they could overcome prejudice and make up their minds to give the subject careful examination by reading our best literature, and by attending our meetings and coming into personal contact with our leading exponents, they could hardly fail to understand our position, and then surely they would acknowledge its soundness, and in due course do the obvious thing, namely, bravely proclaim the Truth. One thing is certain; if the clergy won't lead the laity in the right direction, the laity will go off on their own, and the clergy will be left behind. This is to some extent already taking place.

The Toronto East Branch had the pleasure of hearing Mr. David Duncan, President of the Central Branch, at their regular meeting on December 19th. Mr. Duncan gave a well-thought-out address on "The Coming Transition."

On December 20th, at the Central Branch, Toronto, welcomed back from England Mr. W. H. Blackaller, President of the British-Israel Federation of Canada. Mr. Blackaller comes back from the London Congress strengthened in his belief that British-Israel teaching is the hope of the world.

W. E. B. writes from Ramapatnam, India:—

"I have just finished reading THE NATIONAL MESSAGE of November 17th, and your courageous words in assuming the burden of raising the required £10,000. I want to stand behind you a little bit, and I am sending you a donation. I am keenly interested in B.-I. teaching, and wish you all success in your efforts to make this great Truth widely known. I have been a regular subscriber to your journal from its inception and have read many B.-I. books."

Major Witten writes to The Times: "In a letter received from an American friend residing in San Francisco, under date December 5th, he says: 'Since your last letter, November 12th, our chief subject of interest is the King's illness. At the present writing the King has countless well-wishers in this country, who earnestly hope that his life may be spared for many years to come. We, on this side, regard George V as a fine gentleman, a man worthy of the love and fealty of his excellent people. I have not heard a single comment which does not indicate profound sympathy. May he pull through and flourish!'

"This further tribute from America may be of interest to your readers for all that it indicates and suggests."

The Annual New Year Gathering of the Headquarters' Staff took place on January 9th, when between 60 and 70 sat down to high tea, provided as usual by the Secretary-General and Mrs. Garrison, and the Rev. Pascoe Goard. It was a very bright and happy company. A few were missing owing to illness. Mr. J. J. Morey had a lecture engagement, and in his absence the Rev. Joseph Gay acted as M.C. The first toast was, of course, H.M. the King, and to this a very appropriate speech was made by the Rev. Pascoe Goard, who dwelt upon the unique character of our Royal House and upon the remarkable demonstrations of loyalty and affection and of grave concern for His Majesty in his long and trying illness. The toast of the Hosts and Hostess was proposed by Colonel Vincent R. Wright, D.S.O., the Financial Secretary, and responded to by Mr. Herbert Garrison, Secretary-General, who emphasized the great importance of the work in which the whole staff was privileged to take part. The toast of the Staff was proposed by the Rev. Pascoe Goard, who spoke wise words of encouragement and stimulus; Captain H. F. Young, R.N.R., Mr. A. J. Wakeford and Mr. Wm. Sleeman responded. Dr. Horace Sworder proposed the Commissioners, to which Mr. John Leech, M.A., K.C., Commissioner-General, responded. All toasts were drunk in tea.

The social three hours thereafter proved a joyous time. The Rev. Joseph Gay gave some of his inimitable Dickens' impersonations. The Rev. T. Sparshott Johnson, M.A., contributed some telling sketches. The Rev. J. Lumley Davies gave a happy address. Messrs. Harrison Hill, Lynam Knight and Percy W. Barnes rendered pleasing musical items. Mr. Garrison presented stories and imitations of Australian birds and animals. Mr. Chas. A. Edmonds gave a travel sketch. Members of the Covenant Publishing Company Staff gave a number of sketches and improvisations. After coffee, cake and fruit, and social converse, the National Anthem brought the proceedings to a close, all having thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

The lectures recently given for the Dover Branch by Mr. G. R. Gair have been greatly appreciated and enjoyed. Mr. Gair spoke on "The History of the Gaels," "The Phœnician Golden Age," and "Heraldry and Genealogy." Commencing on February 7th, at 3 o'clock, this Branch is having a British-Israel Prayer Meeting before each lecture.

At the special request of a number of friends who attend our Wednesday afternoon meetings at Headquarters, Mr. John Leech, M.A., K.C., has consented to give a series of Prophetic Lectures, the first of which (D.V.) will be on Wednesday, February 27th, at 3 o'clock. These lectures will, we believe, be of great interest and of considerable importance in opening up the Prophetic Scriptures, and especially the Book of Revelation, showing their close connection with Israel-Britain. All who are able should avail themselves of this opportunity to study Prophecy from the historical standpoint, which we are convinced is the only one from which these Scriptures can be intelligently approached. It is particularly important that those who wish to attend should, if at all possible, be present at all the lectures of the series.

The Rev. T. H. Whitehouse has devoted a week's work to five large towns in the North of England. His addresses on "Imperishable Britain," "Moscow v. Britain," and "The Power behind the Red Menace," were given to attentive and appreciative audiences, and were all Scriptural, enlightening and logical. Thornaby-on-Tees was visited for the first time. All lecturers must follow their Lord's example, Who said, "I must preach the Kingdom of God to other cities also, for therefore am I sent." Note also His counsel to the twelve Apostles, "Ye shall not have gone over the cities of Israel till the Son of man be come."

The new Special Number of this journal referred to in our issue of December 29th is now ready, and we urge our readers to send for copies and use them as propaganda, for which purpose they will be found excellent. We wish that a copy could be placed in the hands of every preacher and teacher in the land. In fact, it should be in every home.

The Rev. Pascoe Goard has preached from time to time during many years in a great number of Churches, both Established and Nonconformist. Being in Lynton on the first Sunday of the New Year, the minister of the Wesleyan Church, hearing of his presence in the town, invited him to occupy his pulpit, and the congregation listened with intense interest to the B.-I. presentation of the Gospel of the Kingdom of God.

THE ORIGIN OF THE ENGLISH

By MAJOR B. de W. WELDON

SECOND EDITION (REVISED)

Here is a book which once read will be read again and again.

Our history traced for three thousand years. Of necessity, many details must be left out, for the whole of our history could not be compressed into the two hundred and eighty pages this book contains. The fact that a second edition has been called for is evidence of the value of this work for students of the history of the English People.

" The present writer does not claim that the story to be told in the following pages is anything of a new discovery. All the essential facts were in the possession of a man who lived many centuries ago, in the reign of the Emperor Justinian. And one German at least, the philologist Grimm, early in the last century knew a good deal more about the identity of Israel than he cared to disclose in books which were intended to glorify the great German race.

The chapters that will now be written have to contain many Biblical quotations. But they are no more designed as a theological disquisition than a Government blue book or a standard history would be.

They are merely the missing pages of the history of Israel, the pages that centuries ago were blotted out until the time came when they might safely be restored to their proper place in the world's historical libraries. All histories are dull reading; and condensed history is perhaps the worst of all, where no time can be given up to the ' drum and trumpet ' details, interesting though these might be made.

This book is no exception; having to be condensed, many interesting points must be omitted. Before our case can be established, many witnesses will have to be called; men who lived in different ages and in countries far apart—prophets and saints, as well as dignitaries of the Church; Greeks and Romans and Jews; pagans from the North; modern scholars of the most profound learning; and writers of gossip who would be exceedingly astonished to find fragments of their work still in existence after so many centuries have elapsed. All these diverse sources of information will be placed on a friendly footing of equal credibility before the reader."

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

THE DOCUMENTS OF DANIEL.—II.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD, F.R.G.S.

LET us briefly review the chain of Bible literature into which the Book of Daniel is forged as a link, depending on what has gone before, supporting that which follows after. The prophetic Books of the Bible are many. The prophetic story of the Bible is one. The theme of the story is the Household and Kingdom of God on earth. The basis of the Household and Kingdom is Israel. The basis of the story of the Bible is the history of Israel.

Moses, the man of God, was the first contributor to the prophetic story. His prophecies fall into four heads.

In the first stage Moses deals with universal antecedents, and prepares the ground for relating the great story which is to follow by a synopsis of universal fact and truth. In this synopsis is presented all such preceding knowledge as is necessary to an understanding of the Bible literature which follows. This stage is covered in the first eleven chapters of Genesis. The perfection of this synopsis, which is an inspired foreword to all prophecy, to all history, and to all science, is miraculous; being in all ways and things beyond the scope of the mind of man to produce.

The second stage sets forth the election of a race in Abraham; its birth in Isaac; its dedication as to all its generations, on Mount Moriah, in Isaac, the father of the Saxon race; the regeneration of the race in Jacob-Israel; its development into a twelve patriarched family in the sons of Jacob; its development into tribes as the twelve families increased; and its descent into Egypt. Thus is shown the establishment of "the Household of God" in the earth, the progenitors of which are El Shaddai (God Almighty), Abraham and Sarah.

The third stage contains a record of events in which Moses was an actor and an eyewitness. This includes the Exodus; the organization of the people into the Kingdom of Priests to God; the establishment of the worship of the nation as set forth in Leviticus; the organization of the nation as set forth in Numbers; and the digest of the Law in Deuteronomy.

The fourth stage is made up of that body of prophetic literature spoken or written by Moses, which sweeps forward in prevision to the end of time.

The MICROSCOPE of the Modern Critic can never compass the sweep of the literature of Moses. The most modern instruments of precision the scientific world uses in astronomy, spectroscopy, and so forth, are but now beginning haltingly to penetrate the widest of fields of modern astronomy. Yet these fields are laid bare to the eyes of the instructed reader of "Moses." The equivalent of the telescope, and of the telephotographic camera, are necessary items of equipment with which to enter upon this great field of vision which covers the universe in both the past and the future. The Modernist is most certainly not using such long-visioned methods, and must fail until he does so.

Daniel in his prayer directly relates the calamities of his people and his ministry to this Mosaic literature.

We pass the intervening Books, each of which makes its contribution, and come to Isaiah, the first of the Major Prophets.

Digitized by Google

For our purpose of illustrating the relationship of Daniel to the great body of prophetic literature of his period we use the following diagram :—

Isaiah in Jerusalem
Covers the world with his prophecies—nation by nation.

A century or more later

Jeremiah in Jerusalem.	Ezekiel with the Israel Captivity on the Chebar.	Daniel in Babylon.

Jeremiah from the standpoint of the last days of the Kingdom of Judah prophesies regarding :—

The New Covenant with the House of Israel.—Jer. xxxi.

The renewal of the Covenant with the House of David. —Jer. xxxiii.

The " seven times " contest between Israel and Babylon. See Jeremiah Chs. 50 and 51. This is a complete Book concerning Israel versus Babylon embedded in the Book of Jeremiah.

Ezekiel deals with :—

The elders of Judah concerning impure Temple worship and the departure of " the Glory of God," etc.

The elders of Israel, concerning the transplanting of the House of David, and the future of Israel to the end of time.

Daniel deals with :—

The Babylonian succession of Empires.

The Stone Kingdom.

The " seventy weeks " nation of the Jews.

Thus we see that Daniel must be taken as a contribution enriching and depending on the whole prophetic body of literature.

Isaiah writes as from seven hundred and fifty B.C. He wrote according to the geography and the ethnology of that century. That geography passed away immediately thereafter, and a later date set for the Isaiah literature would throw it out of gear with the geography and the ethnology of the later centuries.

Isaiah wrote from the geographical position of Jerusalem, which it is important to note ; otherwise his orientation and geographical references would be thrown out of joint.

Isaiah's contribution to the prophetic story we have dealt with in former issues. See " Hours with the Prophets : Isaiah."

Jeremiah followed, something over a hundred years later. The intervening century had been pregnant with life and movement in the theatre of Eastern civilization, in the midst of which Jeremiah wrote. The geography of Isaiah had given place to the geography of Jeremiah, Ezekiel and Daniel ; and this indicates with certainty the period of the production of the literature. To have seen this fact would have saved much wild guessing on the ground of etymology and philology alone as to the period of the production of the literature.

Jeremiah also wrote from the geographical position of Jerusalem, and from the chronological position of the sixth century (circa) before Christ. History, geography, ethnology, etc., absolutely forbid the assignment of any other time to any of the three prophets, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Daniel.

Jeremiah contributed to the great scheme of prophecy the New Covenant made with the House of Israel, Israel being then for over a century away in captivity and dispersion. He also contributed the ratification of the Covenant granted to the House of David, which was then in process of being uprooted from Jerusalem.

Ezekiel made his contribution to the great story contemporaneously with Jeremiah, showing the same geographical setting and the same ethnological distribution. Let it be particularly noted that this historical, ethnological and geographical position would not fit any other period of history, either before or after this period of time. Ezekiel's contribution was chiefly concerning the House of Israel, and swept forward to the end of time.

Daniel prophesied at the same period as Ezekiel and Jeremiah. He prophesied at the Capitals of Babylon and Medo-Persia. His relationship to geography, history and ethnology is identical with that of Jeremiah and Ezekiel, and this fact sets the period of the Daniel literature beyond controversy.

Daniel made an unique contribution to Biblical literature. His prophetic message is chiefly concerned with the rise, progress and fall of the Continental Empires ; and with the ultimate triumph of Israel in the world.

The Book of Daniel is made up of a collection of pamphlets, produced at different times, and under different circumstances, during the lifetime of Daniel. The period, as we have pointed out, is settled by the geographical, ethnological and historical setting, accidentally incorporated in the picture presented. These documents, being assembled and bound together, constitute the Book of Daniel.

THE STYLE OF THE DANIEL LITERATURE.

The style of the Daniel literature differs from that of the other prophets whose writings form so large a part of the Bible literature. The main reason for this difference is sufficiently clear. From Moses to Malachi the prophets of the Bible wrote and spoke for the Israel people concerning the one great theme of prophecy ; namely, the origin, dedication, destiny, mission and experience of the Israel people. The Israel people were born in the midst of this great story, and were living actors in the great plan. Their whole training and antecedents throughout all the generations from Isaac on had prepared them to understand the matter. It was a simple thing to convey to them the meaning of the prophets in words and figures. Therefore the writing of the Israel prophets to the Israel people was clear and plain.

But Daniel was commissioned to convey the message of Jehovah, and the facts of His purpose, to heathen kings and peoples. Such kings and peoples had no previous knowledge of Jehovah, and had no knowledge of the great prophetic story, nor of the great age-long plan. Their very language lacked the terminology which would make the meaning of the message clear. There was the greatest danger that they would relate the messages of Jehovah to their own heathen systems, and to their own heathen gods. Therefore there must be a change from the Hebrew in the language used, and a change in the style of presentation. Therefore the style is picturesque. The messages consist of a series of pictures as vivid as any moving picture screen could produce. The messages so presented were fully understood by the Babylonian kings and people. This is obviously the reason why this style of presentation was used. The writings of Daniel constitute a masterpiece, perfectly suitable for conveying the truth to people unacquainted with the theme, and unused to the expression of Divine literature.

The languages used by Daniel are adapted to the needs of the case in the same manner. When the writing is for what may be termed Israel Bible readers, the ordinary Hebrew is used. When the king or some officer of his court speaks, the language is that which the Babylonian scholar or courtier would use. When Daniel or other Hebrew addresses the king or other Babylonian the language is that of the court, or of the literary man of the day and country. So, unlike other Biblical Books, the language used by Daniel is varied, and in itself carries its own reason for being so varied, and in this fact carries its own proof of genuineness.

Let others carry this matter farther who are better prepared to do so. We hope shortly to be able to present an article by Professor Odlum, M.A., B.Sc., on this matter, he having closely examined every word of the Daniel literature in the original.

The Daniel literature is a forecast of Continental history. In its full sweep it runs for the full prophetic period of seven times, or two thousand five hundred and twenty years. Certain prophecies giving outstanding details of history are furnished, each presenting enlarged views of critical periods, or of epoch-marking events. These details carry the reader forward for half of the period of seven times; namely, for "a time, times, and the dividing of a time," or twelve hundred and sixty years. Then the details of the great story stop, and the Book is sealed.

This presentation of details carries forward to the fall of the Cæsars and halts there. The great outlines of Daniel's prophecies sweep forward to the end of the full seven times.

Where the Book of Daniel closes at the time of the end of the first twelve hundred and sixty years, the Book of Revelation opens and carries forward to the end.

NEW YEAR MESSAGES.

From MAJOR THE REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A., C.F. (T.)

GOD SAVE THE KING.

AT the moment of going to press, the whole nation—nay, the whole of the great British Commonwealth of Nations—is hoping that God in His goodness will answer the prayers of His people regarding the gradual restoration to health of His Majesty the King. As has been so repeatedly stated in the Press, the King belongs to the nation. He is the titular and cherished head of our glorious Empire, reigning by will of the people, with his Throne firmly established by traditional affection in the hearts of the many millions who are proud to call themselves his subjects. He is the greatest of earthly monarchs, for through his veins runs the Davidic blood of old-time history. He is a man amongst men, a Christian gentleman, an Empire's pride. Not only is he Defender of the Faith; but he lives that Faith, being saintly both in life and character. His name has been untarnished by scandal, as his home has been exemplary to all. Never has he failed to enter into the welfare of his people; he has wept when they have wept; he has rejoiced when they have rejoiced; their sorrows have been his cares, their joys his delights. The proud father of prouder sons, he has "lent" his sons as Ambassadors of Empire, who have interpreted aright with tact and zeal those constitutional privileges, which, centred in the Crown, extend their influences to the uttermost parts of the earth.

The happy claims of Britain's freedom have asserted themselves in the past—and will ever assert themselves in the future—through what may be termed the uncrowned democracy of the Throne, and the crowned democracy of the people. The Royal Throne of Britain is the axis around which revolves the wheel of Empire. If our Throne cease to exist, then would the Empire, losing its centrifugal force, fly to atoms. Were we to become a Republic, then the British Commonwealth of Nations would cease to function as a unified and corporate whole. The latter is as a living organism, complete and comprehensive, whose heart is the Throne, and through whose arteries flow the affection and the allegiance of His Majesty's subjects. The King reigns, but the people rule, and thus, with this happy combination of apparent contraries, our Throne is safeguarded, and our freedom secured. Despotic monarchs are of the past. No Henry VIII could reign to-day, nor is there any place in the Councils of Europe for him who once was hailed as Kaiser Wilhelm II. Ever since the days of William III and Mary his Queen, at the close of the seventeenth century, we have witnessed the growth of Constitutional Government, which has excelled in the glory of Empire, and conquered in the hearts of men. To our wardship has been entrusted the Throne of the Lord, upon which David once reigned, and on which Solomon once sat. That Throne is for ever planted in the body of the Anglo-Saxon race, and concomitantly within the soul of His Majesty's far-flung Dominions. Nor "till Shiloh come" shall the Royal Throne of Britain ever fail in its trust or truth. Rather shall it grow in splendour and increase in power—not the power of greedy might, but of happy right—gladdening the lives of millions, and increasing with joy, until great David's Greater Son shall come to take to Himself the Government of the peoples and the Sovereignty of mankind.

And what of America? A letter in the Times just before Christmas told of an American who said, in sympathetic reference to the illness of our beloved King, "I feel that he is my King also." Yes, there is a great and unspoken truth underlying those words. Why is America a Republic, bearing in mind that the main stock of the people of the United States of America are of our own kith and kin, that their ideals are our ideals, and that their righteousness is our righteousness? May it not be—and it is well known that the American peoples love the very thought of "Royalty"—that the time is coming when our Union Jack will be interwoven with the Stars and Stripes, and that America is only awaiting the day when our King shall be her King? An American once very tritely said,

Digitized by Google

"We regard your King as the hereditary President of the British Democracies." Yes, if I read my Bible aright, and interpret correctly "the sure Word of prophecy," the time is not far distant when our King-Emperor shall indeed be hailed as "The hereditary President of the British and the American Democracies," and when the Crown shall be the apex of America as well as of Canada, as it is of that Greater Britain which has long since rejoiced in the love of its Throne, in the dutiful affection of its Royal Family, and in the glorious freedom of its Constitutional Government.

Thus my New Year message is, God Save the King, God Bless the King, God grant to His Majesty, to His Majesty's successors, to the "seed royal," and to His Majesty's subjects at home, and in countless lands overseas, that peace and prosperity, that health and wealth, that spiritual joy and blessing, which God is longing to give as a perpetual and perennial donation to the people whom He has called after His Name, and whom He loves with a love that is everlasting.

From JOHN LEECH, ESQ., M.A., K.C.

To the readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER. May the year 1929 be a year of increase. Increase in Faith (Luke xvii, 5). Increase in Love (1 Thess. iii, 12.) Increase in Strength (Isa. xl, 29). Increase in the Word of God (Acts vi, 7). Increase in the Knowledge of God (Col. i, 10), and Increase in their Joy in the Lord (Isa. xxix, 19).

From MRS. HOLBEIN HENDLEY.

I HAVE regarded the Truth our journal stands for as the master-key to the right understanding of Scripture. May I now say that with this key in hand its writers have opened out and developed the Divine Purpose, which according to St. Paul "God purposed in Himself," viz., to take out a people for His Name—Israel—and of which He declared He had only one. "You only have I chosen."

By many infallible signs it has been demonstrated that we ourselves, the British nation, are "The people of His inheritance"—with all its tremendous results and possibilities. Week by week, taught of God and in possession of "the mind of Christ," the writers have set before us in their teaching a feast of fat things, satisfying to heart and mind, impossible to any other teachings lacking these things. It has created an appetite which only its own pages can satisfy. We thank God for its message and the messengers!

From MR. J. J. MOREY.

THE NATIONAL MESSAGE is the great world-advocate of the British-Israel Movement. It pleads in every land, arguing the case for the unerring Truth of the Bible, for the faithfulness of God, for the reliability of Scripture prophecy, and wins a verdict wherever its pleading is thoughtfully considered.

It is a great herald of the Coming Kingdom of Our Lord Jesus Christ, and its message is full of confidence and hope.

It carries to all the scattered tribes of Israel the glad news of a great re-gathering, partially accomplished in our great British Empire, and to be completed at the Coming of our Heavenly King to reign on earth.

It calls the Anglo-Saxon peoples to consider their marvellous history, their Divinely-appointed heritage, and their supreme task in preparing the world for the Kingdom age about to dawn. It inspires confidence and calm, gives vision and expectation, penetrates old mysteries, enhances the value of old truths, opens wonderful realms of knowledge, meets modern unbelief with clear demonstration and argument, and outlines the great programme of the Kingdom of God on earth.

THE NATIONAL MESSAGE is prospering because it is doing God's work in an age when unbelief is popular and the nation's faith is waning. God is using it as a national force for the re-enthronement of His Word, and for the enlightenment of the lost sheep of the House of Israel. It is loyal to our beloved King, and is the servant of the Greater King, Whose earthly Throne is here preserved until His Coming again.

From THE LADY PEARSON, Vice-President, B.-I.-W.F.

IT is a great joy to me to have the privilege of sending New Year Greetings to all readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER.

Surely in these days of Communism and of extreme modern criticism, we should gratefully thank God for the wonderful work and faith of the British-Israel-World Federation, the literature of which gives to all its readers a great love and understanding of the Holy Scriptures.

"Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering (for He is faithful that promised); and let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works: not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching."

From MR. A. G. COPELAND, President of the Stoke-upon-Trent Branch of the B.-I.-W.F.

BRITISH-ISRAEL Truth believers are doing a very wonderful work, work which is positive and constructive. They give to the world the Bible, open and understandable from beginning to end; they bring such light and knowledge to bear upon what are often considered difficult passages, demonstrating that they are true and accurate statements each falling into its proper place in the Divine plan.

Now, I often think of Elijah and the despondency into which he fell after the wonderful part he had played in that dramatic scene which vindicated the Lord as God, and how encouraged he must have been when he learned that he was not alone, but that there were seven thousand others who were loyal to their God.

We are much encouraged to know how British-Israel Truth is prospering throughout the country. We are all fighting for the Truth at a time when there seems to be a very dark outlook; let us then remember and try to understand the outlook of the Israelites when they were about to enter the Promised Land, and the Divine Power in which they were to go forward. "Five of you shall chase an hundred, and an hundred shall put ten thousand to flight." History has frequently shown that success has not been obtained by numbers, but by the enthusiasm of a few.

From MR. DANIEL FARMER.

AT a most critical time in the history of the British people, and of the professing Church, when so many, piously ignorant, are contradicting no small part of the historical teaching of the Old Testament, and a very considerable number of the impiously learned are repudiating so much of it, who can deny that a body of Bible students—belonging to every section of Evangelical belief, such as constitutes the British-Israel-World Federation, a Society which stands for the integrity of Holy Scripture, and a more intelligent explanation of its historical contents—has not "come to the Kingdom for such a time as this"?

From COLONEL G. W. BRAZIER-CREAGH, C.B., C.M.G.

GREETINGS and good wishes to the B.-I.-W.F. and all readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE.

Glad I am indeed to express my deep appreciation of the zeal and sincerity of the cheerful band of workers at No. 6, Buckingham Gate, who consider no day too long in devoted work for broadcasting the B.-I. Truth and verity of the written Word of the Divine Master.

As we enter on the New Year 1929 we leave another mile-stone behind, the old mile-stone marks an eventful year of progress of B.-I.-W.F. work.

The reports that have reached G.H.Q. from all sources conclusively prove that during the past year B.-I. teaching and literature are everywhere heralded on a wave of enthusiasm, especially at all new centres, both at home and abroad.

The extent, depth and success of this Evangelical Faith is eloquent testimony that The Shepherd of Israel is with His flock—as He has been all down the ages—omnia presenta—and He that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep. (Psalm cxxi, 4.) May the work continue to prosper and prepare the way for the Coming King and His Kingdom on earth.

From the REV. WM. BROWN POLLOCK, M.A.

HEARTY GREETINGS to all ISRAEL, to THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER, and its official staff, to the readers, and to the BRITISH-ISRAEL-WORLD FEDERATION.

ANOTHER year of GRACE lies before us, and reminds us that the LORD "hath remembered HIS covenant for EVER, the word HE commanded to a thousand generations." (Ps. cv, 8.) A thousand generations cover a very long time and not a doubt our day. Let us rejoice and be glad in it, and at the same time "remember" (v. 5) "the marvellous works that HE hath done; HIS wonders, and the judgments of HIS mouth; O ye seed of ABRAHAM, HIS servant, ye children of JACOB, HIS chosen" (v. 5 and 6). Rejoicing for us must depend on remembrance, and remembrance of HIS marvellous WORKS of REDEMPTION, of SANCTIFICATION, and of HIS mighty FAITHFULNESS to the covenant and the merciful filling up of its merciful terms. But remembrance also of what that means to us. It surely means that we are under the utmost pressure to "make known HIS deeds among the people" (v. 1). When JOSHUA was about to lead the people of ISRAEL ACROSS the Jordan into the PROMISED LAND, he was commanded to tell the people to sanctify themselves, "for the LORD will do wonders among you." We do not see the wonders because of the neglect of sanctification. This is imperative. But it is also gloriously possible. Let us unite in such a Divine act, and 1929 will be a New Year in a new way, and it will be marked by new wonders.

From the REV. G. W. PLASTING.

TO readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE for the New Year of 1929 I would point to the Inspiration Motto of the Prophet Isaiah: "The Government shall be upon His shoulders." Every event we shall witness in the near future, even in their tribulative aspects, will all contribute to preparing the way for Our Lord's reign upon earth. All the efforts of B.-I. workers are constructive in their service to this end, and should glow with Holy zeal in this New Year, knowing that "of the increase of His Government there shall be no end."

From the REV. CHAS. W. COOPER, F.G.S.

I WRITE to wish the Federation God's blessing and continued success for the New Year of 1929. What it may mean to us, who can tell? Let us remember, Truth and its prevailing power belongs more to God than to our defence of it. May all who would help to spread B.-I. Truth realize there is more power in the art of gentle conversation than in overbearing arguments.

The average opponent professes to think we injure the cause of Christ and exalt "the National" Kingdom above the Gospel of Salvation.

Never fail to speak of Christ first—"The Kingdom" second. It commands attention. Our Cause must spread. The wide criticism for and against Bishop Gore's Commentary clearly reveals an open revolt against all the "old" ways of expounding the Old and New Testaments. The teaching of THE National Kingdom of God must come into its own. It is the only consistent view of Scripture. Let us preach "The Kingdom," and God will do the rest.

From the REV. T. L. EDWARDS.

"I WILL do better unto you than at your beginnings: and ye shall know that I am the Lord." (Ezek. xxxvi, 11.)

"I the Lord have spoken it, and I will do it." (Ezek. xxxvi, 36.)

In this prophecy the Lord undertakes to carry Israel back to their own land. Whose flag flies there now? Has not British-Israel control there? Their brethren the Jews are hastening back also, and in Eastern Europe hundreds of thousands are inquiring concerning their great Kinsman and His Salvation.

The promise in verse 11 has proved a God-given guiding star to multitudes of the Lord's people. Some to-day are rejoicing in its fulfilment in their own experience—may their number be greatly multiplied, and ultimately it will be gloriously fulfilled in the experience of every one of them, even if they have to wait, as poor Lazarus did, until an angel guard of honour carried him home.

By the REV. F. S. RALPH, M.A.

IT is apparent to seeing eyes that we are living in the Time of the End, the latter days. The cleansing of the sanctuary is progressing apace. The heart of the British Empire, London, has seen the Prayer Book menace met and defeated in the House of Commons by 33 votes, the Master Mason degree. The Augean stables of unclean literature has felt the lustral waters, and also certain dark places in civil administrations. Verily, the New Jerusalem is to be built on England's green and verdant fields, not far away in Palestine, but in these Islands of the Blest, where He is even now preparing the place of His feet, for "there shall no wise enter into it any thing that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie." The incredulous, the doubters, the fearful, are having it borne in upon them by many signs and portents that Great Britain is the seat of the King of kings, against Whom Moscowism, Romanism and Militarism plot in vain. We are indeed the people of the Lord although "Abraham be ignorant of us and Israel acknowledge us not," for it is being realized that Brith-Ish, Covenant Man, shall yet echo around the globe synonymous with God's children. Overwhelming evidence is accumulating to prove that the Isles of the West are the Promised Land, the city cut out without hands. If an unprejudiced mind will take a good atlas and gazetteer and look for a hidden revelation in terms of longitude from Greenwich 0, and latitude from the equator, he will not wonder that the seat of Serpent worship in Angkor Vat in Cambodia and in Java is respectively 13.416 deg. north and 6.66 deg. south. Yes, and Pi-beseth in the land of Goshen, the Pi-house-of-Seth, is exactly 31° 41.60′ east of Greenwich; and the seat of rule in our Indian Empire or Em-PI-re is 31.416 degrees north and 77.77 deg. east, while Simla in Hebrew alphabetical-numbers is 31.416 or Pi-ratio. All who love the Lord Jesus Christ and His Brith-Ish Empire should, at the commencement of another New Year, vow a vow that all through A.D. 1929 they will staunchly, unfalteringly, and constantly exalt the Bible as the inspired Word of the Lord God Almighty, and exalt Jesus Christ as the King of kings, and be true patriots in the great Empire of God. The imperishable Empire has been set up on a resentful earth and shall rule them all with a rod of iron, the rod of righteousness; and whosoever shall dare to cast stumbling-blocks in the way of well-doing runs fearful, perilous risks in the presence of the Great Captain of our salvation. This is my message to all true and loyal British-Israelites, the Pi-people of the Pi-Isles, and they have a glorious privilege of consciously helping to bring in the Kingdom in these epoch-making times.

From the REV. CHARLES MOON, A.K.C.L.

I AM utterly amazed, thankful and gratified at the wonderful way the British-Israel writers open up the Word of God to us. What we have to do is to follow in the footsteps of Our Blessed Lord, trusting in His precious blood, and continuing instant in prayer. So, dear Brothers and Sisters, let us journey on towards the Eternal Inheritance, purchased for us by the same Saviour's atoning death and glorious resurrection. Please receive this gentle urge from one verging on his 90th year and many years a careful student of B.-I. Truth.

From the REV. W. F. G. CLATWORTHY.

A HEARTY New Year's greeting to THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER and its contributors. May all who are engaged in spreading—through its pages week by week—the knowledge of God's faithfulness to His Covenant Word, be constantly encouraged with tokens of the Divine Blessing.

The past has already seen much accomplished in the promulgation—and ever-widening reception—of the Truth, so that it can be truly said "The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad." Wherefore, let the bells of Gladness and Praise ring in the New Year; while the spirit of a joyous optimism quickens the witness to the Truth. Voices have been raised in opposition, and still will be. But, Faith is reaching forth, and Hope is beckoning on to the ultimate triumph of the Eternal purposes of God in His people.

So, we pray—God speed the MESSAGE through another year. And may it meet with an ever-increasing response to its appeal for the acceptance of the Truth that "our God is a God Who keepeth Covenants."

From the REV. J. H. MORTIMER, M.A., Oxford.

THAT God has a high purpose for us and our kinsmen overseas in the Dominions and in America, and a wonderful and great work for us to do in preparation for the Coming of Our Lord and His Kingdom, is increasingly evident as the years go by, and was never clearer than to-day. There is the burden of the British-Israel message, and it is beginning to attract attention in quarters where it has hitherto been disregarded.

This is encouraging, and should give us high hopes for the future. God is calling His people out now, and He wants a ready response and united action.

And if we meet with increased opposition from His enemy and ours, and find him trying to distract us from God's work by more insistent calls of worldly work and interests, and trying to drown God's voice by the hubbub of modern life—or if we see him endeavouring to prevent the union of God's people by stirring up discord, let us not be discouraged, but let it rather provoke us to more determined effort—(1) to draw nearer to God ourselves, and (2) to draw nearer to our brethren and realize our union with them in God.

There is a wonderful blessedness and a power in Christian fellowship. And the bonds of this fellowship between English-speaking Christians are being drawn tighter, and Oxford is helping. In this lies the surest hope of world-peace.

That, then, seems to be our call and our privilege. "Have not I commanded thee, be strong, and of a good courage."

From the REV. HECTOR MACTURK, M.A.

NOT only is "this Gospel of the Kingdom" being preached as never before, but it is also being appreciated, far and wide, and not least in the villages of Lincolnshire, as I have reason to know. This is as it should be. The time is coming when "the common people" (and even the clergy) will clamour for more light on Bible prophecy. "And then shall the end (of the Age) come," and our King. Let us go forward into 1929 with renewed courage and hope.

From the REV. P. HUSBAND DAVIES.

I SEND hearty congratulations to all who have worked in and for the B.-I.-W.F. Cause. We are committed to a great and world-needed work. Standing as we do for The Bible—Unabridged, we have firm ground and a sure stronghold. Wherefore, let us be steadfast, unmoved, always abounding in the work of the Lord.

From the Congress and other platforms of our Federation, by many "Great Hearts" and "Valiants for the Truth," we have had great messages. What are we going to do with their living words? D. L. Moody used to say: "Application is the life of preaching: Application is the life of hearing." So, let us be doers of the Word; applying it; remembering; "redeeming the time."—(lit.) "buying up opportunities."

"Another year—also." What a gift! What a responsibility!

Another year to search for truth,
Another year to pray for man;
Your hand, my friend!
May age as youth
Still find us giving all we can.

From the REV. W. M. H. MILNER, M.A. ("Oxonian").

WE know not what a day may bring forth. British-Israel readers all over the world must be ready for what may come. The nations talk of "Peace," but are preparing for War. Mussolini, who ought to know, speaking in the Italian Parliament on 8th December, says: "We are all for Peace. . . . The reality is, The whole world is arming." Still is Israel "The LORD'S Battle-Axe." "When ye see these things come to pass, know that your redemption draweth nigh." The Master says it. The "End" is fast approaching when "War" shall be "no more." HE COMES. God Save the King. God bless Israel. We will "never be dismayed."

From the REV. J. T. CHILDS.

PS. xxv, 14: "The secret of the Lord is WITH THEM that fear Him, and He will shew THEM His covenant."

John xv, 15: "I have called you friends: for all things that I have heard of My Father I have made known unto you."

Note that it is to the Inner Circle that the facts and terms of Jehovah's Covenant are revealed. And this Inner Circle is comprised of those that "fear the Lord." These are they who desire, at all costs, to "know what the Will of the Lord is," and to follow it whatever the consequences.

These read the Holy Scriptures, not to criticize them, but to learn from them what the Lord has revealed of His plans, purposes and His gracious promises, and what is so learned becomes the dominating influence of their lives.

This is the spirit in which B.-I.'s meet together to "search the Scriptures, which are able to make us wise unto salvation."

May the coming year find us more fervent in Spirit, growing in Grace, and in knowledge of the Lord, and "fearing Him." May we enable Him to reveal to us more and more of His wonderful Covenant. May He raise up for us more Teachers, who, taught by the Holy Spirit, shall have "TRUE knowledge and understanding of God's Holy Word,' and so shall enable us to more fully grasp "the good things that God has prepared for them that love (fear) Him."

From the REV. FREDERICK J. BURT SPRAY.

SINCEREST greetings to readers of THE MESSAGE, and to its many writers, whose contributions are always interesting and helpful, and we are deeply obligated to them.

In the "Rosary" the Doctor advised "Jane Dalmaine" to "Take a Tonic of Big Things." We have such a tonic in THE MESSAGE weekly, and I would advise a careful study of its articles. It brings before us the Big Things of God's Truth and Grace, Providence and Love, as revealed in His Promises and Prophecies, and in His dealings with Israel. Take a tonic of them. It will strengthen your faith, widen your outlook, enlarge your sympathies, and deepen your love to God.

Take a Tonic of the Big Things in Christ's Redemption, His love not for us as individuals alone, but for Israel the Nation. Think His thoughts, see the Kingdom as He saw it, share His expectations for Israel and the world. Take a Tonic from the Big Challenge to His people, to share the self-forgetful intercession of Moses and Paul for Israel, that it may be saved. Remember recent answers to the prayers of God's people for the Nation. Take it as a challenge to more intense and believing prayer. "I will yet for this be enquired of by the House of Israel, to do it for them." "Prove Me now herewith if I will not open the windows of Heaven and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it." Take a Tonic of these Big Things. Join the Prayer Union! Then pray for and expect the Big Things: Israel's Repentance, Awakening, Reformation and Revival.

From J. FOSTER BEAVER, ESQ.

ON every side to-day we see perplexity, difficulty and distress; man is in a turmoil; he has discovered and explored nearly all the earth; he has increased his scientific knowledge until science is becoming his taskmaster; and he has experimented with Democracy until now the failures are so evident that thinking people begin to say: "Democracy has failed."

Man is not satisfied, he is in confusion; confusion of soul owing to lack of true teaching in religion; confusion of thought, of politics, and of business. In all spheres—spiritual, mental and material—we see this state in spite of man's materialistic efforts to relieve it, and it would seem as if this confusion is heading for chaos. How we do lack the great blessings of Peace, Happiness and Joy in helpful co-operative work with the Creator that should be man's inheritance on earth!

Now more than ever is the message needed, to put first things first: "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His Righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you." Surely our great New Year call to this our dear land must be just this: "Turn back to God, study His Word, then seek the Kingdom, and having found it, let us try to do God's Will, putting first things first, to follow out His Laws, and our troubles will disappear."

To Brother British-Israelites—We have a great and glorious message, let us go ahead in all confidence and faith, and lead our people back to God.

From MRS. ALICE CRAVEN JONES, Vice-President, B.-I.-W.F.

DEAR British-Israelites throughout the world,—May 1929 be a blessed year for each and all. The time grows short, and wonderful as 1928 has been for our Cause ; uplifting and spiritually stimulating as the Congress has proved ; encouraging as is the number of new believers and members ; and astonishing as is the increased sale of our literature, we must not relax. We need all the witness, service, prayer and sacrifice our belief demands. We shall reap if we faint not, and the Lord will bring it to pass if we trust in Him. He promises this, and He is faithful that promised.

From MRS. M. COOKE.

MY heartiest greetings to all those who are used in producing our NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER, with its inspiring messages from week to week. May its circulation increase manyfold, bringing enlightenment to all its readers. "Your eyes shall see, and ye shall say, The Lord be magnified beyond the border of Israel." (Malachi i, 5—R.V.)

From MISS ELEANOUR SINCLAIR ROHDE.

A NEW YEAR GREETING.

There is a very beautiful prayer, ascribed to Milton, which I venture to quote :—

"O Thou, Who of Thy own free grace didst build up this Brittanick Empire to a glorious and enviable height, with all her daughter islands about her, stay us in this felicitie."

We have seen the marvellous promises made by God to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob fulfilled to a far greater extent than Milton, and we also see the terrible time of trial that awaits us looming more closely. There has surely never been a more subtle and more deadly attack on the Empire than undermining the faith of the people in God's Word by the two weapons of Evolution and Modernism. The British-Israel Federation does not cease to proclaim unshaken faith in the inspiration of the Bible, and every reader has cause to be grateful for the scholarly expositions to be found week by week in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER. We all look and pray for even greater blessings to attend the splendid work of the Federation in the coming year.

[Others to follow].

THE MARCH OF PROPHETIC EVENTS.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD, F.R.G.S.

IT will be remembered that some time ago, in fact at different times, we called attention to the fact that while the physical conflict ended on Armistice Day in 1918, the spirit of the War has been carried forward.

We said then, and say still, that the War passed out of the stage of physical blows into the stage of propaganda. What Prussia endeavoured to do with an army, that power which now controls in Russia undertook to do with a doctrine.

The period of the Pyramid Antechamber was devoted to propaganda. On the second Sunday after the signing of the Armistice it was my privilege to give a Sunday evening lecture on the subject, "The Prophetic Period upon which we are now entering." Before me was the Principal of a Theological College and sundry other scholarly students of theology, with a very alert and instructed congregation. I then pointed out that we had entered upon that period of propaganda carried on by the "three evil spirits like frogs" which would last for a predicted period ; I was not then a Pyramid student, but the time indication in the Bible I found corresponded to Mr. Davidson's indication as to the Antechamber.

In that lecture I further indicated that the contest would be a spiritual one ; that the weapons would be doctrinal ; and that the combatants would be the advocates of the opposed doctrine.

These doctrines would be, on the part of the enemy, the negation of faith and the active advocacy of Communism. On the other hand must be the demonstration of the groundwork of faith in covenants kept, promises redeemed, and prophecies fulfilled, which are shown by the Gospel of the Kingdom ; faith so demonstrated becoming the stepping-stone into experimental Christian experience.

Surely the history of the years since 1918 has abundantly verified that reading of prophecy.

The period of propaganda, however, has merged into a struggle to reap the harvest of the seed sown in that period. On the national scale the representative contestants are declared in all contemporary literature to be Russia on the one hand, meaning by that name the power that now dominates in Russia—which is not Russia—and, on the other hand, Great Britain.

Matters have been put to the test tentatively in a number of fields ; first it was attempted in Britain itself by the Great Strike, in which the spirit of Britain—which is the spirit of loyalty to God and Country—prevailed.

Next it was attempted in China ; Bolshevik propaganda had been very intense in China, and the Southern Chinese had reacted to it, as the red pages of Chinese history during the last few years have made manifest.

The revolutionary forces were led by Russian Communists, and the points to which the forces so led tended were the foreign colonies and concessions ; and especially the British.

Britain mobilized and sent forces to protect the British sphere, and British and other nationals.

Let it be marked that Britain struck no blow at all ; least of all for the protection of material interests. Life and prestige were the things guarded.

The British stood within their own lines, behind barriers, up to which surged the mob excited up to a frenzy of blood lust.

The Bolshevik influence by falsehood and misrepresentation urged the Chinese, and endeavoured to lead them to strike at the British defences.

It was quite manifest that Britain was prepared to strike, and to strike hard, if occasion demanded ; but it became more and more manifest to the Chinese that Britain had no disposition to strike, standing quietly upon the defensive. A graphic picture showing the imperturbable "Tommy" behind a barbed wire barrier, and on the other side of the wire a mass of frenzied humanity halted, not by physical force, but by a spiritual demonstration. One "Tommy" especially was happily caught by the photographer holding his rifle in his left hand, while with the right he reached across the barrier to pat the head of a little Chinese child.

The spirit of restraint and goodwill won for Britain, Europe and Japan the confidence of the Chinese to such a degree that their active hostility toward the foreign settlements and the British ceased. With the dying of the hostility toward the British and other Europeans came the recognition that they had been deliberately misled by the Communists, upon which the Communists were expelled, and the Chinese national spirit emerged.

The attempt on the part of Russia to launch China against Britain, and to bring China under Russian subjection, failed. Thus, in the spiritual field of international politics, a war on a major scale was won against Russia and the spirit of Communism by Britain and her spirit of law, order and goodwill.

Mark this up in the present stage of struggle. It was a contest as important to the world as the physical struggle of 1914–1918.

We might speak of a similar effort in Egypt, but the history of the attempt to overthrow British influence there is so recent and present to the minds of the readers of the daily Press that we do not take space here. In Egypt the same kind of attack was made by Russian agency, and in the same manner failed.

The next attempt to which we shall call attention is that of Afghanistan.

Early last year one of those men of our race who, like Kitchener and Lawrence, can transform themselves so as to be accepted as a tribesman by Arab and Afghan, having traversed Afghanistan and the Border Provinces as a welcome guest of the native Princes, brought information to the following effect :—

Russian influence had so permeated the Afghan and Border tribes that it was intended to bring off a revolution in Afghanistan and Northern India which would bring them in line with the Mohammedan Asiatic provinces or states of Russia.

In order that King Amanullah might not be compromised it was arranged that he should visit Europe and so be provided with an alibi. Mark that this information came before King Amanullah started on his tour. He came, and was entertained, and we hoped had been converted from these views and intentions. The outbreak which was planned for last Spring did not make itself felt so as to attract European attention until Kabul itself was menaced and the King had to flee.

Now the matter seems to have reached a conclusion for the present, and it is with some surprise that we read in the Daily Telegraph the following German estimate of the situation :—

WARNING TO THE SOVIET.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

BERLIN.

"'A momentous and possibly decisive event in the British-Russian fight for power in Asia' is how the abdication of Amanullah appears to the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, which, under the influence of one of its managers, the former German Naval Attaché at Constantinople, has long counted here as an authority on Oriental affairs. The paper says :

"'Not only has Moscow's influence at Kabul vanished for any foreseeable time. The fall of the progressive Afghan King also seriously threatens tranquillity and order in the Central Asiatic Republics of the Soviet Union. In Turkistan and Usbekistan it is only by military pressure that the Communist régime keeps down the resistance of a population which cannot be sincerely cordial either towards the compulsory agrarian reform or the anti-religious propaganda. If after the victory of the religious and traditional forces in Afghanistan a spark of Islamic counter-revolution were to spring over into the Mohammedan territories of the Soviet Union and bring to explosion the pent-up resentment of the adherents of Islam and of the formerly ruling sections it would mean a very serious danger for those in power at Moscow. In fact, London's power has come dangerously close to the frontier of the Soviet State and has done so precisely at the points of least resistance.'"

It looks from the above as though at another point in the world-wide field of conflict the spiritual contest between Britain and Russia had come to a head, and that Britain had won.

Let it be remembered as to doctrine that the Bolshevik is a negationist and an atheist, actively carrying on anti-Jehovah and anti-Christian propaganda.

On the other hand, the Mohammedan has a constructive faith in God, an intense loyalty to His Name, and thus stands on a higher level from the spiritual standpoint than the atheistic Bolshevist.

Let it be remembered that the Mohammedan believes intensely in the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, the God of our fathers.

Let it be remembered that the Mohammedan further believes in some strange fashion the rule of the British Raj is a Divinely-established rule ; give to him the knowledge and faith of Christ, and of the law as interpreted by Jesus, and his spiritual equipment will then be complete. In the contest between the forces of atheism and the forces of faith we may count Christian, Mohammedan, Brahmin and Sikh as fighting on the same side against the negations of atheistic Bolshevism. This is counting, and will still count, for much in the struggle that is on.

1928 AND NUMBER 153.

BY THE REV. C. C. DOBSON, M.A.

TWO numbers are recorded in the Bible with obvious marked significance—153, the number of fishes in the miracle of the draft of fishes of John xxi, and 666, the number of the beast of Rev. xiii, 18. The number 153 would appear to be God's monomark as regards His Elect, or His Church. It is the value of the expression "Sons of God," "Beni ha Elohim," when the Hebrew letters are taken as numerals. Further, in the very verse in which the actual number is given in St. John xxi, both the words "fishes" and "net" numerically total 153 x 8, the Greek letters, like the Hebrew, being numerals as well as letters. The number 8 appears to be the Bible Resurrection number. The inference to be drawn from the story is that the fish caught in the net, and drawn to the shore to the feet of Jesus, symbolize the Church gathered to meet the Lord at His Coming, when the Resurrection of the just will take place. As regards 666, it is the monomark of the beast. In the Roman alphabet only six letters were used as numerals, namely, D, C, L, X, V, I, for M came to be used for 1,000 at a much later date. These letters total 666.

The Bible seems to tell us to look out for 153 and 666, for where they occur may perhaps be recognized either the finger of God in matters touching the gathering of His Church for the Second Advent, or the mark of the work of Satan. Mr. Davidson, as noted in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, has drawn our attention to the occurrence of 153 both in the Great Pyramid, and in events of the Great War; but 1928, the year that has closed, has evidenced these numbers in a remarkable way.

Let us consider the Prayer Book controversy.

Since Great Britain, God's instrument in the world's preparation for the Second Advent, has an established Church, this controversy as effecting its doctrines must be one of extreme importance in God's sight. We may expect to see His mono-mark 153. Here is what happened.

On December 14th, 1927, the House of Lords passed the Prayer Book Measure by a majority of exactly 153. At first sight it would appear from this that God's Will lay on the side of sanction. If so, we should have expected the Measure to pass the Commons. The House of Lords, however, constitutes neither the voice of the nation nor that of the Church, and subsequent events suggest that the occurrence here of 153 is a sign of the extreme importance of the whole matter in God's sight, and also that Evangelicals fell short, through weakness, of His standard.

The rejected Book, after slight revision, came before the National Assembly. The minority totalled exactly 153. Here the inference is clear. It was the final vote of the whole Church, and when the Commons subsequently again rejected the Book, it was the voice of the nation endorsing God's minority vote. But, turning again to the votes recorded in Parliament, a remarkable fact emerges. The total votes recorded in favour were as follows:—House of Lords, December 14th, 1927—241; House of Commons, 1927—205; House of Commons, June 14th, 1928—220: total votes cast in favour of the Book, 666, the number of the beast.

Again, taking the votes cast in the House of Commons on the double rejection, we have: 1927—247 (Hansard's corrected figure); 1928—266. Total votes recorded = 513, which is exactly 153 short of 666.

In view of these striking figures it is well to note Rev. xiii,18. "Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast: for it is the number of a man: and his number is six hundred, three score and six."

Last year produced another striking occurrence of number 153, which was referred to in last week's MESSAGE. The Hebrew Christian Conference held last July in Hamburg was attended by delegates from 18 countries, numbering 153. Surely this was the "budding of the fig-tree," and the mark of the "Elect" among God's ancient people.

ADDRESS AT CHURCH HOUSE.—I.

Professor E. Odlum, M.A., said:

Mr. Chairman and Friends,—I am sorry—and I am glad. It is not every person that can be both at the same time, but I am. Glad to be getting through a series of labours fairly heavy, and glad that in a little while I shall be finding loved ones at the other side of the ocean, and on the other side of a very large continent. But I am sorry too—perhaps more sorry than glad—I am not sure, to have to go away from people that I have got greatly acquainted with. May I meet all of them on this side again! If we do not meet here, we will have the opportunity of meeting "over yonder." Life is a big thing and reaches far; it does not terminate when we get out of our earthly houses. When I left my home in Vancouver and came out this way, I was not seen there, around my home, but I was not dead. I am alive. And when I go out of this home here, this tabernacle, and when you go hereafter, we go on our journey. We shall rise in the scale of beings, and enjoy greater blessings and activities of mind and soul than we ever could enjoy, limited, here. Our life is big. When I think of going away from you I have a sadness of heart; but I say, sooner or later, we will meet again—some here, and all beyond, in the time to come. We are not afraid of that time. We have no fears about it. It is great! mighty! and glorious! To our soul and life it is a great magnet drawing us onward and upward, and we look with joy and high spiritual anticipation to times greater than these; though these are grand in this old city of London.

Let us now pass on to my subject, for it is a very heavy one that we are to deal with to-night.

Our subject is,

that is going forward, which is clearly perceived by all careful readers.

The world knows, the readers of the world know, that peace and quietness—quietness of intention amongst the nations and peoples—are not characteristics of the day. We know, cannot help but know, that there are such world clashes in the realm of mental, intellectual and spiritual activities; in the direction of international statesmanship; in the direction of financial movements in all parts of the world; in the direction of mighty movements along the manufacturing side of human and national life. We know that there is a tremendous world clash and competition at the present time. That we cannot help but see and perceive, and clearly understand.

You have heard from this platform, and the other platforms, and various other places, many of the positions we have taken—all harmonious, bearing upon the primary idea that God has a people selected and set part to do a certain work. A servant work, but a good servant's work; work of uplifting; uplifting self; uplifting the nations of the earth. We have and believe that teaching. We believe that because we believe the Bible.

We have made known as best we could, during the various speeches given on this and other platforms, that the people called Israel are a permanent people; a growing people; a multiplying people; a people increasing in influence, increasing in their relationships and numbers in all parts of the world.

God has said in His Word that under the royal line of David that people are a perpetual people. You and I have that idea, that deep conviction before our minds at the present moment.

If there are some here who are not in harmony altogether with the Scriptures, or who believe in the Scriptures and are not in harmony with our interpretation of the Scriptures, let me say a word or two. Let us get it clear that we are honest men and women trying to find the light and the truth.

Let us grant at once that you are in like condition of mind, that you want to find the truth.

Digitized by Google

Now, do not conclude too hurriedly that you know more about it than we do. Do not conclude you know all the truth; you might just lack a little. I know some things better than you do; that is pretty plain, and I can prove it. You do not know the name of the Vice-President of the company in Vancouver that I am President of; I do. I know his name and you do not. So I know one thing that you do not know. I could go on for an hour and tell you thing after thing that no one in this place knows but myself; and you could do that too. Now then, expand that in a big way.

In the study of human life, a glorious study during a long period of time, I have been at things that a good many have not been able to get at, and I ought to know more about them than those who have not had the opportunity. Well, many of you here could say similar things. Do not imagine that I want to make myself out something big, but I want to produce a conviction in your minds.

I have read this Book, the Bible, and so have you—some of you. I wonder if I put you to the test how you would feel? I was a teacher in many institutions for twenty years before I left that kind of work in order to take on another form of work. Many a time I stood before my classes and put them to the test, and if I questioned this one or that one, he had to answer, or say he did not know. Now, I am going to make a test for you. I will not call on any person by name, but will make a test, and cause you to feel that perhaps you do not know all about this Book.

I wonder how many of you could tell me who Amos the prophet was? And what his prophecy holds? Whom did he prophesy concerning? What peoples did he address? How many nations did he address? And what was the burden of his message to those nations? Now test your hearts and heads while I am talking.

I should like a show of hands as to how many could answer me these questions. But you are conscious of ability to answer, or of the lack of ability to do so.

It is good to sit at the feet of a teacher who has been trained, and knows something of what he is talking about.

Now I am going to proceed with my subject.

At the present time there are four world powers striving for world rule. That is not hard to understand. Four great world powers, definitely, determinedly aiming at world rule, and another power not aiming at world rule, and never having done so, that will get world rule in the end.

THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

We will start with the League of Nations. I am not going to attack any association at all to-night, but will tell the truth in a straightforward way, and bring in past history and modern history.

The League of Nations! It aims at what? It says that we, the people who make up the League of Nations, will so arrange and co-relate ourselves to one another, representing the nations of the earth in our executive, that we will control those nations in their highest relationships to one another.

If the League of Nations were made up of capable men and honest men, they could not go very far astray. Being appointed to the League of Nations does not make a man capable. Being appointed to the League of Nations does not make a man honest. He may be dishonest in the League of Nations. He may be incapable, and may not have the mind and vision of a statesman. He may have the heart of a very dishonest, traitorous man. Let us suppose there are fifty men representing the nations of the earth!

Fifty men of such relationship to their own nations, and to one another, that twenty-six of them can, by vote, tie up the entire combination of fifty nations as far as they have received the power. And the power aimed at is very great indeed.

Now, let us suppose that in the Council of the League of Nations there is one man representing an outside enemy of some particular nation in that combination. That there is one man an enemy to a particular nation, and that man is under control of the power outside of the League of Nations. Then that power outside the League of Nations, by that man, can register its vote. Now, supposing instead of one man there are two in the League of Nations who must vote according to the orders of that outside organized power; then there are two votes registered through those two men by that outside power. Supposing there are twenty-six out of the fifty representing different nations in the world under the power of that enemy organization, and supposing that organization hates one country and wants to destroy it, it can express its hope and determination through those twenty-six men who are at its beck and call and order. And twenty-six men carry the majority vote of the League of Nations. Do you see where we are landing in the League of Nations? Am I making too strict and strong a picture? Come and study. I am not going to give names. This is a tremendous proposition, and if the League of Nations in its construction and composition should have a majority vote governed by an outside enemy of one nation, say, for instance, the British Empire, then there is danger to the British Empire in that League of Nations.

I could show you very many angles, but it would take me a long time. The League of Nations will never control this world; make up your minds to that. First of all I will put this before you. Most of you have read the basic constitution of the League of Nations. What is the attitude? "We, the members of this League of Nations, are going to run the world ourselves, and we do not recognize any Deity." Look into it, and see if I am right. There seems to be no room for God in the League of Nations, no matter how many good men there are in it! Their official foundation has cast God out of it. You know that Moscow did that officially, and you know another country did that officially a hundred years ago. That is, in effect, what has come to the League of Nations.

I will go no further with this because I have four more to deal with. I will take up another composition, a strange one too.

SOVIET RUSSIA.

One organization which is to be dealt with now we would call national. The former is international. The second has expressed itself in very definite terms since it came into power. I refer to the Soviet movement of Russia. What do they say, and openly? Remember, I am not attacking them, nothing of the sort. Openly they say "We are out for world rule." You know that. They are out for world rule. What is the substratum of the Soviet movement? Based on anarchy, every national Government is to be turned upside down; made helpless; and then the Soviet hierarchy will take possession and rule by a little oligarchy, about fifty men—really less than twenty—ruling with a rod of iron, and their propagandists are in every country in the world, paid by the Soviet Government, regulated and ordered by the Soviet Government. The open teaching is that confusion must be thrown into the Governments of the world in such a way that during the time of confusion the Soviet element will get possession of power. Then away will go the ordinary home life; away will go the Sabbath Day; away will go dignity from the land so far as the vote of the Soviet people can succeed, and everything holy will be cast away from the kingdom or nation as it may be. Do you think you are free from this menace? Do you think there are no Soviets here in London? They are in every city in the British Islands. They are in every city in Canada and the Empire; and in the United States of America; and they are hard at work. Let me tell you that big men, grand men, and men with vision in the United States, know there is a real danger threatening stable Governments. They might even be forced into a Government that would be of the enemy sort, regulated and controlled from Moscow.

Let me illustrate the workings of the Soviet element for a moment. I could do it in many ways; I will take this. You remember when the Soviets had got such possession over yonder in the cities of China that it was just, so to speak, touch and go as to whether they would get final control or not. Many elements and cross purposes were at work. Cross currents were many, within and without.

Britain saw, and the other nations saw, that there was a flood of danger towards the heart of the great cities of China, and timely and wisely they sent warships up the rivers. They sent their artillery, their infantry and cavalry, and ships of the air into strategic positions, not for the purpose of conquest, but for the purpose of defence and safety to the multitudes in China that were there from the other countries of the world. Well, who took the lead? Why, just one nation that always has taken the lead: Britain took the lead, and put scores of thousands of her troops at the disposal of the nations of the earth that needed and wished their subjects to be protected in that land. Yes! Japan sent a goodly number; the United States sent a goodly number; but the forefront and the strength and salvation of the people came from the British Empire. Now that is just by way of showing where the great strength is in this world against the Soviet element that is working in the cities of the world. Will the Soviet win out? God help humanity if the Soviet element win out! Civilization would be gone; Christianity would not exist; the home life would be wiped clean out; brutality—organized brutality—with a keen intellectuality behind it would ruin this world, and throw it into chaos as never since the Flood. It has officially despised God, the great Creator of the Universe. He Who loves humanity will see to it that diabolism in the hands of a few men in Moscow will not rule this world.

DIVINE AND HUMAN CO-OPERATION. Part II.

AN ADDRESS AT HEADQUARTERS.

By MR. B. H. NORTON (Editor of The Covenant Race.)

WE have now reached a point in clearly manifested Scripture—fulfilling characteristics, in calculations of Pyramid precision, in agreement between cause and effect and in the identification of the Anglo-Saxons as continuing Israel authorizing us to expect and make known the imminent return of Our Lord.

Is not His return demanded to complete the full restoration of the regenerated departed, to fulfil Scripture referring to His Kingdom, to remove evil systems, and to answer the prayer of travailing creation (Rom. viii, 22)?

The basic hope of His coming is laid in acknowledged human helplessness. As we advance in grace and in years we look to a golden harvest in fields beyond. The whole Creation groaneth. The dying horse whinnies for the comfort in the dark passage of his mother's presence, and we, too, march through pain to a fuller birth before we attain to the fuller life. The present life only touches restoratively the eternal realm provided for the spiritual, but man is more than spirit, Jesus was and is more than spirit. He has come into relationship with what Pope described as "This scene of Man, a mighty maze! but not without a plan."

But all restorative work is now carried out among ruins, from whence emanate the groans, and to where is imparted only a limited joy. Satan is yet strongly entrenched and now as much as ever

"Zion in her anguish
With Babylon must cope."

The call of Abraham was a divine manœuvre planned in unerring wisdom and faultless purpose. The call from Ur was less conspicuous to Satan than the dazzling exhibition of human purity in Eden. The Ur scheme was a development less exciting but more enduring. God has made more definite promises to Abraham affording national perpetuity than were ever made to Adam.

Satan as a permitted opponent had in Eden:

I.—Ruined the human Soul.
II.—Ruined the human Body.
III.—Ruined the human Home.

Hence humanity in disobedience could only now be rescued back to God, and God's love is everlasting to His own, through the obedience which involved the Sacrifice of the Sinless One.

God henceforth must spare the sinner in his sins in order ultimately to secure to Himself the saint in His own holiness, but those sins must be removed and that holiness must be imparted. But how? In order to spare the sinner and to secure the saint He must call His only begotten Son to sacrifice!

For reasons which we are not to question, He saw it necessary to divide the human race into two sections, later to be known as the Israel and the non-Israel. He made no difference in the scheme of the individual salvation of the members of either section. This we emphatically declare to be our teaching.

Abraham was not called to assist God in formulating a new scheme of salvation originally based on universal love, but upon that universal scheme there was superimposed a redemptive erection which made it consistent for God to make one section of the human race (while equally responsible for, and admissible to, salvation) superiorly admissible to declare its possibility, and to provide the channel, for its bestowment upon both sections.

That is why a Specific Mission down from Abraham by miraculous paternity, down from Isaac by a special designative name, down from Jacob-Israel by tribal divisions, down from David by royal allotment of Kingly descent, was to function. This was the human quantum necessary in the scheme. But to complete the Scheme the establishment of a Kingdom of God upon earth with all its necessary protective and corrective measures was to be installed.

This Kingdom was to have a King pre-eminently, the Son of God, known also as "Great David's Greater Son." Over this Kingdom, less eminently, David was to be the first recognized King until the pre-eminent King came to earth to reign. To this same David a divine promise was made that there should always be living a descendant of his if and when required to sit upon the throne of this Kingdom.

It is this divine engagement which gives to British-Israel the privilege, the heroism, some style it the audacity, to stoutly claim an identification with the Israel of the Ten Tribes.

Those who do not accept our conclusions can find no proof in the Bible that in this special redemptive Mission God has ever excluded the Israelite to the inclusion and mixing of the non-Israel Gentile Kingdom, nation or church!

God has magnanimously decided to win back a forfeited possession by love. It was love which led Him to call Abraham, to express His will through the inspired Scriptures, to originate the Kingdom of God, and, as He only acts from love, to say when the splitting of the twelve tribes took place "This thing is from Me" (I Kings xii, 24). Our critics have no Bible proof to show that now all the tribes are merged into one—Jews!

Before His Ascension Our Lord withdrew the Kingdom obligations from the Jews and Luke records in Acts i, 3, that the forty days between the Resurrection and the Ascension were spent by Our Lord with his non-Jewish disciples "in speaking of the things pertaining to the Kingdom of God." How valuable would be the record of that Congress!

"To level and confound the different orders of mankind is far from producing an equality among them; it is, in truth, the most unequal thing imaginable."—PLINY.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

BY THE REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A.

QUESTION.—Will you kindly explain the words in Zech. viii, 23? I have been told that the Jews are to convert the world. Would this passage apply to that?—M. A. A.

ANSWER.—There is not a verse in Holy Scripture which says that the Jews are to convert the world. I have often heard it said that the Jews are destined to be the world's greatest missionaries, and the literature of some of the Jewish Missionary Societies also teaches this erroneous interpretation of the Bible. I have also heard the Jews called "God's Witnesses"—but here again it is a misnomer, as nowhere in the Word of God are the Jews called "witnesses." Further, how often has it been said that the Promised Land belongs to the Jews, and that the Jews will go back to their own land? Once more, be it said, the Promised Land has never been destined for the Jews, neither is there any verse in the Bible which says that the Jews shall own Palestine or the Promised Land. The truth is that so many preachers and Bible students have always confused the terms Israel and Judah, and in so doing have failed to distinguish between the redeemed House of Israel on the one hand, and the Jewish people on the other.

To Israel was given the "dominion," and to Judah (the royal tribe—the House of David) was given the "sanctuary" (Psalm cxiv, 2). Surely "Israel (not the Jews) shall blossom and bud and fill the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvii, 6). There is no promise given to the Jews as an unconverted and non-Christian race, nor can they become the world's greatest missionaries. In fact, they can only become Christian through the work of redeemed Israel, since it is Israel that is foretold to be the great evangelizing race of mankind.

The literal translation of the above verse is:—"Thus saith Jehovah of hosts: In those days ten men out of all languages of the nations take hold; they will take hold of the skirt of a Jewish man, saying, We will go with you; for we have heard God is with you."

When Zion shall come into her full redemption, and when Israel shall be fully restored with the Davidic Throne reinstated in Jerusalem, not only will the heathen then flow to Jerusalem to seek the God of Israel (through Israel's world-wide evangelization), but they will crowd together to Israel and to the royal Throne of Zion's David to be received into fellowship with Israel by adoption, since they will see that Christ, a Judah man, i.e., "of the house and lineage of David," is "Emmanuel," i.e., "God with us," the Redeemer of Israel and the Saviour of the world.

Quite possibly the number "ten" ("ten men," above) may be a parallel or prophetic allusion to the ten-tribed House of Israel, but more probably it is simply the Eastern and Old Testament symbol for a large number, i.e., a great and complete multitude (cf. Gen. xxxi, 7; Lev. xxvi, 26; Num. xiv, 22; 1 Sam. i, 8; Neh. iv, 12)—so great will be the influx and pressure of the heathen!

The words "take hold of the skirt" are a figure employed to exemplify the involuntary action of one who wishes to be listened to (cf. 1 Sam. xv, 27; Isa. iv, 1), showing how eagerly in those days will men of all races, nations and tongues, seek after Christ, cling to Him, and receive His salvation.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

THE usual weekly meetings at Headquarters will be held on the 30th and 31st January.

On the Wednesday afternoon Miss Evelyne Haynes will be the Speaker; her subject will be "Facts showing the untenability of the Modernist's view."

The Speaker for Thursday evening will be announced later.

The Harrogate Branch greatly enjoyed a very interesting and most instructive lecture given on January 14th by the Commissioner-General, Mr. John Leech, M.A., K.C., who received great applause at the close. Dr. Rutherford was Chairman.

It may not be generally known that Alexander Cruden, whose name is a household word among English-speaking people as the author of the Concordance to the Bible, and W. Holman Hunt, the famous artist who painted "The Light of the World," now in St. Paul's Cathedral, were British-Israelites. It will probably surprise some people to learn that the distinguished writer, John Ruskin, in his later years strongly inclined to British-Israel views, and wished to propagate them.

Colonel and Mrs. Horniblow are working to start a Branch at Camberley, and Miss Hamilton Hunter has arranged to speak for them at a meeting to be held on February 2nd. Our South Wales Commissioner, the Rev. Joseph Gay, A.T.S., has accepted the invitation of the Hounslow Branch to debate publicly the British-Israel position with an opponent, at the Council House, Hounslow, on Tuesday, January 29th, at 8 p.m. Mr. Theobald, the Secretary, writes: "There is no doubt the meeting will be a large one, and will attract enough to fill the Council Chamber." The subject to be debated is: "British-Israel, has it a future?" Friends anxious to attend should get to the hall as early as possible.

In spite of bad weather and a dense fog, a fair number braved the weather, and confessed themselves amply repaid for the effort, by the two admirable addresses from Rev. T. Sparshott Johnson at Leamington Spa, on January 8th. "Israel's Psalter in British History" was given at the afternoon meeting, and in the evening the lecturer showed how, in the "Present Crisis in Church and State," the only way to meet it was on British-Israel lines. Alderman Harold Mason, J.P., was in the chair.

Mr. W. H. Hesketh, J.P., gave a very interesting lecture on "Solutions of Difficult Problems" to the Liverpool Branch on January 10th, pointing out that war was justifiable under certain circumstances—when it was to defend one's own country from its enemies, or to help weaker countries, as in the case of the late war.

Those who have read the Rev. Pascoe Goard's book on "The Law of the Lord, or the Common Law" will be glad to have confirmation of his presentation of the subject in the following quotation. We recommend everyone to get Mr. Goard's remarkable book which gives such startling information of the Israel origin of British Law.

Extract from page 251, "Lectures on Early English History," by the Right Rev. William Stubbs, D.D., formerly Bishop of Oxford and Regius Professor of Modern History in the University of Oxford. Edited by Arthur Hassall, M.A. (Oxon.). (Longmans, Green and Co., 1906):—

". . . . we will now go on to the laws themselves; and I will here take England first, because our laws are the most ancient and purest specimens of the most ancient non-Roman law, and because our modern laws have developed from our ancient ones by a process into which very little that is Roman has filtered; unlike Germany, which by the fatal union of its kingship with the Imperial dignity became subject to the Roman law so far as it had any common system of law at all; unlike France and Spain, which had the full benefit of the earlier law of Rome, and whose conquerors learned to legislate for themselves in the form of selection from the Code of Theodosius. . . . . Of the early English laws we have extant codes of considerable length from the hand of Ethelbert, the first Christian King, Wihtraed, and other Kings of Kent; Ina, King of Wessex, Alfred the Great, Edward the Elder, Athelstan, Edmund, Edgar, Ethelred, Canute, Edward the Confessor, William the Conqueror, Henry I, and every other Sovereign from Henry II downwards."

Page 69: "It is due to Canute to say that the spirit which runs through the whole of his laws is a really religious spirit, quite as much so as that which appears in the legislation of the earlier Kings; but there can be little doubt that there was great significance in his putting at the head of his laws the determination to maintain the worship of the Christian's God."

We have frequent cause for complaint of the unfairness of our opponents. Here is one:—In Rev. Samuel Hinds Wilkinson's book, "British-Israelism Examined," there occurs a very serious misquotation from our book, "British-Israel Truth," by which Mr. Wilkinson makes us say the absolute reverse of what our book says.

The paragraph purports to be a quotation from "British-Israel Truth," and is as follows:—

> "St. Peter wrote to 'the elect' or 'the Sojourners of the Dispersion,' and these 'elect,' or the chosen covenant people of God, must have been Israelites of the Ten-tribed House—THE JEWS," etc.

What "British-Israel Truth" says is the PRECISE OPPOSITE of this:—

> "St. Peter wrote to 'the elect' or 'the Sojourners of the Dispersion,' and these 'elect,' or the chosen covenant people of God, must have been Israelites of the Ten-tribed House—NOT Jews," etc.

J. E. S. writes :—" It may interest you to know that I was an earnest enquirer after the whereabouts of Israel from early childhood, having my curiosity aroused by instruction given at the national school where I went as a little boy, and I continually questioned my mother as to where they might be. I found she became interested also, and one day she told me they were being searched for ; asking her where, she replied amongst the Afghans and Indians ; but in my childish idea that was not grand enough for God's people, and I said so, but later on she informed me that someone said they were the British. That instantly fired my imagination and I became enthusiastic. Then one day I was passing through one of the main roads of our city and I caught a glimpse of a book with a large star and a long sweeping tail across the top of the cover, and, being curious, I looked and found it read ' The Star of Israel,' a journal devoted to the discovery of lost Israel. I went into the shop and enquired of the lady if that book was for sale. She said it was ordered, but if I liked she could get me one, as it came out every week and was only a penny ; so I said I would ask my mother (I was then about twelve), who said I might order it. A notice appeared offering a parcel for free distribution to anyone interested enough to send their address to the editor, which I very quickly did, and I received a large parcel. Later, taking the ' Banner of Israel,' I have talked about B.-I. all my life, and I often think how wonderful that God should have enlightened me at such an early age, especially as my education was so poor that I really could not read the Bible for myself, as you know schools are very different now to what they were seventy years ago, and I left school at about nine years of age as I was left an orphan. I have often reflected on the fact which has become evident that many people in our city owe their first knowledge of the Identity to my early efforts under God's guidance.

" THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER is far and away the best journal I have ever read, and from week to week it becomes more absorbing in interest. God is abundantly blessing your world-wide efforts, and I pray constantly that the work may grow and spread, and enlighten our nation, especially those in authority, as to its grandeur and importance."

The Rev. Lionel Smithett Lewis, M.A., Vicar of Glastonbury (Author of " St. Joseph of Arimathea at Glastonbury ; or the Apostolic Church of Britain"), has written another book entitled " Glastonbury, the Mother of Saints : Her Saints, A.D. 37-1539." It is described by the Press as an admirable work, and it is well indexed. The following are a few of the comments upon it :—"A splendid collection of data." " A noble effort, a learned and able work." " The accounts of the various eminent personages are traced with a great fund of knowledge and with remarkable simplicity." " The story is a truly wonderful one." " To read this book will not only be an uplift and an inspiration, but an education in the historical sense."

Mr. W. Gregory writes :—" The following extract from Sir Chas Warren's book on The Ancient Cubit ' may be of interest to some of the readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, and perhaps some may be able to see a significance in it. ' It will be seen that the whole division of England into hidage depends on an elaborate system of calculation by eleven ; for example :—

	hides.
Bernicia	30,000
Dera	14,000	44,000
South Humbria	10,000		66,000
Mercia	12,000	22,000
East Anglia	30,000
Essex	7,000
Hwicca	7,000	44,000
Middle Anglia	12,000		66,000
Wessex	10,000	22,000
Kent	15,000
Sussex	7,000		22,000
			154,000

' The whole amounting, curiously enough, to one-hundredth part of the number of grains ancient in a double cubit cubed.' Is the above explainable, or merely a coincidence—or is it unconscious design and a proof of identity ? "

W. W. writes :—" I cannot fully describe the benefits I am receiving from reading the wonderful articles in your journal. I had never hoped to know such wonderful things this side of the veil."

St. Paul in Britain

OR, THE ORIGINS OF BRITISH AS OPPOSED TO PAPAL CHRISTIANITY.

By REV. R. W. MORGAN.

This very scholarly work, entirely free from all dogmatic statements, states a case which is self-proven to every unbiassed mind, that the Church in Britain owed nothing to that in Rome, but was established by those who learned the Gospel from the lips of the Christ Himself, within five years of the Crucifixion. The style of the author alone makes the book worth reading, and his citation of authorities stamps it as the result of high scholarship and deep research.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

THE DOCUMENTS OF DANIEL.—III.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD, F.R.G.S.

THIS document, dated 603 B.C. in the Ussher Chronology, embraces in its scope the full seven times of the prophetic period (2,520 years).

We are now prepared to take up the various documents which go to the making of the Book of Daniel, item by item. They will be found to be by far the most interesting and wonderful contributions which have been written regarding the history of the Empires of Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece and Rome to be found in literature; and they will be found to be still more wonderful as the Prophet reaches out into the still more distant future to portray the culmination of the Stone Kingdom in the universal reign of Our Lord; and with Him, of Israel.

Let us take two extracts from chapter one and consider the relationship established at the outset between the Daniel literature and the field of Hebrew and of general world history.

"In the third year of the reign of Jehoiakim king of Judah came Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon unto Jerusalem, and besieged it.

And the Lord gave Jehoiakim king of Judah into his hand, with part of the vessels of the house of God: which he carried into the land of Shinar to the house of his god; and he brought the vessels into the treasure house of his god.

And the king spake unto Ashpenaz the master of his eunuchs, that he should bring certain of the children of Israel, and of the king's seed, and of the princes;

Children in whom was no blemish, but well favoured, and skilful in all wisdom, and cunning in knowledge, and understanding science, and such as had ability in them to stand in the king's palace, and whom they might teach the learning and the tongue of the Chaldeans.

And the king appointed them a daily provision of the king's meat, and of the wine which he drank: so nourishing them three years, that at the end thereof they might stand before the king.

Now among these were of the children of Judah, Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah:

Unto whom the prince of the eunuchs gave names: for he gave unto Daniel the name of Belteshazzar; and to Hananiah, of Shadrach; and to Mishael, of Meshach; and to Azariah, of Abed-nego.

As for these four children, God gave them knowledge and skill in all learning and wisdom: and Daniel had understanding in all visions and dreams.

Now at the end of the days that the king had said he should bring them in, then the prince of the eunuchs brought them in before Nebuchadnezzar.

And the king communed with them; and among them all was found none like Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah: therefore stood they before the king.

And in all matters of wisdom and understanding, that the king enquired of them, he found them ten times better than all the magicians and astrologers that were in all his realm.

Digitized by Google

And Daniel continued even unto the first year of king Cyrus." (Daniel i, 1-7, 17-21.)

We are now to deal with facts of world history, and with facts of Hebrew history. Nothing of the imaginary will be found in these writings except as the constructive imagination portrays literal matter-of-fact history for the benefit of the reader.

Behind every statement and every picture of this wonderful Book is an answering concrete fact of history, except for the final triumph of the "Stone" Kingdom.

All of the Book of Daniel down to the fall of the Continental Empires, which took place in A.D. 1914–1918, has now become history.

Only the final extension of the Kingdom set up by the God of Heaven, in which it becomes "a great mountain" and fills the whole earth, remains to be realized. And surely that process is hastening to a conclusion before our eyes, in the extension of the Anglo-Saxon world.

The very first sentence of the first Document of Daniel gives to us a clear-cut intimation of the matter-of-fact character of the Documents of Daniel.

"In the third year of the reign of Jehoiakim king of Judah . ."

Was there a king of Judah called Jehoiakim? Most certainly there was. How long did he reign in Jerusalem? Eleven years. In what year of that short reign do the Documents of Daniel commence this record? "In the third year."

Now this is tying matters up very closely to the calendar of Hebrew history. The very year is established.

But the year is known by another test. "In the third year of the reign of Jehoiakim king of Judah came Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon unto Jerusalem, and besieged it."

This second clause of the first sentence ties the narrative also to the calendar of Babylonish history, which is world or general history. So the narrative is presented like a ship lying in a stream of history, tied by two cables to either shore. One cable runs to Judah and Jerusalem, and ties on to Judean or Hebrew history; and the other runs to Babylon, and ties on to Babylonish history. Babylon itself had but lately arisen as an Empire on the ruins of Assyria.

Moreover, the first sentence presents the contending forces and the opposing peoples, whose activities are to form the subject matter of the succeeding pages. Well done, Prophet of God! The matter-of-fact beginning of God's message concerning the Continental nations and the means of their coming into contact with Israel and Judah is brought clearly on the scene at the very beginning, with time, and place, as recorded in Hebrew and general history.

And now are introduced to us the author of the Daniel literature and his companions, each of which is destined to play a part in this great drama of history, the beginnings of which were so dramatically acted out, and the future of which was so graphically forewritten.

They are DANIEL—Belteshazzar.
HANANIAH—Shadrach.
MISHAEL—Meshach.
AZARIAH—Abed-nego.

The testing and establishment of these four youths of Judah is presented, and in the last sentence of the document the period of Daniel's activity as Minister of State, and Prophet of God, is stated.

"And Daniel continued even unto the first year of king Cyrus."

Chapter one thus constitutes the foreword of the Book of Daniel. It co-relates the literature of Daniel to the Hebrew and to the Babylonian peoples. It assigns to the matter contained, its place in geography, in history, and in ethnology. It takes up and introduces the setting of Daniel's part in the great prophetic story, as he produces his contribution to the one great prophetic scheme, to which every author in the Bible, in the Old Testament and the New Testament, makes his contribution, whether Prophet, Evangelist, or Apostle.

The main element of the literature now introduced remains to be noticed; namely, the fact that God is the chief moving force in the events of world history, and especially of Hebrew history.

When we approach this great fact in the literature of Daniel, we must be prepared for a presentation of God entirely different from that which we find in all the Prophets who addressed their messages directly to the Israel people. Again the reason is plain.

In the Israel messages we walk in the direct sunshine of the Presence of Jehovah. It is indeed as when the sun shines in its brightness and warmth on a pleasant summer day: for Jehovah is the God and King of Israel. That He is not a different nor in any sense a tribal God is manifest from the Daniel literature. While speaking of Him as the God of Heaven he also addresses Him as "the God of my fathers." So it is manifest that the thought of the Person addressed as "the God of Heaven" and as "the God of my fathers" is one.

Jehovah manifested Himself to Israel as He has not yet manifested Himself to the world. Jehovah established Himself in Israel for ever; and has dwelt, still dwells, and shall dwell, in Israel for ever. Israel lives and moves and has its being under the sunshine of the Divine Presence.

But not so the heathen Empires. To them He is "the God of Heaven." This is not so because of special favour to Israel; but because from birth and training through many generations Israel walks more or less in the consciousness of the Presence of the Lord; and by birth and self-determined training the heathen nations are not conscious of His Presence or of the sunshine which His Presence sheds. How the most intellectual of men strive to remove God farther away is manifest even among ourselves, in the Modernist striving to remove His supernatural Presence away from amongst us. The process is as old as humanity, and has achieved deadly success among the non-Israel nations.

How manifest is the warm atmosphere of the Israel Books of the Bible, written by Moses, the Psalmists, the Prophets, the Evangelists, and the Apostles; and how cold is the secular literature of the non-Israel nations in contrast therewith. Even in the Bible, literature addressed to the heathen is cold in comparison.

So Daniel, the Prophet of the Continental Empires, presents

Digitized by Google

God in that form which may be apprehended by the heathen world, namely, as "the God of Heaven."

The first manifestation of "the God of Heaven" as a present Personality is given in the revelation of the dream and in the interpretation thereof, as we shall see later on. The next revelation of the Presence of the God of Heaven, active in the affairs of the nation and active on behalf of the Hebrew children who refused to worship other gods, is given at the setting-up of the image of gold upon the plains of Dura, in the delivery of the three Hebrew children from the fiery furnace. The third is the dynastic dream of Nebuchadnezzar; the fourth is the handwriting on the wall at the feast of Belshazzar; and the fifth is the delivery of Daniel from the lions when he was cast into the lions' den.

These manifestations carried conviction in every case. Because of these Divine manifestations the messages of the Prophet carried weight with the kings and peoples to whom they were addressed. It is worthy of note that the physical manifestations of Divine power manifested in Babylon contrast strongly with the healing, saving manifestations of Divine power in Israel, where deliverances were wrought, the sick healed, and the dead raised.

The atmosphere of Daniel in connection with the presentation of God to the heathen kings and people is that of a cold winter's day, wherein the sun gives light, but its rays lack the power to warm the organic world into activity of life.

Notwithstanding the comparative coldness of the atmosphere, and the heatless nature of the light, God is seen to be the moving factor in setting up Kings and Empires, and in the throwing them down when their several days of opportunity have passed. In each successive case it has been necessary to remove the Empire which had become corrupt and injurious in the earth, in favour of new organizations not at first so corrupt. Thus Babylon gave place to Medo-Persia; that gave place to Greece, and Greece to Rome. So all must finally give place to Israel.

So we enter upon this great field of study of the invincible facts of truth and history, assured that we shall be enriched in the study and confirmed in knowledge and faith in the ways of God with men.

NEW YEAR MESSAGES.

From CAPT. A. H. F. YOUNG, R.N.R., Vice-President, B.-I.-W.F.

IT appears opportune at this time to offer my best wishes for the New Year and congratulations to the Joint Editors of and the literary contributors to THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER of Israel on the solid work they have accomplished, for, notwithstanding many obstacles, the success of this great teaching journal is established on the surest foundation, viz., that of the Word of God.

During recent years, and notably during 1928, very frequent and, one might add, apparently organized attacks have been made on the truth of the Bible by clerics mainly, whose duty it is to preach from the Bible they have striven to disparage. What then has THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER of Israel to say to this? The answer will be found within its pages, refuting again and again Biblical sceptics from the Bible itself. So much of this scepticism within the Church is the outcome of lack of understanding and lack of the spirit to appreciate one fact among many, e.g., that God formed Israel to be a peculiar people unto Himself for ever, and therefore that people which is a "nation and a company of nations" exists to testify to "all who have ears to hear" that the Word of God is true.

This I take to be the message to the world which THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER of Israel seeks to spread in preparation for the Kingdom of Christ on earth.

As we approach the fall of each year, is it a mere coincidence that a steady rise in the number of its readers is registered? This inevitably results in the desire of increasing numbers to search the Scriptures for themselves with the further result that they can but be the happier for it. This, then, is my hope and wish in the New Year.

From BRIGADIER-GENERAL W. H. FASKEN, C.B.

THE truth is great and it will prevail. I believe that the message of "The Kingdom," which your staff and your paper is engaged in proclaiming, is spreading like a flame through the Empire, and will hearten it to undertake in quiet trustful confidence the responsible work committed to its charge. We who believe in British-Israel Truth—and my belief is of 48 years' standing—may work without worry, knowing that God is still King in Israel, and that He will order all things, in His own way and in His own time, for the Coming of His Kingdom on earth. As individuals in that Kingdom we can obtain Salvation only through Our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

From MR. A. J. WAKEFORD.

THE wonderful thing about British-Israel Truth is the manner in which it seems to make the old young, the young wise, and all to renew their faith.

"Truth only needs to be for once spoke out,
And there's such music in her, such strange rhythm,
As makes men's memories her joyous slaves,
And clings around the soul, as the sky clings
Round the mute earth, forever beautiful,
And, if o'erclouded, only to burst forth
More all embracingly divine and clear:
Get but the truth once uttered, and 'tis like
A star new-born, that drops into its place."

"Slowly the Bible of the race is writ,
And not on paper leaves nor leaves of stone;
Each age, each kindred, adds a verse to it,
Texts of despair or hope, of joy or moan.

While swings the sea, while mists the mountains shroud,
While thunder's surges burst on cliffs of cloud,
Still at the prophets' feet the nations sit."

From DR. JAMES RUTHERFORD, LL.D., F.R.F.P.S.G., Vice-President, Harrogate Branch.

MAY the special ray known as the British-Israel ray penetrate every home in the Covenant lands, and every home beyond, bringing New Light; not a new creed, but the message the Great Master gave to His disciples when He said: "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come."

From "R. W. K."

TO the fellowship of the B.-I.-W. Federation, and to all those in the years past who have taught us British-Israel Truth, what do we not owe?

It seems beyond estimate.

Whole passages of Holy Writ, which otherwise had been obscure and unintelligible to us, are made clear and full of deepest interest.

We are learning what it is to love the Lord our God with our mind as well as with our heart.

We have found the Rock on which to build.

A very happy New Year to all readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER.

"BORN IS THE KING OF ISRAEL."

What blessing, what security, what glory lie in that great fact!

Let us carry the joy of it with us into 1929.

From the REV. W. ASKWITH, M.A.

ROM. xiii, 12: "The night is far spent." What a dark night it has been! Dark with superstition and ignorance. But the light is beginning to shine, and "the Day is at hand." That great Day of the Lord, which will come when HE comes in His great Epiphany. Now we have the light of His Word, which we must take heed to, and we, servants of the Lord, must let our light shine brightly. How much we owe to THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER for the help it gives us in understanding the Word of Truth! Specially in the wonderful promises contained in the Prophecies, pertaining to Israel, and their fulfilment in the British race. Surely the Day is at hand when "the Sun of Righteousness shall arise, with healing in His wings." We have greater confidence to-day in declaring the Truth, as it has been made clear to us, for we believe that "The Lord of Hosts is with us, the God of Jacob is our help."

From the REV. M. E. THOROLD, M.A.

LET us keep on Scriptural lines. Deep down in his inmost heart the "man in the street" has a conviction that the Bible speaks with Divine authority, and an argument founded on Scripture will appeal to him with a force which nothing can equal. "Back to the Bible" is a good motto for all in the conflict with mediæval errors and superstitions.

From THE BEDFORD BRANCH.

GREETINGS from the Bedford Branch to all members of our great Federation. THE NATIONAL MESSAGE lives up to Our Lord's injunction to His disciples, for it proclaims to all both the "Gospel of the Kingdom" and the "Gospel of Salvation," which are summed up in the following two verses in St. Matthew:—Ch. x, 7: "And as ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand." Ch. xxviii, 19: "Go ye therefore and teach all nations." Let us one and all then support this grand Cause, for by so doing we are hastening that day when wars shall cease and Christ's rule on earth begins. This indeed will be a "Happy New Era" for the world.

From the REV. S. OSBOURNE GOODCHILD, A.K.C.

IN sending forward your valued magazine for another year there will go with it thousands of very grateful hearts wishing it again God's speed. I feel that not only conscious but many unconscious prayers from Church and Nation are going up to the Throne of Grace, "Lord, open my eyes, that I may see," a thirsting for the revealed Truth. Your untiring energy through the medium of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE has done much to encourage a greater interest, yea, a deeper study in the sacred Scriptures; we now need more prayer, more confidence. "What God has promised He will accomplish." God goes before His people, He stands behind them, and His power is ever surrounding them. How much your paper has done, who can say? But with renewed help of God, "It will leap over the wall," and continue on its way to battle for the Truth which will finally be acknowledged, and only to be found in the God of Truth.

From ALDERMAN HAROLD MASON, M.B., J.P.

IT is with great pleasure that I write and wish every success to the weekly journal of the British-Israel Federation for the ensuing year. I consider that this paper and the publications and work of the Federation are the finest antidotes to Atheism, Modernism, and the many other isms whose chief occupation appears to be in denying the truth of the Scriptures, and, consequently, undermining the tenets of Christianity. I feel sure that, with the progress of British-Israel, the words of Jeremiah xxxi, 34, will be fulfilled, where everyone shall know the Lord, "from the least of them to the greatest of them." And I believe this will occur before many years have elapsed.

From MR. B. R. PARKINSON.

THE past year has been characterized by renewed attacks upon the Old Testament. The great Enemy who ever tries to throw doubt upon the Word of God has once again overreached himself. In the latest publication we have a most extraordinary hash-up of Old Testament criticisms, many of which have been long since exploded, and an attempt is made to contrast the unreliability of the Old Testament by admitting the veracity of the New. For some strange reason, unguessed by the general public, there would seem to be a campaign for the total exclusion of the Old Testament from the canon of Holy Scripture. It is none other than the progress of British-Israel Truth, that great key to the Old Testament, which has stirred up the Enemy to a counter-attack, the very inconsistencies of which are pointed out in the daily Press. His agents are unconscious whence comes this urge. We may indeed be thankful for the admission as to the truth of the New Testament, and hope that these misguided "theologians" may one day find out how and why they have been misled in regard to the Old.

Let us also be thankful for the "Press" which the Bible is getting in these days. Not in living memory has the daily paper given so much space to the Book of books. Often impartially, never irreverently, editors have found good "copy" in the discussion of the Scriptures, and sometimes it would seem that God has raised up witnesses in the Press to step into the breach that has been made in the witness of the pulpit. Let us pray for the Press, with patience, that the Almighty Covenant-keeping God will in His own time open the way for the revelation of the key which shall unlock the Old Testament and light up the whole Bible, to the astonishment of the Israel peoples.

From MR. H. E. TURNER.

I TAKE the opportunity the season affords to congratulate you on your many remarkable achievements in the past, with a prayer for Divine blessing, help and guidance on all your future undertakings; my earnest hope is that, what appears to me to be the summit of an Israelite's aspiration may be attained by the British-Israel-World Federation in the fulfilment of this unique and imperative requirement of the Lord God of Abraham: "I will yet for this be inquired of by the house of Israel, to do it for them"; on which depends the future sublime and glorious promises made to the Fathers of old, with all that may be intended thereby for Israel's benefit and felicity. With best wishes to all concerned for health and happiness throughout the New Year.

From MR. S. J. FRAME, Toronto.

THE only hope for the world is a return to the precepts laid down in the Bible, and it is only by acceptance of British-Israel Truth that the Bible can be thoroughly understood.

It was a great privilege to me to attend the Annual Congress in October, in London, of the British-Israel-World Federation, and I obtained great inspiration from it.

I was deeply impressed by the large number of leaders in the Movement, laymen and clerics, and their fine quality and sincerity. After leaving the Congress, I felt more deeply than ever convinced of the Truth of the British-Israel belief.

So far as Canada is concerned, the formation in the early part of 1928 of the British-Israel Federation of Canada has to a large extent solidified the Movement in Canada, and further substantial solidification will inevitably follow in 1929.

The British-Israel Movement throughout the world is a great Movement. Times such as these are followed by a spiritual revival, and this will come through British-Israel teaching.

From MISS K. HORNIBROOK.

MY heart is so full that it is difficult to express thoughts in words. Yet I should like to wish a very happy and successful New Year to the Editors, the Staff, the Contributors and the Readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, and at the same time to thank God for it, and for all the help it has brought in the past; interpreting both the Bible and passing events. Let us each one do our utmost to largely increase the circulation during the coming year, so that an increasing number of readers may share the blessing.

From MR. WM. WHITTON.

THE British-Israel Message is certainly the most needed MESSAGE FOR TO-DAY.

It gives people three precious gifts:

(1) A Certainty that GOD Is. We are assured that, in spite of the seeming confusion, God still keeps His people Israel-Britain "as the apple of His eye," and "No weapon formed against her can prosper."

(2) It gives us Wondrous Strength, Strength to win through any trial, for we know that all His promises are sure, and He that is for us is more than all that are against us.

(3) It brings a great CALM to our souls.

The B.-I. Message helps us to TRUST even when we cannot see, for we know that "Underneath are the Everlasting Arms."

From MR. J. K. MATHESON, Oxford.

VERY best wishes for the New Year to all believers in British-Israel Truth.

Judging from the truly remarkable progress which has been made by this great British-Israel Movement in the past, it would not seem unjustifiable optimism to expect even greater things in the future.

Even in this University city the obstacles of prejudice and indifference may be overcome by tactful perseverance. More speakers are needed, and there is no better recruiting ground than Oxford for young men and women of energy and enthusiasm who have had the advantages of a good education.

I feel that, at present, progress can be made in the University by bringing its own leaders of thought and men of influence into touch with the leaders of the British-Israel-World Federation. If contact could be made, there can be little doubt that Oxford would take a prominent part in the proclamation of the greatest Message of the age.

From MR. P. ALLEN.

I COUNT it a great privilege to bear my witness. I can never thank God enough for the knowledge of British-Israel Truth, which I first heard of in 1915, and would say to the leaders of our wonderful Federation: Restate and restate God's message to the nation by Moses, "Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward." Go forward, in knowledge and in faith. And to every one of the readers of the grand NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER, spread the good news of the "Gospel of the Kingdom," in season and out of season. Be filled with the Spirit.

Talk of the truth of it to all and sundry. "In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thine hand: for thou knowest not whether shall prosper, this or that, or whether they both shall be alike good" (Eccles. xi, 6). I can never thank enough our many writers to THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER for the help they have been to me. This knowledge has so strengthened my Faith that I want everyone to know it. "God shall bless us, and all the ends of the earth shall fear Him." (Ps. lxvii, 7.) It is quite right, as so often stated in our literature, that this knowledge makes the Bible a new Book to the reader, proving it a wonderfully balanced whole, the inspired Word of God written. May God bless us all in this work for Him, and grant that the coming year may bear fruit an hundredfold.

From MR. P. W. THOMPSON, M.A.

MAY 1929 be the best year that the Federation has ever passed through. It is ours to make it so.

One or two thoughts strike one as to possibilities of increased usefulness, and I will endeavour very briefly to deal with them.

1. In this material universe much turns upon questions of finance. Unconsecrated wealth is the curse of this world, a curse to every man in whose pocket it lies. But how is it to be consecrated? By adopting the ancient Israelitish system of definitely allocating a certain proportion of one's income to God's work, and by actually giving that proportion (not less than one-tenth) to God's Treasury. This habit is so growing amongst us that I never call at Buckingham Gate without hearing of some fresh case of some brother taking up the practice, and receiving the most definite blessing of God in consequence of this honouring of God.

2. In every meeting held under our auspices some person is present who is totally unacquainted with the elementary arguments upon which our case is based. Therefore, let one speaker at each meeting deal with our theme in a very plain and elementary way.

3. A striking argument in our armoury is that devised from the Seven Times. No opponent of British-Israel teaching has ever dared to tackle this problem. Let our own people thoroughly ground themselves in this subject so as completely to master it—not a very difficult task. They then have such a weapon of offence and defence as is irresistible.

I refer these few ideas, with all humility, to my fellow-readers of THE MESSAGE for their courteous consideration. Headquarters require funds for the carrying out of their onerous responsibilities. The Movement requires a constant influx of new members.

From MISS LILIAN SPICE.

TO all readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE may I pass on a thought for 1929. "In quietness and in confidence shall be your strength." Quietness—not in the sense of silence—but of peaceful serenity which floods the soul and leaves no room for anxiety or alarm. Confidence—not in the works of our own hands—but in the unfailing watch of our God in Whom we trust.

So let us press on with the quietness and confidence in our souls, and shining on our faces, that we may be living witnesses to the wondrous peace and security enfolded in the British-Israel Truth.

From MRS. M. BLOXAM.

THERE are few to-day who do not travel for either pleasure or business, and Ferrar Fenton's translation of St. Matt. x, 7, seems appropriate: "And as you travel, proclaim the fact that the Kingdom of Heaven is approaching."

ADDRESS AT CHURCH HOUSE.—II.

Professor E. Odlum, M.A.

THE PAPACY.

NOW we come to another, and I am coming in this case to that wonderful organization that is established all around the earth. It is a political, religious organization; it says so. It acts openly on that ground, and the reading public of the nations of the earth know that it is a political, religious institution. I am only saying the thing that it says, and the world knows. I would not for the world say a mean thing to hurt any people while I am talking to a mixed multitude, but if putting before a people the ordinary current history of the world hurts, I am sorry it hurts, but I am also sorry it must hurt. Now let us see.

At the head of that organization is the Pope of Rome, recognized in all nations of the earth as an official representing a marvellous organized power. It is twofold—religious and political. What does the Pope say? And remember he is the mouthpiece of the college of cardinals who appoint the Popes from time to time. They represent a very strong combination within the Roman Catholic Church. They are trained men, powerful men, experienced men, and they speak through the Pope, the official representative of themselves and the Roman Catholic Church. They say—"We are after the power of this world." They insist that the kings of the earth, the presidents, the rulers and their co-workers must recognize the Pope as the complete representative of the sovereignty of God on this earth. That is a big thing. They say it, and are proud to say it, and work accordingly.

It strengthens the position of the official who is the Pope, and it strengthens their position for him and them to teach that he is the Divinely-appointed representative of Jesus Christ on the earth. They take a certain course of argument in an endeavour to prove that to be a fact. Some of us have quite another view about that! Quite another view as to who is representative of Christ the King on this earth. We say it is the Potentate that comes down the line from King David. (Applause.)

Now let us suppose for a moment that he, the Pope, representing his Church, should say that he is the appointee of Jesus Christ for control of the world. Let us suppose that to be the case. Mark: IF SO, then he has a right to rule the world. Do you see where we land? If that false claim were true, then the sooner we could get under his power, his guidance, his protection, his teaching, the better—if he is stating the truth! He says it is true, and do you know that there are millions and millions, a hundred millions and more, in the world who say "Amen" to his teaching. He, like the others I have spoken of, has marvellous agents at work in the city of London, in the churches of Great Britain, in Canada, and every part of the Empire, and in every other country in the world; active agents, paid agents, skilled agents, aiming to get the spirit of confusion into the minds of our people. As soon as we hand the spiritual side of our lives over into his care, good-bye to free understanding, thinking, and to free, independent religious worship. That all goes together.

Digitized by Google

Now I say that while the Pope may be sincere, and while large numbers of his people may be sincere—and millions of them are good men and women—the teaching is basically wrong. That is the claim which can never prosper. Therefore it becomes impossible for his vision of life, and their vision of life in relation to the nations of the earth, to ever become effective.

In one of my books—I think in "Great Britain Great," also in "God's Covenant Man"—there is a statement of one of the great cardinals of the city of London in the last century. He is addressing the priests and the bishops and the high dignitaries under his regime in the Cathedral not far from where we are at the present moment. It was an immense convocation of the dignitaries of his Church. He says in effect, "We are out to conquer the world for Roman Catholicism; our greatest difficulty is when we run across the rock—(he uses the word, I believe)—the rock of Protestantism as represented by and founded in the British Empire, in the British Islands." For he says, "If we can break that rock, the stubborn will of this royal people, then Protestant Christianity is gone from this earth." That is the point, and he does not hesitate to say it. It is well you should know this. What does this mean? That the spirit of Protestantism in this world is in the British Isles; and the strength of that Protestantism is being felt of late in a remarkable manner. Do not make any mistake about it. No. Higher authority, Jesus, made marvellous provision for carrying on the work when He went away.

He says, "It is expedient for you that I go away." While here I can teach and give you instruction, but when I go away I will send the Comforter to guide you, the Teacher, your Comforter, the Holy Spirit, and He will be your Guide and will lead you into all truth. If so, do we need a human being at the Vatican saying, "I will show you how to act in the religious life"? Jesus says it is not His plan. It is His Spirit in the human heart! That is the difference. Which would you rather have, the command from the Roman city on the Tiber, or the whispering command of the Holy Spirit? Thank God, I accept the whispering of the Holy Spirit, and I do not have to consult anybody as to what I ought to do, or not to do, because my Comforter, my Guide, my Protector is always with me. He does not go away from me and leave me, and while I am expressing myself in this way I know you are saying the same thing in your hearts. I know these men on the platform have the same comforting Spirit. Do we want the Pope, or any human being to take that place? Protestantism says No, eternally No: that is the difference.

Now I will pass on. I am coming to No. 4. I wonder which of you can suspect who No. 4 is? I have spoken on this subject a few times before, and many people have come to me afterwards and told me they were surprised at my No. 4 choice, but thought I was right.

INTERNATIONAL JEWRY.

There is an organization representing about fifteen million people on this earth; a very strong organization. It has various names, but in general terms we can call it Jewry; if you like, International Jewry; or, if you like, you may call it Zionism. You may say it is the consolidated Jewish power on the earth to-day. It is a great power. Do not imagine that it has not power. Let me tell you there is no organization of so few a people on this earth that has such power as Jewry has to-day. What almost unlimited power it has in the realm of wealth; in industry; in the realm of the handling of the metals of the world; in the handling of diplomacy; in the handling of the moving pictures of the world; in the handling of the cheap literature of the world; in the handling of the clothing that we wear wherever we are on this earth; in the handling of the newspapers of the world. Do you know that practically all the newspapers are in the hands of the great Press Associations, and the Press Associations of the world are, in the large majority of cases—I should say 70 or 80 per cent.—in the hands of the Jews? So that by the various means along all these lines of activity Judah emphasizes and brings to bear upon the people a daily, hourly influence far beyond what we would expect from their numbers, and they are under the control and guidance of a small body of men. I need not go any further there.

There is Judah—a tremendous power. Now I am going to indicate the purpose. Judah says they are both Israel and Judah. Our Christian Church all over the world up to 90 per cent. says "Amen." What do you think of that? They are trying to prove it from the pulpits. They are saying that Judah is all the Israel there is in the world, so Judah and the majority of the Church teachers are standing side by side in that their claim. Where do you find yourselves? Judah acting on that teaching, and having the support of hundreds of millions of people in the world acting on the same belief, has a power there that you would not suspect. Do you see that secondary power of the Christian Church? How great! How vast! How far-reaching it is!

Judah says "We are all there is of Israel, prophetically and historically." Now you see where I am coming. The prophets have said certain things concerning the future; and they are right. They say the world is to be ruled from Palestine, the New Jerusalem in Palestine, the Land of Promise, the Holy Mount; the world is to be ruled from there in the future. And the world largely says "Amen." The Jews say "We are all Israel, and since the prophets say that Israel will rule the world, it therefore follows, on religious and prophetic grounds, that eventually we shall rule the world."

That is their logic. Christianity has been bungling that matter badly. If they, the men of Judah, are official Israel, before God Judah will rule the world at last. No escape from that. And since Judah is projecting itself forward with that conviction, and laying claim to all the promises made both to Judah and Israel; and as Christianity and its rulers are saying "Amen" to that very claim, then it gives Judah pretty nearly the control of the world. But as I told my friends, the Jews, over in Vancouver and elsewhere, "You are mistaken in your foundation claim. You claim to be Israel, but you are just one tribe of the twelve tribes of Israel, and there are promises made to the other tribes as well as to you. There were ten tribes plus one tribe, making eleven tribes, carrying specific promises never given to you, Mr. Judah. Remember, Benjamin always belonged to Israel, though Benjamin was taken away from Israel and loaned to Judah to be a light to Judah and a light before David. Get that clear? And the time came that according to God's own promise, and according to the prophetic utterances by Jeremiah, Benjamin left Judah and in due time finally landed in the British Islands A.D. 1066.

Moreover, there is Judah and Judah. A portion of Judah, from away back, and an important portion of Judah joined with Israel, and are among the Israel nations and company of nations at the present moment of time, though we cannot put our fingers on them. History tells that.

There is the Judah, the international Jewry of to-day, claiming absolutely all the promises made to the eleven tribes, and to a big fraction of Judah, their own brother. God will see to it that the promises are carried out and fulfilled in His own Israel that He has brought down all the long line of the ages. What is going to happen? Judah making a false claim, misrepresenting his identity, making himself out to be who he is not, must fail. Do you see that? Must fail.

Judah! If there be a representative here, do not make a mistake, you are one of twelve. You have your place, but you cannot take the place of the other eleven. No! No! Not so! You cannot do it. I might tell you, friends, that Judah over yonder in Canada—and especially in British Columbia—has invited me many times to speak at the Zionist meetings, and in their synagogues. Perhaps I am the only one in Canada outside of what you would call the Jewish Pale who has had that opportunity and honour. I hold a peculiar relationship to Judah yonder. I am not an enemy of Judah. I am not an enemy of these people I have been talking about. If I could bring them into the great truth, the truth indicated by that Book, the truth made clear by Almighty God by His many promises, and by the historic evidences we have through the ages, and so lead them into the right line of co-relating them to the other Israel peoples, I would gladly do it.

Now, friends, I have gone as far as time will permit. What about it again? We see Israel triumphant; that we all know.

JESUS CHRIST THE KING.

Friends, if dark days come because of wonderful chaotic movements of nations and armies and navies and ships of the air; if danger and threatening come, do not forget this Word—the Bible—do not forget it. God says you are safe. God says that His servants serving will be protected. Let me take a high example of a Servant serving who was protected when even the devil thought he had won. That was Jesus our Saviour, our Master, the Redeemer of Israel. He was serving; He made it clear to His disciples that He was serving; to make it clearer still in their minds He washed their feet. He says, "Now as I serve you, you go out and serve. You are at the head of my Israel peoples: go out, and serve." Satan was not satisfied with that kind of a Teacher and that kind of a Light in the world, so he instilled into the heads and hearts of certain people in Jerusalem and Palestine to put Him to death. Perhaps Satan imagined that when Christ was killed He would have the world in his own hands! Christ died the death yonder, and O! when I stood where Calvary is, and when I went down into the tomb where my Master lay, and when I sat down at the feet, so to speak—at the place where His feet were—(I dared not; and felt I could not sit at the head)—I sat there where His feet were, I thought of Him up yonder, and I thought of Him there. O! how near He came to me. How near that Spirit of the Eternal Father came to me when I was listening to some people talking, and thinking my own thoughts. Then when I went out from there and passed to Mount Olivet and stood where He stood, and looked up toward the blue heavens into which He went long ago, I knew that the devil who compassed His death was not able to hold Him in death. He Who had died for the time being, Himself rose again from the grave. He came up from the grave and went from there up to the place of glory, where He has been attending to His mighty enterprises of salvation. He left His Spirit behind to take charge of the suffering, praying, bleeding hearts of the children of men. I said then, "This great enemy of the world failed in his undertakings, and He, Whom Satan thought he had destroyed, rose triumphant above death. He rose, and is waiting to come and reign here in due time." When He comes, whom will He take charge of and rule through? We have given you so many Scriptures to show, you can have no doubt. He is going to rule through His Israel, down through the Millennial period. The great throne of the Most High shall rule triumphantly over those would-be world rulers. He will take charge. The final rule will be in His Hands through those He has appointed. And during that period, the Millennial period, you and I here, or elsewhere, will rejoice in the fact that the world did not go into the hands of the rule of the Soviets, League of Nations, or the misrepresenting power of Rome, or into the hands of Judah making false claims regarding his tribal power. We will know the great final truth that God's Word stands, down through the Millennial period; and you and I will somehow or other be nearer and nearer to the heart of Him Who is our Saviour and the Redeemer of Israel. Then, and perhaps not till then, true, real Judah of promise, the brother of Israel, will come into joint rule and final world safety and success.

THE MARCH OF PROPHETIC EVENTS—II.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD, F.R.G.S.

GREAT movements are in progress in the world at the present time. The slow and uniform progress of the movements, and the exceedingly wide range of the field they cover, cause them to pass unobserved by those whose minds are taken up with a multitude of things of less magnitude and of more rapid movement.

Among such great movements is the progress of the Kingdom of God in the earth, centred in the Anglo-Saxon world. In order to assess this fact let us glance at world conditions as they exist at this date.

ASIA.

Asia is a Continent occupied with States under tutelage. Some of the States of Asia are under external rule. Other States of Asia are free and self-governing. Chief among these is Japan. But all are under tuition. Japan has received her tuition at her own request, and has remodelled her own national life. China is copying, as well as she is able, the European civilization without asking for external tuition. But indirectly China is under tuition also, and so on. The States of Asia are all marching forward in a very marked and wonderful manner.

Digitized by Google

AFRICA.

Africa is under reconstruction. The engineers which are carrying out that reconstruction are Britain, France, Italy, and, in less measure, other European States.

EUROPE.

Europe may be looked upon as, par excellence, THE CONTINENT OF SINGLE SEPARATE STATES. Every State in Europe has its international boundary line. To cross that line every person not a citizen of the State domiciled within it must have his visèd passport before he can cross the border. Every boundary line has its marshalled hosts of Customs guards, to the detriment of the free flow of people and of commerce.

We do not forget that Europe took one strong step forward in u ification of States in Europe in the matter of the German Zolverein. Out of the Germanic States Germany arose, and is functioning successfully as an amalgamation of States now welded into one State. But the movement which began there has halted. That work belonged to a former generation, and the Germany of to-day is to be accounted as one State. With this exception, Europe is a Continent of single States, and so welded is Germany together, and so completely has the process halted there, even giving way to the devisive movement which drove Austria-Hungary apart, etc., that we are justified in saying Europe is a Continent of single States. This reiteration is not accidental. We desire thereby to fix attention on this fact, and the great thing it illustrates in the study we are attempting.

ANGLO-SAXON WORLD.

The United States, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa are lands occupied by Federated States.

The United States is a great country, having a population of a hundred and twenty millions of people. It is organized into about forty-eight separate States, all of which are federated together, and whose central Government is in Washington, D.C.

Canada is a country equally large and rich, having a population of something under ten millions. It is organized into nine Provinces, and an unorganized district all federated together, and having their centralized Government in Ottawa.

Australia is a similar large country, organized into six Provinces or States, including Tasmania, having their centralized Government in Canberra.

New Zealand is a unit in organization.

South Africa is a great country, organized into a Union of States, having its centralized Government at Cape Town.

Now each of these countries contains States or Provinces each equal in area to European States. But they have no international boundary lines between State and State, or Province and Province.

On the State or Provincial lines there are neither immigration nor Customs officials. Movement of people and movement of trade is free. One common administration directs and governs the whole.

This constitutes a whole series of experiments on the largest scale carried on simultaneously before the eyes of the world, having Federated States, a Central Government, the Common Law, and freedom of movement for people and commerce. Each experiment in these regards is absolutely successful.

If the experiment of the Federated States of South Africa, of Australia, of New Zealand, of Canada, and of America are all making a success of unrestrained inter-State movement of people and commerce, is it possible that the same principle may be extended to embrace all States of all nations?

Apparently the answer to the foregoing question must be: such unrestrained movement of persons and commerce cannot succeed while there are different national governments operating on different principles, organized under diverse systems, and administering diverse systems of law. But for the purely Anglo-Saxon nations, having one Common Law and one system of administration, there is no such barrier.

THE BRITISH COMPANY OF NATIONS.

We pass now to the consideration of the greatest development of all, namely, the great Federation of nations. This development is yet in its early stages, for although there is preferential movement of persons and of commerce, there is not free movement of persons and of commerce. That no doubt will come in the immediate future, as far as Anglo-Saxon people are concerned.

The Federation of nations to which we refer is found within the British Empire. Their unification is based primarily upon the ties of family national life, for Britain is the parent nation, and the other nations are daughter nations; therefore they are one in spirit and in racial mentality.

Their unification is based further upon the presence of Jehovah, the God of Israel, as the actual Founder, Father, and Head of our national life.

Our RACIAL charter, as we constantly remind ourselves and remind the Lord in our use of the Book of Common Prayer, was granted to our forefathers Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and has been continued to the House of Israel-Britain down to the present day; consciously or unconsciously every branch of our national family builds upon this national charter.

Our NATIONAL charter was granted at Sinai, 1496 B.C. (circa), is recorded in the 19th and 20th chapters of Exodus, and is amplified in that and the three succeeding Books of the Pentateuch.

Our common history is the history of Israel and the Celto-Saxon race through the ages to the present day.

The basis and confession of our faith is the Bible, which we hold in common as God's Word to us, and through us to the world.

Our Common Law, which is the rule of our individual and national conduct in every Anglo-Saxon nation, is the Law of the Lord, as given to Israel at Sinai, and as interpreted by Our Lord in His ministry, as preached by the Evangelists and Apostles in the New Testament, and as preached and administered in Anglo-Saxondom to this day.

The earthly representative of Our Heavenly King has been for 3,000 years past, and is still to-day, the monarch of Great Britain, in direct succession to David, the King of Israel.

In faith and practice; in law and administration; in literature and all social intercourse, the life of the Anglo-Saxon nations is one, and the storms of past ages, especially of the decade last past, prove that the spirit which unifies the British "company of nations" is not easily broken. One Lord, Jehovah; one Law; one Administration; one Redeemer, Jesus Christ Our Lord; one Faith; one Practice, which we usually term "playing the game," unites this company of nations into the British Empire, and in a wider sense into the Celto-Saxon peoples of the earth.

Into this racial family other races are being adopted in hundreds of millions; into this nation and company of nations other nations have come and share in the mutual peace, the mutual protection, and the mutual prosperity.

When freedom of movement, and freedom of commerce, is added to this company of nations, it would seem to reach the ideal. Conditions are such that grave barriers stand in the way of this at the moment, but men of good will, Divinely-led, will ultimately remove the barriers out of the way.

The question arises, "MAY NOT ALL NATIONS JOIN THIS GREAT FEDERATION OF NATIONS?" And the answer is: "Yes, when the nations are prepared to accept Jehovah as King; His Law as their rule of conduct; His Administration; Jesus Christ as the national Redeemer and Saviour, and ultimately their King.

When the Gospel of the Kingdom is preached as clearly as it is set forth in the Bible; its peace and prosperity, its equity and essential righteousness are made clear to the nations, there will remain no barrier, but the free choice of men and nations, to prevent that consummation. Indeed, Heaven itself is waiting for that moment, and to break out into the anthem of rejoicing, saying: "The kingdoms of this world have become the Kingdom of our God and of His Christ."

So in the rapid march forward, the Federation of States, the Federation of British nations, and the general drawing together of the civilized world, the world is being prepared for the universal reign and coming of Jesus Christ Our Lord.

The prophetic Scriptures show the following progress of the movement, the march of which we have been following.

1. The Anglo-Saxon peoples, plus the real Judah, will be united under one king; as the following quotations among many other passages show: "And one king shall be king to them all."

"And David my servant shall be king over them; and they shall have one shepherd." (See Ezekiel xxxvii, 15-28.)

2. Other nations shall seek to join in the Anglo-Saxon family of nations. "And nations shall run unto thee because of Jehovah thy God, and for the Holy One of Israel, for he hath glorified thee." (See Isaiah lv, 5.)

Zechariah seems to indicate that ten nations shall so do. Or perhaps the number ten is used to indicate a large number of nations.

> "Yea, many people and strong nations shall come to seek the Lord of hosts in Jerusalem, and to pray before the Lord.
> Thus saith the Lord of hosts; In those days it shall come to pass, that ten men shall take hold out of all languages of the nations, even shall take hold of the skirt of him that is a Jew, saying, We will go with you: for we have heard that God is with you." (Zech. viii, 22-23.)

The skirt of "him that is a Jew," or him that is of Judah, evidently refers to the king of David's line who shall be "king over them all." The ten men who thus lay hold of his skirt are evidently the heads of nations seeking to enter the Federated company of nations which constitute the Kingdom.

3. "All nations" other than the foregoing—plus pseudo Jewry—or "them which say they are Jews and are not, but are the synagogue of Satan" (Rev. ii, 9), shall be leagued together, and shall be gathered "against Jerusalem to battle," and in this attitude shall be found by Our Lord when "His feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives." (See Zech. xiv, 2-4, etc.)

Thus there will appear upon the scene two combinations of nations and powers: one led by Britain, the other by Russia, as we gather from Ezekiel xxxviii-xxxix.

4. This stage will be followed by the merging of all nations into one Kingdom. For this consummation Heaven itself is waiting, ready to break out into the anthem of triumph in which they proclaim, "The kingdoms of this world have become the Kingdom of our God and of His Christ." (See Rev. xi, 15.)

Our Lord Himself will bring about this final unification, which is declared to take place after the day when "His feet shall stand upon the Mount of Olives."

We are not making predictions as to future progress of these prophetic events. We are simply showing that "God Almighty is getting on" with the work of the great plan. As we have seen, the whole of the Continents are moving forward in line with the great scheme. Especially in the Celto-Saxon world is progress being registered. In the Federation of States, and in the grouping of the Empire nations, under the reign of King George, the present-day representative of David's line, we see that we are marching rapidly along prophetic lines. The process seems to be rapidly approaching that point in history, that international conjunction of which Our Lord spoke when He said of that point of history, "Behold, I come as a thief; blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked and they see his shame." (Rev. xvi, 14, 15), and that later point immediately following, already referred to, when "His feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives."

The national developments foretold we see transpiring before us. As to the Coming of Our Lord, the facts connected therewith will also be manifest in due time. Let the event show just what they are.

DIVINE AND HUMAN CO-OPERATION—III

AN ADDRESS AT HEADQUARTERS.

BY MR. B. H. NORTON (Editor of The Covenant Race.)

IF the only Israel help God chose to assist Him in His World Restoration Scheme were the Jews, how much help have they rendered during the Christian era?

Was it to them that He said, "Occupy till I come"? Did He expect occupation by the ones He had dismissed from His royal service? (Matt. xxiii, 28.)

An Israel nation is in "occupation" during His absence and Scripture points unmistakably in its fulfilments to the

Digitized by Google

British being that "National" people. Yes, the British people hold to God the responsible position of "Occupiers" until Christ returns.

Israel was selected not to be specially helped, but to be helped to be specially fitted to help others. God had designed a new relationship between some to help and some to be helped.

Will it not be admitted without controversy that the British shine the brightest when they are sacrificing for others?

When Sacrifices have to be made for the world's misfortunes does not the Mansion House lead the way? The "tenancy" of the "appointed place" carried with it great responsibilities for the world's good.

While God includes the whole world in His great Salvation plan, (Gen. iii, 15; John iii, 16), He only includes Israel in His great Redemption plan. Redemption is not salvation, it precedes it, as the tree does the fruit. Redemption is for a nation peculiarly related to the One who redeems. Salvation is for the individuals of that nation and for all others by virtue of that redemption.

Redemption by the Abrahamic process brought a nation back to God that He may make it a serving nation, the only people ever "known" by Him as such. Salvation brings God back to the sinners of that nation that they may become Saints, holy, separated servants, to carry out the great mission of which Pentecost was the initiative, that all who believe might receive eternal life.

Redemption is for Israel because God's choice is Israel for His servants. For this purpose He has chosen no other people. Redemption benefits go out from Israel because Christ Who died to redeem Israel "took upon Him the seed of Abraham." God has not reduced the world's benefits by apparently giving Israel more.

Any benefits accruing by virtue of Redemption involves the provision of One to pay for another. Salvation by the process of a price paid involves the provision of a Sacrifice. In Christ both are provided, He Himself being the One Who does the paying, Who is the price paid and Who is the Priest Who offers it. Here He stands in Eternal Supremacy.

Redemption and salvation provided through Abraham is God's unaided choice. But God, in order to aid men, calls man to aid Him. For this purpose His Only Son becomes human. God in Jesus re-imparts Himself to humanity conditionally healing the severance of the Fall thereby. For this reason Jesus Christ is designated the Second Adam.

God had mercifully thus to deal with humanity or sweep it everlastingly from His presence—lost, doomed, dead!

Here comes in the fact of Jesus potentially in Israel. Next in the New Birth, by faith, He penetrates humanity with Deity, as the morning sun warms the chilly air. Here is the fact of Christ, fulfilling, "Unto us a Child is born (Jesus), unto us a Son is given (Christ)."

Look at the majestic process of the great scheme. Christ has started man's restoration at the mainspring, the meeting-place of the breath of lives—the Soul. Here He appeals to man to believe in His great Sacrifice. Belief is the basis of all other acts of restoration. Around here lurks the one endangering sin. A lost soul means a lost eternity. Christ atoned for all other sins but this on Calvary. Not to believe is not to receive. Faith in Christ first assembles in the Soul. Faith is a God-sanctioned union between the Saviour and the sinner. Unbelief still binds the soul to Satan. Destiny is sealed by the character of association at death.

Having placed the Soul within the possibilities of an eternal rescue, His next attention is given to the Soul's abode—the body. He did much for the body while on earth. The body damaged by sin can be wonderfully helped now, but full body restoration is by resurrection, by standing it erect, which is postponed until the home is ready for the human frame, possessed and glorified. Here is wisdom.

The third and last act of restoration awaits the "new heaven and the new earth" fulfilment.

I.—Full emancipation of the soul is completed.

II.—The emancipation of the body is moving on to completion.

III.—He has gloriously limited the power of Satan. He dares not enter the grave. God "giveth His beloved sleep." There is Divine safety in the dust of dissolution. "He remembereth that we are dust" (Ps. ciii, 14), waiting there for the second "breathing" to speak the plastic clay, so long "marred," back to firm and eternal beauty. He will chase Satan from the human Home, Man's Earth, "When earth again is Paradise."

> "Then all the earth shall rise and bring > Peculiar honours to its King,
> Angels descend with songs again,
> And earth repeat the loud Amen."

The Rev. Pascoe Goard's booklet on "ISAIAH" is making a profound impression upon all who read it. The Rev. Arthur Pritchard, M.A., says:—"The author has dealt with the 'Koh-i-noor' gem of the Old Testament, Isaiah, with the skill and success of an expert, and being so clear-cut, it ought to be the 'Mountain of Light' which the Persian name doth signify."

Among the Books of the Old Testament none has attracted the reader more perhaps than the Book of the Prophet Isaiah. It has attracted them by the elements of greatness which it possesses. It is great as to its theme—the chosen people of the Most High. It is great as to its scope, world-wide in its message, and covering the ages then to come, and as yet unfinished. It is great in its unfaltering utterances, boldly setting forth specific events, and describing specific persons. It is great in the beauty and power of its form, being a mighty oratorio. It is great in its manifest inspiration, and in its Messianic prediction. It is great in its fourfold traversing, by as many paths, of the great historic period which marks the progress of the nations chosen of God in the work of the world's redemption, and relating the course of the great nations throughout historic time. "It floods the course of History with light, and History makes its message plain."

Mr. Goard's treatment of the subject is such as cannot be found in any other book. It is illuminating and unique and clears away difficulties. A copy should be in the home of every Bible lover. Price 1s. Postage 2d. The Covenant Publishing Company, 6, Buckingham Gate, S.W.1.

THE GATES OF EMPIRE.—I.

By JOHN H. TENCH.

"THY seed [Abraham's] shall possess the gate of his enemies."—Gen. xxii, 17.

"And they blessed Rebekah, and said unto her, Thou art our sister, be thou the mother of thousands of millions, and let thy seed possess the gate of those which hate them "—Gen xxiv, 60.

What was meant by the words the gate? It was clearly to be once the possession of the enemies of the Hebrew race, long after the date of the original conveyance to whom it was first made. That possession, the property of Israel's enemies—not one, but many—was promised by the oath of God Almighty, swearing by His own Being to Abraham's far-distant posterity. The fulfilment further was to be realized not in days anterior to Christ, but in Gospel dispensation times.

The writer to the Hebrews distinctly proves this, for he says the patriarch and Hebrew worthies all died having "received not the promise, God having provided some better thing for us."—Heb. xi, 39, 40. These were the Christians of St. Paul's day and therefore of ours, since the promise was never realized by St. Paul, nor by any age until now. The promise of The Gate, therefore, is to be looked for in Anno Domini times and not otherwise.

We realize the meaning of gate when we turn to the prophet Micah i, 9, where he is speaking of the enemies of God's people. "He is come unto the gate of my people, even to Jerusalem."

Following this line of thought, Bishop Patrick gives this explanation: "These gates are cities, consequently the country, for the gates being taken, the cities are entered, and the cities surrendered, the country is conquered."

Substituting the good Bishop's rendering of the word Gate, we read the promise as meaning that the seed of Israel was destined to possess those cities of their future enemies, which captured would enable them to dominate over their foes, subdue their lands, appropriate and possess them the wide world over; the fulfilment being first possible in Gospel dispensation times—that is in our own modern times.

Do we British (Covenant People) being Israel, possess such gates? If we look into our history we do. Take, for example, Quebec, a strong city and gate belonging to our enemies at that time, the French. The taking of Quebec in 1759 is one of the epics of modern military history. A young general named Wolfe, with a British force, arrived quietly by night on the heights of Abraham and defeated the French General, Montcalm, which led to the conquest of Canada, a dominion stretching from sea to sea.

This incident proves Bishop Patrick's definition for gate is true, for substituting Quebec for gate the city was entered and all the adjacent territory was conquered.

Take again, for example, the three gates of India—Madras, Calcutta and Bombay. At the time when these places were only small villages they came into the possession of the East Indian Company in a peaceable manner. But these cities once entered, all the country was conquered and the Indian Empire is now one of Israel's brightest gems. Had it not been for God's gifts to Israel of the gates, it would not have been possible for our late good Queen Victoria to have been proclaimed by the Viceroy on the plain of Delhi, in 1877, as the potent Empress of India, the all-powerful successor of the Great Mogul.

As Abraham's seed is to be the heir of the world, as foretold to the patriarch and confirmed by St. Paul in his letter to the Romans, it stands to reason that the British having such gates or cities in China as Hong-Kong, Shanghai and Wei-hai-wei, Bishop Patrick's definition of gate will again come true: "These gates are cities, consequently the country, for the gates being taken, the cities are entered, and the cities surrendered, the country is conquered." There is therefore no limit, except the world's boundary, to the territorial fulfilment of a promise which was indeed the central gift of four remarkable blessings God Himself selected as the best He could confer upon His obedient servant and friend—our forefather Abraham and his seed for ever.

Round that promise of the gate the other three revolve—namely, the national blessing, the multiplicity of seed, and the Gospel evangelizing function.

Of all the marks which identify the British nation with Israel incomparably, the most important and the leading mark by which our origin may be certified is "The Gates." In fact, the foundation of each and all the marks is nothing more nor less than the one we are now considering.

The chief identifications by which it may be confidently affirmed that the British are Israel are:—1. Multitudinous seed. 2. Possessing the "desolate heritages." 3. A nation and a company of nations. 4. Security in our island home. 5. Our boundless wealth. 6. Our maritime supremacy. 7. Our heathen empire. 8. Our colonial dominions. 9. Our possessions girdling the earth. 10. Our missionary enterprise. 11. Our national character for universal beneficence. 12. Our dwelling alone—separate from the Gentiles. 13. Our hatred of slavery. 14. Our ever-increasing territorial dominions. 15. Our ruling over many nations.

Now each of these identifications depends upon "The Gates" for its origin or development. Gifted with these, the other marks have had scope, and Israel has been enabled to appeal to them as evidence of her ancestry.

The "desolate heritages" foretold by the prophet Isaiah have only been secured by the operation of the gift to Israel of "The Gates," and the identification which points to our development into "a nation and a company of nations" has the same origin, for without the colonies or desolations of the earth on which to locate them, our Colonial Empire or Company of British-Anglo-Saxon Nations could never have had existence at all.

"The multitudinous seed" would have been no blessing, but rather a curse, to our nation had our teeming multitudes been deprived of the Colonial Empire of Great Britain. Without "the desolate heritages," without her foreign possessions, as outlets for the shoals of emigrants who continually leave our shores, the British people must have died of sheer starvation, and forced each other out of being in the narrow limits of our Western Isles. But the desolations of the earth, the colonial and heathen empires too, which enable us to provide for the redundant population of our race are ours. And how did we providentially obtain them? By means of "The Gates."

Digitized by Google

For these gates are cities, and the gates being taken, the cities are entered, and the cities surrendered, the country is conquered.

As to our "maritime supremacy," it is obvious that it depends as much upon our gates in foreign lands as upon our "wealth" which is itself a consequence of our possession of the gates. For these are the means by which the maritime power of our nation is strengthened and each foreign stronghold which is owned by the British Lion adds its quota to the imports which the home gates in their turn receive. Every such foreign gate acts as a secure harbour, coaling station, or rendezvous for our Navy and our commercial fleets, where our warships find safe refuge and from whence they issue forth to protect and consolidate our possessions in the regions beyond.

"Our missionary enterprise" which deals with "all the nations and the families of the earth," depends on Israel's possession of the gates. For without these our nation could not have had the influence or the power to force the Gentile nations and the great heathen world to listen to the Gospel message. God's plan is ever to subdue the earth by "Israel His dominion" in order that it may be brought to the acknowledgment of "Judah His sanctuary," and how should we perform the rôle of the liberators of the slave if we had not had the gates throughout the world? These give us the maritime supremacy and the naval power, which has thrown the policing of the ocean highways into our hands and constitute us as Israel, those elected "to let the oppressed go free, to break every yoke, and to undo the heavy burdens."

The gates undoubtedly secure us the power to increase our territorial possessions; for, as all men now see, each distant gate acts as the cause of the acquisition of further and yet more distant additions to the ever-increasing, ever-growing domination of the fifth monarchy of Daniel, "the Kingdom of the Stone" which God has Himself set up to subdue the globe.

Let us thank God that He has gifted our nation with the possession of "the gate of our enemies," because He foreknew that with this all the other promised glories, mercies and blessings would follow in its train, and that possessed of this Israel would become the most powerful, the most successful, the most wealthy, the most beneficent, the most Christian and the greatest missionary power on the face of the earth.

The last royal gift the Lord has given us through the Great War is "The gate of My people, even Jerusalem," and soon the Lord Jesus will come to reign over us, His chosen ones, "for ever and for evermore."

GIBRALTAR.

At the southern point of the Spanish Peninsula in Andalusia there is a wonderful rock known by the ancients as one of the two pillars of Hercules, by moderns as the key of the Mediterranean and the gate into Spain. It was called by its name in memory of the Saracen General, Tarif, meaning the mountain of Tarif. The rock is seven miles in circumference, 1,200 feet above the sea, with perpendicular sides facing seawards and landwards. It is separated from the Spanish mainland by an isthmus of low sand. Every available spot on the rock is protected by most formidable batteries, and all that modern ingenuity can devise has been done to make Gibraltar absolutely impregnable, It was captured by the English in 1704 by Admiral Rook. It was defended by General Elliott from 1779–1783. When the last assault was made by the Spaniards, aided by the French, their ships were destroyed by red-hot cannon balls. With the completion of the new dockyard works the value of Gibraltar as a naval base has greatly increased, for it can now undertake all the ordinary repairs and coaling of a large fleet.

MALTA.

This island is situated at almost the central point of the Mediterranean Sea. It distinctly answers to the idea of what men call the key of the position, but what God's Word terms "the gate" of the whole of the Mediterranean east and west of it. Malta is about 17 miles long and 9 broad. In the earliest times the Phœnicians occupied it, then the Greeks, then the Carthaginians, and finally the Romans. Later on it was ceded to the Knights of St. John. Napoleon in 1798, on his way to Egypt, treacherously took it from them. Nelson annihilated his fleet at the Battle of the Nile, and after two years the French had to surrender the island to the English as the siege was maintained with vigour and the besieged received no help from France. From that day to this Malta has been a British possession and is one of the most valued gates. It has been well fortified by our Government. In and near Valetta, the capital, more than 1,200 guns are mounted and a system of torpedo defence makes the neighbouring seas dangerous for an invader. There are great naval docks, refitting yards, magazines and stores. Small vessels of war have been built here, and Malta is the headquarters of the Mediterranean fleet. It has a population of over 200,000. Its Bible name is Melita, and it was here in his voyage to Rome that St. Paul was shipwrecked.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

WE call attention to the series of ten special meetings, announced overleaf, for February 18th to 22nd. Posters and circulars are now ready in large numbers, and we earnestly invite all to help us to get them distributed to the best advantage.

We are very grateful for donations in response to our appeal. We need a continual flow of these to enable us to keep our promise to raise £10,000 within the year, and we rely on our readers and all the friends to stand by us in this big undertaking. The plan and teaching of British-Israel embraces all the truths of the Bible, and the whole counsel of God, therefore it should be seen that B.-I. should take first place with all who have the light and who realize the mission of God's appointed servant nation.

The usual meeting will be held at Headquarters on Wednesday afternoon next. On Thursday evening, February 7th, at 7.30, Mr. Herbert Garrison will give his Lantern Lecture on "Australia," over which he has travelled many thousands of miles. A very fine series of pictures will be exhibited.

The meeting mentioned in our last issue at the invitation of Colonel and Mrs. Horniblow is to be held at the Y.W.C.A. Hut, Park Street, Camberley, to-day (Saturday), not at Glendow Cottage, as at first announced, owing to so many wishing to attend. Tea at 4.15. Address by Miss Hamilton Hunter at 5. Colonel Smythe will preside.

We gratefully acknowledge a parcel of books sent anonymously for our Library, also many useful volumes kindly sent by the Rev. Commander Roberts.

"A taste for books is the pleasure and glory of my life," said Gibbon. "It is a taste which I would not exchange for the wealth of the Indies." "As much company as I have kept, and as much as I love it, I love reading better," said Pope.

"History is the scroll of Prophecy," said President Garfield. "The world's history is a Divine poem, of which the history of every nation is a canto and every man a word. Its strains have been pealing along down the centuries, and though there have been mingled the discords of warring cannon and dying men, yet to the Christian, philosopher, and historian—the humble listener—there has been a Divine melody running through the song which speaks of hope and of halcyon days to come."

Lieut.-Col. E. S. J. Anderson writes:—"In the article entitled 'The Illness of the King,' which appeared in the MESSAGE of December 15th, 1928, the following sentence appears:—'From the East Coast of Africa a fast warship is speeding, now at this time of writing, through the Red Sea, having already passed in through the Straits of Bab-el-Mandeb, the gateway of tears.'

"I have been through the Red Sea on my way to India and from India fourteen times; the first occasion was in 1899 and the last time in 1925, and not once have I passed through the Straits of Bab-el-Mandeb. The Straits of Bab-el-Mandeb are situated between the Island of Perim and the Arabian coast; it is an extremely dangerous passage, and the actual fairway for ships, owing to reefs, is, I have been told, only about a quarter of a mile wide. The passage, however, between the Island of Perim and the African coast is much wider and has a fairway for ships, I am told, about eight miles or so in width, and therefore is much safer and is the route invariably adopted.

"This route though slightly longer, a matter of about seven miles, is so much safer that it is, I believe, practically always taken.

"Under these circumstances it would seem to be most probable that H.M.S. Enterprise avoided the Straits of Bab-el-Mandeb on her way home."

The Secretary of our Bath Branch writes:—"A goodly number of our members met on January 10th to listen to New Year messages from friends from all parts of the country, as well as from those on the spot. An inspiring time was spent together, and those present pledged themselves to do their best to double the membership this year. Much interest was aroused by an address on January 20th by Mr. Orr Walker, F.C.S., to whom we have been indebted for much help in the past, and who, we hope, will render us much more help in the future. By the kindness of a few friends we have been able to send a standard British-Israel book, together with a copy of the new 'Special Message,' to most of the clergy and ministers in active work in the city and district."

R. J. writes:—"I have had great pleasure and uplift from the pages of your journal, and I am trying to interest my friends in the great Movement. May THE NATIONAL MESSAGE enter every home in the near future."

* * *

J. B. writes:—"As long as THE NATIONAL MESSAGE is what it is, no opposition can hinder its advance to the four corners of the earth."

M. E. W. writes:—"More and more your journal seems to fill a place no other has ever done before. It is convincing and optimistic. Reading its pages one feels greatly strengthened to continue patiently in the blessed hope—the nearness of the Saviour's return as King."

* * *

J. W. S. writes:—"Your splendid paper is my weekly treat."

F. R. writes:—"Your lecturers and writers are teaching us a grand Truth. If more of the clergy would take up the subject they would have better attendances at church; their eyes may yet be opened, and we must pray that it may be so."

In spite of the prevalence of sickness owing to the 'flu epidemic, the Branches in Toronto have started the New Year with well-attended meetings. At the Toronto East Branch on January 2nd, the President, Mr. Gladstone Brown, delivered an inspiring New Year's message. The speaker at the Central Branch on January 3rd was Mr. A. A. Robeson, the Secretary of the Canadian Federation. Taking as his subject "The World-Wide Conspiracy," he traced the hidden hand in world history, and closed with a warning to his hearers to be on the alert during this New Year.

Mr. John Leech visited the Barking Branch on January 11th and gave a most interesting address on "God's Inheritance." The chair was taken by the local Branch Secretary, Mr. J. W. Gray, deputizing for the President, he being away ill. The address was extremely helpful, and questions were answered by the lecturer.

Under the chairmanship of the Rev. R. H. Chaplin, M.A., Rector of Swalecliffe, at the afternoon meeting on January 14th, the Herne Bay Branch thoroughly enjoyed a lecture given by Rev. T. Sparshott Johnson, M.A., dealing with the Psalms of Israel in the Prayer Book, during which he stated that Archbishop Cranmer offered to show the Bishops of his day that the same Prayer Book had been used for fifteen hundred years before then. Mr. E. W. Angell presided at the evening meeting. The Branch at St. Leonards gave a cordial welcome to Mr. Johnson, who visited there for the first time on the 15th, and in spite of inclement weather attendances were highly satisfactory. Mr. W. G. Holbrook was in the chair. On the 16th Mr. Johnson was at Bexhill-on-Sea, under the presidency of Mr. J. Arthur Jutsum in the afternoon, and Mr. J. B. Avery in the evening. The two lectures were greatly appreciated and were well reported in the local Press.

Bingley, Ilkley, Halifax and Bradford Branches were recently visited by the Commissioner-General, Mr. John Leech, whose lectures received great applause from good audiences.

One of the States of America is known as the great wheat-growing State, and this came about from the following beginnings :—A Scotch settler sowed one ear of wheat which yielded 560 grains, all of which he sowed and had in due course therefrom one-fifth of a bushel ; sowing this he next had a yield of seventeen bushels ; sowing these also he had a harvest of seventeen acres. In the following year he sowed 100 bushels and reaped 2,800 bushels ; a wonderful example of faithful sowing. May not this encourage us to sow and sow the good seed of Israel Truth by means of the faithfully-spoken word in season, and by the passing on of our literature ?

Our readers will, we think, be interested in the following extract from one of the famous Midlothian speeches by the late William Ewart Gladstone :

" I believe we are all united in the fond attachment to the great country to which we belong ; to the great Empire which has committed to it a trust and function from Providence, as special and remarkable as was ever entrusted to any portion of the family of man. When I speak of that trust and that function I feel that words fail. I cannot tell you what I think of the nobleness of the inheritance which has descended upon us, of the sacredness of the duty of maintaining it. It is a part of my being, of my flesh and blood, of my heart and soul."

A coloured chart (5 colours), size 40 in. by 28 in., with companion volume, Depicting the thrilling history of the Anglo-Saxon Race all down the ages (i.e., The British Empire and the British-born stock of America). The companion volume (demy 4to.) 96 pages, numbered in sections to correspond with chart.

Price of Chart, including Book, bound limp cloth, 4/6 By post 4/11

PUBLISHER'S NOTICE.

The coloured Chart depicts in clear, simple form, historically and by aid of maps, the amazing story of the Anglo-Saxon Race.

It traces the genealogies, by direct succession, of Their Majesties King George V., Queen Mary, and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, back through the Royal House of David to Adam. It shows how the British Coat of Arms is built up from ancient emblems given to our race some 4,000 years ago. The Chart illustrates the contemporary history of the Houses of Judah and Israel. Starting with the genealogy from Adam to Jacob's twelve sons, it shows the beginning of the chosen Race from Hebrew stock ; includes the Covenant Promises to Abraham (fulfilled in the Anglo-Saxons, and in no other race) ; gives the Promises to Judah of the Sceptre ; to Ephraim of the Birthright : and to David of the perpetual Throne. Continuing, it carries on the contemporary history of the two Houses of Judah and Israel till each went into captivity—the story of the House of Israel from the reign of David, 1056 B.C. to their deportation to Assyria in 721 B.C., then a consecutive narrative of their migrations (with map) down to their final arrival in the British Isles in A.D. 1066. The contemporary history of the House of Judah, till they also were carried captive, in two sections. Section I. follows the Jewish Race down to A.D. 70 ; includes our Lord's Life and Death ; the final siege of Jerusalem, and the scattering of the Jews all over the world. Section II. traces Princess Tamar Tephi and the prophet Jeremiah into Ireland—her marriage, and the continuation of the Royal Line of David ; tells the story of the Coronation Stone and how it was finally deposited in Westminster Abbey.

The history of the Anglo-Saxons in America—the Tribe of Manasseh—is also included in the Chart. The Book (numbered to correspond with the chart) amplifies the history and shows the identity of ten-tribed Israel with the British Empire and the U.S.A.

THE ORIGIN OF THE ENGLISH

By MAJOR B. de W. WELDON. SECOND EDITION (REVISED)

Here is a book which once read will be read again and again.

Our history traced for three thousand years. Of necessity, many details must be left out, for the whole of our history could not be compressed into the two hundred and eighty pages this book contains. The fact that a second edition has been called for is evidence of the value of this work for students of the history of the English People.

"The present writer does not claim that the story to be told in the following pages is anything of a new discovery. All the essential facts were in the possession of a man who lived many centuries ago, in the reign of the Emperor Justinian. And one German at least, the philologist Grimm, early in the last century knew a good deal more about the identity of Israel than he cared to disclose in books which were intended to glorify the great German race.

The chapters that will now be written have to contain many Biblical quotations. But they are no more designed as a theological disquisition than a Government blue book or a standard history would be.

They are merely the missing pages of the history of Israel, the pages that centuries ago were blotted out until the time came when they might safely be restored to their proper place in the world's historical libraries. All histories are dull reading; and condensed history is perhaps the worst of all, where no time can be given up to the 'drum and trumpet' details, interesting though these might be made.

This book is no exception; having to be condensed, many interesting points must be omitted. Before our case can be established, many witnesses will have to be called; men who lived in different ages and in countries far apart—prophets and saints, as well as dignitaries of the Church; Greeks and Romans and Jews; pagans from the North; modern scholars of the most profound learning; and writers of gossip who would be exceedingly astonished to find fragments of their work still in existence after so many centuries have elapsed. All these diverse sources of information will be placed on a friendly footing of equal credibility before the reader."

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

THE DOCUMENTS OF DANIEL.—IV.

By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard, F.R.G.S.

This document is dated 580 B.C. (Ussher). Its scope is the full seven times of prophecy.

We are now to take account of one of the most remarkable of historical documents in existence, viz., the second chapter of Daniel.

In Exodus xix and xx we have the setting-up of THE KINGDOM OF GOD IN THE EARTH, the basis of which is the nation Israel.

In the second chapter of Daniel we have THE CHARTER OF THE SUCCESSION OF CONTINENTAL EMPIRES, which began with Nebuchadnezzar, and carried forward in unbroken sequence to the modern Empires of Europe and Asia.

In the Babylonian Charter there are included the four successive Empires, viz., Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece, Rome. Also legal notice of the new Kingdom which the God of Heaven should set up contemporaneously with "these kings" of the Babylonian succession, which kingdom should never be destroyed. It is a very wonderful document, and its force is as great to-day as it was on the day that it was issued. It constitutes a mandate of "the God of Heaven."

First we note the date of the document. "The second year of the REIGN of Nebuchadnezzar, Nebuchadnezzar dreamed dreams, wherewith HIS SPIRIT WAS TROUBLED. . . ." This year is definitely known in Babylonian history.

This was the first experience that King Nebuchadnezzar had of the Voice of the Most High. It was a strange experience, troubling to his spirit and destructive of his rest. But neither memory nor understanding of that which had disturbed his spirit remained with him. Only there remained unrest.

The king now proceeded to call for the help of those whom his philosophy indicated as the persons proper to be of use to him in this new experience. He turned to the wise men whose qualifications would equal those of which we read in chapter one as the qualifications required in the young Hebrew princes: "skilful in all wisdom, and cunning in knowledge, and understanding science." The list of those to whom he applied is as follows:—

"Then the king commanded to call the magicians, and the astrologers, and the sorcerers, and the Chaldeans, for to shew the king his dreams. So they came and stood before the king."

There is no doubt that these men from the various Colleges represented the culture and learning of the day. Doubtless also, when called to stand before the king, they came with all self-confidence, believing that whatsoever matter was brought to their attention, they would be sufficient to deal with the same. The king introduced the matter to them in the following terms:—

"And the king said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and my spirit was troubled to know the dream.

Then spake the Chaldeans to the king in Syriack, O king, live for ever: tell thy servants the dream, and we will shew the interpretation.

The king answered and said to the Chaldeans, The thing is gone from me: if ye will not make known unto me the dream, with the interpretation thereof, ye shall be cut in pieces, and your houses shall be made a dunghill.

But if ye shew the dream, and the interpretation thereof, ye shall receive of me gifts and rewards and great honour: therefore shew me the dream, and the interpretation thereof.

They answered again and said, Let the king tell his servants the dream, and we will shew the interpretation of it.

The king answered and said, I know of certainty that ye would gain the time, because ye see the thing is gone from me.

But if ye will not make known unto me the dream, there is but one decree for you: for ye have prepared lying and corrupt words to speak before me, till the time be changed: therefore tell me the dream, and I shall know that ye can shew me the interpretation thereof.

The Chaldeans answered before the king, and said, There is not a man upon the earth that can shew the king's matter: therefore there is no king, lord, nor ruler, that asked such things at any magician, or astrologer, or Chaldean.

And it is a rare thing that the king requireth, and there is none other that can shew it before the king, except the gods, whose dwelling is not with flesh.

For this cause the king was angry and very furious, and commanded to destroy all the wise men of Babylon.

And the decree went forth that the wise men should be slain; and they sought Daniel and his fellows to be slain." (Daniel ii, 3-13.)

It will be seen that the scholars of Babylon were confronted with a question which could not be answered from any knowledge in their possession, neither could the subject be investigated by any process known to their philosophy; yet an answer was demanded on pain of death.

They had reached a point which sooner or later all scholars, scientists and philosophers must reach, viz., the boundary of human knowledge and wisdom. The answer lay in regions of fact and truth beyond that boundary of naturally-obtained human knowledge; in the realm of REVEALED TRUTH.

In approaching similar questions, namely, that of Divine revelation, and the whole field of Divine personal activity in the world of men and things, the scholar of the twentieth century is in exactly the same position as were the scholars of Babylon, and are unable to answer the questions constantly propounded to them by king and people. Only the voice of the prophet of the Most High, with ear attuned to the spiritual world and to the Divine Voice, can give the answer.

Because the scholars of that day had assumed all knowledge, and now were found to be without knowledge in the realm of the Divine activity, they came under condemnation and sentence of death.

There were, however, among them men of another race in whom dwelt the spirit of prophecy. To these the demand of the king, although calling for supernatural powers, offered no ultimate difficulty. True, from their natural resources they were equally helpless with other scholars; but where knowledge failed their faith might triumph. They made direct appeal to the Almighty for supernatural interference and information.

Their appeal was not in vain. Such appeals are never in vain when made by those who have qualified to seek essential knowledge in the realm of faith through Divine inspiration.

The result is recorded as follows:—

"Then Daniel answered with counsel and wisdom to Arioch the captain of the king's guard, which was gone forth to slay the wise men of Babylon:

He answered and said to Arioch the king's captain, Why is the decree so hasty from the king? Then Arioch made the thing known to Daniel.

Then Daniel went in, and desired of the king that he would give him time, and that he would shew the king the interpretation.

Then Daniel went to his house, and made the thing known to Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, his companions:

That they would desire mercies of the God of heaven concerning this secret; that Daniel and his fellows should not perish with the rest of the wise men of Babylon.

Then was the secret revealed unto Daniel in a night vision. Then Daniel blessed the God of heaven.

Daniel answered and said, Blessed be the name of God for ever and ever: for wisdom and might are his:

And he changeth the times and the seasons: he removeth kings, and setteth up kings: he giveth wisdom unto the wise, and knowledge to them that know understanding:

He revealeth the deep and secret things: he knoweth what is in the darkness, and the light dwelleth with him.

I thank thee, and praise thee, O thou God of my fathers, who hast given me wisdom and might, and hast made known unto me now what we desired of thee: for thou hast now made known unto us the king's matter.

Therefore Daniel went in unto Arioch, whom the king had ordained to destroy the wise men of Babylon: he went and said thus unto him; Destroy not the wise men of Babylon: bring me in before the king, and I will shew unto the king the interpretation.

Then Arioch brought in Daniel before the king in haste, and said thus unto him, I have found a man of the captives of Judah, that will make known unto the king the interpretation.

The king answered and said to Daniel, whose name was Belteshazzar, Art thou able to make known unto me the dream which I have seen, and the interpretation thereof?

Daniel answered in the presence of the king, and said, The secret which the king hath demanded cannot the wise men, the astrologers, the magicians, the soothsayers, shew unto the king;

But there is a God in heaven that revealeth secrets, and maketh known to the king Nebuchadnezzar what shall be in the latter days. Thy dream, and the visions of thy head upon thy bed, are these;" (Daniel ii, 14-28.)

Let us note carefully the point to which we have been brought by this wonderful narrative, viz., The manifestation of the fact that neither human scholarship, knowledge of fact nor foresight could obtain the slightest inkling of the tremendous issues in world history then being introduced in the person and Empire of Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon.

Here they were, at the beginning of 2,520 years of tremendous world movement which should supply the materials for the bulk of world history during that period, and the matter was unsuspected and unknown to the scholars of the day.

From a different source entirely, namely, from Divine inspiration, the information came, and, by the direct interference of the God of Heaven, the great series of international movements was inaugurated, started on its inevitable course, and revealed to the kings and peoples involved, and to the world.

Listen now to the words which follow as a proclamation directly made from the God of Heaven :—

"As for thee, O king, thy thoughts came into thy mind upon thy bed, what should come to pass hereafter : and he that revealeth secrets maketh known to thee what shall come to pass.

But as for me, this secret is not revealed to me for any wisdom that I have more than any living, but for their sakes that shall make known the interpretation to the king, and that thou mightest know the thoughts of thy heart.

Thou, O king, sawest, and behold a great image. This great image, whose brightness was excellent, stood before thee ; and the form thereof was terrible.

This image's head was of fine gold, his breast and his arms of silver, his belly and his thighs of brass,

His legs of iron, his feet part of iron and part of clay.

Thou sawest till that a stone was cut out without hands, which smote the image upon his feet that were of iron and clay, and brake them to pieces.

Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold, broken to pieces together, and became like the chaff of the summer threshingfloors ; and the wind carried them away, that no place was found for them : and the stone that smote the image became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth.

This is the dream ; and we will tell the interpretation thereof before the king.

Thou, O king, art a king of kings : for the God of heaven hath given thee a kingdom, power, and strength, and glory.

And wheresoever the children of men dwell, the beasts of the field and the fowls of the heaven hath he given into thine hand, and hath made thee ruler over them all. Thou art this head of gold.

And after thee shall arise another kingdom inferior to thee, and another third kingdom of brass, which shall bear rule over all the earth.

And the fourth kingdom shall be strong as iron : forasmuch as iron breaketh in pieces and subdueth all things : and as iron that breaketh all these, shall it break in pieces and bruise.

And whereas thou sawest the feet and toes, part of potters' clay, and part of iron, the kingdom shall be divided ; but there shall be in it of the strength of the iron, forasmuch as thou sawest the iron mixed with miry clay.

And as the toes of the feet were part of iron, and part of clay, so the kingdom shall be partly strong, and partly broken.

And whereas thou sawest iron mixed with miry clay, they shall mingle themselves with the seed of men : but they shall not cleave one to another, even as iron is not mixed with clay.

And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed : and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever.

Forasmuch as thou sawest that the stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, and that it brake in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold ; the great God hath made known to the king what shall come to pass hereafter : and the dream is certain, and the interpretation thereof sure." (Daniel ii, 29-45.)

Let us consider the clear-cut point to which we have now arrived. Either we must agree that Nebuchadnezzar received the knowledge he sought so eagerly, by supernatural means, and thus acknowledge the whole fact of Divine revelation ; the fact of Divine interference in world affairs, and in the affairs of individuals ; and we must acknowledge that Daniel obtained his knowledge through specific definite practical answer to prayer ; or we must deny the record.

But against such denial is the historic fact, patent to the mind of all readers, that in the record, which was made at least before "the Seventy" translated the Old Testament Scriptures into Greek, there is placed before us the sequent outline of world Empires, together with most obvious details of epoch-making periods and events which strangely, wonderfully, indeed supernaturally, have been fulfilled in world history up to date, and which are still in process of fulfilment before our eyes.

Such overwhelming facts would render our unsupported denial of the record absurd. So we have an historic demonstration in a heathen court of (a) Divine revelation, (b) Divine interference in world affairs, and (c) Divine answer to prayer. The establishment of these things is of greater importance to the world than the setting-up of Empires could ever be.

This matter brought a crisis to the experience of the King of Babylon and he reacted to that crisis, and to the conviction arising therefrom, as follows :—

"Then the king Nebuchadnezzar fell upon his face, and worshipped Daniel, and commanded that they should offer an oblation and sweet odours unto him.

The king answered unto Daniel, and said, Of a truth it is, that your God is a God of gods, and a Lord of kings, and a revealer of secrets, seeing thou couldest reveal this secret." (Daniel ii, 46-47.)

May it be that we also shall fall down in the attitude of worship and accept and declare the great fact of Divine revelation, Divine interference, and Divine answer to prayer.

NEW YEAR MESSAGES.

From the REV. GILBERT DAVIES, M.A.

THE past year has witnessed to an increasing amount of interest being shown in all parts of the country in the wonderful and absorbing message of the "Gospel of the Kingdom," which those who write for and contribute to THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER week by week are, with such marked ability and devotion to the study of the Word of God, especially the prophecies and the promises to Israel, bringing before their readers in the wonderful and arresting days in which we live. A marked awakening has indeed taken place within the past few years in the careful and reverent study of the Old Testament prophecies in relation to God's promises to His servants, and to the Israel Nation, promises which hitherto have been for generations erroneously given to the Church; an interpretation which has, alas! opened the door to the higher critics and to "modernism" and scepticism, because such an interpretation led nowhere, and the spiritualizing of promises which should have been interpreted literally, wherever possible, made it impossible to link up the Old and New Testaments. The bulk of the promises are largely premillennial, and the key to the Old Testament is the Nation Israel, the finding of which makes the Holy Bible, God's revelation to mankind in this Dispensation, the Israel Dispensation, a new, inspiring and living Book. Moreover, it fills believers and British-Israelites with courage and with hope, even in the darkest hour, knowing that God, having revealed in prophecy His designs as the Great Architect of the Universe, has shaped and will shape the destinies of the Nation, whom He has dignified with the privilege and responsibility of carrying the Good News of as well as THE GOSPEL OF SALVATION, through Our Lord Jesus Christ, to the uttermost corners of the earth.

Digitized by Google

Preachers of the Gospel now have, for the first time, so it would appear, in these "last days," a complete, and not a partial, message, and THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, in my opinion, stands easily first among all the evangelical publications in having brought large numbers of people of all the churches, and of none, into the full light of the national and spiritual blessings promised to BRIT-ISH—the COVENANT RACE—ISRAEL, making the Word of God an accurate historical and geographical chart, and leading to devotion, patriotism and hope.

May God's richest blessings be with all B.-I. workers during this year, 1929, is my earnest prayer.

From MR. S. E. STEELE.

MY first word is one of thanks to Almighty God, and then congratulations to all concerned, for the marvellous increase of interest and spiritual advance manifested during 1928. Let us look forward and go forward, always remembering the promise of Our Lord, "I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world," and press onward until, by the help and grace of God, we shall complete the work He has given us to do. We have much to encourage us.

The Vicar of the parish in which I reside asked the Superintendent of the Sunday School to request me to take an adult Bible class every Sunday afternoon. I replied: "Neither the Vicar nor yourself may agree with my exposition of the Bible." He said: "You mean regarding Israel; I see no objection to that, nor does the Vicar." I have consented to take the class on that understanding.

I wish every member would take an extra copy of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE and place it in sympathetic hands.

"How empty learning, and how vain is art,
But as it mends the life, and guides the heart."—YOUNG.

TO OUR READERS.

From the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard.

DEAR READERS OF THE NATIONAL MESSAGE,

This is a personal word from myself to you.

It is now more than seven years since I began to address you in the pages of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE.

Some years before that I began to send out my special contribution to the British-Israel world in book form.

Many years earlier still it had been my privilege to send out my message from the pulpit and platform.

Since 1914 it has been my destiny to give my whole energy to this great task.

You have gone with me, more or less, in reading the books, articles and reports of addresses which have appeared from time to time.

As a theologian it has been my desire to tell our story so as to help clergymen, ministers, Sunday school teachers and Christian workers by presenting the Truth as a minister of the Word would do in his usual ministrations.

I have tried to approach the Truth in a way that the professor of theology and also the ordinary reader and Bible student would see the main track of Bible narrative to be Israel narrative and that Biblical prophecy is Israel-British history prewritten. I am very grateful for the world-wide testimonies of help received as a result of that endeavour.

It has also been my desire to show that the facts of British-Israel Truth so fully answer the negations of modernist teaching as to settle for ever the facts of the inspiration and historicity of the Bible, and that such negative teaching of the modernist school is the result of not recognizing the positive facts of British-Israel Truth.

The fact of British history fulfilling Israel prophecy demonstrates that such history in prophecy written thousands of years ago is the product of more than human foresight. All must be constrained to say, THIS IS THE FINGER OF GOD. Thus we ask our modernist friends to go on from negation to positive knowledge of the things of God and to recognize that by the emergence of the facts of British-Israel Truth the controversies now wrecking the Christian Church are settled automatically and for ever.

Further, I have wished to show that the position of the Evangelical defender of the Bible has been rendered untenable by the apparent disappearance of Israel after Israel had received God's solemn guarantee of permanency as a nation for ever.

The supposed substitution of the Jews, as some have affirmed, or the Church, as others have claimed, in place of Israel does not meet the case and is not true in fact.

Neither the Jewish people in their history, nor the Christian Church, which is ecclesiastical and not national, has fulfilled the prophecies or the covenants made by God with Israel.

Therefore the modernist believes that certain of the Scriptures have failed of fulfilment; and the Evangelical defender of the Bible, not knowing British-Israel Truth, is unable to show that they have been fulfilled. At this point the Evangelical defence of the Bible breaks down. So the Evangelical, not equipped with Israel Truth, is losing the fight, and with it is losing a whole generation of Christian youth.

Seeing that the Anglo-Saxons are Israel, and that Israel is in existence as an obvious going concern, and seeing that Anglo-Saxon history fulfils Israel prophecy, we British-Israel Evangelicals are able to make good the defence of the Bible at every point, and to show that God is to-day fulfilling the promises made to Israel to the very letter.

Aside from controversy we have taken on the task of constructive presentation of the Gospel of the Kingdom and of Grace. It is the full sweep of the Gospel as introduced by Our Lord and preached by His Apostles. Hundreds of B.-I. clergymen, ministers and laymen are taking up the full sweep and power of the story. As an organization among Christian organizations the responsibility and privilege rests chiefly with us at present. And so we proclaim that Jehovah is still God in Israel, and is to be sought and found in and through Our Lord Jesus Christ.

There is now upon the shelves of our Book Room a body of literature on this subject available to all who wish to purchase. The only way at present available other than through personal introduction of the subject to introduce these books to public notice is through the advertisement pages of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER.

The books have a steady sale, but a way must be found to spread the written Word faster, wider, and in greater volume still, for the time is short. It is my great desire to see this literature out and doing its work.

I, with others, have laboured to produce the message in book form—laboured as never before in former years. I am grateful for the circulation which has been obtained, but long for a hundredfold increase in the activity of the books. Will you graciously become a partner in my effort? Will you devote such sum as you can spare for free distribution of these books so that they may be sent out on their mission?

My fellow directors will take care of the general catalogue of excellent books by many authors which form such a great volume of our stock. I am now asking for a little help in regard to my particular task.

Our Secretary of the Covenant Publishing Co. is opening an account for my books, of which there are sixteen, and such amounts as you may purpose in your hearts to contribute for the sending out of these books will be deposited in that account. Sets of books will then be sent to carefully selected Christian leaders, clerical and lay, all over the Anglo-Saxon world. Several thousand pounds could be profitably used for this purpose. What an impulse it would give to our work.

It is not for my financial gain or personal benefit that I make this appeal. It is that our literature may be sent out where it will spread the good news to the army of Christian workers, and will add to our ranks of workers from day to day and carry blessing wherever it goes.

This personal appeal is made to celebrate the close of seven years of arduous service. It shall be for the Glory of the King.

Please send such amounts to Mr. Herbert Garrison, or to me at: 6, Buckingham Gate, London, S.W.1.

YOUR gifts will carry light and gladness to a multitude of hearts, homes and congregations.

I thank you in advance.

Yours in the Master's service,

WM. PASCOE GOARD.

THE GATES OF EMPIRE.—II.

BY JOHN H. TENCH.

CYPRUS.

THIS beautiful island is situated 44 miles from the coast of Asia Minor. Its area is 3,500 square miles and is about the size of Jamaica. It has a population of 250,000 souls. Its situation constitutes it a veritable "gate" for a first-class Naval Power. It is situated just off the coast of Syria and commands the mouth of the Orontes. It is a "gate" guarding the entry to the valley of the Euphrates where the terminus of the railway from the Mediterranean to the Persian Gulf must of necessity be located, and will form a strong position for British ships of war should the need arise.

This island was surrendered to the English Government by the Porte as a set-off for the protection of the Turkish Asiatic territories. The island has belonged to England once before, as Richard I won it from the infidels and held it as a possession of the British Crown. God has given us this "gate" in a sudden and startling manner just as He did, a few years since, "the gate" of the Suez Canal, and in the Great War Jerusalem and Palestine, so wonderfully fulfilling the prophecy of Ezekiel, "They shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob My servant wherein your fathers have dwelt, and they shall dwell therein, even they, and their children and their children's children, for ever." These marked interpositions in our favour are tokens that God's purposes are ripening fast and that the return of Our Lord is near when He will reign at Jerusalem and sit upon the throne of His father David.

THE SUEZ CANAL

is destined to become a "gate" of the first importance to our Empire. At the northern entrance the town of Port Said is situated, and at the southern exit stands the town of Suez, and a railway connects this town with Alexandria. In very ancient times, about 1300 B.C., a navigable channel was in existence between the Red Sea and the Mediterranean, and Herodotus informs us that in 450 B.C. the canal was open between sea and sea, but in Cleopatra's time it was in a ruined condition. Ferdinand de Lesseps suggested to the Khedive of Egypt his scheme for the excavation of the present canal. The Egyptian ruler warmly supported him. Lord Palmerston and the merchants of Great Britain, influenced by men of science, refused to pay a penny to the cost, saying it would be a failure and could not possibly be a success. It did succeed and it did pay, and it abides to-day one of the most magnificent public works ever undertaken by any nation. It shortens the route of British trade with India by nearly 5,000 miles As the chief maritime power its benefit is reaped by our own gigantic commerce. In 1875 the necessities of the Khedive required him to raise money, and that year Lord Beaconsfield, the Jewish Premier of the House of Israel, bought the Khedive's shares in the canal for four millions sterling. Thus God gave the British in a mysterious way, for a mere trifle, the right to interfere for all time in the affairs of Egypt, and gifted us without war, without the loss of a single man, what, had we not been Israel, could never have been ours. It is the door of entry into the Red Sea, now a veritable English lake. It gives British influence the first rank in Egyptian politics. Near this canal our ancestors passed through the Red Sea in the days of Moses, dryshod, and pending its destruction (Isa. xi, 15) God marks by its transfer to British hands that we are indeed His people to whom He has granted the gift of many " gates."

Digitized by Google

PERIM

is at the southern entrance of the Red Sea just where it contracts its breadth which at some portions of its extent is 200 miles and just at this point about 4. Between Perim and the mainland of Arabia is the navigable channel, very deep, but very narrow and dangerous, except for vessels propelled by steam. The Straits are called the Straits of Bab-el-Mandeb, that is, the Gate of Tears, because so many ships were wrecked. God makes the very winds and waves obey Him, so we read that a French vessel of war approaching Aden had its rudder smashed and had to put into that port for repairs. The Commandant of Aden, hearing that the purpose of the captain of this vessel was to occupy Perim, immediately sent Lieutenant Templar in an English vessel to hoist the Union Jack. Thus the Red Sea is veritably a British lake as we command both its northern and southern entrances.

ADEN

is a seaport and station at the S.W. corner of Arabia, and is the military double lock of " the gate " of Perim and secures what is safe and sure in Israel's keeping. It is seven days' steam from Bombay, and is a port of call and a coaling station of the vast trade between that Presidency and Suez. Aden fell into our hands in 1839. This happened through a Madras vessel, flying the British flag, being wrecked at Aden. The sailors were grossly ill-treated. Compensation and redress being refused, an expedition was sent from India and captured the place. It has a population of nearly 50,000.

THE FALKLAND ISLANDS

are " the gates " into Patagonia and also the key of the South Pacific. During the Great War an attempt was made by the German Admiral, Von Spee, to seize this "gate " shortly after he had defeated Admiral Cradock in the Pacific. Admiral Fisher, in command of our ironclads at Scapa Flow, inspired by God, anticipated the next move of Von Spee. He secretly despatched two of our fastest and heavily-armed cruisers to these islands. Admiral Sturdee, who was in command, arrived in time to sink all the German ships, and the Falkland Islands still remain a " gate " of the British Empire.

" The gates " of India and China have already been mentioned. Singapore, Malacca and Penang are " the gates " of the China Seas. Labuan and Sarawak are " the gates " of Borneo. Sydney, Melbourne, Adelaide, Brisbane and Perth are " the gates " of Australia, and New Zealand is the western " gate " of the Pacific Ocean. Cape Town and Natal are " the gates " of South Africa ; Mombasa and Zanzibar of East Africa ; and Sierra Leone, Cape Coast Castle and Calabar of West Africa.

St. Helena, Ascension Isle and Mauritius were " the gates " of the Atlantic and Indian Oceans guarding our mercantile marine in their passage to India before the Suez Canal was made.

Jamaica, Trinidad, the Windward Islands, the Bahamas, the Bermudas and British Guiana are " gates " to South America and the Caribbean Sea.

Brother Jonathan, Israel-Manasseh, has also several important " gates," such as the Panama Canal, Cuba and the Philippine Islands.

The British Empire has occupied other " gates " which she does not now possess :—

HELIGOLAND,

" the gate " of one of our enemies, we foolishly bartered away to Germany, and this during the Great War was the cause of our losing thousands of lives and much property, for the Germans made this island a centre for their navy, the ships of which issued swiftly and bombarded our East Coast towns, such as Lowestoft, Yarmouth, Scarborough, Hartlepool, etc., quickly returning to Heligoland before our ships of war could intercept them. Their submarines from the same lapsed " gate " sunk many ships of our mercantile marine.

CALAIS

was taken by Edward III on August 4th, 1347, after a prolonged siege. It remained in English hands for over 200 years. At last, in Queen Mary's reign in A.D. 1556, this strongly fortified and till then impregnable town was easily captured by the Duke of Guise, after a siege by land and sea of only eight days. " The gate " was torn out of our hands by the Lord in the reign of a Queen who, herself a bigoted Roman Catholic, did her best to bring back the entire nation to idolatry. The loss of this " gate " struck universal dismay all over England. It is believed to have hastened the Queen's death, who said " That Calais would be found written on her heart." The British " gates " throughout the world have added, it is estimated, to the military power of the Empire an equivalent of the stupendous contingent of six million men in arms to the national strength.

THE SEA.

The most important " gate " of all is the Sea. Throughout the British Empire we constantly sing " Britannia (Covenant ships) rules the waves." It was foretold by the prophet Balaam that " Israel's seed should be in many waters." The Psalmist also said of Israel's King, " I will set his hand also in the sea, and his right hand in the rivers ; he shall also have dominion from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth." The Psalmist, speaking of Israel's redeemed ones, says :—" They that go down to the sea in ships, that do business in great waters ; these see the works of the Lord and His wonders in the deep. For He commandeth and raiseth the stormy wind, which lifteth up the waves thereof. They mount up to the heaven, they go down again to the depths, their soul is melted because of trouble. They reel to and fro, and stagger like a drunken man, and are at their wits' end. Then they cry unto the Lord in their trouble and He bringeth them out of their distresses. He maketh the storm a calm, so that the waves thereof are still."

A practical illustration of this Psalm we get from Mark iv, 37. Jesus, after a hard day's work of teaching, was crossing the Sea of Galilee with His disciples. In spite of a great storm which arose He lay calmly asleep in the hinder part of the vessel, with His head on a pillow. The words of a well-known hymn describes what followed :—

"Master, the tempest is raging,
The billows are tossing high !
The sky is o'ershadowed with blackness,
No shelter or help is nigh.
Carest Thou not that we perish ?
How canst Thou lie asleep,
When each moment so madly is threatening
A grave in the angry deep ? "

"The winds and the waves shall obey My will,
Peace be still ! Peace be still !
Whether the wrath of the storm-tossed sea,
Or demons, or men, or whatever it be,
No waters can swallow the ship where lies
The Master of ocean, and earth, and skies,
They all shall sweetly obey My will,
Peace be still ! Peace be still ! "

The British Empire is a maritime Empire and puts a girdle round the world. There has never been an Empire like ours, scattered all over the globe, and yet linked together by the inviolate sea. It is the sea which saves us from invasion, as the prophet Isaiah says :—"Thy gates (our home gates) shall be open continually ; they shall not be shut, day nor night ; that men may bring unto thee the wealth of the nations." It has been said that "Britain must either rule the waves or perish." Provided that we can hold our heritage of the sea, the dispersion of our people is no disadvantage, but a source of strength.

Maritime supremacy is denoted by the emblems found upon our penny—the trident, the shield, the crosses, the sea and the ship.

Amongst heathen nations in olden times Father Neptune with his trident was thought to be the ruler of the sea. We know this was but a fable, but we also know that Britannia holding the trident is no fable ; she is in very fact the ruler of the sea.

The shield reminds us of God's words to Abraham and continued to his seed for ever: "I am thy shield and thy exceeding great reward."

The triple crosses also remind us of our glorious flag, the Union Jack, and of our Heavenly Father's words : "He brought me to His banqueting house, and His banner over me was love."

From the actual evidence before us these facts show that the British have "the gates," and that having them we have entered on the heritage that God gave Israel, the seed of Abraham, namely, "the heirship of the world."

Therefore let it be ours, as Israel, to praise the Lord, and magnify His glorious Name by being a blessing to all.

"GOD HAS NOW NO PET NATION !"

By HENRY D. HOUGHTON.

THESE are not the words of the writer, but are those heard as the point of a sermon preached from Isaiah xliii, 3, "I gave Egypt for thy ransom, Ethiopia and Seba for thee."

The whole of this delightful Israel chapter was read, and then, alas, utterly ignored.

The preacher, however, said that the text as well as the chapter was a message to a nation ; the New Testament a message to the individual.

Then in face of it all came this singular pronouncement, "God has now no pet nation !"

We must treat these preachers and teachers with the greatest charity, they do but give forth what they themselves have been taught ; and, to be perfectly frank, though blind, they are honest, and know no better.

Moreover, this has become very largely the belief of the Churches to-day. And yet a more incorrect and unscriptural notion has never seized a community.

Surely in the absence of any special revelation direct from God, which none of our opponents venture to say they have received, it would be wise to let Scripture speak for itself ; for that is the only certain voice of God in the world to-day.

But that word "PET" nation sounds singularly inappropriate. There is sarcasm in those words, and at the expense of God. For none will deny that once God had a nation, marked with His Name, called after Him ; and whose name He took by which to call Himself ; a nation favoured, blessed, honoured, guided, delivered, saved ; a chosen nation indeed ; but not A PET.

The preacher went on to say that the Jews thought God still had this same favour towards them. Then he went on to say that there were two great fallacies in the world to-day.

(1) That God had a pet religion.
(2) That God had a pet nation.

These two, he said, had been the cause of endless strife and bloodshed ; indicating that that was the natural outcome of such fallacies.

Now, whether God had a pet religion or not we will not discuss ; but most assuredly He had a chosen nation.

Not a pet nation, please note.

A "pet" indicates favour without reason ; partiality bestowed without any merit of any kind, and for no purpose but favouritism.

Now that is not God's way of choosing. The words came to Abraham, "Because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son, that in blessing I will bless thee . . . and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies ; . . . because thou hast obeyed My voice."—Gen. xxii, 16–18.

The reason of the choice was the strict obedience of Abraham ! No room for petting here !

Four hundred years later, Moses says of them, "For thou art an holy people unto the Lord thy God ; the Lord thy God hath chosen thee to be a special people unto Himself, above all people that are upon the face of the earth."—Deut. vii, 6.

And again, x, 15, "Only the Lord had a delight in thy fathers to love them, and He chose their seed after them, even you above all people, as it is this day."

Digitized by Google

If such a man had been living then I can imagine that he would have said to Moses, "MOSES, YOU ARE WRONG!" God has no pet nation, and no pet people. You are making a great blunder. Such favouritism would be most unjust, and will lead to endless wars and bloodshed.

But Moses had no such scruples. For again he says, in Deut. xiv, 2, "For thou art an holy people unto the Lord thy God, and the Lord hath chosen thee to be a peculiar people unto Himself; above all the nations that are upon the earth."

The argument of the Modernist is, "For God to choose and favour a nation now would be gross partiality, and so therefore it cannot be true."

And worse, they presume that such a partiality would be immoral and therefore impossible.

If such an argument could be true now, what about God choosing a people 2,000 years ago? Would it not be true then? Has time changed a virtue into a vice?

These people cannot see what a terrible charge they make against God. For none will deny that God had in time past a chosen, favoured people.

And if it is immoral now for God to be as they say, partial, it was immoral then! And that is the charge their statement rears up against the Deity.

The argument which was relied on to establish the "no-pet" statement was that found in Acts xvii, 26, "And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth."

How short-sighted it was to mention this passage. Because if it could condemn a chosen-people-policy to-day, it would have done the same 3,000 years ago, when God made His choice of Israel.

One blood? Yes, it may be! But, nevertheless, the choice of Israel was made and operated day in, day out, for nearly 2,000 years, if up to the time of Christ only.

But we may all learn that the word "blood" is not in the original at all! Ferrar Fenton translates it, "By one." Weymouth says, "One forefather." The Revised Version says, "He made of one." Codex Alexandrinus and Vaticanus say, "Out of one." All indicating the descent from one forefather Adam; and demolishing at one stroke the argument founded on the words, "One blood."

But let us look further at this same verse, for there is a very enlightening word here. "And hath determined the times before appointed and the bounds of their habitation."—Acts xvii, 26. This declares that the nations have their times fixed, and the bounds of their habitations limited. But not so Israel. And remember this is in the very centre of the New Testament!

For proof look at the margin. It takes us back to Deut. xxxii, 8.

"When the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance, when He separated the sons of Adam, He set the bounds of the people." (How? According to their respective needs? No!) "According to the number of the children of Israel." That is the Word of God!

Whether we like it or not, the nations were allowed to have what Israel did not need, and no more!

And the reason is given. "For the Lord's portion is His people; Jacob is the lot of His inheritance." And all this is adopted and confirmed in the very passage in Acts relied on to prove the no-pet theory! How utterly blind our teachers are! This well-known passage in Acts xvii, 26, is the one and only resource of those who desire to prove that God has no pets or favourites.

In the sense we use the words to-day, God never has had pets or favourites, but He has had a chosen nation, and always will have right down till the last crack of doom.

And if He had not, the world would long ago have perished of its own corruption!

"Ye are My witnesses that I am God." "This people have I formed for Myself, they shall shew forth My praise."—Isa. xliii. "But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people . . . having your conversation honest AMONG THE GENTILES."—1 Pet. ii, 9–12.

This is in the very heart of the New Testament; and was written by St. Peter "To the strangers scattered through Pontus, Galatia," etc. But look at the Revised Version: "Sojourners of the Dispersion"! And Ferrar Fenton confirms, "Chosen strangers of the Dispersion." These people were part of dispersed Israel, and, St. Peter says, were still "a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people."

Now let us turn back and see what the great King David said.

When Nathan the prophet had announced to David the continuation of his house and line for ever, in the fullness of his gratitude the King went into the house of God and prayed and said: "And what one nation in the earth is like Thy people, even like Israel, which God went to redeem for a people to Himself and to make Him a name?"

There is the choice. Now note how long it lasts. For David continues and says: "For Thou hast confirmed" (settled, fixed) "to Thyself Thy people Israel to be a people unto Thee" (how long?) "FOR EVER."

Please do note that term indicating everlasting continuance, and give it its full force and value.

This very moment is part of "for ever." And if the Bible is true that choice is still operating, and in full force, or God's words to David have failed.

There is no escape from this conclusion.

It would be quite fair to ask all those who say "God has now no pet nation or chosen people," "Which words are we to take as the more certain and sure, yours or David's?" Can your words override and cancel David's? Be honest and face the issue squarely.

King David was also a prophet: a prophet of God. One whose predications came true. Are yours of that character?

Moreover, Christ quoted David with approval. Can you show such Divine authority? If not, then remember that David's words stand.

Can even the most expert student among the Modernists show from the Book how, when and where God's everlasting choice of the Israel nation has been cancelled? He cannot! No man can! It has never been cancelled! And never will be!

That choice has been changed from one portion of that nation to another portion of the same nation.—Matt. xxi. The Jews rejecting the King (Matt. xxi, 37, 39) could not carry on the Kingdom (Luke xix, 27). It must go to Israel, who will accept the King! So the Jews heard the sentence, "Therefore the Kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof."—Matt. xxi, 43. So then the Kingdom of God is still even in New Testament times, and forward, with a nation, for that is Our Lord's testimony!

It is not with a Church, or even any number of Churches. They may be, if they are faithful, the leavening power within the nation with which the Kingdom of God is; they may be even the spiritual force within the nation by which it is transformed and brought up to its duty.

But let us return to the statement, "The Old Testament is a message to a nation, the New to the individual."

Now then, if that Old message to the nation fails, or is proved untrue, how can we accept or believe any message to the individual?

Is not that good logic?

Further, if in Old Testament times and Old Testament predictions—as some assert—God fails, and in the New Testament He proves true, note what an awful dilemma follows, for that would mean that in New Testament times God had improved in morals! A most infamous and startling suggestion concerning the Unchangeable God!

It is quite useless saying that Israel lost everything through her sin. This very chapter (Isaiah xliii) proves the contrary.

What a marvellous chapter it is! It is full of mercy, compassion and forgiveness TO THE NATION, all absolutely unmerited, and therefore cannot fail!

At that moment the House of Israel had been in captivity nine years, and the greater part of Judah one year, and yet these astounding messages ring out.

V. 1.—"But now, thus saith the Lord, . . . O Israel, Fear not, FOR I HAVE REDEEMED THEE, I have called thee by thy name, THOU ART MINE."

V. 4.—"Since thou wast precious in My sight, . . . I have loved thee: therefore I will give men for thee, and people for thy life."

But some may say, "Surely, surely, that cannot be. Give men for thee" (the nation Israel) "and people for thy life? Impossible!" Well, that is the Word of God! It is, indeed, astounding, and to-day utterly unbelieved. Yet it is future tense; a declaration of future policy! "I gave Egypt"—"I will give." No change of policy! And remember it is a message to a nation who were precious and honoured and loved! In that lies the true explanation of many a page in our history.

V. 15.—"I am the Lord, your Holy One, the Creator of Israel, your King."

V. 21.—"This people have I formed for Myself, they shall shew forth My praise." What? This banished captive people? Yes!

Then follows most touching words of sorrow and reproof. God, with the fullest knowledge of Israel's sin, declares it, denounces it, and reproaches them, and charges them with having ceased to sacrifice to Him and had become weary of Him.

V. 22.—"But thou hast not called upon Me, O Jacob: but thou hast been weary of Me, O Israel." Israel the nation, weary of God!

V. 23.—"Thou hast not brought Me the small cattle of thy burnt offerings; neither hast thou honoured Me with thy sacrifices." Here we have Israel the nation ceasing to maintain her outward forms of worship, clearly indicating that God is speaking to the literal nation.

V. 24.—"Thou hast made Me to serve with thy sins, thou hast wearied Me with thine iniquities." NOW GOD IS WEARY OF THEM!

But after summarizing and detailing Israel's guilt, and declaring its aggravating character, to the intense astonishment and bewilderment of the reader, GOD THEN PRONOUNCES AN UNCONDITIONAL PARDON! And not a tardy, unwilling, contemptible kind of pardon, but a pardon full of force and love and compassion, bursting forth in unrestrained words too wonderful for any man to have invented, or any angel to have conceived.

Here they are, v. 25, "I, EVEN I, AM HE THAT BLOTTETH OUT THY TRANSGRESSIONS FOR MINE OWN SAKE" (Ah! there is the reason) "AND WILL NOT REMEMBER THY SINS."

What? The nation's sins blotted out? That is what God says!

"Not remember the nation's sins"? That is the Divine declaration! And no man can reap up the sins which God has blotted out!

And the next chapter carries on the good news.

V. 1.—"Yet now hear, O Jacob My servant, and Israel whom I have chosen."

V. 3.—"I will pour My spirit upon thy seed (the nation's seed), and My blessing upon thy offspring."

V. 8.—"Fear ye not, neither be afraid . . . ye are even My witnesses." Israel in captivity still God's witnesses!

V. 21.—"O Israel, thou shalt not be forgotten of Me." Man says she is forgotten, and worse, cast off!

V. 22.—Here we have God in most amazing words confirming all that has gone before, and reaffirming the unconditional pardon and national redemption. "I have blotted out, as a thick cloud, thy transgressions, and as a cloud thy sins."

And then God calls out, "Return unto Me, for I have redeemed thee."

Please remember that all this is, as the preacher said, "To A NATION": and, further, the forgiveness is in the past tense: "I have blotted out." What does all this mean?

And verse 23 calls upon all nature to join in happy and tumultuous rejoicing in consequence.

"Sing, O ye heavens; for the Lord hath done it" (then it cannot be undone), "shout, ye lower parts of the earth; break forth into singing, ye mountains, O forest, and every tree therein: for the Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and glorified Himself in Israel."—Isa. xliv, 23.

DIVINE AND HUMAN CO-OPERATION—IV.

AN ADDRESS AT HEADQUARTERS.

By Mr. B. H. Norton (Editor of The Covenant Race.)

During the long controversy from the Fall of Man to Full Restoration, the human in Abraham in the spirit realm is in a very marked manner referred to. Abraham is the only earth-born being who is said by name to have received an appointment in the Spirit World. David is not said to be anywhere reigning. Paul is not said to be anywhere preaching. Moses is not anywhere law-giving. Isaac and Jacob, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, all are silent.

Abraham is called into specific prominence. He seems to be "heir" in a peculiar sense in a realm in the world beyond. Abraham is viceroy in an uncharted paradise. He occupies a temporary post superintending the felicity of our departed loved ones, until the time comes for the marshalling of these hosts to accompany their Great King to His coronation. Till these sweep out triumphantly into overhead space they are said to be provided for in Abraham's Bosom.

That is a temporary disposition. Paradise will empty. The grave is a temporary place of peaceful sleep. It will empty. Will not the earth be emptied of the wicked therein before its full restoration? (Mal. iv, 1.)

The Call of Abraham was an event which has been much underrated and the full programme is yet far off from completion. Redemption has to be perpetuated, where sin has reigned long, and many transactions of time have to be eternalized.

Christ has to remake the damaged things, in fact to make all existing things new—not to make all new things. The old face, the old smile, the old laughter, the old tone—made new. "This mortal must put on immortality." "This corruptible must put on incorruption." It will still be mother's face and father's smile and the wife's silver tone and the husband's song of greeting. Untrespassed upon and everlasting preservation is just ahead:

> "There everlasting Spring abides
> And never—withering flowers."

Christ's operations are progressive. He makes a new heart a new realm for divine love, a new spirit for divine life, a new body for divine occupation, a new home for new divine associations with man. Temporal things superseded and expanded, not destroyed. The rosy apple matures from the gnarled tree. That lingering look of love which radiates into a shimmering halo over the deep dark grave will yet exult over the old made new.

God seems to have limited Himself never to destroy what He once created. Christ will come as Architect bringing the old plans. He will come as Owner bringing the old deeds. He will come as Cleanser bringing the old remedy. He will come as Conqueror bringing the old sword. He will come as Vindicator bringing the old law. He will come as King bringing the old throne. He will come as Bridegroom bringing the old love.

"The gifts and callings of God are without repentance."

Christ's proper place is now above. Paul estimated his 'gain" from that fact. The gathered spirits are the first of His eternal harvestings. Just as He spent forty days with His disciples "speaking of the things pertaining to the Kingdom of God" before His ascension, now that He is ascended who has more right to His company than the ones who have ascended to Him? He has to prepare them for His second coming. They may watch Him in His preparation of the "place" among the many mansions.

It is quite right that when He comes again they should accompany Him as He comes to heal the breach of centuries. He comes to make a peace no League of Nations can formulate, to breathe a fragrance of which the flowers around us are now the earnest, to smile a re-made beauty into matter, to solemnize a reunion and to commend heaven's first law—order.

When He comes, the first excitement will be in the realm of Abraham's Bosom, a term to indicate the sweetest felicity. The Great Archangel will detect the Christ move. Abraham's face will be aglow with expectation. The time secret will be about to be solved. John saw the movement in vision. He wrote:

"And I saw heaven opened, and behold, a white horse; and He that sat upon him was called Faithful and True, and in righteousness He doth judge and make war."

"And the armies which were in heaven followed Him upon white horses, clothed in fine linen, white and clean."

What battalions of spirits, sweeping out, until not one is left, from Abraham's Bosom, those who

> "Ascribe their conquest to the Lamb
> Their victory to His death."

These, once feeble in the flesh, now endowed with a holy heroism, attend Him in His "Redemption long expected" march

> "To shine in heaven's remotest bound
> And down the steepy sky
> To earth, where man may see the ray."

He comes East, the small portion of earth once radiant with divine manifestations. Like the lightning He shines to the West. Is it from Jerusalem to the "appointed place"?

From these observations may be deduced that less remotely than has been thought by many, the call of Abraham, and the command to "Occupy," stretch into realms only by the few investigated. The term "Jewish," often used to dispose of these necessary studies, nullifies in some minds the need of our propaganda. Against this we have to fight, and to declare that to ascertain and publish a divine consistency in these things is more our business than the mere assertion of British supremacy in the world, the fact of which would not bring much gain to most of us who stand for British-Israel for loftier reasons. Yet, truly, if on this superior realm of study you delete Great Britain as Israel you investigate in a fog overhead and tread along a maze of confused pathways with no royal road to satisfaction.

Not to have Great Britain as Israel in the study of divine consistency is to leave that consistency undiscovered—here thousands flounder to-day. Great Britain alone fits the demand.

Eden at the first was reclaimed from chaos. It felt the finger-touch of God, not from a forced choice as Alexander

Digitized by Google

Selkirk's Juan Fernandez or the Plymouth Rock makeshift of the Pilgrim Fathers. It was a "choice."

The British Isles and the Jerusalem City are in the same category. The unequivocal choice of these localities remains unshaken even after the permitted temporary set-back to the divine plan.

The choice of the British Isles as Israel's "appointed place" is not an isolated act. It is part of a considered reclamation. It is part of a perfect whole from which Eden, Jerusalem, Abraham's Bosom must not be omitted. Eden's primary importance ceased with the glare of the flaming sword.

The descent from Adam and Eve as it relates to Isaac ended peculiarly in Abraham and Sarah.

While as parents they remained in and closed the prosaic line of Adam and Eve as far as a "chosen people" to follow was concerned, the Isaac life beginning after the ending of the other, as far as a new redemption scheme went, was a miraculous poem of superimposed and super-impregnated vitality, through an old source and obsolete.

Israel only partly starts in Abraham, but is perfected in Isaac by a posterior isolation in himself of characteristics therefrom. Hence "in Isaac shall thy seed be called" was not used preferentially in signification of name but in a speciality in species.

Now this is what stamps Israel as peculiar—the relationship to Isaac. Abraham and Sarah were the means to an end. If ever there was a superman he was Isaac.

So, just as Eden was selected for Adam, the British Isles were selected for Isaac and Isaac's sons—Saxons?

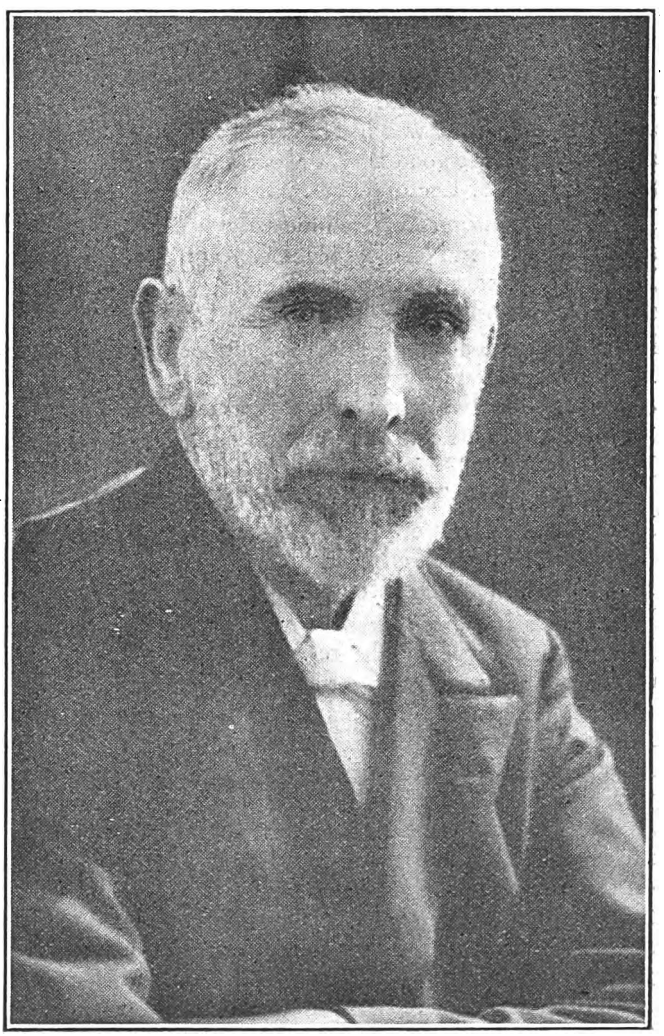
Isaac should succeed beyond Adam, having had a more beneficial pathway to walk. We as his sons have witnessed the manifestation of the Son of God, we have the Israelites' Guide Book—the Bible, and the ever-presentness of the Holy Spirit. Isaac is garrisoned with divine bulwarks—no weapon to prosper opposingly.

God has set Himself the majestic task of winning back through Isaac the perfection of creation which was marred through Adam.

The importance of Abraham, Israel, the British, "the appointed place," "the City of the Great King," is tremendous in view of the Second Coming of Christ.

Among the constituents of those "clouds" who will accompany Him on His triumphal march to victorious manifestation on Olivet will be the radiant harvest of spirits won to Christ's banner by the perusal of literature from BRITISH printing-presses, from hearing the Gospel messages of BRITISH consecrated men and women who through much tribulation won them for the Christly diadem.

Ah! we little think how many of the martyr army, and of the holy Church throughout all the world, are the results, under God, of the sacrifice and service emanating from "the appointed place."



It lifts Britain far above the thrill arising from its military, naval and philanthropic deeds, and places the land we love among sacred, solemn and sacrificial associations of Christ and His Work. For such work we are chosen!

Our national sins should wither in the glow of this display, and as a nation, and an empire, we should fall at His feet and "Crown Him Lord of all."

We do not follow the destructive school who chant "Great God, what do I see and hear? The end of things created," but rather the constructive school who hail Christ as King on David's throne, Israel as His kingdom, the heathen as His inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth as His possession.

MR. J. H. TENCH.

MR. JOHN H. TENCH, President of the Darlington and Durham Branches of the B.-I.-W.F., is a native of Norwich, where he was Head Master of the St. Augustine's Boys' School, with an average attendance of 550. In 1883 he became

Sub-Inspector, in the Board of Education, and served for thirty-one years in this capacity in the Norwich and Norfolk District. He retired on a pension in 1914, and in the same year the teachers and managers of Norfolk, Norwich and Great Yarmouth, to the number of nearly 1,000, made him a handsome presentation as a mark of their esteem.

Mr. Tench commenced work as a Sunday School teacher in the year 1863, and, with the exception of two years whilst at St. Mark's College, has continued in this glorious work until the present time, a record of sixty-four years. He considers there is no work equal to it for keeping a man young and lifting him to a higher level. His work has been recognized by those in authority, as for more than twenty years he was elected Chairman of the Committee of the Norwich Diocesan Sunday School Association, containing 900 teachers and 12,000 children. As a mission worker in the parish of St. Luke's Church, New Catton, for thirty-two years, he was publicly invested in 1914 by the late Archdeacon Westcott with the Lay Reader's Badge.

Mr. Tench was converted to B.-I. Truth by the late Robert Adcock, a traveller for the noted Colman's Mustard firm. He was returning from duty in the train, when this kind gentleman opened up the Scriptures to him like the deacon Philip did to the Ethiopian eunuch, and, from his long acquaintance with the Word of God, this subject instantly appealed to him. For many years he acted as Hon. Secretary to the Norwich Branch, and was instrumental at one of the annual meetings of securing good B.-I. stalwarts to give the addresses in the C.E.Y.M.S. Lecture Hall.

Mr. Tench continued an active worker on behalf of "The Kingdom Truth" in Norfolk for many years, and gave lectures at Yarmouth, Lowestoft, Beccles, Cromer, Thetford, Brandon, East Dereham, and many other towns and villages.

In 1915 Mr. Tench lost his life-long helpmate, the wife and companion of many years, and when the war was over his two daughters living at Darlington asked him to join them at that beautiful and charming town.

In 1921 W. T. F. Jarrold, Esq., at that time Sheriff of Norwich, asked Mr. Tench to publish in book form the many articles he had written on "Our Lord's Parables of the Kingdom" which had appeared from time to time in "The Banner of Israel," to which he consented.

Mr. Tench has been made President of the Darlington and Durham Branches of the B.-I.-W.F., and nothing delights him more than proclaiming this glorious Truth. It is his greatest happiness to obey his Master's commands, and his old age has become the happiest period of his life, for he feels that his dear Lord's words are so true, "My joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full." For the last three years Mr. Tench has been very active in the counties of Durham and North Yorkshire because of the Master's words when sending forth His Apostles of old to preach the Gospel of the Kingdom, "Ye shall not have gone over the cities of Israel, till the Son of man be come," and so Mr. Tench has organized many meetings at Barnard Castle, Bishop Auckland, Durham, Gainford, Guisborough, Middlesbrough, Redcar, Richmond, Stockton-on-Tees, Sunderland and Thornaby-on-Tees for the British-Israel-World Federation.

"Our powers owe much of their energy to our hopes."—DR. JOHNSON.

THE GREAT PYRAMID—SYSTEM OF MEASURES AND WEIGHTS.

WE find that the coffer in the King's Chamber will give us a system of Measures and Weights closely akin to the present British Systems. This coffer was built into the King's Chamber, being slightly bigger than the last granite passage into that Chamber; it was therefore intended to stop there for all time.

John Taylor was the first to suggest that the coffer was intended to serve as a capacity measure for all nations, and pointed out that the British standard quarter of wheat was exactly a quarter of the capacity of the coffer.

Both Professors Piazzi Smyth and Petrie show that the interior capacity of the coffer is 71,250 cubic Pyramid inches, and Smyth showed that this measurement was connected clearly with the size of the King's Chamber in which it stood and that Chamber again with the mass of the Great Pyramid itself, just as the mass of the Pyramid is with the earth. We may then claim that small as the coffer is there is not another vessel of such importance to mankind. It is estimated that the mean density of the earth is 5.7 times heavier than a mass of distilled water of the same size, such water being at 68 deg. Fahr., and the barometric pressure being 30,000 Pyramid inches. This is the pressure which naturally obtains in the ventilated King's Chamber. Accordingly 5.7 cubic Pyramid inches of pure distilled water would equal exactly one cubic Pyramid inch of earth mean density material.

Now 5 cubic Pyramid inches of earth's mean density material weigh one Pyramid pound. Therefore one Pyramid pound weight would equal 5 by 5.7 or 28.5 cubic inches of pure water.

The interior capacity of the coffer is 71,250 cubic Pyramid inches; dividing this by 28.5 we get 2,500. Thus, a coffer measure of pure water weighs 2,500 Pyramid pounds, or one Pyramid ton.

A Pyramid pound-weight of water equals a Pyramid pint measure. A pint therefore is equal to 28.5 cubic Pyramid inches of pure water. This Pyramid pint is very close to the old Anglo-Saxon pint and pound just as the Pyramid inch is practically identical with our present British inch.

We know that Jehovah, the God of Israel, instructed Moses that Israel was to observe just weights and measures. These weights and measures were doubtless of God's own choosing, and naturally based on the earth itself, the creation of God. It is for this reason that it is so important that Israel-Britain and America should keep their old commensurable units and not adopt the French metric system.

The chief unit of the Imperial capacity system is a pint, and it, the pint, is the connecting link between that system for large quantities and the Apothecaries' system. The pint should therefore be readily testable, and in the days of our Anglo-Saxon ancestors it was; but in George IV's reign, the pint which had always weighed a pound was enlarged to a pound and a quarter, and a new rhyme, "A pint of pure water weighs a pound and a quarter," was given us, instead of the old "A pint's a pound, all the world round."

The French metric system evolved at the French Revolution, overthrowing the old system of measures at the same time that the Bible was attacked, was like the Israel measures, based on the earth, but inaccurately. It is not merely because it is a decimal system that Britain-Israel has always rejected it, but because it is false.

Let us compare the Pyramid system with the Imperial system down to the pint and then with the Apothecaries' fluid ounce or wine-glass.

The Pyramid system gives all the measures needed by the people for measuring anything in commerce from coal, wheat, wool, potatoes, wine, peas, meal, oil, medicines, chemicals, down to the smallest quantity measured by capacity.

Let us start with the coffer capacity of 71,250 cubic inches, and divide that capacity by numbers given by the Pyramid itself, first by four, the square number given by the four base sides of the Pyramid; this gives us the quarter measure very near to the value of the ancient Saxon quarter, the coffer itself being an old Saxon measure.

The next division is by the Pyramid's basic number 10, and gives the "Sack" measure, also very near to the old measure of that name in the Saxon time; and approached very nearly by similar measures of other nations.

The next division of the coffer capacity is by the Pyramid number 25, the number of Pyramid inches in the Pyramid cubit, the even 10-millionth part of the earth's semi-axis of rotation. This gives the "Bushel" measure, 2,850 Pyramid inches in capacity.

From this 25th part of the coffer capacity, further divisions come naturally by the Pyramid's system. Thus the 10th part of the Bushel is the "Gallon," and the 10th part of the Gallon is the "Pint." The 10th part of the Pint is the "Wine-glass" or "Fluid-ounce." The 10th part of the Ounce is the "Teaspoon" or "Fluid-dram." The "Drop" or "Minim" the 100th part of the Dram. There are then 25 million Drops or Minims in the entire cubical capacity of the coffer. This Drop is the cubical space occupied by a drop of water falling freely in air at the given Pyramid temperature 68 deg. Fahr., and barometric pressure of 30,000 inches.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor.

DEAR SIR,—Allow me, please, a few lines of your valuable space to correct an error that may not be obvious to all your readers. In the Address at Headquarters by the Rev. J. Lumley Davies, L.D., on page 42 of 19th January issue, it is stated that "there are traces of a high civilization 2,500 years before Abraham." This gives the date -4991, or nearly a thousand years before the Adamic epoch. Accepting the statement, it would support the ascribed date of the Elohistic creation in distinction from the Jehovistic, the one being Eidolonic and the other pertaining to the Spirit ("the new man renewed in knowledge"—Col. iii, 10) "after the image of Him who created him." Otherwise, we must revise the statement of the archæologists regarding a pre-Adamic civilization. As to Abraham's date, there can be no doubt whatsoever. The Temple was founded -1006, four hundred and eighty years after the Exodus -1486, which concluded the 430 years of the wanderings of Israel from the going out of Abraham from Haran -1916, at which date he was "seventy-five years old." His birth was therefore in the year -1991/2 according to exact month, which is unknown. The error consists in ascribing a pre-Adamic date to Chaldean archives without statement of belief in the existence of a race of men prior to that date.—Yours, etc.,

W. GORNOLD.

DEAR SIR,—The question of the dates of Chaldean (or any other) civilization cannot be given to the accurate year or month, as Dr. Gornold has ventured to pronounce in his correction, and the Adamic epoch cannot be pronounced with precision. Needless to say, I only gave what may be called round figures. I am reluctant to endorse the marginal chronology of Archbishop Ussher in the A.V. and equally reluctant to follow Dr. Gornold. If the Biblical statement commenced with "In the year 4004 B.C. God created," etc., that would be definite. But the Bible says, "In the beginning," which is grandly comprehensive, but utterly indefinite to every finite mind, though "clear as noonday" to "Him Who knoweth all things." The period between Adam and Abraham is variously given in the Hebrew, Samaritan, and the Sept. versions. If we turn to the history of Egypt we find even greater discrepancies. Mariette gives the date of Menes as 5004 B.C., and Sir Gardner Wilkinson gives it as 2691 B.C., while Sir Flinders Petrie and others come between these two extremes with different dates. The historian Berosus gives us a date for the Babylonian civilization as 36,000 years! Without adopting such extreme figures, it is clear that the Shumiro-Accadian culture was firmly rooted and completely marked out 4000 B.C., and there are those who claim an additional period of 1,000 years, making 5,000 years in all before Christ. These views demand an addition to my figures, and not a reduction from them.

As the period which is questioned by Dr. Gornold is that from Adam to Abraham, it can be said that it does not touch the main current of British-Israel Truth: this I consider commences with the Covenant made with Abraham and its fulfilment in the Celtic-Anglo-Saxon peoples. So I leave the matter here.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

WE look forward to good and helpful meetings in the Central Hall, Westminster, from February 18th to 22nd, at 2.45 and 7.30, and we ask our supporters to attend and bring their friends.

* * *

Excellent addresses were given at H.Q. last week by Miss Haynes and the Rev. Joseph Gay. The speakers for next week are the Rev. Sparshott Johnson on Wednesday afternoon, and the Rev. Joseph Gay on Thursday evening.

The latest acquisition to the membership of our Nailsea Branch is a dear lady nearing her ninety-seventh birthday. She is in possession of all her faculties, and much enjoys reading this journal. She never sits idle—is always reading or working, and goes out most days. She says that nothing could turn her from the joy of her B.-I. belief. We heartily congratulate her on the age she has attained and the blessings she enjoys. We would not envy the person who would dare the attempt to deprive her of the faith in which she rejoices.

We have a delightful letter from our beloved friend—Professor Odlum, in Vancouver, whose birthday was recently celebrated in a charming way by the loyal and admiring circle of British-Israelites in the far Western city. Our veteran champion is busy as ever in the Master's work, addressing special meetings, and groups of selected professional and business men. He says:—"We joyfully join you in thanksgiving for the recovery of our noble and beloved King." He adds: "I see you all as you labour at H.Q. from basement to top floor: the General and his splendid staff; the Superintendent of Staff Rooms and his band of workers; the K.C. Chief Commissioner and his corps of Commissioners; the Secretary of the Publishing side and his assistants; and on up to the prophet in his sanctum. I recall the faces and the personalities, and the charm of all remains and even increases in power and blessing. I am the debtor of the least and the greatest of you all."

All of us at H.Q. cherish happy memories of the Professor's many visits; his cheery presence was always like a big ray of sunshine.

The Secretary-General, as he writes these lines in his office, looks wistfully to the table at which our dear friend used to write his letters and edit the proof sheets of his Congress addresses, and sighs, "Will you not come back again?" Needless to say his many friends on this side of the Atlantic sincerely wish him many Happy Returns of his Birthday, and hope the next will be spent on this side.

The Secretary of our Brighton Branch writes in enthusiastic terms of two most interesting addresses delivered for the Branch by Mr. J. J. Morey to large audiences over which Major Holland presided.

Mr. John Leech, K.C., gave three valuable lectures last week in Bristol, and two in Bath, to keenly appreciative assemblies.

Sir Charles Marston, speaking at a meeting of lay Churchmen at the Caxton Hall, Westminster, on Saturday last, said: "Great Britain was the first of all nations to adopt Christianity. Bible study and the results of the Great War were forcing him to the certain conclusion that to-day we, as a nation, represented the Lost Sheep of the House of Israel. . . . . We were in the peculiar position that upon us—both as a Church and a People—might depend the whole future of the civilization of the world."

By the invitation of Colonel Frederick Horniblow, C.B., and Mrs. Horniblow a large and representative company of the leading families of Camberley assembled on Saturday last in spite of unfavourable weather to hear addresses on British-Israel. The proceedings began with tea, kindly provided by the host and hostess, during which many questions were asked and answered. Colonel G. F. A. Smythe, President of our Dover Branch, presided at the meeting which followed. The Rev. L. J. Lightbody, M.A., offered prayer. The Chairman briefly outlined B.-I. teaching. Miss Hamilton Hunter dealt with the Covenants made by God with the patriarchs. The Rev. Pascoe Goard exposed the falsehoods being taught regarding the early Britons, and gave the reason for the expansion of Britain since 1800. Mr. Herbert Garrison spoke on the tangible evidence that the British Race is Israel afforded by the character and work of the British Empire, and gave some striking facts concerning the activities of the B.-I.-W.F.

Mr. Wm. Sleeman was in charge of the bookstall.

Our best thanks are tendered to Colonel and Mrs. Horniblow, and we congratulate them on the success achieved.

Mr. Foster Beaver gave a very interesting address for our Liverpool Branch on January 24th, in the course of which he exposed Modernist errors in the light of B.-I. teaching.

One of our members has kindly presented us with a copy of a little booklet entitled "Who Are You?" by the late Lady M. L. Wyatt, a devoted British-Israelite whose name appears on our Roll of Honour; also another booklet by the same authoress entitled "Search," a continuation of the former. Both are long since out of print. In the first-named booklet Lady Wyatt says:—"The more the Old Testament is studied, the more wonderful the prophecies appear, and if the reader will carefully digest them he will have no difficulty in answering the question, Who are you?"

The Nottingham Branch held their Annual Meeting on January 4th, at which there was a good attendance. Mr. H. D. Houghton was re-elected President, and all other retiring officers re-elected, with Mr. Watkins as Chairman of Meetings and some new members to the Committee. After business had been completed, refreshments were served and a very enjoyable social hour spent, during which Miss Disney contributed a monologue.

On January 24th the Harrow Branch thoroughly enjoyed and followed with close attention a lecture on "The Book of Genesis " by Mr. J. J. Morey. Many questions were ably dealt with. Mr. J. Wright Cooper was in the chair.

The young City of Stoke-on-Trent is waking up to its responsibilities towards British-Israel teaching. The local Branch, under the Presidentship of Mr. A. Gresham Copeland, is putting out roots which promise a good crop.

Commissioner the Rev. T. H. Whitehouse gave two public lectures, one at Burslem (one end of the five towns) on January 21st, chaired by a member of the local legal profession, and the other at Longton on January 22nd (at the other end of the five towns), chaired by a well-known local property agent.

The lectures were held in the Town Halls, and there were attentive and appreciative audiences.

Mr. Whitehouse, in his habitual interesting way, built up on a foundation of Bible history, Bible facts and Bible prophecy, under the titles of " World Dominion " and " The Coming of the King," a convincing demonstration of British-Israel Truths.

Dr. Horace Sworder writes :—" If you had two or three minutes B.-I. conversation with someone who knew nothing of the subject, how would you set about it ?

I suggest the following :—

The Almighty must have worked according to plan.

What a jumble if not so.

If according to plan, must He not have given man some idea of it ?

Must He not have selected or elected men to carry out the plan through the ages ?

Do we call it favouritism when we ourselves always select those best fitted to carry out our earthly projects ?

Should we look for the working out of the Plan in any book but the Bible ?

Does the Bible disclose such a Plan ?

Does it disclose a succession of men who presumably did carry it out ?

Is there to-day any nation which might, without presumption, claim that they are carrying it out ?

Is there any other nation than Britain which can claim this ?

Is it possible to give a number of remarkable examples showing that our nation alone is carrying out the Plan ?

If our nation was blotted out of existence, what would be the effect on the rest of the world ?

Why does the British Empire stand while all others have gone under ?

Has the Bible declared that the Israel Kingdom would stand for ever, and that its throne would for ever stand ?

If so, where is that Kingdom to-day ? "

We have to record with regret the death of the Rev. Thomas Hislop, senior minister of Bridgeton Parish Church, Glasgow. He was a staunch British-Israelite, and he delivered many addresses and lectures on the subject in various parts of the country. He retired from the active ministry in 1923. In May of last year he celebrated the jubilee of his ordination.

We had the pleasure of a visit from him some few years ago. Mr. Hislop had been a member of the Glasgow Parish Council, and he was greatly interested in questions affecting the Poor Law. He had attained the age of 83 years.

We offer our sympathy to his family.

The Rev. H. A. E., of Alberta, Canada, writes :— " I am very grateful for your kind letter in reply to my application for membership, and for the books you were good enough to send me. They have been read and re-read and lent and re-lent again and again, and they have been the means of interesting a great many people. I wish my income was sufficient to allow me to purchase every book you publish. In one of the large churches of the city I devoted two sermons to Israel Truth ; the attentive interest was pathetic, even the choir-boys turned round sideways to listen. The whole of the large congregation on both occasions listened without a rustle or a fidget, though the sermons were considerably longer than the average. People are hungry for our Message, and I am convinced that if the clergy generally would take up the subject, our churches would be full. Is it possible for you to arrange for some outstanding authority to visit us ? The times in which we live are so important, the matter is so urgent, and the willingness to hear and be instructed so real, that I ask your kindly help. Several pulpits can be brought to our Cause. My own congregation is thoroughly imbued with our teaching and keenly interested. I have created an interest in mining centres, several families taking to the subject at once, and the miners discussing it at their work underground. I hear also from those who are moving to other mining areas that they are spreading the good news wherever they go, and so the good work goes on."

We heartily congratulate our correspondent and wish him God-speed. May many others follow his example. We hope Professor Odlum will be able to go to his help.

Some weeks ago we published an interesting review of a remarkable book by the Rev. Arthur Cleveland Downer, M.A., D.D., entitled " The Principle of Interpretation of the Epistle to the Hebrews," in which the author discloses a great and vital discovery, the result of many years of study, and in which he provides what he considers a clue to the true interpretation of the Epistle, yielding a consistent meaning from the first verse to the last. This clue, it is claimed, is unique.

Professor Sayce, D.D., writes : " Your contention is justified and you have made an important contribution to Biblical research." Bishop Knox, D.D., writes : " I cannot doubt that your principle is right . . . I pray that God may abundantly bless this fruit of your studies, and that it may help to restore the truth of an Epistle which has been sorely misinterpreted."

Dr Downer is well known for his ripened experience, mature judgment, sound scholarship and literary ability, and our readers will be interested to know that he is a friend of our beloved veteran, the Rev. Commander Roberts. The book may be obtained at our Book Room, at the price 3s. 6d. nett, or post free 3s. 9d.

So successful were the conducted tours last year that the Canadian Pacific have arranged to extend them so that in 1929 they will embrace periods ranging from three or four weeks, which would enable the tourist to take in Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Niagara Falls, to a more extensive trip of, say, eight or ten weeks, to cover the Atlantic journey on a Canadian Pacific steamer and a visit from one end of the Dominion to the other, embracing stopovers at the beauty spots in the Canadian Rockies, such as Banff, Lake Louise, etc., terminating with a visit to Vancouver, and Victoria on Vancouver Island, the Empire's westerly gem on the Pacific. IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

A NEW BOOK

"BRITISH-ISRAEL, HOW I CAME TO BELIEVE IT"

By

THE RIGHT REV. BISHOP TITCOMB, D.D.

This is a revised edition of "The Anglo-Israel Post Bag," which has been prepared by the Rev. JAMES MOUNTAIN, D.D. Out of print for years, we have been constantly asked to reprint it, and now it is ready in its new form. Older British-Israelites will want copies, and those new to our Truth cannot afford to be without it. The author's objections and difficulties have been squarely faced and satisfactorily answered. These difficulties, in one form or another, are the same that are raised by most enquiring minds.

Read it and see for yourself. Here you have conclusive answers to most questions in regard to British-Israel Truth.

THE STATESMANSHIP OF JESUS

By the Rev. W. PASCOE GOARD, F.R.G.S.

This book is an exposition of the Epistle to the Hebrews. The Epistle bears in the signature place the name "GOD."

The double fact that the human authorship is withheld, and in the signature place the name "GOD" appears, indicates the Epistle to be a letter directly inspired from God to us.

The subject of the Epistle is God the Son; His Office and Ministry, as King of Righteousness; King of Peace; King of Salem.

The book is brilliantly written. It brings out new truths and restates well-known truths, so as to make all appear strikingly new.

The place of Israel in the New Covenant is made to appear with great clearness.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

THE DOCUMENTS OF DANIEL.—V.

By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard, F.R.G.S.

This is a continuation of the study of the second document—scope seven times. (Daniel ii.)

Let us now look at the Charter of the four Empires, which by Divine revelation was made known to the king through the ministry of the Prophet Daniel.

The statement is presented in the form of a double picture, having two panels, in each of which is limned a kingdom.

Thus, in what may be called the first panel of the picture, we have the establishment of the Babylonian Empires. The picture shows the form of a warrior, which form is entirely composed of metal.

By the various materials of which it is composed, and by the varying colour of the material, we are given to see that it represents a succession of four Empires.

First, the head of gold;
Then the shoulders of silver;
The belly and the thighs of brass;
The legs of iron, the feet part of iron and part of clay.

Such was the picture. Now there follows the interpretation (Daniel ii, 36-43):

"This is the dream; and we will tell the interpretation thereof before the king.

"Thou, O king, art a king of kings: for the God of heaven hath given thee a kingdom, power, and strength, and glory.

"And wheresoever the children of men dwell, the beasts of the field and the fowls of the heaven hath he given into thine hand, and hath made thee ruler over them all. THOU ART THIS HEAD OF GOLD.

"And after thee shall arise another kingdom inferior to thee, and another THIRD kingdom of brass, which shall bear rule over all the earth.

"And the fourth kingdom shall be strong as iron: forasmuch as iron breaketh in pieces and subdueth all things: and as iron that breaketh all these, shall it break in pieces and bruise.

"And whereas thou sawest the feet and toes, part of potters' clay, and part of iron, the kingdom shall be divided; but there shall be in it of the strength of the iron, forasmuch as thou sawest the iron mixed with miry clay.

"And as the toes of the feet were part of iron, and part of clay, so the kingdom shall be partly strong, and partly broken.

"And whereas thou sawest iron mixed with miry clay, they shall mingle themselves with the seed of men: but they shall not cleave one to another, even as iron is not mixed with clay."

This is the statement regarding the four kingdoms which should successively arise. This is the Charter granted to the kingdoms by the God of Heaven.

When we read that which Our Lord said at a later date to the Scribes and Pharisees: "Render therefore to Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's"; and the question arises as to "what are the things of Cæsar?" it is to this Charter that we must turn. Doubtless Our Lord had in mind the gifts of God to Nebuchadnezzar and his successors in the kingdoms, for, as ever, "the gifts and calling of God are without repentance." The right of the Cæsars, of whom Nebuchadnezzar was the first to rule during the appointed time, was as inalienable as the right of the House of David to rule over the throne of Israel for ever. Both rights were granted by the same Almighty Personality.

This Charter of Empire is a document worthy of all consideration. History has shown that the Continental Empires have kept the indicated course. Two great Empires, clear-cut and strong, were written upon the pages of Asiatic history, viz., Babylon and Medo-Persia. There was one Empire which had its root in European Greece, its capital and centre of administration in Asia, bestriding two continents and more. This laid the foundation of European dominance and destroyed Asiatic supremacy.

There came the fourth, a purely European power, which, dominating in Europe, Western Asia, and Northern Africa, ran through several stages. First united and strong as iron ; then mixed with the clay of other nationalities and of other races ; then, still more mixed with other nationalities, divided, brittle ; and finally reaching the stage at which it was difficult to tell which was the iron of Rome and which the clay of other nationalities. The intermixed strains failed to cleave one to another.

So the Eastern part of the Empire was inextricably intermixed —and the Western part of the Empire was hopelessly divided, until the time came when the whole Imperial structure should pass away and give place to the Stone Kingdom.

This Stone Kingdom had from the first been existing side by side with the Continental Empires from the date of the granting of the Charter to Nebuchadnezzar.

The Charter, as we have seen, is twofold. The first part is a picture. The second part is a statement. The statement was understood because it was illustrated by the picture, and the statement confirms the picture. Thus the unprepared and uninstructed minds of the king and the people were made to understand the great message, and by the double witness of the picture followed by the statement the word is established, as in the mouth of a twofold witness.

Now let us turn to the second panel of the picture :

THE CHARTER OF THE STONE KINGDOM.

The picture :—

" Thou sawest till that a stone was cut out without hands, which smote the image upon his feet that were of iron and clay, and brake them to pieces.

" Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold, broken to pieces together, and became like the chaff of the summer threshingfloors ; and the wind carried them away, that no place was found for them : and the stone that smote the image became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth.

" This is the dream ; and we will tell the interpretation thereof before the king." (Daniel ii, 34-36.)

" And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed : and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever.

Forasmuch as thou sawest that the stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, and that it brake in pieces the iron. the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold ; the great God hath made known to the king what shall come to pass hereafter : and the dream is certain, and the interpretation thereof sure." (Dan. ii, 44-45.)

We find the Charter of the Stone Kingdom incorporated in the same great document which forms the Charter of the Empires. The establishment of the Stone Kingdom was provided for, to take place " IN THE DAYS OF THESE KINGS." The kings referred to are indicated and numbered in the Charter as follows :

1. " Thou art this head of gold."
2. " After thee shall arise another kingdom inferior to thee."
3. " And another third kingdom of brass."
4. " And the fourth kingdom . . ."

We find that the Kingdom which the God of Heaven set up " in the days of these kings " is granted a fourfold confirmation ; which in contrast exactly balances the fourfold overturning and succession of the Continental system of Empires, thus :

" In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom,"

1. " which shall never be destroyed : "
2. " and the kingdom shall not be left to other people,"
3. " but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms,"
4. " and it shall stand for ever."

Thus the two kingdoms stood over against each other in the Charter, and thus they have stood in fact over against each other throughout the period of prophetic-historic times. In history the Stone destroyed in succession all these kingdoms.

At every period of history, one of the succession of Empires stood over against the unchanging Kingdom of Stone. Thus :

CONTINENTAL.	ISRAEL.
Babylon.	Stone Kingdom.
Medo-Persia.	Stone Kingdom.
Greece.	Stone Kingdom.
Rome.	Stone Kingdom.

Then came the end of the prophetic period, and the end of the life of the Babylon succession of Empires. The Stone then moved against the image to bring about its final breaking up and grinding to pieces. This is thus graphically set forth :

" Forasmuch as thou sawest that the stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, and that it brake in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold ; the great God hath made known to the king what shall come to pass hereafter : and the dream is certain, and the interpretation thereof sure."

Here then we have two new kingdoms placed upon a new unblemished page of world history. They are the Babylonian, and the Kingdom which the God of Heaven set up. The one is Babylon and the other is Britain.

Nebuchadnezzar was confirmed upon the throne in the occupancy of which he was there in his second year—and the " tender one " of Ezekiel was taken and planted in " a high mountain and eminent, even the mountain of the height of Israel " in the " Isles," of which Isaiah writes.

Babylon and Britain had started out upon their march across the pages of history. The Babylon succession started upon its lurid course, to its inevitable destruction at the hands of the Stone Kingdom; and the ancient British to its ultimate destiny of nationhood in the Kingdom of God, which Kingdom should endure for ever, and fill all the earth with ultimate peace and the glory of the reign of Jesus Christ Our Lord.

The period covered by this document is the full seven times, namely, two thousand five hundred and twenty years.

If anyone should be inclined to say "This is too material a reading of the prophecy," let him call to mind the obvious fact that the whole Daniel literature is concerned with the Babylon succession of Empires and the Stone Kingdom. The Prophet Daniel is the Statesman Daniel. He prophesies regarding lines of kings, ruling a succession of Empires, waging wars, fighting battles, engaging in diplomatic correspondence and political intrigue. Yet he shows that God is interested and active in these matters.

He sets up over against that succession of Empires the Stone Kingdom, which carries on nationally, on a higher plane it is true, but just as really. In the movement of the Stone Kingdom God is interested; angels are active in its interests; the Son of God is manifested; and to it finally Our Lord returns.

The whole scope is national and international. But, notwithstanding, it is also infused with the Spirit of God. Daniel was a Statesman, not a preacher; he dealt with statesmanship from the standpoint of theology, not with ecclesiastical matters. This being undoubtedly the character of the literature, we must accept it accordingly.

THE SEVEN CHURCHES.—I.

By W. T. Craig, Esq., F.R.G.S.

(Member of the Royal Philosophical Society, Glasgow, and of various Legal Societies).

The authenticity of the Book of Revelation, like many other portions of the Word of God, has been frequently assailed, and vigorous controversies have arisen from time to time regarding its contents, doubts having been cast upon its authorship, its integrity, and its interpretation, as long ago as the time of Eusebius, Jerome, and Harnack.

The view that the Seven Churches in Asia symbolize various periods of the Christian Era, differing in duration and in character, is not altogether a novel one, as the subject, in its essential features, was dealt with by Abbot Joachim, and Vitringa, as far back as 1527 and 1705 respectively; the same subject having also attracted more recent writers.

The interest of the Seven Churches was not limited to the Epistles addressed to them, and which are to be found in the second and third chapters of Revelation, for the command to John was "what thou seest write in a book, and send it unto the Seven Churches which are in Asia."

A careful study of the terms of these Epistles affords good ground for the belief that prophecy does not start at the fourth chapter, as some commentators contend, but that it includes chapters two and three as well.

If this is so, we have, in the seven Christian communities in Lesser Asia, a constructive prophecy which deals with the whole dispensation—each Church answering to a particular period in that Dispensation, corresponding with the great outstanding features of the period itself, and receiving some corroboration from the name by which each Church is designated.

Thus we will look for the exact moral and spiritual characteristics, required for the purpose of identification, beginning at Ephesus, and going right through to Laodicea, disclosing a symbolical and prophetical history of the ages to come.

The exclusion of chapters two and three, as not being Prophecy, is unwarranted in view of the fact that this concluding book of Scripture itself claims to be "Revelation" and "Prophecy" from beginning to end.

In its opening words it describes itself as "the Revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave unto him."

In the same introduction it is called "the words of this prophecy," while at the end it is styled "the words of the prophecy of this Book," without any reservation whatever; and therefore it is contended that these chapters are as much entitled to be called Apocalyptic and Prophetic as any of the others.

The mystery referred to in verses nineteen and twenty, of Chapter i, is clearly not a mystery connected with the seven stars and the seven candlesticks, for these are immediately removed from the domain of mystery—"the seven stars are the angels of the Seven Churches, and the seven candlesticks are the Seven Churches."

The mystery appears to be connected with the Seven Churches themselves; with "the things which are"; with "the things which shall be hereafter"; with the whole succeeding history of the Dispensation, and with what shall happen at its close. Here then you find a mystical relation of the Seven Churches to the universal Church, lasting until Christ comes to His Kingdom.

This view is supported by the use of the number "seven," which implies mystery, importing, as it does, a fullness or completeness in the things treated of, as when it is said of the seven angels with the seven last plagues, "in them is filled up the wrath of God."

No doubt an infinity of the Divine degrees still remain impenetrably concealed in the mind of God; but we know that He has previously made known some of His purposes respecting future ages, in order to confirm the faith, encourage the hope, and enlarge the views of His people; and that the accomplishment of them in after times might demonstrate the truth of the Scriptures to every diligent inquirer

Hence the Book of Revelation is called "the Revelation of Jesus Christ," because its principal subject is a previous discovery of the purposes of God respecting the affairs of the Church, and of the Nation as connected with it, from the time when it was given, even to the end of the world.

Thus future events were made known to John as they had been to several of the ancient Prophets, especially Ezekiel, Daniel, and Zechariah.

Now let us look at the names and characteristics of the Churches themselves:—

Ephesus.

The name Ephesus signifies "The Sender Forth." It is closely allied in signification with the name "Apostle," and accords well with the period when they "went everywhere preaching the Word"; and when "their sound went into all the earth, and their words unto the end of the world."

Digitized by Google 449498A

That it was a Church specially related to Apostles is plain from these words of the second verse, "Thou hast tried them which say they are Apostles, which are not, and hast found them liars."

You will find no mention of Apostles in the Epistles to any of the other Churches, and it must be kept in mind that the principal mark of an Apostle was that he had seen the risen Saviour, and could personally testify to His Resurrection. Even Paul required to get this mark "as one born out of due time." If then Ephesus corresponds to any period at all, it must correspond to the very earliest.

But let us look at the marks of this Church. She is highly commended on various accounts, as we might fully expect the Apostolic Church to be. Labour and patience are her main characteristics—what she did and what she endured. "I know thy labour and patience," and in a very brief time these were crowned with success.

This was a Church which could "not bear with them which are evil," and which exposed the lies of them which falsely claimed to be Apostles. They knew the Shepherd's voice, and were not deceived by the voice of the hireling and stranger, which was peculiarly the gift and distinction of the early Church. It could not be shared by any later Church, seeing that there could be none to whom the Scriptural definition of Apostle could then apply.

A further feature to which prominence is given is the opposition displayed by the Church to the Nicolaitanes. "But this thou hast, that thou hatest the deeds of the Nicolaitanes, which I also hate."

Who and what were these Nicolaitanes? Commentators differ; some assuming that they were a sect in the early Church, called by that name; others that they were a sect sprung from Nicholas, the Deacon, with no better foundation for the assumption than the similarity of name.

Research, however, fails to disclose the existence of any such sect in the early Church. It would rather appear that the name is symbolic, and refers to some evil tendency beginning to manifest itself in Apostolic times. The name gives us a hint where to look for this evil tendency, for the name Nicolaitanes signifies "the subjugators of the laity." Indeed, the mere English reader can see the word "laity" incorporated in the name; and if it be true that successive epochs are symbolized by the Churches, these subjugators were long at work, and became better adepts at it as they proceeded, for, as will be seen, when we come to deal with the Church of Pergamos, it was then the "doctrine of the Nicolaitanes" which was being tolerated.

In the Ephesian time it was by deeds that they proceeded, high-handed and vulgar means, for which they did not attempt to offer any Divine sanction. But as time rolled on their repressive measures assumed more of system and respectability, and were given forth as God's ordinances. In the period coming between these two—the great martyr period of Smyrna—there is no mention of them. For obvious reasons the hierarchical tendency was checked, but only to break forth again in an intenser shape when quieter times came round. In this view of the Nicolaitanes, then, the name is symbolical of the rise and progress of the hierarchy.

Even in Paul's day there were indications of those who would have liked to be "Lords over God's heritage"—a thing hated by the earliest of the Churches, and by Christ Himself.

It is remarkable that the seven Epistles begin and close with a reference to the laity or people. In the early ages they undergo a process of subjugation; but in the end the scene is changed, and, as we shall see, when we come to consider Laodicea, the people rule.

Ephesus left her first love. That such was the condition of the Apostolic Church as a whole, about the time when the Apocalypse was written, appears from the later Epistles of the Apostles themselves, and particularly from the state of things which speedily followed, as depicted in the earliest Church Records. The decay which ended in rottenness is easily traced to the period when the Apostle John was alive.

Mark the warning which was given to this Church, failing repentance. Her candlestick would be removed out of its place. The light of which the Church was the bearer was not to be extinguished, but to be removed elsewhere, and history shows how completely this was done. Thus all that was addressed to Ephesus fits in with all that is known of the first age of Christianity.

SMYRNA.

The name of the second of the Seven Churches—Smyrna—signifies "myrrh," a name implying sweetness and bitterness—sweetness to the smell, and bitterness to the taste: "My fingers drop sweet-smelling myrrh," says the Bride in the song. "They gave him to drink wine, mingled with myrrh," is Mark's account of what another calls "vinegar mingled with gall."

It is a name which very fittingly describes a period when Christ's followers had to "drink of the cup that he drank of," and when at the same time there was much sweetness in their own inmost hearts: "sorrowful, yet always rejoicing"; "poor, yet rich"; as is here expressly asserted, "I know thy poverty, but thou art rich."

It is further plain, from historical evidence, that Smyrna was among the first of the Apostolic Churches to feel the smart of persecution, and therefore both from her name and actual experience, at the time when these Epistles were being written, she was well fitted to symbolize a lengthened period of trial and suffering.

It is as a suffering and persecuted Church that she is set before us: "I know thy tribulation and poverty." Her trials were of two kinds; first, blasphemy amongst themselves, "in perils among false brethren"; and second, "prison" and "death"; "behold the Devil shall cast some of you into prison." "Be thou faithful unto death."

"Ye shall have tribulation ten days." This was future when John wrote, "Ye shall have"; and it is to be noted that none of the other Churches were so apprized, though contemporary with Smyrna, and in the immediate neighbourhood, and living under the same government.

All interpreters admit that the ten days here mentioned is symbolic of more lengthened periods, and history narrates a time of tribulation under ten Emperors, the last of whom was Diocletian, whose persecution lasted exactly ten years.

The whole period of the tribulation lasted close upon 250 years, and enables the line, at the close of the period represented by Smyrna, to be drawn at the year A.D. 312, when the edict of Milan secured toleration for the Christian religion all over the Roman Empire.

THE NATIVITY DATE.

BY DR. W. GORNOLD.

STUDENTS of Bible chronology are evidently not entirely at rest in regard to this, the fundamental datum of historical Christianity, and I would therefore call attention to the evidences afforded by the writings of Josephus on the one hand, and those of the Apostles on the other, in the hope that something approaching certainty may reside.

Josephus (Antiq. xvii) informs us that "an eclipse of the moon took place on the night preceding one of the Fasts," and further that "the last illness of Herod immediately followed." Also (War ii, 1) he says that "after mourning for Herod seven days, the Passover was approaching." From these statements it is evident that the death of Herod was before the Passover, which is always held on the 15th Nisan, and the eclipse also took place before that festival. As the "Passover was approaching," it could not have been that Paschal Full Moon which suffered eclipse, and we are therefore led to seek an earlier one. The Fast immediately preceding the Passover among the Jewish ordinances is Purim, which falls in the middle of the 12th month (or 13th when it is an intercalary year) called Adar, the intercalary month being Ve-Adar. If this be not the Fast referred to then we should have to go back to the next which falls in the middle of a month, i.e., at the time of the full moon, and this would take us to the Feast of Tabernacles, which falls on the 15th of 7th month, Tishri. It is well here to note that there are only three festivals which fall in the middle of the lunar month, namely, Tabernacles, Purim and Passover. We have seen that the Passover could not have been the eclipse date. Could it have been Purim? If the year indicated was astron. -3, it certainly could, for on the 13th of March (O.S.) in that year, which goes by the common notation of B.C. 4, there was an eclipse of the moon between 2 and 5 o'clock in the morning at Jerusalem and visible therefore in Judea, and this would be the 14th day of the 12th month.

But Josephus also locates this incident of the death of Herod by stating that Herod reigned 37 years after his nomination as King of Judea under the Consulship of Domitius Calvinus and that of Asinius Pollio, and further states that this was in the 184th Olympiad. Now as the Olympiads began in B.C. 776, the 184th would fall in B.C. 40, and this is the year ascribed by Dr. Smith for the Consulship of both Calvinus and Pollio. Then, from the year 40 we count the 37 years of Herod's reign and come to the year B.C. 4, and this is further indicated by the statement of Josephus that Herod reigned for 34 years after the death of Antipater, which according to Dr. Smith took place in B.C. 37. Consequently we may conclude that the eclipse referred to was that of the eve of Purim in the year -3, which was the same year as that of the Nativity of the Lord Jesus, which fact Dr. Smith refers to in a footnote to "Herod." This does not mean that Jesus was born in the year which began with January according to the Roman calendar, but in the year which began in September-October, according to the Jewish calendar, wherein Tishri is the first month of the civil year, so that Tishri B.C. 4 and Tishri B.C. 3 would include (a) the Nativity; (b) the lunar eclipse of Mch. 13th; and (c) the death of Herod, followed in due course by the mourning, and the Passover. The mere fact that the mourning for Herod took place before the Passover, and also followed the eclipse, shows that the death of Herod must be placed between Purim and the Passover and therefore in March-April -3. It puts any suggestion of a July eclipse entirely out of court. The year 3996 A.M. extends from September-October B.C. 4 to the same month in B.C. 3, and this is the same year as that of the Nativity and the death of Herod, which obviously took place in the 6th month of the same year. Several eclipses have been suggested as that indicated by Josephus, but they do not fill the requirements of his text. The search for the right eclipse is narrowed down by the fact that it took place on the eve of a Fast, and there are only three fasts which fall at the time of the full moon. Turning now to the Gospel narrative, we find first of all that the Nativity had taken place before the death of Herod, and though there is no statement as to how much before that event, we have a clue given us in the very circumstantial report of St. Luke that the call of John the Baptist had taken place "in the fifteenth year of Tiberius Cæsar, Pilate being Governor of Judea, and Herod being Tetrarch of Galilee, and his brother Philip Tetrarch of Iturea and of the region Trachonitis, and Lysanias the Tetrarch of Abilene, Annas and Caiaphas being the High Priests—the Word of the Lord came unto John, son of Zacharias, in the wilderness." What admirable exactitude! All these circumstances are related to the 15th year of Tiberius. But when was that? According to the Canon of Ptolemy, the last year of Augustus Cæsar was A.D. 13, the 337th year from Alexander's death. The contemporary history of Rome informs us that Tiberius took the throne without opposition immediately on the death of Augustus, 19th August. Add 14 years complete, and we reach the beginning of the 15th year of Tiberius on 19th August, A.D. 27. It was in this year that John the Baptist answered his holy vocation. Now Jesus was born in the autumn of -3, and therefore in the autumn of A.D. 27 would be "about thirty years of age" or "about to be thirty years of age" as the text says. There are three distinct references to the Passover during the Lord's ministry, the first being that of A.D. 28, the second in A.D. 29, and the third in A.D. 30 immediately before the Great Redemption on Calvary. These Passovers will be found in St. John's Gospel ii, 13; vi, 4; and xiii, 1. On the question as to the exact date in the year -3 (3996 A.M.) that Jesus was born, there has been, and perhaps will continue to be, much discussion, but as I have said elsewhere, finality can only be reached when it is known definitely whether the rotational service of the priests was weekly or fortnightly We know that Zacharias, father of John the Baptist, was of the Order of Abiah and was the 8th in the rotational service.

Of course this deduction will not satisfy the preconceptions of most students of Bible chronology, but it is nevertheless determined by the incident of the 1st Nisan in 3995 A.M. But probably the most remarkable fact, and that which appeals to me most strongly as a student of Cosmic Symbolism, is that the full moon which initiates the last half of the month falls on the 15th September, and thus is the 15th day of the 7th Sacred month. At this date the sun was in the middle of the sign Virgo, with the full moon in the sign Pisces in the opposite quarter of the heavens. Here we have the exact conditions defined by Cosmic Symbolism answering to the vision of St. John in the Apocalypse : " And there appeared a great wonder in the heavens : a woman clothed with the sun and the moon under her feet." For then the sign Virgo would be entirely engulfed in the rays of the sun ; and the moon, being at the full, would be in the sign Pisces, which, according to astral symbolism, indicates the lowest extremities of the body, that is to say, the feet. We see, then, what results from the taking of the bi-weekly service of the priests, and beginning the courses with the Sacred Year, instead of the civil year as is commonly done. It places the birth of Jesus at the full moon of September in the year -3 or 3996 A.M. At this time there would be preparation for Purim, a festival of great extravagance, and a fortnight later for the Civil New Year on 1st Tishri. Hence the need for many thousands of sheep being folded in the fields, since they could not by any means be accommodated in the cities, and the pastureland about Bethlehem was noted for its luxuriance (" The Land and the Book ").

The alternatives to this dating of the Nativity are as follows :

(a) Employing the Civil Year as the basis of the calculation with

(1) the weekly rotation of the Priestly Orders ;

(2) the bi-weekly rotation of the same.

(b) Employing the Sacred Year with the weekly rotation service.

In the above article I have employed those factors which appear best suited to all the known circumstances, and others may feel disposed to test in other directions ; but while fully aware of both traditional and scholastic objections that might militate against my conclusion, I am satisfied that the Calendarics of the Bible can only be securely established by reference to astronomical facts.

THE HERDSMAN, AMOS.

By Professor Edward Odlum, M.A., B.Sc.

This prophet was one of several herdsmen about Tekoa, south-eastward from Jerusalem and near to Bethlehem. In addition to his work with the flocks, he gave considerable attention to the gathering of fruit, perhaps as a horticulturist, or a small trader.

He lived and acted in the time of Uzziah, king of Judah, and Jeroboam, king of Israel.

" Two years before the earthquake " may mean that he delivered his prophecy two years before " the earthquake." This must have been a most effective " quake," so as to make its time of action a prominent year for chronological purposes.

Amos gives no less than eight national messages, viz., to Damascus, Gaza, Tyre, Edom, Ammon, Moab, Judah and Israel.

In addressing Damascus he dealt with the nation Syria, usually an enemy nation of Israel and Judah. The threats foretold were carried into effect in later times, as history shows. Their punishment was foretold because of their harsh, unjust treatment of Israel the nation.

The words are : " Because they have threshed Gilead with threshing instruments of iron." Gilead was an important part of the kingdom of Israel, therefore the punishment of Syria came from their treatment of Israel. What a lesson here ! What a suggestion ! If a nation was terribly scourged in the olden time because of its attack upon Israel, can a modern nation expect to go free, if it, in like manner, works an injustice upon God's national Israel of to-day ? Think it over !

The next promised punishment was directed against Gaza, representing the nationals knows as Philistines. Look at the cause of the coming punishment. Truly wonderful, and somewhat similar to charge number one !

Here are the words : " Because they carried away captive the whole captivity to deliver them up to Edom."

This means that Gaza was unjust and merciless to Israel in captivity in their land, i.e., in the land of the Philistines. The whole captivity, of necessity, meant the whole of Israel in Gaza, or Philistia, as captives. All these were delivered up, or handed over to Edom the cruel murderer of Israel ; and because Gaza and the Philistines handed over to Edom the people of Israel within their borders, the Lord decided to punish Gaza and the rest of Philistia.

Just as the people of Syria were doomed to go as captives to Kir, so the remnant of the Philistines were to perish. In both cases the reason given was their harsh treatment of Israel.

We now come to the chastisement of Tyre by Amos, according to Divine command.

Let us see why Tyre was marked out for punishment. Again we find that the treatment of Israel by Tyre is the cause of the then coming judgment. Here are the words : " Because they delivered up the whole captivity to Edom."

This was a cruel act. A part of Israel was captive in Tyre, and this city and nation delivered up to Edom the whole of the Israel captivity within their borders.

Tyre and Gaza could have held in safety within their borders the captives of Israel, but in their cruelty they preferred to hand over these captives to Edom, who, in blood-thirstiness, was determined to destroy his brother Israel.

The above three national punishments were to be meted out on account of their treatment of Israel, God's chosen northern kingdom of people.

Before passing from Tyre we wish to examine a second charge, viz., "Because they remembered not the brotherly covenant." What can these words hold in thought? "The brotherly covenant"?

In the days of David and Solomon on one side, and Hiram, king of Tyre, on the other, a remarkable and far-reaching covenant was made between the kingdom of Tyre and the whole kingdom of Israel of the Twelve Tribes. It related to many matters, including the international movements of their workmen and important trade relationships.

Tyre evidently, in later years, forgot and neglected the "brotherly covenant"; in other words, the Peace Pact, viz., the industrial and commercial treaty of Hiram and Solomon. Because Tyre neglected this treaty to the hurt of Israel, Tyre was to be punished, and was most effectively punished, even to destruction.

Why "brotherly covenant"? Very simple! Their voluntarily undertaken relationship was that of brothers. Hence the term.

We now come to Edom, and see this nation on its own account. This people, Esau, Edom, Esauria, Idumea, worked cruelly against all Israel of the Twelve Tribes during long hundreds of years, simply because he hated his brother Jacob on "account of the birthright blessing" which he madly despised at the beginning.

What is the charge made against Edom by the Lord through Amos? Here are the words: "Because he did pursue his brother with the sword, and did cast off all pity, and his anger did tear perpetually, and he kept his wrath forever." An awful charge! A cruel man! A heartless nation! A murderous people! The punishments have been fulfilled in part, especially of late, and are yet in process. The national wreck will be most complete by the time all the punishments foretold against Edom are ended.

The four nations above-mentioned were to be punished because of their treatment of God's Israel. We now proceed, and find further evidence concerning the enemies of the chosen race.

Ammon next appears, and is due great chastisement for a definite reason. The words are: "Because they have ripped up the women with child of Gilead, that they might enlarge their border." Here we have Israel again. Gilead is used for Israel, as in the case of Damascus discussed above.

To lay hand, unjustly and cruelly, on Israel the nation, or people, is an offence of major account. It cannot pass! No nation can get away successfully with an unjust deal against Israel. Because of this fact, Ammon had to nationally pass under the rod of Divine punishment.

There is yet another foreign nation, a sixth nation, to be dealt with by Amos. This is the Hebrew Moab. Syria, Tyre, Edom and Ammon, as well as Moab, were all Hebrew peoples, descended from Heber of the Shemitic line.

What charge stands against Moab? It is rather a peculiar act this son of Lot is charged with: "Because he burned the bones of the king of Edom into lime."

Here we have a new reason for dealing out severe treatment to an enemy nation, for Moab was a nation at enmity with Israel over centuries. But the claim is not on account of Israel this time, but because of Edom, and in a remarkable relationship. He burned into lime the bones of an Edomite king.

What this meant or involved we are not prepared at the present to say. One wonders if burning a corpse as against burying was forbidden! Perhaps Moab knowingly broke in upon the long-established custom of burying the monarchs descended from the Abrahamic Saxon line.

If lime were a scarce article in that region, we might imagine that Moab burned the royal Edomic bones into lime for economic and commercial purposes. However, there was and is an unlimited supply of lime, or limestone, in ancient Canaan, as geologists of to-day know.

From the above we see that five nations were to be chastised for their treatment of Israel, and one of these five was Israel's own brother Edom.

Moab stands in a class by himself. If any of my readers can explain the bone burning into lime charge, I would be glad to hear the explanation. Later, we may look at the other two nations mentioned by Amos.

THE BATTLE FOR THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

BY THE REV. MAXWELL CARNSON, F.R.G.S., F.R.S.A.

IT would be impossible to say how many books have been written on the subject of the Kingdom of God, but the number of those writers who interpret the words literally as they stand might be counted on the fingers of the hand. For the most part, the modern interpretation of the phrase implies a spiritual state of affairs from which modern civilization is as yet very far removed, with laws and guiding principles which are based upon the Sermon on the Mount, interpreted in accordance with the desires or prejudices of the particular exponent concerned.

As to what is actually meant by the Kingdom of God there is no general agreement, either within or outside the Churches; nor can any two branches of the Church as we know it be got to coincide in their interpretation of the Ideal State which the phrase, for them, implies.

Though in some circles the Kingdom of God is made conterminous with the spiritual experience and life of the Church, it will at least be generally agreed that not all members of the Churches are living according to the laws and atmosphere of this mystical and spiritual Kingdom; while a large number of those who profess no allegiance to any Church are obviously to be included within the scope of the Kingdom's ideals and practice, so far as their daily life is concerned.

The result is that for most people the Kingdom of God has become a nebulous, far-off ideal, similar to More's Utopia, Plato's Ideal State, or Augustine's "City of God." It has even become possible for a modern scholar to write, of the statements which the Bible makes concerning the Kingdom, in the following terms :—

" It must be evident that many of these promises have not been fulfilled, and that now circumstances have so changed that they never can be fulfilled ; but, like the similar pictures drawn by other prophets, they remain as inspiring ideals of the future which God would fain see realized by or for His people, and a goal which man, with God's help, should ever strive to attain." *

This unwillingness to read the words " Kingdom of God " literally arises from a worthy, if over-scrupulous, fear lest, by so doing, we should too much materialize the spiritual purposes of God. To reduce spiritual truth to material terms, and lose the reality in the form, has always been the most successful line of attack of the enemies of God's will. Our " wrestling " may be " against principalities and powers, against the world-rulers of this darkness, against the spiritual hosts of wickedness in heavenly places," but, if their activities be " in the heavenlies," the manifestation of their activities is essentially and emphatically " in the earthlies " ; and it is " in the earthlies " that they must be fought and overcome.

That the arch-enemy does utilize the material form to hide the spiritual reality beneath, that he delights in the " letter that killeth " in his conflict with the " Spirit which giveth life," is evidenced continually in the writings of the Old and New Testaments. One example only must suffice by way of illustration at the moment. The extreme regard for the written commandments of Moses, the " letter of the Law," and the accumulation of rules and traditions which were the especial shortcoming of Pharisaism will spring at once to mind ; as will also, in another connection, certain types of ritual expression of spiritual truth, exemplified in the grosser forms of heathen sacrifice and of Western sacramentarianism.

But to swing to the other extreme of the absolute spiritualizing of truth is equally dangerous, besides being false to the general tenor of the revealed will of God. If Satan has too easily led men astray by emphasizing the material and making them forget the spiritual, it is because God has graciously revealed truth to men in concrete forms which they can understand, and the enemy has taken what God provides and turned it to his own base uses. " Didst thou not sow good seed ? From whence then hath it tares ? "—" An enemy hath done this."

On the other hand, we must not forget the fact that, running throughout the Scriptures, there is a principle asserted or implied that in His dealings with man God takes hold of the very same material ends which Satan has bent to his own use, and more than triumphs over the adversary, turning the tables upon him even in the line of his own materialism. This is the principle which the great American divine, Dr. Henry C. Mabie, calls the " High Moral Irony " of God, as if God works out His eternal purposes upon Satan's own material level " in worthy moral derision " of his diabolical schemes.

Illustrations of this " High Moral Irony " may be found in the way in which God uses Joseph's betrayal into Egypt as a means for the salvation of his family from famine, and how He causes the plot of Haman, in the days of Queen Esther, to recoil upon his own head. He even institutes for the rescued Hebrews the Feast of " Purim, or Lots," as an everlasting remembrance of the care which the unfortunate Haman took to " cast lots " to find a propitious day for his attack upon God's chosen people. The outstanding instance, of course, in all history is when God turns the Cross, on which Satan has brought men to crucify the Son of God, into the Throne of Glory from which Christ rules the hearts of men. And all this, be it noticed, is accomplished by use of the very same material means which was to have been Satan's last word and crowning victory.

In his book, " The Meaning and Message of the Cross," Dr. Mabie illustrates this principle by the following story :—

" Some summers ago an American eagle was seen hovering over one of our inland lakes, when all at once it dropped like a plummet into the water, and shortly emerged with a mammoth muscalonge in its talons, and slowly rose to the upper air. After a little it began to waver in its flight, and strangely enough began to settle back towards the lake. It actually dropped into the waters and perished with its quarry.

" A boatman observing it rowed out to the spot, and secured the bird with the fish in its grasp. It appeared that, when the eagle descended upon the fish, it struck its talons with such force into the bony framework of the fish, that later the eagle found the weight of its prey either exhausting to its power to fly, or, finding itself unable to release its hold, became panic-stricken, and so fell back and perished."

Dr. Mabie concludes his argument with the words :

" How consummate and divine this mastery. It turns the edge of all which God's opponents contemplated and makes their supposed conquest His own."

A second principle of the way in which God works should be pointed out. He has always chosen to work out His purpose in and through human beings, rather than by direct intervention from outside. He is always seeking the means whereby His will may be revealed and the agencies through which the invisible realities, which are of the essence of His own nature, may be shown in graphic form upon the stage of human history. To this end He has chosen men and nations, raising up one and setting down another, yet always bringing nearer the accomplishment of His purpose.

This process of selectivity in God, whereby He preserves for Himself that instrument which will best serve to witness to the truth He wishes to reveal, is more particularly seen in the witness which the Hebrews were called to bear in the midst of the polytheistic nations. They were to stand for the pure worship of the One God, revealed to them in the form of God's Kingship over them. The ideal was vitiated in their national life by the gross earthliness of their polity ; and their history is mainly a record of how, from time to time, those elements of national life which hindered God's purpose and marred His revelation were cut off.

Time and again the line of witness is reduced to its thinnest strands, occasionally to the limits of one family alone, sometimes almost to the point of complete extinction. Yet even when the worst seems to have happened and both Israel and Judah are carried into captivity into Assyria and Babylon, there yet is left a remnant to carry on the work, a " stock out of the root" which cannot be overthrown. Even in the darkest ages of national materialism there always remained some who "waited for the consolation of Israel," and never has the light of hope and faith been completely extinguished.

* Driver, " The Prophet Jeremiah."

There are times when even the last remnant is lost sight of altogether, when it looks as if no man is left to carry on the witness and as if "circumstances had so altered that the promises can never now be fulfilled." God's tarrying seems often inexplicable; yet a true faith in the God Who never varies, Who is "the same yesterday, to-day and for ever," will rather cling to the belief that sooner or later His purposes will be brought to pass, and that the "inspiring ideals which God would fain see realized" shall yet become actualities. How otherwise can we avoid seeing in the Almighty God a God Who is a slave to man's evil passions, while Satan is victorious to the end?

It will be generally admitted by most students of the Old Testament that the revelations of God's will in the Bible are cast in material forms. It would be difficult to argue that the glowing pictures of Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel and all the prophets, to say nothing of the promises to the patriarchs and to David, were all of them in reality spiritual ideals. To cast spiritual truth, and truth which is only spiritual, in terms which so closely fit the individual and national longings materially, and never to give a hint that the recipients must interpret the promises merely in a spiritual form would be a form of deception unworthy of a Father Whose essence is love. Not even an earthly father would so treat his child as to paint for him glorious prospects of possessing the things he desires most, and, when the time for fulfilment of the promise comes along, to say, "Oh, you were taking me too literally. All I meant was to be understood in a spiritual sense." "Which of you, if his son ask bread, will give him a stone? Or if he ask fish, will give him a scorpion?"

Close attention must be paid, in connection with the modern spiritualization of the statements made in the Old and New Testaments, to the assertion that God's promises, while confessedly made in the material sense, must now be translated spiritually. The argument is that, since Satan has triumphed so completely on the material level, and has so grossly misled humanity into the worship of material things—or, to put it in less personal terms, "since circumstances have so changed that these promises can never now be fulfilled"—God has retired from the material level, where He made His promises, to a higher spiritual level to which man must attain in order to realize the blessings. "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the Kingdom of God." To this end the Spirit was given that He might "guide us into all the truth"; to this end was it that Jesus said to His disciples, "It is expedient for you that I go away, for if I go not away, the Spirit will not come unto you"; in other words, "you will continue to rely on the material form when you should dwell in the Spirit."

This is a forceful argument and one which will appeal to all spiritually-minded men, who will realize that God's ultimate truth IS spiritual, even though He graciously acquiesces in our need of a material form in which to read the truth. The story is told of a mother who had just taken her little girl to bed, and on leaving her for the night's sleep, said to her, "Now, my darling, you must not be afraid of the dark. You have said your prayers; you know that God will take care of you; you have your dolly; and mother will be downstairs." Good-nights were said, and the mother left the room. Within five minutes, a pitiful little cry from the child brought her back. "But, dearie, you must not be a naughty little girl. You have your dolly for company, and you know that God is taking care of you." Back came the tearful reply, "Yes, mummy, I know I've got my dolly; and I know that God's taking care of me; but I did want someone with a skin face."

Our Father of Love knows that we mortal beings, with all our faith and knowledge, do want someone with a "skin face," some definite manifestation of truth to which we can cling in human understanding and with the warmth of a human passion; and He has always met our need. With that concession, He has also "given us of His Spirit," whose ministry it is to interpret the spiritual will of God at work in all material things. Never, for instance, was there a more deeply spiritual fact than that our salvation was accomplished in the death of Christ; yet it is in the material cross of wood which stands at the centre of the world's history that men of every race and of all mentalities have seen and understood that spiritual salvation. Why, then, should it seem unlikely—impossible is the word the doubters use—that the spiritual truth of God's Overlordship should be manifested to all the world in the material form of a Kingdom, the form in which it was undoubtedly promised and which Jesus Himself verified in His words, "Not one jot or tittle shall pass away from the law until all things be accomplished"?

We must not be misled in our interpretation of God by any seeming delay in the working out of His plans. It is said that Napoleon, on being reminded of the cost in human life of one of his proposed campaigns, arrogantly remarked, "What are a million men to me?" May we not reverently think of God as saying, "What are a million years to Me?" since to Him "a thousand years are but as one day, and one day as a thousand years."

And if we feel regret for the generations which have passed from this earth without seeing the fulfilment of their hopes, may it not be that our regret rises from a false proportion as between this brief span of human existence and the greater, fuller, life which is theirs in the endless realities of God? So that, sooner or later, "all flesh shall see it together, for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." Nor must the seeming impossibility of God's working out His purposes on both the material and the spiritual planes mislead us, since, "Your thoughts are not My thoughts, neither are your ways My ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are My thoughts higher than your thoughts and My ways than your ways. For as the rain cometh down and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth and maketh it bring forth and bud, and giveth seed to the sower and bread to the eater, so shall My word be that goeth forth out of My mouth. It shall not return unto Me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it."

Any study of the Kingdom of God, then, will be inadequate which fails to take into account the three principles which have been illustrated:

Digitized by Google

(1) The Self-Limitation of God, whereby He prefers to work through human agency wherever possible.

(2) The Moral Irony of God, in which He takes the very material forms which are Satan's own weapons and turns them victoriously upon the foe.

(3) The Selective Process of God, whereby He chooses or rejects, and moulds for His use, those instruments which are best fitted to the carrying out of His eternal purpose.

From these three premises we are led to the conclusion that the great phrase " Kingdom of God " is something more than a phrase, more even than an " inspiring ideal of the future which God would fain see realized." We realize that behind and above all the kingdoms of this world there is the invisible and eternal Kingdom of God, and that in fulfilment of His will and purpose that Kingdom shall be at last manifested; a spiritual Kingdom, as all kingdoms are spiritual in essence, but dealing, no less than they, with material things on a material plane, and in material splendour manifesting eternal truth before the material eyes of materially-minded men. In what other effective sense can we speak of the " kingdoms of this world becoming the Kingdom of Our Lord and of His Christ "?

Such was God's obvious intent for the Hebrews among the surrounding blackness of heathenism; such was the purpose which Satan thought he had frustrated when he persuaded them to ask for a material king. Yet it will be in accordance with God's nature and method that through the very upraising of that material king, which was to have been the downfall of God's Overlordship, there will yet be manifested an even more glorious Kingdom than the Hebrew kingdom could ever have been by itself; and Satan's efforts to thwart the will of God will only be found to have given it a brighter glory and a wider revelation.

How and where the Kingdom shall be manifested is not our purpose here; that has been written elsewhere. We are to trace the idea of the Kingdom of God from Genesis to Revelation. We are to see at what stages and by what method Satan has endeavoured to overthrow it, and how at each stage he has been over-reached. If the reading brings the idea of the Kingdom of God more humanly near to us, and so prepares our hearts to enter into the Kingdom with the simplicity, earnestness and enthusiasm of the little child, the work will have accomplished its end.

PREVAILING PRAYER.

By Henry Proctor, F.R.S.L.

Before we can prevail with man for his salvation, we must first learn to prevail with God in prayer. There are two kinds of effectual prayer, which are closely connected with each other.

(1) Wrestling.—There was the wrestling prayer of Jacob, which won for him the glorious and eternally to be honoured name of Israel, for " As a prince hast thou power with God, and with man, and hast prevailed." Because he had and prevailed with Him, so he afterwards prevailed with his brother Esau, and with all men with whom he came in contact. The lesson to us is this, that if we prevail first in the unseen world, we shall go forth conquering, and to conquer. " For our wrestling is not against flesh and blood, but against the principalities, against the powers, against the world rulers of this darkness, against the spiritual hosts of wickedness in the heavenly places." (Ephes. vi, 12—R.V.) " For ours is no struggle against flesh and blood, but against all the various powers of evil, that hold sway in the darkness around us " (20th Century.) This wrestling, however, is continuous; always we need to have on the full armour of God, so that we may be able to stand our ground against the stratagems of the Devil; for we are then " Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all Saints." (Eph. vi, 18.) In this sense we live

A Life of Prayer, for we " Pray without ceasing." But this cannot be maintained apart from special seasons of Waiting upon God, for " The waiters on Jehovah shall exchange strength " (put off the human and put on Divine strength), " They shall mount up as with eagle's wings into the Heavenlies; they shall penetrate through the veil, into the Most Holy Place, yea into Heaven itself." (Isa. xl, 31; Heb. x, 19.)

Authority.

Then there is authority—the prayer of authority—like that of Our Lord at the raising of Lazarus—thus, " Father, I thank Thee that Thou hast heard My prayer; I know that Thou always hearest Me, but for the sake of the people standing near I said this, so that they may believe that Thou hast sent Me." Then He cried with a loud voice, " Lazarus, come forth." (John xi, 41-43.)

This was the voice of authority, which has power to wake the dead. This was like the prayer of Mark xi, 23: " Have the faith of God " (mark ver. 22) and then, " Whosoever shall say to this mountain, be thou taken up and cast into the sea, and shall not doubt in his heart, but shall believe that what he saith cometh to pass; he shall have it. He shall have whatsoever he saith." For, " All things are possible to him that believeth."

To him that will live the prayer life and to whom the Word of God is his meat day and night, God says, " All things are yours." " Everything belongs to you." " All that I have is thine." If you remain united to Me, and My teaching remains in your hearts, ask whatsoever you wish, and it shall be yours. (John xv, 6—20th Century N.T.)

There is no doubt that the spontaneous prayer of authority is the outcome of the continuous prayer of wrestling. It was so with Our Lord, who often spent whole nights in prayer, and Who lived in the Bosom of the Father, by an unceasing communication. It was for lack of this kind of prayer that the disciples failed to cast out the demon from the epileptic boy, at the foot of the Mount of Transfiguration, as He said unto them: " This kind can come out by nothing save by prayer." (Mark ix, 29.) He was always ready for the exercise of authority, because He lived the prayer life of unceasing communion with the Father.

It was the same with Elijah. He spent many years in the desert before he could come forth and say, " As the Lord God liveth, before whom I stand, there shall not be dew nor rain these years, but according to my word." (1 Kings xvii, 1.) This is the first recorded utterance of Elijah the Tishbite, which began to be fulfilled at once. This is the example of a prayer energized (energoumene) or inwrought by the Holy Spirit, prayed in the Faith of God, and therefore infallible. Such prayer as this can be offered for the sick, for lame, and blind, and deaf, and dumb, and for casting out of demons, by those who are living the prayer life, for to such true disciples as these He says, "All authority is given unto Me in Heaven and on earth, and behold I have given you authority over all the power of the enemy, over all demons, and unclean spirits, to cast them out, and to heal every disease and every sickness among the people." This authority can be exercised by one or more, or whole assemblies of believers, to heal the sick, the lame, the blind, deaf, dumb, or to cast out demons at any distance, for not only are all evil spirits subject to the Name of Jesus, but likewise all the invisible powers of light as well as of darkness, for all Angels, and authorities and powers (are) made subject unto Him. (1 Pet. iii, 22.) And we are empowered by this authority to use the Name which is above every Name, and the same mighty power which God exerted, when He raised Christ from the dead, and caused Him to sit at His Right Hand, exalting Him above all Angels, and Archangels, of every rank, is to be exercised on our behalf, and in us who believe (see Ephes. i, 19, 4—20th Century). We are to exercise the same authority that He exercised, and through it to do the same, and even greater works than He did Himself. But this can only be done by those who are living a life of prayer and absolutely selfless devotion to Him. These alone will be enabled to say, "I know that Thou hearest me always."

This, then, is the equipment essential to the prayer-warrior, who, as a member of the Royal Priesthood of Melchizedek, would stand between God and the people, and between the living and the dead. But this is not His message to the people, for the Gospel of Healing is a Gospel of free Grace. This must be so because it is a part of His Salvation. The Redemption of the body is an integral part of the Atoning Work of Our Lord Jesus Christ (Matt. viii, 17.) He took on Him our sickness and weaknesses and bore the burdens of our diseases is as much a part of the Gospel as that "He bore our sins in His own body on the tree," for, "By His wounds you have been healed." (1 Pet. ii, 24—W.)

"Come unto Me all you toiling and burdened ones, and I will give you rest, and who is burdened as the sick?—the prisoners whom Satan hath bound; captives to whom Jesus came to proclaim liberty. This message is for all the world, for He tasted death for every man.

"Himself took our infirmities,
Our sicknesses He bore;
He calls to you, O suffering ones,
You need bear them no more."

Perhaps you have prayed for many years for Healing, with no result; but now obey Him: "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God, and Healing and all other good things will be added unto you, for then will you begin to learn what it means to have power with God, and to prevail with men also, by living a life of prevailing prayer, and being daily led forth in the train of His triumph, as more than conquerors through Him that hath loved you." (Rom. viii, 37.)

BRITISH-ISRAEL: THE PLAIN ARGUMENT.—I.

By P. W. Thompson, M.A.

In this year of grace 1929 we find ourselves citizens of an Empire the most extensive the world has ever known, an Empire far larger than any of the four whose existence and subsequent overthrow was foreseen by the prophet Daniel, an Empire which, despite many mistakes and errors, has most certainly made for the peace, the righteousness, and the prosperity of the peoples over whom it holds sway. It has within its ranks the most decidedly missionary, Bible-spreading, administrative, adventurous and colonizing individuals by whose labours the earth has ever been blessed.

In a year of deep disgrace, 721 B.C., the great body of the Ten Tribes of Northern Israel, idolatrous, divorced from God, "not My people," were flung out of the Promised Land which they had polluted by their doings, and the historical portion of the Scriptures knows them no more.

And yet there are extraordinary persons in our midst who hold that these two peoples—Britain and Israel—are one and the same people, who, having been divorced under the Old Covenant, were admitted again to the full favour of God under the New Covenant.

The present writer happens to be one of these "extraordinary persons." The full chain of detailed argument along the line of which he reached this conclusion has already been published in Israel in Prophecy and History. In this article it is his desire merely to indicate the main features of the argument, and this with the utmost simplicity.

First of all, there is no inherent impossibility attaching to our belief. Sharon Turner, the historian, long before British-Israel was much heard of, traced our ancestry from a district "East of the Araxes," one of the very places of Israel's captivity. He held that the inhabitants of this district had migrated to the shores of the Black Sea, and thence to Britain and certain contiguous countries. That great Englishman, Canon Kingsley, Professor of History at Cambridge (1860–69), took it as a certain truth that our forebears came from the shores of the Black Sea. We suppose that historians generally are agreed upon this point.

But, say our opponents, even granting this to be the case, our ancestors cannot have been Israelites, because the Ten Tribes returned to Jerusalem with Judah and Benjamin after the Babylonian captivity of the Jews.

The Bible never says they returned to Jerusalem, but rather indicates the contrary. (2 Kings xvii, 23; 1 Chron. v, 26.) The Apocrypha, Josephus and St. Jerome say that they did not return to Jerusalem. And the archæologists have settled the matter for all time by finding, in the Crimea, on the shores of the Black Sea, Israelitish burying-grounds which had been in use for hundreds of years before their abandonment in A.D. 6. The importance of this discovery can hardly be overestimated. We know now that Israel reached the Euxine. We know that our ancestors came from the Euxine.

In the second place, though we do not wish to press the argument too far, it is really a matter of interest as to how we obtained the four thousand words, derived from the Hebrew, which our language contains and which may be described as belonging to the "folk language." Granted that we have borrowed, and borrowed enormously, in compiling the 220,000 words which our language is, for dictionary purposes, said to contain, nations do not borrow "common words and names of familiar objects." Such words are racial, and our four thousand Hebrew words in common use are, many of them, just such racial words.

The Israelites were lost in 721 B.C. It has been ascertained that they must have lived, at any rate some of them, by the Black Sea until the time of Our Lord. Our ancestors came from the Black Sea, and we use four thousand words, derived from eight hundred Hebrew roots, in our common speech. The British-Israel Theory is not an impossibility.

But is it a fact?

Considerations of space prevent the detailed production of our calculations in what we may term the chronological unveiling of Prophecy, but we assure our readers that the dates given herein, the result of our calculations in this field, have been checked, re-checked, and re-checked again before their original publication. None of our critics attempted to dispute their arithmetical accuracy after publication. Now the prophet Hosea states that a revival of Israel would take place on "the third day." The earliest date upon which this could fall out was A.D. 1198. Lord Macaulay dates the beginnings of our national greatness from A.D. 1199, a fact unknown to the present writer when he made the above calculation. If this is a coincidence, it is at least a striking one. The British-Israel Theory was not known in Macaulay's day.

It was in the year 1878 that Dr. Grattan Guinness published a monumental work, in which it was clearly proved that the word "time" in Scripture meant a period of 360 years. Now Moses had foretold that continued and intentional sin would mean for Israel "seven times" of punishment. (Leviticus xxvi, 24, 28.) This did not mean a merely sevenfold punishment, for even the Septuagint keeps to the "seven times" in place of "sevenfold" in one of the two passages in which this threat is prophetically uttered. It was to be a chastisement lasting for Seven Times, or 2,520 years. Applying this key to the House of Judah, and basing his calculations upon the three different commencements of their chastisement, he stated that the years 1917, 1923 and 1934 would be pregnant years for Jewry.

Let us point out that this work was issued to the public nearly forty years before 1917.

In 1917 Allenby took Jerusalem. Within the "prophetic" year 1923 (in March, 1924) the Caliphate was abolished. What 1934 may hold lies in the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God.

But Dr. Guinness never applied his key to the House of Israel, or Ten Tribes, separate from Judah ever since the days of Rehoboam. Let us do so for him, and we find that 1780, 1800 and 1845 were to be years pregnant for Israel. We may here remark that applying the key in both lunar and solar years, as it has been finally ascertained we ought to do in all prophetic investigation, we find that the period 1702 to 1845 was to be a marked period in Israel's restoration—something much greater than the "reviving" of 1198. For in this period the chastisement was absolutely to die away.

If Britain be Ephraim, this era—1702 to 1845—must be marked by the receipt by Britain of all those blessings promised to the fathers, the enjoyment of which the continuance of the Seven Times of chastisement had hitherto sore let and hindered. Such blessings consisted, amongst other things, in (1) military supremacy; (2) naval supremacy; (3) wealth; (4) fecundity; (5) possession of the "gates" of their enemies; (6) colonial expansion.

As we must all be possessed of some knowledge of Britain's history in that era of terrific expansion, we need not labour the point. The facts are overwhelming. All these prophecies were fulfilled to us literally. Such a series of coincidences cease to be coincidence. There is design.

Mark this, that every historicist amongst our prophetic students is, through the results—the proved results—of Guinness's work bound down to the belief that Israel's chastisement died away between the years 1702 and 1845. If Britain be not Israel, then find Israel. And don't shirk the responsibility. Ephraim must have come into prominence in these years, and in the manner mentioned. Did other claimants to the heirship of Israel, such as the Afghans, or the Nestorians, or the Japanese, or the Jews? You know that they did not. It all happened to a people who had come from the Black Sea, and who use 4,000 Hebrew words in their common speech, who had come from that self-same district by the Black Sea in which Israel has been found by the archæologist after having been lost in the Bible. We demand of our opponents that they produce this Israelitish people, who were to be clearly recognizable by the blessings accruing to them between 1702 and 1845, and more particularly between 1780 and 1845, the dates of solar termination. If they cannot find Israel elsewhere, we have found Israel in Britain. People who set themselves out to attack the British-Israel Truth without dealing to finality with this point may spare themselves the labour. It is the crucial point, and one which they never dare honestly to tackle.

The greatest mercy of this period of overwhelming mercy was God's gift to this nation of John Wesley (1703–1791). In this man's lifetime he led such vast multitudes of Israel to real repentance and vital belief, out of arid formalism, as completely to change the moral and spiritual tone of the nation. The majestic grandeur of the work which God accomplished for Israel through this scholarly, statesmanlike saint we have utterly failed to realize, and the suddenness of it. In 1785 he wrote: "I was now considering how strangely the grain of mustard-seed, planted about fifty years ago, has grown up. It has spread through all Great Britain and Ireland; the Isle of Wight and the Isle of Man; then to America, from the Leeward Islands, through the whole continent, into Canada and Newfoundland. And the societies in all these parts walk by one rule . . . striving to worship God, not in form only, but likewise in spirit and in truth." Spiritually, the desert had blossomed as the rose. We have often thought that the career of Wesley is the keystone of the British-Israelite's arch. It is to be noted that chastisement fell upon the great body of Israel in 721 B.C., which means that by A.D. 1800 the heaviest period of chastisement must be well over. It was through the instrumentality of God's chosen servant, John Wesley, that so burning a flame of true religion had been lit in this country that the wealth, the military and naval success, and the increase of territory granted to Israel at this time did not prove to be an unmitigated curse. For gold without grace means hell, here and hereafter. "How hardly shall a rich man enter the Kingdom of Heaven," but "with God all things are possible."

CORRESPONDENCE.

"DAN. IX, 25."

To the Editor.

DEAR SIR,—I have read with great interest in your issue of December 29th, 1928, Mr. Van Lennep's reply to my letter in that of December 8th. My whole desire, like his, is to arrive at the truth whatever it may be, with no wish whatever to force the words of Scripture to agree with my preconceived ideas as to secular history, should the latter be mistaken, but I regret to be unable to accept your correspondent's theory as to the shortening of "The Times of the Gentiles" upon which he has so set his heart, and which he considers only requires "to be plainly and simply stated for all to see at a glance." In trying to substantiate his contention he has, however, entirely misrepresented the explanation I sought to give, for he states that I insist that the commandment to build and restore Jerusalem was handed to Gabriel, but that the Archangel, instead of at once acting upon it, quietly put the order in his pocket, to be executed some eighty to ninety years later. This, I need hardly say, is not exactly the case! The joint Babylonian reign of Darius the Mede, being then sixty-two years old, and of Cyrus the Persian, being sixty-three, began after the fall of Babylon in 3468 A.M., i.e., 531 B.C. (I never said it was 539 B.C.), in which year Daniel prayed to the Lord his God, using the words recorded in chapter ix, and we read that as soon as he began to speak the commandment went forth—the word begins with a small "c," and refers to the instructions Gabriel at once received to fly swiftly to give Daniel the information he had asked for. This is the meaning I wished to convey—a very different thing. In that same year, 531 B.C., God stirred up the spirit of Cyrus to issue a proclamation giving permission, to any of the children of the captivity that were willing, to return to Judea and to build again "the House of the Lord the God of Israel which is in Jerusalem." Please note that Mr. Van Lennep here misquotes the words "to build and restore Jerusalem," as these do not occur in connection with this expedition. Therefore this opportunity given by Cyrus "in the first year of Darius the Mede" to rebuild the Temple was quite distinct from the commandment to build and restore the City foretold in v. 25, for the two undertakings had different objects in view and were separated by a period of over eighty years. The former did not prove to be either "a dead letter" or "inefficient," for in accordance with its conditions the building of the second Temple by the Jews under Zerubbabel was successfully accomplished, and its Dedication celebrated in 3489 A.M., 510 B.C., in the month Adar, in the sixth year of Darius Hystaspes (Ezra vi, 15), at the end of the 490th year (inclusive) since the Dedication by Solomon of the first Temple in 3000 A.M. It will be noted that although having no authority for so doing, Zerubbabel actually attempted to build the walls of the City, but was prevented by local opposition. Mr. Van Lennep is therefore incorrect in stating that the "restoration of Jerusalem was carried out in Zerubbabel's days." Of course, the six first chapters of Ezra record events that were already ancient history at the time of writing, as they occurred from eighty to ninety years before Ezra's own experiences, described in the seventh and following chapters. Daniel no doubt well understood what Gabriel referred to in v. 25, and there is no need to worry about his being "cruelly deceived." The famous Decrees of Artaxerxes Longimanus issued to Ezra and Nehemiah respectively in the sixth (why does Mr. Van Lennep suppose I mean the seventh? The expedition started on the first day of the first month of the seventh it is true, but the commandment was given almost a year before) and the twentieth years of his reign gave authority to completely restore and rebuild Jerusalem with its walls, gates, etc., and, as we read, this work was actually begun by Ezra and completed by Nehemiah. Hence it was from the date of either or both of these edicts that the 483 solar or lunar years respectively began to run, and they were finished as foretold by Gabriel at the anointing of the Saviour, which took place, we believe, on January 8th, 28 A.D., not, as Mr. Van Lennep says, at His birth in 4000 A.M. The latter event actually occurred in 3996 A.M.

I make no claim to be a "chronologer," but only a humble student of the work of that great man, the late Professor Totten, and I an very interested in the confirmation of the exactitude of God's chronology as revealed to us in the Bible.

Yours sincerely, F. S. DOBBS.

THE DAY OF ISRAEL.

JUDAH rejected the Lord for they could only realize the material side of "the great day" of Israel. Their intense nationalism was too narrow to realize the greater joy of their true mission to the world; not a nationalism for the nation's sake, for power and dominion's sake, but for service. They were not ripe, and had to undergo great tribulation, be scattered and persecuted, and then through their sister-nation, Israel, be led to Him—"The Way, The Truth, The Life."

It is admitted that United Israel should have been the admiration of the world, thus leading other nations to follow her example in the height of her power. But Israel failed to obey JEHOVAH, and fell from her high estate. Her "day" was not yet come.

Victor Hugo prophesied—"The whole world, aroused as if by some mighty galvanism, suddenly raises a wild cry of love and admiration, and throws itself into the bounteous bosom of Britain." This is the great day to which we aspire; but this can only be attained by carrying out all His commands, personally and nationally, for Service. St. Paul led the way from the intense nationalism of the race; but have not our opponents gone too far? They give service to Him, but do not seem willing to admit the National aspect.

We must plead with them to realize the broader aspect of a National, as well as a personal, salvation.

"I will yet for this be enquired of by the house of Israel to do it for them."

The time is so short—we must all work, personally and nationally, to the same end, to lead the world to Him; in this work there is no place for feelings of self-righteousness.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

WE would again direct attention to the announcement overleaf regarding the meetings next week in the Central Hall, and we trust that our friends will favour us with their company, and do all they can towards filling the hall each day.

Mr. Wm. Sleeman gave an interesting address at H.Q. on February 6th. The Rev. Joseph Gay presided and added some valuable points. The Secretary-General lectured on the following evening, when the Rev. Pascoe Goard presided over a large assembly. Mr. Garrison has also lectured at Ealing, Highgate and Birmingham. There will be no meetings at H.Q. next week in view of those at Central Hall, but teas will be served as usual.

There is an unprecedented demand for the new SPECIAL NUMBER of the N.M. and B. They are going out in thousands every week.

We have to record with regret the death of Miss M. Vincent Cox, of Abingdon, Berks. She passed away in her sleep a few days ago at the age of 78. She had written much interesting matter on British-Israel for forty years or more. She was organist at the Congregational Church at Abingdon for many years and she conducted a school up to 1917. She will be much missed by a wide circle of friends. We tender our sympathy to her brother in his bereavement.

A clerical opponent of B.-I. said to a clergyman who preaches Israel Truth, and whose sermon on the Abrahamic Covenant he heard :—" You make those promises too literal, Mr. ——. They are to be understood spiritually." A discussion followed. At length, in taking leave, the opponent said :—" Will you preach in my church next month? The collection will be for the poor. We are a very poor parish, you know, and should be helped by those who are richer." " Certainly," was the reply, " and you may put me down for two guineas." This liberality was met with an expression of gratitude, which was, however, damped by the explanation that the promise was not to be taken literally, but in a spiritual sense only, as expressive of the will to give, which must be taken for the deed. " In that case," said the disappointed applicant, " I fear your promise is not worth much." " It is worth absolutely nothing," said the other. " That is the point to which I want to bring you ; and so the promises of God to Abraham, distorted as you distort them, are not worth the paper upon which they are written."

It may be remembered that in these columns in our issue of January 12th, page 30, attention was called to a booklet attacking British-Israel, which has a " Foreword " purporting to have been written by a certain Bishop. We stated that the Bishop had informed us that only the first ten lines were his. The author writes us a lame excuse that " a line has been put between the two." Well, we sent to the publishers for another copy of the booklet, and no line is there ! ! ! In any case, of what use would a line be without a straightforward statement by the side of it, or a footnote clearly stating what was the Bishop's contribution, and what the author's, to the " Foreword " ?

We have had enquiries about the alleged finding of " King Solomon's Diadem " in Jerusalem, as reported in various papers ; we hope that by this time our correspondents have realized that the whole thing was a hoax.

For the third winter in succession snow fell in Jerusalem in the last week of January. Viewed from the Mount of Olives, the Holy City under snow presented a picturesque and magnificent sight, like a fortress in white.

In view of the frequent mention of hail in Scripture, and bearing on the passages in Isaiah xxx, 30 and 31, it is reported that a district in Palestine was visited last month by a hail-storm when the force of the hail tore a hole in the ground to the depth of a metre and a half, and sixty centimetres in diameter.

I had seen no literature on B.-I. until 1926, since when I have been receiving your journal and several books from your Publishing Department. I try never to lose an opportunity of letting people know I am a British-Israelite and what this means. I have not a vestige of a doubt about the great Bible truths, and the more I read about them the more firmly I am convinced of the infallibility of the Book of books. Things out here are moving quickly, and it is quite possible that what is transpiring in Afghanistan will affect India. That a certain power is pulling the strings in both countries is very evident, but with my beliefs I know that though there may be trouble we British, who have done great things for the uplift of the people of India and are still doing them, will come through with honour. We want more Christian men like Havelock, Lawrence, Nicholson, Edwards and others, who leaned on God all the time.

rural sons of the soil, who form 85 per cent. of the population, have unbounded faith in the white man. . . .

"I thoroughly enjoy reading the entire contents of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, and look out eagerly week by week for mail day. My prayers go up daily to God the Father for the extension of the B.-I. belief among the people of the Empire. I wish you health and strength, and may God bless you all. I hope to be in England this summer, and I look forward to the privilege of attending your meetings."

Mr. F. S. Dobbs writes:—"Whilst congratulating and heartily thanking all those to whose unfailing efforts the weekly issue of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER is due, and also to all who through its pages have during the past year given us of their best in confirmation of our British-Israel confidence, I would like to pass on the following thought for 1929 to all my fellow-readers of them in every part of the Empire. 'He that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep.' I heard once in a sermon many years ago that the word here used for 'keepeth' is derived from the same Hebrew root as is the word translated 'eyelid.' The meaning therefore implied by the above words is that as our eyelids automatically protect our eyes unceasingly waking or sleeping from the moment of our birth to that of our death, so the Lord keepeth Israel. 'Blessed' indeed is the man or 'nation that hath the God of Israel for his Help.'"

C. E. S. writes:—"As one who carefully reads every word in the splendid weekly copies of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, it was with joy I read Mr. Jutsum's words on Tithing in the issue of January 5th. It has surprised me that this system of giving is not more frequently advocated, for two reasons: First, it is God's way of providing for His work, and He makes very satisfactory promises to those who do it. Second, there is not another way as simple and effective as this (Malachi iii, 10; Nehemiah xiii, 12). I have paid tithes for 38 years. I have seen what large sums are paid in this way to other organizations, and it has been my joy to hear the testimony of many whom God has blessed after they adopted this system of giving. May all the supporters of British-Israel adopt this right way of the Lord. May God bless and guide you all."

Splendid meetings are being held at all of the Toronto Branches. On January 14th, at the St. Clair Branch, Mr. Harry Fisher was the speaker, taking as his subject "The Mission of the Anglo-Saxon Race."

On January 16th the Toronto East Branch held their regular meeting. Mr. S. L. Gorbell was the speaker.

At the Toronto Central Branch on January 17th, Mr. Robert Elder gave an interesting lecture on "The Beast with the Seven Heads."

BIBLE CONVENTION.

WE are promoting another Bible Convention at Llandrindod Wells, Mid-Wales, August 25th to 30th inclusive.

The Albert Hall, the largest hall in the town, has been engaged.

Bible readings will be conducted each morning and public meetings each evening. The afternoons will be devoted to excursions in the surrounding country.

Llandrindod Wells is the Mecca of Wales. Conventions and Conferences of all kinds meet in this charming town, situated in one of the most beautiful parts of Wales. It is a Spa with an international fame. People from all parts of the world visit Llandrindod during the summer months. What Keswick is to the Lake District, the Trossachs to Scotland, and Glastonbury to the West Country, Llandrindod Wells is to Wales. If you have not already determined where your August holiday is to be spent, you cannot do better than visit this delightful Spa. We trust that our British-Israel believers will rally to this Convention and give such a demonstration of our unity and strength which will greatly influence the people of Britain.

We give this early notice of our intention that you may make arrangements to spend this final week of August with us.

The organization is in the hands of our South Wales Commissioner, the Rev. Joseph Gay, A.T.S., who will be pleased to give all necessary information with regard to suitable hotels and boarding houses, and the best travelling facilities. Should we be able to get the requisite number to attend we shall make application to the railway authorities for their usual concessions. May we ask you to let us know at your earliest convenience of your intention to attend?

A strong platform and a splendid programme will be provided, details of which will be published later.

GENERAL LITERATURE

IS THE BIBLE CREDIBLE?

Do you realize that if you accept the Modernist theory of Evolution you deny the Divine inspiration of your Bible?

Modernism and German-made Higher Criticism combine to destroy faith in the truth and the sacredness of our beliefs. God either created man in His own image or He did not, and if not, we are as the beasts that perish.

Dr. McCrossan's book comes as a refreshing draught to a thirsty man, to those who truly believe that God's Word is in the Bible—that God's Word is the Bible. His array of facts and his forceful style chastise the Higher Critic and the Modernist. He takes his stand on God's Word and is unassailable.

Everyone who holds the Christian faith should read

PREHISTORIC LONDON

By E. O. GORDON.

With two appendices by Rev. John Griffith.

Here is a book which gives food for much thought. Of all the books we have published on the early history of the British Race, this proves, perhaps, more deeply than any.

¶ Read herein of the coming of Brutus the Trojan, and the connection between his landing and the twentieth-century customs of Totnes in Devonshire.

¶ Read of the foundation and the growth of our great city.

¶ Read of the development of Druidism, the belief of our early forefathers in the Divine Creator, and in the life Eternal.

¶ Read of the customs of these ancestors, and find in them the true explanation of many of our present ways and ideas; seemingly inexplicable, yet inevitable when their origin is understood. Altogether a most fascinating book.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

THE DOCUMENTS OF DANIEL.—VI.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

THIS is a continuation of the study of Document II. (Daniel ii.) Scope seven times (2,520 years), plus the period of the final world Kingdom, viz., the millennial reign of Our Lord.

> "Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold, broken to pieces together, and became like the chaff of the summer threshingfloors; and the wind carried them away, that no place was found for them: and the stone that smote the image became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth." (Daniel ii, 35.)

It will be noted that the INTERPRETATION of the dream halts at the final destruction of the four kingdoms by the Stone Kingdom. The reason for this seems to be clear. Nebuchadnezzar and his successors, to whom this revelation was given, were profoundly interested in the dream and its interpretation just as far as it constituted the charter of their kingdom in its succeeding phases. But when the final end of the succession had come, and the Babylonian system had passed, then Nebuchadnezzar and his successors had no further interest in the matter. To Israel, which constitutes the Stone Kingdom, the information and the assurance is given in many other Scriptures.

But the revelation made to the king carried forward to the finality of the Kingdom of God in the earth. To this we shall now pay attention.

The Babylon succession of Empires, in all its mutations, has appeared upon the stage of world history and has passed. To Nebuchadnezzar there was given the twofold testimony of the dream and the interpretation. To us, in these latter days, there is given the fourfold testimony of the dream, the interpretation, the corroboration of the other "Scriptures of truth," and the CONFIRMATION OF HISTORIC FULFILMENT.

In Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece and Rome the pageant of Empires has passed before us.

In Britain, from 600 B.C., the long-continued Stone Kingdom has been established in these Islands, while the people who form the basis of that Kingdom have been in part resident here from the beginning, and in part were moving, as circumstances and their own enterprise led them, in Asia and Europe, finally to land in succeeding waves in the British Isles.

Not even to-day are all the people in the British Isles nor in their daughter nations. A remnant, more or less numerous, remained in Asia, and in the East are known very generally as "Indo-Germans," but should be known as Indo-Saxons. They are to be found in India, Afghanistan, and the border States. Eventually they will be brought into the full citizenship of the Kingdom. Most of them are already subjects thereof, but will not attain the full franchise until they have "put on Christ."

Notwithstanding the still scattered remnants, so many of whom are being rapidly brought, or are electing to come, under the Flag, "the nation and company of nations" centres in Britain, and here the throne of David is.

It is an interesting and to-be-expected fact that the King list of Britain shows the House of David to have entered these Islands at the time when the great charter was granted to

Digitized by Google

Nebuchadnezzar in Babylon. This is no new theory arranged to suit the doctrine of British-Israel Truth. It is a fact established by the genealogical tables of many of the ancient British and ancient Irish Houses, and it is a fact attested to by the genealogy of the Royal House of Britain. The writer has had the privilege of examining three separate and distinct genealogical tables, one of a great Welsh family, one of an ancient and honourable Irish family, namely, the Brazier-Creaghs, and several editions of the Royal House of Britain. These all show the establishment of Tea Tephi in Ireland, and the descent of their families from Heremon and Tea Tephi, as from approximately the time when Nebuchadnezzar was on the throne of Babylon. It was " In the days of these kings that the God of Heaven set up a Kingdom which should never be destroyed " ; and the first of " these kings " is declared to be Nebuchadnezzar, the " head of gold."

It is a well-known fact that there is no other now existent kingdom which made contact with and destroyed the kingdoms of the Babylon succession but the Kingdom of Israel-Britain ; first in the period of " captivity " and then in Britain. All the other kingdoms appear too late on the stage of history.

The Stone Kingdom ran through these stages of development in Britain :

I.—" The Islands," possessed by the ancient Britons.

II.—Invaded, as to England only, by Rome.

But the Kingdom was then established in Ireland, which was not invaded. So the Kingdom was never subjugated, and was not even in danger. Rome carried on a contest with the inhabitants of these Isles for centuries. She always had to maintain her footing by a strong military occupation. Part of the time it took all the forces which the Roman Empire could muster from India to the North Sea to subjugate part of England ; and finally the effort was too great to be sustained longer, and Rome was constrained to withdraw.

The struggle was long. The British lost many battles and many campaigns ; and for long periods were glad to remain quiet because of exhaustion. But Britain never surrendered these Islands to Rome. When at last the final test of endurance came, Rome retreated, and left the Britons masters of their own land. THE VICTORY WAS WITH BRITAIN. It is immaterial that events on the Continent contributed to this. Such adventitious circumstances are always welcomed in war ; and are never counted against the victory of the conqueror in the final test. Moreover, the circumstances which compelled Rome to withdraw from the Israel Kingdom in Britain was the increasing pressure of the Gothic ten-tribed Israel on the Continent, who were fighting their way across Europe. Therefore, to say that Britain was ever part of the Roman Empire is to reverse the verdict of history. Rome was driven to retreat from Britain, and Britain was delivered by the good providence of God. These were the first stages of the Stone Kingdom in Britain and Ireland.

III.—The Saxons came and added their strength to Britain. They were not recognized as brethren, nor were they welcomed by the ancient Britons. They came as invaders. But they came and remained, being of the same family, of the seed of Israel—Israelites of the ten tribes.

IV.—The Anglo-Danes came and added their strength to the nation. Britain's greatest ethnologists have shown that Briton and Saxon and Dane were of the same stock.

V.—The Normans came, people of the stock of Benjamin, and made the final contribution to the ethnological unit, the Celto-Saxon nation.

Since that time there has been no national migration into Britain. The nearest approach to anything like it in modern days has been the coming of the Jews into Britain and the daughter nations. They have come in greater numbers than did Saxon or Dane or Norman.

It will be noticed that while all these branches of the people came and remained, the Roman invasion withdrew, bag and baggage, and left no ethnological trace behind. We know where the ancient Briton is. We know where the Anglo-Saxon is. We know where the Anglo-Dane is. We know where the Anglo-Norman is. We even know where the Anglo-Jew is. But where is the Anglo-Roman ? He has not now, and never has had, a place in our family homestead. He always was, and always will be, a foreigner imperially, ethnologically and ecclesiastically.

Now, while wandering on the Continents of Asia and Europe, the people of ten-tribed Israel smote the Empires in succession and brought them down. This was true of Assyria, of Babylon, of Medo-Persia, of Greece, and of Rome. The Maccabean Jews also gave the Grecian section of the Empires a very warm time when they struggled against Antiochus Epiphanes.

In modern times, the Stone Kingdom in Britain smote Spain and broke her power. It smote Napoleon and crushed him. It smote the Kaiser and his hordes, and with the aid of its Allies and daughter nations put an end to the whole succession of Babylonian Empires for ever.

This is the place in prophetic history to which the world has now come.

THE STONE HAS SMITTEN THE IMAGE, AND IT HAS FALLEN.

It is important to note that the two Kingdoms, Babylon and the Stone Kingdom, were established at the same period of history.

They have functioned side by side throughout the two thousand five hundred and twenty years of the seven times ; and the Stone Kingdom miraculously survives all the Empires, as the only remaining Empire. Four Empires have gone, namely, Turkey, Russia, Austria and Germany. One remains of the group—Britain. The fight Britain put up in the last great war, together with her daughter nations and the U.S.A., aided by her staunch Allies, brought the whole succession to the ground.

It is interesting to note that the Papacy is now striving to restore its own temporal power. It is also interesting to see that Mussolini is endeavouring to breathe life into " the image of the former beast," which represented the Babylon succession of Empires. Two potentates striving by artificial respiration to restore the Babylon image Empire, Imperially and Spiritually, and each in the seven-hilled Capital city of the Babylon succession—Rome. What success they will have is set forth in the thirteenth chapter of Revelation, and so on. Mussolini is striving as a successor of the Cæsars. The Papal authority is claiming to act under the Charter of the Stone Kingdom. But the Cæsars are dead. The Charter of the Stone Kingdom is given to the nation and people Israel, and to the House of David.

For the guidance of ourselves we shall ask: Is there by any chance a possibility that the claim of the Papacy is founded on the God-given Charters? The answer, for good and indubitable reasons, must be in the negative, No. Let us look at one or two which will be sufficient among the many which might be given.

The Charter of the Stone Kingdom was not included in the dream image, but was set up over against the image. In the interpretation the Stone Kingdom's position of opposition to the Babylon image is declared at every point of their contemporary history.

Therefore the Kingdom that the God of Heaven set up CANNOT BE IN ROME, but must be found standing opposed to it. Again, the people who formed the basis of the Babylonian succession were the Assyrian, Persian and Roman peoples. Greece supplied a conquering force, but the Empire of Alexander the Great was still centred in Babylon. All of these except the Greeks were non-Israel peoples.

The people which form the basis of the Kingdom of God are Israel throughout all time. They are "the saints of the Most High."

Therefore the people which form the Kingdom of God in the earth cannot be Roman Continentals.

The rule of the Kingdom of God is assured to the House of David for ever, and confirmed to him by the solemn oath of God Almighty.

But the Pope is one of a succession of men elected from among all peoples. He belongs to no House, and certainly not to the House of David. There is no hereditary line, nor constituted House, such as God gave to David, connected with the line of Popes. Therefore the Pope cannot be the Sovereign of the Kingdom of God in the earth.

What, then, is the present stage of the Stone Kingdom?

I.—It is most certainly a Kingdom.

But, more than that, it is THE Kingdom which the God of Heaven set up, first in Palestine in (circa) eleven hundred B.C., then in Britain in (circa) six hundred B.C. in round numbers.

(a) In that Kingdom must be found Jehovah, the King, represented by the House of David.

(b) The basis of that Kingdom must be found in the Israel people.

(c) That Kingdom must be ruled by the principles of the Law of the Lord, or the Common Law; and not either the Canon Law nor the Civil Law.

These requirements meet in Britain and nowhere else.

II.—Britain is the heart of that Kingdom. But associated with it must be "all the young lions thereof," as Ezekiel puts it. (See Ezekiel xxxviii and xxxix.)

III.—At this stage of prophetic history the Stone Kingdom will have "lost the other," namely, the first-born son. Who shall say that this does not directly refer to the U.S.A., which was lost to Britain? After she shall have "lost the other" her remaining sons shall say in her ears, "The place is too strait for me: give place to me that I may dwell." (Is. xlix, 20.) There have accordingly appeared the Overseas Dominions.

IV.—At this stage of prophetic history, so clearly marked by the fall of the Empires, and so clearly indicated by the chronological ending of the seven times, the "seven times" of Nebuchadnezzar ending in 1918 or thereabout, the Kingdom of God should have begun as a nation to receive "the heritage of the heathen," and as to the House of David, "the heathen for an inheritance." (Ps. ii, 6–12.) Surely this is being fulfilled before our eyes and the eyes of all the world.

V.—Further, at this stage, the House of David should have received "the uttermost parts of the earth for a possession"; and the nation should be busy in "causing to inherit the desolate heritages." So the great lands beyond the seas which form such large parts of the Empire should be visible, as indeed they are, as every map-maker in the world is showing to-day, no matter to what nation he belongs.

VI.—By this time Manasseh should receive the grant of separate national existence. "He also shall become a people, and he also shall be great." (Gen. xlviii, 19.) Accordingly we have "the people," as Americans call themselves in their law administration. "The People versus John Doe, or Richard Roe" is the administrative form they use, answering to the promise of Jacob to Manasseh.

VII.—At this time, Israel's seven times of wandering being ended, the world should be looking upon the spectacle of the beginning of the return of Israel to Palestine, in accordance with the constantly reiterated promises of God.

But for the fact that the world has been taught to look upon the Jew as Israel, notwithstanding the fact that the Israel known to the major and minor prophets, to the Evangelists and the Apostles, and above all to Our Lord, HAD NO TRIBE OF JUDAH IN IT; the world would have looked in wonder and adoration at the great fact that Israel in Britain went back to the Capital city of their fathers, and to the land, marching under their leader Allenby, and under the flag of Britain, in A.D. 1917, and have been occupying and administrating the land since then to this day.

It was not fully recognized what this meant. While the world rejoiced with the inhabitants of Palestine and with the Jews all over the world that Britain had expelled the Turk and taken possession of the land, the world did not know, and but few in Britain knew, that it was Israel officially returning home again; and that it was the voice of the House of David which proclaimed liberty once more "throughout all the land and to all the inhabitants thereof."

When Judah finally returns officially to that land, which by the way cannot be fully until 1934, because Judah's term of punishment will not fully end until that date—when she does officially return it will be as a leading and powerful tribe in reunited Israel, and not as a separate nation of the Jews. In part, the Jew is there in that relationship to-day.

Thus we check up the positions of the two Kingdoms in relation to (a) the dream, and (b) the interpretation. The dream image of the Empire of the Cæsars has come to the end. The image has fallen. The interpretation has been fully and finally fulfilled. The seven times, or 2,520 years, is ended.

There now remains that feature of the dream which covers the period beyond the seven times; beyond the Empires of the Babylon succession; beyond the 2,520 years' scope of the prophecy ; therefore beyond A.D. 1918, when the Stone expands into a great mountain and fills the whole earth.

That which lies ahead is certain. The Stone Kingdom is becoming a great mountain and shall soon fill the whole earth.

What is the mountain ? It is the Kingdom which the God of Heaven set up ; which is, in fact and deed, THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

What nation or people outside of Russia will object to the final universal establishment of THE KINGDOM OF GOD ? What people will object to be by adoption made HIS PEOPLE ? What people will refuse to come under HIS LAW ? What people will object to the administration of His Vicegerent on earth, namely, THE HOUSE OF DAVID ?

The Overseas British nations have attained their majority and have set up their own households as fully-fledged nations, under the House of David, self-governed under the principles of the Common Law, the Law of the Lord.

Other nations will soon seek entrance into the Kingdom on the same terms of equality, strengthening the totality of the Kingdom with their strength, and sharing in the mutual protection and prosperity.

All nations will come into the Kingdom by election, or under constraint, when Our Lord shall come, except such nations as the King when He comes shall disband in accordance with His own pronouncement in the twenty-fifth chapter of St. Matthew.

To the Kingdom finally Our Lord will come ; and " God shall give to him the throne of his father David, and he shall rule over the House of Jacob for ever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end."

What a wonderful document is this, tested by the ages and attested by the history of the ages, which we have laid before us in the second chapter of Daniel.

THE SEVEN CHURCHES.—II.

BY W. T. CRAIG, ESQ., F.R.G.S.

PERGAMOS.

IN Pergamos we have a Church the name of which signifies " citadel," or " any fortified position," but we find her occupying a position of imminent peril to her proper dignity and strength as a Divine institution—dangers which are not undimly sketched in the Epistle : " thou dwellest where Satan's seat is," Satan, who is described as " the Prince of this world " and " the ruler of the darkness of this world."

A sentence from Hallam's " History of the Middle Ages " describes the situation—" passing rapidly from a state of distress and persecution to the summit of prosperity, the Church degenerated as rapidly from her ancient purity, and forfeited the respect of future ages, in the same proportion as she acquired the blind veneration of her own, while covetousness especially became the characteristic vice."

Here the Nicolaitanes are again at work, the subjugation of the laity rapidly proceeding, and the hierarchy showing more and more of the despotic character which it finally assumed.

Church history from early in the fourth century till the beginning of the seventh, when the hierarchy was completed in the person of Boniface III, who was declared universal Bishop, and which would appear to be the epoch covered by the Church of Pergamos, is little more than a dreary narrative of how " the subjugators of the laity " gained their point, and established themselves as " lords over God's heritage."

The place of Pergamos then, as succeeding the great martyr epoch, should correspond to the Church's formal alliance with the world Power, and its consequences ; and it is difficult to see how these could be more faithfully and more graphically set forth than is done by the name and marks of this Church.

THYATIRA.

To this Church was written the longest of the Epistles. It represents a longer epoch, and covers a longer space of time than any of them. When the great tribulation overtakes her (and of which all the other Churches are described as being the awe-struck spectators), it is a time which answers to the great Day of Judgment. " And I will give unto everyone of you according to your works." The inference is that this Church is in existence at the time of " the great tribulation," when Christ shall return to complete the prophecy, " He shall rule them with a rod of iron ; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers."

To the faithful of this Church is given the command " hold fast till I come." All this strengthens the view that Thyatira, which dovetails with Pergamos in the beginning of the seventh century, continues to exist till the Saviour's Second Advent.

It will be seen that the three Churches which follow Thyatira carry over to themselves a large section of the faithful and are contemporary with her in the latter part of her existence.

The name of this Church is made up of two Greek words which mean sacrifice and tireless or ceaseless—the Church of Thyatira thus meaning " the Church of the ceaseless sacrifice." In this Church we have therefore the outstanding feature of the Papacy. Here you have the abiding blasphemy of Rome, that Christ did not die " once for all," but that He must be offered perpetually from day to day in the sacrifice of the Mass.

The faithful remnant are praised for their works, but the Church, as a whole, are condemned for suffering the teaching of the woman Jezebel, and her untiring efforts to pollute the worship of the true God. Her end is sudden and miserable, by the fore-ordained judgment of Heaven. Thyatira is surely a symbol of the great apostasy projecting its baleful shadow from early ages, until He comes Who shall destroy it " with the brightness of His coming."

SARDIS.

The name of Sardis is not Greek, but is just the Greek form of a Shemitic word, which must have been originally Sarad or Sarid—Sard or Sarud being the Turkish form. Now in Hebrew and the cognate languages it means " the rest," in the sense of those who are left over from some hostile engagement or other catastrophe. Is it not remarkable, however, that in the preceding Church there is mention of a Party called " the rest," who kept themselves aloof from the errors and abominations of Jezebel—" unto you I say and unto ' the rest ' in Thyatira."

If Sardis then is " the rest "—the escaped—the saved remnant—then on the symbolism and prophecy pervading these Epistles, the Party who, within Thyatira, protested against her corruptions in doctrine and practice were none other than those who came out and constituted the Churches of the Reformation. "Thou hast a name that thou livest, and art dead." Yes, spiritual religion became dead and infidelity was emboldened as it had never been before. Even so late as 1760, Fletcher of Madeley, in entering on his parish, gives this account of it: "The bulk of the inhabitants are stupid heathens, who seem past all curiosity as well as all sense of godliness"—yes, a name to live, while dead.

Digitized by Google

From the cold and heartless period of Sardis, we pass on to consider the revived and missionary Church of PHILADELPHIA.

Here we have a name which signifies "brotherly love," and is closely allied with the word philanthropy. In the Epistle we read: "I know thy works: behold I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it: for thou hast a little strength, and hast kept my word, and hast not denied my name."

Plainly the open door here referred to is a call to mission work, and marks Philadelphia as a missionary Church. She is found to have "a little strength," therefore the "open door" of missionary enterprise is set before her—a duty which was rejected and opposed by many to begin with, but later received such universal recognition as to carry the preaching of the Gospel to the ends of the earth.

The history of recent times deals with a catalogue of events, such as the abolition of slavery, exhibiting the good will and brotherly love for which this Church stands as a symbol.

In the Epistle we read, "behold I come quickly: hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take thy crown"; and in the period now under review we find religious literature showing an increasing interest in the Second Advent of Our Lord.

LAODICEA.

And now we come to the last of the Seven Churches—Laodicea—the character of which makes it somewhat difficult to determine where the "little strength" of its predecessor ends and the lukewarmness of this Church begins—"I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot; . . . Behold I stand at the door and knock."

If the theory of symbolism is correct, then this Church represents the concluding epoch of the Christian dispensation. The name is composed of two Greek terms, and means the Church in which "the people rule or judge." The influence of the Nicolaitanes has been spent, and the tide has been setting the other way. The popular element has been asserting itself, and the lust of power grows from day to day.

The original name of Laodicea City was Diospolis, "the City of God"; but it was changed to Laodicea by Antiochus II out of compliment to his first wife, whose name was Laodice—the new name of the city meaning the city in which the people ruled and judged.

When you consider the prevailing laxity in morals and religion; the existence of secular Sunday Schools; and the ever-increasing tendency to defy all law and order, is the approach not foreshadowed of the old blasphemy of heathenism, with its dominating creed, "the voice of the people is the voice of God"?

Among the many distinctive marks of this Church indicating the approaching end of the Christian Era is the nearness of the Judge indicated in the declaration of verse 20, "Behold I stand at the door and knock."

On an historical basis of seven communities of Christians, living in Apostolic times, within a small area of Asia Minor, and which, in the all-wise providence of God, were prepared from the earliest times for the part they were elected to play, there has been constructed a symbolic prophecy of the whole Christian dispensation, divided into seven epochs, and following one another in the order in which the Churches are taken.

The record of actual facts regarding these Churches is very meagre, a circumstance which strengthens belief in the symbolic character of the Epistles themselves.

All these Epistles from Thyatira onwards contain a reference to Christ's Second Advent, in terms which become more and more insistent as the time draws nigh—to Thyatira the warning is: "Hold fast till I come"; to Sardis: "I will come on thee as a thief; and thou shalt not know what hour I will come upon you"; to Philadelphia the cry is louder and more startling: "Behold I come quickly"; and now to Laodicea: "The Judge standeth before the door," and is audibly knocking by the predicted signs of His return: "Behold I stand at the door and knock."

Verse 19 of the first chapter of Revelation discloses the contents of the Book. John is told to "write the things which thou hast seen, and the things which are, and the things which shall be hereafter."

Now observe that in viewing the things which shall be hereafter, the narrative of which begins with the fourth chapter, John's place of observation is Heaven itself—"I looked and behold a door was opened in Heaven," and a voice said, "Come up hither, and I will show thee things which must be after these things." Thus, it is from Heaven that John sees what is transpiring upon the earth, and it may be that in this particular he is but the forerunner of those who are ready to meet Our Lord at His Coming; waiting and watching people, who will be caught away from the judgment to come, variously described as "the day of the Lord"—the "day of wrath"; "the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men"; "the great tribulation"; "the time of trouble such as never was from the beginning of the world"; and who, from the place where Jesus is, shall be spectators of these dread transactions from a heavenly point of view.

No General in the crisis of a great battle would depend upon one line of communication alone for the transmission of his orders—their more certain delivery would be increased by the use of telephone, wireless and signalling, as well as by the hand of the messenger; and so in the terrible battle now raging in this world between good and evil, we find that the God of Israel is providing many searchlights to illuminate the path on which Israel should go.

These forthcoming events have been foretold by the mouth of all the holy Prophets since the world began; the intimation by the two men in white apparel to the men of Galilee, "this same Jesus which is taken up from you into Heaven, shall so come in like manner," is as certain of fulfilment as the many prophecies which have been already fulfilled; research tells us that the Bible story is true; excavations in Eastern lands have afforded evidence which has put the sceptics to shame; while true science, so far from hindering, is helping to establish the Word of God.

It would not be surprising then if, in the Seven Churches in Asia, we should find symbolized the various periods which have gone to make up the dispensation now drawing to a close, and that they should cast additional light upon the new and living way which leads to the presence of the King.

While His Gospel is being preached throughout all the earth, Jesus stands knocking at the door of each human heart, to be let in. May what the Spirit saith unto the Churches arouse and quicken us, so that we may be able to welcome the call: "Behold the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him."

"Now unto Him that is able to keep us from falling, and to present us faultless before the presence of His glory, with exceeding joy; to the only wise God our Saviour, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever." Amen.

BRITISH-ISRAEL: THE PLAIN ARGUMENT.—II.

By P. W. Thompson, M.A.

The final lapse of chastisement in 1845 was marked by (1) the passing of the Corn Laws; (2) the covering of the country with railways; (3) abolition of duties upon exports; (4) more humane legislation for the factories; (5) the passing of the Navigation Act, throwing our ports open to foreign shipping—all these events taking place in or shortly after the year mentioned. The results upon the commerce of the country were stupendous, and trade and population advanced by leaps and bounds.

How is it that these blessings all happened to Britain at the exact period when great blessing was to happen to Northern Israel, and if Britain be not Israel, who is?

The various promises of territory to Israel in the prophetic Scriptures allude to a place or places known as (1) the Appointed Place; (2) isles (or coastlands) of the sea (sea should more properly be translated west); (3) isles (or coastlands) of the north-west; (4) the wilderness.

The Appointed Place was a promise given to David for the future, the promise (as all sound Hebraists admit) being in the future tense—"I will appoint a place" from which Israel was to be moved no more. (2 Samuel vii, 10.) This place could under no circumstances be Palestine, for both Judah-Israel and Ephraim-Israel were subsequent to the prophecy "moved out of Palestine" and this rather forcibly.

The "wilderness" in Scripture means a place on which trees grow wild and which is customarily used for the grazing of cattle. This word need not detain us.

Israel were eventually to find their "appointed place" in islands, or coastlands, to the north-west of Palestine, and far off from there. Thus the prophets.

The British, the Swedes, the Norwegians, the Danes, and the Dutch live in islands and coastlands to the north-west of Palestine and far off from there. These lands were cultivable, and originally quite well correspond to the meaning of "wilderness" in Scripture. These peoples have never been moved out of their territories, and never will be. At one time the Prince of Orange really thought he would have to transport his subjects wholesale to one of their colonies in order to preserve them from persecution, but it was the persecutors who ultimately went under, not the Dutch, who, we believe, are still to be found in Holland.

And now a hasty and surface reader has, as he thinks, fairly got me. He can proceed to tumble my house of cards to the ground without the apparent possibility of protest on my part. I have given my case away. British-Israel is once again relegated to the domain of theory.

For I have based my case partly on the military, naval, commercial and colonial expansion which were to fall to the lot of Israel between the years 1702 and 1845. But I have acknowledged four other peoples besides the English to be probably of Israelitish origin, and unless precisely the same blessings fell to them at precisely the same times, then the question is again involved in doubt.

Now, my friend, not quite so fast. We are dealing with an enormous subject, and under the greatest limitations of space. Get a book called God and My Birthright, by Llewellyn Thomas, F.R.C.S., one of the best books on British-Israel ever written. Note how carefully Dr. Thomas proves that the various blessings promised to Israel were to be divided between the various tribes. And note how the promises fulfilled to Britain were the promises made to Joseph.

In England, Ephraim is the predominant tribe. Hence our colonial expansion. The Swedes, Norwegians, Danes and Dutch are all under the blessing of God, though not necessarily precisely the same blessing as ours (Genesis xlix). At any rate, He gave them the supreme blessing of peace in war (1914–1918). Moreover, though they are all four small nations they are four nations which have compelled the respect of much more populous peoples. They have all four adopted the reformed religion. Wesley preached in Holland. After Britain and America, these four are the peoples who do most to support foreign missionary work amongst the heathen. If Ephraim has far surpassed them, it was because God had elected Ephraim to a harder task.

All these people are our kin. And we know that our common ancestors, theirs and ours, were peoples who were themselves akin. The various peoples whose amalgam produced the Britisher were not different races, as our history books falsely asserted. They were different branches of the same race, as Professor Huxley and Professor Freeman truly asserted. They were different tribes of the Ten Lost Tribes. In the overruling providence of God, Ephraim is predominant in Britain. Hence our history. The last tribe to arrive were the Normans. (Professor Freeman remarks that "even the Norman was a kinsman.") Perhaps the Normans were Benjamites, for they certainly "ravined as a wolf." It was after Norman and Saxon had coalesced (circa 1198) that Hosea's "third day" could dawn. A homogeneous Israel compelled King John to grant the Magna Charta in 1215.

Now let us again produce our leading points, with great brevity. It was promised to Israel that they should have an appointed place, islands and coastlands far off from and to the north-west of Palestine, from which they should be moved no more. It was promised to Israel that if they sinned they should be chastised for 2,520 years, though Hosea admitted that there should be partial mitigation of chastisement for Northern Israel after 2,000 years. Israel split into two, north and south, Ephraim and Judah, at the time of Rehoboam. Punishment followed at a later date for the north (consequent on centuries of sin), commencing at three different dates. They were removed to Assyria. They escaped through the "Gates of Israel" into Europe. They squatted by the Black Sea. Centuries after they trekked to the North Sea. Some (Ephraim notably) occupied the "Isles of the north-west" known as Britain. Others occupied the coastlands of the north-west, and were known as the Swedes, Danes, Dutch and Norwegians. Turning to Ephraim, Macaulay proves that the mitigation of the third day did actually start just one year after Hosea's earliest possible date. The end of the chastisement came between 1702 and 1845, with results which we all know. There was a marvellous uprising of a colonial empire, a vast trading community, an unconquerable navy, an army victorious in all fields. And permeating it all those splendid spiritual fellows the Methodists, headed by glorious John, the real pioneer of the religious and educational system, which kept on flooding the country with light.

Southern Israel, or Judah, had followed the same sad path of sin and chastisement as North Israel, but at a later date. One hundred and thirty-five years separates the Assyrian captivity of Israel and the Babylonish captivity of Judah, and when Judah was transported to Babylon, Israel was but a memory. The year 1934 is approaching, and since 1917 Ephraim has safeguarded the territory which Judah peculiarly claims. Ephraim will never leave the "Appointed Place" to return to Palestine, but may be represented there—"one of a city and two of a family." We must not dogmatize about the future. Such dogmatism leads to disaster.

But we are just a little disposed to dogmatize about the past. We have put forward a plain statement as to what the prophets said as to the future of Israel, future at the date of utterance. We have put forward a plain statement as to what historians have said of the past of Britain. And these two statements run so absolutely parallel that if the two do not refer absolutely to one and the same thing, we are faced with the greatest puzzle that ever the human intellect was called upon to unravel. In time, place and circumstance the prophecies of Ephraim and the history of Britain dovetail, and that exactly. In the light of what has been said no Englishman of sane judgment ought to live as though he had not the responsibilities of an Israelite resting upon him. He must not merely "fear God and work righteousness," but he must do so with a special zeal.

Our responsibilities are, primarily, the spreading of the Gospel throughout the whole earth, the broadcasting of the Bible, the decent and religious, but not the Pharisaic, observance of the Sabbath, and the ruling of the Empire in righteousness, so far as our vote and influence can effect this result. Be a better Christian, and a more loyal subject of King George. The writer's convictions with reference to the payment of the Israelitish tithe to God, and the great blessing accruing therefrom, are well known, and it might be redundant to make further reference to this subject herein. Finally, let Ephraim-Israel strive to realize his fraternal responsibilities towards Judah-Israel.

The spread of British-Israel Truth appears to have what seems to us this entirely reasonable and inevitable result in a higher standard of life. Very recently a retired clergyman with half-a-century of clerical experience to look back upon said: "I should be glad to peruse any literature you have on British-Israel, for throughout my clerical career I have found that in any parish in which I laboured the most spiritually-minded and most prayerful members of my congregation were British-Israelites."

AMOS OF TEKOA.

BY PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.SC., ETC.

IN our former letter we talked of the six nations Amos mentions, viz.: Damascus, including Syria; Gaza, including the Philistines; Tyrus and its depending cities; Edom and all Idumea; Ammon, known generally as "the children of Ammon"; and Moab, a nation east of the Jordan, and descended from Abraham's nephew Lot.

Now, in chapter ii, verse 4, we come to the treatment of Judah by Amos:—

"Thus saith the Lord; For three transgressions of Judah, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof: Because they have despised the law of the Lord, and have not kept His commandments, and their lies caused them to err, after the which their fathers have walked."

"But I will send a fire upon Judah, and it shall devour the palaces of Jerusalem."

Here, Judah is the seventh in the list of nations ordered for Divine punishment. Judah is the kingdom composed chiefly of Judah and Benjamin, two out of the twelve tribes of Israel.

We frequently hear or read that the Old Testament was written by the Israelite people, who boosted themselves as holy, and the rest of the world unclean and pagan. Their god, by modern critics, is the god of their creation, and as their "tribal god," he is made to bless his people and damn or condemn all others.

Amos gives the lie to such a claim by certain critics. In Amos we find Judah, one kingdom of the chosen race, coming under punishment as truly as the other six nations were to be punished.

The language used by the prophet against the kingdom of Judah is as hot and strong as against the other six nations. In fact, it appears to be a more serious charge than against the six. The six sinned against humans, but Judah against God Himself, and the punishment had to follow as truly as in the case of the six.

We turn to Israel, the Northern Kingdom, capital Samaria, Amos ii, 6 to end, chapters iii, iv and v.

"Thus saith the Lord; For three transgressions of Israel, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof; because they sold the righteous for silver, and the poor for a pair of shoes."

The reader may read the balance concerning Israel direct from Amos.

Digitized by Google

Just as God prepared punishment against the six nations and Judah, for their sins, so He prepared punishment against the ten-tribed kingdom of Israel.

The prophet is clear, definite and impartial—all sinned, and all must be chastised.

Amos gives Israel much history, and shows how the Lord had dealt with their fathers, and with their enemies for their sakes. He makes many charges against Israel, one of which was because of their drunken habits.

In Amos iii He groups together "the whole family which I brought up from the land of Egypt."

The punishment must come, even though He announces a great fact connected with this evil drunken people. Of them He says :—

"You only have I known of all the families of the earth." See what follows :—Look at the word "Therefore"! How forceful and logical! "Therefore, I will punish you for all your iniquities."

Why? Simply because they were His by a previous selection for a definite service, a service by covenant and, by or through them, on conditions of their national obedience.

They, as a nation, fell down, rebelled, and entered upon a long line of transgression of a debasing nature. Hence the punishment must come! Hence the "Therefore"!

As Bethel was the religious capital of Israel, Bethel was singled out for destruction. See chapter iii, 14 and 15 :—

"In the day that I shall visit the transgressions of Israel upon him, I will also visit the altars of Bethel; and the horns of the altar shall be cut off, and fall to the ground."

At Bethel, Israel had the "golden calf" as the object of worship. The calf, cow or bull, was represented by a golden figure, and the altar carried horns in honour of bull worship. The horns represent the pushing strength of the engel or bull, and, in worship, replaced the Divine power.

Thus it was an emblem of animal power chosen in place of the power of Jehovah, Who had done so much for them, and called them to so high and so important a service among the nations of the world. Thus, then, these horns, the symbol of power, were to be broken, and cast down to the earth, a proof of their lack of saving, or helping power, and of their utter helplessness.

Suffice it to say that Judah and Israel had to be punished, and were truly punished, as were the other six nations. History shows that the whole eight peoples went through terribly severe chastisement in ages succeeding the time of Amos and antedating our present time.

We may, in another letter, look at some of the blessings promised as shown by Amos.

NATURAL PHENOMENA.—I.

By Basil Stewart.

EVENTS DURING 1928.

Following our articles in The National Message twelve months ago, on "Earthquakes in Divers Places,"* we propose in this article to survey the past year's happenings under this head, and in a subsequent one to say something about their probable cause.

Extraordinary as the years 1926 and 1927 were in respect of disturbances in nature—a fact to which writers in the correspondence columns of the daily Press drew attention at the time—1928 has, if anything, been even more abnormal. Even the popular Press, generally prone to belittle what it does not understand, or is outside its experience, has had to admit that the past year has been exceptionally prolific in disasters of every kind; not only in those due to the forces of nature, but also in accidents on land, on sea, and in the air. The extraordinary series of fatal accidents on British railways, and on the Continent, will be called to mind under this heading.

The writer, as a student of prophecy, has always suggested that, from about 1924 onwards, natural phenomena, and attendant disasters in other spheres, would become more and more pronounced as each year passed, reaching a climax probably in 1928-9, and continuing abnormal until 1931†. On this point a correspondent in India recently wrote, saying "Your forecasts for the future, and for 1928 in particular, have proved ruinously accurate." Such is one form of the final tribulation through which the world must pass.

As far as the British Isles were affected, gales of hurricane force with abnormal rainfall were frequently our lot, a record being set up at Liverpool (February 11th) with a gale of 104 miles an hour, culminating with a tornado in the West End of London on October 22nd, and further gales and floods on the 30th. Tidal wave havoc in Thames in January, caused by highest flood ever known.

Abnormal rainfall and gales, earthquakes and volcanic eruptions were in evidence in all parts of the globe at the opening of the year; volcanoes were in eruption simultaneously in Europe (Santorin, one of the Cyclades islands), Asia (Krakatoa and another in Kamchatka, long regarded as extinct), and Central America.

Earthquake at Messina (March 7th), most serious since the disaster of 1908; another in Mexico (22nd), followed by tidal wave which penetrated as far as the Mediterranean, and caused exceptionally high tides on our south-west coasts, Krakatoa again becoming active. In view of our subsequent article, the reader should note this extraordinary sequence of different—though closely related—phenomena.

During the spring months began that extraordinary series of earthquakes in the Near East, Bulgaria, Greece (Corinth), Anatolia and Smyrna, which continued intermittently throughout the remainder of the year and causing enormous damage and loss of life, Corinth being reduced to ruins. Further shocks at same time in Mexico and Peru and elsewhere in South America, Krakatoa again active, followed by tidal wave at Piræus (April 25th).

During May and June, another violent earthquake in Peru; earthquake and tidal wave in Japan; cyclones and earth shocks in Central Europe; tidal wave disaster in Mexico (June 21st); Vesuvius active, also volcano in New Zealand; disastrous floods in Japan with heavy death-roll.

During July and August many earth shocks in all parts, the volcano Mayon in the Philippines breaking into the worst eruption since 1900. Hurricane in Florida, almost as disastrous as that of September, 1926, followed by a second tornado (September 16th), which swept over the West Indies and coast of Florida, causing a death-roll in Florida alone of over 2,300, and proportionate losses and damage elsewhere. Probably the greatest disaster of this nature on record.

On same date as the first Florida hurricane (August 7th) volcanic eruption and tidal wave in Dutch East Indies, destroying six villages and causing death-roll of nearly 1,000. Cyclone and torrential rain swept over Hayti (August 17th), and on same date Vesuvius became more active; typhoon havoc in Algeria. Note here again the same extraordinary sequence of related phenomena.

Severe earthquake in Persia and shocks in France (August 22nd); Cathedral of Monza, Italy, partly demolished by cloud burst, and meteorite falls at Antwerp, doing great damage (29th). Great havoc from storms in Belgium and Portugal, a meteorite falling in latter country, while one village was completely destroyed by a waterspout (October 1st).

Landslide on Mount Arbino, Switzerland, the greatest ever recorded (5th).

The year closed with the catastrophic outbreak of Mount Etna, lasting twelve days, while Krakatoa at the same date burst into increased renewed activity. It has thus been in almost continuous eruption during the whole of the past twelve months. The last two months also witnessed typhoon havoc in the Philippines (November 24th); another disastrous earthquake in Chile, causing 200 deaths, the city of Talca being totally demolished, followed by the usual tidal wave; the town of Cottabato, Philippines, destroyed by earthquake and tidal wave (December 23rd); great floods on the Volga, destroying thousands of houses and drowning many of the population.

Such is the record of the major occurrences only during 1928.

It is said everything has its purpose in nature, even though its incidence may cause disaster to the innocent. The problem why God permits destruction is age-long: it was one addressed to Our Lord (Luke xiii, 1-5), and He replied that it was to serve as a warning. These phenomena, accentuated as they are and as prophecy says they would be, are like the hours upon the dial of God's clock: "When ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the Kingdom of God is nigh at hand" (Luke xxi, 31).

ADDRESS AT HEADQUARTERS.

By Miss Hamilton Hunter.

ISRAEL MILITANT.—I.

"Israel" is one of the most wonderful names ever given by God to man. A marvellously glorious name! We can see its light shining down the pages of history, often dimly perhaps, but never obscured. We can see the glory of it illuminating the age that is to come with ever-increasing radiance. And we can follow the dazzling splendour of it in the æons of the New Heavens and the New Earth until it is lost to our human eyes in the immensity of God's love.

I suppose most people, if asked to give a definition of the word "Israel," would give the marginal reading in our Bibles—"a Prince of God," though a few (especially British-Israelites) would probably say "Ruling with God." "Israel" means both; but there is another meaning which we are apt to forget—"Fighting with God." I think this meaning is really the most important one, and ought to take precedence of the others; because the name "Israel" was given to Jacob by Jehovah Sabaoth, the Lord God of Hosts; and when God under His name Jehovah Sabaoth gives a name to one of His servants that has among its meanings one with a militant ring about it, I think we must conclude that that meaning is of primary importance.

Now the name "Israel" was given by God under most remarkable circumstances to a man who formerly bore the characteristically descriptive name of "Jacob," which we translate as "Supplanter," but which has more the idea of "one who trips up by the heel." That is, one who gets ahead by a mean trick. We know that this was Jacob's character. As Esau said—"Was he not rightly named Jacob?" In spite of his deep love for God and his ardent desire for the Covenant blessings, Jacob was covetous, tricky, treacherous and mean, up to that mysterious night at the ford Jabbok, when something happened which made him a changed man. You remember how terrified his guilty conscience rendered him when he heard that Esau was coming to meet him with 400 men, and how he implored God's help and protection against his brother. But he had to learn that God could not help the sinner in his wrong-doing. The restoration of the stolen birthright must be made before God's favour could be experienced. And before the heavenly blessings can be obtained, self, the cherished idols, the things that offend—all that we possess—must be laid on the altar of sacrifice. And Jacob was not willing to do this. What! give up that ill-gotten birthright and the things he prized above all else? Go forward and restore the birthright to Esau by making obeisance to him as his lord and head? Never! And so we are told Jacob "wrestled." There on the bank of the Jabbok—that little tributary of the Jordan whose name, by the way, means "wrestling"—Jacob fought as surely no other man has ever fought.

But the Lord had infinite patience with him, for He loved Jacob and He knew that Jacob truly loved Him. "Was not Esau Jacob's brother? saith the Lord, yet I loved Jacob" (Mal. i, 2). And all the while that Jacob was wrestling blindly and desperately the Lord was only waiting to be gracious to him above anything he had ever imagined—only waiting to give him a new heart, and a new name, and blessings such as had not been given to any other man. But all through that long mysterious night Jacob held out against making the great renunciation, and it was not until sharp physical suffering brought him to his knees that he broke down in repentance and submission. How often we are like Jacob. We may truly love Our Lord and want to serve Him, but we cling to our idols and the things that offend; and it takes a severe lesson—perhaps physical pain, or the loss of dear ones, or financial stress—to teach us that if we want to be the Lord's we must submit to His will in all things. How often our great Israel nation during its history in these Islands has had to be taught by the bitter experience of national suffering, but how we still cling to our idols and unclean things and continue to wrestle against God ; and now the time of Tribulation has to come upon us to open our eyes to these things and bring us to the place of repentance.

As soon as Jacob repented he was forgiven ; and—as he told Joseph half a century afterwards—" the Angel redeemed him from all evil." But it was characteristic of the man that, although he was no longer " wrestling," he was still holding on to the Divine Visitant. The " new man " Jacob was still the Jacob who was determined to get the things he craved for ; but the old evil nature and the old evil ways were gone. And now that his eyes were no longer blinded by worldly ambition and gain, he was beginning to get a vision of things that transcend the things of this world. Even so, all of us who die to the things of this world in Christ rise to the things that are of heaven ; and Jacob, who had formerly coveted, and sinned for, and wrestled for, earthly things, now strove for the heavenly with a determination that nothing could break.

This is what Hosea tells us : " By his strength he had power with God. Yea, he had power over the Angel and prevailed ; he wept and made supplication unto him . . . even the Lord God of Hosts." (Hos. xii, 3 and 4.) For Jacob held Him fast.

" I will not let Thee go except Thou bless me."

" Let Me go, for the day breaketh."

" I will not let Thee go except Thou bless me."

And He said to Jacob, " What is thy name ? "

And he said, " Jacob." Poor Jacob ! how ashamed he must have been of all that that name reminded him. But the Divine Love knew that Jacob was now so changed that that name was no longer applicable to him.

" Thy name shall be called no more Jacob, but Isra-El. for as a prince hast thou had power with God and with man and hast prevailed " ; or as the R.V. has it, " Thou hast striven with God . . . and hast prevailed."

Here you have the idea of " fighting " or " striving " connected with the name " Israel," as well as the idea of " ruling as a Prince with God." What a wonderful change of name for Jacob, the mean " tripper up by the heel," and what a wonderful name ! When God creates a name it is always a wonderful name, and the more you study " Israel " the more amazing and wonderful it seems to be. " A Prince of God," " Ruling with God," " Fighting with God." " Thy name shall be called Isra-El . . . And He blessed him there."

And Jacob called the name of the place Peniel, which means " the Face of God." And he rose up and went to meet Esau, a lame and suffering man ; but oh, the glory of the Lord must have been on his face, and the joy of the Lord must have overflowed his heart as he thought of the unspeakable blessing that had been given him. We know that he met Esau as the younger brother, acknowledging his lord and chief ; and restored to him his birthright position by his sevenfold homage. And we know also that God undertook mightily for Jacob, because when Isaac died. Esau—instead of claiming his position as the birthright- and Covenant-holder—went off with his family and possessions and followers to Mount Seir, leaving it all to Jacob. Esau evidently preferred his flourishing dukedom of Mount Seir to the prospect of the 400 years' captivity in Egypt, which God told Abraham the Covenant-holder's family would certainly have to endure. And so everything he had schemed for, and sinned for, came to Jacob easily and without causing bitter strife, in God's way. And, in addition, through his submission, he had obtained that marvellous blessing.

On his deathbed he revealed it to his sons, leaving it to his beloved Joseph. " The blessings of thy father have prevailed above the blessings of my progenitors unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills." And Moses, with the glorious vision of Joseph's destiny before him as he blessed the tribes before his death, said :—" Blessed of the Lord be Joseph's land, for the precious things of heaven, for the dew " (spiritually, that is for the blessing of Him who said " I will be as the dew to Israel "), " and for the deep that coucheth beneath " (" underneath are the Everlasting Arms "), " and for the precious things of the everlasting hills, and for the goodwill of Him that dwelt in the bush, let the blessing come upon the head of Joseph and upon the top of the head of him that was separated from his brethren."

What did Jacob and Moses mean by " the everlasting hills " ? A " hill " in the Bible is figuratively used for a sanctuary either of God, or of Baal, or the other gods. " The everlasting hills " are the sanctuaries of heaven. And " the precious things of the everlasting hills,—even to the utmost bound of the everlasting hills," means all the precious things of heaven and even of the heaven of heavens ! Of course we cannot understand these things. The more we try to think about them, and the more we learn about them, the more we are confronted by the unsearchable " height and depth and length and breadth of the riches of God's love."

This was the blessing given to Jacob when he repented and placed himself and his destiny in the hands of his Lord, and this blessing he bequeathed to Joseph, whose two sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, were to become the birthright-holders. We believe that those sons are represented to-day by the great British Empire and the United States of America ; and, as Ephraim took precedence of his brother, the larger share in this most wonderful blessing is ours. We have to remember that Jacob pointed out that he was speaking of things that would befall " in the last days," so that this blessing has never yet been fulfilled to the sons of Joseph, and it cannot be fulfilled to us nationally until our nation, like Jacob, repents and submits to God and comes back to her Covenant with Him. " Oh that this nation were wise, that they understood this, that they would consider their latter end." But, thank God, individually every one of us can begin to enter upon the fulfilment of the blessing, through the Blood of the Covenant of the Redemption of Our Lord Jesus Christ.

THE SPIRIT'S SOLUTION OF MYSTERIES.

BY THE REV. GEORGE MATHESON, M.A., D.D.

" For the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God."—1 COR. ii, 10.

" THERE are mysteries which are quite unfathomable to everything but love. Why should the good Father send so many crosses to His children ? We look in a hundred directions for the answer and from ninety and nine the answer comes not. Eye hath not seen it; ear hath not heard it; imagination hath not conceived it. The crosses of life are the deep things of God, and thought cannot explore them. But love can; the spirit of love can interpret the acts of love. You want to know why the Father gives you pain; the memory of parental love will search out that depth for you. Did you never get pain as a direct gift of parental love? Did you never receive a task when you wanted an hour of play, or sigh within school-house walls when you panted for green fields? Yet your fetters have become your wings; your tears have made your rainbow; your prison-house has led captivity captive. You would not part with that gift of pain for all the other gifts of your universe; it was a bondage that enlarged your soul.

Spirit of love, Spirit of the All-Father, Thou alone canst interpret the dark places that surround Thee. Only when I learn that this world is Thy school-house shall I find the vindication of its pain. I cannot penetrate the deep things of Joseph's dungeon except by the light of Thy Fatherhood; it seems so hard to see the vanishing of youth through the iron entering into the soul. But the education of Thy Fatherhood explains all. There is no gift of parental love like the iron of the soul—the strengthening of the inner man. It is love's brightest jewel given in its roughest casket. Thou canst not send it to me through the flowers of Eden; it can come only through the tears of Gethsemane. Thy gift of iron to my soul interprets its Gethsemane. It justifies the long dark night with its desertedness and its agony. It vindicates the withered palm-leaves, and the hushed hosannahs, and the fading of Jordan's morning glow. It explains the dropping of the curtain over that transfiguration glory which earth would fain interpret as the promise of perpetual mountain heights. In the light of Thy love the valleys are themselves exalted; the deep things, the dark things, are illuminated by Thee."

"GOD'S CHOSEN PEOPLE."

BRITISH-ISRAEL-WORLD FEDERATION MEETINGS.

From the "Hastings Observer."

A THREE days' mission was held at the Masonic Hall on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, by the Hastings and St. Leonards branch of the British-Israel-World Federation.

Two of the well-known exponents of the British-Israel Identity, the Rev. William Pascoe Goard, F.R.G.S., and Mr. Herbert Garrison (Secretary-General of the Federation) addressed the meetings, which were well attended.

Colonel E. F. Gosset presided at the opening meeting on Monday evening, supported by the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard, Mr. H. Garrison (Secretary-General of the Federation), Mr. G. Holbrook (President of the Hastings and St. Leonards branch) and Mr. J. A. Jutsum.

At the outset the chairman reminded the gathering that

TRUTH HAD MANY FACETS.

"We believe in the Bible," he declared, "in Christ, the redemption of His people Israel, and the salvation of the whole world, and we claim identity of the English-speaking peoples with the lost tribes of Israel, to whom God will keep His promises." (Applause.)

The Rev. Pascoe Goard said that the children of Abraham grew into a nation and after becoming divided from the Jews came by various steps to Britain. History was catching up with prophecy, and here they stood, God's chosen nation, trained for His work. Nations outside the British Empire were envying those within, and wishing to become one of that great community of nations.

Mr. Garrison, in an impassioned address, denounced the ministers who mutilated the Bible. "The thing we stand on is the Bible, and the Bible from cover to cover," he said. The Bible was testified to by history and science. The British-Israel Identity belief was founded on it.

Canon E. S. Savage was the chairman at the meeting on Monday evening, the Rev. Pascoe Goard, Mr. Garrison, Mr. Holbrook and the Rev. Mr. Baker supporting.

Mr. Garrison said that the Israelites must be in existence to-day or God must have failed, yet there were clergymen of the Church of England who said that Israel was not in existence. Ten tribes of the children of Israel were taken in captivity to Assyria, and after a while went to a certain spot, from which had been traced the forefathers of the Anglo-Saxon peoples. They travelled from this land across Europe, under various names, and finally settled in England. No people possessed the proofs of identification other than the Anglo-Saxons.

The Rev. Mr. Goard said the British-Israel Movement was becoming a greater than had ever been known before. The history and destiny of this race and its Royal Family was tied up with that of God's chosen people Israel and the House of David. The descent of the Prince of Wales from David was recorded, and God had prophesied that His House should reign over the children of Jacob for ever, and that in time they would inherit the whole earth.

The afternoon meeting on Tuesday was presided over by Mr. Garrison, who was supported by the Rev. Pascoe Goard, Mr. Holbrook and Mr. Jutsum.

Mr. Garrison gave a short history of the British-Israel Federation.

Mr. P. W. Thompson, a well-known writer on the subject of the British-Israel Identity, said the Anglo-Saxon peoples had been traced by archæologists from the Crimea. The Russian Archæological Society once excavated some ancient burial places in the Crimea and found them to be Israelitish. Burials had been made there until ten years after Christ's birth, which fact proved the fallacy of the assertion that the Israelites mysteriously rejoined the Jews after their respective captivities. After that date the Israelites had disappeared. He had calculated that the punishment of the Jews, as prophesied by God, was to be lifted about this time, the important dates being in 1921, 1923 and 1934. In each of the first two years something important to the Jews had occurred. The punishment of Israel was lifted between the years 1702 and 1845. During those years England made terrific strides in her commerce. To prevent this sudden wealth having an evil effect, God sent John Wesley, who was the greatest of all Israelite prophets.

The Rev. Pascoe Goard expressed the opinion that if all the clergy in England were on their side, the country could be brought back to God in a year.

The President of the Hastings and St. Leonards branch of the Federation presided at the meeting on Tuesday evening; Canon Savage, Mr. Garrison, and the Rev. Pascoe Goard being also present.

Mr. Garrison said the British Empire, or as he preferred to call it, a nation and a company of nations, was tangible evidence of the British-Israel Identity. It was the greatest Christian Empire that had been established, and was also the greatest heathen Empire. Opportunity had been given the British to carry civilization, government and Christianity to the dark places of the earth, and to fill the desolate places with people. The British Empire was built upon the Bible, a brotherly feeling and a desire to help all those who came under its flag. It was as was witnessed by the fact that the Mother Country had not been invaded since the last contingent of Israelites landed in 1066. The accusation that the Empire was the result of "grab" was foundationless; much of it had come into their hands against the Government's will. It was given by God.

The Rev. Pascoe Goard dealt with the spiritual side of the Empire, remarking that God had selected Britain, a land of unrivalled beauty, specially for His people.

At the concluding meeting on Wednesday evening, Mr. Holbrook was again chairman, Captain J. Salisbury and Mr. W. Cooper supporting him.

Mr. Goard dealt with the Divine presentation of the Word in the Old and New Testaments. The Bible, he said, told the Anglo-Saxon peoples of their descent from God through Adam, Seth, Noah, Shem, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. When they came out of Egypt they were millions strong, and they went into the desert, from which they came 40 years later a nation, trained by God in national organization, worship and life, destined by God to be the foundation of His kingdom upon earth. The books of the Bible as far as Deuteronomy contained a detailed history of our race and it was a shame it was not taught in the schools. Leviticus was the

NATIONAL HANDBOOK OF RELIGION,

Numbers was the national handbook of organization, and Deuteronomy was a digest of national law upon which the present-day Common Law was founded.

CREATION OF A PAPAL STATE.

TERMS OF THE CONCORDAT.

POSSIBLE REACTIONS IN WORLD POLITICS.

From the Rev. H. Maurice Relton, D.D.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE Daily Telegraph.

SIR,—The Concordat between the Vatican and the Quirinal is no mere domestic concern in Italy, but must inevitably have its repercussions in European and international affairs.

It is curious that so little attention has been paid to the constitutional issue raised by the creation of a Papal State. The visible secular sovereignty of the head of a religious institution would seem to cut at the root of the principle of sovereignty. An adherent of such a religious institution finds himself owing allegiance to constitutional authority in the land of his birth and at the same time called upon to bow to the inviolable sovereign of the land of his adoption, viz., the newly-created Vatican State.

Can a citizen owe allegiance to two temporalities? We are familiar with the problem of a possible clash of loyalties in the issue between Church and State, but that is a case as between the secular and the sacred, the things of Cæsar and those of God. The situation, however, becomes unique and baffling when the issue is between obligations pertaining to membership of a nation or State, and another set of obligations arising from religious beliefs which carry with them allegiance to a supra-national personage.

A claim, moreover, that the Pope cannot be an Italian subject, or owe allegiance to any King, Republic, or body politic, but is sovereign in his own right, absolutely independent of any secular Government, makes him a solitary individual in a class by himself, with powers and functions without parallel in human history.

Again, if the quaestio vexata in Italy is solved by making the Pope a subject of no State, and conceding the claim to temporal power in Roman Catholic Italy, the Roman question becomes at once a burning issue in Protestant Europe and in international politics. Italy may, indeed, come to have no fear from the Holy See, but the banishing of such a local fear creates the possibility of a larger fear for the world outside. It involves the introduction afresh of that complication between religion and politics in the sphere of international relationships of which history has some salutary lessons to teach us.

The Concordat, again, is of vital importance to all non-Papal Catholics, Eastern and Western, and to all members of the separated religious bodies. No Reformed Church, whether Catholic or Protestant, can regard the creation of a Papal State without grave misgivings, particularly with reference to a world peace among the Churches. A Papal State involving the principle of temporal power, which would seem to violate the New Testament conception of the Church as in its essence a spiritual institution, constitutes a permanent stumbling-block to any possible reunion of Christendom.

Clearly, then, the Concordat registers a new fact of the highest importance for the whole world, and demands the careful attention of all thoughtful people. If liberty of relations with foreign Powers is now conceded to the Italian

Papacy, the whole status of the Roman Catholic religion in the eyes of the world is altered, and the Papacy becomes once more a factor of the greatest potency in European and world politics.

The creation of a new sovereign State in what has hitherto been regarded as Italian territory creates a new situation for all other States relative to it. A readjustment of English thought relative to Roman Catholicism is thus imperatively demanded.—Yours, etc.,

H. MAURICE RELTON.

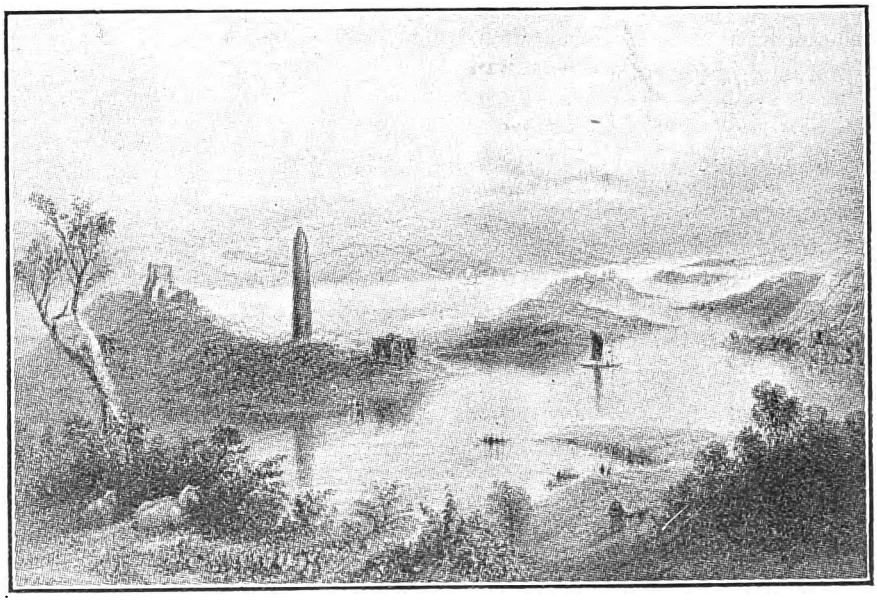
DEVENISH ISLAND.

THE TRADITIONAL BURIAL-PLACE OF JEREMIAH—THE PROPHET OF ISRAEL WHO CAME TO IRELAND, CIRCA 600 B.C.

DEVENISH ISLE is situated at the entrance to Lower Loch Erne, two miles from Enniskillen, Co. Fermanagh, the most important of some 300 islands scattered throughout the lake.

Jeremiah—the Ollamh Fodhla—"The Wonderful Seer," according to ancient Irish history, was laid to rest in this beautiful and lovely isle, which has been a hallowed place from time immemorial.

To this day, the ruins of the Monastery of the ancient Abbey, the cell of the venerable prophet, and other ecclesiastical buildings, stand near the centre of the isle. The tall shaft of the ancient pillar-tower raises its grey height "like a mountain of abiding grief"; ancient cemeteries, crosses and tombstones lie around, hallowed with sacrosanctic memories.



This picture will no doubt interest the world-wide circle of British-Israel readers of THE MESSAGE AND BANNER, especially those of the roving tribe of Dan, and the descendants of Shuthelah, who first introduced the linen trade into Northern Ireland—quotas of which tribes reached Ireland round about 1200 B.C.

G. W. BRAZIER-CREAGH
(Colonel, C.B., C.M.G.)

On the Sunday morning after the Deliverance of Jerusalem, a company of Lancashire Fusiliers assembled on Mount Calvary and sang "Jesus shall reign where'er the sun doth his successive journeys run," to the tune Rimington, composed by the Organist of Albert Road Wesleyan Church, Colne, Lancashire. We are told also that the Military Band which marched into Jerusalem (or played there after the Deliverance) included a considerable number of the bandsmen of the Salvation Army.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

EXCELLENT addresses were given at Headquarters last week by the Revs. Sparshott Johnson, M.A., and Joseph Gay, A.T.S. On Wednesday afternoon next Mr. John Leech, M.A., K.C., is to commence an important series of lectures on Prophecy. The speaker for Thursday evening next will be announced later.

ERRATUM.—Page 102, first column, line 22 of our last issue should read "5th September," not "15th."

The Rev. Commander Roberts is giving lectures in Devonshire, and conducting Bible classes at Teignmouth. He has enrolled several hundred members for Israel's Scripture and Prayer Union.

Our Southampton Branch Secretary reports two very valuable lectures by Miss Hamilton Hunter, who he says made a profound impression.

Our Bedford Branch held their Annual Conversazione on 14th February. In spite of unfavourable weather a goodly number assembled. Mr. Wm. Sleeman gave an interesting and much-appreciated address, in which he pointed out that as every evil arose in history God always provided an antidote. He showed that the only rightful claimant at the present time to the specific promises made by God to Israel as a nation was the Anglo-Celto-Saxon race as the direct descendants of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and he urged the necessity for pushing forward the British-Israel Movement.

The monthly Bible Study Class for women, conducted by Mrs. Bell, will meet at Headquarters on Saturday, March 2nd, at 3 o'clock. A cordial invitation is given to attend this class.

The Rev. Gregory Bestall will give a lantern lecture at H.Q. on "Ceylon and its People," on Thursday evening, March 7th, at 7.30. All invited.

At a meeting of the Islington Branch on February 7th, at St. Paul's Church Hall, Canonbury, the Rev. T. Sparshott Johnson, M.A., gave his interesting and helpful lecture, "The Present Crisis in Church and State," keen attention being sustained throughout.

Among a sheaf of letters a clergyman writes:—"Thank you very much. I received your kind gift of books with gratitude. I am unable to afford to buy all the books I could wish. Those I possess I have read with thankfulness, because they and all B.-I. teaching and research have made the Bible to me a living Book in a sense it never was before. When I was an undergraduate at Cambridge I attended several lectures by Dr. Grattan Guinness, who first set me wondering about the truths of the Bible, now so clearly and convincingly enunciated by yourself and others of the B.-I.-W.F.—the identification of the British with Israel seems to me to be of vital importance in the case.

"I have consistently taught my people on B.-I. lines, and some accept it gladly; with others I persevere and humbly pray that they may see the Truth.

"With inexpressible thanks to you.

"Yours very sincerely."

Sir Charles Marston, writing in the Daily Telegraph, says:—

"The Bible has played a very important part in shaping our national history; it has almost seemed to contain our earthly endowment. To account for the greatness of the English-speaking race to-day without the Bible seems unthinkable."

* * *

W. H. L. writes from California:—"THE NATIONAL MESSAGE comes to me each week. No words can describe what this New Light upon the Bible means to me. I have the wonderful Chart upon my wall. I don't believe such a mass of information could have been gathered elsewhere. You certainly are an amazing bunch of giants never before collected under the 'Roof of Israel.'

"Your article in the issue for January 12th, telling of the introduction and amazing growth of the journal without any mixing of the usual fiction to arouse interest, is beyond measure a delight.

"I will do in my way what I can. You have my prayers and every ounce of good wishes and kind thoughts possible to send.

"I remember hearing my father say fifty years ago that the only logical explanation of the phenomenal growth of the British Empire lay in the fact that the British Isles must be the home of the House of Israel."

In our issue of February 9th the Rev. Pascoe Goard made a personal appeal for contributions to a fund for the purpose of sending his books to clergy and ministers and other Christian leaders. This he did by way of celebrating seven years of voluntary service with the B.-I.-W.F. and with THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER. We are glad to say the response was immediate and generous.

The packing department of the Covenant Publishing Company was at once set to work on this extra duty, and hundreds of books have been sent out upon their mission. This, with the daily execution of orders, has created a busy hum of activities in the packing rooms.

The letters of thanks and keen appreciation from the clergy and ministers are most encouraging. The books will continue to go out as fast as the means placed at our disposal will allow. We are very grateful for all the donations received, and they are coming in each day. All are very welcome. A minister writes: "These books make a very welcome addition to my somewhat scanty library; you can be sure I shall make good use of them. It is a great pleasure to me to possess them. I wish you every blessing in your works abounding."

From these words and many similar it can be seen how glad ministers are to have books given them which in these days they can ill-afford to buy.

Dr. E. Paget Thurston gave a very interesting lecture for our Bath Branch on the subject of "The influence of the wives in race development."

He pointed out that from the beginning in the Garden of Eden the unit upon which God founded the race was not an individual but a pair. The man and the woman were given each qualities which differed from and balanced those of the other. He went on to say that in the establishment of a chosen race to be His missionary agents in the world He not only called Abraham but Sarah, and to each of them equally He gave the promise of the seed to be born in Isaac, who came to fulfil the promise at the appointed time. He showed the care with which Abraham sent his agent to Laban to find a wife for Isaac of the same house and kindred. He showed that in the next generation Jacob married into the same household, and thus the patriarchs of Israel were of firmly-grounded and well-balanced characters, drawn from the counter-balancing virtues of both the maternal and paternal sides of the house.

He spoke of Joseph and Asenath, daughter of the Prince of On. He spoke of Moses marrying the daughter of a prince of the land of his punishment, a man so devout and wise as to be enabled to be later on an adviser to Moses in the most important matter of setting up a national council. He spoke of the virtues of Ruth and of Esther, and showed the care in the selection of the wives who should become the mothers in Israel. Thus that character became established which is the foundation of the mentality of the English stock—"The English gentleman," showing exactly the traits which God took care to establish in the fathers of the Israel-British race.

The lecture was much enjoyed.

A missionary in Palestine writes:—

"Many colonies have arisen and unbelieving Jews from all parts of the world have come from their wanderings and have built homes, and many are tilling the soil. They are weary of wandering, and are seeking REST. Seeking LIFE. Seeking PEACE. But they will never find PEACE nor REST nor LIFE the way they are going. A young Jewish man, who claims to be a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ, said to me recently that 80 per cent. of the Jews in Palestine do not even believe in God. He went on to say they have come to Palestine to build a place where all can talk Hebrew, and sing in Hebrew, and dance and have a good time. He said they believe in EVOLUTION, that is, that the world evolved itself from nothing. They do not realize that 'All things were made through Him; and apart from Him was nothing made that has been made.'

"A certain young man, a Jew, made an open confession that he believes that the Messiah has come, Jesus the Christ, Who was crucified and was raised from the dead and ascended to heaven and will come again soon. He began preaching in Jerusalem, and his testimony was strong and telling, and others were being converted. Persecution began, and he was compelled to leave. Now he is working to support himself, but he hopes that some way will be opened ere long that he may give himself to telling the MESSAGE of PEACE and LOVE. Some are willing to hear part of the Gospel, but they want to hold on to the Gospel with one hand and Judaism with the other."

All the Branches in Toronto are continuing their activities. On January 28th the St. Clair Branch held its regular meeting. Mr. A. A. Robeson was the speaker, giving a very interesting lecture on "The Hidden Hand in World Affairs." On Wednesday, January 30th, the Toronto East Branch held a public meeting. Over four hundred people were present. Rev. F. C. Ward-Whate, Vicar of St. Alban's Cathedral, gave an interesting and inspiring address on "The Four Beasts of Daniel's Vision." Mr. Ward-Whate, who is a fearless champion of Evangelical religion, stated that two years ago he scoffed at the claims of British-Israel, but that upon a closer examination of the subject he was rapidly coming to believe that it was the Truth.

It declares the whole counsel of God, and His perfect plans and unfolding purposes. If we do our duty we need not fear, for God's Banner of Love is over us. Let us pray for a mighty Revival."

At the recent meetings of the Congress of Zionist Revisionists held in Vienna it was stated that they oppose the present administration in Palestine because they claim that it is hindering colonization. They declare that the final aim of the Zionists is the establishment of a Jewish State. What exactly does this involve? Is it in line with Biblical prophecy?

WHAT TO READ—AND WHY

The books mentioned in the following list form a good introduction to the ethnological branch of British-Israel teaching—that the Anglo-Saxon race are the inheritors, under Divine Guidance, of the promises made to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob. For those to whom the Divine Integrity is a vital thing, a careful study of these books is very helpful. They make many hidden things plain, and are a constant source of spiritual strength and guidance.

THE DOCUMENTS OF DANIEL.—VII.

By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard.

IMAGE OF GOLD. Document III. (Daniel iii.) Scope full seven times of prophecy (2,520 years).

NEBUCHADNEZZAR THE KING MADE AN IMAGE OF GOLD.

In the third chapter of Daniel we have the graphic record of a great and far-reaching historic event. Let us read the vivid sentences clause by clause:—

"Nebuchadnezzar the king made an image of gold, whose height was threescore cubits, and the breadth thereof six cubits: he set it up in the plain of Dura, in the province of Babylon.

Then Nebuchadnezzar the king sent to gather together the princes, the governors, and the captains, the judges, the treasurers, the counsellors, the sheriffs, and all the rulers of the provinces, to come to the dedication of the image which Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up.

Then the princes, the governors, and captains, the judges, the treasurers, the counsellors, the sheriffs, and all the rulers of the provinces, were gathered together unto the dedication of the image that Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up; and they stood before the image that Nebuchadnezzar had set up.

Then an herald cried aloud, To you it is commanded, O people, nations, and languages,

That at what time ye hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, dulcimer, and all kinds of musick, ye fall down and worship the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar the king hath set up:

And whoso falleth not down and worshippeth shall the same hour be cast into the midst of a burning fiery furnace.

Therefore at that time, when all the people heard the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, and all kinds of musick, all the people, the nations, and the languages, fell down and worshipped the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up." (Daniel iii, 1-7.)

What is the meaning of the first clause of verse one, quoted above? It certainly means that Nebuchadnezzar made an image. Now an image is a material representation of some principle, or thing, or person. In this case what was represented by the image? It was an image of—GOLD.

We have, in this clause, not a noun with a qualifying adjective, but two nouns: "Image" and "Gold."

GOLD.—The equivalent of every thing desired; of things precious, things useful and things ornamental; the equivalent of human service in every grade; the equivalent of armies in field and citadel, and of every other desired thing. The dimensions of the image are given. The material of which the image was composed is indicated as we read in the words "golden image." Here we have the noun "image" with a qualifying adjective "golden." So if this reading is accurate, we have the presentation of a "golden image" of gold.

The event recorded was the inauguration of that which the image represents to be the established system in all the many lands of the Babylon Empire. It was a great and festal day throughout the Empire. Let us take note of those who are called to the celebration.

They are: "The princes, the governors, and captains, the judges, the treasurers, the counsellors, the sheriffs, and all the rulers of the provinces . . ." Take note of this particularly. There is no mention here of any ecclesiastical functionary whatsoever. Every officer mentioned is an officer of State, dealing with the financial interests of the realm. In order to emphasize the facts, as is a custom of the prophets, the matter is repeated. Sometimes repetition is used to give due emphasis to a leading statement; sometimes a second voice confirming the facts connected with the statement is introduced. In this case it is repetition which gives emphasis to the list of personages called.

"Then the princes, the governors, and captains, the judges, the treasurers, the counsellors, the sheriffs, and all the rulers of the provinces, were gathered together unto the dedication of the image . . ."

It seems to be implied that there was an element of worship in the dedication. It is strange, however, that not even accidentally in the course of the whole narrative is there any mention of any priest or religious functionary.

We suggest that the meaning of the first clause of the first sentence be carefully considered. It was not an image of any god, nor of the king himself, as has been very generally supposed, but indeed it was an image of GOLD.

We suggest that it was the establishment, with most solemn rites, and with the whole weight of Imperial authority, of in the Empire.

The prophecy of the second chapter of Daniel had shown that the Imperial organization should be a succession of Empires which should endure for ages. The completeness of the organization of the pageant throughout the Empire and the wide extent of the Empire is shown by the list of dignitaries and officers called in from all the provinces. Such an Empire must necessarily have an established system of finance, and GOLD was to be the basis of the financial organization.

By the great dedication the whole gold system, apparently typified in the image, was rendered sacred, and was placed under the protection of the religion and the superstition of the mingled peoples. They dreaded the wrath of the gods more than the strong hand of men.

Daniel and his Hebrew associates seem to have assisted in the organization of the Empire. But Daniel and his associates were not in favour of the dedication of the image of GOLD, nor of the system then nationalized in the dedication of the image.

The gold system was established by Nebuchadnezzar the king. This fact is mentioned again, and yet again, by way of emphasis: "the image which Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up."

The God of Heaven gave the kingdom to Nebuchadnezzar. But the king, and not the God of Heaven, set up the image on the plains of Dura, and the system for which it stood.

The dedication of the image of gold, judging by its place and form in the prophecy of Daniel, was second only in importance to the establishment of the Empire itself. God had set up the financial machinery of Israel, according to the commandments, statutes and judgments of the Lord. Man had set up the gold standard in Babylon, and every act of God connected therewith seems to show that His face was against the whole thing. Babylon is well called in the sacred Scriptures "the exactress of gold."

The dedication service was carried forward by THE HERALD and the BAND. There is no indication of priestly invocation, sacrifice or religious ceremonial, such as would be found connected with the worship of the established deities of the land.

It is generally assumed that the ceremony was religious, and that the priestly orders were conducting it. Doubtless this was the case, and that only the unusual elements were recorded. The assumption of the presence and activity of priestly orders is general, and in this regard we accept the general view of Bible students. But we believe the religious system of Babylon to have been already so strongly established as to preclude a new heathen establishment of religion. We believe advantage was taken of the fact to place the financial system under "the protection of the gods," as the phrase would run.

The text seems to support, and even to demonstrate, the amalgamation of the financial and religious systems in the charge which was preferred against the three Hebrew rulers of provinces, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego:—"These men, O king, have not regarded thee: they serve not thy gods, NOR worship the golden image which thou hast set up."

By way of emphasis this charge is repeated:—

> "Nebuchadnezzar spake and said unto them, Is it true, O Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, do not ye serve my gods, nor worship the golden image which I have set up?" (Daniel iii, 14.)

Yet again the set statement is repeated:—

> "But if not, be it known unto thee, O king, that we will not serve thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up." (Daniel iii, 18.)

So we have the two systems brought before us. The worship of the gods of Babylon, and the worship of the image which the king had set up. Henceforth these two systems were to be embraced in one national organization, to disregard which was to be death by fire.

Such being the case, we have an amalgamation and a unification of the services: The priestly service of the god or gods recognized by the Babylonians—and they were many—to which was now conjoined the worship of the image of GOLD. Thus the new financial system inaugurated by the setting-up of the image on the plains of Dura was made sacred; and the treasure of the Empire was placed under the direct protection of the gods of the land, and of the religion and superstition of the people. Even to this day, in the East, traditional deposits of treasure, whether in tomb or in temple, is believed to be under the protection of genii, or of spirits who are ever on hand to guard the treasure.

"GOLD."

There is nothing to indicate the form of the image. Each one is therefore at liberty to go to his own judgment and imagination to supply the form. Some have thought it was a statue of the king himself. The effect of the great image, presented in chapter two, inevitably leads to this imagination. For reading onwards from chapter two, one carries forward the impression of looking still upon the great and terrible figure therein depicted. The impression is carried over to chapter three, and the image there referred to, but not described, is assumed to be of the same form. This impression should be guarded against.

Ussher places twenty-three years between the dream image of the second chapter and the "image of gold" of the third chapter. It is probable that this is a near approximation of time denoting the interval between the second and third chapters.

The vividness of the impression of the dream passes away when we consider such a lapse of time. The probability that the king would have waited so long to erect his image, if it were intended that it should represent the dream image, is slight. So freeing our minds from the impression of the image of the dream, we ask: What was the form of the image of gold? There is nothing to guide us directly to an answer.

Seeing that this was the inauguration of the financial system for the Empire, and the placing of the revenues and treasure of the Empire under the protection of the gods, the religious convictions and the superstitions of the people, it is probable that the form of the image was that of the highest denomination of that coin which should be the currency of the realm, perhaps the well-known image of the winged disc.

It will be interesting to search the Babylonian rooms of the British Museum to see if there is any indication of such an image following the Nebuchadnezzar period, which image doubtless would be reproduced in miniature all over the land, probably in the form of currency.

The three Jewish rulers of Babylonian provinces were averse to the whole system, and doubtless they were followed by all the Jews of Babylon, and by all the Israel peoples yet within the bounds of that territory which had been Assyria, but had now become Babylonia.

The Jew was instructed in the Mosaic system of statutory finance; having, until the destruction of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar, been at the head of the greatest commercial combination the world had ever known. The commerce controlled by that combination covered probably all the continents and all the seas; certainly Asia, Africa, Europe, and the British Isles. They knew the perfection of the Divinely-ordained system; to them it was also a matter of faith. Their activities were ordered by God, and their treasure was at His disposal, and under His direction. They were at that particular time smarting under the knowledge that because of disobedience to His law they had been stripped of the greatest amalgamation of wealth any nation had been possessed of. In bitter repentance they were now prepared to stand to the death for the Divinely-established system.

Moreover, as the financial system of Babylon was now to be made a part of the national heathen worship, and as the banking activities connected therewith would be carried on in connection with heathen temples and priesthood, and as the act of worshipping the image would in itself be an act of idolatry, they were ready to oppose the whole process even to the death. This they proceeded to do.

THE TRIAL.

So the legal proceedings took place, as is recorded in this wonderful chapter. The pleadings were before the king himself, amongst the highest dignitaries of the land.

We have the formal charge against the three Jewish governors of provinces.

We have the recitation of the charge, verbatim, by the king.

We have the answer to the charge, verbatim, by the three Jewish governors of provinces. The charge was of treason against the king, the gods, and the image of gold.

We have the sentence that they should be cast into the furnace heated seven times above its wont, and the immediate execution of the sentence in the presence of the king and the court.

All this is so graphically written as to need no comment.

THE FURNACE.

Let us now for a moment consider the furnace. How did this happen to be so conveniently at hand?

This leads one to the conviction that the plains of Dura were within the enclosed area of the city of Babylon, near the palace of the king. The topography of the city permits of this. Probably the name Dura indicates the place of commerce within the city, and may very well have been what in modern parlance would be termed the "bazaar." The presence of the furnace near to the image would seem to indicate that the pedestal of the image was of cast metal; the nearest approach in modern mechanics to "the burning fiery furnace" would be the blast furnace of modern engineering.

The form of the furnace is indicated in the statement that the men "took up" the three condemned governors—"the flame of the fire slew those men that TOOK UP Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego.

"And these three men . . . FELL DOWN . . . ."

It seems manifest that the three men were taken up on the outside of the furnace and thrown into the top. They "fell down bound into the midst of the furnace." They were there joined by a fourth, and were seen "walking in the midst of the fire." Now a furnace large enough for four men to walk in is an engineering object worthy of consideration.

It is to be considered that metal entering into such a pedestal as the specifications show, being massive enough to support the weight, would, by a rough estimation, be considerably over a hundred tons. Assuming that this was cast at one pouring, as were Solomon's pillars of brass at the Temple, it would be no small furnace in which the metal was heated; but for the fact that we know the pillars of Solomon's Temple, each weighing from 70 to 80 tons, were so cast, and also the laver or brazen sea, we should not have dreamed that such casting could be made in such metal as brass in the olden days. The presence of the furnace, large enough for four men to walk in, is "accidental" testimony to the historicity of this great thing.

We ask the question, the answer to which is not entirely speculative, but which follows an enquiry rather than indicates known facts: Of what metal was the pedestal made?

Now as to matters we know.

The two pillars of Solomon's Temple, and the laver, had been carried away to Babylon; needless to say they could not have been so carried without being first broken up. What became of the metal? Both the religious convictions and the superstitions of the Babylonians would forbid its being used for ordinary purposes. The same considerations would indicate sacred use, and economic considerations would indicate some use that would be of benefit to the nation or Empire at large. Inasmuch as the prophetic Word seems pledged that the pillars should be restored ultimately to Israel, calling for the preservation of the brass which entered into their manufacture, how could both purposes be served better than by re-casting the whole in Babylon—the brass for the massive pedestal, the gold stripped from the Temple for the image and perhaps the covering—and so keeping the whole of the metal united, sacred and distinct?

We have thought it worth while asking this question. To it there seems to be no answer. Whether it lies in the field of probability the reader must judge for himself. Should archæologists discover the "image of gold" in the debris of ancient Babylon, the triumph would be complete.

We now consider the four men in the fiery furnace. They were there, all four, as a distinct and manifest refusal to accept the system either of the worship of the gods of Babylon or the image so set up. The presence of the fourth was purely miraculous, as was the preservation of the three, and His majestic form was recognized by the king to be superior in every regard to the others, and to be, as the king exclaimed, "Like the Son of God." These things the king saw; these things the king, still sitting in plenary session, declared. What he saw was the protest of the Lord Himself, and of His three faithful followers, against the whole system so inaugurated.

The protest was effective, as far as the preserving the lives of the three Hebrew men was concerned, and the case was won by them, as the final verdict of the king declared :—

"And these three men, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, fell down bound into the midst of the burning fiery furnace.

Then Nebuchadnezzar the king was astonied, and rose up in haste, and spake, and said unto his counsellors, Did not we cast three men bound into the midst of the fire? They answered and said unto the king, True, O king.

He answered and said, Lo, I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt; and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God.

Then Nebuchadnezzar came near to the mouth of the burning fiery furnace, and spake, and said, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, ye servants of the most high God, come forth, and come hither. Then Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, came forth of the midst of the fire.

And the princes, governors, and captains, and the king's counsellors, being gathered together, saw these men, upon whose bodies the fire had no power, nor was an hair of their head singed, neither were their coats changed, nor the smell of fire had passed on them.

Then Nebuchadnezzar spake, and said, Blessed be the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, who hath sent his angel, and delivered his servants that trusted in him, and have changed the king's word, and yielded their bodies, that they might not serve nor worship any god, except their own God.

Therefore I make a decree, That every people, nation, and language, which speak any thing amiss against the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, shall be cut in pieces, and their houses shall be made a dunghill: because there is no other God that can deliver after this sort.

Then the king promoted Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, in the province of Babylon." (Daniel iii, 23-30.)

But the system of worship and of the gold standard was continued.

There have been many days of intense dramatic happenings in connection with the history of the Babylonian succession of Empires. But never was there a more tremendous day than this in the jurisprudence of the Empire, when before the court of the Empire the case of disobedience to the king's command was tried. The decision arrived at, brought about by Divine interference, was that not only were the three condemned men delivered, but were accorded promotion in the home province of Babylon itself.

What great movements were there inaugurated? For although the God of Israel was honoured, the gods of Babylon were not put away; and it seems that the financial system remained to this day as the financial system of the Babylon succession of Empires.

If our reading of these stirring events is the right one, and if the third chapter of Daniel is prophetic regarding the same period as is covered by the second chapter, then the whole system of Continental finance on the one hand, and the whole organization of Continental worship on the other, is due to follow the course of the Empires which crashed in the late war. For the seven times of prophecy has nearly run its course for chapter three, as it has fully run its course in connection with chapter two of Daniel's prophecy.

ADDRESS AT HEADQUARTERS.

By Miss Hamilton Hunter.

ISRAEL MILITANT.—II.

Now you may wonder what this most marvellous blessing of the "precious things of the everlasting hills" has to do with "Israel Militant," but I hope to show you that, although they are by no means so at present, yet the two are (in God's plan for His people's destiny) inseparably connected. You know that the raison d'etre of Israel's existence as a nation was that she should be a "peculiar people" unto Him, "a kingdom of priests" and an holy nation. These are God's own words. "A kingdom of priests"—that is, "princes of God," God's "Isra-El," who were also "priests of God." There are two things a kingdom must be able to do or she will very soon cease from being a kingdom. She must be able to rule, and she must be able to fight. If a kingdom cannot rule, anarchy will result. Anarchy always brings civil strife and divisions, and "a kingdom divided cannot stand."

A kingdom must also be able to fight, or it will very soon be devoured by its enemies. Pacifism may sound very idealistic, but it is political madness and national suicide. That is why Pacifism forms such an important part of the enemy's propaganda campaign of snares and delusions against God's Israel. All his campaigns have had this object in view—to tempt her to commit suicide, either by sinning against the protecting Covenant, or by national folly. Now, when I denounce Pacifism and Disarmament, don't imagine I am upholding war. Far from it. All war is of Satan. It is his great crime against God and man; but he will never cease from it until he is chained when Our Lord and King, the Prince of Peace, returns to sit upon His throne over Israel.

Digitized by Google

Therefore wars must continue to convulse this world of ours until then. The realization of this terrible fact overwhelmed Daniel with horror. He had been hoping for restoration and peace for his people, and instead the vision was shown him of the long and awful red trail of "great warfare" (Dan. x, 1, R.V.) that was to be Israel's portion down the centuries, and the sight was too much for him, and caused him once to "faint and be sick for three days," and another time to fast and mourn for three weeks.

Yet it is to the eternal shame of Israel that wars still continue to rage, because if she had only kept her Covenant with her Lord, wars would have ceased long ago, and the Glory of the Lord would now be covering the earth "as the waters cover the sea." "Oh that thou hadst hearkened to My commandment, then had thy peace been as a river, and thy righteousness as the waves of the sea." For if Israel had fought with God as He intended she should fight, no nation on earth would have been able to stand up against her; and if Israel had been a nation of priests unto God, and had used "the precious things of the everlasting hills" for reclaiming the world for her Lord, all the nations of the earth would long ago have learnt righteousness, and the glorious Lord would now be reigning "before His ancients gloriously."

For it was God's purpose to bless "all the families of the earth" through Israel His chosen." "You only have I known of all the families of the earth." All the rest of the world, St. John tells us, "lieth in the Evil One." There are only the two divisions—God's Israel and Satan's subjects. The nation that does not nationally belong to God belongs to Satan; although there may be multitudes of God's children living in Satan's nation and vice versa. We are now speaking of nations. Up to the time of Our Lord's sacrifice on Calvary, "Israel" may be said to have consisted only of Jacob's descendants, for the Israel proselytes were a negligible quantity owing to Israel never having fulfilled her duties as the priests and missionaries of the world. But since Our Lord accomplished His great work on Calvary, "Israel" has included all who have entered into the Covenant of Redemption through faith in the blood of the Lamb of God. So that when we now speak of "Israel" we include all Christians, of every race and colour. "For if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise."

It was necessary for the Israel nation to be prepared for her great destiny, and no one but the Lord Himself could prepare her. But before she could come into the holiness of His Presence she had to be cleansed from sin, and separated from the world. There was sin and crime in the family of Jacob; and it took 400 years of bondage and suffering in Egypt before the nation would forsake all and come out into the wilderness to meet her Lord. But at last Israel was willing to make the great renunciation; and under the blood of the First Passover her Lord cleansed her from her sins, and covenanted her to Himself. What strange things happened that memorable night! On the one hand, the Destroyer bringing death and mourning to the Egyptian; on the other hand, the Almighty Lord bringing life and health to Israel. All the sick and suffering ones, all those who were bruised and bleeding from the lashes of the Egyptians, all the worn-out and weary ones, healed and made strong, "There was not one feeble person among their tribes" (Ps. cv, 37) when they went out of Egypt. It would be so now with our nation if she would forsake "Egypt"—the things of wickedness and apostasy—and would return to her Lord and His Holy Covenant. It is His promise.

So Israel, regenerated and strong in the Lord, went forth in order that for 40 years He might teach her how to rule with Him, how to fight with Him, and how to be priests unto Him.

It was not long before she had her first lesson in "fighting with God." Egypt soon pursued her. "Egypt" always does when we forsake the things of this world. As surely as we make the great surrender to Our Lord, so surely do the Powers of Darkness fall upon us. But Israel, cleansed by the blood of the Covenant, and sheltering behind the Presence of her Lord, had no need of the material weapons of war. This was the first military lesson that Jehovah Sabaoth taught His people—one of the great secrets of fighting with Him. Because the Mighty Presence that had been leading her came between her and her enemies. The Egyptians dared to defy that protection and were lost.

A cleansed nation—a camp without sin—and Israel will ever find it thus. For the command will be, "Stand still, the Lord will fight for you." You will remember how when Moab and Ammon and Esau's descendants from Mount Seir came up to overthrow the kingdom of Judah, Jehoshaphat, king of Judah, called all Israel to a fast before the Lord, and the Lord said, "Ye shall not need to fight them," and how the men of Judah went out to meet the enemy singing "Praise the Lord, for His mercy endureth for ever." And when they came to where their enemies were, they found nothing but dead bodies, for they all had fought among themselves and slain each other.

Then when Hezekiah had cleansed the Temple and the people from their wickedness and idolatry, and they had a solemn Passover, Assyria came up against him and shut him up in Jerusalem; but the Angel of the Lord smote 185,000 Assyrians in the camp in one night and forced the rest to return.

Several times God has fought for "Israel" in these Isles. And we all know how He gave us the victory in the last war after our nation cried to Him for help; but we did not come to Him at the beginning, and we did not cleanse either our nation or the sanctuary, and so 1,000,000 of the flower of our manhood laid down their lives because of our national sins. Oh, the tragedy of it all! We will not learn the lesson, even as Israel of old would not learn the lesson.

Incredible as it may seem, hardly were the hosts of Pharaoh engulfed in the Red Sea than disobedience and murmurings broke out in the camp of Israel; hankerings after the "flesh-pots of Egypt," that chain the spirit and prevent it from receiving the heavenly blessings. And so the next time Israel fought—when Amalek attacked her at Rephidim—her Lord could not do as He had done before. A material weapon is necessary when materialism fetters the spirit. And Moses had to sit all day wearily and anxiously holding up Aaron's rod before the Lord, and interceding for Israel's victory.

If you trace the history of Israel down the centuries you will find that as she has departed from her Lord's Covenant and Commandments, and fallen into materialism, so she has had to depend upon more and more terrible material weapons of warfare. Jehovah Sabaoth never intended that His people should fight with such weapons. And Israel depending upon material weapons is always at a disadvantage with her enemies, because behind the human enemies are her real foes. Our real warfare "is not"—St. Paul tells us—"against flesh and blood, but against principalities and powers, against the world rulers of darkness, against the spirits of wickedness in the heavenlies." They are the G.H.Q. staff of all the enemies of the Lord and His people, and it is there that the real danger lies for Israel and for each one of us individually. And when Israel forgets this, or neglects her spiritual weapons, or is unable to use them, she always pays a terrible price.

Yet she had one spiritual weapon that would have won every fight if she had only been able to use it. It is one of the most precious of "the precious things of the everlasting hills"—the Name of her Lord. In His love He had actually given her His Name. As a man gives his name to his wife, so the Lord had given His Name to Israel, and the Name that He gave her was His Jehovah Name—the Name of His Presence. Where that Name was, and where that Name was named, there He was—and for that reason it was most Holy, and no one but Israel has any right ever to use it. Moses said to the people: "All people of the earth shall see that thou art called by the name of Jehovah, and they shall be afraid of thee." (Deut. xxviii, 10.)

But Israel, too, was often afraid of that Name, and dared not use it because of her sins. Her sins also blinded her eyes to the vision of what that Name could mean to her. And, finally, when her sins separated her from the Presence of her Lord, she even lost the knowledge of its real form and pronunciation. It was the intention of her Lord to bestow other mighty gifts and powers from "the everlasting hills" upon her, but she made it impossible for Him to do so by her refusal of the priesthood. The Hebrew word for priest is "kohen," and it means "one who stands before." As this is descriptive of service and offerings, it also meant "a servant" and "an offerer." So that a priest was one who stood before God, who was a servant of God, and also of the people, and who offered prayers and sacrifices to God on behalf of the people and himself.

But only those who were free from sin and holy could dare to stand before Jehovah. And when her Lord came down on Sinai in awful majesty to call His people to draw near to His Presence, Israel, conscience-stricken and terrified, fled from the Mount, imploring Moses: "Speak thou with us and we will hear, but let not God speak with us lest we die."

And God took them at their word. He never forces upon us the blessings we refuse. Thus Israel lost her glorious chance of a priesthood that would have given her access to the Holiest place—the place of the Presence of her Lord. And she also lost power with God and man such as she had never imagined. Therefore, one tribe only—the tribe of Levi—was set apart for the priesthood. They alone could enter into the sanctuary. The conscience-stricken people had shut themselves out. And then what was the result? Why the same as it always is when we refuse to call on the Lord. Satan gets his great opportunity. And so while Moses and Joshua were up in the Glory on the Mount, being taught of the Lord, the horrible orgy of the golden calf was taking place in the camp of those who had refused to hear the voice of the Lord. On the top of the Mount the Light of Heaven, at its foot the blackness and horror of Gehenna. A people shut out from the sanctuary, from approaching the Presence of their Lord—by their own request.

THE BIBLE AND SCIENTIFIC TRUTH—I.

By CHAS. LAVENDER.

THE Bible is looked upon by many people as being "out of date," unscientific, and therefore unreliable. Known to have been written nearly two thousand, and some parts of it perhaps four thousand years ago, it is argued that it cannot possibly be anything else.

How many books written even one hundred years back are printed and read to-day? Shakespeare's Plays, Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress," Milton's "Paradise Lost," "Don Quixote," and a few others; but the vast majority live but a few short years and are never heard of more. Those with a life history worth talking about have mostly a religious or moral basis; when we come to scientific works an average of perhaps ten years is about the extent of their usefulness, for new discoveries are constantly being made rendering revision and alteration necessary.

As an illustration of this take the following extract from a recent issue of a magazine: "Summarizing what is known of Vitamins at the moment of writing, J. B. S. Haldane says that 'it may be out of date when this article is read'"!

Although, according to an American writer the Bible is "The Book Nobody Knows" (and this is true in one sense at least, for no one can know it absolutely and entirely from beginning to end), the Bible still stands. No other book has been translated into 800 different languages; of no other book can it be said that Societies exist for the sole purpose of encouraging its circulation. No other book is so widely and so continuously published. No other book is printed and circulated literally in millions every year. No other book was ever telegraphed half-way across a continent and printed in full in two editions of a daily newspaper, as was the case when the Revised New Testament was first issued in 1881 and it was sent by wire from New York to Chicago and printed in the Chicago Times; 33,000 copies were sold in New York in twenty-four hours and something like two million in England before publication.

We may well ask, How comes it that the Bible still retains ts hold upon the human heart? There are many reasons, but they are all summed up in the all-important fact that no other book can authoritatively state, as does the Bible, "Thus saith the Lord."

What then is the attitude of the Bible towards Scientific Truth, or how does the Bible compare with Scientific Truth? Rather let us ask, What is the attitude of Scientific Truth towards and how does it compare with the Bible?

Before we can go into this question let us decide what we mean by "Scientific Truth." The dictionary definition of "scientific" is "systematic, exact," and that is the sense in which we ought to use it. Science is "systematized knowledge," and as knowledge is continually increasing, Science cannot remain stationary. Sir Oliver Lodge, while claiming that "Science gives us the truth," admits that it is "never the whole truth, and therefore cannot fully satisfy us." He rightly says that "the whole truth will turn out to be better and more glorious than anything we have yet imagined."

The trouble is that in acquiring knowledge about the wondrous processes of Nature and in applying them to the use of man, so many mistakes are made. The result is that what is at one time accepted as fact, because announced in the name of "Science," is often found to be incorrect owing to conclusions having been too hastily drawn, or else arrived at as the result of incomplete experiments, or based upon wrong premises.

"Scientific Truth" means actual knowledge, based upon systematized facts, as contrasted with probabilities and suppositions which sometimes do duty for so-called Science. Now "actual facts," by whatever means ascertained, are never in opposition to the Bible, and the Bible never contradicts actual facts. Human research may and often does misconstrue or distort facts, may even be mistaken as to what are facts and what are not, but when ultimately and accurately ascertained facts will not contradict the Bible. Similarly, human interpretation of the Bible may and often has been mistaken, but when what the Bible actually says is rightly understood it will always be found to accord with actual scientific facts.

The Bible does not need any defence; it has defended itself right down the ages and is still quite capable of continuing to do so. It still stands, in the words of the late Mr. Gladstone, "The impregnable Rock of Holy Scripture," and we may thank God for it. T. Watson says, "The Bible is a rock of diamonds, a chain of pearls, the sword of the Spirit; a chart by which the Christian sails to eternity; the map by which he daily walks; the sundial by which he sets his life; the balance on which he weighs his actions."

Brief reference to the result of archæological discoveries may prove interesting and helpful. It is well known that a tremendous amount of work has been done by the Palestine Exploration Fund and other organizations, both in the Holy Land, Egypt, Mesopotamia and elsewhere. Did anyone ever hear of any Biblical statement being disproved as the result of any such excavations and discoveries? Never! On the contrary, many supposedly questionable points have been cleared up and the Bible record proved absolutely correct many times over.

As an instance, not very many years ago sceptics said there never was such a place as Ur of the Chaldees, whence Abram our father was called. Under the heading "Ur" in Chambers' Encyclopædia published in 1892 the only remark is "see Abraham," implying evidently that all that was known about it was to be found in the Bible. A good Atlas dated 1900 makes no mention of Ur either in Map or Index. On the other hand, Harmsworth's Encyclopædia of 1919 gives the precise situation of Ur and some particulars of excavations, including the uncovering of a house. Not only has it been discovered and unearthed, but objects in daily use there 3,500 years ago or more have been brought away and have been exhibited in London and New York. From these there is evidence to show why it was that the Lord called Abram out of that place; temples to the Moon god have been discovered and described; it was therefore a centre of idolatrous worship from which Abram had to be removed before he could become "the friend of God" and fitted for his great task, that of founding the great nation in which all families of the earth should be blessed.

Another illustration of the value of archæological research is to be found in the fact that bricks have been discovered in Pharaoh's treasure city, built by the Hebrews, some of which have in them a large proportion of chopped straw, while in others taken from later courses of brickwork there is hardly any. This is exactly in accordance with what we should expect from Exodus v, 6-8, where we read that the brickmakers were no longer to be supplied with straw as formerly. Specimens of these bricks are to be seen in the British Museum.

Interesting as these archæological discoveries are, they are not what are generally understood by the term scientific, so do not belong directly to our subject. They serve, however, to show that when facts are revealed they do not contradict the Bible. It is the vain imaginings and suppositions of man which do that.

Geological discoveries are in the same category; when accurately interpreted and correctly understood they do not contradict the Bible records. As a writer well says, "The Word of God—the Bible—is true, all of it, and all that it really says. The Work of God—Creation—is true, all of it, and all that it really says; but, man's interpretation of the one (Theology) and his reading of the other (Science) may and do both contain errors." These facts, however, do not vitiate the accuracy of the records. So much is this the case, and so often have so-called scientific facts had to be altered, that it is safe to say any statement which is not in line with Biblical records is more than suspect, it is wrong. But before coming to any definite conclusion on the matter we must be very careful to understand precisely what the Bible does say. Herein many have erred through wrongly reading or misunderstanding the sacred record.

Let us take as an example the question of the shape of the earth and its movements. The ancients believed it to be flat and that it was stationary in the heavens, the sun and planets revolving round it. When it was first stated by Copernicus, and later on by Galileo, that the earth is round and that it revolves on its own axis and also travels round the sun, it was argued from the Bible that they were wrong. The Bible certainly speaks of "the ends of the earth," also of its "foundations" and "pillars" (see Job xxxviii, 4; Psalm civ, 5; and 1 Sam. ii, 8), but all these, though at first understood as inconsistent with the idea, are quite compatible with the earth being a sphere, and even to-day it is quite common to speak of "the ends of the earth," meaning simply remote portions of it.*

We see now that these mistakes were the result of a misreading of the Scriptures. So far, in fact, from the Bible stating that the earth is flat there are statements therein which can only be true on the assumption that the shape and movements of the earth are as we now know them to be. For instance, the Prayer Book version of the Psalms translates the tenth verse of Psalm xcvi : " He hath made the round world so fast that it cannot be moved," and although the idea of a globe is hardly traceable in the Authorized or Revised Versions, Ferrar Fenton has it, " Who fixed its unchangeable sphere," so evidently the idea is actually in the original.

* NOTE.—For this and other points in this article, the writer is indebted to "Roger's Reasons" and other books.

Now take the daily revolution of the earth on its axis, causing regular alternations of night and day, and compare this with Our Lord's words in Luke xvii, 34-36. He was speaking of " the day when the Son of Man is revealed," and alluding to the instantaneous nature of the event, He said, " I tell you, in that night there shall be two men in one bed ; the one shall be taken, and the other left. Two women shall be grinding together ; the one shall be taken, and the other left. Two men shall be in the field ; the one shall be taken, and the other left." These things are spoken of as occurring at the same moment of time and yet they are distinctive of three different periods in the twenty-four hours. Men are in bed at night ; women in the East grind corn in the early morning ; men work in the field in the day-time. If these various operations are going on at the same moment it must be on different parts of the earth's surface. This is quite possible because, as is now well known, it is midnight at the Antipodes when it is noon here, and the time varies with every meridian of longitude. So much is this the case that " listeners in " to Australia one Sunday evening were startled to hear the remark " it is now 5.30 Monday morning."

That the earth is a sphere is also shown by the words of Isaiah in his wonderful chapter xl, 22 : " It is He that sitteth upon the circle of the earth." The original indicates an arch or sphere, not simply a circle drawn upon a flat surface. The twelfth verse of this chapter will bear careful consideration, indicating as it does that in the construction of the earth's surface the greatest care was exercised that everything should be correctly proportioned ; the waters measured, the heaven (the atmosphere) precisely defined. The dust and the mountains accurately measured and weighed, so that the result should be in every way perfectly balanced and suitably proportioned to the needs of man and of all the creatures destined to live and find their sustenance upon it.

Deuteronomy also throws some light on the shape of the earth ; if it were flat, a plain, the same stars would be seen everywhere. We know that this is not so ; the Southern Cross beautifies the midnight sky for our brethren in Australia, but can never be seen in England. Did Moses know it also ? Something of the truth must have been revealed to him, else, when warning Israel not to worship the stars, why should he say " which the Lord thy God hath divided (i.e., apportioned) unto all nations under the whole heaven " ?—Deut. iv, 19.

The fact of the earth's annual journey round the sun accounts for the recurring seasons of the year, just as the daily revolution on its axis gives us the regularly alternating periods of day and night. Did the ancients know this ? Some knowledge of it is certainly behind the statement in Genesis viii, 22, recording the Almighty's promise that the earth should no more be destroyed by water : " While the earth remaineth, seedtime and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease." This is usually thought of as a promise that these things should continue to follow one another in ordered succession, that they should not fail ; but the word is " cease," and only because of the annual and diurnal motions of the earth is it a literal fact that they do not cease. When it is springtime in England it is autumn in New Zealand ; when we are keeping an old-fashioned Christmas around the yule-log here at home, our countrymen at the Antipodes are sweltering in the heat of midsummer ; and in between these extremes of position on the earth's surface are all the intermediate stages, so that springtime and harvest, and summer and winter, actually do not cease any more than do day and night.

While the Bible was not written as a scientific text-book, if it is verily and indeed the Word of God, it cannot contain false statements, whether of fact or anything else : they must always be reconcilable with actualities.

Perhaps the most marvellous word picture of the position of the earth in space is to be found in the Book of Job. We know that the earth in common with other heavenly bodies is suspended in space by mighty forces and laws entirely outside the control of man. Job says (chapter xxvi, 7) " He hangeth the earth upon nothing " ! Fixed, that is, yet not supported ; kept in its place, but by no visible means. Read the words again, there are only six of them, " He hangeth the earth upon nothing," and say if the wit of man or the wisdom of science could ever hope to equal the sublimity and accuracy of the statement, combined with such wondrous simplicitv. By contrast, how utterly puerile appears the Hindoo idea that the earth rests on four huge elephants, which stand on the back of an enormous tortoise, swimming in a limitless ocean !

" HATH GOD CAST AWAY HIS PEOPLE ? "—(Rom. xi, 1.)—I.

[Reading : Romans ix, 1-16 and xi, 1-12].

BY A. FACET.

I.—Who are " His People " ?
II.—How God's People, here referred to, may be identified.

I.—Who are the people referred to in this question ? Obviously they are Israel. But " Israel " is variously interpreted to-day, so we must be more explicit. First of all, then, it cannot possibly mean the Church. At leisure read carefully, and with open mind, these three chapters : Roman ix, x and xi, as they are all dealing with this same people Israel. Now in chapter x, verse 1, Paul says his prayer is that Israel " might be saved " ! It cannot therefore mean the Church. Again, in chapter xi, verse 1, Paul refers to himself as an " Israelite," " of the tribe of Benjamin," and also (verses 2-4) refers back to an incident in the national history of Israel : what would be the point or object of this if " Israel " meant the Church.

Nor can it possibly mean the Jews. Paul was not a Jew by descent. He was a " citizen " of pagan Rome—a Jew in religious denomination—an Israelite by descent. He was an Israelite, as he says, " of the tribe of Benjamin." The Benjamites were not Jews, though they were just as much Israelites as were the Jews. In the same way the Jews were not Benjamites. Do you realize the very real difference ?

Digitized by Google

It is the same as saying " we are all Britishers, but we are not necessarily therefore all Englishmen." The Jews were of Judah, one tribe out of twelve, or rather thirteen, because Joseph's two sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, were counted as two tribes, and had each territorial possessions, but making only twelve territorial divisions, as the tribe of Levi were sanctified for the priestly services and had no possession in land.

Now it is most essential to note this marked distinction between Israel and Judah. " Israel " can mean all the tribes, but generally refers to only ten tribes, who are also sometimes called Ephraim, after the Birthright tribe. This distinction was noticeable on the death of Solomon, when civil war, caused by Rehoboam, under the Will of God, separated Judah and Benjamin from the rest of Israel, and these two tribes are generally referred to as " Judah " or " The House of Judah," and the rest as " Israel " or " House of Israel," or " Ephraim," and as such, right through the Prophets, there run two sets of promises, two sets of threats, two sets of punishments, and two sets of prophecies relating thereto, and to their ultimate redemption and reunion—but they are distinct, and cannot be interchanged, nor misapplied without seriously and fatally violating God's Own Word. Israel in the Old Testament does not mean the Jews and never means the Church, and never refers to the Church. Neither Church nor Jews have ever or ever will supplant, or take the place of the Nation Israel. The Gospel of Salvation is the election of grace for salvation to all mankind; the Gospel of the Kingdom of God is the election of Race for service to all mankind. This being so, it means that that Race must be continuous throughout history, otherwise mankind would lose the service intended for it by God, and that could not be, because God's plans never fail. So then, if Israel was formed to fulfil God's plan of service to mankind, Israel cannot be the " Dead Nation " of the past that some say she is. Now on this point there is no need for conjecture, because, if God's Word has anything to say about it, that will of course decide it definitely and finally either way. In the second verse of chapter xi, Paul is very definite in his pronouncement, " God has not cast away His people." Now why should Paul be so confident? Because he knew God's Word could never fail. If there were no other passage in the Bible, Jer. xxxi, verses 35-37, would be more than sufficient:

> " Thus saith the Lord, which giveth the sun for a light by day, and the ordinances of the moon and of the stars for a light by night, which divideth the sea when the waves thereof roar; the Lord of Hosts is his name:
> If those ordinances depart from before me, saith the Lord, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before me for ever.
> Thus saith the Lord; if heaven above can be measured, and the foundations of the earth searched out beneath, I will also cast off all the seed of Israel for all that they have done, saith the Lord."

At leisure the whole beautiful chapter should be read, as it deals definitely and very emphatically with God's people Israel, and these verses are the climax, an absolutely unconditional, unequivocal pledge, that Israel should always be a NATION, not a Church, nor any ecclesiastical body or substitute, but a real virile NATION! The seal of indisputable authority is in the first four words: " Thus saith the Lord," more correctly," JEHOVAH "!

The statement above, that the pledge was " unconditional," is not strictly correct, because the pledge of continuity, without time limit, is conditional upon the functioning of the Heavenly ordinances of the sun, moon and stars, or alternatively, upon the possibility of measuring Heaven, or even the discovering of the foundations of the earth. So, therefore, until that has been accomplished, it is logical to maintain that Israel is still somewhere a functioning Nation before the Lord, notwithstanding all the erudite pronouncements of all the Modernists and of all the " Scholars "; otherwise the Word of God has failed, which is impossible.

Further, a Nation implies a King, and if this inference is sound, there would surely be some reference to it in the Bible. Such a reference may be found in I Chronicles xvii, 11-14:

> " And it shall come to pass, when thy days be expired that thou must go to be with thy fathers, that I will raise up thy seed after thee, which shall be of thy sons; and I will establish his kingdom.
> He shall build me an house, and I will stablish his throne for ever.
> I will be his father, and he shall be my son: and I will not take my mercy away from him, as I took it from him that was before thee:
> But I will settle him in mine house and in my kingdom for ever: and his throne shall be established for evermore."

And it is obvious that David accepts this promise literally, and not spiritually, by his reply in verse 17: " . . . for thou hast also spoken of thy servant's house for a great while to come." Again, in chapter xxix, verse 23: " Then Solomon sat on the throne of Jehovah as king instead of David his father . . . ." Surely that means continuity if it means anything at all, and that Solomon and all his succeeding heirs to the throne are only Kings-Regent until Christ Himself comes to reign, because, please note, it is " the throne of Jehovah "! However, if that is not fully convincing, this direct statement will be found in Jeremiah xxxiii, verses 20-22:

> " Thus saith the Lord: If ye can break my covenant of the day, and my covenant of the night, and that there should not be day and night in their season;
> Then may also my covenant be broken with David my servant, that he should not have a son to reign upon his throne; and with the Levites the priests, my ministers.
> As the host of heaven cannot be numbered, neither the sand of the sea measured: so will I multiply the seed of David my servant, and the Levites that minister unto me."

Again, " Thus saith Jehovah "! and following on immediately is God's reply to ancient and modern critics, who say that Israel, having broken her Covenant with God, has forfeited all the promises, or who say God has not kept His Word (verses 23-26):

> " Moreover the word of the Lord came to Jeremiah, saying,

Considerest thou not what this people have spoken, saying, The two families which the Lord hath chosen, he hath even cast them off? thus they have despised my people, that they should be no more a nation before them.

Thus saith the Lord; If my covenant be not with day and night, and if I have not appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth;

Then will I cast away the seed of Jacob, and David my servant, so that I will not take any of his seed to be rulers over the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: for I will cause their captivity to return, and have mercy on them."

Here also is a promise of the return from captivity. The only return yet accomplished as recorded in the Bible, and therefore during what are called "Bible Times," is the one mentioned in Ezra and Nehemiah, the partial return of Judah from Babylon. It was partial (though thoroughly representative) in two ways—of those taken captive to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar, only a portion were willing to give up the comfortable homes acquired (in captivity though they were) for the certainty of hardship in building up their destroyed heritage. And secondly, those taken captive to Babylon were not the whole of Judah and Benjamin, but only those living in Jerusalem and the vicinity when Nebuchadnezzar made his onslaught. And these were the only ones to return, some 42,000 odd.

Now a few years after they had been taken to Babylon, only some three or four (but about 120 years or so since the last of Israel had gone to Assyria), God sent a message by Ezekiel, the message of the two sticks (Ezekiel xxxvii, verses 15-22), and this, it will be readily conceded, has not yet taken place, the reunion of Israel and Judah, and their joint restoration under the same King to their ancient heritage in Palestine, but that, since God has said so plainly, it will come to pass.

So may we not regard the following facts established beyond doubt or denial?—that Israel and Judah are two distinct parties of the nation Israel; that since their separation on the death of Solomon they have never been reunited; that they must be thus reunited and restored to their own land; that they must exist as separate entities until that reunion, and are therefore in the world to-day as two distinct sections.

Now we want to learn how they may be identified. The father of the race was Abraham. While he was still in Chaldea, God told him to leave his home, and go where He led him, and made him certain conditional promises (Gen xii, 1-3):

"Now the Lord had said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will shew thee:

And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing:

And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed."

This before Abraham had any family. And these promises were amplified, because of obedience, and restated on the separation from Lot, and obviously not meant spiritually (Gen. xiii, 14-17):

"And the Lord said unto Abram, after that Lot was separated from him, Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward:

For all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever.

And I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth: so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed also be numbered.

Arise, walk through the land in the length of it and in the breadth of it; for I will give it unto thee."

Then God promises him an heir, and again multiplicity of seed, but still not spiritual (Gen. xv, 3-6):

"And Abram said, Behold, to me thou hast given no seed: and, lo, one born in my house is mine heir.

And, behold, the word of the Lord came unto him, saying, This shall not be thine heir; but he that shall come forth out of thine own bowels shall be thine heir.

And he brought him forth abroad, and said, Look now toward heaven, and tell the stars if thou be able to number them: and he said unto him, So shall thy seed be.

And he believed in the Lord; and he counted it to him for righteousness."

THE BIBLE: IS IT TRUE?—I.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED AT THE CENTRAL HALL, WESTMINSTER, FEBRUARY 18TH, 1929, BY THE REV. JOSEPH GAY, A.T.S.

THE Bible is under trial and test. There is nothing new in that. Ever since the Bible came into the hands of the people, ever since it was presented to them in the vernacular, so that the ordinary everyday person could read it for himself and herself, the Book has been subjected to the closest scrutiny, and to the most searching investigation. Sanctified and unsanctified scholarship have turned their keen and penetrating search-light upon the Word of God with, on the whole, gratifying results.

The Church of Rome foresaw and deplored this. She realized that to give the Bible, unfettered and perfectly free, into the hands of the common people, for them to do with it as they listed, would be to run a tremendous risk, to open the floodgates of religious discussion and debate which may in the long run undermine the authority of the Church if not the State.

Henry de Knighton, Canon of Leicester, voiced the opinion of Rome at the time when Wyckliffe's translation came into the possession of the people when he said, "Christ delivered His Gospel to the clergy and doctors of the Church, that they might administer to the laity and to weaker persons, according to the state of the times and the wants of men. But this Master John Wyckliffe translated it out of Latin into English, and thus laid it more open to the laity, and to women who could read, than it had formerly been to the most learned of the clergy, even to those of them who had the best understanding. And in this way the Gospel pearl is cast abroad and trodden under foot of swine, and that which was before precious to both clergy and laity is rendered, as it were, common jest to both." Rome has not changed. This attitude she still maintains though she may couch it in more becoming terms. She alleges that the guidance of the Church is absolutely necessary to a right interpretation of the Bible. The right of private judgment she does not hesitate to declare to be that vicious principle which has reduced the Bible to utter chaos and has been the fruitful cause of all the schisms which have rent the Church asunder.

John de Wyckliffe ran a great risk, 'tis true, in giving the Bible into the hands of the common people, and all those who followed in his train ran the same risk. But if the cause is to be judged by its effect then no greater gift had ever been given to the world since the days of Our Lord. "Wyckliffe could now see the Saxon people, guided by this pillar of fire, marching steadily on to liberty. It might take many centuries to consummate their emancipation; but, with the Bible in their mother-tongue, no power on earth could retain them in thraldom. The doors of the house of their bondage had been flung open." The river of pure water of life flowed freely and the people rejoiced greatly as they laved themselves in its life-giving stream. That was the result which justified over and over again the risk John Wyckliffe ran. A great adventure? Yes! And an equally great and glorious consummation.

The fact remains. The Bible is here in our midst. You and I have free access to it, and we do exercise the right of private judgment. It is because of this fact that we are able to ask and in a measure to answer this all-important question, "Is it true?"

If it still remained upon the dusty shelf of some university library, where Martin Luther found it, inaccessible, it would concern us nothing at all whether it were true or false; but since it has been translated into our common national life, and has become both the warp and woof of our constitution and institutions, it is of superlative importance whether it be true or false.

Now everything depends upon the basic principle upon which you intend to build. The first concern is as to foundations. Has the Bible to be dealt with as you would deal with any other body of literature, or is there a factor to be reckoned with which does not arise anywhere else? In short, is St. Peter's word true: "No prophecy ever came by the will of man; but men spake from God, being moved by the Holy Ghost." (2 Peter i, 21—R.V.)

St. Paul says of the Christian believer: ". . . built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ Himself being the chief corner-stone; in whom each several building, fitly framed together, groweth into a holy temple in the Lord." (Ephesians ii, 20-21—R.V.)

Who were these apostles and prophets; and who was this Jesus Christ? Were they men who wrote as they were moved by the Holy Ghost; or were they men, gifted perhaps with more than average intelligence, who wrote under no deeper sense of Divine guidance than that which came to a Chaucer, or a Milton, a Socrates, or a Shakespeare? Was Jesus Christ a man merely, holy, pure, noble, upright, qualities which He must share with all mankind, or was He verily God, the Son? That is to say, has the Bible to be judged on natural grounds and natural grounds only, without any reference to the supernatural and the miraculous; or must we postulate a Divinity which has so shaped and formed and fashioned it that it becomes the veritable oracles of God to men, revealing His mind and will, manifesting His plans and purposes, making known unto the sons of men that destiny in which the entire universe shall receive its perfected consummation? This issue is absolutely vital.

Now the Modernist, as far as I understand him, has selected as his basic principle of interpretation natural law, and in consequence is always suspicious of any statement which suggests the supernatural or miraculous. He holds that the Bible should come to the touchstone of historicity like every other body of literature. Historical evidence is to him the acid test of validity. That which transcends known experience must, to say the least, be open to serious question. So he thinks. It seems to me that he has no room for the word of St. Peter that "men spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." He holds that there are degrees of inspiration in the Bible so that though some books may reveal a high degree of inspiration, others show a degree of inspiration much lower than Milton's "Paradise Lost," for example, or Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress." Some would go even further than this and say that the works of Shakespeare, purely secular, exhibit a degree of inspiration as deep and as profound as any book in the Bible, and a great deal deeper than some. Granted that his basic principle is correct, then his conclusions are simply irresistible though the result is disastrous. It is therefore just here that we close issue with him. What have we according to his thesis? Upon natural grounds of historical evidence he must of necessity relegate to the limbo of myth and fable the Creation account of Genesis as eminently unscientific, because you have in that account the invasion of the supernatural and miraculous in a marked degree. But the fact which strikes home against him is indisputable. The Creation account is perfectly scientific and as such entirely reliable. There is nothing whatever in the Creation account contradictory to science. On the contrary, science has added nothing to, nor yet subtracted anything from, that wonderful account. So wonderful is it that, upon natural grounds, it cannot be accounted for. But if you allow the basic principle which we hold to be true that "men spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost," then that wonderful account, condensing into two small chapters that which science has taken libraries to elaborate, could have been written in no other way than by the hand of God Himself, which fact makes it credible though it may transcend all known human experience. Of course we know that much which passes under the name of science is, as Professor Orr, of Glasgow University, says, "not science at all, but crude and unwarranted speculation, and often extremely bad philosophy." Unsanctified scholarship may boast of a remarkable mixture of scientific facts, rash theorizing, and bad metaphysics. But sanctified scholarship, of the most eminent kind, and this is the point I wish to make, has always been consistent in its confirmations of the truth of the Bible not only in the Creation account of Genesis, but in the great fundamental ideas of the religion of the Bible—God, Christ, the Son of God, the soul, the future life, the moral and spiritual development of the world. Let us have an end of the folly which seeks to marshal all scientific scholarship of any consequence in a successful attack upon the truth of the Bible. It is as untruthful as it is futile. Hugh Miller shall marshal in a host of scholarly men whose witness to the truth of God's revealed Word—the Holy Bible—must, to all reasonable, thinking men, place this question for ever beyond the realm of speculative doubt and unbelief. "It is," he says, "as the fullness of the time comes, in the brighter light of increasing scientific knowledge, that the grand old oracles of the Bible, so apparently simple, but so marvellously pregnant with meaning, stand forth at once cleared of all erroneous human glosses, and vindicated as the inspired testimony of Jehovah."

What sayest thou, Sir John? "All human discoveries seem to have been made, only to confirm more and more the truths of the Bible." (Sir John Herschel.) Thou hast well said.

Genesis agrees with the findings of the very best scientists of the past fifty years. "The order of creation," writes Sir Wm. Dawson, one of the greatest geologists of modern times, "as stated in Genesis is faultless in the light of modern science, and many of the details present the most remarkable agreement with the results of sciences born only in our own day."

Bear with this folly of mine as I quote twice more. Immanuel Kant, as great a thinker surely as Germany ever produced, has said: "The existence of the Bible as a Book for the people is the greatest benefit which the human race has ever experienced. Every attempt to belittle it, or to do away with it entirely, is a crime against humanity."

Alfred Russell Wallace, a great evolutionist, I pray you mark that, a great evolutionist, says: "Nothing in evolution can account for the soul of man. A difference between man and all other animals is unbridgeable."

Now what is the value of this testimony? The hall-mark of the supernatural and the miraculous is upon every page of the sacred Book. The basic principle of the natural, scientific and historic, is too inadequate to account for that truth of the Bible to which this formidable array of scholarship bears such united testimony. "The bed is shorter than that a man can stretch himself on it; and the covering narrower than that he can wrap himself in it." (Isaiah xxviii, 20.) But if the modernist insists that the acid test of validity must be historical evidence, and that all suggestions of the supernatural and miraculous must be held in suspicion, we will compel him to stretch himself upon his all too short bed, and wrap himself in his all too narrow covering. With a superior wave of the hand he has disposed of the Flood and the whale, and has, to his entire satisfaction, taken the outworks. For the moment let it be so. What about the citadel? When Professor Huxley made his gigantic onslaught upon the Gadarene swine the rationalistic world greatly rejoiced, for all miracle in the life of Christ was thereby most effectively destroyed. Was it? He had brought up his heavy artillery to smash a small bit of outwork. The citadel remained intact. The open grave of our risen Lord, the empty tomb of our living Jesus, still remained to be accounted for. It is even so now. Two things the modernist shall grapple with, and let us see if he can stretch himself upon his bed with any degree of comfort or wrap himself in his covering with any hope of sufficient protection of the blighting and blasting east wind of atheism.

He shall account along the line of the natural for a God-created Kingdom and the God-created King. That is to say, he shall account for Israel on the one hand and Christ on the other.

THE KINGDOM ISRAEL.

The Kingdom of Israel must be accounted for. It was and has ever remained a temporal Kingdom. To speak of it now as a spiritual Kingdom is of the nature of a reductio ad absurdum.

Along the line of the natural, without any reference to the supernatural, its account can be fully and adequately accounted for. And why?

Because of its intense monotheism. Here is a nation in the midst of all the polytheistic nations of the world rising up to proclaim one God as the God of all the earth. At no time did Israel make her God tribal; on the contrary, all her actions to all other peoples rested upon the assumption that the God in Whom she trusted, Who inspired her thought and determined her action, was the God of all men. Her prophets addressed themselves to all the other nations of the world, as well as to Israel, in the Name of the Lord God Almighty, Maker of heaven and earth. When many of her sons and daughters, including many of her kings and queens, went away into idolatrous practices, in her best sons and daughters, she would ever and anon declare that Israel's God, so to speak, was indeed the God of the whole earth.

Though all this is perfectly true, and while the God of Israel was He Who called light out of darkness, and order out of chaos, filling the earth with His own life, and breathing into all mankind His own breath, still He was the God of Israel. That was the national concept. "Thou shalt have no other gods before (in preference to) Me. . . . I am the Lord thy God."

AN ADDRESS AT CHURCH HOUSE, WESTMINSTER.

By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard.

JUST a word or two at the close of this series of meetings. They came, of course, very close upon the two weeks of our Annual Congress, and under ordinary circumstances it would not have been wisdom to call yesterday's and to-day's meetings so soon. But we have Professor Odlum with us now; in a month's time, or less, he will be on another continent, in another part of the world, and we thought it best to give you the opportunity of hearing him while he is present with you.

I should like you to join with me in sending to our friends in the Dominion of Canada and the United States of America the heartiest greetings from this, the Motherland.

What is it that we stand for? We stand for the things that are in this Book (the Bible). If there be anything in our platform not directly drawn from or authorized by this Book, if you will be good enough to point it out to us and make good the fact, we will instantly eliminate it from our platform. That is the challenge we throw out in all sincerity to the Christian Church to-day.

Now, a word or two has been said in connection with the matter of the Press in relation to our Movement. It is true that we are not very fully reported in the daily Press. It is very largely true that the daily Press is not in our Movement, but we have a Press that is incomparably greater than all the literature the Press Association controls. For instance, from the first chapter of Genesis to the last chapter of Revelation, this Bible is a British-Israel Book. Wherever there is a copy of the Bible, there is the foundation of our Press. We have not the slightest hesitation in saying that every man who masters the literature of this Book knows that our race constitutes the official heart of British-Israel, the national basis of God's Kingdom in the earth. That is the first part of our literature.

Upon the Bible we put the Book of Common Prayer. To whom does that Book belong? To Great Britain. The Bible is not a sectarian Book although it has been called so; it has been challenged as a sectarian Book. The Bible is not a sectarian Book. This edition of it is sent out under the copyright of the King; it is issued with his authority and from the King's printer. It is intended that the Book of Common Prayer shall be just as broadly based. It was for that reason that the Parliament of Great Britain said, "Hands off the Prayer Book."

I had some delightful conversation with a highly-placed clergyman of the Church of England. He said to me one morning, "Mr. Goard, can you tell me of some books of standard authority that I, in my position, could recognize as such?" I replied "The Bible." "Yes," he said, "I know you claim that, but can you tell me of another book outside of the Bible that you would recommend me to read?" I said, "Do you ever read the Prayer Book?" He said, "Why do you ask me such a foolish question?" I replied, "It is a most pertinent question." He said, "Of course, I read the Prayer Book; it is my duty every day." "But," I said, "did you ever read the Prayer Book as literature for the information it would bring you?" "What do you mean?" "Take a quotation from that book: 'Lord, bless thine heritage, make thy chosen people joyful; govern them, lift them up for ever.' Who are the 'chosen people' for whom we pray? Are they not our own people, race and nation? A moment ago you told me that the Lord had not selected any particular people from among the peoples. What must we think of one leading the worship and with devotion praying, 'Lord, make thy chosen people joyful,' and then saying that God has not any chosen people?" The Prayer Book is a British-Israel book from beginning to end.

Read the Prayer Book, and understand that it is constructed upon the basic fact that the chosen people to whom it is the Book of Common Prayer is God's heritage, Israel, and that the Prayer Book identifies us with Israel.

Let me say, further, that every journal, sacred or secular, that gives out any phase or any fragment of real truth from the Scriptures is giving British-Israel Truth. We are not specialists. We are dealing with the whole Counsel of God, and I think fifty years or more of Church association and of preaching this Word enables me to form this judgment, that up to the present moment it is a fact, in which we do not glory, but which we more than regret, that we are the only organization in the modern Christian world that is really facing up to the whole story of the Bible, with all its implications, preaching it and endeavouring to administer it.

There is the challenge. And now we are producing and sending out a literature of our own, and it is a literature that does not die. There are coming to our Covenant Publishing Company from week to week orders that are in answer to the very first issues of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE which we sent out years ago. A weekly journal, the first issues of which are living still! Our books and pamphlets have gone out now to the number of over ten millions, and they are living, doing their work in every part of the world. It is a literature that does not die, and we are increasing it from week to week, from month to month, and from year to year. It is no boasting when we say that because of the fact that our literature has no date value and lives, while the daily Press is read to-day and thrown away to-morrow, in a very short time our Press will be more powerful than the daily Press.

Let me say another thing. Let the secular magazines, let the moving pictures, let the daily Press, let all these avenues of reaching the minds and hearts of the people, be captured by the enemy and used as a means of subverting the knowledge and the loyalty of our people, the latter will be absolutely immune as long as they master our literature, which stands and is active. You cannot make a Communist out of a British-Israelite. We have learnt that we have only to get the mind of an honest British Communist to make him a British-Israelite.

The Modernist says that he does not believe in the supernatural and the miraculous. The highest phase of his perception is below the lowest margin of the faith of the man who knows the God of Israel, present and active, in the affairs of men. We do believe in Divine activity, and do not go one iota, one shadow of a shade, from the actual teaching of this Book when we say that Jehovah, the God of Israel, has made Himself Holy. What does it mean? Sinless? No. The question of sin does not arise in connection with God. It means, Set apart, devoted to the one task of administering His Kingdom of Israel in the earth. Think of it. The Modernist says: No Divine interference. The Bible says: Jehovah, the God of Israel, DOES NOTHING ELSE. As Elohim, He is the Creator, but as Jehovah, He is the King, devoted to the affairs of His Kingdom. "Holy, holy, holy, is Jehovah God Almighty."

We believe in the present, personal Presence of the Almighty God, active in the affairs of men and of nations. Moreover, we believe, and we are acting upon that belief, that the race, generated, formed, called, chosen by Almighty God in Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, is a miracle race. Born in Isaac, in response to the reviving touch of God, when the parents of the race had passed into age and potential death. A miracle race, amongst whom the Eternal God dwells. A miracle race, instructed by a miracle Book, which carries, in printed language easy for the ordinary man to understand, the message of the Eternal God, King of Israel, to his soul and to his nation. We believe in the appearance amongst us of the Miracle Man, God the Son, incarnate in Jesus Christ Our Lord. We believe in the actual personal presence and contact of the third Person of the Holy Trinity, and that you and I may retire into our closet and shut the door, so that neither priest nor layman is present, and may kneel and hear the whisper of His voice, "That is the way, walk ye therein." We believe in a miracle-appointed mission and destiny, a service for which our race has been trained, and in that service, in the strength of God Almighty, the King of Israel, we are marching forward, and all the combinations of earth and the spirits of hell will fail to retard our progress, or hinder the completion of our task.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

MR. JOHN LEECH, K.C., is to speak on Prophecy, on Wednesday afternoon next, at Headquarters, at 3 o'clock. The Rev. Gregory Bestall is to lecture on "Ceylon and Its People," with lantern pictures, at Headquarters, on Thursday evening next, at 7.30. All are cordially invited for both occasions.

The series of ten meetings in the Central Hall, Westminster, last week proved of altogether exceptional interest. The addresses were of a high standard, and the spiritual tone throughout was a marked feature. Our President (Major Knowles), and our Chief Commissioner (Mr. John Leech), and some other speakers, who had been announced, were kept away through illness or other causes, but the strength of the platform was well maintained, and this may be imagined when it is stated that the Rev. Pascoe Goard spoke at each meeting, and, if possible, he excelled himself. His addresses made a profound impression. They will never be forgotten. Excellent addresses were given by the Rev. Chas. W. Cooper, F.G.S.; the Rev. J. Lumley Davies, L.D.; the Rev. Joseph Gay (four); the Rev. T. Sparshott Johnson, M.A. (four); the Rev. G. H. Lancaster, M.A. (two); the Rev. Gregory Bestall; Captain the Rev. T. E. Grout; Mr. Herbert Garrison (three); Mr. J. J. Morey (two). Devotional exercises were led by the Revs. Chas. Cooper, J. H. Satchell, C. W. Thorne, W. H. Phillips, and the speakers above named.

The Chairmen were the Revs. Pascoe Goard, Sparshott Johnson, C. W. Cooper, Captain Young, R.N.R., and the Secretary-General.

A very beautiful and weighty basket of flower bulbs was brought from America by a lady to Mrs. Garrison as a token of appreciation of her musical and other work. This was displayed on the platform and greatly admired.

The book by Bishop Titcomb, D.D., entitled "British-Israel: How I came to believe it," just published by the Covenant Publishing Co., is a remarkable work. It should be in the hands of every clergyman, as a record of the mental process through which the Bishop reached his conviction. In the first chapter he says: "I am about to take you into my confidence, and trace out, inch by inch, the steps along which I trod in coming to my present conclusion—that British-Israelites have the truth on their side."

The arguments are cogent, lucid and fair. The Rev. Dr. James Mountain has edited the present edition and written a preface thereto.

The price of the book is 3s. 6d., postage 3d.

The Rev. Dr. Lincoln McConnell writes us a characteristic and breezy letter. He sends his warm greetings to all friends on this side the Atlantic, and he looks forward to visiting us again. Among other activities he is giving a series of illustrated lectures on his travels last year, and he deals especially with Palestine and Egypt of course.

The good doctor may expect a hearty welcome when he comes back.

A Presbyterian minister in Belfast writes:—"I am simply overwhelmed by the generous gift of Mr. Goard's books. I have often wished to possess these books; I can hardly realize as yet that my wish has been granted. You have my sincere gratitude. The leading articles in your journal have always been full of interest to me. I pray that every blessing may rest upon you and your work."

A Canon on the South Coast writes:—"With heartfelt appreciation I thank you for the handsome gift of books, which I shall deeply value. To read, mark, learn and inwardly digest them will be a real pleasure and much profit."

* * *

A Congregational minister writes:—"A thousand thanks for the most kind and generous gift of books, which I greatly appreciate both for their scholarship and the friendship of the author."

* * *

A Rector in the North writes:—"I do sincerely thank you for the books. I shall place them amongst the first for careful reading and study. I see more and more the very urgent necessity for the conversion of Israel, and an arrival at the spiritual position and power which is their high privilege in the Latter Days—days, alas! of apostasy."

Speaking for the Leicester Branch on February 5th, the Rev. Hector Macturk gave his personal testimony to British-Israel belief, stating that he did not rest from publicly proclaiming it and calling upon his brethren of the cloth to come into the open and do likewise. The address he gave was "Has God kept His Promises to His People?" He also complimented the Branch on its strength and activity. Mr. Z. A. Smith presided.

* * *

Harrogate Branch greatly enjoyed a return visit by Mr. G. R. Gair on February 11th, when he gave his lecture, "Heraldry and Genealogy." Colonel A. W. Warden, of London, was in the chair.

At a joint meeting of the Bingley and Bradford Branches held at Bingley recently, with Mr. B. Broadbent in the chair, an address on "The Full Gospel" given by Mr. J. J. Morey was accepted with great interest and enjoyment.

* * *

Mrs. Aiers substituted at short notice at Harrow on February 21st, and gave a most interesting and convincing address on "The Coming Kingdom of the Lord." The lecturer gave forth so much good matter that the Branch hope to hear her again.

The Minister of one of the largest congregations in England writes:—

"I am deeply indebted to you for the parcel of books to hand. I shall read them with great interest. I am profoundly thankful for the work you are doing, not only for the particular side of Truth for which you stand, but in the great Cause of Bible exposition generally.

"May the Lord increasingly use your witness to His Own Glory, and the leading of many to the Truth of the Gospel."

A clergyman in the Midlands writes :—"Thank you very much for the books you so kindly sent me. My people are quite keen on Israel Truth, and I am sowing much seed elsewhere also. I cannot tell you what it means to me to have the B.-I. light. Much of Isaiah especially used to puzzle me. Now I see the wonder of it all, for which I thank God with all my heart."

* * *

A minister in Hertfordshire writes :—"It is extremely kind and generous of you to send me the parcel of books. I shall find profit and pleasure in a study of the B.-I. subject, and the works you have sent me will I am sure be of great assistance."

* * *

M. G. B. writes :—"There is no platform before which I would rather sit than that of the British-Israel-World Federation, and I have never in my life heard a combination of speakers of such authority and inspiration."

The Rev. Joseph Gay writes :—

"I should like to register one or two impressions which must have been made upon the minds of those who were privileged to attend the series of remarkable meetings held at the Central Hall, Westminster, during last week. And the first impression must surely have been the deep spirituality which permeated the addresses which were delivered. It was an atmosphere which pervaded the whole and took possession of speakers and hearers alike. During the whole of my ministerial life it has never been my privilege to attend any meetings more fully charged with deep spirituality. The presence of the Holy Spirit of God was very manifest, and inspired the messages which the speakers brought to us, and tuned our ears to hear them, and our hearts to gladly respond to their appeal.

"The second impression equally clear was the sound exposition of the Holy Word of God. One could have wished that many of our clergy and ministers could have been with us to have heard the Gospel of the Redemption of Israel set forth by the Rev. G. H. Lancaster, M.A., and then a masterly presentation of the Gospel of the Atonement delivered with so much spiritual earnestness and fervour by the Rev. Pascoe Goard. It cannot be denied by those who were present that the British-Israelite stands by the fundamental doctrines of our most Holy Faith.

"Many of the false premises of the Modernist position were effectively dealt with. Again, it was brought home to all present that the British-Israel position is strongly established upon an unshakable Bible basis, and is therefore directly opposed to the fallacies of Rome.

"Once more the stranger within our gates must have realized that the British-Israelite is well abreast of the times, and has taken cognizance of the movements of the day, national and international, both for righteousness and unrighteousness, and that he is not deceived either by that cry of 'Peace! Peace! when there is no peace,' or by that spirit of evil which struts the earth in the garments of light. Bringing all things to the touchstone of the Word of God the speakers, and pre-eminently the Rev. Pascoe Goard (than whom no greater expositor of the Bible, with a clearer vision, and a deeper insight to discern and read correctly the signs of our times has arisen in our day), gave full and adequate guidance to all who sincerely wish to order their ways, their thoughts and opinions in the light of the tremendous happenings of to-day.

"It was surely a tribute to the grip of the Truth and to the strength of the appeal that from 7.30 to 10 o'clock the people sat on, wrapt in the keenest attention until Mr. Goard had concluded an address packed with inspirational thought, after which, on bended knee, a prayer hymn was devoutly sung by hearts strangely warmed by the fire of the Spirit.

"These impressions will live for ever in the hearts and minds of all present to the glory of God.

"The oft-repeated exhortation to translate the high principles of British-Israel Truth into our daily lives and thus into the life of our nation, permeating through that nation the life of the whole world, cannot fail of its purpose and intention.

"May it not be long ere we shall again call the people together in the same Hall, to hear the message of God's Word, which we are commissioned to deliver; for it is only by constant and frequent reiteration of these so vital Truths that we shall compel our nation, from the highest to the lowest, to that prayerful attention to Divine things which, in the near Advent of Our Lord, it is so important they should receive."

THE MEASURED TIMES OF THE BIBLE

By C. C. OGILVY VAN LENNEP.

17s. 6d. net. Postage 9d. extra.

This work sets forth, in a new yet obvious and natural manner, the Bible's own measures of its times, according to the simplest interpretation of the actual words used to state those measures. The results that emerge astonished the author of this book quite as much as they are likely to astonish his readers, but they are such as to throw a flood of light upon matters hitherto unsuspected; for instance, that Our LORD was born on the very anniversary of Adam's Creation, and at the same hour of the day, exactly Four Thousand complete years later. Besides this significant fact, several well known mysteries of Scriptural history are solved by strict adherence to the basic principle of the author's plan of action, which is to believe in the exact and literal truth of the written WORD, regardless of any differences between ITS chronology and the usually accepted chronology, which is based so largely upon the opinions of secular historians.

THE DOCUMENTS OF DANIEL.—VIII.

By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard.

Document IV. (Daniel iv.) Date: Ussher 570 B.C. Scope: the beginning and the ending of the seven times of prophecy. The movement lies dormant during the intervening period.

Document IV, contained in the fourth chapter of Daniel, sets before us a vital element affecting the history of the Babylon system of Empires, viz., the place and continuance of the dynasty of king Nebuchadnezzar in it.

Even of greater importance is the matter-of-fact recognition of the personal presence and directing power of God in the affairs of the Empire.

Secular history as uncovered by Assyriologists, and as written in the Greek and Latin classics, helps us to understand the nature of the times of which Daniel so graphically writes. But such secular writings do not withdraw the veil and allow us to see the imminent presence of God as the Controller of these international and national affairs.

Daniel, however, makes us as clearly to visualize and understand the presence and applied power of the most High as he causes us to see and to understand the historic personality of Nebuchadnezzar, and the mental processes which direct him in his affairs.

From this phase of the Daniel literature theologians of certain types will turn away with distaste, demanding that the Divine and supernatural shall be eliminated, and that the Daniel narrative shall be brought to the level of regular secular history. But the man of action will not follow him in this. The man of action who is brought into hand-to-hand contact with the great facts and processes of nature, whether on land or sea, on plain or in forest, will not start away from the presentation of God active in the affairs of men and of things. For instance, "They that go down to the sea in ships, that do business in great waters; These see the works of the Lord, and his wonders in the deep. For he commandeth, and raiseth the stormy wind . . . . ." Thus sang that man of affairs, the author of Psalm cvii.

So it is with outdoor men in every walk of life.

But the theologian, who has been withdrawn from the affairs of God in nature, and from men in the active hard-handed walks of life to make a speciality of the study of God, sees nothing but the printed page. This produces a series of impressions within his mind. He thinks about God, reads about God, theorizes about God, but fails to see Him in action. There is no opportunity to do so within man-built walls. Only one thing can save the perception of such a one. That is the miracle experience of that new birth of which Our Lord spoke to Nicodemus. That experience will bring a man into personal contact with God, and will make his studies and his thinkings about God thrill with life. That man will have no difficulty with the Daniel history and prophecy. He will read of the imminence of God in the affairs of nations as he knows God to be imminent in his own experience. He will go all the way with us in this article, as will also the outdoor man of affairs. But wearied by thinking of God in terms which are never converted into realities, and of reasoning about God Who never appears to him in his life experiences, cloistered theologians of certain types will be surfeited with his thoughts, which to him have not been translated into experience, and he will turn away from the Daniel statement as from something unreal, and will turn with relief to the purely human records of secular history.

To the man of outdoor affairs, combined with the miracle experience of the new birth spoken of by Our Lord to Nicodemus, the statements of Daniel will be radiant with the very light of the presence of God.

Now after this digression into applied psychology let us return to the great narrative, according to our mental attitude as indicated above.

Nebuchadnezzar opens the chapter with a clear-cut testimony of the presence and activity of God in personal affairs and in the affairs of his kingdom. The statement is clear-cut and simple, made by one of the most practical of men, who was exalted to the highest pinnacle of human greatness and power. Here is the declaration :—

> "Nebuchadnezzar the king, unto all people, nations, and languages, that dwell in all the earth ; Peace be multiplied unto you.
> I thought it good to shew the signs and wonders that the high God hath wrought toward me.
> How great are his signs ! and how mighty are his wonders ! his kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and his dominion is from generation to generation." (Daniel iv, 1-3.)

This confession of the knowledge of the high God is most important in the history of Babylon and the succeeding Empires. It sets forth in clearest manner that at the outset God did not allow the Empire to be established or organized without a distinct knowledge of Himself. By royal proclamation are made known to all people, nations and languages the signs and wonders that the high God had wrought towards Nebuchadnezzar himself, and towards the Empire.

It also includes a remarkable recognition of the Kingdom of God by Nebuchadnezzar, the king of Babylon, who declares: "His kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and his dominion is from generation to generation." This should be read in the light of the second chapter of Daniel, in which it is revealed to Nebuchadnezzar that "In the days of these kings shall the God of Heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed . . . ."

The clear-cut nature of the recognition of the supreme authority of God in the affairs of the Babylon kingdom and also of the everlasting Kingdom of God, in the light of chapter two, the message of which was directly given to Nebuchadnezzar, shows that at the foundation of the Empire God and His relationship to the Empire was clearly understood.

In order to understand where Nebuchadnezzar and the kingdom stood in relationship to God at this time, let us consider the parallel which is manifest between the setting up of :—

The kingdom of Israel and the House of David by Jehovah, the God and King of Israel ;

The kingdom of Babylon and the House of Nebuchadnezzar by the most high God.

The "most high God" and "Jehovah," the God and King of Israel, are shown to be one and the same Person of infinite Majesty acting under different official names.

One should read the second and fourth chapters of Daniel which depict the kingdom of Babylon and the House of Nebuchadnezzar side by side with the seventh chapter, 2nd Samuel, and the thirty-first and thirty-third chapters of Jeremiah, which deal with the establishment of the kingdom of Israel and the House of David.

Thus we see that Babylon began its historic career with clear knowledge of its relationship to the most high God, and Nebuchadnezzar, the "head of gold," the first of the "Zars," made public proclamation of the fact to all peoples, nations and languages.

It is also remarkable that the armies of the last of the Kaisers who virtually ruled all the territory of ancient Babylon and modern Rome from the Baltic to the Persian Gulf, excepting France and Italy, had inscribed on their accoutrements the words, "Gott mit uns." As Nebuchadnezzar was the first Emperor, so Wilhelm of Germany was the last.

Let us hear the proclamation of Nebuchadnezzar, the first of the Kaisers or Czars. For such Nebuchadnezzar was, as the suffix to his name "zar" shows :—

> "I Nebuchadnezzar was at rest in mine house, and flourishing in my palace :
> I saw a dream which made me afraid, and the thoughts upon my bed and the visions of my head troubled me.
>
> Therefore made I a decree to bring in all the wise men of Babylon before me, that they might make known unto me the interpretation of the dream.
> Then came in the magicians, the astrologers, the Chaldeans, and the soothsayers : and I told the dream before them ; but they did not make known unto me the interpretation thereof.
>
> But at the last Daniel came in before me, whose name was Belteshazzar, according to the name of my god, and in whom is the spirit of the holy gods : and before him I told the dream, saying,
> O Belteshazzar, master of the magicians, because I know that the spirit of the holy gods is in thee, and no secret troubleth thee, tell me the visions of my dream that I have seen, and the interpretation thereof.
> Thus were the visions of mine head in my bed ; I saw, and behold a tree in the midst of the earth, and the height thereof was great.
> The tree grew, and was strong, and the height thereof reached unto heaven, and the sight thereof to the end of all the earth :
> The leaves thereof were fair, and the fruit thereof much, and in it was meat for all : the beasts of the field had shadow under it, and the fowls of the heaven dwelt in the boughs thereof, and all flesh was fed of it.
> I saw in the visions of my head upon my bed, and, behold, a watcher and an holy one came down from heaven ;
>
> He cried aloud, and said thus, Hew down the tree, and cut off his branches, shake off his leaves, and scatter his fruit : let the beasts get away from under it, and the fowls from his branches :
> Nevertheless leave the stump of his roots in the earth, even with a band of iron and brass, in the tender grass of the field ; and let it be wet with the dew of heaven, and let his portion be with the beasts in the grass of the earth :

Let his heart be changed from man's, and let a beast's heart be given unto him ; and let seven times pass over him.

This matter is by the decree of the watchers, and the demand by the word of the holy ones : to the intent that the living may know that the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will, and setteth up over it the basest of men.

This dream I king Nebuchadnezzar have seen. Now thou, O Belteshazzar, declare the interpretation thereof, forasmuch as all the wise men of my kingdom are not able to make known unto me the interpretation : but thou art able ; for the spirit of the holy gods is in thee." (Daniel iv, 4-18.)

Such is the confession made by the king. The confession held Daniel astonished for one hour, as he mused over the contents. While he is thus silent, let us for a moment glance at the contents of the confession.

PERSONAL FULFILMENT.

That it had an application personal to Nebuchadnezzar is clear ; but that the scope of the confession was not limited to the personal experience of Nebuchadnezzar is very generally held by students of prophecy ; and with that opinion we agree for the following reasons :—

It may be considered that "no Scripture is of any private interpretation," and had the experience been confined to the king personally, it would scarcely have found place among the tremendous documents which form the basic charters of the Babylonian succession of Empires ; as the racial and national covenants made with Abraham and his seed form the basic charters of the Israel kingdom.

As we consider the first five chapters of Daniel, each one of which furnishes such a foundational element in the Continental Empires, we are assured that this chapter iv was not one with a temporary scope, but one which foreshadowed, as did the second chapter, and also the third chapter, the full sweep of the seven times of prophecy.

As we study the imagery of this second dream of Nebuchadnezzar, Divinely produced, we see that the metals which represented the Babylonian succession, namely, gold, silver, brass and iron, are kept in mind.

Chapter ii declares Nebuchadnezzar to be "this head of gold." He represents the tree which in chapter iv is to be cut down.

The Medo-Persian, or silver kingdom, received command to cut down the tree. But in cutting down the tree, the command was to preserve the root. So it seems that while the death of Belshazzar ended the rule of the Nebuchadnezzar dynasty, it did not end the continuance of the royal family.

As we read the history in chapter v of the cutting down of the Nebuchadnezzar dynasty, we find that the kingdom itself was not disturbed. Apparently only Belshazzar was slain, and the succession ended, and Darius the Mede took the kingdom.

The not unusual procedure of Oriental monarchs of putting to death the whole of the household of a dethroned monarch seems not to have been followed by Cyrus or Darius. The stump of the tree was left among the grass of the field ; in other words, the royal seed was left among the people of the Empire.

Not only so, the stump was bound about with a band of brass and iron, clearly indicating the preservation of the family through the Grecian kingdom of brass and the Roman kingdom of iron.

These things would have no significance as far as we can see in the short period of Nebuchadnezzar's personal experience.

In considering these matters we must remember that the revelations contained in especially the first five chapters of this Book are pictorial messages to a heathen king and court. The meaning must therefore be sought first in the picture, and secondly in the interpretation. In both of these (see ch. ii) the brass and the iron signify Empires and Empire periods, so the brass and iron are periods through which the family of Nebuchadnezzar will continue, afterwards to be restored to power.

Having thus guarded our minds, we will turn our attention to that fulfilment which took place in the personal experience of Nebuchadnezzar. The experience came upon him, and continued for seven times. It was an experience well understood by physicians for mental disorders. The seven times of this continuance, which probably would be seven times 360 days, or approximately seven years, evidently typified the long period of the seven times of prophecy which should pass over the Continental Empires established under Nebuchadnezzar. Thus on a small scale, in the personal experience of one man, we are to see the experience of the Nebuchadnezzar dynasty during the seven times of prophecy. It was destined to begin, and it was also destined to finish, the Imperial succession.

With this in view, let us now read Daniel's interpretation of the dream as it related to Nebuchadnezzar personally, which was the important thing on that occasion, and the fulfilment which immediately followed :—

"Then Daniel, whose name was Belteshazzar, was astonied for one hour, and his thoughts troubled him. The king spake, and said, Belteshazzar, let not the dream, or the interpretation thereof, trouble thee. Belteshazzar answered and said, My lord, the dream be to them that hate thee, and the interpretation thereof to thine enemies.

The tree that thou sawest, which grew, and was strong, whose height reached unto the heaven, and the sight thereof to all the earth ;

Whose leaves were fair, and the fruit thereof much, and in it was meat for all ; under which the beasts of the field dwelt, and upon whose branches the fowls of the heaven had their habitation :

It is thou, O king, that art grown and become strong : for thy greatness is grown, and reacheth unto heaven, and thy dominion to the end of the earth.

And whereas the king saw a watcher and an holy one coming down from heaven, and saying, Hew the tree down, and destroy it ; yet leave the stump of the roots thereof in the earth, even with a band of iron and brass, in the tender grass of the field ; and let it be wet with the dew of heaven, and let his portion be with the beasts of the field, till seven times pass over him ;

This is the interpretation, O king, and this is the decree of the most High, which is come upon my lord the king :

That they shall drive thee from men, and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field, and they shall make thee to eat grass as oxen, and they shall wet thee with the dew of heaven, and seven times shall pass over thee, till thou know that the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will.

Digitized by Google

And whereas they commanded to leave the stump of the tree roots ; thy kingdom shall be sure unto thee, after that thou shalt have known that the heavens do rule.

Wherefore, O king, let my counsel be acceptable unto thee, and break off thy sins by righteousness, and thine iniquities by showing mercy to the poor ; if it may be a lengthening of thy tranquillity.

All this came upon the king Nebuchadnezzar.

At the end of twelve months he walked in the palace of the kingdom of Babylon.

The king spake, and said, Is not this great Babylon, that I have built for the house of the kingdom by the might of my power, and for the honour of my majesty ?

While the word was in the king's mouth there fell a voice from heaven, saying, O king Nebuchadnezzar, to thee it is spoken ; The kingdom is departed from thee.

And they shall drive thee from men, and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field : they shall make thee to eat grass as oxen, and seven times shall pass over thee, until thou know that the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will.

The same hour was the thing fulfilled upon Nebuchadnezzar : and he was driven from men, and did eat grass as oxen, and his body was wet with the dew of heaven, till his hairs were grown like eagles' feathers, and his nails like birds' claws.

And at the end of the days I Nebuchadnezzar lifted up mine eyes unto heaven, and mine understanding returned unto me, and I blessed the most High, and I praised and honoured him that liveth for ever, whose dominion is an everlasting dominion, and his kingdom is from generation to generation.

And all the inhabitants of the earth are reputed as nothing : and he doeth according to his will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth : and none can stay his hand, or say unto him, What doest thou ?

At the same time my reason returned unto me ; and for the glory of my kingdom, mine honour and brightness returned unto me ; and my counsellors and my lords sought unto me ; and I was established in my kingdom, and excellent majesty was added unto me.

Now I Nebuchadnezzar praise and extol and honour the King of heaven, all whose works are truth, and his ways judgment : and those that walk in pride he is able to abase." (Daniel iv, 19-37.)

DYNASTIC FULFILMENT.

Now let us examine the dream and the interpretation as referring to the House of Nebuchadnezzar. That House ruled from Nebuchadnezzar to Belshazzar, and then the family disappeared. The prophecy indicates that it would be dethroned and be found " among the grass of the field " or the people until the end of the iron period of Empire. Then it would rise to power again. Let us see if modern history would indicate the sudden rise to Empire of such a family.

Looking to history for the longer fulfilment of this prophecy, seeing that the seven times of opportunity for the Continental Empires has come to a close, and that in accordance therewith the Empires have passed away, we ask the question, " Where does modern history point to the rise to power of such a family in fulfilment of the prophecy of this chapter ? "

The student of Imperial history as related to the Continental Empires will remember the sudden rise of the House of Hohenzollern from among the " grass of the field," that is to say, from among the people. They will remember how the Elector jostled and pushed among the crowned heads of Europe until he had assumed, and been accorded grudgingly, the title and rank of king.

They will remember the meteoric career of Frederic the Great, and his tiger-like struggle with every nation of Europe, with only Britain as an ally in the Seven Years' War ; and how that House pushed forward until the King of Prussia became the Kaiser of Germany, the last line of Kaisers or Czars.

They will watch breathlessly the meteoric ascent of that House until it reached its final ascendancy in the person of the ex-Kaiser ; they will wonder at the sudden crash with which the tree of his House fell, and the Empires with it.

If the outworkings of history be sufficient to explain prophecy, made in ancient times regarding modern days, then in view of the history of the House of Hohenzollern men will be inclined to set the word " finis " at the bottom of this wonderful prophetic chapter.

A volume could be written upon this chapter and its outworking in history, but the foregoing must suffice.

So we see that chapter i of Daniel sets the historic background of the prophecies of the Book.

Chapter ii shows the setting-up of the kingdom of Babylon and of the Kingdom of the God of Heaven.

Chapter iii shows the religio-financial structure based we believe on the gold standard.

Chapter iv shows the establishment of the House of Nebuchadnezzar as the first and last dynasty of the Empire.

So we follow this fascinating history of Empire as pre-written from the inception of the Babylon succession.

THE RISE OF THE HOHENZOLLERN DYNASTY.

Macaulay's Essays ; " Frederic the Great."

" The Prussian monarchy, the youngest of the great European States, but in population and revenue the fifth among them, and in art, science, and civilization entitled to the third, if not to the second place, sprang from a humble origin. About the beginning of the fifteenth century, the marquisate of Brandenburg was bestowed by the Emperor Sigismund on the noble family of Hohenzollern. In the sixteenth century that family embraced the Lutheran doctrines. It obtained from the King of Poland, early in the seventeenth century, the investiture of the duchy of Prussia. Even after this accession of territory, the chiefs of the House of Hohenzollern hardly ranked with the Electors of Saxony and Bavaria. The soil of Brandenburg was for the most part sterile. Even round Berlin, the capital of the province, and round Potsdam, the favourite residence of the Margraves, the country was a desert. In some places, the deep sand could with difficulty be forced by assiduous tillage to yield thin crops of rye and oats. In other places, the ancient forests, from which the conquerors of the Roman Empire had descended on the Danube, remained untouched by the hand of man. Where the soil was rich it was generally marshy, and its insalubrity repelled the cultivators whom its fertility attracted. Frederic William, called the Great Elector, was the prince to whose policy his successors have agreed to ascribe their greatness. He acquired by the peace of Westphalia several valuable possessions, and among them the rich city and district of Magdeburg; and he left to his son Frederic a principality as considerable as any which was not called a kingdom.

"Frederic aspired to the style of royalty. Ostentatious and profuse, negligent of his true interests and of his high duties, insatiably eager for frivolous distinctions, he added nothing to the real weight of the State which he governed: perhaps he transmitted his inheritance to his children impaired rather than augmented in value; but he succeeded in gaining the great object of his life, the title of King. In the year 1700 he assumed this new dignity. He had on that occasion to undergo all the mortifications which fall to the lot of ambitious upstarts. Compared with the other crowned heads of Europe, he made a figure resembling that which a Nabob or a Commissary, who had bought a title, would make in the company of Peers whose ancestors had been attainted for treason against the Plantagenets. The envy of the class which Frederic quitted, and the civil scorn of the class into which he intruded himself, were marked in very significant ways. The Elector of Saxony at first refused to acknowledge the new Majesty. Louis the Fourteenth looked down on his brother King with an air not unlike that with which the Count in Moliere's play regards Monsieur Jourdain, just fresh from the mummery of being made a gentleman. Austria exacted large sacrifices in return for her recognition, and at last gave it ungraciously.

"Frederic was succeeded by his son, Frederic William, a prince who must be allowed to have possessed some talents for administration, but whose character was disfigured by odious vices, and whose eccentricities were such as had never before been seen out of a madhouse. He was exact and diligent in the transacting of business; and he was the first who formed the design of obtaining for Prussia a place among the European Powers, altogether out of proportion to her extent and population, by means of a strong military organization. Strict economy enabled him to keep up a peace establishment of sixty thousand troops. These troops were disciplined in such a manner that, placed beside them, the household regiments of Versailles and St. James's would have appeared an awkward squad. The master of such a force could not but be regarded by all his neighbours as a formidable enemy and a valuable ally.

"But the mind of Frederic William was so ill regulated, that all his inclinations became passions, and all his passions partook of the character of moral and intellectual disease. His parsimony degenerated into sordid avarice. His taste for military pomp and order became a mania, like that of a Dutch burgomaster for tulips, or that of a member of the Roxburghe Club for Caxtons. While the envoys of the Court of Berlin were in a state of such squalid poverty as moved the laughter of foreign capitals, while the food placed before the princes and princesses of the blood-royal of Prussia was too scanty to appease hunger, and so bad that even hunger loathed it, no price was thought too extravagant for tall recruits. The ambition of the King was to form a brigade of giants, and every country was ransacked by his agents for men above the ordinary stature. These researches were not confined to Europe. No heads that towered above the crowd in the bazaars of Aleppo, of Cairo, or of Surat, could escape the crimps of Frederic William. One Irishman more than seven feet high, who was picked up in London by the Prussian ambassador, received a bounty of near thirteen hundred pounds sterling, very much more than the ambassador's salary. This extravagance was the more absurd, because a stout youth of five feet eight, who might have been procured for a few dollars, would in all probability have been a much more valuable soldier. But to Frederic William, this huge Irishman was what a brass Otho, or a Vinegar Bible, is to a collector of a different kind.

"It is remarkable, that though the main end of Frederic William's administration was to have a great military force, though his reign forms an important epoch in the history of military discipline, and though his dominant passion was the love of military display, he was yet one of the most pacific of princes. We are afraid that his aversion to war was not the effect of humanity, but was merely one of his thousand whims. His feeling about his troops seems to have resembled a miser's feeling about his money. He loved to collect them, to count them, to see them increase; but he could not find it in his heart to break in upon the precious hoard. He looked forward to some future time when his Patagonian battalions were to drive hostile infantry before them like sheep: but this future time was always receding; and it is probable that, if his life had been prolonged thirty years, his superb army would never have seen any harder service than a sham fight in the fields near Berlin. But the great military means which he had collected were destined to be employed by a spirit far more daring and inventive than his own.

"Frederic, surnamed the Great, son of Frederic William, was born in January, 1712."

THE BIBLE: IS IT TRUE?—II.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED AT THE CENTRAL HALL, WESTMINSTER, FEBRUARY 18TH, 1929, BY THE REV. JOSEPH GAY, A.T.S.

ABRAHAM was the father of the Israel nation. How so? Because he was the father of Isaac. Now account for Isaac if you can along the lines of modern naturalism without denying the veracity of the Bible account of his birth. The sacred writer tells you that Abram was a hundred years old and Sarai ninety, and lest you should regard those ages as nothing, seeing that the patriarchs lived to be very old men, he goes out of his way to tell you that "it ceased to be with Sarah after the manner of women," and then Isaac was born. He further tells you that the event is so tremendously important that God changes the name of Abram into Abraham, and the name of Sarai into Sarah, and gives to Himself a new name—El Shaddai.

Let us see what the modernist makes of it. Mr. Erith, the commentator in Bishop Gore's Commentary, does not make any attempt to account for it. He conveniently passes it over. His note on El Shaddai, which ought to have furnished the key for a true and fully adequate exegesis, is altogether beside the mark. He writes : " Many etymologies have been suggested for the meaning of Shaddai, but no Hebrew derivation is satisfactory ; and it is probably to be explained from a Babylonian title of divinity in which the deity is addressed as ilu shadu'a—'God my mountain.'"

There is, according to the modernist, nothing original in Israel. She has borrowed everything, even to the Virgin Birth of Our Lord, from some ancient tradition received and handed down by peoples much more ancient and original. Following Bishop Gore's Commentary we find that Israel is indebted for almost everything, the names of her God, her own names, most of her customs and practices, either to Babylonia on the one hand, or Egypt on the other. That being so, Israel has no special Divine origin, and the account of Isaac's birth, insofar as it suggests the supernatural, must be discredited. Israel is not even a natural development from Babylon and Egypt, but a very feeble imitation. " The bed is shorter than that a man can stretch himself on it, and the covering narrower than that he can wrap himself in it." To show how far beside the mark the modernist is, let me quote Mr. Erith again. He says, " the reader will find it instructive to refer to and compare all the promises made to the patriarchs in Genesis." Then he gives a list of such promises. Commenting on the first he says : " Here, the first promise made to Abraham points forward to the Catholic Church. The meaning of, 'in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed,' is ambiguous." The alleged ambiguity rests in whether the tense of the verb be reflexive or passive. He adds, " It is not of material importance, since in any case the significance of the promise is clear, viz., that through Abraham and his seed all mankind shall be brought to seek and to find salvation in the true God."

Can any comment upon Holy Scripture be more utterly futile? Now I ask you to consider the thesis which we of the British-Israel school of thought offer to account for the fact of the Israel Kingdom. We accept in the first place the statement of Genesis as to the birth of Isaac, and we do not hesitate, on the accounts J. and E., realizing that out of the mouth of two or more witnesses every word shall be established, to declare that Isaac was miraculously born. To say that El Shaddai is the same as the Babylonian ilu shadu'a—" God my mountain " is meaningless in the face of the incident of Isaac's birth. Now take our derivation of the word, a pure Hebrew derivation. " El " means God. All are agreed there. " Shad." What does that mean? No Hebrew derivation, says this modernist whom Dr. Gore has made responsible for teaching the people of the Church of England the truth. But what does Gesenius, the great Hebrew lexicographer, say? I will give it to you exactly as he gives it.

שַׁד = Breast, teat. (Job xxiv, 9. Isaiah lx, 16.) Perhaps from the word שדה which see.

שָׁדָה = an unused root. Chaldean שְׁדָא to cast forth, to shoot, to pour out, whence some derive No. 1 teat.

שַׁדַּי = most powerful, Almighty, an epithet of Jehovah. It is the plural excellentiæ, from the singular שַׁד powerful.

With this great authority to warrant us we translate El Shaddai the nursing-mother God, the nourishing God, the great Mother of Israel. In the light of the twofold account of the birth of Isaac, differing only in such detail as to give to them complete independence, and thereby strengthen their united witness, the derivation we suggest throbs with life and is pregnant with meaning. We account for the Israel Kingdom by proclaiming God to be. The voice from out the burning bush accounts for Israel. " I AM," therefore " ISRAEL IS." This monotheistic Kingdom had its birth in and through the monotheistic Deity. Jehovah never leaves His nation. He is in personal contact all the time. Note this fact and then trace it out for yourselves. The pillar of cloud by day illumined by night, the ministry of fire, in the Old Testament is indicative of the presence of Jehovah. Then when Israel builds a tabernacle for God to dwell in, and afterwards a temple, and in them the Mercy-seat is established, we read, " I will meet with thee there, and I will commune with thee from above the Mercy-seat." (Ex. xxv, 22.)

Get out into secular history so-called and trace the lost sheep of the House of Israel through all their eventful wanderings until you gather them together in these Islands of the West in such numbers as will warrant the conclusion that here in Britain you have the appointed place (2 Samuel vii, 10), and remember as you do so that God never fails of His purposes, nor goes back upon His Word ; that God makes, and remakes, but never unmakes, and then, using the same thesis as accounted for the Israel Kingdom, you will be able to account for the British Kingdom arriving at this conclusion that " things which are equal to the same thing are equal to one another."

" God is ! " That was the mission of Israel. God made her and then He chose her, and wedded her unto Himself that they two might be one. Alas ! that she should have broken that blessed union.

" God is ! " That is the mission of British-Israel to day. This nation, this Empire, " this nation and company of nations," are set to proclaim, " God is, and He is the rewarder of those who diligently seek Him." Alas ! that in many respects we should fall far short of our high calling in Christ Jesus. And yet the reflections of Lowell Thomas, the author of that great and deeply interesting book, " With Lawrence in Arabia," as he muses upon what he had seen of Lawrence's behaviour towards the Arabs and contrasted it with the German behaviour, encourages our thinking along this line.

He writes, " Never did the Englishman say, ' I can pay you nothing for this, but I will keep it just the same ! ' It was either paid for or returned to the author. As we tinkled across the plain to the rhythm of the bells on the horses' necks, we had food for thought in what we had seen. If Britain governs much of the world, we wondered is it not because of the merit, capacity and good sense of her sons in all lands. Impressions of this chance visit to Carchemish were deepened by residence in Constantinople throughout the World War, where we watched the German play for the big stake and lose because of the way he went after it." (Lowell Thomas is an American.) Granted the power of God to intervene creatively at any time, and according to His own good will and pleasure, and our thesis to account for the Israel Kingdom is full and adequate ; not only so, but it is sufficient to account for the British nation, the Anglo-Celto-Saxon race.

THE KING OF THE KINGDOM ISRAEL, JESUS CHRIST OUR LORD.

If it be important to present a thesis which will account for the Israel Kingdom consonant with the statements of Holy Writ, it is of paramount importance that the same thesis should account for the King of this same Israel Kingdom, Jesus of Nazareth, the Christ. Let the modernist account for Jesus from his own selected basic principle of natural law. Let his historic evidence be the acid test of validity and what happens. The Virgin Birth must be relegated to the same limbo of myth and fable as the Genesis account of the Creation, the Flood, and the Whale. There is not the smallest shred of historical evidence for the Virgin Birth. It transcends all known human experience more than anything else in this wide world. Dr. Gore, who makes himself responsible for his Commentary on St. Luke's Gospel, devotes the briefest paragraph to this all-important matter of the Birth of Jesus, about sixty words in all. He says : " By taking her (Mary) away with him (to Bethlehem), ' great with child ' as she was, he (Joseph) made her effectively his wife and her child his own, according to Jewish ideas." Quite true, but it is evident that Dr. Gore parts company with the extreme modernist in that he does not regard Joseph as the natural father of Jesus. We will not do the worthy doctor injustice by suggesting that he regarded any other as His natural father. Dr. Gore must therefore believe in the miraculous Birth of Our Lord. Upon what ground ? The principle of interpretation for the Old Testament must be the principle of interpretation for the New. If historical evidence is the acid test of validity and the supernatural and miraculous must be discredited, then the Virgin Birth has got to go, and to be consistent Dr. Gore cannot retain it. Mr. Loofs has spoken for all true modernists when he says that Joseph was the natural father of Jesus, and adds, " I think it is due to truthfulness to state openly that the Virgin Birth perhaps, or even probably, arose out of fabulous tradition."

Again we find that " the bed is shorter than that a man can stretch himself on it, and the covering narrower than that he can wrap himself in it." I beg of you reverently to face the conclusion to which you are driven along this line. According to St. Matthew, Joseph denies parentage. In conduct if not in actual words he declares that he knows nothing about Mary's state and condition. He came to the conclusion that the woman he loved so well had been unfaithful to him and he decided, for the love he bore her, not to make a public example of her, but to put her away privily. If Joseph was the father of Jesus, but denies it, then the father of Jesus was a liar. But supposing he had really spoken the truth and that he was not the father, then somebody else was. The important point to remember here is that Jesus is an historic personage. There is any amount of historical evidence for Jesus. You cannot get over the difficulty by saying, as the Jews for many years tried to say and believe, that Jesus was a myth. There was only one person who really knew what had taken place, and that was Mary herself. Did Joseph speak the truth when he denied parentage ? Then Mary carried within her heart and must have pondered in her mind a shameful secret. In that case what sort of a woman was Mary ? But the modernist would say this is all beside the mark. " Jesus never claimed Deity. Mary never claimed Divine conception. All this was done by an adoring discipleship which in after years glorified the Master, as was very natural, and, not to be outdone by the devotion and adoration of the disciples of other great religious founders, they placed a halo around his head and proclaimed him to be, what he never was, God the Son."

Then these loyal and devoted men, sanctified in life by this man of Nazareth, have succeeded in deceiving the civilized world for well nigh 2,000 years. Since we have in our possession four Gospels, we have a conspiracy of deception unparalleled, I venture to think, in the history of the world.

Side by side with all this you have a tremendously important fact, which no one can deny if the modernist position be true, that this very Bible, which they esteem to be so full of mistakes and errors and to be carrying in its bosom a deception which would do credit to Satan himself, has been the centre and mainspring of that high civilization which has blessed the world, giving to it men, and women too, who have reached Alpine heights of holiness, righteousness and truth by accepting as true the lie which these first disciples of the Nazarene placed on record ; for I would have you bear witness to the fact that Jesus Christ, as the Son of the living God, Who died for our sins according to the Scriptures, was their strength and stay, their exceeding great reward. Morrison took a pure civilization to China, Carey to India, and Livingstone to Africa, by the word of the Lord Who said, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." What has the modernist succeeded in doing in the light of these indisputable facts ? He has succeeded in proving that you can gather grapes from thorns and figs from thistles. Has he succeeded in taking the citadel ? No ! he has not disturbed a single stone. Built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, true men all of them, Jesus Christ the chief corner-stone, it stands as firm and strong as ever upon the imperishable rock of Divine truth. But now take our key of interpretation. Apply our thesis. The Israel seed, Divinely created in Isaac, is cared for by El Shaddai, the nursing-mother God, until, in the fullness of the time, it becomes the concrete and material expression of the Christ, God's Son.

" No man hath seen God at any time ; the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, He hath declared Him." (St. John i, 18.) " Wherefore when He cometh into the world, He saith, Sacrifice and offering Thou wouldest not, but a body hast Thou prepared Me." (Heb. x, 5.)

Christ is Christianity, and Christianity is Christ. Jesus was the Gospel He preached, else would He ever have spoken of Himself as He did ? " I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel." " Go not into the way of the Gentiles . . . but rather go unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel." The House of Israel ? Not the House of Judah. Go to the northern kingdom of Israel, and not to the southern kingdom of Judah. Why to the one and not to the other ? Because the southern kingdom was already gathered around Him and could hear Him for themselves. Alas ! they did hear and judged Him unworthy of their allegiance. The northern kingdom of Israel was lost to human sight. They must be found and the Gospel preached to them ; and He employed members of that northern kingdom and not members of the southern kingdom to do this all-important but gigantic work. Have they been found ? Look at the other side of the picture for a moment. The centre of Christianity soon shifted from Jerusalem, did it not ? Where did it go ? Rome ? Nay ! Rome has never been the centre of Christ's Church. I will not pause to elaborate that. I may do so at some future time. The centre of Christianity to-day is here in these Islands. London is the centre of Christian influence throughout the world. Can that be denied ? There is no race under heaven which has taken more readily to the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and lived more sincerely according to its tenets, than the Anglo-Celto-Saxon race. I think I may claim to know something of ecclesiastical history, and I do not fear contradiction just here. The more I think of it, the more I look into the facts of it, and the more convinced I am that, as Israel was set in the days of long ago to witness in the earth to the one true and living God, so Britain is set in Jesus Christ her Lord for the selfsame witness. The cry then is back through the witness of the Kingdom, and the King of the Kingdom, to God, even the Father of us all, Who is from everlasting to everlasting —God. Our mission is to cry aloud and spare not. " God is, and He is the rewarder of all those who diligently seek Him." " He shall not fail nor be discouraged until He hath set judgment in the earth, and the Isles shall wait for His law."

THE BIBLE AND SCIENTIFIC TRUTH—II.

BY CHAS. LAVENDER.

LET us now consider briefly the marvellous Creation Story as written for us in Genesis i. As regards the duration of a Creation " Day," it seems evident that it cannot be, as was once thought, and as some people even now think, a day of twenty-four hours. There were six " days " during which the work of Creation was carried out ; but in Genesis ii, 4, the whole period is spoken of as one day ; this in itself is sufficient to dispose of the twenty-four hours' theory, in addition to which the sun is not mentioned until the fourth day, so there was nothing of the kind to mark the duration of the first three days, which therefore could not have been of twenty-four hours only. Ferrar Fenton translates the word as " Age," instead of Day, and this seems to be a more correct rendering. We often speak of the " day " of stage coaches, in contrast to the present time which is the " day " of motor-cars and aeroplanes ; but we simply mean " period " or " age," not a day of twenty-four hours, and this is quite understood by everyone. Peter tells us (2 Peter iii, 8) that : " One day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day." In the Psalms, too, we read (Ps. xc, 4) " a thousand years in Thy sight are but as yesterday." Again, as Rev. T. H. Whitehouse has pointed out, the Apostle Paul speaks of a Day which has lasted well nigh two thousand years —" the Day of Salvation "—and, thank God, that Day is still with us, though we know not how soon it may close.

So then the Creation Days are age-long periods of time ; perhaps thousands, may be millions of years ; we don't know. Anyhow, there is ample room for the geologist's speculations, and he is fully capable of making the most of his opportunity.

The order of Creation is, however, very definitely stated in Scripture, so here is the possibility of a clash with the scientists.

After the creation of the heaven and the earth, and of the falling of the latter into desolation, Light is mentioned as the first act towards reconstruction. It used to be thought that there could be no light without the sun, and as the sun is not spoken of until the fourth day, the Bible was supposed to be wrong. But what is light ? A recently published dictionary says light is " the natural agent which, by acting on the retina, stimulates the sense of sight," but makes no mention whatever of the sun. Neither does an article on " Light " by Professor James Rice, of Liverpool University, in Harmsworth's Encyclopædia. Genesis i, 2-3, says : " The Spirit of God moved (kept moving) upon the face of the waters. And God said, Let there be light : and there was light." Light is now stated to be the result of force causing the waves of the ether to vibrate with an almost infinite rapidity. This seems getting very near to the age-old description of Genesis. It is evident that scientists do not really know what Light is, and I suggest that it is impossible for the mind of man to comprehend it, even as no man can fully understand the nature of Christ Himself, Who said, " I am the Light of the world."

Returning to the consideration of the order of Creation and the agreement or otherwise of scientists and the Bible, they appear to get to work on the various strata of the earth's crust and they find certain indications leading them to certain conclusions as to the order in which various forms of life first appeared, and the conclusions they put forth are supposed to have more weight than the Bible " myth "! But even a sceptic as to detailed accuracy in Bible records (J. Paterson Smyth) says, " Perhaps the discrepancies could be removed if we knew all the facts "! At one time it was supposed that animal life came before vegetable life. Even Dr. Driver seems to have thought it possible, though how animal life was supposed to have been sustained without any kind of vegetable food does not appear. The Bible gives us grass, herbs and fruit trees two " ages " before animal life appears, which certainly seems more likely and more reasonable. The intervening " age " between the third and the fifth days or " ages " was that in which the heavenly bodies were set in motion and took up their task—the sun to rule the day, the moon to rule the night—thus preparing the surface of the earth for the multifarious forms of life in which it now abounds. In fact, Professor Dana, of Yale University, has said that the order of events in Genesis i coincides with the order laid down as the result of close scientific investigation.

In confirmation of the Genesis order of Creation it is rather striking to notice in Deut. iv, 15-19, the reverse order of intelligence, from the superior to the inferior. Moses is reminding the people how he had told them by the command of the Lord that they must not corrupt themselves by making " a graven image, the similitude of any figure, the likeness of male or female, the likeness of any beast that is on the earth, the likeness of any winged fowl that flieth in the air, the likeness of anything that creepeth on the ground, the likeness of any fish that is in the waters." Compare this with the scientific statement that the proportion of brain to spinal cord is 33 to 1 in man, 4 to 1 in mammals, 3 to 1 in birds, 2½ to 1 in reptiles, 2 to 1 in fishes. The relative proportions are strictly in accordance with the Biblical order.

Some of the mistaken notions about Creation are accounted for by the fact that insufficient attention is paid to what Genesis i actually says. "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth," but of the work of the various "days" the word used in nearly every case is "made." Where the first living creatures are mentioned in v. 21 we have the word "created," and as regards man, v. 27 thrice reiterates that he was "created." Whatever then may have been the case respecting the lower forms of life, we have here a direct and striking negative to the theory of spontaneous generation and more particularly to the fantastic and God-dishonouring idea of man's ape ancestry, for "create" means "cause to exist," as distinct from "make," which simply indicates forming out of pre-existing materials.

In this connection it is well to remember with all reverence the statement in the genealogy of Our Lord as given in the third chapter of St. Luke, which traces His descent through "Joseph, which was the son of Heli," back to "Adam, which was the son of God." This surely gives the lie direct to the fable that Adam or any other human being had at any time an ancestor of the monkey tribe. As to man's physical frame, Gen. ii, 7 records that "the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground," and in corroboration of that statement scientists have identified no less than fourteen earth substances in the composition of the human body. As Rev. W. Pascoe Goard says, it is a blessing that no gold is to be found among these various substances, only common dust, or there would be grave danger of traffic in dead bodies by unscrupulous persons in the mad rush for the precious metal.

In connection with the Nature aspect of Creation there are several remarkable facts worthy of attention. Notice the wording of Gen. i, 9 and 10: "Let the waters under the heaven be gathered unto one place . . . and the gathering together of the waters called He seas." Study of a map or globe of the earth shows that it is possible to travel by water from any one country or island to any other, so that the waters may truthfully be said to occupy "one place." Yet the water on the surface of the earth is divided into many oceans or seas known by different names, according to locality. Is not the knowledge of this behind the simple statement in the verse referred to?

The general principles of evaporation and rain are now pretty well known and understood. The rivers of the earth, great and small, are continually emptying themselves into the ocean; evaporation is always going on, drawing up the moisture from the surface of the water and of the earth into the atmosphere to form clouds; driven by the winds of heaven they reach all regions of the earth and condense into rain which waters the fields and fills the springs and mountain torrents, which in turn replenish the rivers. Thus is completed "the Circle of Blessing." It is all in the Bible and was there long before modern research discovered the process. Eccles. i, 7 says: "All the rivers run into the sea; yet the sea is not full; unto the place from whence the rivers come, thither they return again." But does the Bible tell us how they return? Look at Job xxvi, 8: "He bindeth up the waters in His thick clouds," and Psalm cxxxv, 7: "He causeth the vapours to ascend from the ends of the earth; He maketh lightnings for the rain; He bringeth the wind out of His treasuries." Poetically expressed, sublimely simple, marvellously true! But why is lightning mentioned? Lord Kelvin, that great scientist, expressed his belief that there never is rain without lightning, which precipitates to earth the globules of moisture in the clouds.

What a wonderful Nature-Psalm is the 104th: partly a comment on, and partly a more detailed description of Genesis i. We have the light and the firmament in v. 2 (1st and 2nd day); the waters and the earth in v. 3-10 (day 3), proceeding in harmonious progression to the living creatures of the 5th and 6th days (v. 11-18). After a brief allusion to the sun and moon in v. 19 (day 4), we see the daily round both of man and beast (v. 20-23), and then the glorious 24th verse of praise, as though the Psalmist could no longer refrain from expressing his admiration and delight, "O Lord, how manifold are Thy works! In wisdom hast Thou made them all; the earth is full of Thy riches."

As the 104th Psalm recounts natural beauties and blessings, so the 103rd is full of spiritual delights. These are personal and individual; and also national to Israel; and most beautiful they are:—Read v. 11, and consider; how high is the heaven above the earth? Does anyone know? Astronomers tell us there are stars and suns millions upon millions of miles away: "So great is His mercy." Now v. 12: "As far as the east is from the west, so far hath He removed our transgressions from us." How far is that? Why does it not say north from south? It would have been all the same to those who thought the earth was flat, but it is vastly different now that we know the exact distance between the poles. Travel round the earth in either direction, and no matter where you are the east and west are just as far removed from each other; the distance is infinite. In the words of Kipling (though in a different sense), "East is East and West is West, and never the twain shall meet."

Incidentally it is worth noticing that besides the above quoted verse in Psalm ciii, there are other statements respecting cancellation of sin which, while undoubtedly true of the individual who trusts in Jesus Christ as his Saviour, were spoken in the first instance to Israel as a nation. See Isaiah xliv, 21-22: "O Israel, thou shalt not be forgotten of Me. I have blotted out, as a thick cloud, thy transgressions, and, as a cloud, thy sins . . . for I have redeemed thee." Micah vii, 19: "Thou wilt cast all their sins into the depths of the sea."

Now for a few words about the Flood. It is argued that because many nations have Flood stories or traditions in their folk-lore similar to the Hebrew account in Genesis, notably Babylon, Assyria, Chaldea, Phrygia, Persia, Greece, and so on, therefore the Hebrew story is based upon these, and all are alike mythical. For some reason they ignore the wondrous simplicity and beauty of the Bible story, and also the possibility of its Spirit-inspired accuracy, and never seem to think that other accounts may be distorted versions of the actual facts. The reality of the Flood itself is undoubtedly shown by the wide distribution of the legends.

A point not often commented on is the measurements of the Ark which are given in Genesis vi, 15-16, viz., 300 cubits long, 50 wide and 30 high, and "in a cubit shalt thou finish it above." Details such as these some people find of no interest whatever, but it has been ascertained after centuries of experience that the proportions of these measurements are ideal for the construction of a large ship, and consequently they testify to the accuracy and inspiration of the Biblical record. As a contrast it is worth mentioning that the Babylonian legend gives the dimensions as 120 by 120 cubits, an obviously impossible size. But what do the words "in a cubit shalt thou finish it above" signify? Probably that the Ark was triangular in section, that is, that the sides sloped upwards from the water line and met at the top with only a cubit of roof between them, thus forming a particularly strong framework in order to withstand the enormous strain to which it was subjected. This is the opinion of a Jewish Rabbi in Copenhagen, Professor Simonsen, who consulted ship-building experts on the question.

ADDRESS AT HEADQUARTERS.

By MISS HAMILTON HUNTER.

ISRAEL MILITANT.—III.

WE bless and praise God that the Redeemer of Israel has won for all those Israelites who are redeemed by His blood the right "to enter into the Holiest by a new and living way which He hath consecrated for us through the veil, that is to say, His flesh." Therefore, "Let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water." (Heb. x, 20 and 22.) "For ye are not come unto the Mount that might be touched and that burned with fire, nor unto blackness, and darkness, and tempest, and the sound of a trumpet, and the voice of words; which voice they that heard entreated that the word should not be spoken to them any more . . . But ye are come unto Mount Sion, and unto the city of the Living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and church of the firstborn, which are written in heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect, and to Jesus the Mediator of the New Covenant." (Heb. xii, 18, etc.) "Wherefore, holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the Apostle and High Priest of our profession, Christ Jesus" (Heb. iii, 1); and "Let us come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need." (Heb. iv, 16.) Therefore, let us have "boldness to enter into the Holiest by the blood of Jesus."

Woe to the High Priest who dared to enter into the Holiest without the blood. It would have meant instant death, even as it meant instant death to Uzzah when he touched the Ark of the Covenant. But by the blood of the Lamb we can enter in and offer not only the sacrifices of praise and thanksgiving, but prayers and intercessions for the people, after the example of our Great High Priest, "Who ever liveth to make intercession" for us. (Heb. vii, 25.)

In these days people do not like to talk about "the blood." They are ashamed of it. What would have happened to those Israelites who had been ashamed of "the blood" on the night when the Destroyer passed through the land? Why, the blood on their doorposts was their protection that night, even as it is our great protection from Satan and his hosts. Those who are the Lord's Redeemed glory in "the blood," because it is the receipt for the purchase-price of our freedom, because it makes us His own. Of course, the Dragon hates "the blood" and is ever trying to make men and women ashamed of it. He knows it is to be one of the weapons by which the saints will overcome him in that final struggle with the spiritual forces of evil that is our share of the last great conflict. We know that the material side of it is not in our hands. The challenge has been given to Jehovah, and, "for His great Name's sake," He alone must be the victor when the Great Confederacy of the North attacks His people. But He has said He will not act until His Israel nation (not only His spiritual Israel, i.e., His Priests—the Church, but the nation Israel) returns to Him in national repentance and prayer. And the nation will not return to Him until the spiritual victory is won. Satan knows these things far better than we do, and so is concentrating all his energies against the winning of the spiritual victory. The Powers of Darkness are now waging the most deadly warfare against this land and the Church of Christ (who are the anointed priests of the Sanctuary of Heaven) and against "the Blood." But we know that we shall "overcome him by the Blood of the Lamb and the testimony of Jesus."

"By the Blood of the Lamb," because behind it we shelter, and because of it we dare go and fight against the Powers of Darkness. For by means of it we are made one with the Lamb of God and members of His Body. One with the great Paschal Lamb—"Christ our Passover." Let us try to grasp something of what this means.

All the Israel feasts had special letters of the Hebrew alphabet to symbolize them. Those for the Passover were the first and last letters of the Hebrew alphabet—Aleph and Tau with the copulative between. Aleph and Tau, that is "Alpha and Omega, the Beginning and the Ending"—surely "the utmost bound of the everlasting hills." And we are one with the "Aleph and Tau," the Alpha and Omega; and all things are ours; whether the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come; all are ours, because we are Christ's; and Christ is God's. (1 Cor. iii, 21-23.) These things overwhelm us, they transcend our power of thought; but, as we take up our ministry in the Sanctuary we shall learn more and more about them. No wonder the Dragon fears "the Blood" that has made us one with "Christ our Passover," the "Alpha and Omega."

But the saints also overcome him "by the word of their testimony." What is "the word of their testimony"? It must be the Name of Jesus, because in that Name is summed up the whole "testimony of Jesus." What is the Name of Jesus? Peter tells us: "Know assuredly that God hath made that same Jesus . . . both Lord and Christ." (Acts ii, 36.)

Digitized by Google

"Lord," which is the Jehovah Name. The Name of His Deity. The Name of the Presence. The I AM.

"Jesus," the Saviour, the Name of His humanity. The Name we all love and adore because of what it means to us.

"Christ," the Anointed One, the Messiah. The Great High Priest, the Head of His Body the Church.

"The Lord Jesus Christ," the Name of Omnipotent Power. The Name that is above every name. "For God hath given Him a Name that is above every name, that at the Name of Jesus every knee should bow, ... and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord." (Phil. ii, 10, 11.) And this Name He has given to those who are His—the members of His Body the Church—as their all-compelling power. "If ye shall ask anything in My Name I will do it." "In My Name they shall cast out demons." (Mark xvi, 17.) I do not think we ought to limit this to the demons that possess men and women. It surely must also mean the demons who are working in our midst against the Lord and against His people Israel, because Our Lord gave the 70 disciples power to tread on serpents and scorpions (we can take this literally and figuratively) and over "all the power of the enemy";—that must be over all Satan's kingdom of evil. Also He told the twelve that if they had faith only as a grain of mustard seed, "Ye could say to this mountain remove hence to yonder place, and it shall remove, and nothing shall be impossible to you." "A mountain," figuratively, means a kingdom, therefore the Lord's saints have power to bid a kingdom remove to another place, therefore they have power to bid Satan's kingdom in this land to remove out of this land. "And it shall remove"—the whole of it!—"and nothing shall be impossible." How little we understand and realize these things! It is because we have been so blind, and so neglectful of the duties and privileges of our priesthood. But in these latter days Our Lord is opening our eyes to them, so that we may understand how to wage the spiritual warfare against the powers of evil.

Oh, but someone may object, Our Lord said, "Resist not evil." Yes, but He was not speaking of Satan and the powers of evil. He was speaking to individuals about their conduct under personal injuries and wrongs. The Mosaic Law permitted them to demand a like injury. "An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth." But Our Lord does not permit His followers to resist personal injuries and wrongs in this way. St. Paul upbraided the Corinthian Christians for the same sort of thing, and pointed out that it was better to be wronged than to be going to law with one another as they were. "Why do ye not rather suffer yourselves to be defrauded?"

Our Lord never meant that we were not to resist Satan and the Powers of Darkness. Our whole Christian life is a fight against them. "Your adversary the Devil goeth about as a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour. Whom resist stedfast in the faith." "Resist the Devil and he will flee from you." God's Israel have been created to "fight with God" against him and all his.

But, someone else probably says, "If we begin that sort of thing we shall concentrate the whole might of the hosts of evil against us."

Well, it is already concentrated against us. Make no mistake about that. I think many of us have had experience of it. I know all of us will experience it as we advance along the passage of the great Tribulation. If we try to ignore it we only give the advantage to the enemy. Besides, the Lord says to His priest-kings, "Nothing shall by any means hurt you." How can it when we have learnt to trust to the might of His Name—"the Lord Jesus Christ"—the Glory of it, the Omnipotent Power of it, the Infinite Love of it. But we must never forget the awful Majesty of it, and the terrible responsibility that rests upon those who use that Name. "Let everyone that nameth the Name of Christ depart from iniquity." (2 Tim. ii, 19.) Satan and his hosts will know if we have the right to use that Name against them, and those who use it without authority or unworthily put themselves at the mercy of the powers of evil, even as the sons of Sceara did. And our only right to use it is through the Blood of the Lamb. Before we use it we must have the cleansing of the Blood. Not only the first great regenerating cleansing of Calvary, but the constant application of the cleansing for the defilements and sins of our daily life. Also, we must "depart from iniquity." All the unclean things, the stumbling-blocks, the chains of the world, must be forsaken. The heart must be pure, the tongue controlled. If any man "bridleth not his tongue, that man's religion is vain," and, oh, the tongue is an unruly member with some of us! Finally, we must strive earnestly in prayer that we may "have the mind of Christ"—our Great High Priest, "the Holy One of Israel," before we may dare to use the Power of His Name.

But when He gives us His mind, and when He puts on us the Blood-sprinkled robe of His Righteousness, we can follow Him into the Holiest, and there in the Power of His Name ask what we will and it shall be given us. "Whatsoever ye shall ask in My Name that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son. If ye shall ask anything in My Name I will do it."

The Sanctuary is where much of the "fighting with God" must be done; and prayer in the Name of the Lord Jesus Christ is the all-conquering weapon of the "priests of God." But the "priests of God" are also "Princes of God"—"Israel," and as such they must "gird on the whole armour of God," and go forth to conquer and rule in the Name of the Lord. They must rescue the nation Israel from the Powers of Darkness that are enslaving her, and they must bring her back to her Lord.

If only the Lord's priest-kings would learn these things! When they have learnt how inconceivably mighty is the power of the three "precious things of the everlasting hills" that we have been considering—the Blood of "the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world," the Name of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the prayer of faith in that Name—they will find themselves "more than conquerors through Him that loved us" and "washed us from our sins in His own blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto God and His Father."

And to Him shall be the glory and dominion for ever.—Amen.

NATURAL PHENOMENA—II.

THEIR PROBABLE CAUSE.

By BASIL STEWART.

IN our Witness of the Great Pyramid (pp. 224–228) we suggest that these phenomena are largely governed by the physical state of the sun, exceptional solar activity producing increased magnetic storms which cause unusual conditions throughout the solar system, these conditions—as far as our own planet is concerned—being intensified by accompanying exceptional disturbances in the planet Jupiter. "Just as the sun is showing greatly increased magnetic and cyclonic disturbances . . . and just as these phenomena are reflected in intensified disturbances on the earth, so is Jupiter exhibiting the same phenomena" (p. 226), while at the present moment it is undergoing one of the most intense disturbances ever recorded. Our own globe, lilliputian in comparison, in its passage between these two immense spheres of intense igneous and magnetic activity, must be very considerably affected thereby.

A new and interesting theory, which may be regarded as supplementary to the foregoing, and, indeed, largely influenced by it, has been recently advanced as the primary cause of earthquakes, volcanic eruptions and the other phenomena which accompany them.* This is the meteoric impact theory, advanced by the American meteorologist, Professor Hale, and it certainly appears to account for phenomena which the usual explanation offered by scientists and meteorologists signally fails to do. The latter will explain an earthquake as due to the contraction of the earth's crust owing to the cooling of its incandescent interior, while a volcano is thrown up from the bowels of the earth, an eruption being the escape of gases and molten material through a "fault" in the crust. Such is the teaching which has come down to us from the early years of last century, and is only now being attacked by the meteor theory.

Meteors are the disintegrated fragments of comets, and these in their turn have a very direct influence upon natural catastrophes. The awe with which the visitations of such have always been looked upon by vast numbers of the human race has, in fact, sound reason behind it.

An earthquake in its movement invariably travels in a north to south direction—a matter of ordinary observation, all proved by the recent severe quakes in Japan (1923, 1927, January 3rd, 1929), and elsewhere—and in a series of vertical shocks. The subsidence theory will not explain this north to south travel along a narrow track, but on the contrary should produce a shock radiating from a common centre—the point of subsidence—like the fractures caused by a stone striking a pane of glass. Neither will it account for the frequently attendant tidal wave when near the sea, nor the accompanying hurricane and deluge of rain. The meteor theory, however, does satisfactorily account for all these concomitant phenomena.

Further, if the shrinking theory is worth anything, it should reveal itself in the course of time in the earth's circumference. As a matter of fact, the exact opposite appears to be the case. The earth is gradually increasing, and this has been suggested as the reason for the present orbit (year) of 365¼ days, whereas it was originally, in the childhood of the human race, 360 days, the year of prophecy, while the odd quarter day has probably been added within historic times, representing an accretion of material during that period. In other words, the earth, in accordance with the law of gravity, is slowly receding from the sun and lengthening its orbit because of its increased weight, due to material brought to it through meteor impact.

In this connection it is interesting to note that Avebury, an astronomical monument of great antiquity, contained, inside its great outer circle of 100 stones,† two inner circles consisting of 30 and 12 stones respectively, representing the sun and moon. This seems to suggest twelve months each of 30 days, or a year of 360 days. If it be suggested that the Great Pyramid, another early astronomical structure, is based on our modern year of 365¼ days, this is because it intentionally incorporates the expressions of present-day science, and was not erected for contemporary purposes.‡

Observation shows that meteors are attracted to the volcanic regions of the earth and come from the direction of the Magnetic Pole. They fall as a rule tangentially (see Plate at page 164 in "Appian Way's" vol.), and along certain iso-dynamic lines, in a direction from north-north-east to south-south-west; and in their passage, nearing the earth, are the cause of earthquakes (hence the north to south movement of the latter) and eruptions, the gases they bring with them into the earth's atmosphere accounting for the gales and rainfall invariably accompanying these outbreaks.

Hurricanes and tornadoes are simply due to an excess of air, while the common idea that rain is caused by the evaporation of the oceans by the sun's rays lacks scientific proof.§ On these grounds the tropics, where the heat and therefore the evaporation is greatest, should experience the most continuous rainfall, whereas, except for the rainy season in certain districts only, the tropical and semi-tropical belts are largely rainless. The region which suffers the most continuous rainfall is precisely that region which receives the greatest fall of meteoric matter, the Northern Temperate Zone, the region also containing the largest land areas, while the corresponding zone in the south is almost entirely water.

Volcanic and earthquake energy, too, is, with one or two exceptions (e.g., Dutch East Indies, and South America along the Cordilleras), almost always occurring north of the Equator, and particularly in the North Temperate Zone, where the atmospheric and climatic conditions have always been most erratic and eccentric, exhibiting the greatest extremes of temperature, an eccentricity almost wholly absent in the south.

Without meteoric impact, the earth would in course of time lose its air and water through lack of replenishment—a fate which has overtaken the moon—while meteors at the same time, by the gases they bring, constitute the generative power which preserves the vitality of active volcanoes, and may also restore others apparently extinct, as happens from time to time. Volcanoes, in their turn, when active and in a state of heat, attract a passing meteor which, in its turn, will change a minor eruption into a major eruption with devastating results, as for example the eruption of Mt. Pelée in May, 1902.

* Explained in detail in The Riddle of the Earth, by "Appian Way" (Chapman and Hall).

† "Appian Way" maintains the outer circle consisted of 360 stones with five more added later, but the present writer has been unable to find corroboration of this, all other authorities giving the number as 100. Sir Norman Lockyer points out that the great outer circle is archæologically a later structure, since it obstructs the avenues leading to the inner circles. This fact rather spoils "Appian Way's" theory of Avebury.

It does not invariably follow, however, that a passing meteor will throw a volcano into a paroxysmal outburst, as instance the Tokio disaster of 1923, when Fujiyama, near by, was unaffected, though the island of Oshima, south of Tokio Bay, being struck by the meteor, was submerged and reappeared larger than before (due to accretion of meteoric matter) as an active volcano. The tidal wave caused thereby created havoc on the Japanese coast and travelled in a series of four waves right across the Pacific to the Californian coast, nearly 5,000 miles distant. All the above-mentioned related phenomena were present in this disaster: the vertical movement of the earth along a narrow, north to south track; the tidal wave; conflagration which broke out everywhere, due to the meteor's gases, though at the time attributed (incorrectly) to gases released from the earth; gale, and downpour of rain which lasted many days; volcanic activity, though not in the particular volcano (Fuji) which acted as the magnet and attracted the meteor.

Again, a volcanic outburst does not necessarily imply an earthquake of corresponding violence; witness the recent Etna outbreak, which was almost purely an eruption, while the Messina earthquake of 1908, in which 200,000 people were killed in Messina itself, did not affect Etna at all (as in the above Tokio quake), the reason being that the meteor fell short of Etna into the sea, hence the tidal wave. In this instance, being at night, the meteor was actually seen, coming from the direction of Calabria, precisely along a north-north-east to south-south-west track. The writer passed through the Straits of Messina not long after this disaster and the sight presented was extraordinary to a degree. Navigation was dangerous as all the channels had been altered, while the sea was full of whirlpools and rapids, and highly dangerous for small craft.

To sum up, if all the conditions attendant on major seismic and volcanic outbreaks be carefully analysed, it will be found that the meteor theory alone appears to account satisfactorily for them, while at the same time the explanations and theories usually advanced by meteorologists do not satisfy them, and in many cases are distinctly at variance with them.

Everyone, whatever his station or employment in life, is affected by the weather; it is the one topic common to all, hence its popularity. All, therefore, should be interested as to its cause and incidence, particularly the inhabitants of these Isles which experience it in all its vagaries.

NOTE.—Since writing the foregoing, we have seen an interesting account of a visit paid by a party under two American geologists to Falcon Island, one of the Tonga group (Friendly Islands), in the South Pacific, which seems to confirm strongly the meteoric theory.

Falcon Island, after an eruption in October, 1927, the most violent in its history, and one which aroused world-wide interest at the time, reappeared greatly increased in size, and is at present about two miles in diameter and rises 360 feet above sea level. All the volcanic islands in this group lie in a straight line running N.N.E. to S.S.W.—the precise direction of meteoric falls and earthquakes—while New Zealand itself, which is very highly volcanic, from the Bay of Plenty in the north to Stewart Island in the south, is situated exactly along the continuation of this track through the Tonga group.

Falcon Island has appeared and disappeared (due to erosion) at least twice in its recorded history. Meteoric impact has re-created it and thrown it into violent activity at the same time. It is gradually disappearing again and its activity is diminishing.

1928 AND NUMBER 666.

BY THE REV. C. C. DOBSON, M.A.

IN my article in your issue of January 26, page 57, I pointed out the occurrence of 666 as well as 153 in the voting over the Prayer Book controversy, but whilst the significance of 153 is apparent, that of 666 needs some further elucidation, which space did not permit me.

It was the recognized number of the Roman language in St. John's time. Everyone then knew he referred to Rome, since the six letters used as numerals totalled 666. The value of the Greek word "Lateina" is also 666. Our Lord said "Thus have ye made the Commandment of God of none effect by your tradition." The word tradition, paradosis, totals 666. In Acts 19, v. 25, we read: "Sirs, Ye know that by this craft we have our wealth" (i.e., the making of images to Diana). The word wealth, euporia, occurs only once in the Bible, and totals 666.

"Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast, for it is the number of a man. And his number is 666." We are, therefore, commanded to look for this number.

We must look for it somewhere where the Latin language is to be found, and where "tradition" and "image worship" may be seen. Rome to-day still uses the Latin language, rests on tradition, and upholds image worship. The Pope officially styles himself "Vicarius filii Dei," "Vice-regent of the Son of God." The Latin letters of this expression total 666. The New Prayer Book was rejected because it pandered to Romish doctrines based on tradition. Hence the occurrence of 666 in the voting figures in conjunction with 153 on the other side.

Mr. David G. Bard writes: "In THE NATIONAL MESSAGE of February 2nd, 1929, I note, with interest, Lieut.-Col. E. S. J. Anderson's letter re the Straits of Bab-el-Mandeb, in which he says he has not once passed through them, although he has been through the Red Sea fourteen times. I venture to say that these Straits must be traversed to reach India, via the Red Sea. The Island of Perim lies between the wider (African side) and the narrow (Arabian side) channels, and these Straits of Bab-el-Mandeb form the only southern entrance or egress to the Red Sea. I may add, I have travelled the Red Sea on an average of six times a year for the past three decades."

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

OWING to the illness of our Commissioner-General, Mr. John Leech, M.A., K.C., the Rev Pascoe Goard took his place, and gave one of his illuminating addresses to a large audience at Headquarters on February 27th. On February 28th Mr. A. J. Wakeford gave an acceptable address.

Our readers will be glad to know that Mr. Goard will give another address on Wednesday afternoon next at Headquarters. The speaker for Thursday evening will be announced later.

We are glad to report that Mr. Leech is making satisfactory progress towards recovery, and hopes to be able to resume his duties and commence his series of prophetic lectures in the course of a week or two.

The Morning Post says that in an interview with a Stockholm newspaper, a Professor of Upsala University recently expressed the view that English would soon be raised to the rank, honour and dignity of a world language. Inspired by this, the paper has been making some interesting "practical" inquiries on its own account.

It has sounded representative men in banking, commerce, industry, the wireless, gramophone and cinema worlds, telephone and telegraph operators, police, taxi drivers, tram conductors, and a host of others. The result "summarized" in a five-column article is distinctly flattering to English.

Import and export firms and industrial men in practically all branches say that certainly English has the greatest prospects of becoming a world language. In 65 out of 100 cases English is the language in which their foreign business has to be conducted. . . .

Book dealers say that the greatest demand is for English and American literature.

The newspaper's inquiries in other fields all point in the same direction—English is the inevitable world language of the future. But Swedish will remain in Sweden for the special use of Swedes.

The Ilkley and Ben Rhydding Branch held their Annual Concert and Social on February 11th, a delightful evening being spent, with an excellent attendance considering the terribly cold weather. A substantial sum was raised for the Branch expenses. On the 19th the Branch meeting greatly enjoyed a lantern lecture on "Palestine," given by Rev. R. G. F. Waddington.

On February 14th Rev. T. H. Whitehouse gave two excellent addresses for the Dover Branch, the audiences, unfortunately, being rather reduced in numbers owing to the stormy weather. Lt.-Colonel Smythe was in the chair. The prayer meetings held here are very encouraging.

"Life from the Dead; or the Racial Origin of the British" was the subject of the lecture given to the Bradford Branch on February 22nd and greatly appreciated by an excellent audience, which followed the lecturer's statements and clear marshalling of historical facts with keen enjoyment. Mr. J. Foster Beaver occupied the chair.

A most interesting and instructive address was given by Mr. W. Hesketh, J.P., of Manchester, on "The Kingdom of God in its Spiritual and Literal Aspects," to the Durham Branch on February 21st. Mr. J. H. Tench, of Darlington, President of the Branch, read the Scripture. His Worship the Mayor of Durham presided, and, being himself a Manchester man, gave the lecturer a warm welcome, and in the course of his remarks stated that for the past forty years he had considered that we were God's chosen people—Israel; but that he had never taken the time to study the subject thoroughly.

H. B. writes from Rhodesia, saying he can hardly find words to express the comfort, instruction and deep teaching our journal has brought before him, and to others to whom he passes it on. The Old Testament is full of meaning, and he has no doubt that the writers of such inspiring articles are receiving their understanding from the Holy Spirit of God. He says, one's heart leaps and bounds to think that this British-Israel Movement is the moving power to draw all Churches, nations and people to one great unity—the Kingdom of God. . . . . You cannot imagine how beautiful all matters and things have opened up before me since reading this deep-rooted, Scriptural paper issued by the British-Israel Movement.

In an endeavour to reach the people who should be behind this Movement, the Ontario Branch of the British-Israel Federation of Canada are carrying out a campaign of intensive propaganda. Quantities of literature have been obtained from the Covenant Publishing Co., and this is being systematically mailed out to prominent men and women in Toronto and Ontario. THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER is being sent to many of the clergy who show interest.

On February 6th Mr. Gladstone Brown, the President, was the speaker at the Toronto East Branch.

On February 11th Mr. Thomas Ransom gave an interesting illustrated lecture on "Stone Piles of History," at the St. Clair Branch.

A Mission, arranged by Mr. George R. Gair, was held in Stockport from the 11th to 15th February, at the Central Library. The lectures were all of an interesting and illuminating character, and were received with great approbation by the members and friends. Owing to the severity of the weather the meetings were affected as regards attendance—as was to be expected; but numbers increased towards the close, the best attendance being on the Friday evening. Many new people attended the meetings, having heard about the Movement, so that the officials feel their endeavours and work have not been without results, which they trust will bear fruit throughout the rest of the session.

It is desired to place on record the splendid work of the Secretary, Mr. A. E. Waine, who personally superintended the organization of the Mission. Among the members should be mentioned Miss L. Mitchell, who assisted greatly in the disposal of leaflets and literature, and Mrs. Fairbottom, who by selling knitted articles raised a substantial sum towards the Mission Fund. The whole membership of the Branch is very enthusiastic, the financial returns alone being a tribute to their zeal.

A Sussex clergyman writes: "I appreciate the gift of the valuable set of the Rev. Pascoe Goard's books almost more than words can convey. Though I have been a student of the Bible for the greater part of my life, I have never found such wealth of exposition and extraordinary illumination of the whole of the Books of the Bible as in the writings of the British-Israel school, among which Mr. Goard's holds such a prominent position. The prophets of the Old Testament live again, and the whole scheme of Holy Scripture seems to have a coherence and significance never before dreamed of."

A distinguished Doctor in London who is reading British-Israel literature with an open mind says this: "My mind is like the four-square City, which has its gates—three on each side. They are not closed. I welcome anything which makes the Word more luminous, the Deity more glorious, and Christ more precious."

This Doctor recently attended one of our meetings and offered the prayer thereat.

"The Winnipeg Branch is now very busy planning for the Canadian Convention, which is to be held in May. This will be the greatest event to date in the history of the British-Israel Movement in the Dominion, and it is hoped that such a beacon will be kindled as will rouse the country from sea to sea. But in order to do this money is urgently needed. Will those friends in distant parts of Canada and the United States, who are able and willing to help forward this great work, send contributions for the Convention Fund to Mr. J. Trowell, 519, Sprague Street, Winnipeg, who is the Chairman of the Special Finance Committee?

"Already many friends from Indiana, North and South Dakota, as well as various parts of Canada, have signified their intention of being present. Will others who are planning to attend kindly notify him?

"It is hoped that members in all parts of the world will help with their prayers."

M. H. writes: "I can testify to a broader outlook, a clearer perception of God's wonderful plan, and a greater zeal to bring others into the Kingdom. Although a nominal Christian for years, the true spirit of obedience to God's laws only became manifest after I became a British-Israelite."

C. H. H. writes: "I must send you a word to say how much I enjoy reading THE NATIONAL MESSAGE. It is the best paper I see, containing the whole Truth which is so much needed in these last days. I find a great blessing in reading the splendid messages that are given, and believe the Lord has raised up the B.-I. people to be witnesses to these great Truths."

It is with great regret we have to announce the passing away on March 2nd of Mr. H. Tester, a young and very energetic worker in the British-Israel Cause. His addresses during the open-air campaign last summer, and those in various halls, were keenly appreciated and will long be remembered. We tender to his young widow our heartfelt sympathy, and pray God to sustain and comfort her in her sad loss.

C. F. W. writes: "The Rev. Joseph Gay delivered a successful and much-appreciated series of addresses to the Bristol, Bath and Nailsea Branches during the week ending March 2nd. He gave six addresses at Bristol, at the Rotary House and at St. Albans Parish Hall, two at the Assembly Rooms, Bath, and two at Nailsea. All were well attended, considering the very cold weather. The audiences were greatly delighted with his inspiriting and illuminating exposition of the Scriptures. He made compelling appeals for new members to come forward and assist in the Lord's work by joining their respective Branches. As a result several new members joined each of the Branches.

"We wish there were dozens of such speakers touring the country; the nation would speedily be aroused from its lethargy. May God send more such labourers to His vineyard."

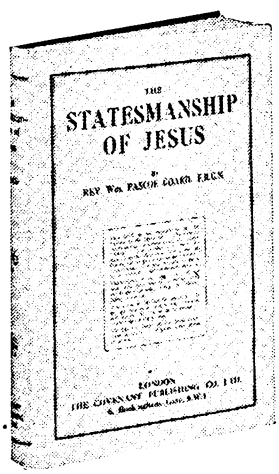
BOOKS BY
REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.



THE LAW OF THE LORD OR THE COMMON LAW

Anglo-Saxon Common Law is based on the laws given to Israel at Sinai. Israel law has been the law of this land since a thousand years before Christ.

This is a book which should be carefully studied. It is a most valuable contribution towards the settlement of many of to-day's perplexing problems.

THE STATESMANSHIP OF JESUS

A brilliant exposition of the Epistle to the Hebrews—a letter having the direct inspiration of God. The book brings out new facets of the truth with striking vividness, and enhances the already great reputation of the writer.

THE EPISTLE TO THE ROMANS

With a skilful hand the author has traced the general outlines of the Epistle, and, as Mr. Goard usually does, he has thrown new light on dark places.

Dr. Mountain writes, "Mr. Goard is, indeed, a brave man to endeavour to analyse and expound the Epistle to the Romans within the limits of a hundred pages. But he has succeeded where many would have failed."

BOOKS ARE STEPPING-STONES TO KNOWLEDGE.

IF every reader of this Journal were to cultivate the habit of buying one B.I. book each week and thoroughly studying its contents, the knowledge thus gained would, if properly applied, give this great Cause tremendous impetus.

This habit need not be expensive. The prices of our books are purposely kept as low as possible in order that all may partake of this great heritage of inspiring literature on an inspiring subject.

We give below a small selection from our catalogue. They are all most moderately priced, and worth, to the reader, far more than the small outlay.

PROPHETIC LIGHT ON WORLD DESTINY.
By WILLIAM HARPER, M.A., B.D.

To all Britons this book should be of great personal interest, as it tells them who they are, who their famous ancestors were, and what a splendid heritage is in store for them, and, indeed through them, in a measure, for all of every race and every land, who seek it in the right way.

THE SABBATH THAT WAS MADE FOR MAN.
By J. G. MODIN.

Miss Modin has indeed a lofty idea of the Sabbath Day; and this will occasion no surprise when it is remembered that she rightly regards it as the national sign of the relationship existing between Jehovah and Israel. While recognising, therefore, its great value as a Day of Rest, it is this fact that constitutes its chief significance for Israel-Britain, and which enforces its weighty claims upon every member of the British Empire.

THE TIMES OF THE GENTILES.
By BASIL STEWART ("DISCIPULUS").

A clear and deeply interesting exposition of prophecies respecting the great "seven times," showing how the events therein foretold have been precisely fulfilled in history, and how little now remains to be determined. Of special interest to-day is the author's forecast of the immediate future, in which he makes clear that the terrors of Armageddon are reserved solely for those anti-Christian forces which have, from platform and press, carried war into Heaven and challenged God Himself! Working to-day all over the world to bring about our downfall, they are rapidly digging their own grave in "The Valley of Hamon-gog." Many people are trembling as to what the next few years may bring forth. Read this remarkable book and share the writer's optimism. The Second Advent is also dealt with at length. A large and instructive Chart illustrates the letterpress.

In this book the author has given us a handbook which epitomises as shortly as possible the various aspects of the British Identity Question. A book that one can give to the enquirer, which will show him the points upon which British-Israel Truth bases its reasoning, and the various branches of study which bear out and support the theory that in the Anglo-Saxon Race we have the literal descendants of literal Israel.

THE DOCUMENTS OF DANIEL.—IX.

Document V. (Daniel v.) Scope: An historic event, occupying one night only. Date: Ussher 538 B.C.

The Passing of the Head of Gold.

Now like a lightning crash comes the cutting down of the Nebuchadnezzar dynasty: and the passing into history of the Babylonian Empire. Chapter iv had prepared us for the event. The word had gone forth from the "watcher and holy one" that the tree should be cut down.

The dramatic setting of that fateful evening is interesting and significant. No small part of the short history of the Babylon Empire consisted of the great manifestations of the Divine presence and power exercised towards the newly-erected Empire. During the lifetime of Nebuchadnezzar God had once and again made His presence, His purpose and His power known to the House of Nebuchadnezzar, and the king had responded, and publicly by royal proclamation acknowledged it all.

Belshazzar, the successor of Nebuchadnezzar, and the last to rule in Babylon of that dynasty, had definitely turned away from these facts and from the Personality revealed by the facts. In order to mark his contempt for God, the God Who had so markedly made His presence known, as is set forth in chapters ii, iii and iv, Belshazzar made a feast to the assembled lords and TOOK THE SACRED THINGS WHICH NEBUCHADNEZZAR HAD BROUGHT FROM THE TEMPLE AT JERUSALEM, and deliberately debased them to secular uses, even the uses of debauchery. "They drank wine, and praised the gods of gold, and of silver, of brass, of iron, of wood, and of stone."

Here was a specific and, as far as that age was concerned, a final breach between the House of Nebuchadnezzar and the Most High God. It is always a fatal thing for any House or any nation to make such a breach with the living God.

Let this sidelight on the mental attitude of the times be noticed, that the sacred vessels from Jerusalem had been preserved up to that moment free from secularization. They had not been broken up, nor melted down for commercial or social purposes, but had been sacredly kept in the Temple. After the wild orgy of that night they continued to be preserved until they were delivered to Ezra, and were by him restored to Jerusalem. (See Ezra i, 7-8.)

So the challenge to God was organized by the king, and the insult to God was in progress in the form of the evening's drunken orgy.

Let us now read the tragic circumstances of the night. As we do so let us bear in mind that secular history and the inscriptions of Babylonia set at rest the question as to the historicity of the man Belshazzar, and as to the fact that his city and kingdom were taken in such a manner as is here described. The Empire fell, or rather Babylon fell, in one night, and the kingdom passed to the commander of the invading army.

"Belshazzar the king made a great feast to a thousand of his lords, and drank wine before the thousand.

Belshazzar, whiles he tasted the wine, commanded to bring the golden and silver vessels which his father Nebuchadnezzar had taken out of the temple which was in Jerusalem; that the king, and his princes, his wives, and his concubines, might drink therein.

Digitized by Google

Then they brought the golden vessels that were taken out of the temple of the house of God which was at Jerusalem ; and the king, and his princes, his wives, and his concubines, drank in them.

They drank wine, and praised the gods of gold, and of silver, of brass, of iron, of wood, and of stone.

In the same hour came forth fingers of a man's hand, and wrote over against the candlestick upon the plaister of the wall of the king's palace : and the king saw the part of the hand that wrote.

Then the king's countenance was changed, and his thoughts troubled him, so that the joints of his loins were loosed, and his knees smote one against another.

The king cried aloud to bring in the astrologers, the Chaldeans, and the soothsayers. And the king spake, and said to the wise men of Babylon, Whosoever shall read this writing, and shew me the interpretation thereof, shall be clothed with scarlet, and have a chain of gold about his neck, and shall be the third ruler in the kingdom.

Then came in all the king's wise men : but they could not read the writing, nor make known to the king the interpretation thereof.

Then was king Belshazzar greatly troubled, and his countenance was changed in him, and his lords were astonied.

Now the queen by reason of the words of the king and his lords came into the banquet house : and the queen spake and said, O king, live for ever : let not thy thoughts trouble thee, nor let thy countenance be changed :

There is a man in thy kingdom, in whom is the spirit of the holy gods ; and in the days of thy father light and understanding and wisdom, like the wisdom of the gods, was found in him ; whom the king Nebuchadnezzar thy father, the king, I say, thy father, made master of the magicians, astrologers, Chaldeans, and soothsayers ;

Forasmuch as an excellent spirit, and knowledge, and understanding, interpreting of dreams, and shewing of hard sentences, and dissolving of doubts, were found in the same Daniel, whom the king named Belteshazzar : now let Daniel be called, and he will shew the interpretation.

Then was Daniel brought in before the king. And the king spake and said unto Daniel, Art thou that Daniel, which art of the children of the captivity of Judah, whom the king my father brought out of Jewry ?

I have even heard of thee, that the spirit of the gods is in thee, and that light and understanding and excellent wisdom is found in thee.

And now the wise men, the astrologers, have been brought in before me, that they should read this writing, and make known unto me the interpretation thereof : but they could not shew the interpretation of the thing :

And I have heard of thee, that thou canst make interpretations, and dissolve doubts : now if thou canst read the writing, and make known to me the interpretation thereof, thou shalt be clothed with scarlet, and have a chain of gold about thy neck, and shalt be the third ruler in the kingdom.

Then Daniel answered and said before the king, Let thy gifts be to thyself, and give thy rewards to another ; yet I will read the writing unto the king, and make known to him the interpretation.

O thou king, the most high God gave Nebuchadnezzar thy father a kingdom, and majesty, and glory, and honour :

And for the majesty that he gave him, all people, nations, and languages, trembled and feared before him : whom he would he slew ; and whom he would he kept alive ; and whom he would he set up ; and whom he would he put down.

But when his heart was lifted up, and his mind hardened in pride, he was deposed from his kingly throne, and they took his glory from him :

And he was driven from the sons of men ; and his heart was made like the beasts, and his dwelling was with the wild asses : they fed him with grass like oxen, and his body was wet with the dew of heaven ; till he knew that the most high God ruled in the kingdom of men, and that he appointeth over it whomsoever he will.

And thou his son, O Belshazzar, hast not humbled thine heart, though thou knewest all this ;

But hast lifted up thyself against the Lord of heaven ; and they have brought the vessels of his house before thee, and thou, and thy lords, thy wives, and thy concubines, have drunk wine in them ; and thou hast praised the gods of silver, and gold, of brass, iron, wood, and stone, which see not, nor hear, nor know : and the God in whose hand thy breath is, and whose are all thy ways, hast thou not glorified :

Then was the part of the hand sent from him ; and this writing was written.

And this is the writing that was written, MENE, MENE, TEKEL, UPHARSIN.

This is the interpretation of the thing : MENE ; God hath numbered thy kingdom, and finished it.

TEKEL ; Thou art weighed in the balances, and art found wanting.

PERES ; Thy kingdom is divided, and given to the Medes and Persians.

Then commanded Belshazzar, and they clothed Daniel with scarlet, and put a chain of gold about his neck, and made a proclamation concerning him, that he should be the third ruler in the kingdom.

In that night was Belshazzar the king of the Chaldeans slain.

And Darius the Median took the kingdom, being about threescore and two years old." (Daniel v.)

So ends the first stage of the history of the House of Nebuchadnezzar.

Cut down by the new head of the succeeding silver dynasty, and to be bound with " a band of iron and brass," which band, by the metal indicated, represented the succeeding dynasties of Greece and Rome, the family must remain lowly " in the tender grass of the field " till seven times pass over him. " And whereas they commanded to leave the stump of the tree roots ; thy kingdom shall be sure unto thee after that thou shalt know that the heavens do rule."

So ended the head of gold period of the history of Babylon succession of Empires

So was the mighty dynasty cut down at the command of " the watcher and the holy one."

The element of these graphic records which engages the attention of the reader above the international history involved is the plain presentation of the fact that the Divine personality is engaged most specifically with the affairs thus progressing on the stage of history. By the crashing in of most unexpected things, such as the dream of Nebuchadnezzar and the interpretation so miraculously given by Daniel; the event of the fiery furnace, and the appearance of "one like unto the Son of God"; the dynastic dream and the interpretation of it; and now the writing on the wall which has become so proverbial, showing Divine power over dynasties and empires, the Lord taught the peoples of the Babylonian system the great things concerning Himself in relationship to them. In the same way Our Lord by miracle and sign taught the people in the days of His ministry.

Thus history is full of miracle, and is full of God.

God declared with what purpose he had thus instructed Babylon. "We would have healed Babylon, but she is not healed" is His complaint. It was by such manifestations of Himself and of His power that He first taught Israel to know and to obey Him in the wilderness, at the time that He established them as a nation under Himself as King.

Now the final apostasy of the House of Nebuchadnezzar had come, and THE HOUSE OF NEBUCHADNEZZAR HAD FALLEN. Thus had also the Houses of the various dynasties of the House of Israel fallen, from Jeroboam onward, prior to the time of Israel's captivity.

While it is true that the House of Nebuchadnezzar had fallen, the promise was that it should again arise at the end of the seven times, out from among "the tender grass of the field." This we believe occurred, as we saw in the last issue, in the rise of the House of Hohenzollern.

The first of the Kaisers marched against Jerusalem, and carried captive the people of Judah and Jerusalem. At the same time Babylon held within the limits of the Empire the people of the captivity of Israel. So the power of Babylon was hurled by the Nebuchadnezzar dynasty at the Houses of Israel and Judah in Judea and in Media.

The last of the Kaisers, in the Great War, marshalled his hosts, and hurled them against Israel-Britain and Judah, including the Holy Land and City of Jerusalem.

But now the tables were turned. It was the time of Israel. Before the ranks of the tribesmen of Israel and their Allies the last of the Kaisers went down to final defeat, and the House of Hohenzollern to extinction as a ruling House. Thus fell the last person to exercise authority over the great Imperial territory stretching from the Baltic Sea to the land of ancient Babylon and the Persian Gulf.

We have now come to the end of the five documents of Daniel which were sent to the House of Nebuchadnezzar, or which recorded its movements.

Five such important documents it would be hard to find in the pages of any literature, except in the Biblical literature which deals with Israel and Israel's Redeemer.

Let us think of this for a moment. These documents stand alone, in that they present the history of the golden Empire, and of the dynasty of Nebuchadnezzar. There is one more such document, relating to the succeeding king, and the succeeding Empire of silver. To that we shall give attention in the next issue. But these five stand alone. They, together with chapter vi, are cut off from the remainder of the Book which begins with chapter vii by the fact that while these are the messages of God to the kings of Babylon, the remainder are messages of God to Daniel the prophet. In the six chapters we are now considering, Daniel is the Ambassador of God at the Court of the Empires. In the succeeding chapters Daniel is the prophet of God writing for the purposes of Holy Scripture, and for the people who should be guided thereby.

The reason we have called attention to this fact is that we may remember the separate nature of the two parts of the Book of Daniel. They are not separated by time, for the prophet retraces his steps chronologically to pick up the other and distinct thread of prophecy. The separation is according to the fact that the chapters we have been considering, together with chapter vi, were specifically sent to the kings of the Nebuchadnezzar line, and Darius, one of the first kings in the second Empire.

Therefore we may take this group of messages as complete in itself, and should not cross the line thus laid down in order to bring over modifications from chapter vii in regard, for instance, to chapter ii. Chapter ii was complete when it was given to Nebuchadnezzar. Nebuchadnezzar was dead and gone before the message of chapter vii was received. So our study of the meaning of chapter ii must be independent of chapter vii.

The important thing is to note that when in chapter ii the Lord declares, through Daniel's interpretation of the dream, "in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom," "these kings" are those mentioned in chapter ii. They are there both mentioned and numbered; "Thou art this head of gold. After thee shall arise another kingdom . . . and a third kingdom; . . . and the fourth . . ." "It is in the days of these kings that the God of heaven shall set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, which shall not be left to other people, but which shall break in pieces all these kingdoms, and which shall stand for ever."

So in the days covered by these five chapters we must also look for the establishment of the Stone Kingdom, which was necessarily functioning while Daniel was carrying out his mission in Babylon.

While the Lord had then on hand, and always had, the greatest of all schemes for the redemption of Israel, and for the salvation of the world, is it not impressed upon us at this time that He also had a great scheme of government, carried on through the twofold agency of the Babylon succession and of the Stone Kingdom during the seven times; and thereafter through the alone agency of the Stone Kingdom; leading towards, and finally to bring in, the universal reign of Our Lord.

Here is the last word of the Babylon Empire, and of the Nebuchadnezzar dynasty for that age; and here also is the first word of the succeeding Medo-Persian Empire.

"In that night was Belshazzar the king of the Chaldeans slain.

And Darius the Median took the kingdom, being about three-score and two years old."

THE DELIVERANCE OF JERUSALEM.

THE following sermon was preached in the Parish Church of Burley, Rutland, by the Vicar, The Rev. Colonel A. D. Seton of Mounie, B.Sc., on the Anniversary of the Deliverance of Jerusalem.

The preacher was for thirty-seven years an Officer in the Royal Artillery.

For many years an unbeliever in British-Israel Truth (though never a scoffer), he is now, after long and careful examination of the evidences, a firm believer.

"Knowing this first, that no prophecy of scripture is of private interpretation. For no prophecy ever came by the will of man: but men spake from God, being moved by the Holy Ghost." (2 Peter i, 20, 21—R.V.)

"For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass away, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass away from the law, till all things be accomplished." (Matthew v, 18—R.V)

This day, eleven years ago, viz., 1917, saw the occupation of Jerusalem by the victorious British troops under General Lord Allenby. This may appear to some as merely part of the military operations in our campaign in Palestine during the Great War. But verily and indeed it was a great deal more than that, and constitutes an epoch in the history of Christianity that cannot be lightly passed over, or disregarded by any devout person who has the proud privilege of "professing and calling himself Christian."

I think, therefore, that it is our bounden duty as members of Christ's Universal Church throughout the world not to ignore or forget so momentous an event, as I fear has been done in many places of worship to-day, but to return humble thanks to Almighty God for this fulfilment of the prophecies made ages ago by His holy prophets Isaiah, Obadiah and others, as to the deliverance of the Holy City from the hands of unbelieving Turkey. The taking of Jerusalem by Lord Allenby was accurately described 2,600 years ago. It was foretold that the city would be taken by God's Covenant people ("Brit" in Hebrew is "Covenant," and "Ish" is Hebrew for "man"), and it was the British who redeemed Jerusalem in 1917. Jehovah had said He would defend Jerusalem in that War, and He did so defend it, and not a shot or shell struck Jerusalem. The prophet Isaiah wrote about 2,660 years ago, and in his thirty-first chapter, fifth verse, he foretold that "as birds flying He would defend Jerusalem," and Allenby's aerial fleet did that, airmen flying like birds. The question arises: How did the inspired prophet foresee in 713 B.C. that a new device—aeroplanes—would be used in A.D. 1917 by Jehovah's chosen people, called by Him "My battle-axe and weapon of war," in the taking of Jerusalem? The answer, of course, is that Jehovah, with all knowledge, past, present and future, well knew, and He gave us this knowledge by the mouth of His holy prophet. Only God Almighty could have known, and foretold, in 713 B.C., the manner in which Jerusalem would be taken, and was taken, in A.D. 1917. You remember Our Lord's words on the walk to Emmaus, "O, fools, and slow-of-heart-to-believe ALL that the prophets have spoken." The taking of Jerusalem was part of that "ALL." Jehovah through Ezekiel (xxv, 14), referring to the deliverance of Jerusalem at this time, said: "And I will lay My vengeance upon Edom (that is the Turks, the descendants of Esau) by the hand of My people Israel." We, the Brith-Ish Israel of the Isles, did the work by the hand of General Allenby, and so fulfilled this prophecy in detail. The Bible is what it purports to be—THE LIVING WORD OF GOD, a message for the ordinary man's guidance, nationally as well as personally.

We have recently seen reviewed in many of our daily papers a new Commentary on the Bible, issued under the imprimatur of a group of distinguished Anglican scholars and teachers, the Editor-in-chief being Dr. Gore, sometime Bishop of Oxford. One of the newspaper reviewers (D.M.) says: "It may be said that there is nothing in this book to shake faith or weaken belief, if it be read in the right spirit"! A mighty "if" indeed!! To my mind, the publication of such a book in these days of rampant unbelief is simply lamentable and calculated to extinguish the feeble flame of religious belief that burns to-day in this so-called Christian land. I do not hesitate to say that, personally, I regard it as nothing less than a fresh manifestation of the wiles of Satan, productive of untold mischief to the cause of the Christian religion. Let us see what our dear "old-fashioned" Bible has to say on such things, that Bible which has gripped every great leader of the English-speaking world, the wisest men who, down through the ages, have absorbed wisdom and morality from its pages. To-day it grips such men with a stronger hold than ever before because they can see how its prophecies have been fulfilled in the British Empire and the U.S.A.; and they can see many things that our forefathers had to take by faith, made into facts of present-day history—facts which are plainly to be seen, though many people deny them before they have given ten minutes to their study! What do we find in the last chapter of the Book of the Revelation of St. John—(R.V.)? Well—in the sixth verse we read: "And He said unto me, These words are faithful and true; and the Lord, the God of the spirits of the prophets, sent His angel to shew unto His servants the things which must shortly come to pass . . . . Blessed is he that keepeth the words of the prophecy of this book." And then in the sixteenth verse and following: "I, Jesus, have sent Mine angel to testify unto you these things for the Churches." And at verses 18-19: "I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, If any man shall add unto them, God shall add unto him the plagues which are written in this book: and if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part from the tree of life, and out of the holy city, which are written in this book."

That I think is plain enough for anyone!

My friends,—There is not, believe me, a question before any nation or nations to-day, whether of elections, independence, self-determination, or anything else, that is not amply provided for in our present Bible, without its being added to or whittled away. The Bible contains all the wisdom of the ages, and there is no single question that I know of on the political horizon to-day that cannot be solved, properly and permanently solved, by applying the laws laid down in its pages.

The late Warren Gamaliel Harding understood this when he was sworn in as President of the U.S.A. with his finger on the passage: "What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?" If people, and especially our blind leaders of the blind, would only get it into their heads that the large world problems are being worked out by Israel according to God's plan, and that the Creator has His Hand on the helm of the British (Brith-Ish = Covenant Man) Commonwealth, God's great nation and multitude of nations promised to "our forefather Abraham" and to us as his descendants. The Covenant promises of God to Abraham are unconditional, irreversible and everlasting. As St. Paul tells us, God "gave the inheritance to Abraham by promise." God never cancels: He confirms. That is why He sent the Divine "Messenger of the Covenant," Our Blessed Lord. St. Paul asks in Romans xi, 1: "Hath GOD cast away His people? God forbid. For I also am an Israelite, of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin. God hath not cast away His people which He foreknew." The Brith-Ish Commonwealth, and the company of nations, her offspring, would have been destroyed ages ago but for the protecting Hand of God's Providence which time after time intervened. And this same unseen Hand will continue to protect His chosen people, the Anglo-Saxon-Kelts, in the future, provided they continue to seek the help of the Almighty God. When we had our back to the wall at Amiens in the late War, and every branch of the Anglo-Saxon race the world round sought God's help, we received it in full measure, and our arms prospered and we won through. By God's grace our nation's prayers won the day! They also did so at the beginning of the War. The German advance was turned back from Paris when all seemed hopeless.

Would that to-day we had a Moses in Israel who would speak unto the people that "they go forward," as when the Red Sea was in front of them and Pharaoh behind they went forward dry shod. Moses adhered to the plans laid down by God. Would that our leaders could see God's national plan, adhere to it, and go forward! Then would God prosper our undertakings. Working to the Creator's plan we should permanently solve every question now troubling our nation and the whole world. We rest that belief on the sure ground of God's unchanging Word of Truth. It is not a party nor a sectarian question; but one of universal importance, touching every interest of the present day, and forming a further elucidation of those dispensational "mysteries" which it has pleased God, in His infinite wisdom, to keep secret until the appointed time of their manifestation. I believe that the Holy Ghost is operating in these "last days," as the great revealer of His own prophetic Word, for the light and guidance of God's people; who now, by the consenting opinion of nearly all interpreters of prophecy, are very sensibly nearing the goal of their brightest hopes—the manifestation of the Lord Jesus Christ in His glory—when all prophecy that relates to the latter days must be fulfilled. The difficulties vanish when the fact stands out as a clear truth of God's Word, that only by a LITERAL nation, united to God in Christ by its spiritual regeneration, was the evangelization of the world to be carried out.

When, further, that nation was to embody in itself the "Church of Christ," and thus become the "riches of the world" as the Apostle calls it; surely, then, in the light of these unconditional promises to Abraham, such a consummation enhances, to an infinite degree, the faithfulness of God, and removes a reproach which hitherto not all the evangelical teaching has been able to do—the reproach which infidels such as Bradlaugh, and Blatchford, whom I knew personally, Hume, etc., have cast upon the Word of God, and so upon Jehovah Himself, that He promised that which He has not performed. It is not a sufficient answer to this to say, as many of the clergy do, that Israel was disobedient, and so God in accordance with His threats cast them off, because the later prophecies distinctly say that Israel was, after long chastisement, to return, and be no longer "forsaken, neither shall thy land be termed Desolate; but thou shalt be called Hephzibah, and thy land Beulah: for the Lord delighteth in thee." (Isaiah lxii, 4.)

Times of trial come for all nations. We, with all our honours and advantages, have many sins tarnishing the lustre of our history; and the cleansing fires may yet be necessary for us. The fact of being the House of Israel does not necessarily imply that each individual in the nation will be holy and sanctified. The whole nation, as such, is very far from being righteous; but there are righteous men in the nation. So it was of old, when Israel and Judah dwelt in their land; but better times are coming, "times of refreshing from the presence of the Lord"; for the Spirit shall be poured out on all the people, and all shall then know the Lord, from the least unto the greatest. Yet with all our ungodliness, there is no nation so rich in the memories of holy men and women, or that so zealously spreads through the earth a free Bible, translated into some 700 different languages (no other nation has done this, or anything like it), and the message of a free Salvation. We may be chastised for our many iniquities, but being the Israel of God, neither famine, nor pestilence, nor revolution, will be permitted to destroy us, for Britain is to abide in strength for evermore. She, in her ultimate millennial destiny, shall have plenty without pauperism; peace without discord; knowledge without ignorance; justice without oppression; godliness without unrighteousness; a veritable golden age. And, while other nations may be diminished, or have passed away, her throne shall be firmly established.

"The nations not so blessed as thee
Shall, in their turn, to tyrants fall;
But thou shalt flourish great and free,
The dread and envy of them all."

Not by accident was it that the author of our national song, "Rule Britannia," wrote these lines. Let us not, then, like Esau, despise our birthright. In it there is nothing that can harm us; it breaks no hearts; disappoints no hopes; imperils no interests; damages no institutions; but to all our land it is "glad tidings of great joy." Nor does it, if rightly viewed, foster our vanity and pride. For this supremacy of our country; its teeming population; its vast wealth; its fame and stability, is not due to any good inherent in us; but is the free and sovereign gift of Him Who has been pleased to make us "the sheep of His pasture."

"Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto Thy name give glory, for Thy mercy and Thy truth's sake." Again I say, let us not, like Esau, despise our birthright, but, admonished by his fatal mistake, delight ourselves in it; and assist in making it known, that others may be gladdened. Yes, it is good to be of the "lost" tribes of the House of Israel, for "the lost is found, and the dead is alive"; and our nation, in her immunity from danger, can anticipate with joy the coming ages; for she may appropriate to herself the inspiring cry, as Isaiah says (chapter xxvi, 20-21): "Come, My people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee; hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast. For behold, the Lord cometh out of His place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity; the earth also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain."

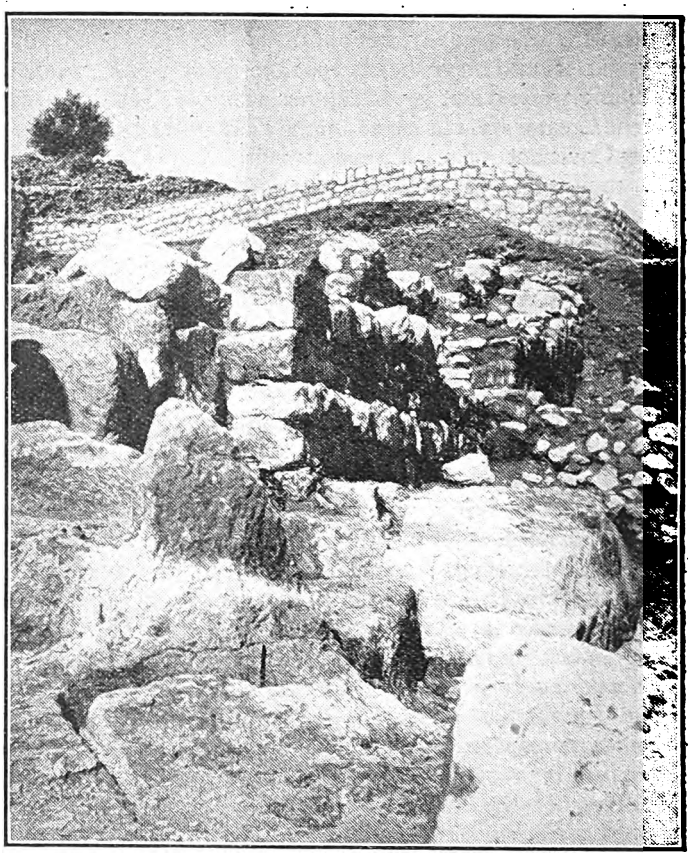
With such a prospect before our British-Israel, may we not say:—

"Sail on, thou noble ship of State;
Sail on, my country, strong and great,
Humanity with all its fears,
With all its hopes of future years,
Is hanging breathless on thy fate.
In spite of rock and tempest's roar;
In spite of false lights on the shore;
Sail on, nor fear to breast the sea.
Our faith, triumphant o'er our fears,
Is all with thee—is all with thee."

UNCOVERING ANCIENT JERUSALEM.



EXPEDITION'S VALUABLE DISCOVERIES ON MOUNT OPHEL, WHERE AN OLD GATEWAY, STREET AND HOUSES HAVE BEEN FOUND DATING BACK TO THE TIME OF CHRIST, AS WELL AS ROCK-HEWN CHAMBERS, WHICH MAY HAVE BEEN THE RESTING-PLACE OF THE KINGS OF JUDAH.

BY HAROLD J. SHEPSTONE, F.R.G.S.

WHAT is regarded by Biblical scholars as one of the most sensational discoveries so far made by the excavator in Palestine is the location of the exact site of the City of David, that stronghold which he captured from the Jebusites, and the discovery of rock-hewn chambers which some believe to have been the burial-place of the Kings of Judah. What is more, a massive ancient gateway has been uncovered, as well as a street and houses dating back to the time of Christ, thus enabling the scholar to visualize the Holy City as Christ knew it.

The site of the excavations is Mount Ophel, and they have been conducted by the Palestine Exploration Fund, under the supervision of Mr. John W. Crowfoot, Director of the British School of Archæology in Jerusalem. Here it may be added that Jerusalem stands on two hills, Mount Zion and Mount Moriah, which in turn are dominated by higher hills which led David to exclaim: "As the mountains are round about Jerusalem." On Mount Moriah stood the "stronghold of the Jebusites" which David captured and rebuilt, and called the City of David. It was on Mount Moriah that Solomon built the famous Temple and also his palace. From this Temple site runs a rocky bridge in a south-westernly direction to the Pool of Siloam. This is Ophel, to-day a gentle slope running up from the historic pool to the present southern walls of the city.

Archæologists of all nations have cast longing eyes upon Ophel and longed for the opportunity to dig there. Prior to the war a French expedition under Prof. Weill undertook excavations on this site. Like all his successors he was in search of the old walls of the city of Jerusalem and also of the tombs of the Kings of Judah, who are supposed to have been buried on this hill. Then in 1923 an expedition was conducted by the Palestine Exploration Fund. The results of two years' work was the discovery of walls on the east side of the hill overlooking the Kedron Valley, as well as a few old caves. Since then the same institution has had two more expeditions working on the site, one in 1927 and the present undertaking which has proved most fruitful in results. They have been enabled to continue the work so long, thanks to the generosity of Sir Charles Marston.

The course of the ancient city wall of Jerusalem of David's day, near the Pool of Siloam.

Mr. Crowfoot's first important find was a huge gateway between two towers, built on rock foundations some thirty-five feet below the present surface. Its strength and massiveness was a revelation to the excavators. The walls were still standing and are about twenty feet high. But the towers measured no less than twenty-seven feet in thickness, the southern one being also seventy feet in length. This massive gateway was one of the original gates of the city and was undoubtedly standing in the days of Christ. There can hardly be any doubt that He and His disciples must have passed through it. It has been identified by Professor Alt, of Germany, as the Valley Gate mentioned in the Book of Nehemiah.

Near the south tower of this ancient gate was found a large pool or cistern, constructed it is thought about 200 B.C. To the south of the pool and built right into it was found a long wall, apparently of the same period. We certainly have here the Jerusalem of Christ's day and during the first century. The walls were built on a terrace of rock below the top of the ridge, about thirty feet below the present level of the ground. They were demolished at the time of the overthrow of the city by Titus in A.D. 70. As a matter of fact, the ruins of these old walls have caused the valley which once divided the ridge of Ophel from Mount Zion on the west to be largely filled up. It is known to-day as the Tyropean Valley, and it has been found that from twenty to ninety feet of debris overlies its ancient surface. In ancient times the valley was spanned by two great bridges connecting the upper city with the Temple Hill.

Above the ruins of the walls was found a street dating back to the sixth century of our era. It led from the west wall of the Jewish Temple, now known as the Wailing Wall, to the Pool of Siloam. The remains of a church were found here, built probably in the fifth century to commemorate the march of the blind man who was healed by Christ. The street was lined with houses, many of which are still well preserved, with fine mosaic floors. These dwellings were undoubtedly used by the great masses of pilgrims who used to visit Jerusalem before it was captured by the Arabs.

Many articles of pottery were found in these dwellings, as well as a number of coins, which provided further confirmation as to their date. In one house was found some broken glass and a bronze bowl, on the lid of which was scratched the name of Anastasius. It was below these dwellings, on the very ridge of Ophel itself, that the excavators found a number of rock-cut chambers, and scholars are divided as to whether these are not the very tombs that archæologists have longed to discover, namely, the tombs of the Kings of Judah.

It is a problem not easy of solution, as the chambers have been used for a variety of purposes since they were hewn out of the living rock. They were in groups, and the most important of them contained a room over thirty-five feet in length and about fifteen feet in height, and which has been used successively as dwellings, a public bath, cistern, stables, and as an olive press. In spite of the fact that no traces of any tomb fittings have been found, it is difficult to believe that rooms of such enormous proportions would have been laboriously hewn out of the rock for any other purpose than as tomb chambers for kings.

Of the period of the Jewish kings very little has been found. There have been only a few fragments of pottery in the crevices of the rock. It seems that all the walls and palaces of that period were destroyed in the numerous sieges which Jerusalem suffered. The very earliest walls that have been found date from the time after the return of the Jews from exile. It is clear from these and previous excavations on Ophel that the ancient city of Jerusalem must have been a good distance away from the present site, or, at least, the major part of the city was situated to the south-east. Indeed, save for the Temple area, there hardly seems to be any scientific evidence to show that the present old city of Jerusalem dates back to the time of David, and even the citadel named after him may be but a replica of David's tower as it was in the days of the first warrior King of Judah.

Just recently Mr. Crowfoot has found a continuation of the street, and, in the floor of one of the houses bordering it, a mosaic inscription. Though it has no bearing on Biblical history it is of interest owing to the rarity of discovered inscriptions in this locality. It is only the third found during a period of half a century's search. It records the foundation of some baths, dating back to the sixth century. The house itself is supposed to be speaking to the person who built it. It says: "Thou who hast restored me and decorated me with mosaics—when thou hast bathed in good health, mayst thou rejoice in thy foundation, Lord Count Eugenius, with thy family." The inscription was found in a room twenty-five feet in length leading to some subterranean baths.

Unfortunately digging anywhere on Mount Ophel is exceedingly difficult. The land is very valuable and is split up into numerous small gardens o ned by Arabs. Not least, the buried portion of Jerusalem lies far below the present surface. Then the land, if it is secured from the owner on lease, as is the general rule, must be restored in a state fit for cultivation. The ground turned over by the 1927 expedition is already under crops again, and it will not be long before the site of the recent excavations will be a blooming cauliflower field again.

THE TRIBE OF BENJAMIN.

By Colonel J. C. Tyler.

THE history of this tribe contains more of romance than that of any other of the twelve tribes.

Benjamin was born in 1732 B.C. (Gen. xxxv, 16), the youngest son of Jacob's favourite wife, Rachel. The territory assigned to his tribe included the spot where Rachel lies buried.

In the wilderness of Sinai, in 1490 B.C., this tribe had an army of 35,400 (Num. i, 37; xxvi, 38–40) and in 1452 B.C. of 45,600 (Num. ii, 18–22). They marched with Ephraim and Manasseh on the west side of the square. Their lot in the Holy Land was also next to Joseph's sons, between them and the tribe of Judah. Jerusalem was inside the borders of Benjamin.

Jacob's prophecy in 1689 B.C. that "Benjamin shall ravin as a wolf" (Gen. xlix, 27) finds an echo in the "Banner."—The men of Benjamin equalled or surpassed all the other tribes in audacity, persistent obstinacy, and skill in the use of military weapons, particularly the bow and arrow. (Shrubsole.)

These characteristics were strikingly demonstrated in 1406 B.C. (Judges xix and xx) in connection with the crime committed by men of Gibeah, who were Benjamites, which roused all Israel. Benjamin refused to be dictated to in this matter, or to hand over the culprits. With an army of 26,000 men, they engaged the whole of Israel, who were able to put 400,000 men into the field. In three days' fighting Israel lost 70,000 men, but, on the third day, the army of Benjamin was exterminated except 600 men who escaped.

King Saul was a typical Benjamite in many of his characteristics. He stood head and shoulders taller than other men. He was subject to fits of wild excitement. On one occasion it is recorded that—"He stripped off his clothes and prophesied and lay down naked all that day and all that night." (1 Sam. xix, 24.)

We read in David's lament over Saul and Jonathan, his son—"They were swifter than eagles and stronger than lions."

These statements are both significant in view of what comes later. (2 Sam. i.)

The other side of Benjamin's character is apparent at the time when Israel broke away from Rehoboam. (1 Kings xii; 1 Kings xi, 36.) They were the tribe lent to Judah "for my servant David's sake and for Jerusalem's sake . . . that David may have a light always before me in Jerusalem."

When the Jews returned from their captivity, Benjamin accompanied them. We find them in Our Lord's time occupying the land of Galilee. In Galilee Our Lord dwelt safely among them. Thus was fulfilled Moses' prediction—"The Beloved of the Lord shall dwell in safety by him." (Benjamin.) (Deut. xxxiii, 12.)

Israel's Wanderings.

In Christ's time, says "Oxonian," Benjamin mingled with the Jews, though really a tribe of Israel, and they provided Our Lord with His disciples and followers.

Now here an interesting question arises. If Benjamin provided Our Lord's disciples (except Judas), how can this be reconciled with the Saviour's promise to them—"Ye shall sit" (Matt. xix, 28) "upon thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel." (Luke xxii, 30.) Throughout the Scriptures, wherever the tribes are represented, each by one man, that man belongs to the tribe he represents, and it cannot be supposed that, in view of such an important event, any other course was intended. The solution would appear to lie in the fact that the tribes had intermarried and that the Lord's disciples, though Benjamites, and though including two pairs of brothers, yet could amongst them show the lines of descent from highly-placed men of all the twelve tribes.

Benjamin escaped the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans. They were not suffered to perish. They had ample warning. Our Lord had said—"When ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies, . . . let them which are in Judea flee to the mountains." (Luke xxi, 20.) And Jeremiah had warned them (Jeremiah vi)—"O ye children of Benjamin, gather yourselves to flee out of the midst of Jerusalem, . . . for evil appeareth out of the north and great destruction."

The Romans gave them every opportunity.

In A.D. 267 the Goths from the Danube raided parts of Asia and carried Benjamin away, receiving from them the light of the Gospel. From the Black Sea* it is surmised that they made their way either by ship, or across the continent, and joined the other tribes on the shores of the North Sea. ("Oxonian.")

We next find Benjamin in their rôle as Vikings under Rolf, or Rollo. We have Rolf's ancestry for three generations in Norway. They were Earls of the Uplands and Mere-Earls, mighty men, but of quite distinct descent, according to the Saga books, from the Kings of Norway (Heimskringlia).

* "Israel's Wanderings."

Rolf, their chieftain and a Viking, was declared an outlaw for robbing and plundering within the kingdom and was made an example of on account of his high birth. Like his forerunner, King Saul, he was of so huge stature that no horse could carry him.

After being outlawed, he is next heard of in the Hebrides, where he was lord of three small islands. His company were mostly men of high birth and great ability.† They were then sea robbers and sea kings, merciless men, who yet surpassed their enemies in literary and military achievement and were superior in mental power, quickness and bravery, possessing legends of their ancestors' beauty and bravery. They were skilled workers, sometimes possessed by a frenzy or wild excitement, foaming at the mouth and dancing wildly about in their berserker rage (Jewett). Palgrave, in his history of Normandy and England, gives this view of Rollo as founder of the Duchy of Normandy—He embarked as a Viking chief, as directed by a dream, and eventually sailed up the Seine.

He ruled his duchy with a rod of iron. (Hjalmar H. Boyesen.)

A fierce nation, says Anderson in his "Royal Genealogies," who turned pirates and sea rovers about Anno 800. In the public litanies of the church was added—"From the rage of the Normans, good Lord deliver us."

Rollo died in A.D. 927. When the old chieftain lay down to die, his empty armour was hung high in the palace hall. (Jewett.)

Within less than 150 years from the baptism of Rollo, the Normans were ranked among the most polished as well as the most warlike nations of Europe. (The Times Historians' History.)

The wolf, the ancient emblem carried on the banner in the wilderness, is not found on the Vikings' banner. Both Sandford and de la Chenaye-desbois et Badier in their "Royal Genealogies" and "Dictionnaire de la Noblesse," assign to Rollo the two lions, or leopards, which became later the three lions of our royal arms. The Heimskringlia gives many banners when Rollo was in Norway, but without describing them.

I submit, says J. H. Weldon, that the so-called conquest of England by the Normans, who were no other than the tribe of Benjamin, was no more than the result, under Divine guidance, of uniting blindly with the other tribes of Israel.

History, in the words of "Oxonian," gives most striking coincidences tending to confirm the belief that the Normans who entered Britain in 1066 were Benjamin.

In 1040 Normans conquered Apulia and settled in Italy, and afterwards, in 1060, in Sicily.

In the words of Lord Macaulay—The Normans were the foremost race in Christendom. Their valour and ferocity had made them conspicuous among the rovers whom Scandinavia had sent forth to ravage Western Europe. In Normandy they founded a mighty State. Without laying aside that dauntless valour, the terror of every land from the Elbe to the Pyrenees, they acquired all the knowledge and refinement of the country in which they settled. They embraced Christianity. They raised their new language to a dignity which it had never before possessed. They fixed it in writing, poetry and romance. Polite luxury, chivalrous spirit, graceful bearing and insinuating address, skill in negotiation and natural eloquence distinguished the Norman gentlemen.

The Norman of the twelfth century was a Crusader. A madness to go crusading against the Saracens possessed him not alone for religion's sake, or for the Holy City of Jerusalem (Jewett).

The foregoing quotations and generalities are useful as well as interesting, but chiefly as by giving point to the answer to two questions :—

(1) Is it the case that the tribes in Britain were not ruled over by a descendant of the House of David until James I (of the direct line from King Zedekiah) ascended the throne?

(2) Or, may we see in fact that "little Benjamin their ruler" was ruling the tribes in Britain by Divine right as a descendant of the House of David?

It appears from Milner's great chart that Rollo, the Benjamite, placed there without design, was one of those historical personages whose line of descent is traced back to King David. When, therefore, his descendants ruled in Britain after the Battle of Hastings, in fulfilment of the Psalmist's prediction, they helped to carry out the promises conveyed to David by the prophet Nathan.

That being so, there were two lines of David's descendants ruling at one time, the more direct line in Scotland, the other in London. These two lines were united by the marriage of James IV of Scotland and Margaret Tudor. Their great-grandson, James I of England, was crowned in Westminster Abbey by virtue of his descent, not from James IV of Scotland, but from Margaret Tudor.

ISRAEL'S INHERITANCE IN GOD.—I.

By HENRY D. HOUGHTON.

MANY have spoken and written of God's inheritance in Israel, a most wonderful and amazing thing (Deut. xxxii, 9); but now let us consider something more amazing still—Israel's inheritance in God!

It will become us to be most careful in treating of such a Divine subject, and especially to avoid presumption either in statement or thought; confining ourselves to the clear declaration of Holy Scripture; giving due weight to the words of Jehovah as they are there recorded.

The Covenant made with Abraham contains a very strange clause.

"And I will establish My Covenant between Me and thee and thy seed after thee in their generations for an everlasting Covenant, to be a God unto thee, and to thy seed after thee . . . and I will be their God." (Genesis xvii, 7-8.)

There is Israel's inheritance in God, and no condition whatever attaches to it. It is a declaration of the Lord God Almighty, a beneficence, an inheritance put on Israel by Himself in all their generations for an everlasting Covenant.

There is the bald statement, tremendous and far-reaching indeed, and without any qualification whatever.

Israel's wickedness in the wilderness is proverbial. It is a story of continuous rebellion against Moses and against God.

Even when Moses stood before the rock out of which at God's command he was to bring water, he calls the lot of them

Digitized by Google

"REBELS!" "Hear now, ye rebels; must we fetch you water out of this rock?" (Numbers xx, 10.)

But look what the prophet Balaam said three chapters later. "Behold I have received commandment to bless; and He hath blessed; and I cannot reverse it. He hath not beheld iniquity in Jacob, neither hath He seen perverseness in Israel:" (why there had been forty years of it) "the Lord his God is with him, and the shout of a King is among them." (Numbers xxiii, 20-21.) God their God still!

Say you, "That was in the wilderness; God altered later"? Did He? Well, look at Isaiah xliii, 24-25: "Thou hast made Me to serve with thy sins, thou hast wearied Me with thine iniquities. I, even I, am He that blotteth out thy transgressions for Mine own sake, and will not remember thy sins." Sins blotted out by God! What becomes of them?

And when Israel had been in captivity 120 years, there comes this message (Jer. li, 5): "For Israel hath not been forsaken nor Judah of his God, of the Lord of hosts, though their land was filled with sin against the Holy One of Israel."

And again: "In those days, and in that time, saith the Lord, the iniquity of Israel shall be sought for, and there shall be none; and the sins of Judah, and they shall not be found." (Jer. l, 20.)

In Jer. xxxi, 36-37, there is a prophecy reaching down as long as time shall last.

"If those ordinances" (the sun, the moon, the stars, the day, the night, the sea; for it names them all) "depart from before Me, saith the Lord, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before Me for ever.

"Thus saith the Lord: If heaven above can be measured, and the foundations of the earth searched out beneath, I will also cast off all the seed of Israel for all that they have done, saith the Lord."

Please note that there is no end to that. There never comes a period in which it is not in force, so long as the ordinances of heaven endure! And remember Israel's sins are expressly ruled out: therefore it must be in force to-day if God is God! Is not that correct?

Immediately the Israelites had passed over Jordan, their leader Joshua met a strange man, and said to him, "Art thou for us or for our adversaries?" But he replied, "Nay; but as captain of the host of the Lord am I now come. And Joshua fell on his face to the earth and did worship, and said unto Him, what saith My Lord unto His servant?" And the record goes on:—

"And the captain of the Lord's host said unto Joshua, Loose thy shoe from off thy foot; for the place whereon thou standest is holy." (Joshua v, 14.)

Now it is quite fair to ask: "Is there a place anywhere in all Scripture where it says that the Captain of the Lord's host has resigned His Captaincy? The writer knows of none! But perhaps someone says: "They were sent into captivity, and the Captaincy then ceased."

But nine years after that God sent them this message: "I am the Lord, your Holy One, the Creator of Israel, your King." (Isaiah xliii, 15.) THERE IS NO RESIGNING THERE! One hundred and twenty years later still we read: "I will save them out of all their dwelling-places wherein they have sinned, and will cleanse them; so shall they be My people, and I will be their God." (Ezek. xxxvii, 23.) Any resigning there?

"Moreover I will make a covenant of peace with them, it shall be an everlasting covenant with them; and I will place them, and multiply them" (then this does not refer to heaven, THEY MULTIPLY) "and will set My sanctuary in the midst of them for evermore!" Any resigning there?

"My tabernacle also shall be with them, yea, I will be their God, and they shall be My people. And the heathen shall know that I the Lord do sanctify Israel when My sanctuary shall be in the midst of them for evermore." (verses 26-28.)

Is there any resigning there?

"Sing, O daughter of Zion; shout, O Israel; . . . the Lord hath taken away thy judgments;" (F. F. translates it "Revoked your conviction") "the King of Israel, even the Lord, is in the midst of thee; thou shalt not see evil any more. . . . The Lord thy God in the midst of thee is mighty; He will save, He will rejoice over thee with joy: . . . He will joy over thee with singing." (Zeph. iii, 14-17.)

Is there any resigning there?

Is there any man who dares to say that these statements of God Almighty are not true?

Is there any man that dare say that God Almighty promised more than He intended to perform? Or, more than He was able to perform? Certainly no Christian man will say that!

If they are not true, then the whole authority of the Divine Scriptures dies at a stroke!

But they are true! True as God is true! Correction? Yes! Rebuke? Yes! Punishment? Yes, even that. But, almost invariably, when rebuke or correction is administered there follow words of hope, encouragement, forgiveness, and even of blessing.

For example, "O Israel, thou hast destroyed thyself; but in Me is thine help." (Hos. xiii, 9.)

Again, "Thou hast wearied Me with thine iniquities." But the very next words are: "I, even I, am He that blotteth out thy transgressions, . . . And will not remember thy sins." (Isaiah xliii, 24-25.)

Again, "I have given Jacob to the curse, and Israel to reproaches." There is the rebuke, now the blessing. "Yet now hear, O Jacob, My servant; and Israel whom I have chosen: . . . I will pour My Spirit upon thy seed and My blessing upon thine offspring." (Isaiah xliii, 28; xliv, 1-4.) And in the very same chapter, verses 21-22, we have this: "O Israel, thou shalt not be forgotten of Me. I have blotted out, as a thick cloud, thy transgressions, and as a cloud, thy sins: . . . I have redeemed thee."

Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Hosea are all full of these violent contrasts: rebuke—encouragement; punishment—blessing!

Hosea is especially terrible in its rebuke, but even more wonderful in blessing. The following is all spoken of Israel, not Judah. "And I will not have mercy upon her children, for they be the children of whoredoms." (ii, 4.)

Now look at verse 14: "Therefore behold I will allure her, and bring her into the wilderness, and speak comfortably unto her." What? speak comfortably to her who is likened to a bad woman? Yes! It means even that! "And I will give her her vineyards from thence, and the valley of Achor for a door of hope, and she shall sing there, as in the days of her youth, and as in the day when she came up out of the land of Egypt." Could anything be more delightful?

Digitized by Google

Another instance from the same chapter: "Plead with your mother, plead: for she is not My wife, neither am I her husband." There is the rebuke, the punishment. Now listen to the blessing in the same chapter, verses 16-18:

"And it shall be at that day, saith the Lord, that thou shalt call Me Ishi: " (margin "MY HUSBAND.") . . . "And I will betroth thee unto Me for ever: yea, I will betroth thee unto Me in righteousness, and in judgment, and in loving kindness, and in mercies."

Again in the same chapter (verse 11) rebuke and chastisement: "I will also cause all her mirth to cease, her feast days, her new moons, and her sabbaths, and all her solemn feasts."

Now look at the blessing (verse 20): "I will even betroth thee unto Me in faithfulness, and thou shalt know the Lord."

Again, look at verse 13: "And I will visit upon her the days of Baalim, wherein she burned incense to them." There is the punishment. Now look at the blessing:

"And it shall be at that day, saith the Lord, that thou . . . shalt call Me no more Baali" (they had been idolaters) "for I will take away the names of Baalim out of her mouth."

God is going to put an end to her idolatry. But there is further blessing yet. "And in that day will I make a covenant FOR THEM with the beasts of the field, and with the fowls of heaven, and with the creeping things of the ground; and I will break the bow, and the sword, and the battle out of the earth" (here is the end of war, and it is done for Israel's sake) "and will make them to lie down safely." (Verses 16-18.) Note it is "For them."

Is there reproach? It is swiftly followed by loving kindness.

Is there rebuke or punishment? It is mixed with forgiveness and even blessing.

Is there a momentary hiding of the face? It is immediately followed by the gathering of them in great mercy.

Take another example from the same chapter. "And she shall follow after her lovers, but she shall not overtake them: and she shall seek them, but shall not find them." There is the rebuke, now listen to the blessing in the same verse: "Then shall she say, I will go and return to my first husband; for then was it better with me than now." (Verse 7.)

And that very same chapter finishes most delightfully, showing a double contrast in the one verse: "And I will have mercy upon her that had not obtained mercy; and I will say to them which were not My people, Thou art My people; and they shall say, Thou art My God."

You have there God acknowledging Israel's sins (not Judah's in this instance); and even punishing Israel for them, but nevertheless heaping forgiveness and blessing upon them wholly undeserved. Take for instance from Isaiah liv, 8: "In a little wrath I hid My face from thee for a moment" (there is the rebuke, now for the blessing) "but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the Lord thy Redeemer."

Moses said of Old Israel, "Ye have been rebellious against the Lord from the day that I knew you." (Deut. ix, 24.)

Over 860 years later than Moses, God says of Israel almost the same words. They were terrible on the lips of Moses, how much more on God's! Here they are: "For the children of Israel, and the children of Judah have only done evil before Me from their youth. . . . For this city hath been to Me as a provocation of Mine anger and of My fury from the day that they built it even unto this day. . . . And they have turned unto Me the back and not the face. . . . And they built the high places of Baal." A fearful indictment, and it is against both Houses.

But now look at the next verse but one, and notice the anger and wrath fade away into mercy, forgiveness and blessing!

"Behold, I will gather them out of all countries, whither I have driven them in Mine anger, and in My fury, and in great wrath;" (there you have the rebuke, the punishment) "And I will bring them again unto this place. . . . And they shall be My people, and I will be their God; And I will give them one heart and one way, that they may fear Me for ever, for the good of them and of their children after them. And I will make an everlasting covenant with them, that I will not turn away from them. . . . But I will put My fear in their hearts that they shall not depart from Me.

"Yea, I will rejoice over them, to do them good," (What? the people of the anger, and the fury, and the wrath? Yes, the very same people) "and I will plant them in this land assuredly with My whole heart and with My whole soul."

And to make sure it is the very same people God goes on to say:

"For thus saith the Lord: Like as I have brought all this great evil upon this people, so will I bring upon them all the good that I have promised them." (Jer. xxxii, 30-42.)

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER.

DEAR SIR,

I have read with much interest Dr. Gornold's letter pointing out an error made in an address by the Rev. J. Lumley Davies, L.D., "in ascribing a pre-Adamic date to Chaldean archives without statement of belief in the existence of a race of men prior to that date," and the Rev. J. Lumley Davies' reply thereto, in which he states at the end of his letter that the "period questioned by Dr. Gornold is that from Adam to Abraham." Whereas Dr. Gornold makes it quite clear that the period in question is that prior to Adam. Any light which can be thrown upon this pre-Adamic period is most useful and helpful to Bible students, as this period is now much more discussed than it used to be, and there are many people who consider that there was a race of men prior to Adam but not considered to have been upon the same spiritual plane in that Adam was the first man to have the Spirit of God breathed into him, and his descendants are now often referred to as the "sons of God" in distinction to the "sons of men." I thoroughly agree with the Rev. J. Lumley Davies that the question does not touch British-Israel Truth, but Light and Truth upon these more difficult passages is all to the good where it can be given; just as scientists are giving testimony to the accuracy of the accounts of Jonah and the Whale and the Flood (cf. Morning Post, February 6th).

I am, Sir, yours faithfully,

A. G. COPELAND.

Apropos of the period indicated by the Rev. Lumley Davies back to about 4600 B.C., see Leonard Woolley in his book entitled "The Sumerians" remarks, among other things, as follows:—

"For the purpose of chronology, therefore, figures given by the scribes have to be checked and modified by such outside information as is available, and this on so generous a scale that the date of about 4600 B.C., which the sum of their figures would ascribe to the first dynasty of Ur, must be brought down to about 3100 B.C." (Pages 28 and 29.)

Digitized by Google

This would seem to bring the period referred to by the Rev. Lumley Davies to 900 years after Adam instead of 600 years before.

Regarding the matter of pre-Adamite men: it is impossible by the most careful study of the text to assign any date or any time calculated by any standard we know to the first chapter of Genesis.

It is impossible to say whether the creation of man in chapter one coincides with the formation of Adam in chapter two. If there were human inhabitants on the earth prior to Adam, it is impossible to tell by the reading of the text of the narrative whether any survived to the time of Adam. True there is a statement "and there was not a man to till the ground," but this very probably referred to the agriculturalist type as against the non-agriculturalist hunter type.

There is no reason to think that the terms "sons of God" and "daughters of men" have any different meaning in Genesis than they have in, for instance, the first Epistle general of John. It is the writer's opinion that the Seth descent—that is to say, the "appointed seed" (for Seth means "appointed")—are termed "the sons of God," whose genealogy is traced as follows:—God; Adam; Seth; etc. On the other hand, the descent of Cain is not so recorded in the genealogical table, and are "the sons of men."

In the first Epistle general of John "the sons of God" are those who have experienced what Our Lord indicated to Nicodemus as "a birth from above" as contrasted with those who have not obtained that experience, such are "the sons of men."

It is wise for us to say, in the face of certain questions, "I do not know." There seems to be no certain answer thus far to our enquiries in this direction. It is the writer's opinion, and that of outstanding scientists of his acquaintance, that no discovery as yet made in regard to the human family requires a higher date than 4000 B.C.

It will be well for our minds to be open to receive real proof, but it will also be wise for us to reject any man or any school's speculation.—ED.]

BIBLICAL NUMBERS.

To the Editor of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER.

SIR,—In a recent article in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE there was an interesting note on the numbers 153 and 666, but I would venture to disagree with the writer on his interpretation of the former figure. It appears to represent Israel in rebellion, and its recurrence in the Prayer Book controversy is thus very appropriate. It should be noted that the 153 great fishes, or at least some of them, were cooked and eaten (John xvi,9 ff).

Far more significant for Israel in Britain are the figures 531, a permutation of 153. They are the number of Elijah, which in its alternative spelling of Elihu yields 31416, the pi-ratio. Thus 531 is a glyph for the pi-ratio, which is also the number of ELOHIM. Most British-Israelites are aware of the significant facts that the War started on the 216th (6×6×6) day and the 8th (.666... of a year) month, and was stopped by the merciful Providence of God exactly on the 314.16th day; but some may not have realized that 666 also appears as 180 (10×three 6's), and the square root of 180 is 13.416..., a curious inversion of the pi-ratio, and so doubly marked as satanic. This inversion appears specially to mark Eastern opponents of Christianity, such as Mr. Krishnamurti and the famous King Asoka. In the West the enemies of Israel come out nakedly, with 666—look at the wavelengths of Rome and Moscow, each 666 kilocycles!

Much more might be written of the wonderful numerology of the Bible, and its efficacy in confounding the "Old-Testament-a-myth" school of critics. Indeed, I feel that here is a subject worthy of the prayerful attention of all who value the Bible as it should be valued. I would conclude with one more beautiful instance of symbolism. The wall of the Holy City is 144 cubits (Rev. xxi, 17); turn this into BRITISH feet and we have 31416—ELOHIM—GOD. The God of Israel in Britain is their Wall and Defence.

RUNDELL MANLEY, M.A.

DEAR SIR,—In reply to the above, Mr. Manley is, I think, incorrect in stating that some of the fishes were cooked and eaten. A careful study of this miracle, especially in the Greek, shows that the whole meal consisted of the one small fish and a loaf. Our Lord was repeating in miniature the miracle of the 5,000, in feeding His seven disciples on this scanty breakfast. The proofs of this view are too lengthy to give here, but a book of mine is now in the press, a chapter of which is devoted to this point. I call it "the miracle of the little fish."

Yours faithfully,
CYRIL C. DOBSON.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

BY THE REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A.

QUESTION.—I hold a weekly B.-I. Class, and I was asked the other day about "surnames." There are none in the Bible. How did we get our surnames?—M. B. M. (Hants).

ANSWER.—The word "name" probably comes from an Aryan form "Gnaman," meaning "name," or designation by which a person or thing is known. This Aryan word comes from the root GNA, to know, showing how we get the letter "k" in "know." This initial k or g is lost in all but Latin (nomen for gnomen, cf. cognomen; literally, co-gnomen, not cog-nomen; i-gnominia, not ig-nominia). The Greek is ὄνομα, and the Sanskrit, naman; Anglo-Saxon, nama; German, name. Thus the word is common to all Indo-European languages.

The history of personal names is both long and complex, due chiefly to the complexity of human character, and to the gradual process of tangling and disentangling the threads of varied human interest. The oldest personal names are those indicative not of individuals but of groups held or banded together by the conscious sense of kindred or of convenience. For example, it has been shown that upon an examination of customs widely prevalent in Asia, Africa, Australia and America, groups thinking themselves to be of the same kin originally are generally styled by the name of some animal or object (animate or inanimate) from which they claim their descent. This object is known as the "Totem," and should be studied further under the interesting subject of "Totemism."

Examples may be found in Greek and Roman civilization, and extensively in Europe among the Teutonic peoples, and also the Anglo-Saxons (see Kemble's Saxons in England), as illustrated by the name Ethelwulf, which means "Noble Wolf." It is quite impossible here to give the meanings of Christian names, owing to the vast number of them. But examples may be taken of one or two. Alfred is probably Old German, meaning "elf in council." Frederick is Old High German, meaning "abounding in peace" or "peaceful river." On the other hand there is a possible chance that Alfred comes from the Greek Alpha or the Hebrew Aleph (the first letter in the alphabet), thus signifying that which is first or princely. William is pre-Norman and Old High German, meaning "resolute helmet." John is Hebrew, meaning "gracious gift of God" (feminine, Joan, Joanna, Jane). Ethel is Anglo-Saxon (cf. Adelina), meaning "noble." Gladys is the Welsh (British) form of Claudia (Claudius), a Latin name meaning "lame." Harold is Anglo-Saxon, meaning "champion." Dorothea or Dorothy is from the Greek, meaning "gift of God," while Dora means "gift." The reverse of Dorothy is Theodore, meaning the same, but masculine.

Surnames (from the French, surnom, "name in addition") have frequently very obvious origins, associated with descriptions, trades, environment, or even geographical localities. Brown is evidently descriptive of colour; Jones is a patronymic, and a contraction of Johnson, meaning "son of John"; Robinson is probably totemistic (see above), and means "son of Robin." Smith is Anglo-Saxon and Old High German (possibly from the Greek for "knife") and means an artificer—one who forges with the hammer, or works in metals (cf. blacksmith, goldsmith, silversmith, etc.; cf. also 1 Sam. xiii, 19). Tyler is one who makes tiles; cf. in history Wat the Tyler, hence Wat Tyler.

Several well-known surnames are Hebrew in origin. Cohen means "priest." Lawrence is from Lazarus. Brahms from Abrahamson. Moss comes from Moses. James comes from Jacob, meaning "supplanter" (here it may be added that Jack means John, not James). Bartholomew is the Hebrew for "a war-like son," etc., etc.

Several English names and surnames come from the Greek. Thus Philip means "a lover of horses." Philips is a patronymic of the same, meaning "son of Philip." Peter means "a rock," with Peters as its patronymic. Jerome comes from the Greek for "Holy Name." Basil means "royal or kingly." Christopher means "bearing Christ." Perhaps the most interesting of all names is George, which means in Greek "husbandman" (cf. John xv, 1).

The Israelites did not have surnames; their names were either simple or compound. Of simple names, several were names of animals, thus, Deborah ("bee"); Tola ("worm"); Nahash ("serpent"); Huldah ("weasel"); Caleb ("dog"); Rachel ("ewe"); Gaal ("beetle"), etc., etc. Others were names of trees, thus, Tamar ("palm-tree"); Elah ("terebinth" or "oak-tree"), etc.

Of compound names the most numerous are those names compounded with Yah (i.e., Yahweh=Jehovah), such as Joshua, Jeremiah, Jehosophat, Jonathan, Jochebed, etc. But the earliest are names compounded with "ab" ("father"), "ah" ("brother"), "amm" ("kinsman"), "El" ("god"); thus, Abigal, Abishag, Ahijah, Hiel, Amminadab, Ammiel, Eliab, Elijah, Elias, Elkanah, etc., etc.

But of so gigantic a subject more cannot here be written, although it opens up a wide field for interesting investigation.

EXETER BRANCH.

THE weekly meeting of the above Branch of the British-Israel-World Federation was held in the Y.M.C.A. Lounge, Mr. Walburn presiding, when Rev. L. G. A. Roberts, Com. R.N., gave a very interesting lecture. One of the special features of his address was the important reconciliation of the Italian Monarchy with the Pope, closing a breach after 59 years of opposition. All depended upon the next step. If he exalted himself under his Papal infallibility his doom was near. Synchronous with the fall of Babylon was the drying-up of the Euphrates, that the way of the kings from the East might be prepared. The lecturer showed that God's suppliants were a Christian nation, as in Isa. lxii. "The daughters of my dispersed" were Israelites now in the British Islands, and answering to Isa. xviii. He especially called attention to Rev. Chas. Forster's "A New Key to the Discovery of the Lost Ten Tribes," where the Afghans are set forth by several writers as a portion of the dispersed of Israel. The names of their clans or tribes are significant. The clan of Solomon, the clan of David, the clan of Saul, the clan of Moses, the clan of Joseph, etc. The southern hills are called "the Mountains of Solomon," and the highest peak "the Throne of Solomon." Originally they were ruled by a descendant from Solomon, and the tradition still held good. They did not eat pork, and many of their laws and customs were purely Hebrew.

The lecturer gave two independent proofs that a portion of these people came north-west into Spain and Britain, whilst the other portion went south-east, and, as Dr. George Moore proved in his "Saxons East and West," they were our kinsmen. From Abyssinia and Afghanistan trouble came, and Britain must politically defends both peoples. If Britain did not defend Afghanistan from the threatened encroachments of Russia, then woe to the peace of the Mandated Countries of the East. British policy in the East was the key to the future peace of the world.—Express and Echo.

John Richard Green, the historian. said:—"In the centuries that lie before us the primacy of the world will remain with the British people. Britain has never been able to free herself from a sense that her business in the world is to seek peace alike for herself and for the nations about her."

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

THE REV. PASCOE GOARD gave a valuable address on the Prophecies of Daniel at Headquarters on March 6th, and the Rev. Gregory Bestall gave his interesting lantern lecture on Ceylon on March 7th.

We are glad to say that Mr. John Leech, K.C., has now recovered from his illness, and that he will (D.V.) give the first of his series of Prophetic Lectures at H.Q. on Wednesday afternoon next, March 20th, at 3 o'clock. The Rev. Chas. W. Cooper, F.G.S., will give the address on Thursday evening next, at 7.30.

The Rev. R. G. F. Waddington, M.A., reports excellent work in the North in spite of severe weather and prevailing illness. He has visited many centres, and he has several lectures booked before Easter. He speaks in the highest terms of the good work of Mr. Wm. Whitton in the Sheffield district. He says that the Rev. Merton Smith is to visit Bradford, Bingley, Harrogate, Halifax and Ilkley from March 16th to 22nd.

We are much indebted to Miss Violet Reed for kindly sending us a set of "Young Israel's Standard," the magazine carried on some years ago by the late Miss Brooke, with the exception of one number—that for September, 1913. Perhaps some kind friend can favour us with a copy of this issue, so that the set may be quite complete and bound up for our Library.

Our beloved veteran, the Rev. Commander Roberts, R.N., has given a series of lectures in Devonshire, and has aroused much interest among the population in Exeter, Teignmouth, Newton Abbot, Paignton, etc. He is also giving a series of Lenten services at Teignmouth.

The subject, "The Story of the British Empire," was ably and interestingly dealt with by Mr. Yoxall at Liverpool on February 28th.

Miss Hamilton Hunter gave four addresses to the Dublin Branch on February 27th and 28th, each making a deep impression; but especially so the one on "The Redemption of the Nation Israel." Miss Hunter appealed for increased support for our Movement. The attendances were splendid.

On March 6th the Highgate Branch again had the pleasure of a lecture from Miss Hamilton Hunter. The latter part of the meeting was given to the enrolment of members, Mr. McKelvey, of Stratford, very kindly volunteeering to act as President until such time as the Branch is well established. A call is made for members, particularly for those who desire to take an active part in the strenuous fight for the Lord's work.

Rev. Pascoe Goard is receiving a number of letters from practical men discussing the kind of furnace, and the form of it, mentioned in the article dealing with the Image of Gold into which the three Hebrew men were cast.

This is as we would have it. Rev. Pascoe Goard does not claim to be an expert on furnaces. His desire was to bring home the actuality of the furnace out of the clouds with which modern criticism has enveloped the whole narrative; and also to show the significance of the presence of the furnace there.

If we can get to a correct realization that we are not attending a moving picture exhibition of plays, but are being presented with historic facts in pictorial form when we read the Book of Daniel, it will be nothing short of a triumph on the side of the veritable truth of the Scriptures.

In the meantime we hope that some competent engineer will throw more light on the matter. Postulating the facts, that Nebuchadnezzar's image was of metal; that there was then at Babylon that great supply of brass which came from the pillars of Solomon's Temple, which brass was carried to Babylon; and that we read in Jeremiah xxvii, 19–22 (see also 2 Kings xxv, 13) that the same brass will be brought back again at last to Jerusalem; also that such Temple metals were kept separate from ordinary secular use even in Babylon (witness the sacred vessels of the Temple); and that the probable manner of using the brass, and at the same time preserving from secular use, would be to cast it into the form of such an image. The same use would be more than probable for the gold taken from the Temple, which would cover the pedestal and form the image.

What kind of furnace would be used by the ancient metal workers to "run" such a great amount of brass, and to pour it into the moulds prepared? Probably the furnace and the moulds were an unit, so that out of the crucible the molten metals would flow directly into the moulds. Probably such a casting would not be duplicated.

Note the following extraordinary conclusions and inconsistencies of some of the opponents to British-Israel:—

1. That a mixed fraction of one or two tribes is equal to the whole twelve tribes of Israel. Or, that the modern "Jews," representing only the 47,000 returned exiles from Babylon, with later incorporations of Persians (Esther viii, 17), Edomites (see Josephus, Ant. xiii, 9), and, for centuries, of multitudes alien in race and blood to the race of Israel, are the lineal and legitimate descendants and covenant heirs of all the "House of Isaac," the "House of Israel," the "House of Joseph," and the "House of Judah," of Bible History and Prophecy!

2. That this scattered non-Christian sect, of some 14 millions all told, without a country or national cohesion, with no political or military organization, is to conquer and possess Palestine, and rule the world; overshadowing and superseding the Anglo-Saxon race and the European nations, and all this as the proper fruit and triumph of the Christian dispensation!

3. That the House of Israel "called in Isaac," and endowed with the sworn Covenant promises (Gen. xxii), whose birthright blessings dying Israel bequeathed to Joseph's two sons, with Ephraim as the firstborn, and which continued under special Divine teaching and training for 1,000 years, suddenly became extinct after the Assyrian expulsion from Palestine, leaving no trace of its former existence, or continuity of its national life and mission; and that although God had declared in the most solemn manner that He would not destroy Ephraim, but that it should "revive as the corn and grow as the vine, and be as Lebanon"! (Hosea xi and xiv.)

4. That David's Throne, which by God's "faithful oath" was to be "built up from generation to generation" (Ps. lxxxix, 4), and which by Gabriel's message was confirmed to Our Lord as a gift from the Father, as in the words of Luke i, 32, has utterly perished. That, in like manner, Israel, notwithstanding the "New Covenant" made with it in Christ, has "ceased from being a nation"; and that, consequently, if the Bible be true, the sun, moon and stars have been blotted out, notwithstanding ocular demonstration to the contrary! (See Jeremiah xxxi, 31-37, and Heb. viii, 8-13.)

5. That the unchangeable Jehovah has transferred the precise Covenant promises and blessings which He so exclusively gave to a seed who should come "out of the loins of Abraham," which was to be "called in Isaac," to "come out of Jacob," and of the birthright fullness of which, by strict Covenant, Ephraim and Manasseh were made heirs-in-chief by dying Israel, to non-Israelite Japhetic or Hamitic peoples, without any reference to His sworn Covenant engagements!

6. That we can "with meek heart and due reverence," or rather without profanity and presumption, solemnly appear before God continually in our National public worship and service, in the words of our liturgy, and call ourselves God's "Chosen People," "The Sheep of His Pasture," "His Inheritance"; adopt without reservation Israel's Canticles and Psalms, plead Israel's special and exclusive promises, celebrate Israel's three solemn feasts in their promised Christian fulfilment to Israel; or the Sacraments of Israel's New Covenant; invoke on every married pair the Covenant blessing of "The God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob," and hold out to each family, thus united in Israelite bonds, the prospect of "Seeing Peace upon Israel," and generally in all our Services put ourselves before Jehovah in the exact position and attitude of "the remnant of the true Israelites," and claim all their special endowments and blessings; while at the same time repudiating entirely our racial family consanguinity; nay, denying that the true and literal children have any part or lot in these Divine promises made to them, or, in fact, exist at all!

A Minister of the United Free Church in Scotland writes to the Rev. Pascoe Goard:—

"I am very greatly indebted to you for the parcel of books which you so kindly sent me last week. They will be of the highest value. From week to week I have greatly enjoyed and profited by your articles in The National Message and Banner, and it is a real joy to have so many of these articles in book form. You may rely upon my studying them with most interested care.

"I have always been grateful to our mutual friend, Mr. W. B. Wallace, of this city, for introducing me to the study of British-Israel Truth—it has been at once fascinating and illuminating, and I have taken opportunities of referring to it to my congregation. I had really intended to try to attend the last Congress in London in October, but I was very seriously ill when the time came round, and am only now recovering. But all the weeks I lay in bed Friday mornings were rich when I had your weekly paper to study and digest. I am hoping, if health and funds permit, to put in an appearance at your meetings next October, as I am really being driven by all logical study of the Scriptures to see that in B.-I. Truth there is not merely The Truth, but a great and soul-stirring message that can make the pulpit live.

"You may remember that on the occasion of your last visit to Glasgow you occupied my pulpit here; that visit is recalled with pleasure by my congregation, and if at any other time you should be in our city it will be a great privilege to have you with us again.

"With many thanks, and with all good wishes,

"Sincerely yours."

Great Britain Great

BY

PROFESSOR E. ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc., F.R.G.S., F.R.C.Inst.

Somewhere there is to-day a mighty Kingdom in "The Isles," a great "Coloniser," a wonderful "Lender to the Nations," a mighty "Battle-axe" and "Weapons of War," "A New Sharp Threshing Instrument," a grinding, smashing "Stone Kingdom," a Holder of "The Gate of His Enemies," ruled over by the "Seed of David," a spreader of the "Scriptures of Truth," the protector of weak nations. . . . Somewhere in this world there is a Nation which is God's Old Israel, which was, and is, to endure while the "Sun, moon and ordinances of heaven endure."

The situation of that mighty Kingdom to-day Professor Odlum indicates by the sayings and writings of many prominent men who have written or spoken concerning the British Empire. These opinions, the majority of which were expressed by men of nations other than our own, all point to the conclusion that the only nations conforming to every detail of this description are the British Empire and America.

HOTCHKISS

Although resembling Peter Pan, in that it is always full of life and vivacity, it cannot be said that Hotchkiss has not grown up.

Always the leader in everything, Hotchkiss has reached a stage when motoring critics are forced to agree that the Hotchkiss is a "perfect job" from an æsthetic as well as an engineering view point—youthful in performance—old in experience.

Hotchkiss has always been a favourite but the new six-cylinder model is destined to become as popular with motorists as Peter Pan is with children.

THE DOCUMENTS OF DANIEL.—X.

By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard.

The Organization of the Medo-Persian Empire.

Document VI. (Daniel vi.) Date: Ussher 537 B.C.

We have now come to an epoch in ancient history which marked the end of the Babylon, or head of gold, Empire.

This was an important time in history for the ancient world. Mark this:—It was not simply the passing of one dynasty to give place to another. It was the passing away of an Empire, and of a system of law by which that Empire was governed.

Babylon was an unlimited autocracy.

Medo-Persia was a limited monarchy.

When the Medo-Persian system came into vogue, as we are now to see, the LAWS OF THE MEDES AND PERSIANS, WHICH ALTER NOT, came into force automatically.

What this means we Anglo-Saxons know well. For wherever the British or the American flag is unfurled over a country, there goes into operation automatically THE COMMON LAW.

That the laws of the Medes and Persians, which alter not, were stronger than the will of the king is illustrated most clearly in the chapter before us. Thus Darius, the new king of Babylon, having once made and promulgated a decree, could not change its operation, although the king "set his heart on Daniel to deliver him; and he laboured till the going down of the sun to deliver him." But he failed to do so. He failed because the laws of the Medes and Persians were stronger than the will of the king.

This was a more important change in the Empire than was the change of dynasty.

Moreover, there was a change in the status of religion in the land. The worship of the "God of Daniel" was established by an unchangeable decree, as a law of the Medes and Persians, which alters not.

> "Then King Darius wrote unto all people, nations, and languages, that dwell in all the earth; Peace be multiplied unto you.
> I make a decree, That in every dominion of my kingdom men tremble and fear before the God of Daniel: for he is the living God, and stedfast for ever, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed, and his dominion shall be even unto the end.
>
> He delivereth and rescueth, and he worketh signs and wonders in heaven and in earth, who hath delivered Daniel from the power of the lions.
> So this Daniel prospered in the reign of Darius, and in the reign of Cyrus the Persian." (Daniel vi, 25-28.)

Thus the worship of the true God was established in the land, by unchanging law. Is this the beginning of the Zoroastrian religion?

The Babylonian organization was taken over by Darius as a going concern. The forces of the Medes and Persians had been used against the kingdom and city of Babylon in such a manner as to preserve the kingdom organization. Secular history tells us that the attacking force was not a large one for such an enterprise. Against such a city as Babylon they might wear themselves out until they were compelled by circumstances to retreat whence they came. Such seems to have been the opinion of Belshazzar, and of his lords, as they feasted within the mighty defences of the city. But the prophecy of Isaiah to Cyrus was fulfilled, and "the two leaved gates " which guarded the river entrance were opened for the invaders, the river having been temporarily turned from its course, leaving the dry bed as a broad way by which Darius, or Gobryas, and his troops should enter in.

" In that night was Belshazzar the king of the Chaldeans slain."

" And Darius the Median took the kingdom."

The scholar will ask as to the historicity of Darius. He will remember the things which have been written and the doubt which has surrounded this person named Darius in the Bible, but not so named in the extant translated inscriptions covering that period of Babylon history. It is therefore well that we should look at the facts which are known from secular sources.

It is clear that Babylon was captured in the sudden manner indicated by the Bible. This is made clear by ancient historians and by the inscriptions.

It is known that the commander of the forces which took Babylon was one who is called Gobryas.

It is known that this Gobryas became king of Babylon.

The text before us tells us that Darius the Mede took the kingdom.

It is known that when men attained the kingdom it was the custom for such men to take a kingly name upon their accession. The monuments having taken up the story of Gobryas BEFORE the conquest of Babylon, continue to refer to him by the same name in the few references made. Daniel names the king for the first time after his accession to the kingdom by his kingly title, DARIUS.

Again, this man who " took the kingdom " was named in Media, Gobryas ; Daniel gives to him his Babylonian name, Darius. It can be well shown that kings bore different names in different countries. Professor R. D. Wilson, in his " Studies in the Book of Daniel," says (pp. 138 and 139) : " When Tiglath Pileser was proclaimed king of Babylon, and the other Assyrian kings who adopted a similar policy to his, they often ruled in Babylon under names different from those which they had as kings of Assyria. Thus Tiglath Pileser IV of Assyria was Pul of Babylon. Shalmaneser III, king of Assyria, was Ululai, king of Babylon ; and Ashurbanipal, king of Assyria, was possibly Kandalanu, king of Babylon."

Apparently both names, Gobryas and Darius, carried an indication of rank and authority in meaning, and so the change was the logical result of the promotion.

It seems to be the established fact that while Gobryas acted as commander-in-chief until the city was taken, he thereafter acted as governor, or king, under the supreme rule of Cyrus, the king of Persia, after the city was conquered. Or this position may be modified by joint kingship. So during the life of Darius it is " the Medes and Persians." Afterwards it is simply " Persia."

The position of Cyrus and his relationship to Gobryas-Darius is probably well illustrated by the relative position of the late Emperor of Germany and the King of Saxony, and the other kings of the Germanic States. These kings ruled subject to the superior dignity of the Emperor of Germany. So Darius and Cyrus were contemporary. Cyrus ruled as " king of lands," Darius as " king of Babylon under him."

For a full discussion concerning this, with ample bibliography, see " Studies in the Book of Daniel," by Professor R. D. Wilson.

We now return to the chapter before us.

" It pleased Darius to set over the kingdom an hundred and twenty princes, which should be over the whole kingdom ;

" And over these three presidents ; of whom Daniel was first : that the princes might give accounts unto them, and the king should have no damage.

" Then this Daniel was preferred above the presidents and princes, because an excellent spirit was in him ; and the king thought to set him over the whole realm."

This is important, as showing the perfection of the organization of the Empire upon the accession of the silver phase of its development in history. Daniel is seen to be the premier of the newly-organized government. It is manifest that he entered upon his duties with a firm hand, an experienced mind, and an " excellent spirit." This meant that corruption, speculation and " graft " were vigorously suppressed.

Naturally in ancient times, as in modern times, this brought about political intrigue for the unseating of the all too strict economist at the head of the administration.

Nothing offered in the political field by which to entrap or on which to formulate a charge against Daniel. His wisdom spurned their traps ; his integrity was proof against their slander. Neither could the law be changed to suit the condition. There remained one line of attack, namely, through a new king, inexperienced in administration of a large kingdom. As a compliment to him it was suggested that no petition should be offered to any other person, neither deity nor man, but to the king alone, for the space indicated in the text.

Accepting the proposal as a compliment, and failing to see the snare, the inexperienced king signed the writing, which, by the laws of the Medes and Persians, was unalterable.

The delegation left the royal presence, smiling and satisfied, knowing that the Hebrew premier would not suspend his devotions on any account whatsoever. Spies were set upon his motions, which he did not seek to hide, and evidence was forthcoming that he disregarded the new law, and, therefore, by the law was inevitably doomed to the den of lions.

The king endeavoured to interpose by the use of his prerogative, but found that he had not any prerogative in the case.

He laboured hard to find a way to evade the law which he had rashly signed, but found no way to do so.

Now comes the strange confession of faith, that the God of Daniel would deliver him from the lions. As later the Lord was led away to crucifixion against the judgment and will of Pilate, so Daniel was led away against the will of Darius the king ; but he was followed by the assurance of the king's faith in Divine protection from him.

In the early morning the king went to the den of lions, and, the law having been fulfilled, called Daniel forth.

Nothing prevented his executing his authority in condemnation of those who had intrigued against Daniel's life, and he commanded that they should be cast into the den from which they had no hope of Divine rescue.

The text of the above is so graphic and important that we shall quote it here :—

" Then the presidents and princes sought to find occasion against Daniel concerning the kingdom; but they could find none occasion nor fault; forasmuch as he was faithful, neither was there any error or fault found in him.

Then said these men, We shall not find any occasion against this Daniel, except we find it against him concerning the law of his God.

Then these presidents and princes assembled together to the king, and said thus unto him, King Darius, live for ever.

All the presidents of the kingdom, the governors, and the princes, the counsellors, and the captains, have consulted together to establish a royal statute, and to make a firm decree, that whosoever shall ask a petition of any God or man for thirty days, save of thee, O king, he shall be cast into the den of lions.

Now, O king, establish the decree, and sign the writing, that it be not changed, according to the law of the Medes and Persians, which altereth not.

Wherefore king Darius signed the writing and the decree.

Now when Daniel knew that the writing was signed, he went into his house; and his windows being open in his chamber toward Jerusalem, he kneeled upon his knees three times a day, and prayed, and gave thanks before his God, as he did aforetime.

Then these men assembled, and found Daniel praying and making supplication before his God.

Then they came near, and spake before the king concerning the king's decree; Hast thou not signed a decree, that every man that shall ask a petition of any God or man within thirty days, save of thee, O king, shall be cast into the den of lions? The king answered and said, The thing is true, according to the law of the Medes and Persians, which altereth not.

Then answered they and said before the king, That Daniel, which is of the children of the captivity of Judah, regardeth not thee, O king, nor the decree that thou hast signed, but maketh his petition three times a day.

Then the king, when he heard these words, was sore displeased with himself, and set his heart on Daniel to deliver him: and he laboured till the going down of the sun to deliver him.

Then these men assembled unto the king, and said unto the king, Know, O king, that the law of the Medes and Persians is, That no decree nor statute which the king establisheth may be changed.

Then the king commanded, and they brought Daniel, and cast him into the den of lions. Now the king spake and said unto Daniel, Thy God whom thou servest continually, he will deliver thee.

And a stone was brought, and laid upon the mouth of the den; and the king sealed it with his own signet, and with the signet of his lords; that the purpose might not be changed concerning Daniel.

Then the king went to his palace, and passed the night fasting: neither were instruments of musick brought before him: and his sleep went from him.

Then the king arose very early in the morning, and went in haste unto the den of lions.

And when he came to the den, he cried with a lamentable voice unto Daniel: and the king spake and said to Daniel, O Daniel, servant of the living God, is thy God, whom thou servest continually, able to deliver thee from the lions?

Then said Daniel unto the king, O king, live for ever.

My God hath sent his angel, and hath shut the lions' mouths, that they have not hurt me: forasmuch as before him innocency was found in me; and also before thee, O king, have I done no hurt.

Then was the king exceeding glad for him, and commanded that they should take Daniel up out of the den. So Daniel was taken up out of the den, and no manner of hurt was found upon him, because he believed in his God.

And the king commanded, and they brought those men which had accused Daniel, and they cast them into the den of lions, them, their children, and their wives; and the lions had the mastery of them, and brake all their bones in pieces or ever they came at the bottom of the den." (Daniel vi, 4-24.)

Thus at the beginning of the history of the silver phase of the Babylon succession God manifested Himself as still active in the affairs of Babylon.

The great importance of the foregoing lies in the fact that it led up to a decree on the part of Darius which, by the laws of the Medes and Persians, could never be altered as long as the Medo-Persian Empire endured, establishing the worship of the God of Daniel in the kingdom.

It is impossible to over-estimate the importance of this decree promulgated throughout the kingdom. It precluded persecution of Israelites and Jews because of their worship of Jehovah. What influence it had in establishing the Zoroastrian faith, which was in line with the teaching of Daniel, furnishes a very interesting field of enquiry.

It is certain that Zoroastrianism rose and spread about that period, and from that centre; and a similar faith was preached by Siddartha or Buddha (the lion of the Saxons) in India and the Far East.

This decree closes the wonderful series of national documents contained in chapters ii, iii, iv, v and vi.

We have now come to the end of what may be termed either Book I or Part I of Daniel.

At this late date, and in view of present knowledge, there seems no good reason for dividing the literature of Isaiah into two Books: as a matter of fact, it is a Book of many national songs or "burdens," each of which is distinct from the other. The character of the message contained in the last division, namely, the message to Israel in the Isles, is of such a different nature as to have given rise to the explanation of different authorship. We now know this view was not well founded.

But in the Daniel literature, while the authorship is one, there is good reason for dividing Daniel into Part I and Part II, or Book I or Book II. We have been reading through Part I and have come to its end.

It will be noticed that chapters ii, iii, iv, v and vi have reference directly to the kings of Babylon; Daniel's part in these messages was incidental. Chapter ii was a message direct from God to Nebuchadnezzar, Daniel being the interpreter. Chapter iii is the record of an organization instituted by Nebuchadnezzar, in connection with which God interfered visibly and historically and miraculously to reverse the action of the king. In this event Daniel bore no part, but his three associates were involved in it, and were delivered from the furnace, having been honoured by the manifestation of their Deliverer, Who joined them in the fire. Chapter iv is again a direct message to Nebuchadnezzar, with Daniel as interpreter. Chapter v is the record of a function organized by Belshazzar, at which God directly interfered by the writing of the words of doom of which Daniel was the interpreter. Chapter vi shows the progress of an intrigue which entangled both Darius, the king of Babylon, and Daniel, in which God directly interfered, delivering both the king and Daniel and overwhelming those who intrigued against Himself and Daniel.

In all this there is no prophetic message of the ordinary kind : but rather historic record of normal, albeit superhuman, events. Daniel is rather the Ambassador of God at the Court of the king than the prophet of God who gives forth messages originating with himself from the human standpoint. When we get back to the knowledge that the manifested presence of God in national and world affairs is not miraculous but normal, the Book of Daniel and all the Bible will live for us. It is our knowledge, more than our faith, which is dead.

But now the function of Ambassador is finished as far as this Daniel literature is concerned : henceforth from chapter vii to the end of the Book Daniel takes up the role of prophet, not sent with a message to any specific person, but giving forth his message to Israel and the world, which message should be incorporated in the canon of the sacred Scriptures as prophecies, and so preserved and continued to the end of time.

In our next issue we shall take up the study of Part II of the Book of Daniel, which, in the widest sense, is general prophetic literature.

"HATH GOD CAST AWAY HIS PEOPLE?"—(Rom. xi, 1.)—II.

[Reading : Romans ix, 1-16 and xi, 1-12].

By A. FACET.

WHEN Abram offered Isaac his heir, God made further promises, but this time unconditional because of his faith (Gen. xxii, 16-18) :

"By myself have I sworn, saith the Lord, for because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son :

That in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore ; and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies ;

And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed : because thou hast obeyed my voice."

These promises were confirmed to Isaac (Gen. xxvi, 2-5) :

"And the Lord appeared unto him, and said, Go not down into Egypt ; dwell in the land which I shall tell thee of :

Sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee, and will bless thee ; for unto thee, and unto thy seed, I will give all these countries, and I will perform the oath which I sware unto Abraham thy father :

And I will make thy seed to multiply as the stars of heaven, and will give unto thy seed all these countries ; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed ;

Because that Abraham obeyed my voice, and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws."

And to Jacob (Gen. xxviii, 12-15) :

"And he dreamed, and behold a ladder set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven : and behold the angels of God ascending and descending on it.

And, behold, the Lord stood above it, and said, I am the Lord God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac : the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed ;

And thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth, and thou shalt spread abroad to the west, and to the east, and to the north, and to the south : and in thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed.

And, behold, I am with thee, and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest, and will bring thee again into this land ; for I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of."

Then God made Jacob the Supplanter to be Israel the Prince, and gave him further promises (Gen. xxxv, 10-12) :

"And God said unto him, Thy name is Jacob : thy name shall not be called any more Jacob, but Israel shall be thy name : and he called his name Israel.

And God said unto him, I am God Almighty : be fruitful and multiply ; a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee, and kings shall come out of thy loins ;

And the land which I gave Abraham and Isaac, to thee I will give it, and to thy seed after thee will I give the land."

It is very essential to note here that the Hebrew word used for nation and company of nations means Gentile nation and nations, and this is endorsed by the covenant promise in Lev. xxvi, that if they keep God's laws they will receive untold blessings, but if not they will be scattered among the heathen (the same word in the original as used in "the company of nations" just mentioned), and that they would be punished seven times (2,520 years—a time in prophecy is one year of 360 days, seven times therefore is 7 by 360 days, and as it is a day for a year (Ezek. iv, 6) equals 2,520 years). But that although the punishment would be so long and severe yet it would not be final and obliterating, because in verses 44-45 God says, "And yet for all that, when they be in the land of their enemies, I will not cast them away, neither will I abhor them to destroy them utterly, and to break my covenant with them ; for I am the Lord their God. But I will for their sakes remember the covenant of their ancestors, whom I brought forth out of the land of Egypt in the sight of the heathen, that I might be their God : I am the Lord."

Then in the prophetical blessings there is some enlightening information for identification purposes of Israel in the latter days. In Gen. xlix, 22-26 :

"Joseph is a fruitful bough, even a fruitful bough by a well ; whose branches run over the wall.

The archers have sorely grieved him, and shot at him, and hated him :

Digitized by Google

But his bow abode in strength, and the arms of his hands were made strong by the hands of the mighty God of Jacob; (from thence is the shepherd, the stone of Israel:)

Even by the God of thy father, who shall help thee; and by the Almighty, who shall bless thee with blessings of heaven above, blessings of the deep that lieth under, blessings of the breasts, and of the womb;

The blessings of thy father have prevailed above the blessings of my progenitors unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills: they shall be on the head of Joseph, and on the crown of the head of him that was separate from his brethren."

When Israel blessed his sons. In Deut. xxxiii, 13–17:

"And of Joseph he said, Blessed of the Lord be his land, for the precious things of heaven, for the dew, and for the deep that coucheth beneath,

And for the precious fruits brought forth by the sun, and for the precious things put forth by the moon,

And for the chief things of the ancient mountains, and for the precious things of the lasting hills,

And for the precious things of the earth and fulness thereof, and for the goodwill of him that dwelt in the bush: let the blessing come upon the head of Joseph, and upon the top of the head of him that was separated from his brethren.

His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the horns of unicorns: with them he shall push the people together to the ends of the earth: and they are the ten thousands of Ephraim, and they are the thousands of Manasseh."

When Moses blessed the tribes of Israel. In Numbers xxiii, 8–10:

"How shall I curse, whom God hath not cursed? or how shall I defy, whom the Lord hath not defied?

For from the top of the rocks I see him; and from the hills I behold him: lo, the people shall dwell alone, and shall not be reckoned among the nations.

Who can count the dust of Jacob, and the number of the fourth part of Israel? Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his!"

When Balaam was commanded by God to bless Israel instead of cursing them as Balak desired.

In these it will be observed that in the latter days, that is in the present time, Israel, wherever she is, must be essentially wealthy, having great prosperity, agricultural and mineral, power, dominion and national supremacy.

She must lose her identity. This obviously must be so if she is to become Gentilized, but, apart from that, God says in Isaiah lxv, 15, that He will "call his servants by another name," and that they would also forget their mother-tongue, see Isa. xxviii, 11:—

"With stammering lips and another tongue will he speak to this people."

Judah, on the other hand, was to retain both language and features. They are still known as Jews, they are still easily discernible by their physical features, and the Hebrew language is still used among certain of them.

Israel are to be an evangelistic people, Isa. xlix, 6:—

"I will also give thee for a light to the Gentiles, that thou mayest be my salvation unto the end of the earth."

Israel must be a great colonizing nation. In Isa. xlix, Israel prayed to God:

"The place is too strait for me; give place to me that I may dwell."

And in the same chapter God said:

"I will preserve thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, to establish the earth, to cause to inherit the desolate heritages."

Again, Isa. liv, 3:

"Thou shalt break forth on the right hand and on the left, and thy seed shall inherit the Gentiles, and make the desolate cities to be inhabited."

The whole chapter relates to Israel's happy and prosperous future and wonderful expansion.

Judah, on the other hand, was to be hounded from nation to nation, "a hissing and a curse." Now if a part only of one tribe, much persecuted, numbers, as it does to-day, some fifteen millions, what must the number of eleven unpersecuted tribes be? Surely, "as the sand of the sea for multitude"!

They were to keep the Sabbath, Ex. xxxi, 16 and 17:

"Wherefore the children of Israel shall keep the Sabbath, to observe the Sabbath throughout their generations, for a perpetual covenant."

They must be God-fearing, because God promised to be their Helper and Refuge, Ezek. xi, 16:

"Thus said the Lord God; Although I have cast them far off . . . and although I have scattered them among the countries, yet will I be to them as a little Sanctuary in the countries where they shall come."

There are other marks or means of identification, but one ought from these alone, say by the process of elimination, to be easily able to recognize ancient Israel under her new name. In other words, if we sum up the foregoing, and find a modern nation of whom all this is true, we have Israel of the latter days.

To sum up then, latter-day or modern Israel must be a very great Nation, from whom have sprung a Company of Nations.

Their population must be multitudinous.
They must be very wealthy, agriculturally, in minerals and otherwise.
They must have much power and dominion.
They must have national supremacy.
They must have lost their original identity.
They must have forgotten their mother-tongue.
They must be a great missionary nation.
They must be a great colonizing nation.
They must keep the Sabbath, to remember it.
They must be God-fearing.

Here is ample food for thought, to ponder prayerfully and deeply. Let us pray to be willing to be led into all Truth, for His Name's sake.

Admiral Dewey, of the U.S.A. Navy, said:—"After many years of andering I have come to the conclusion that the mightiest factor in the civilization of the world is the policy of Britain."

AMOS OF TEKOA.—II.

BY PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc., &c.

WE are sneeringly told by critics, who oppose the Divine truth of prophecy, that the Bible writers built up a god to suit themselves, a god who was made to praise them and "call them His own peculiar and chosen people."

This "tribal god" was careful to magnify His people as the best, most righteous and most civilized of all peoples on the earth.

The man who really reads the Scriptures finds that for once God speaks well of His people, He speaks ten times against them. In fact, most of the time He is chastising them by one means or another.

Let us hear from Amos on this matter at the time he talked to all Israel: Amos viii, 11, 12, 13, 14: "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord God, that I will send a famine in the land; not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the Lord:

"And they shall wander from sea to sea, and from the north even to the east; they shall run to and fro to seek the word of the Lord, and shall not find it.

"In that day shall the fair virgins and young men faint for thirst.

"They that swear by the sin of Samaria (the golden calf), and say, Thy god, O Dan, liveth; and, The manner of Beer-sheba liveth; even they shall fall, and never rise up again."

Surely this is plain and strong enough for any man! The prophet is talking to the kingdom of Israel in their religious capital, Bethel. He is not patting them on the back, but scourging them rather roughly and sternly. He spares them not, but tells them that they will suffer famine and thirst, and wander from sea to sea. They shall fall and never rise up again.

See Amos ix, 8: "Behold, the eyes of the Lord God are upon the sinful kingdom, and I will destroy it from off the face of the earth; saving that I will not utterly destroy the house of Jacob, saith the Lord."

Israel was to be destroyed as a kingdom, and this came true during the very century of the prophecy.

Yes! Amos shows Israel that a very heavy punishment, by many means, was to come upon their Israel kingdom, and what he foretold came to pass, as they found out to their sorrow.

But, in spite of Israel's sin and awful chastisement, there was to come upon that people something else of a more pleasing sort. Read Amos ix, 11 to 15: "In that day will I raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen, and close up the breaches thereof: and I will raise up his ruins, and I will build it as in the days of old:

"That they may possess the remnant of Edom, and of all the heathen, which are called by my name, saith the Lord that doeth this.

"Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that the plowman shall overtake the reaper, and the treader of grapes him that soweth seed; and the mountains shall drop sweet wine, and all the hills shall melt.

"And I will bring again the captivity of my people of Israel, and they shall build the waste cities, and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, and drink the wine thereof; they shall also make gardens, and eat the fruit of them.

"And I will plant them upon their land, and they shall no more be pulled up out of their land which I have given them, saith the Lord thy God."

This is a message of comfort, given by the prophet just after his message of discomfort and punishment.

What wonderful words! Read! "And I will bring again the captivity of my people of Israel, and they shall build the waste cities, and inhabit them.

"They shall also make gardens, and eat the fruit of them."

This comfort is to follow their punishment, and must truly encourage Israel.

"And I will plant them upon their land, and they shall no more be pulled up out of their land which I have given them, saith the Lord thy God."

When we compare the times, the conditions, the people, the location, the messenger, the messages, the curses and blessings, we are encouraged to believe it was clearly in the mind of the Lord to severely punish His Israel for a time, and then to bless this very Israel in the end.

Doubtless, Amos returned from Bethel in Israel, or Samaria, to Tekoa in the kingdom of Judah. He followed his daily work as a fruit gatherer and herdsman. His eightfold message had been faithfully delivered to the eight nations. He did his work, and, so far as we know, ceased to be a prophet. He completed his task in the religious capital of Israel, where he was in the greatest danger. He cursed and blessed clearly and fearlessly, and then left his God and the eight nations to do their acts as they might.

His work here was ended, but it took time, even a long time, for all the eightfold messages of prophecy to come into effect.

Amos should be an encouragement to the everyday plain labouring servant of God. People in all ranks and conditions are called to serve, and, if truly ready and waiting, may be honoured as truly as was the prophet Amos at Tekoa.

COMPARATIVE TEXTS REVEALING THE INTIMATE RELATION OF JEHOVAH AND JESUS CHRIST WITH ISRAEL.—I.

ARRANGED BY C. B. EVANS.

WILL any who remain at present unassociated with our teaching, particularly the Ministry of both the National and Free Churches, and the Government, answer the following questions, after reading and studying the texts with their contexts very carefully?

(1) Is not this the clearest of National Messages?

(2) Can there be any doubt at this time as to who the Message is for, or who is revealed as the "nation" and "kingdom"?

(3) If not, why is the nation being left in ignorance of the truth concerning it?

(4) Is it not time the nation was awakened out of its sleep and told the truth concerning God's plan for His people, by His national instruments for the purpose—the Church and the Government?

(5) If these questions cannot be satisfactorily answered in the positive, is there any other Biblical answer to prove the contrary to what is revealed through the entire combination of Scriptures here given?

THE BIBLE AND SCIENTIFIC TRUTH-III.

By CHAS. LAVENDER.

SOME at least of the many modern scientific inventions seem to have been foreshadowed in Scripture, as, for instance, Railways and Motors, either or both of which answer to the vivid descriptions of Nahum ii, 3-4: "The chariots shall be with flaming torches, . . . the chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall jostle one against another in the broad ways; they shall seem like torches, they shall run like the lightnings." Aeroplanes also correspond to Isaiah's words in chapter xxxi, 5: "As birds flying, so will the Lord of Hosts defend Jerusalem"; and we all know how wonderfully it was protected right up to the moment of its capture by Allenby, so that not a shot was fired against it, thus fulfilling the remainder of the verse just quoted, viz.: "defending also He will deliver it; and passing over He will preserve it."

Warfare to-day is totally different from what it was even half a century ago, and it might be thought impossible that the Bible should have anything to say about modern mechanized methods of fighting. But in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE for September 3rd, 1927 (p. 570) "A.R.H." compares current newspaper descriptions of the August manœuvres with Joel ii, 4, etc. The similarity is most striking, and readers are advised to look up the article referred to and to read it carefully. Joel says: "The appearance of them is as the appearance of horses; and as horsemen, so shall they run." As "A.R.H." points out, the description is evidently of something that seems like cavalry but is not, and like chariots but are not. Does not this at once bring to mind the terrible "Tanks," of which there are now so many varied kinds? Additional details are very vivid, and startlingly in agreement with newspaper correspondents' impressions. The whole article should be read.

Facts such as these show that the Bible is not only "up to date" but actually in advance of human science; what uninspired human being could possibly write of events and things yet to be, hundreds of years before their appearance, with such wonderful accuracy? True indeed is it, not only that "the Word of the Lord abideth for ever," but also that if we believe it and study it under the guidance of the Holy Spirit of God we shall be able to say with David of old: "I understand more than the ancients, because I keep Thy precepts." (Psalm cxix, 100.)

Thus far consideration has been given to points overlooked perhaps by many, but there are hundreds of statements in the Old Testament which every professing Christian, every Bible reader, knows are literally true; yet they also were written hundreds of years before their accuracy could be tested: the prophetic utterances about Christ. There are said to be 333 separate and distinct Messianic prophecies, and we know something of how those referring to His earthly life were fulfilled in Jesus Christ. Look at a few of the best known from the Book of the Prophet Isaiah and the Psalms.

Isaiah vii, 13-14: "Hear ye now, O house of David; . . . the Lord Himself shall give you a sign; Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a Son." An apparently impossible thing, yet how literally fulfilled.

A great many of the detailed prophecies have to do with the manner of His death; here are a few of them:—

Isaiah liii, 7: "He was oppressed, and He was afflicted, yet He opened not His mouth; He is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so He openeth not His mouth."

Verse 8: "He was taken from prison and from judgment."

Verse 9: "He made His grave with the wicked, and with the rich in His death; because He had done no violence, neither was any deceit in His mouth."

Verse 12: "And he was numbered with the transgressors . . . .; and made intercession for the transgressors."

How wonderfully and literally were all these, and many more, fulfilled. The actual manner of His death is foreshadowed in Psalm xxii, 16.

"They pierced my hands and my feet." Yet crucifixion was never a Jewish or Israelitish form of execution, and in its earliest form the hands and feet were tied, not nailed, to the cross. Only the guidance of the Holy Spirit of God could possibly have led the Psalmist to write prophetic words, the literal fulfilment of which could not even have been imagined by him.

Still further details concerning the death of Christ are found in Psalm xxii, 18 and Psalm xxxiv, 20: "They part My garments among them, and cast lots upon My vesture." "He keepeth all His bones; not one of them is broken." These again we know were literally fulfilled.

Even the betrayal by Judas, one of His disciples, was foretold. Psalm xli, 9, speaks of "Mine own familiar friend, in whom I trusted, which did eat of My bread, hath lifted up his heel against Me."

And Zechariah xi, 12-13, gives details of other circumstances connected with the betrayal: "They weighed for My price thirty pieces of silver. And the Lord said unto me, cast it unto the potter; . . . and I took the thirty pieces of silver, and cast them to the potter in the House of the Lord."

Incidents connected with the actual Crucifixion and with some of the seven "Words on the Cross" are spoken of in prophecy; when considered side by side and compared the connection is unmistakable.

Prophecy.	Fulfilment.
Isaiah liii, 12. "And made intercession for the transgressors."	Luke xxiii, 34. "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do."
Psalm xxii, 8. "He trusted on the Lord that He would deliver him; let Him deliver him, seeing He delighted in him."	Matt. xxvii, 43. "He trusted in God; let Him deliver him now, if He will have him; for he said, I am the Son of God."
Psalm xxii, 1. "My God, my God, why hast Thou forsaken me?"	Matthew xxvii, 46. "My God, my God, why hast Thou forsaken me?"
Psalm lxix, 21. "They gave me also gall for my meat, and in my thirst they gave me vinegar to drink."	John xix, 28. "I thirst." Verse 29. "They filled a spunge with vinegar, . . . and put it to His mouth."

Prophetic utterances such as these are accepted by all Bible students as connected with Christ's life upon earth, and are looked upon as among the proofs that Jesus was indeed and in truth the Messiah, God's chosen Servant, through Whom the world should be saved ; their literal fulfilment is not doubted. Why then should the literal fulfilment of prophecies and promises concerning Israel be doubted and even thought impossible ? It is supposed by many that the House of Israel (the Ten Tribes) has ceased to exist ; but that this cannot be so is plainly shown by such passages as Hosea i. After prophesying " I will cause to cease the kingdom of the House of Israel " (not the House itself) he says (v. 10) : " Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered, "and in verse 11 : " Then shall the children of Judah and the children of Israel be gathered together, and appoint themselves one head." Ezekiel xxxvii, 11, speaks of " The whole House of Israel," and by the symbol of the two sticks and their becoming one in his hand the reunion of the two constituent parts, Judah and Israel, is typified. (See verse 19.)

There are many other passages to the same effect, but further detailed references are unnecessary.

That the House of David, the kingly line, must also be in existence to-day is equally certain. God promised David, Thy house, thy kingdom and thy throne shall be established for ever (2 Samuel vii, 16) ; and see also Psalm lxxxix, 28-37. All this is confirmed and amplified after many generations by the Prophet Jeremiah, almost at the end of the period of the kings, and only a few years before the capture of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar, and the death of Zedekiah, who was apparently the last of the royal line. Jeremiah xxxiii, 20-21, says : " Thus saith the Lord ; if ye can break My covenant of the day, and My covenant of the night, and that there should not be day and night in their season ; then may also My covenant be broken with David My servant, that he should not have a son to reign upon his throne."

These things being so, it behoves us to enquire and search out where the House of Israel is, and where David's throne can be found. That Christ thought these matters of importance is clear from His sending forth His disciples to the " lost sheep of the House of Israel " ; also from His telling the Jews that the Kingdom of God would be taken from them and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof. The writers of the Epistles also by no means ignored them, for James addressed his letter " To the twelve tribes scattered abroad," and there are numerous allusions, both in the Gospels and the Epistles, to the fact of the two Houses or branches of the Hebrew people.

As regards the throne of David there is no need to do more than mention the statement of the Angel Gabriel when announcing to Mary that she was to become the Mother of Our Lord : " The Lord God shall give unto Him the throne of His father David." (Luke i, 32.)

How then shall we find the Nation ? What are its characteristics ? Let us look at some of God's promises, remembering that " the birthright was Joseph's " (though he was not the eldest son of his father Israel), and that it was passed on to his son Ephraim. " Out of Judah cometh the lawgiver," and the sceptre belongs to Judah ; therefore from Judah sprang the House of David. The Jews are of Judah, but it is not amongst them that we must look for the fulfilment of the national birthright promises ; if we do we shall be disappointed, for we shall not find them.

God solemnly promised to Abraham on several different occasions, and entirely unconditionally, that he (i.e., his descendants) should become a great nation ; should be blessed and a blessing to others ; a blessing to all families of the earth. He was also told that his seed should be numerous as the dust, as the sand of the sea, as the stars of heaven ; that they should possess all the countries from the river of Egypt to the river Euphrates, and " the gate " of his enemies.

These promises were as solemnly confirmed to Isaac and Jacob (Israel), the latter of whom was also told that his seed should " spread abroad to the west, and to the east, to the north, and to the south," and that they should become " a nation and a company of nations."

By no possible stretch of the imagination can it be said that these promises or any of them are fulfilled in the Jews. In the British nation and her daughter colonies throughout the world, and in them alone, can fulfilment be found. The throne of David, too, is established in Britain and nowhere else, for the descent of King George V can be traced back to Zedekiah and David himself.

These are but the barest outlines of British-Israel Truth ; it is founded upon the Bible from start to finish. No other teaching throws such a flood of light upon the Scriptures, both Old Testament and New. No other teaching is calculated, to the same degree, to restore belief and confidence in God's Word as a whole ; confidence which, alas, has in many directions been seriously undermined ; thank God His Word itself has not been and cannot be undermined !

The Bible is true, it is admitted, so far as prophetic and historic statements respecting Christ are concerned. It is true also, we have tried to show, in scientific matters, and in ways which perhaps have been overlooked by some. Soon may the day come when it shall be by all acknowledged true also, and literally true, in connection with the promises to Israel, the chosen of God, which are fulfilled in the British nation and not otherwise.

ISRAEL'S INHERITANCE IN GOD.—II.

By HENRY D. HOUGHTON.

WHEN an earthly inheritance is once lost it is very rarely recovered.

But Israel's inheritance never can be lost ! It is only the knowledge of it that has been lost ! The inheritance itself never can be alienated. It was to be " for ever." It was " Between Me and thee and thy seed after thee in their generations for an everlasting covenant." (Gen. xvii, 7.)

There can never be a terminating point in that remarkable covenant. The knowledge of it, however, can be lost, and has been, and that to Israel's great loss.

But it is to be Nationally recorded, and recovered on a certain future day. " So the house of Israel shall know that I am the Lord their God from that day and forward." (Ezekiel xxxix, 22.)

What does all this mean ? It means nothing less than National Restoration ; National Redemption !

Digitized by Google

" Then shall they know " (there again is the recovery of the lost knowledge) " that I am the Lord their God." (Ezekiel xxxix, 28.)

But now, as in Daniel's days, these buried rights are coming to light by the reading of the Book, the great Book, the very same Book that he read ; and by the reading of which he was instructed as to the prophecies concerning things which the nation had lost count of, exactly as it has done to-day.

But the rights are still unimpaired, exactly as Daniel found them ; and they will come true, and are coming true exactly as Daniel's discoveries did.

Daniel made his great discovery from the Book of Jeremiah, when the prophecy had only two years to run. How close we are to the great fulfilment and disclosure of God none may say definitely, but certainly it is not far in the future, probably close at hand !

That same Book of Jeremiah declares God's unalterable faithfulness to Israel, brings in all the hosts of heaven and the material earth as everlasting and unchangeable evidences that He will never change, and will never cast off His people Israel, not for all that they have done. (Jer. xxxi, 37.)

This question, however, may be asked : But cannot the great Arbiter of the Universe do what He will with His own ? What is to prevent Him throwing Israel off ? And the only answer we can give is, " Nothing but His spoken Word ! "

" What is to prevent Him crying-off His Covenant ? " The answer is again : " Nothing but His spoken Word ! "

But let us also in reply ask a question, " What is there to prevent Him destroying again the world by water ? " And the same answer applies, " Nothing but His spoken Word ! "

And again, " How do Christians know that it shall be well with the righteous ? " Only by the same spoken Word !

But we are assured with regard to that Word, that it " liveth and abideth for ever ! "

" I will never break My Covenant with you." (Judges ii, 1.)

" My Covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of My lips." (Ps. lxxxix, 34.)

" God is not a man, that He should lie, neither the son of man, that he should repent : hath He said, and shall He not do it ? or hath He spoken, and shall He not make it good ? " (Num. xxiii, 19.)

Says one, " Israel has no inheritance in God which she can claim " ?

Perhaps not ! But she has a very great deal which she has been given !

" I am the Lord, your Holy One, the Creator of Israel, your King." (Isaiah xliii, 15.) Is not that a great inheritance ?

" Fear not, O Jacob, My servant ; and thou Jesurun, whom I have chosen. . . . I will pour My spirit upon thy seed, and My blessing upon thy offspring." (Isaiah xliv, 2, 3.) Inheritance again !

" Thou art My servant, O Israel, thou shalt not be forgotten of Me. I have blotted out, as a thick cloud, thy transgressions, and as a cloud thy sins." (Verses 21, 22.) Is there no inheritance there ?

The grandeur and glory of Israel's unmerited inheritance in God is beyond all conception.

" But Israel shall be saved in the Lord with an everlasting salvation ; ye shall not be ashamed nor confounded world without end." (Isaiah xlv, 17.) Think what that means.

" All flesh shall know that I the Lord am thy Saviour and thy Redeemer, the Mighty One of Jacob." (Isaiah xlix, 26.) There is a grandeur in that inheritance too great for us to calculate.

It is not possible to say what the effect of all this would be upon this nation if everyone in it from the King to the peasant believed that Covenant was a message from God Almighty direct to our forefathers, and also to us !

And if we are Israel that is what it amounts to, for we are all in it !

And yet the directness and force of that appeal is to be greatly exceeded in the near future.

For God Himself is to speak and own His people : He is to make Himself known among them.

Right at the very end of the age, it gives in Isaiah a wonderful blessing on this same people. " Jerusalem, a rejoicing, her people, a joy." Building houses, living in them ; planting vineyards, eating the fruit ; their days long as the days of a tree.

Now listen how it finishes," For they are the seed of the blessed of the Lord, and their offspring with them." (Isaiah lxv, 23.)

There you have the Abrahamic Covenant in full force, and acknowledged by God to Abraham's wicked descendants 1,140 years after Abraham's death !

And further, that prophecy indicates that at the very end of the age, that same seed, the offspring of " the blessed of the Lord," which I take to mean Abraham, are the inheritors and the possessors of Jerusalem, and the reason is given, because they are that seed. " For they are the seed of the blessed of the Lord, and their offspring with them."

AND WE HAVE GOT JERUSALEM !

That term " Everlasting " in the Abrahamic Covenant is supposed by most Christian people to expire with the Old Testament. A very dangerous suggestion indeed.

Look where it lands us.

If we accept that, Abraham's Covenant only lasted 1,514 years !

Since that time there have passed 2,322 years ! All supposed to be outside of that word " Everlasting " !

So then that comprehensive word would not have lasted half of Time, reckoned up to the present year !

This is the misleading interpretation of even sincere men.

Let it be said here that if God's clear words can be cut down and limited like that, no certainty can ever come from any study of Scripture, and God would be shown as faithless as man ! And all His words as a consequence would need discounting !

Now it has been proved that this great choice of God, this singular separation and severance, began with Abraham : and it was 1898 B.C.

It has also been proved that right down the ages God has acknowledged it, and acted up to it.

That was the thing that saved them in Egypt, and from Egypt ; was the thing that saved them a hundred times in the wilderness ; was the thing that brought them through into the Promised Land, saved them from all their enemies ; was in active operation at the very close of the Old Testament, for among its last words are these : " I am the Lord, I change not,

Digitized by Google

therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed " ; was the thing which brought in the New Covenant, and the Messenger of the Covenant ; which inspired the song of Zacharias in Luke i, 68-73 : " Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, for He hath visited and redeemed His people, . . . to perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and to remember His holy Covenant, the oath which He swore to our father Abraham."

It has been proved also that right at the very end of the Age, the very last day of the Age, it is still in operation, an established fact ; though till that moment unknown to Israel, unacknowledged by the world.

Now if all this is true, then this peculiar relationship between God and Israel is a tremendous fact here and now, this very day, whether we as a nation know it or not.

It is a thing patent to all, that if the British are Israel we do not even know that nationally, though every Israel mark is upon us. And not knowing that we are Israel, we cannot know that the Israel blessings are righteously ours.

And the very fact of our not knowing that the Israel blessings are and will be ours is no proof whatever that it is not true, but that rather it is actually a link in the chain proving our identity with the long-lost son, Israel, and our title to the rights and blessings which will most surely follow.

When St. Paul was on board ship going to Rome in the company of many others, they were overtaken by a fearful storm ; but an angel of the Lord appeared to him in a vision of the night assuring him that all should be saved. In relating the vision St. Paul said before them all, " I believe God that it shall be even as He hath told me."

There was faith, though it was only a vision, and the result justified St. Paul's confidence expressed so assuringly, " I believe God that it shall be even as He hath told me."

Can we all say that about God's written Word ? And about literal Israel ? Let us with the greatest confidence and hope take up the words of the Apostle, and, with the written Word in our hands, declare the same, " I BELIEVE GOD THAT IT SHALL BE EVEN AS HE HATH TOLD ME ! "

THE LESSER FOLK.

THE world is full of many orders of life.

As a generalization each of these orders forms a world to itself ; each of the orders is conscious of other orders occupying the world at the same time. But as we think of the world as pre-eminently the dwelling-place of man, so the bird thinks of it from the bird standpoint, the quadruped from the animal standpoint, and the fish from the piscatorial standpoint.

The animal as a rule only takes account of other orders from the standpoint of self-protection, as do also the birds.

Each order has its own economy, and its own intelligence, enjoying generally the use of the senses possessed by ourselves, and, in some instances, other senses which we do not know nor possess, but the uses of which we can see demonstrated in the animal world.

Man has a peculiar relationship to many of the orders of life, and is capable of securing their attention, obedience, and oftentimes affection.

In many regards the man can enter into the life and activities of other orders, and by sympathy and fellowship win their ardent affection.

It is a matter of interest that many of the animals, having placed their affection upon a man or woman, a boy or girl, will deny themselves the pleasures of their own world and association with their own kind in order to enjoy human companionship, share human exercises, pleasures and pains, and render to men devoted service.

Chief among the friends of man is the horse. What a wonderful creature he is ! How willing to labour ; how ready to share in toil and sport ; how sympathetic with the moods and understanding of the needs of man he is ! It is a pity that any should fail to enjoy the friendship and use of the powers of the horse. I look back on many such friends over a long period in which I trained them to fellowship with my task, and to companionship in labour. Take, for instance, an old friend whose eyes brightened when he heard us speak his name, " Dick " ; he was a fine " standard-bred " animal.

Dick had fallen into hands which did not understand the blood horse's mentality. He and his owner had seriously quarrelled, and the quarrel grew more and more bitter until Dick's owner went in danger of his life. Finally he was afraid to take Dick out of his stall.

I was in need of such a horse at the time, and was glad to take Dick off his owner's hands. One sharp struggle for mastery we had, but with a mingling of firmness and kindness it was quickly over. With a sharp blow on a sensitive bone of the knee, I brought Dick to his knees when he struck at me with his shod hoof. Before he had reached his feet again, with the other hand I placed under his nose a dish most palatable to horses, which arrested his attention. First he hesitated between continuing the quarrel and accepting the tasty banquet, but appetite—which I afterwards found to be very strong in Dick—prevailed. He straightened his ears, covered his teeth, and let the fire go from his eye as he began to eat. I sat in the meantime upon his manger ; his curiosity as to what kind of a person I might be overcame the pleasures of appetite. He left his food and stooping his head began to smell at my toe, which was swinging as I sat on the manger, and following up and up until he came to my face, he finally began to toy with my whisker with his sensitive lip. Suddenly dropping that, he rubbed his head against my side and shoulder with vigour enough almost to unseat me, and then went back to his feed again. From that moment Dick was my fast friend.

A little while after—perhaps two or three days—missing our little three-year-old daughter, I went to find her, and found her in the stall with the erstwhile dangerous horse. She had a little switch in her hand, and was proudly striking Dick about the hocks and commanding " Get over, Dick." Promptly, as a war horse on parade, Dick stepped to the other side of the stall ; running behind his heels to the other side she again gave the command, " Get over, Dick," and was as promptly obeyed, Dick looking literally as proud as Punch at joining in the game with the tiny tot. The wealth of affection that horse showed to all of us contrasted with his refusal to work for any

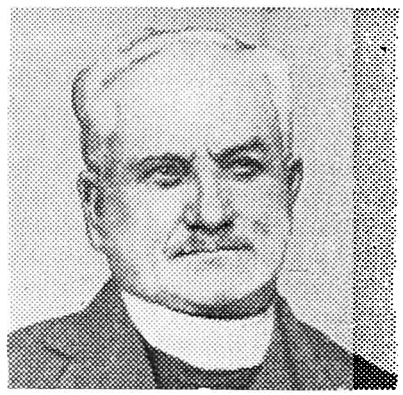
OBITUARY.

THE LATE MR. HERBERT TESTER.



AN active and earnest advocate of B.-I. Truth was laid to rest in Wandsworth Cemetery on Monday, March 11th, after a service in Clapham Parish Church, with every mark of love and respect. The British-Israel-World Federation was represented by Mr. Harrison Hill and Mr. W. J. Pilcher, in the unavoidable absence of the Secretary-General. The Open-Air Speakers, with whose work our brother had been specially associated, were represented by Mr. W. J. Pilcher, Mr. Barrow and Mr. McKelvey. Herbert Tester had served as a soldier of our King in the Great War, and, better still, he was a soldier of the King of kings.

THE LATE MR. HERBERT TESTER.

THE LATE REV. THOMAS HISLOP.

THERE passed away during the early days of the first month of this year a keen student of British-Israel Truth in the person of the Senior Minister of Bridgeton Parish, Glasgow, the Rev. Thomas Hislop, Honorary President of the Scottish Israel Identification Association.

THE LATE REV. THOMAS HISLOP.

Born at Shotts, Lanarkshire, in 1847, Thomas Hislop spent the early days of his life there, and at Glengarnock, Ayrshire, whither his parents removed when he was about five years old. He received his early education at Glengarnock Ironworks School, and after having passed through the school as a pupil, he remained there for a term of five years as a pupil teacher. However, the young man soon showed an ambition towards the pulpit in preference to the schoolroom desk, an ambition which was encouraged by his godly parents, and accordingly he proceeded to Glasgow University to begin his training as a minister of the Gospel. After passing through the Divinity Hall he was duly licensed as a minister of the Church of Scotland by the Presbytery of Irvine, and was appointed as Assistant to St. Stephen's Parish Church, Glasgow, proceeding from there as Assistant to Bothwell Parish for a short time.

In 1877 he was ordained to the charge of South Dalziel Parish Church, Motherwell, and it was in a large measure due to his untiring efforts that the endowment of this church was finally accomplished. In 1883 Mr. Hislop received and accepted a call to Bridgeton Parish, Glasgow, in which charge he laboured earnestly and with much acceptance until he retired some five years ago. Although retired from the active ministry of the parish, his chief interest in life was, nevertheless, centred in Bridgeton Church, and his services were granted willingly to such members of his former congregation as desired them. It is interesting to note that, to mark the occasion of the jubilee of his ordination as a minister, the congregation erected a memorial window in Bridgeton Parish Church, which was unveiled in May of last year.

Apart from his interest in his church Mr. Hislop was well informed in all matters affecting Poor-Law administration, and served for a term on Glasgow Parish Council. He was also keenly interested in all matters relating to the investigation and propaganda of British-Israel Truth. He was very fond of telling how he came to the knowledge of the Truth. Many years ago one of his flock, in doubt as to the validity of the claims of British-Israel, brought the problem to his minister. Mr. Hislop, in order to be able to refute the apparently erroneous doctrine in which his parishioner evidently believed to some extent, went into the matter thoroughly, and as a result was himself convinced. From that time he threw himself enthusiastically into the Cause. Over thirty years ago he became associated with the Scottish Israel Identification Association, and was their first Life Member. His valuable counsel was ever at their disposal, and for a number of years he conducted a Bible Class in connection with the Association for the benefit of the young members. The Association, to mark their appreciation of his services to them, on May 20th, 1919, unanimously elected him as their Honorary President.

A number of years ago Mr. Hislop visited the Holy Land and was much inspired thereby. He delighted to relate his experiences there, and the local colour and scenes from the daily life of the inhabitants were constantly used by him to illustrate his discourses to the young of his congregation especially, who were invariably, in the children's address on Sabbath, given a short address, generally on some phase of Israel's history, and the point always driven home was their own great birthright and heritage through their descent from Abraham, the friend of God. If the congregation of Bridgeton Parish are ignorant of who they are and of their great destiny and corresponding responsibilities, the fault does not lie with their Pastor, who preached British-Israel Truth in all its fullness constantly. It was indeed a joy and a privilege to attend the services in Bridgeton Church on the Sabbath Day, and listen to the preacher who, in fervid eloquence, discoursed on the lofty subjects of Christian Faith and on the affecting love of Him Who shed His precious blood for the avail of sinners of the human race. All this was done in a mood so tender and so pathetic that all hearts seemed to be bowed and moved, as the leaves of the forest by the wind.

The amount of good done there can only be known on the great day of final reckoning, but if signs are any evidence of the effect, they certainly were not awanting.

OUR LITERATURE CAMPAIGN.

THIS winter has been very much broken in upon by illness and other matters, so that it has been, and still is, difficult to carry on a great platform campaign. Notwithstanding this, perhaps more meetings are being held in the aggregate than has been held at any one time before. In comparison with what we should have been delighted to accomplish in view of the rapid spread of the work, we have been much hindered by the epidemic and other causes.

Such being the case, it is necessary that we should push the written message through our literature to the full. And this is being done. Upstairs and downstairs in our busy hive at Headquarters a staff of earnest workers are sending out a stream of literature to the ends of the earth. Those who work upstairs are the publicity force of the Federation. Those who work downstairs are the distribution staff of the Covenant Publishing Company, Ltd.

Books, pamphlets, weekly NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER issues, monthly issues, annual volumes, special numbers are going out in great quantities. It will be soon necessary to run the second hundred thousand of the present special number off the press.

We have stock enough on our shelves and staff enough to send out many times the volume of literature. Our staff is very largely voluntary, although they work as faithfully as do the paid employees of the organization. These can be increased at will, for our people hold themselves at the call of duty.

The limit to our distribution is financial, and that only.

So we ask all who are workers with us in this great task, and sharers with us in the great blessings received through knowledge of the Truth, to translate yourselves into outside voluntary workers in getting the literature out upon its mission in the world.

How much should you like to invest in sharing the work of the Gospel of the Kingdom? It is your privilege to become preachers of the Gospel of the Kingdom without speaking a public word. The words have been spoken, and written. They have been printed and bound; and are ready to your hand. For a shilling or two you may make the contents of any of our books your very own to send to any person in any place in the world. The books will talk as eloquently for you as for any. The results will be all your own when the great stocktaking time comes, and the Master grants rewards as He says He will, even for every cup of cold water that is given in His Name. So buy the book and send it on its mission, or a dozen, or a score, as your means will allow.

From every part of the habitable globe we are getting such wonderful letters telling of infinitely great things which are resulting through the arrival of this or that book or paper. Often a shilling thus spent results in the winning of a champion for the Truth, and in flooding lives with light and happiness.

Do you know what books to buy?

Do you know to whom to send them when bought?

If so, there are thousands of books awaiting your hand to send them out on their mission.

If you do not, we will act as your agents to select the books. We will act as your agents to select the persons who shall receive them, if you so desire. We will send them in ever-increasing numbers if you care to release them by purchase from the bondage of the shelves of the store-room.

Then, as to THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER. What wonderful letters we receive telling of joy and light coming to communities as well as to individuals, to Churches and to Christian organizations through our paper. We should be glad to send out ten for every one now sent, and they are now going out by many thousands. Will you set yourself to secure for us subscribers for the paper? It will be making yourself a preacher of the Truth weekly if you do this. Every article in every issue will be as much your gift to your friend as if you had written every word yourself, for without you, not a word of it all would come to your friend.

So take up the task. Make it a pleasure, and God will see that it becomes a great profit to you, to your friends who through you obtain the Truth, and to our Church and nation at large.

All at it, and always at it, must be our motto.

Headquarters are working hard to get the full number of the second ten millions of books and pamphlets out in the world doing its work for God and His Kingdom.

A clergyman in Worcestershire writes:—"I shall greatly value and earnestly study the books you kindly sent me. The Prophets have become quite a new world to me since I have been reading them under B.-I. light. My sermons for the future will be in the light of this great Truth, and, seeing the time has come for Israel no longer to remain hidden, I feel sure the Holy Spirit will bless the Truth preached."

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

THE REV. PASCOE GOARD addressed a large audience at Headquarters on Wednesday afternoon, March 13th, and the Rev. Joseph Gay gave the address on the following day. Mr. John Leech, K.C., is to give the second of his addresses on "Prophecy" on Wednesday afternoon next, March 27th, at 3 o'clock. There will be a Prayer Meeting on Thursday evening next, March 28th, at 7.30. All are invited.

* * *

Special attention is directed to a series of four important addresses to be given (D.V.) by the Rev. Pascoe Goard on Thursday and Friday, April 4th and 5th, at 3 and 8.15, in the large Kensington Town Hall, on "Messages for the Times." We wish to see the hall filled for each meeting, and we earnestly ask for the help of our friends to make the meetings widely known. We want volunteers for the placing of circulars, posters and window bills in the West London area. Large numbers of each are now ready. Please write the Secretary-General, 6, Buckingham Gate, S.W.1.

A series of ten meetings will be held (D.V.) in the Guildhall, Cambridge, April 8th to 12th, inclusive, at 3 and 8 daily. The Rev. Pascoe Goard, Mr. John Leech, K.C., the Revs. J. Lumley Davies, L.D., Joseph Gay, A.T.S., T. Sparshott Johnson, M.A., and Mr. Herbert Garrison will be the speakers. All our supporters in Cambridge and the surrounding districts are invited to help in publicity work, and to send to Headquarters for printed matter.

G. N. S. writes from Tasmania :—" I cannot tell you what a help and blessing THE NATIONAL MESSAGE is to me, and how much I owe to it as a lay preacher. It is an inspiration. I enclose a cheque towards the sum you have undertaken to raise."

A copy of our journal was sent anonymously some years ago to a lady, and she was so impressed with it that she bought a number of our books and pamphlets, and soon became fully convinced of the Truth of British-Israel. She is now one of our ardent and generous supporters and a member of the Council. You never know what good may be wrought by sending a copy of our journal or a book to a friend. Why not try it?

Mr. Herbert Garrison, the Secretary-General, gave a public address at Westcliff-on-Sea on March 14th for the local Branch, on "The Greatest Biblical and Racial Discovery of the Age," to one of the largest audiences they have had, in spite of the prevailing illness. The President of the Branch, the Rev. J. J. Whitehouse, M.A., presided.

* * *

The new special number of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER is proving very popular; the demand is unprecedented. Copies are being sent out in thousands each week. We have letters of appreciation from all quarters.

We gratefully acknowledge a generous gift of two excellent gold watches by one of our members, to be sold for the funds of the Federation.

We have to record with deep regret the passing away of four of our members: the Rev. J. Stanley Woodhouse, M.A., of Bucknall, Shropshire; Mrs. Champion Pelly, of Worthing; Mr. Arthur Bell, of Langholm, Scotland, and Mr. G. T. Mills, of Crouch Hill, North London. Mr. Mills was a member of the Council of the B.-I.-W.F., and one of the valued directors of the Covenant Publishing Company. We tender our sympathy to their relatives.

Large numbers of clergymen, ministers and lay preachers to whom, through the generosity of many of our friends, copies of the Rev. Pascoe Goard's books have been sent, have written in terms of gratitude and high appreciation. We heartily thank all those who have made these gifts of books possible by so kindly sending donations for this fund, and we are able also to send books by other authors. Many of the recipients say they are basing their sermons on the teaching contained in the literature sent to them.

A young lady from U.S.A. was very eager to obtain her fiancé's genealogy; to satisfy her, the young man's father, a scholar, spent two years in tracing it out. To his astonishment he found that his ancestress was Tea Tephi!! When this was told by the young man's aunt to a group of friends, one of our lady members, who was present, told the company, to their utter amazement, the story of Princess Tephi and her marriage to King Heremon. None of those concerned previously knew anything of British-Israel. Here surely is a wonderful case of independent confirmation, and an example of faithful witnessing on the part of our lady member.

The Harrow and District Branch held their monthly meeting on March 14th, when the Rev. J. O. Vince, B.A., B.D., lectured on "Britain: The Last World Empire," to an appreciative audience. Miss Beck presided. All British-Israelites and others interested in the Movement are urged to attend the Primitive Methodist Church, Welldon Crescent, Harrow, on Sunday, March 24th, at 11 a.m., when Miss Beck will preach.

The Rev. T. Sparshott Johnson, M.A., deputized for the Rev. Joseph Gay, A.T.S., at Leicester on March 5th, and gave two inspiring addresses. Mr. I. E. Wesley was in the chair.

The Dover-Ostend Steamship Service and the Belgian National Railways have arranged special Easter trips to Belgium and to Cologne at reduced fares. We know by experience what a pleasant holiday can be spent in the historic places of Belgium at reasonable rates. All particulars may be obtained from the Delegate Belgian Railways, 47, Cannon Street, E.C.4.

The Rev. Pascoe Goard gave two addresses at Bexhill-on-Sea on March 11th. A profound impression was made on the large audiences. Lieutenant-Colonel Barrington presided in the afternoon, and Canon E. Sidney Savage, M.A., in the evening.

The Revs. Joseph Gay, T. Sparshott Johnson, M.A., T. H. Whitehouse, Mr. J. J. Morey, Mrs. Bloxam and Miss Hamilton Hunter, and others, have been giving addresses in many centres.

We are requested to remind our readers of the party for Egypt and Palestine, arranged by Sir Henry Lunn, Ltd., and led by the Rev. Canon E. Sidney Savage, M.A., as advertised in our issue of March 2nd. The party is to leave London April 22nd, and is to be accompanied by Mr. J. J. Morey, who will lecture during the journey. Particulars may be obtained on application to Sir Henry Lunn, Ltd., 2, Albany Courtyard, Piccadilly, W.1.

Mr. W. J. Foster, of Stourbridge, writes in terms of high appreciation of a lecture delivered to our Branch in that town by the Rev. J. Oliver Vince, B.A., B.D., on "The British Race: God's Banner Bearers." The audience was held—Mr. Foster says—intensely interested for nearly two hours.

Mr. Harold G. Robinson writes:—"Dear Sir, I want to make a sincere effort to repay you for the great happiness your teaching has brought to me.

I am just one of the thousands of young men who passed through that awful period of war, who suffered as they did, and witnessed what they saw.

Like them I emerged from it all groping for a meaning. My very reason seemed to depend on finding one.

I little thought that if the awfulness of war did nothing else than to drive men to seek to understand it, there was a wonderful power of good in it. It made it seem worth it. But I have only realized this recently, and it is just the very opposite to what I thought a few years ago.

How could one reconcile a God of Love with a God Who permitted such suffering? And there are great numbers of people who are still asking this same question.

There appeared no reason in anything, in war or peace, life or death, good or evil, sacrifice or unselfishness, unless there was a God, Who had a definite plan, and there was a life to come.

I realized that; but there was the Great War, and so for a long time I doubted and rebelled. Unfortunately the Church did not help me, chiefly because it had nothing constructive to offer. How was it possible to build up a strong Faith without the knowledge that God's plan did not stop with the last chapter of Revelation? That His plan was just as much a part of the world to-day as it was in the days of Moses?

But the Church did not teach me this, they do not seem to believe it very firmly themselves, and when they apologized for the mistakes in the Bible, I decided quite firmly that either the Bible was not inspired, or the Church did not understand it as they professed to do.

Sometimes I felt I was expecting too much of the Bible, but I now know one cannot. It seemed at the time that either the Bible was true from cover to cover, and that there was a very sound reason for pain and suffering, or God was not true to His Word, and life was the biggest farce in creation.

A friend of mine, who had himself been over the Pyramid, lent me a book dealing with this subject, and I was at once deeply interested. The wonder of the Great Pyramid convinced me that God had a very decided plan, which came right into the present time.

This gave me something to build on, and it was after reading more books on the same subject, and while I was lying seriously ill and in great pain, that I realized that God was in His Heaven, that His plan was marvellous indeed, and that His is the Love which passeth all understanding.

That day was the happiest day of my life. I could not convey the gladness that filled me.

From that time I commenced to take an interest in B.-I., and this has confirmed in every particular the great discovery I made, and satisfies to the utmost the conception I formed of what a true religion should be.

It also taught me I did not expect too much of the Bible, and while there may be passages it is difficult to understand, nothing it contains can be proved to be wrong.

A religion which satisfies, a religion which brings Jesus Christ right into one's very existence—such as you teach, surely this is the right one and the only one on which one can build to one's heart's content.

May God bless you all and prosper your good work."

HOTCHKISS

Although resembling Peter Pan, in that it is always full of life and vivacity, it cannot be said that Hotchkiss has not grown up.

Always the leader in everything, Hotchkiss has reached a stage when motoring critics are forced to agree that the Hotchkiss is a "perfect job" from an æsthetic as well as an engineering view point—youthful in performance—old in experience.

Hotchkiss has always been a favourite but the new six-cylinder model is destined to become as popular with motorists as Peter Pan is with children.

THE AFTER-DEATH LIFE.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

EASTER MORNING, and a new phase of life appears upon the earth.

Easter Morning, and for the first time there is discovered the standard Person like Whom will be all the redeemed in the after-death life.

Prior to Easter Morning the question of life after death had been debated as a doctrine, and had been believed as an article of faith.

Some will tell you that the Old Testament does not teach the doctrine of immortality, and perhaps there is truth in this; but the statement as intended goes very much beyond the truth. The Old Testament deals with the after-death life as with a well-known matter of fact, understood and accepted by all. Those whom we call the "dead" are stated in the Old Testament to be "gathered to their fathers." "And the Lord spake unto Moses . . . Get thee up into this mountain Abarim . . . and die in the Mount . . . and be gathered unto thy people; as Aaron thy brother died in Mount Hor, and was gathered unto his people." (Deut. xxxii, 48-50.)

Thus the Old Testament held as an article of faith the after-death life, and under its direction the people acted accordingly.

In the New Testament the first four Books are devoted to the history of the birth, ministry, death and resurrection of Our Lord, and to the production before the eyes of the ages of the first and standard specimen of after-death life.

On Easter Morning there rang out the glad cry

THE LORD IS RISEN INDEED, AND HATH APPEARED UNTO SIMON.

We read in the sacred Scriptures that there had been other resurrections from the dead. One under the ministry of Elisha; one whose dead body had been hastily deposited in the grave of Elisha under the terrors of a raid, and who was restored to life when his body touched the prophet's bones. In the New Testament we have the ruler's daughter; the son of the widow of Nain; and Lazarus of Bethany. But none of these help much; science was not enriched, nor the knowledge of mankind concerning life increased, for these simply regained the ante-death life which was still claimed at a later period by inevitable death.

On Easter Morning science was enriched and the knowledge of mankind increased by the appearing among men, before the most trustworthy witnesses in the world, the first-begotten from the dead, Jesus Christ redivivus.

His own proclamation is, as He presents Himself to the gaze of the scientific and everyday world,

> "I AM HE THAT LIVETH
> AND WAS DEAD,
> AND, BEHOLD, I AM ALIVE FOR EVERMORE,
> AND HAVE THE KEYS OF HELL AND OF DEATH."

Let us for a moment try to get out of the atmosphere of theology into that of the scientist, examining facts, and try to realize all that this demonstration of after-death life means for us and for the world.

Shall we say that Easter Morning brings to us the crowning miracle of the ages? Or shall we rather say that Easter Morning brings to us the next development normal to the Christian life?

Is the birth of the infant into the world a miracle? No one would be inclined to make such an assertion; yet why should there be any more an element of miracle in after-death life than in prior-to-death life.

We are dealing with an established fact, witnessed and attested beyond question, or it would have been disproved, and the testimony abolished ages ago. But the first generations of Christian believers sifted the evidence, verified the testimony, and, by the voice of hundreds of witnesses whose testimony was recorded by the Evangelists and Apostles, the fact was so verified as to have become not the doctrinal faith but the knowledge of established fact of all the succeeding generations.

If, however, one's mind dwells upon the miracle element, and imagines itself to be unable to accept the miraculous, let us look further afield into the world of men and things, and see in what class of known facts this great phenomenon of Easter Morning naturally falls.

We will not ask the reader to go back beyond the presence of material things, for he may hold to the eternity of matter. The Bible says otherwise, and we believe the Bible as a matter of doctrine; but nature has nothing to offer in the way of demonstration of fact of the creation of something out of nothing.

But accepting the material creation as an ascertained fact, known and closely associated with our being—for without it we could not exist—we call attention to the known fact that up to a certain point in cosmic history the earth on which we live was void of life, and then on an "Easter Morning" the earth life was manifested.

It is a matter of ascertained fact that up to a point in cosmic history this earth was void of what we understand by the term "consciousness," and then there came a morning when intelligent individuality became conscious of the Universe and of sensations responding thereto.

Up to a certain point in cosmic history there was not on earth that type of consciousness which the great psychologist, the Apostle Paul, calls "the spirit of man."

Then came that fateful morning when the first person, clothed with human intelligence, looked out upon the world and began the great experiment of life.

Up to a certain point no person so endowed had passed through the gateway of death. Then in his experience the shadows of death spread over him, and he entered between the gloomy portals. From that time forward experience of life had been reckoned from the cradle to the grave, and the grave had been the bourne from which no such person had returned.

Came Easter Morning.

Out from the open sepulchre emerged the Form of Him Who became the first begotten from the dead, never to return to death and the grave again. He met the women in the garden; He met the two disciples on the road to Emmaus; He attended a gathering of all the disciples, save Thomas who was absent and Judas who was dead, and demonstrated to them His after-death life in Body and Mind and Spirit.

Shall we, as seekers after truth, attend that gathering? Shall we share in the surprise, and even terror, of the disciples? Shall we with them imagine that we are looking upon a ghostly visitant from the grave? If so, let us hear the hearty Saxon Voice—for Our Lord was a Son of Isaac—say in round, full, cheery tones, "Handle me, and see, for a Spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see me have."

My scientific friend, can you have a fairer demonstration of the actuality of the Person so present? But I hear one say, "Perhaps He had not died." Never was such a pertinent question as this left unanswered in the Bible; never was such an objection but it was fully met. And so we have offered to us an affidavit by an eye-witness that certain officers were sent from the Temple to expedite the death of the sufferers on the cross by breaking their legs, and so increasing their agony beyond endurance. The testimony is that, while they broke the legs of the two living thieves on the cross, when they came to Jesus of Nazareth they found Him to be dead already.

That there might be no mistake in regard to the matter, we are told that one of the soldiers thrust his spear into the side of the Lord, and there flowed therefrom blood and water. This statement is followed by the affidavit of the eye-witness who wrote these words.

How shall one say that a body which bleeds is dead? Does not circulation cease in death? How should there come forth an effusion of blood and water? Is it not evidence that the heart of the sufferer was ruptured? That the blood was poured forth into the enveloping membranes, there precipitating the red particles which, when way was opened by the spear, flowed forth as blood and water. Thus by crucifixion and by spear-thrust, and by evidence of heart rupture, was the death of Christ made sure to the world, and affidavit thereto made by the Apostle John and attestation by many other witnesses.

Following that was His burial, and His lying in the sealed tomb during parts of three days.

Yes, Our Lord was dead; and

Yes, in the Upper Room in Jerusalem Our Lord was alive in the midst of His disciples.

So we hear again His cheery Voice saying, "Handle me, and see, for a Spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see me have."

But still, like us, they doubted. And so He said further: "Have ye here any meat?" They brought Him a two-course meal: fish for dinner and a piece of honeycomb for dessert.

We may assume, if we will, that the inevitable bread was present. He Who had been dead, and was now alive, ate the meal before them.

We need not follow facts which testify the actual Presence in after-death life of Jesus Christ Our Lord. Perhaps none will believe who desires to doubt; none need doubt, however, who can accept in any realm knowledge through the medium of attestation of facts, witnessed and attested by others, though unseen and not experienced by himself.

Certain questions are answered before they are asked by the great fact so demonstrated; for instance, the after-death life is brought across from the realm of doctrine theologically held, into the realm of ascertained fact historically demonstrated. So that faith and knowledge may walk hand in hand.

What a stupendous thing this is for the world!

What a stupendous thing this is for me!

The moments of the present life are passing; the remaining years are few; the shadows of the evening time are gathering, and before, in the valley of the shadows, is the waiting tomb.

But now I know, and now the world knows, that the tomb is only a doorway to the life which is on the other side.

All the Christian world will be keeping Easter Morning, the Anniversary of the great occasion when the after-death life was first manifested in the Person of Jesus Christ, mingling among men in this world of ours.

How pitiful that the great demonstration has not been proclaimed to all the peoples of all the races, and that yet the majority of mankind have not learned of the after-death life manifested among us in the Risen Christ!

The dead Christ, enduring agony on the Cross, is indicated far and wide in many lands by the crucifix. But what message has this for men who too must die? The Risen Christ; the vacant Cross; the empty Tomb; the after-death life manifested among us. This is the message of our Celto-Saxon Church, the great Israel message to all mankind:

> THE LORD IS RISEN INDEED, AND HATH APPEARED UNTO SIMON—TO THE REST OF THE DISCIPLES: TO OVER FIVE HUNDRED WITNESSES AT ONCE: AND TO US.

From the consideration of the first appearance among us of the after-death life, manifested and demonstrated in the Risen Christ, we look at a further new manifestation which resulted from the death and resurrection of Our Lord.

We saw above that there came a time when for the first time there appeared on earth the first of the race of living beings who was endowed with that type of mentality which St. Paul calls "the spirit of man." It was the day when "man became a living soul."

We now see with wonder the coming of that Pentecostal day which saw men and women newly endowed with that Spirit which the Apostle Paul calls "the Spirit which is of God," and which knows "the things that are freely given to us of God." (I Cor. ii.)

This was a very wonderful first day for the world. It is a day which continues in full force amongst us. Through the life death and resurrection of Jesus Christ Our Lord applicants to God are made partakers of this supernatural grace, and live in the enjoyment of the powers of mind and spirit which are thereby bestowed. It is still true that to as many as receive Him to them He gives the power to become the sons of God.

So far we are dealing with historic things, every one of which began in the more or less distant past, and which are with us still.

Now we shall look with anticipation to the next great day for the world, which shall as surely dawn as the former days have dawned. We refer to the day when, following the same course as Jesus Christ, the first-begotten from the dead, "the dead in Christ shall be raised." For, having Himself emerged from the tomb, and having achieved His victory over death, He cries to us "BECAUSE I LIVE YE SHALL LIVE ALSO." This will be a great day for those who have entered into that more abundant life through Him which makes them responsive to the quickening influence which calls them back from the dead to after-death life.

It is mentioned to us as a fact of interest, but not as a fact upon which any principle is resting, that at the time of Our Lord's resurrection "the graves were opened; and many bodies of the saints which slept arose, and came out of the graves after His resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many." (St. Matt. xxvii, 52, 53.)

Turning to the 14th chapter of Revelation, verses 1-5, we read of matters which seem chronologically to be before the "first resurrection," in connection with which there appear "an hundred forty and four thousand. These are they which follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth. These were redeemed from among men, BEING THE FIRSTFRUITS unto God and to the Lamb."

Perhaps these two references indicate the same matter. It seems that resurrected men attend the resurrected Christ.

Let us take note that we are not reading a theological doctrine, nor an argument on things eschatological. But the statements here purport to be statements of fact. Such statements refer to things on the same plane of activity as the great things we have been discussing. We therefore think it very likely that the after-death life is not confined to the experience of one, that is to say, of Our Risen Lord. The matter is not laboured. As we have said, there is not any principle at stake. But there is perhaps a readier approach to acceptance of the facts when we know that the process of resurrection, begun in the Person of Christ, is making progress.

With firm face and steady faith, estimating the significance of the fact that Christ, the first-begotten from the dead, has appeared among us, we are assured that that which He has shown to be the sequel to death in His Own case will be the sequel to death for all the race, namely, the resurrection from the dead. So we look at the grave with interest as being the resting-place of the bodies of the multitude of those who have died in Christ and who have now but a short time to sleep. Like the tomb under Calvary's hill, the graves of the saints in all parts of the world will soon be open and empty.

Thence we look onwards still, to the day of the general resurrection which shall embrace all of the Adamic race.

Then will the full process of nature as it relates to our earth life be finished, and for the Redeemed in Christ "Death shall be swallowed up in victory."

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS CHRIST

IN the history of Our Lord's earthly life no part is treated in so much detail either by the Evangelists or by the authors of Acts and the Epistles as His resurrection. This treatment corresponds with the position assigned to the resurrection in St. Paul's argument (I Corinthians xv, 14), and warrants the conclusion of Bishop Westcott that "taking all the evidence together there is no single historic incident better or more variously supported than the resurrection of Christ."

Our Lord Himself foretold His resurrection not less plainly than His death.

The resurrection of Christ from the first stood in the forefront of Apostolic teaching.

ANALOGIES OF THE RESURRECTION.

winter; and when spring comes forth you find that root bloom into a beauteous rose. Look at the egg-shell; in that there is the eagle, that is to wing its flight above all other birds, and rivet its eye upon the meridian sun. The doctrine of the resurrection is not inconsistent with the analogies of Nature or the experience of our common history.—DR. CUMMING.

HARVEST OF THE RESURRECTION.

LOOKING at those grassy mounds in the light of this truth, the eye of faith sees them change into a field sown with the seeds of immortality. Blessed field! What flowers shall spring there! What a harvest shall be gathered there! In the neighbouring fields, "whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap"; but here how great the difference between what is sown amid mourners' tears, and what shall be reaped amid angels' joys! between the poor body that we restore to the earth, and the noble form that shall spring from its ashes.—DR. GUTHRIE.

The above is a picture of the Garden Tomb, believed by many, with good reason, to be the tomb occupied by Our Lord during the period of His burial. Either this very spot, or one so like it that the Biblical description answers to it in every regard, has an interest for us greater than any other spot, for two reasons:

(1) It was the resting-place of the body of Our Lord during the period of His entombment. It was the spot to which the angel came to roll away the stone. It was the spot from which Our Lord arose from the dead. Surely the most sacred spot on earth.

(2) It is the spot at which the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead was transferred into the realm of partially completed fact. It was from here the first-begotten from the dead of all the human family issued forth into life and light again. It is a fact historically attested, and unless we are to deny testimony of eye-witnesses such as would establish any case in any righteous court, it has been entered among known facts scientifically established as the beginning of the resurrection from the dead of the human family in Christ.

TESTIMONY TO JESUS CHRIST.

The REV. DEAN FREDERICK W. FARRAR, D.D.

"Certainly," says St. Jerome, "a flame of fire and starry brightness flashed from His eyes, and the majesty of the Godhead shone in His face. . . ."

He came to teach that God was no dim abstraction, infinitely separated from them in the far-off blue, but that He was the Father in Whom they lived and moved and had their being; and that the service which He loved was not ritual and sacrifice, not pompous scrupulosity and censorious orthodoxy, but mercy and justice, humility and love. He came, not to hush the natural music of men's lives, nor to fill it with storm and agitation, but to re-tune every silver chord in that "harp of a thousand strings," and to make it echo with the harmonies of heaven.

The REV. CUNNINGHAM GEIKIE, D.D.

The absolute unselfishness of Christ's character is, indeed, its unique charm. His own life is self-denial throughout; and He makes a similar spirit the test of all healthy religious life. It is He Who said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive"; Who reminds us that life, like the wheat, yields fruit only by its own dying; Who gave us the ideal of life in His own absolute self-oblivion. We feel instinctively that this Gospel of love is Divine, and that we cannot withhold our homage from the only perfectly unselfish life ever seen on earth.

The REV. CANON HENRY PARRY LIDDON, D.D.

He believed in what He said without reserve, and He said what He believed without regard to consequences. . . . Sincerity was the mainspring of His whole thought and action; and when He stood before the judges He could exclaim, in this as in a wider sense, "To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth." . . . Jesus Christ was unselfish. His life was a prolonged act of self-sacrifice, and sacrifice of self is the practical expression and measure of unselfishness. . . . His self-sacrifice included the whole range of His human thought and affection and action; it lasted throughout His life; its highest expression was His death upon the Cross. It is this disinterestedness, this devotion to the real interests of human kind, this radical antagonism of His character to that vile thing selfishness, which in our better moments we men hate in ourselves, and which we always hate in others—it is this unrivalled and majestic renunciation of all that has no object beyond self which has won to Jesus Christ the heart of mankind. . . . That in our present state of imperfection we should reproduce them in their fullness is indeed impossible; but it is certain that a close imitation of Jesus of Nazareth is at once our duty and our privilege.

The Rev. William Morley Punshon.

There is but one royal lawgiver. There must be no division of authority, no admixture of legislative claims. "Jesus only," reigning in unchallenged and sole lordship over each heart and mind. Christ is the lawgiver to His Church for all time. Prophets and Apostles are valuable to us only as they repeat the words of Christ. Holy men and confessors, we rejoice in them because they give to us transcripts of Christ—laws, decretals, confessions, catechisms, creeds; we accept them only as they are in agreement with the words of Jesus. Let a thousand rubrics or canons condemn what Christ hath not condemned, we may snap them as Samson the withes with which they sought to bind him. Let a thousand enactments enforce what Christ hath forbidden, and disobedience becomes a Christian duty, and brave death were preferable to life unworthy and dishonoured.

The Rev. Frederick William Robertson.

It was not only the outward acts, but the inner life of Jesus, which was so pure. His mind regulates every other mind; it moves in perfect harmony with the mind of God. In all the just men who ever lived you will find some peculiarity carried into excess. We note this in the zeal of St. John, in the courage of St. Peter, in the truth-seeking of St. Thomas. It was not so with Jesus. No one department of His human nature ever superseded another; all was harmony there. The one sound which has come down from God in perfect melody is His life, the entire unbroken music of humanity.

The Rev. Sir Wm. Robertson Nicholl, D.D.

Jesus Christ must be accounted for. He is the problem of this age especially, and He will be the problem of all the ages. What account of Christ will stand? Was He dreamed into being? Then the dreamer must be equal to the man he dreamed. Those who make this reply must, it has been well said, account for the man born in the imagination of some other man, who, as a creature of imagination, has risen to the supreme place in human history, and who to-day rules millions of human lives and destinies. For this is the wonderful thing about His character, that He has been the constant standard of all the different ages. The best idea of each age has been embodied in Him. He was seen at first as the great Prophet and Teacher of mankind, then as the ideal of a life of self-devoted poverty, then as a great improver and reformer, then as the example of humanity—all true ideas, but none of them complete. Each age has been touched and swayed by Him, but He is always before and above the ages; and still, as they go, they find Him equal to their best thoughts and hopes. As it has been, so it will be, that Model will ever rise above the greatest thoughts of men, and the greatest things even that have been said and thought about itself.

The Rev. E. H. Perowne, D.D.

Here is One, born of woman, Who rises in moral grandeur, not like Ajax in the Grecian host, the highest of earth's demi-gods, not as the tallest pillar amidst a group of stately columns, not as the highest peak among other peaks of a vast mountain range, nor floating in His unsullied purity above the sin-stained race whose nature He shares; but, like Jacob's ladder—blessed emblem!—resting on this earth of ours, and yet reaching far above human pride and passion and sin, penetrating this lower atmosphere of human life, and stretching ever onwards, ever upwards, till its top enters the high court of heaven itself.

It is not in the practice of one virtue that Jesus excelled, but in all; not in one relation in life that He was sinless, but in all. And while Moses, the meekest man, sinned in anger; and Abraham, the father of the faithful, in unfaithfulness; and Peter, the fearless, in cowardice; and John, the Apostle of love, in vindictiveness—Jesus, Jesus alone, never sinned. Let him who knows anything of his own inner life, and of the requirements of God's spiritual law, say whether the moral superiority of Jesus to himself is or is not as I have described. He who is most closely following, and who most nearly resembles Jesus, will confess that, as high as the heaven is above the earth, so far is the sinlessness of Jesus above his own imperfection and sin.

The Rev. William Lindsay Alexander, D.D.

In the character of Christ there is a display of every excellence. The more closely we study it, the more shall we be struck with this. It is not the presence of one or two great qualities that command our reverence; it is the extraordinary combination of excellence which it displays that constitutes its peculiar attraction. Meekness and majesty, firmness and gentleness, zeal and prudence, composure and warmth, patience and sensibility, submissiveness and dignity, sublime sanctity and tender sympathy, piety that rose to the loftiest devotion, and benevolence that could stoop to the meanest sufferer, intense abhorrence of sin, and profound compassion for the sinner, mingle their varied rays in the tissue of Our Saviour's character and produce a combination of virtues such as the world never saw besides, and such as the most sanguine enthusiasm never ventured to anticipate. . . .

The Rev. James McCosh, D.D.

The Memorabilia of Xenophon, with its lessons of Socrates, the Dialogues of Plato, the logical and metaphysical works of Aristotle, and the moral maxims of the Stoics, particularly the Meditations of Marcus Aurelius, are about the highest products of human intellect in ancient times, and are worthy the eager study of any educated man. But how different from the discourses of Jesus, both in their subjects and the manner of teaching them! . . .

We recall many able reasoners, many eloquent orators, in ancient and modern times, in ancient Greece and Rome, in modern Europe and America; but here is One Who is different from them all, and Who speaks as never man spake. The truth is so perspicuous and so profound, that we are sure it is uttered from the clear depths of heaven; and yet, as it comes to us, and penetrates us, we feel that it has come through One Who is on the earth, Who knows what is in man, Who knoweth our frame, and remembereth that we are dust; we feel that it is addressed to us by a fellow-man, by a brother, it so touches and melts and moves our hearts.

The REV. DR. ARTHUR T. PIERSON.

Here is the ideal of manhood, in mind as well as body. What thoughts, inspiring what words and works! What sublime conceptions, convincing argument, wise counsel, powerful persuasion, perfect illustration, grand discrimination!

What a heart—so pure, so noble! Was ever love so charming in its fervour, its sincerity, constancy, generosity, unselfishness? Nothing but a look of gentle reproach for the disciple who denied Him, and no word of bitterness even for the Apostle who with a kiss betrayed Him. He left all ideals behind in His reality. We think no more of the Roman notion of heroic virtue, the Greek notion of culture, the Italian idea of beauty: in presence of Jesus, all these fade, as stars grow pale at morning. . . .

When we study the marvellous history of those thirty-three years, we stand in the presence of the most significant period of all history, folding in its bosom the most precious facts ever cherished in the heart of man. The existence of Jesus Christ is the pivot upon which turn the history and destiny of the world. This one Man, born in poverty and bred in obscurity, Who could call no spot home, and no great man His friend, Who was hated by the influential men of Church and State, and died as a criminal by their united verdict, even Whose tomb was the loan of charity—this one Man somehow sways the world! We date our very letters and papers, not "Anno Mundi"—the year of the world; but "Anno Domini"—the year of Our Lord; and even he who, from his dark chamber of doubt and disbelief, sends out his assaults upon Jesus of Nazareth, still dates his pen's production "Anno Domini," unwillingly bowing to Christ's Lordship, even of the world's calendar. Even creation is forgotten, as the epoch from which all is to be reckoned, since that Babe was born in Bethlehem of Judæa, as though all history had a new birth then. Kings are anointed in His Name; the grandest cathedrals unfold their white blossoms of stone to bear perpetual witness to His glory and beauty. Millions of believers offer Him the myrrh of their penitence for sin, the frankincense of their prayers and praise, the gold of their costliest offerings of gratitude and service.

The REV. DR. A. M. FAIRBAIRN.

Jesus Christ is the most powerful spiritual force that ever operated for good on and in humanity. He is to-day what He has been for centuries—an object of reverence and love to the good; the cause of remorse and change, penitence and hope to the bad; of moral strength to the morally weak; of inspiration to the despondent, consolation to the desolate, and cheer to the dying. He has created the typical virtues and moral ambitions of civilized man; has been to the benevolent a motive to beneficence, to the selfish a persuasion to self-forgetful obedience; and has become the living ideal that steadied and raised, awed and guided youth, braced and ennobled manhood, mellowed and beautified age.

It is impossible to touch Jesus without touching millions of hearts now living or yet to live. He is, whatever else He may be, a world's imperishable wonder, a world's everlasting problem, a pre-eminent object of faith, a pre-eminent subject of human thought. . . .

The historical person of Christ is at once the basis and source of the Christian religion. He made it, He is it. Its distinctive and essential elements are elements that can be found in Him. Whatever cannot be found there belongs to its accidents, not to its essence. And so, the better we know Him, the better we know our faith; the more He is made a reality to heart and mind, the more will it be the same. He who best knows Christ is the best Christian.

WILLIAM NEWCOME (Archbishop of Armagh).

Never was a character at the same time so commanding and so natural, so resplendent and pleasing, so amiable and venerable. There is a peculiar contrast in it between an awful greatness, dignity and majesty, and the most conciliating lowliness, tenderness and softness. He now converses with prophets, lawgivers and angels; and the next instant He meekly endures the dullness of His disciples, and the blasphemies and rage of the multitude.

Let us pause an instant, and fill our minds with the idea of One Who knew all things heavenly and earthly, searched and laid open the inmost recesses of the heart, rectified every prejudice and removed every mistake of a moral and religious kind, by a word exercised sovereignty over all nature, penetrated the hidden events of futurity, gave promises of admission into a happy immortality, had the keys of life and death, claimed a union with the Father, and yet was pious, mild, gentle, humble, affable, social, benevolent, friendly, affectionate. Such a character is fairer than the morning star. Each separate virtue is made stronger by opposition and contrast; and the union of so many virtues forms a brightness which fitly represents the glory of that God "Who inhabiteth light inaccessible."

Such a character must have been a real one. There is something so extraordinary, so perfect, and so God-like in it, that it could not have been thus supported throughout by the utmost stretch of human genius, much less by men confessedly unlearned and obscure.

JOHN FOSTER.

Think of all the affection of human hearts that has been given to the Saviour of the world since He withdrew His visible Presence from it! He has appeared to no eye of man since the Apostles; but millions have loved Him, with a fervency which nothing could extinguish, in life or death. Think of the great "army" of those who have suffered death for this love, and have cherished it in death! And a mightier number still would have died for it, and with it, if summoned to do so. Think of all those who, in the incitement and inspiration of this love, have indefatigably laboured to promote the glory of its great object; and the innumerable multitude of those who, though less pre-eminently distinguished, have felt this sacred sentiment living in the soul, as the principle of its best life and the source of all its immortal hope. This is a splendid fact in the history of our race, a glorious exception to the vast and fatal expenditures of human affection on unworthy and merely visible things. So grand a tribute of the soul has been redeemed to be given to the Redeemer, though an object unseen.

JOHN STEVENS BUCKMINSTER.

There is something in the character of Jesus Christ which, to an attentive reader of His history, is of more force than all the weight of external evidence to prove Him Divine. If we attempt to persuade ourselves that there is nothing supernatural in the picture, which, with so much simplicity and unlaboured consistency, the Evangelists have given of Our Lord, the question rushes upon the mind, and demands an answer: How was it, that in the common course of nature, in one of the most corrupt ages of the world, and in an obscure corner of an obscure country, a perfect personage or model of the moral class should all at once start up before the admiration of mankind, and now, after the lapse of many centuries, as well as then, remain unrivalled and almost unapproached?

All about Jesus of Nazareth is as fair and grand and unaffected as the sun in his course through a cloudless sky. He appears to be the delegate of Him Who sits at the head of creation, proposing messages of love, and expressing in His own manner the benevolent designs of His Father in heaven towards this perverse nation. They behold Him affectionately in His address, sublime in His conceptions, yet fearless in His manner, meekly conscious that God was with Him, and that His unbelieving hearers were a wicked and cruel race who would bring upon themselves the vengeance of the Most High, Whose prophet they rejected.

ALEXANDER CAMPBELL.

Jesus Christ was a real Person, and had personal, positive attributes. He had a real and positive character, unique, original, transcendent. It was as fixed, as positive, and as radiating as the sun in heaven. The originality and unity of His character is all-sufficient, in the eye of educated reason, to claim for Him a cordial welcome into our world, and to hail Him as the supreme benefactor of our race.

To my mind, it has long been a moral demonstration, clear as the sun, that no one could have drawn a character, such as that of Jesus Christ, from all the stores of human learning, from all the resources of the human imagination. The simple character of Jesus Christ weighs more, in the eyes of cultivated reason, than all the miracles He ever wrought. No greater truth was ever uttered than these words: "He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father also." No mortal ever could have said so.

The wisdom and science and learning of the world, compared with His, was, and is, and evermore shall be, as a glimmering spark to a radiant star, as a glow-worm of the twilight in contrast with the splendours of a meridian sun. It is only in the dark that we can admire a glow-worm: we cannot see it when the sun shines. But we might as hopefully lecture to a blind man on the philosophy of light as address the mere sensualist, the visionary, or the dogmatic simpleton, on the originality, unity, transparency, beauty and grandeur of the character of Jesus Christ.

The REV. JOHN PYE SMITH.

. . . He always did the things which pleased His heavenly Father. Love, zeal, purity, a perfect acquiescence in the Divine will on every occasion, and the most exalted habits of devotion, had their full place and exercise in His mind. The most refined generosity, but without affectation or display; mildness, lowliness, tenderness, fidelity, candour, a delicate respect for the feelings as well as the rights and interests of others, prudence, discriminating sagacity, penetration into the mind and schemes of His ablest adversaries, the soundest wisdom, and the noblest fortitude shone from this Sun of Righteousness with a lustre that never was impaired. . . .

His mind exhibited, beyond all parallel among mortals, the union of wisdom and holiness, meekness and majesty.

RUDOLF STIER.

That Jesus of Nazareth, as the Son of God, came in the flesh, did in His generation so live, so teach, so suffer, so die, so rise again, as the four Evangelists with all their differences unite perfectly in relating, is a truth attested to be the most certain of all truths by the whole history of the world before Him and since, by Israel's permanence among the nations, as well as the continuance of Christianity itself. . .

KARL ULLMANN.

When we endeavour to bring before our minds the image of the personality of Jesus in direct connection with the influences and works which originated in Him, three things strike us as peculiar. These three things may be summed up in the words—unlimited perfection, unapproachable dignity, and unconditioned power of action. The character of Jesus is so constituted that we cannot take away one single trait from it, or add one to it, without at once being sensible that we have not only altered but transfigured it.

The REV. FREDERICK WILLIAM FABER, D.D.

The Incarnation lies at the bottom of all sciences, and is their ultimate explanation. It is the secret beauty in all arts. It is the completeness of all philosophies. It is the point of arrival and departure to all history. The destinies of nations, as well as of individuals, group themselves around it. It purifies all happiness, and glorifies all sorrow. It is the cause of all we see, and the pledge of all we hope for. It is the great central fact, both of life and immortality, out of sight of which man's intellect wanders in the darkness, and the light of a Divine life falls not on his footsteps.

RICHARD CHENEVIX TRENCH (Archbishop of Dublin).

It has been to me an argument for the truth and dignity of His mission Who was its Author, to find that in Him all fullness dwelt, all lines concentrated, all hopes of the world were accomplished. For surely the King of Glory shows to us more glorious yet when we are able to contemplate Him not merely as the Prophet and Priest and King of the Covenant, but as the satisfier of vaguer, though not less real, aspirations, of more undefined longings, of more widespread hopes, when, looking at Him, we take note with the inspired seer, that on His head are many crowns; and, looking at His DOCTRINE, that not Israel only, but the isles also, had waited for His law.

and thus develop a religion which contradicts no law of human nature, lays a solid basis for society, and corrects, so far as they can be corrected, all the disorders to which humanity is subjected. . . .

To all others whom our hearts reverence we apply the terms GOODNESS, VIRTUE, PIETY. To Jesus alone, beside the Almighty, we apply the term HOLINESS. All the saints of old were imperfect. We cannot conceive of their entering heaven by any other gate than that of REPENTANCE. Jesus could enter it through the golden portal of INNOCENCE.

JAMES BARR WALKER.

Thus, while the Jews required a sign, and the Greeks sought after wisdom, the Apostles preached Christ crucified ; understanding the philosophy, the efficiency, of their doctrine. And so long as the world lasts, every man who reads the New Testament, whether saint or sinner, will be penetrated with the conviction that a vain, aspiring, selfish spirit is incompatible with the religion of Jesus.

JOSEPH P. THOMPSON.

The world has not yet outgrown the teachings of Christ. Great advances have been made in the physical sciences since His day, especially within our own times ; but science has discovered nothing more precious for the soul's culture than the truths that Christ brought into the world. The philosophy of humanity has grown to a science since Jesus taught, but this has advanced no doctrine of development or perfectibility more elevating or more encouraging than His.

Science dishonours itself when it affects to ignore the teachings of Christ ; for, whatever else is brought to light, His word is both light and life. . . .

JOHN MARSHALL LORRIE.

After His death the most remarkable and permanent power belonged to One Whose life, up to its latest moment, had been full of humiliation. His were the mighty words of the world. They were living and life-giving principles, which took hold upon men with regenerating power. There was nothing in His claims, His teachings, His promises, to inflame or to gratify the ordinary passions of men ; no honours fo be won, no ambition to be gratified, no sensual pleasures to be enjoyed. Yet His words were powerful as no other teachings have ever been upon the earth. They went forth trom the narrow boundaries of Judæa, and attacked the hoary prejudices and superstitions of the Pagan world ; and in a few centuries the Gospel of the despised Man of Galilee became the avowed faith of the Roman Empire. And now for many ages, during which hosts of great men have arisen and been forgotten, His words, wherever received in their simplicity, have had power to cast down superstition, to change the aspect of human society, to teach men the true principles of freedom, to awaken impulses that refine and strengthen and elevate humanity, and to support true morality and true piety, that seem strangely in contrast with the feeble attainments of His life-work, and with the apparent triumph of His foes in His death upon the Cross.

WILLIAM L. CHAFFIN.

It has long been a growing conviction with me that Jesus was a master-mind among the great thinkers of our race ; that what Plato was in philosophy, Newton in science, and Shakespeare as an interpreter of human nature, that, and more, was Jesus in the realm of morals and religion. It appears to me plainly evident that He was a gifted genius, a profound intellect, a most masterly thinker. . . . Who is the superior, or even rival, of Jesus? Who will correct, improve, or disprove His Gospel ? Where is the successor of Christianity ? This is the marvel—that eighteen centuries of thought and investigation have passed without discrowning this King of truth, or disproving His pre-eminence as the spiritual leader of mankind.

The prophet of Nazareth is not outgrown nor left behind in the progress of the ages ; and this proves His pre-eminence over all others. Indeed, He is far in advance, leading us yet ; and we have no more mastered the full significance of His teachings than we have matched and surpassed the greatness and beauty of His character and life.

WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING (American Divine).

. . . The Cæsar whose decree summoned the parents of Jesus to Bethlehem is known to millions only through the record of that Infant's life. The sages and heroes of antiquity are receding from us, and history contracts the record of their deeds into a narrow and narrower page. But time has no power over the name and deeds and words of Jesus Christ. From the darkness of the past they shine forth with sunlike splendour.

Such affection does His peculiar character inspire that to thousands now living the intervening ages since His Advent seem annihilated. They place themselves amidst the crowds who followed Him ; they hear His voice ; they look on His benignant countenance ; they cherish intimacy with Him, almost as if He were yet on earth.

No other fame can be compared with that of Jesus. He has a place in the human heart that no one who ever lived has in any measure rivalled. No name is pronounced with a tone of such love and veneration. All other laurels wither before His. His are kept ever fresh with tears of gratitude. . . .

ANDREW PRESTON PEABODY.

The character of Jesus Christ stands out alone, whether in fable or in history. Viewed in its human aspects, it is entirely unique. There is a blending, a harmonizing, of all seeming contrasts of moral excellence, of traits any one of which in equal lustre would have immortalized him in whom it shone forth among multiplied imperfections and foibles—magnanimity and humility; firmness and meekness; uncompromising justice and unexhausted benevolence; dignity and condescension; the spirit of command, and that of the lowliest service; purity in which the most watchful hostility can detect no stain, and tenderness for the lowest, vilest types of depravity; a walk with God so close that He seemed ever within temple gates, and yet a walk with man so genial, so friendly, loving, and helpful, that His eyes might seem never lifted above the surrounding world; a might stern and resolute, such as was never witnessed before or since in the conflict with evil, and a submission and resignation so serene and trustful, so gentle and kindly, as to call forth the admiration and sympathy of men whose lives had been passed in scenes of warfare and carnage. . . . In the galaxy of the greatly good, He is not a star a little brighter than the rest, but a sun in whose light the stars grow pale.

WILLIAM S. TYLER.

. . . Only He was the ALL-sided, the ALL-minded, the all-hearted, the all-comprehending type of humanity; the antitype of all that is beautiful and good in the past history and character of man, and the prototype of all that man is capable of becoming, all that a pure heart can wish, or a holy imagination can conceive, in the future progress of the race. . . . He was a Nazarene and Galilean only in origin. He had none of the rusticity of an obscure village; none of the narrowness of a despised province. Country and city were alike to Him. He taught with equal freedom and authority in a fisherman's boat on the Sea of Galilee, and in the Temple at Jerusalem. . . . The patience of Job, the faith of Abraham, the prayer of Jacob, the obedience of David, the courage of Elijah, the fortitude of Daniel, the seraphic joy of Isaiah and the sympathetic tenderness of Jeremiah, the zeal of Peter and the love of John, the believing works of James and the working faith and heroism of Paul; all the active, aggressive, energetic and heroic virtues of man; all the meek, gentle, loving and suffering graces of woman; and all the humble, truthful, affectionate and obedient spirit of the little child—all, and more than all, these virtues met in Him, without any of the excesses into which they are prone to run, without any of the defects which attend them in other men, each so complete in itself, and all so tempered and combined as to form a perfect whole. And yet, so far from dazzling us with the idea that this is superhuman excellence, which it is vain and almost impious for ordinary mortals to attempt to imitate, we feel all the time that it is human virtue, the very excellence which we were made to aspire after, and, in kind, to reach: nay, more, that He exemplified all the virtues before our eyes for the very PURPOSE of proving their practicability, and teaching and encouraging us, in His presence and in reliance on His aid, to practise them.

JOHN HARRIS.

Never was there a character at the same time so magnificent and unlaboured; so conscious of greatness, and so unostentatiously simple; so full of inspiration to the good, and so free from terror, so replete with encouragement to the outcast penitent. In His character met the whole constellation of the virtues, each one made brighter by contrast; but one overpowering sentiment softened and subjected them all to itself—one all-pervading law gave unity and harmony to His most opposite actions, interpreting all His words and looks, preventing Him, even in the most critical situations, from being at variance with Himself, or falling below His professed object; and that sentiment, that law, was love.

WHAT IS THE BRITISH-ISRAEL POSITION?

FIRST, we begin with the Divine self-revelation of God.

He first reveals Himself as the Creator of the Universe.—(Elohim.)

Next, He reveals Himself as Jehovah-Elohim who "formed" Adam and the Adamic Family. He further reveals Himself as the Judge of the Adamic Family, and of Satan who deceived them.—(Jehovah-Elohim.)

This is the one story of the Creation told in two sequent stages.

Beginning with the last paragraph of the fourth chapter of Genesis, and specifically with the fifth chapter, is set forth the progress of the "appointed" seed, descended as follows: God; Adam; Seth. This is the beginning of the Biblical history of the Covenant-bearing seed. In His relation to this seed and to His purpose through the seed God reveals Himself by the name—Jehovah.

This seed is traced from Seth to Noah; from Noah to Shem; from Shem to Abraham; Isaac; Jacob; Israel; and this is the heart of the narrative of the first eleven chapters of Genesis. It is the logical and necessary prelude to what follows.

Now comes the Covenant which has been the mainspring of history from that time to this; namely, the Abrahamic Covenant. This Covenant was made at a period approximately as far before Christ as we are after Christ; say 1927 B.C.

God reveals Himself in His relationship to mankind generally, at this period, as Elyon El (The Most High God). But to Abraham, for the purposes of the everlasting Covenant, He reveals Himself as El Shaddai—(The God-Father of the race).

The Covenant establishes the seed of Abraham through Isaac as the medium of Divine blessing to all the families of the earth.

The race was called in Abraham; born and dedicated in Isaac; regenerated and renamed Israel in Jacob.

The family thus covenanted descended to Egypt at the call of Joseph, under Jacob, seventy strong.

Digitized by Google

The family emerged from Egypt twelve-tribed, and numerous.

The family was organized into God's Kingdom-nation at Sinai, as we read in the xix-xx Exodus.

In that Kingdom-nation Jehovah established Himself as King FOR EVER.

To that Kingdom-nation at the same time Jehovah gave that Law which still forms the basis of the Common Law of Britain and the United States of America.

Thus the Kingdom of God was organized in the earth, consisting of (1) The nation—Israel, (2) The King—Jehovah, (3) The Law.

That nation was established in Palestine under Joshua.

In that nation was established the House, Throne and Kingdom of the House of David, also FOR EVER, which obviously includes our day.

The nation became two nations by Divine appointment in 975 B.C. These two nations were: the House of Israel, ten tribes; and the House of Judah, two tribes. In the House of Israel thus established into a separate nation there was no tribe of Judah. Therefore it is foolish to call separated Israel "Jews."

The House of David was established over Judah until the Captivity of Judah.

Other lines of Kings reigned over the House of Israel during the years it remained in the land of Israel.

In the meantime migrations of Israel people to Europe and Britain founded Ancient Britain.

The nation Israel was carried into captivity by Assyria 740-721 B.C.

The nation Judah was carried into captivity by Babylon, 604-587 B.C.

The House of David was removed by Nebuchadnezzar, who killed all the immediate male heirs, and by doing so made the eldest daughter the heir to the throne. Unconscious of this Israel law, he then allowed the female heir to the throne of David to go free.

A remnant of Judahites returned from Babylon and formed the nation of the Jews. They rebuilt Jerusalem and the Temple. They re-established the worship; but not the rule of David.

To them Christ came. HE REDEEMED His people Israel, and made Atonement for the sins of all mankind.

We preach the Gospel of Salvation thus provided—to and for "every creature," and urge all to accept Him as Saviour.

Meantime, Israel had colonized "the Isles." Isaiah plainly addressed his grandest prophetic message to Israel in the Isles, see from ch. xl to the end of Isaiah.

To that Colony the daughter of Zedekiah, bearing the throne-right, came, and there established the House, Throne and Kingdom of David.

To that Colony after ages of wandering the ten-tribed House of Israel came.

To that Colony most of the House of Judah also came; not bearing the name of Jews.

To that Colony the tribe of Benjamin came, having separated from Judah at the time of the destruction of the nation of the Jews in A.D. 70. They came to Britain as Normans.

That united Colony became the nation Israel regathered from all lands according to Divine prophecy.

That nation Israel is the Britain of the Christian dispensation, the Israel of prophecy.

That nation has expanded into a company of nations, and the great people of the U.S.A.

That nation and company of nations and great people are the Kingdom-nation of God still, and they are blindly carrying out the Divine plan.

That nation and company of nations at the Imperial Conference of 1926 so declared the Constitution of the Empire, that any nation can join the Empire, remaining a free and independent nation as all the present members are under the Crown.

The time is come for the nation to awake to its mighty privilege and glorious destiny as the agency which shall carry the blessings of the Kingdom to all nations of the earth.

Therefore, we are to-day calling all Israel-Britain to a knowledge of her High Mission, and of God's high purpose concerning her.

There is not a kingdom, nor a nation, nor a people, nor a tongue on earth which is not included in the great plan of the ages. But through the agency of Israel as God's Ministering Kingdom and Nation must the blessings of the Kingdom come to them. Therefore we are proclaiming "this Gospel of the Kingdom to all the world as a witness to all nations" at this time.

Will you not accept and help to spread the glad Evangel and by so doing help to prepare the Kingdom for the imminent return of Jesus Christ, for God shall give to Him the Throne of His father David, and He shall rule over the House of Jacob for ever?

It is shown in the history of Israel in Kings and Chronicles again and again, that when Israel's king and people repented and turned to God, He delivered them from the oppression of their enemies. In modern times, when Germany was winning the war on the Western Front, after nearly three and a half years of war, our King called the nation to a day of national repentance and prayer, and the war we were losing was won that year. Then what is the British-Israelite or any believer in God to do when the Great Day of God Almighty dawns? At once individually and collectively to ask that the King, representing the nation, shall call the whole Empire to national repentance before God, and put into operation the Sermon on the Mount—that is, the Divine Law giver to Israel as enlarged and illustrated by Our Lord—as the Common Law of the Kingdom.

"But thou hast not called upon Me, O Jacob; but thou hast been weary of Me, O Israel."

"Thou hast made Me to serve with thy sins; thou hast wearied Me with thine iniquities." "I, even I, am He that blotteth out thy transgressions for Mine own sake." "Yet will I be enquired of by the House of Israel to do it for them."

Our duty is to call the nation to immediate repentance, and to an instant return to Jehovah our God; to His law, and to His administration.

The following are His solemn words of warning:

"Prepare to meet thy God, O Israel," . . . "The Lord, the God of hosts is His name."

Digitized by Google

"For thus saith the Lord unto the house of Israel, Seek ye Me, and ye shall live . . ."

"Seek the Lord, and ye shall live. . . ."—Amos iv.

If the call to repentance be not given; or if such call should pass unheeded; then suffering, self-induced and unnecessary, will still be our portion, and lack of spiritual power and vision will continue to be our experience.

"The Church in the wilderness" was established in the nation Israel. Every citizen of the nation was also a member of the "congregation."

The Christian Church was established in Jerusalem at Pentecost, when there were gathered there "Jews (in religion), devout men out of every nation under heaven." These testified, "How hear we, every man in our own tongue wherein we were born." It was upon the congregation gathered out of this representative assembly, attending at Jerusalem for the feast of Pentecost, that the Holy Ghost descended, and constituted the Christian Church; in Jerusalem; of Israelites and Jews—as St. Peter indicates in his address. Israel, not the Gentile world, is the centre of the Church of Christ.

From Jerusalem, in the first decade after the Resurrection, during the time that St. James presided in the Church (see Acts xv), the Gospel was brought to Britain, and the Church organized here.

Thus Britain is the centre of God's Kingdom; and His Church is established within that Kingdom.

THE PALM-BEARERS.

THE following seven marks of the Palm-Bearers dovetail and correspond with the prophetic promises to Ephraim exactly; and their obvious correspondence must demonstrate to every impartial Bible student their absolute identity.

1st.—The Palm-Bearers are a "fullness" or "MULTITUDE OF NATIONS" "which no man can number." This strictly agrees with the prophetic language of Jacob's parting blessing on Ephraim in Genesis xlviii, 19; with Moses' dying benediction in Deut. xxxiii, 17; with Jeremiah's words in chap. iii, 19; and with St. Paul's in Romans xi, 25.

2nd.—The Palm-Bearers are a "GATHERED," or RE-GATHERED, multitude or fullness. So says Micah in chaps. ii and iv of Ephraim, and Ezekiel in chap. xxxvii, and Jeremiah in chap. xxxi.

3rd.—The Palm-Bearers are a WHITE-ROBED, or CHRIST-JUSTIFIED multitude. This also is a definite mark of once scattered Ephraim, as in Isaiah xlv, and Jeremiah xxiii, glorying in the Name of "the Lord Our Righteousness," just as the doctrine of Justification by faith only is the boast of our Protestant Nations and Churches.

4th.—The Palm-Bearers glory in a present and perfect salvation by God and the Lamb only. So, as Moses celebrates it, the distinguishing mark of Christian Israel was to be a "people saved by the Lord." (Deut. xxxiii.) So says Isaiah (xlv), "In the Lord shall all the seed of Israel glory." And our National Liturgy and Thirty-nine Articles are full of this "daily boast of God."

5th.—The representation of the Palm-Bearers is that of the four living creatures and twenty-four elders—or of Israel's "Kingdom of Priests." So we learn from Exodus xix, 1 Peter ii, and the promised revival of Ephraim's priesthood as the "firstborn" in Christ, after being rejected under the Law. (Hosea iv, 6.) This mark, too, as it is distinctly Israelite and primarily Ephraimite, is also British. It is the fundamental principle of our Nationally Established Church, in which as the secular Head of the Church the Sovereign becomes invested, as were David and Solomon, with a kind of derived or secondary priestly character and function. And beyond all controversy, in harmony with this unchangeable purpose of Divine grace, the spiritual stewardship or priesthood of the world has been committed to the Anglo-Saxon race.

6th.—A distinct British-Israel mark of the Palm-Bearers is that of "COMING OUT OF THE GREAT TRIBULATION." It must be noted the text does not say they "have come," but "ARE TO COME" (ERKOMENOI) out of the "Great Tribulation." Now this is plainly that which precedes the Second Advent, as it is so definitely described "THE Tribulation, THE Great One," with the repeated article; and it is evidently what Jeremiah calls "Jacob's Trouble" (xxx, 7), or that similarly spoken of by Daniel (xii, 1). It is the "Tribulation" which crowns and sums up all previous struggles of God's Israel against the Roman world from the days of Arminius and of St. John downwards, especially, and in the end, that against the great Northern foe, the "Prince of Rosh" and his Latin confederates (Ezekiel xxxviii and xxxix, Joel ii and iii, etc.). It is the victory of New Covenant Israel's "final perseverance," in contrast with the fall under the Old Testament, and is the immediate precursor and cause of the Millennium. And with this death struggle of Ephraim in Greater Britain with the Russian despotism, which, like Goliath, is advancing towards us with giant strides, becoming daily more "within the range of actual politics"; the identification of these last competitors for world-empire becomes less a matter of prophetic interpretation than of actual observation. But Israel's God, Who has brought us hitherto, will not forsake us in this supreme conflict. We shall be "saved out of it."

7th.—The last infallible sign of New Covenant Israel which these Palm-Bearers have is that it is written of them, "the Lamb that is in the midst of the throne shall be their Shepherd." Now the language of Holy Scripture is not loose and variable, to be adapted to any fanciful theory, but as fixed and definite as the nomenclature of any science. To whom, then, is Christ "the Shepherd"? Psalm lxxx, in harmony with all other Scriptures, as Ezekiel xxxiv, replies, in plain allusion to the last fight through which the sheep of Israel are to pass under their good and great Shepherd; who, when assailed by the wolves of hell, cry out to Him—Hear, O thou Shepherd of Israel, Thou that leadest JOSEPH like a flock. Before Ephraim, Benjamin and Manasseh (England and the United States), stir up Thy strength and come and save us! Compare with this description Ezekiel xxxiv, 11-16, Behold, I Myself will seek out My sheep. I will deliver them out of all places where they have been scattered in the day of clouds and thick darkness. (See Joel ii.) "I will bring them into their own land, and I will feed them upon the mountains of Israel BY THE WATER COURSES in a good pasture," etc. These two promises of Christ by the Holy Ghost confirm and explain each other.

And the same logic of history, as well as the fulfilment of Holy Scripture in the past and present, and in the assured future, assign this glorious destiny especially to a converted. redeemed and restored Christian Britain.

O what a Palm-Bearing will there be! What a grand Christmas Festival—a crowning "Feast of Tabernacles"! "Sing ye to the Lord, for He hath triumphed gloriously!"

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

BY THE REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A.

QUESTION.—Will you explain why in Revelation vii, in speaking of the numbers sealed in each tribe, Dan and Ephraim are left out of the list, and Joseph and Levi substituted? This seems strange, in that all through the wanderings, and in parcelling out the land, these both were counted, and Joseph and Levi were apparently dropped.—J. W. C., also R. P.

ANSWER.—This question has been asked and answered before, and the query constantly arises, although there is not such a difficulty about it as at first seems apparent.

Several theories have been advanced to account for the omission of Dan in Rev. vii. All are agreed that the name of Dan is omitted, and that the name of Manasseh is introduced in its stead. But there is no evidence to support an old suggestion that St. John originally wrote " Dan," and that copyists in error. wrote " Man " as a contraction for Manasseh, since both Irenæus (a pupil of St. John) and Origen refer to the omission of Dan.

A probable plea is that the name of Dan is omitted here merely to preserve the number Twelve, Joseph appearing twice—once in his own person (verse 8), and once in the person of Manasseh, the name Joseph thus including Ephraim. Levi is certainly mentioned, although his tribe had no tribal inheritance.

The Fathers generally—referring to Gen. xlix, 17, " Dan shall be a serpent by the way, an adder in the path," and also to the imagery of Rev. xii, 9 ; xx, 2, where the serpent symbolizes the power of evil—explain the omission of Dan by the belief that Antichrist was to rise from this tribe. Thus, St. Hippolytus (De Antichr., c. 14) observes that as Christ has been born from the tribe of Judah, so, according to Jacob's words (Gen. xlix, 17), will Antichrist be born from the tribe of Dan. Either from a misundertsanding of Gen. xlix, 17, or from the story of Judges xviii, Dan is associated in Rabbinical lore with idolatry and apostasy. The Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs seem to predict an alliance between Dan and Beliar. The Christian tradition which assigns Antichrist to the tribe of Dan may be due partly to Jewish sources, and partly to this omission of Dan from the Apocalyptic list, nor must it be forgotten that the Jewish writers represent the name of Dan as a byword for idolatry.

It will be noticed that the name of Dan as applied to the tribe disappears after 1 Chron. xxvii, 22, and is kept alive only in the name of the northern city (Laish) ; see Josh. xix, 47 ; Judg. xviii, 7, 29 ; 2 Chron. xvi, 4 ; Jer. iv, 15. The omission of the tribe of Dan from later history, when we consider its war-like prowess and the fame of Samson (Hercules), is more than remarkable, and it may support the belief that Dan had already migrated westward in early days, and so disappeared from Palestinian and Old Testament history.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

WILL our readers everywhere, and especially Overseas, please note that the Tenth Congress is fixed to open on September 30th next (D.V.)?

* * *

Mr. John Leech opened his series of addresses on Prophecy at Headquarters on March 20th to a large audience. He continues them on Wednesday of this week and on Wednesday afternoon next. The Rev. Chas. Cooper, F.G.S., gave on March 21st his address on "The Kingdom of God," with a very helpful chart. There will be no meeting at Headquarters on Thursday next owing to those in the Kensington Town Hall that day and on the Friday, when the Rev. Pascoe Goard is to give four addresses at 3 and 8.15.

We are grateful for the excellent response to our call for volunteers for the distribution of circulars for the Kensington meetings; we want more please, and also places for window bills.

Mrs. Zoé Bell's monthly Bible Class for women will meet at Headquarters on Saturday, April 6th, at 3 p.m.

We have wonderfully encouraging letters from many parts of the world. A. M. S. writes from Alberta, Canada :—"My wife and I are deeply interested in the wonderful messages in your journal. We have been Bible students and workers in the Church and Sunday School of the Motherland as well as in this country for nearly fifty years. From no commentary or exposition have we derived the light which has come through your publication. Its arrival is eagerly looked for each week, and the articles are eagerly read. They have been a source of much profit and inspiration in the work in which the Lord permits us to join."

Two excellent lectures at the Dover Branch were given on March 14th to the largest audiences of the session there, by Lieut.-Col. G. F. A. Smythe, his subjects, "Did St. Paul come to Britain?" and "Who were the Druids?" stirring up great interest, and inducing many questions. Mr. Tarrant and Mr. Sutton, O.B.E., were in the chair. The prayer meetings in connection with this Branch are very encouraging.

The Rev. James Strathan, D.D., writing in Hebrew Ideals on Nationality says :—"The Lord said unto Abraham, 'I will establish My Covenant between Me and thy seed after thee. . . . As for thee, thou shalt keep My covenant, thou and thy seed after thee.' He makes His Covenant with the people or nation. The idea of a Covenanted nation was the heart of the Hebrew religion and the life-blood of Hebrew history. The Hebrews had the unalterable conviction that God had entered into a Covenant with their race, and that they had solemnly bound themselves to be His people and to serve Him. The Covenant ideal was at once the consecration and the inspiration of the people. There was the spirit of duty and service and self-surrender in it; there was the spirit of power and freedom and invincibility in it. It is well known that the ideal of a nation in Covenant with God has had an extraordinary fascination for the people of Scotland. Of its value and power one of the greatest of living Scotsmen has spoken thus: 'A thought has played a large part in Scottish history. Side by side with the intense type of personal piety there was, in Reformation and later days, an equally clear perception of the duty, not of a Church, but of a nation to its God. . . . When our typical form of individual piety is taken, as it ought always to be taken, along with the old desire to make the collective life of a community subserve the ends of righteousness, to make the nation an instrument of doing God's will on earth, our hereditary ideal of religion—I at least will not hesitate to avow it—is the grandest, the broadest which any Church or land has ever endeavoured to embody throughout the nineteen Christian centuries. The thought of a Covenanted nation was both great and true—a thought most difficult in virtue of its greatness to apply in adequate detail, but better fitted to raise men's daily practice out of selfishness and sin, and to make them fellow-workers with the risen Christ, than any separate thought in the history of the Universal Church.'"

There is a very great demand on the new special number of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER, and we urge our Branches and all our readers to send for copies as quickly as possible. Excellent propaganda work is being done by these copies, and they should be used to the utmost. There is no time to lose, and the opportunity is not one to be missed for rendering good service to our Cause.

H. W. T. writes :—"I take this opportunity of expressing my very real appreciation for such a publication as THE NATIONAL MESSAGE. It has helped me in my life, and in my efforts to serve, as no other journal or paper has ever done."

A pastor of one of the largest congregations in the Orient writes from India :—"I am more and more a confirmed British-Israelite, and I greatly enjoy the many splendid articles in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER. Surely there is something more even than the leaders of the Movement see in this great matter. Some day the light will be shed abroad among God's people, and there will be a shaking of this old world to its foundation."

A. B.-I. believer in Llandaff writes :—"Since 1867 I have heard six Deans, two Bishops, and a great number of clergy at Llandaff Cathedral. I have also heard Moody and Sankey, Father Ignatius, Dr. Talmadge, Evan Roberts, Toon Alexander, and a large number of eminent men, but I have not found any that have given me the satisfaction I so earnestly have sought for as does the British-Israel teaching."

The Rev. T. H. Whitehouse has so far recovered from his recent illness as to resume many of his activities, and has recently lectured to good meetings at Birmingham, Coventry, Burton, Dunchurch, Rugby, Derby and Cheltenham. It was a deep sorrow and regret to him to have to hurriedly cancel so many engagements, and he is much touched by the kindly expressions of those who had to suffer the consequent inconvenience.

We regret to announce the passing away of two of our veterans of Lancashire. Mr. W. Cooke, of Leyland, who attended a meeting of Preston Branch on February 21st, though he could hardly speak, and was unable to occupy the chair; he had a seizure on February 24th, and passed away on the 27th, aged 72; he was Secretary of the Preston B.-I. Association over forty years ago; and Mr. Pruce, of the Liverpool Branch, whose Biblical knowledge was profound, passed away a week later, aged 83. Mr. Steele writes: "I feel the loss of our two stalwarts in the Truth. I was in communication with Mr. Cooke, who never lost an opportunity in public or private of advocating our Cause, regarding opening a Branch at Leyland. To Mr. Pruce I owe a debt of gratitude which can never be repaid. It was owing to his advocacy, assisted by Mrs. Pruce, that I was first constrained to study the Truth which has meant so much to me. He had read the BANNER from the issue of the first number, and attended meetings of the three Branches in Liverpool, held in church halls, and addressed by Edward Hine over forty years ago." We tender our sympathy with their sorrowing relatives.

The lecturer at the Liverpool Branch meeting on March 14th was the Rev. G. W. Plasting, who gave a most instructive and illuminating address on "The New Government Required." He traced the principal Governments of the world from theocracy of Israel, which they afterwards forsook, to bureaucracy, autocracy, and democracy of our day, all of which have failed, as witness the perplexity of nations in this our day. Our only hope is to get back to the rule of God, keeping the laws as given in the Bible, by which our national burdens, disease, unemployment, want and distress would cease to be. The lecturer was accorded a hearty vote of thanks.

The lesson of unworldliness is one of the most important lessons for men of all ranks to learn. The example of Christ teaches this lesson in perfection. Few faults are more common, even in religious persons, than worldliness. Indeed, there is a kind of religion which finds it possible to reconcile Christianity with an extreme degree of worldliness. No worldliness is so intense as religious worldliness; no pride is so intense as spiritual pride; yet both are found among those who call themselves followers of Him Whose distinguishing characteristics were His utter unworldliness and His deep lowliness of heart!

The Rev. Dr. F.M.R. writes from Palestine:—"Recently I met a Mohammedan high in their circle and he asked me, 'Why do you not believe in Mohammed? I believe in Jesus and in Mohammed.' My answer was, 'I have come to tell you of Jesus the Crucified, Who has arisen from the dead and Who will come again soon.'"

He asked, 'But why do you not believe in Mohammed? Do you believe Mohammed was a prophet?' I answered, 'I have come to tell you of the Christ Who was crucified, Who bore the sins of the world, Who has arisen and ascended to Heaven and will come again soon.'

But he came again and said, 'Why do you not believe in Mohammed?' I answered 'My mission is to preach repentance toward God and man. To tell the world that Jesus was crucified, and that He arose from the dead and ascended to Heaven and will come again soon.'

Then he smiled and said, 'Good, good, tell us some more, and tell it again.'"

Toronto had the opportunity of hearing two well-thought-out addresses from Rev. H. W. W. Bromwich on February 20th and 21st. Speaking at the Toronto East Branch on Wednesday evening, with the aid of charts, he showed the various stages in the salvation and regeneration of man. On Thursday evening, at the Toronto Central Branch, he showed himself to be a keen student of prophecy. It is an encouraging sign to see the clergy in increasing numbers coming on our platform.

A Sussex Vicar writes to Rev. Pascoe Goard:—"Let me thank you very warmly indeed for the very great kindness you have done me in sending this valuable literature; I had wanted to afford these books, but felt I must postpone their purchase. I have spent every available moment in their study, and they have provided me with the precise information I have been looking for in vain for years, and, incidentally, they are being enjoyed by my dear son, who with me has been following up the British-Israel Truth for some years.

So satisfied am I of its significance that I have begun a series of sermons on this subject for Lent, and you can therefore imagine what a godsend this packet of books is, and will be, to me—none of it is wasted in my case."

4,765 CHURCHES CAMPAIGN

Nation-wide Effort to make known the Claims of the LORD'S Day

Believing that the tide of Sabbath Desecration in our land can best be arrested by making known the Claims of Christ concerning the Lord's Day, it has been arranged to set apart Sunday April 7th as Come-to-Church Sunday. 4,765 Churches of all Denominations are taking part. The aim is to call back our countrymen to the neglected House of Prayer.

We ask: Can people better spend the Lord's Day than by assembling themselves together in the Lord's House for the worship of His All-Glorious Name?

The 4,765 Services are to begin with the singing of Bishop Christopher Wordsworth's Lord's Day hymn, "O Day of Rest and Gladness, O Day of Joy and Light." Special Sermons will also be preached emphasising the uses of the Christian Sabbath. The task of organising has been carried through by the Lord's Day Observance Society.

From Sabbath Desecration

National Message readers are invited to pray for this great Nation-wide effort to preserve in our land the Sabbath, God's Covenant Sign.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

DOMINION STATUS FOR PALESTINE?

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD, F.R.G.S.

THERE is a Society formed to work for the securing of Dominion status in the Empire for Palestine. Is this feasible?

The question raised is larger than that of Palestine. The same question might be asked regarding India, and also regarding Egypt.

What is it that constitutes a Dominion?

The first element in a Dominion is the Crown. The Crown which unites the Empire in a common loyalty must be the Chief Executive of the Dominion so formed.

The second element is the Law—that is to say, the Common Law of the Anglo-Saxon people. It is the Common Law that the Crown is sworn to defend and to administer.

The third and basic element is a people trained in the law, or, as the Bible puts it, "the people in whose heart is my law."

Granted these three elements, then it is possible to form any number of Dominions, and they will remain one Empire.

Now there are some things which must be taken into consideration. The Parliaments of each Dominion have great power. The Crown has little power, and must depend on the influence of the Crown, and on the inherent loyalty of the people, to the law. Otherwise what guarantee is there that other systems of law and other practices will not be introduced?

In Britain and all Anglo-Saxondom there runs the Common Law, which holds all men as equal in the eyes of the law, and which holds all men innocent before the law until they are proved to be guilty.

On the adjoining Continent the Roman or Civil Law obtains, which classifies society into orders; for instance, the equestrian order and the pedestrian order; the rights of one being superior to the rights of the other and lower order, and which holds every man to be guilty before the law until he proves himself to be innocent.

In Turkey there runs, or has until very lately, the Mohammedan Law.

In Italy there has been reintroduced the Canon Law.

In Russia there is no law, but, in its place, the Marxian theory, in the hands of irresponsible experimenters, with the life blood of the nation so unhappily subject to it.

The only guarantee of the carrying on of the Common Law, which, next to the Gospel, is the richest heritage of Britain, and the second greatest gift Britain has for the nations, is the inherent loyalty of the people to the law.

That loyalty cannot be developed in one generation nor in two. It has taken the Israel-British people four thousand years to develop that loyalty. During that time the Lord has written the law upon our hearts.

Instinctive understanding and administration of the law can only come with ages of experience and training. Righteous administration is only possible in the hands of a people so trained. Automatic obedience, so that action in accordance with the law becomes second nature, comes as a heritage of the centuries. Very few among us break the law. The majority of us act in accordance with the law. And yet scarcely any of us know the law. Obedience has become instinctive. The law is in our hearts.

Now Palestine has received the King.

Palestine has received the law.

Digitized by Google

But has Palestine received the people in whose hearts is the law?

The Arab was never subject to the Common Law until since the war. He is not in instinctive unison with it. He is not loyal to it. He does not desire to obey it.

The Jew who is going into Palestine is of the Russian variety. He has never been under the Common Law. He has been under the Civil Law on the Continent, and it has not assured to him equality before the law.

In the past he has been under the Canon Law, which gives the ecclesiastical authorities power over property and person, and he has in the past suffered horribly and has not forgotten his suffering. He has been under Mohammedan Law, and under it has been under disability and oppression. He has had little or no experience of the Common Law, although it is the law of the Bible. He is not loyal to the law. He is not loyal to the Crown. He is imbued with the Marxian theories and its development in Bolshevism.

The Anglo-Saxon element is simply that of a skeleton army of occupation, civil and military.

Where then is the ground on which to build a British Dominion?

The Bolshevik Jew would turn the land into a Soviet State. The Arab would bring it back to the tribal and feudal State.

Granted a Parliament of these elements, and an administration by them, what should we be prepared to see develop?

It would seem to us that the position of a State which is an extension of Britain, such as it is now, is the best possible for the time being. When there has been received and absorbed, as there will by and by, a sufficient backbone of Anglo-Saxon Israelites to furnish the ethnological foundation, then will be the time to form Palestine into a Dominion; not now.

Moreover, the idea of making a national home for the Jews in Palestine is, as a matter of fact, a sentimental dream with no element of reality at the present time. THE JEWS ARE NOT HEADING FOR PALESTINE. AS A MATTER OF IMMIGRATION RECORD IT IS SHOWN TO BE A FACT THAT THEY ARE HEADING FOR THE ANGLO-SAXON COUNTRIES, BRITAIN AND AMERICA.

Their march westward into these lands has been numbered by the million since the war. Their increase in Palestine during that time is to be estimated by a very few thousand.

Neither is it Scriptural that they shall be restored to Palestine except as a tribe in Israel.

We feel no antagonism to the thought of Palestine being a national home for the Jews as far as their former territory of Judea is concerned. But the majority of the tribe of Judah not at present to be found among those called Jews, nor identified with them, might have some ground for complaint that we are voting to a remnant that which belongs to the tribe as a whole, and which, in all fairness, belongs to that part of Judah which has accepted Christ the Messiah, and which has so fully identified itself with Israel as to have been lost to sight by the Jews.

There will be wild work in Palestine yet. No matter what form of Government is set up, it cannot protect that land from the last great catastrophe when the hosts of "hamon Gog" will invade and fall upon its soil.

It seems to us to be best to carry on for the time as matters are, and await God's good time for the unfolding of His purpose there. Israel is to return to Palestine without question. But it is a matter of Bible knowledge which no careful reader can miss, that the Israel known to Our Lord, to the Prophets, the Evangelists, and to the Apostles, had no tribe of Judah in it.

The tribe of Judah formed the basis of another, and rival, kingdom, often hostile to Israel. In the end that breach shall be healed by Judah walking to Israel, but never by Israel walking to Judah. Judah reunited to Israel will return in good time to Palestine with us. There is no promise that Judah shall return otherwise. And the plan of God in this connection is most clearly written, although it has not been rightly read by the Christian Church hitherto.

Let our rulers rightly read the matter now, and avoid creating trouble by trying to form Anglo-Saxon Dominions without Anglo-Saxon people trained by God in the law to maintain them after they are formed.

THE SPIRITUAL SIGNIFICANCE OF NUMBERS.

NUMBERS are used in Scripture, not merely as in Nature, with SUPERNATURAL DESIGN, but with SPIRITUAL SIGNIFICANCE, which may be summarized as follows*:—

ONE. Denotes UNITY and COMMENCEMENT. The first occurrences of words or utterances denote their essential significance in interpretation. Words that occur only once, in the originals, are emphatic and important. First day, Light. The first occurrences of all important words and expressions are noted in the margin.

TWO. Denotes DIFFERENCE. If two different persons AGREE in testimony it is conclusive. Otherwise two implies OPPOSITION, ENMITY and DIVISION, as was the work of the second day. Compare the use of the word "double" applied to "heart," "tongue," "mind," etc.

THREE. Denotes COMPLETENESS, as three lines complete a plane figure. Hence, three is significant of Divine perfection and completeness. The third day completes the fundamentals of creation-work. The fourth, fifth and sixth days are the counterpart and repetition of the first, second and third, and correspond respectively. (See the structure of Gen. i, p. 3.) The number, three, includes RESURRECTION also; for on the third day the earth ROSE UP out of the deep, and fruit rose up out of the earth.

FOUR. Denotes CREATIVE WORKS (3 plus 1), and always has reference to the material creation, as pertaining to the EARTH, and things "under the sun," and things terrestrial.

FIVE. Denotes Divine GRACE. It is 4 plus 1. It is God adding His gifts and blessing to the works of His hands. The Heb. HA'ARETZ (the earth) by "Gematria" (i.e., the addition of the numerical value of the letters together) is a multiple of four, while HASHAMAYIM (the heavens) is a multiple of five. The Gematria of Χάρις (CHARIS), the Greek for GRACE, is also a multiple of five. It is the leading factor in the Tabernacle measurements.

SIX. Denotes the HUMAN NUMBER. Man was created on the SIXTH day; and this first occurrence of the number makes it (and all multiples of it) the hall-mark of all connected with man. He works six days. The hours of his day are a multiple of six. Athaliah usurped the throne of Judah six years. The great men who have stood out in defiance of God (Goliath and Nebuchadnezzar and Antichrist) are all emphatically marked by this number.

* The whole subject may be studied in Dr. Bullinger's work on Number in Scripture, which can be obtained from the Covenant. Publishing Co., 6, Buckingham Gate, London, S.W.1

SEVEN. Denotes SPIRITUAL PERFECTION. It is the number or hall-mark of the Holy Spirit's work. He is the Author of God's Word, and seven is stamped on it, as the water-mark is seen in the manufacture of paper. He is the Author and Giver of LIFE; and seven is the number which regulates every period of incubation and gestation in insects, birds, animals and man.

EIGHT. Denotes RESURRECTION, REGENERATION; a new beginning or commencement. The eighth is a new first. Hence the octave in music, colour, days of the week, etc. It is the number which has to do with the Lord, Who rose on the eighth, or new "first-day." This is, therefore, the DOMINICAL number. By Gematria (see above), Ἰησοῦς (JESUS) makes the numbers 888. It, or its multiple, is impressed on all that has to do with the Lord's Names, the Lord's People, the Lord's works.

NINE. Denotes FINALITY OF JUDGMENT. It is 3 × 3, the PRODUCT of Divine completeness. The number nine, or its factors or multiples, is seen in all cases when JUDGMENT is the subject.

TEN. Denotes ORDINAL PERFECTION. Another new first; after the ninth digit, when numeration commences anew.

ELEVEN. Denotes DISORDER, DISORGANIZATION, because it is one short of the number twelve (see below).

TWELVE. Denotes GOVERNMENTAL PERFECTION. It is the number or factor of all numbers connected with government: whether by Tribes or Apostles, or in measurements of time, or in things which have to do with government in the heavens and the earth.

THIRTEEN. Denotes REBELLION, APOSTASY, DEFECTION, DISINTEGRATION, REVOLUTION, etc. The first occurrence fixes this (Gen. xiv, 4); and the second confirms it (Gen. xvii, 25). It, and its multiples, are seen in all numbers, and in the Gematria (see above) of all names and passages that are associated with rebellion, etc.

SEVENTEEN. Denotes a combination of SPIRIT and ORDER (10 plus 7). It is the seventh prime number (as 13 is the sixth prime number).

Other numbers follow the laws which govern the smaller numbers, as being their factors, sums, products or multiples; e.g., 24 is 12 × 2, a higher form of 12.

$25 = 5^2$. Grace intensified.
$27 = 3^3$. Divinity intensified.
$28 = 7 \times 4$. Spiritual perfection in connection with the earth.
$30 = 3 \times 10$. Divine perfection, applied to order.
$40 = 10 \times 4$. Divine order applied to earthly things. Hence the number of PROBATION.

The four PERFECT NUMBERS, 3, 7, 10 and 12, have for their product the remarkable number 2,520. It is the least Common Multiple of the ten digits governing all numeration; and can, therefore, be divided by each of the nine digits without a remainder. It is the number of chronological perfection (7 × 360).—(From the "Companion Bible.")

EARLY BRITISH HISTORY AND CULTURE.

By HENRY PROCTOR, F.R.S.L.

No opposition to British-Israel Truth can be sustained from Scripture. It must be raised from History. And we are too apt to imagine that what we have read in history and learned from childhood must be trustworthy. But the discoveries which have been made in the field of archæology during the last half-century have tended largely to explode the baseless theories on which the early history of Britain has been founded. Far from being the "painted savages" which we, as children, were taught to regard our ancestors, it is now known that before the time of Julius Cæsar a high state of civilization existed in these Islands, for "When he wrote an account of his two expeditions to Britain, which were made in 55 B.C. and 54 B.C., he told that the inhabitants were numerous, that the houses were similar to those of Gaul, and that the people in the south had farms and flocks and herds. Chariots were used in battle, and the drivers were so well-trained that they could pull up or turn their horses at a moment's notice, and run out along the chariot-pole to stand astride the yoke, and then return quickly with astonishing dexterity." Pytheas, who visited Britain in 330 B.C.,

"SAW FARMS IN BRITAIN.

Instead of using open-air threshing floors, such as were known in Southern Europe, the British farmers carried their corn-ears into barns and threshed them there. They had many domesticated animals." Poseidonius, a Greek writer who visited Britain, found it was and he saw many farms. "A number of kings and chiefs govern the country, and these as a rule live in peace with one another." "In Cornwall the people were friendly to strangers. They worked the tin mines there, and conveyed tin in great quantities in their wagons to an island called Ictis, which could be reached at low tide. There it was purchased by merchants who transported it to Gaul, across which country it was carried by horses to the Mediterranean coast."*

"THICKLY POPULATED,"

"The enamels of the ancient Britons in England, Ireland and Scotland are the FINEST EVER MANUFACTURED

by any craftsmen in the world. It is evident that there were highly-skilled artisans and decorative artists in Britain prior to the Roman occupation. Metal-working had reached

A HIGH STATE OF EXCELLENCE.

It is a mistake to imagine that the ancient Britons were merely half-savage and treacherous people, 'running wild in the woods,' until Roman civilization was introduced."*

"Some centuries before the Roman occupation

A SYSTEM OF GOLD COINAGE

was established in England. Trade with the Continent appears to have greatly increased in volume and complexity. The evidence afforded by the Irish (Gaelic) manuscripts, which refer to events before and after the Roman conquest of Britain, shows that Society was well Organized, and that the organization was of non-Roman character."†

In further reference to the gold coinage used in Britain before the Roman occupation, we may again quote "Ancient Man in Britain." "Gold is a useless metal for all practical purposes. It is too soft for implements. The men who first 'washed' it from the soil in Britain must have obtained the necessary knowledge and skill in a country where it was more plentiful and much easier to work." This certainly points to the Holy Land.

It was always plentiful with Israel even in the wilderness. In the reign of Solomon it is said: "The amount of gold which came to Solomon in one year was nearly 29 tons, in addition to that derived from taxes and tribute." (1 Kings x, 14, Moffatt.)

"The view favoured by some historians that our ancestors were, prior to the Roman invasion, mere 'savages' can no longer obtain. It is clearly without justification. Nor are we justified in perpetuating the equally hazardous theory that early British culture was of indigenous origin, and passed through a series of evolutionary stages, in isolation, until the country offered sufficient attractions to induce first the Celts and afterwards the Romans to conquer it." "The evidence accumulated by archæologists is sufficient to prove that Britain had inherited from seats of ancient civilization and technical skill in metal-working, etc., many centuries before Rome was built." "Many writers, who have accepted without question the statements of certain Roman writers regarding the early Britons and ignored the evidence that archæological relics provide regarding the arts and crafts and social conditions of pre-Roman times, have in the past written in depreciatory vein regarding the ancestors of the majority of the present population of these Islands, who suffered so severely at the altar of Roman ambition. Everything Roman has been glorified; Roman victories over British 'barbarians' have been included among the 'blessings' of civilization." "A people who used chariots and horses and artificers displaying the artistic skill of those found in ancient Britain, had reached a comparatively high state of civilization." This civilization came from the East. "At an early period in the Early Agricultural Age and before bronze working was introduced, England and Wales, Scotland and Ireland, were influenced more directly than had hitherto been known to be the case by the high civilizations of Egypt and Mesopotamia, and especially by their colonies in South Western Europe."

A High Degree of Culture

We know that there were Hebrew colonies in Spain and other European countries, whence came the Celtiberians or Celtic Hebrews. So that it is easy to discern that the British culture described above as coming from Egypt and Mesopotamia was that of our Hebrew ancestors.

DR. GORE'S NEW COMMENTARY.

By Rev. Dyson Hague. D.D.

YOUR readers must have read with great interest your comment upon Gore's Commentary in The Globe. There can be no doubt that the writer took a fair and thoughtful view. But what one feels with regard to the Commentary as a whole is that it is on the wrong side. In nine cases out of ten throughout it sides with what is called "The Critical School." Its tendency throughout is unquestionably to weaken faith in the Bible, and to shake the old foundations of trust and faith in the Bible as the Word of God. As a whole, it makes the fundamental error of the modern school of attempting to establish faith in the New Testament by disestablishing faith in the Old. You cannot settle by unsettling, or strengthen by weakening. When one compares with it the magnificent Commentaries of the past, the Speaker's Commentary, the Pulpit Commentary, the introductions to the Biblical Illustrator, one is struck at once with the immense gap that yawns between the writings of men who accept the Bible as a Divine revelation, stamped with Divine inspiration and authority, and those who regard the early chapters of Genesis as unhistoric folklore, and follow generally the conclusions of what are called the Higher Critics. As a matter of fact, the Commentary accepts the position of the Critical School, both with regard to the Old and, in measure, with regard to the New Testament. In Genesis the writer follows Driver like a child, and it is well known that Driver follows Wellhausen and Keunen and accepts most positively the theory of the J. E. P. D. documents. "It was in rationalistic workshops," says Professor Orr, "that the critical theory was elaborated. It is rationalistic in its basis and in every fibre of its construction." It is a thousand pities, therefore, that such eminent scholars should have accepted and exploited views which, in the beginning, were elaborated by men who were the foes to supernatural religion and to the Bible as the Churches accept it. I have been reading very carefully during the last week the pages of Gore and Peake and, in almost parallel columns, the writings of those great scholars, Professor Green of Princeton and Professor Orr of Glasgow and the Rev. A. H. Finn, whose masterly work on the "Unity of the Pentateuch" ought to be studied carefully by every advocate of the modernist position. The great contention of the Driver-Gore school is that we must follow truth, and the conclusions of scholarship must be accepted. That truth is mighty and must prevail, thank God, we all believe; but scholarship is a different matter. While I would not say that the new Commentary is characterized by daring profanity and colossal ignorance, as one Old Country critic asserted, or that it is not an intelligent book for all its pretence of learning, I would say without any hesitation that nearly all the writers in Gore follow the leading of men whose scholarship, based on purely literary grounds, nearly always tend to the end of eliminating the supernatural; and their methods, in spite of all the high claim of scholarship, are sometimes positively fantastic. They ignore the fact that their supposed discrepancies can easily be harmonized, the inconsistencies and incongruities and anachronisms that they discover can be explained, and the passages they suppose to indicate differences of authorships, interpolating designers, variant accounts and diversities of authorship, can be and have been accounted for by a reverent and earnest investigation. Both Green and Orr have torn into many more fragments the hypotheses of the critics than the critics have torn into pieces the books of the Pentateuch and the prophecies of Isaiah and Zechariah. What saddens one about the whole of the Commentary and of the modernist treatment is the avidity with which they seize any text or chapter that seems to support in any way the rationalistic position, or may be taken as affording evidence for the rationalistic view. They say they cannot maintain any longer the old literal approach to the Bible. But that is a very different thing from greedily swallowing the main theories of the destructive school of Biblical criticism. They are obsessed with a fear of the old orthodoxy that would be amusing if it were not so serious. They accuse others of following the old fundamentals like sheep and have a contempt for opinions handed on from the past. Yet they themselves follow like sheep the German rationalistic school and are themselves slaves to the authority of the school of Wellhausen. They placidly ignore the fact that Wellhausen has been demolished by Ruppercht, Miller and Winckler, and the views of Driver, Chapman, Bicknell and Erith by Green, Orr and Finn. Their attitude is essentially unscientific. As slaves to the school of Wellhausen, they refuse to consider the other side put forth by such unquestioned scholars as Green and Orr, with a there-is-no-other-side pooh pooh! We admit, of course, that the English scholars in moderation of tone differ obviously from the rationalistic German school, but what we deplore is their tendency, like the Germans, to take from the honour and glory of God's inspiring Spirit and to give to men who were not moved by the Holy Ghost, and even to Babylonian and Pagan authors, a portion in this Holy Word of God. We feel that the vast body of Christians will still read the Bible as the Word of God for the purpose of soul-edification, but we are sure also that where criticism in the name of misguided scholarship tells us that the records of Genesis are largely legendary, undoubtedly based upon Babylonian traditions, and much of the Old Testament is folklore and not literal history, the stories legendary and worthless, the joy as well as the glory of God's Word will have departed.—(From The Globe, Toronto.)

A HYMN OF PRAISE
FOR THE CONVALESCENCE OF HIS MAJESTY KING GEORGE V.

By the Rev. J. Mountain, D.D.

(1) mp. Oh ! sad the days of pain and grief,
Yet borne with patient meekness !
While skill and science anxious stood
Beside the couch of weakness.
p. Then knelt his people at Thy feet,
Thy succour deeply needing :
cr. " God save the King ! " " God guard the Queen! "
With earnest accents pleading.

(2) mf. And Thou, O Lord, in love Divine,
When rose our supplication,
Didst hear the cry and heed the prayer
Of lowly invocation.
cr. Our King restored, is now re-crowned
By Thee who reignest ever ;
f. And grief and love our hearts have knit
In bonds which nought can sever.

(3) f. Our grateful hearts can ne'er forget
Their years of high devotion
To ev'ry race of ev'ry hue
O'er Empire's land and ocean.
So noble, true, their godly life—
All self-born motives scorning—
The sparkling gems their crowns bedeck
Are dimmed by its adorning.

(4) mp. Thy mercy, Lord, we supplicate,
And humbly make confession :
We have not loved Thee as we ought ;
O pardon our transgression !
p. Thy Word unread, our zeal impaired,
Our faith hath oft been shaken ;
The voice of prayer hath silent been,
Thy temples oft forsaken !

(5) f. 'Tis from Thy gracious hand we hold
Our far-flung, vast dominions ;
With conquest-might, with boundless wealth,
And people—countless millions.
God grant that bounties so immense
Thou hast so freely showered,
We ne'er misuse, perchance forget
The hand which them hath dowered.

(6) f. With songs of joy our hearts beat high,
The Empire's burden lifted ;
Ere long our King the throng shall greet
With health Divinely gifted.
p. From shades of death to glowing life
Brought back with exultation ;
ff. We praise Jehovah, hail the King,
And chant with jubilation.

CANADIAN PRODUCE FOR 1928.

By Professor Edward Odlum, M.A., B.Sc., &c.

While the manufacturers, bankers, and other financiers were busy driving Canada forward along their own particular lines to progress in 1928, the men who labour with mother earth were busy too. Their labours brought forth a crop which was worth thousands of millions of dollars.

The " Monthly Commercial Letter " of the Canadian Bank of Commerce for February, 1929, gives much information in very concise form.

The field crops were worth ...	$1,104,983,100.00
Forest products	365,000,000.00
Minerals	271,000,000.00
Fish	54,000,000.00
Flour	15,502,000.00
Sugar	931,910,000.00

Another interesting item is connected with bank deposits amounting to $43,472,000,000.00. This is an auspicious showing, and indicates a thrifty nation.

The latest Government wheat crop report states that the 1928 Canadian wheat crop amounted to 533,571,700 bushels. This is 33,000,000 bushels more than an earlier estimate indicated.

We are told that on January 1st, 1929, eggs in storage amounted to 1,121,475 dozen. This represents great wealth in the production of this one most valuable edible.

The facts above given help us to more accurately appreciate the wonderful productivity of Canada as a whole. No longer can we think of the country as at a standstill. With the universal forward movement, surely we must be nearing the time when our young men will remain at home and give up the chase southward.

The restlessness so common to our Canadian youth is due to vanish and leave them in a saner condition of mind and in a state more conducive to faithful, persevering hard work.

Few really need to leave Canada for any other country on earth to better their condition. The majority of our truly successful citizens started out as poor boys, and instead of running from pillar to post and from one country to another, settled to work, mastered the prevailing conditions, made good, followed up their first small success until theirs was an assured position of financial affluence.

TITHING.

By G. E. Robins.

" Bring ye the whole Tithe into the Storehouse, that there may be meat in Mine house, and prove Me now herewith, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." (Mal. iii, 10—R.V.)

Tithing is God's way of collecting money for the spreading of the Gospel of the Kingdom of God. Let me ask everyone who calls himself after the Name of Christ : Are you paying a tithe of your income for the extension of the Kingdom of God ? If not, then how can you call yourself a Christian ? Jesus said, " And why call ye Me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say? Whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be My disciple."

Professing Christians, do you think that you can do as you like about this and not pay a tithe and at the same time receive all the blessings that are promised to those who obey God and keep His commands? God is no respecter of persons. If He spared not the angels, but cast them down from heaven when they disobeyed, how much more will He shut the door against the man or the woman who is so covetous as not to pay even a tithe to God's cause?

The Scripture quoted at the beginning of this article is always true, and failure to observe it leads to doubt, loss of faith, and every other disaster, for, hear the prophet say: "Ye are cursed with a curse, for ye have robbed Me, even whole nation."

But one may say, "I can't afford to pay tithes; I can just barely make ends meet now." Well, then, you are an unbeliever and God's promise is not to you. "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." (Matt. vi, 33.) Without faith and obedience it is impossible to please God.

My brothers, my sisters, prove God by tithing wholeheartedly. He has fulfilled His promises to me, and He will do the same for you. This is a covenant which God has made with His people, and unless we do our part, it is foolish to expect God to do His.

I have often heard men say that everything is against them, and that they are doing right as far as they know. Well, perhaps you do not know what faith is. "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Watch the farmer in the springtime take his plough and his harrow and with horses he works day after day until he gets his ground in proper shape to receive the seed. Then he goes to his granary and takes out perhaps a hundred bushels of wheat, sows it on the prepared ground and covers it up. He labours day after day until the field is planted according to the instructions that have been given to him for sowing. He then waits for the rains to moisten the ground, and for the warm rays of the sun to cause the grain to grow and reproduce the likeness of the grain which has been sown, and during all that time of growth he is rejoicing over the great crop of wheat he is going to reap, when, as yet, he sees none; but he is fixing the selfbinder and getting it in shape for reaping the harvest. He is not afraid to take his good grain and sow it that it might produce an abundant increase. No, no! he is not afraid; he believes the grain must be sown before there can be a harvest; hence he plants in faith.

So should it be with the Christian. If he sows to the flesh he shall of the flesh reap corruption; but if he sows to the Spirit, he shall reap the fruits of the Spirit, which will make him to abound in every good word and work.

"Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things—food, shelter and raiment—shall be added unto you" (Matt. vi, 33.) Have faith in God. Pay a tithe into the storehouse of God. Do not be a coward; but trust God and go forward. Start now to pay tithes and our God will open the windows of heaven and bless you. Do it. God says: "Prove Me now herewith, . . . if I will not open you the windows of heaven." The devil has made you think that you cannot afford it. Why don't you have faith in God and help to build up His Kingdom? Remember that faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. Do you have hope? Do you dare deny God?—(From Leaves of Healing.)

of the Church of England dealt patiently, one by one, with the difficulties which presented themselves to his mind, Biblical, Philological, Physiological, Historical, Ethnological and Ethnographical, and was driven step by step by irresistible logic to acceptance, and so to advocacy of the astounding fact. "The effect of evidence on the mind," says Sharon Turner, "is as various as the perceptions and associations of individuals. The authorities which were decisive in the estimation of one scholar, were light as chaff in the judgment of another." (1.)

What was the attitude of mind with which the Bishop approached the subject? He says: "Although, at first, I approached the subject from the scientific standpoint, nevertheless I always felt that Holy Scripture must have the deciding voice. But as Holy Scripture can never contradict real science; and as certain scientific difficulties, like stone walls, loomed large before my mind, and were often hurled at me by objectors, it is not to be wondered at that it was mainly through scientific investigation that I was ultimately enabled to come to Holy Scripture with an open and unprejudiced mind, saying, 'Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth.' Such, I believe, has been the experience of many devout minds in reference to this subject."

"An open and unprejudiced mind." The will to learn, and if necessary to abandon previously conceived opinions in face of fuller light.

These are the first conditions of all honest investigation.

With all the clearness and simplicity of a scholarly mind the Bishop, in a series of letters to a friend, systematically faces the problem to be discussed, beginning at the beginning:—

The Great Patriarchal Promises.

The Bishop commences with a résumé of the British-Israel position as to the promises originally given to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, viz.: their inheritance of Canaan; their Birthright of the Messiah; and their increase to multitude of nations, and states the purpose of this volume: "to show that this company of nations is more reasonably to be looked for among the Anglo-Saxons than among any other."

The first of the Scientific difficulties to be faced was, in the Bishop's case, the Philological one. He "could never understand how a Scientific race, like that of ancient Israel, had so entirely lost their original language as to become an integral portion of the Aryan, or Indo-European family of nations."

The chapters in which the author describes this part of his investigation show wide reading and clear thinking, but in addition to all this, a nobility and simplicity of character indicated by the following words: "Now as I thought and prayed over this verse."

In this spirit the Bishop pursues his studies of every phase of the subject, giving patient research to each separate aspect of the cumulative evidence until he is able to accept British-Israel as the only explanation of the unique position of the British Empire among the nations of all time.

A brief biographical note precedes the Editor's Preface, and it is appropriate that the task of editing this work should have been undertaken by our beloved and venerated friend, Dr. Mountain, to whose ripe scholarship the British-Israel Cause is so much indebted.

"For," says Dr. Mountain, "when I had given two prolonged and prayerful studies to the Bishop's scholarly treatise, I was practically convinced, and almost on the point of decision. It was not, however, until a few weeks later that the final decision was made in a surrender to the Truth which I have never regretted, and which wider and profounder studies have abundantly confirmed."

The new edition is admirably printed in good, clear type, and the Editor has helpfully inserted analytical headlines and rearranged and numbered the paragraphs, and an excellent portrait of Bishop Titcomb makes it easier for the reader to realize the manner of man he was.

One important thing remains to add:

Important Note.*—When Bishop Titcomb wrote his book (over fifty years ago) of which the present volume is a re-issue, he was under the erroneous impression that the British people were Teutonic. He entirely changed his views about this, as his later book entitled "A Message to the Church," published in 1887, proves.

Professor A. H. Sayce, Professor Sir W. Raleigh, and Professor Sir Arthur Keith, have shown that the British and the Germans belong to opposite types.

AN OPPONENT ANSWERED.

Mr. C. E. Snowden having based an attack on British-Israel, on a report of a lecture by Mr. John Leech which appeared in The Eastbourne Gazette, Mr. G. R. Gair replies:—

The Editor,
The Eastbourne Gazette.

Dear Sir,—I should like to draw Mr. Snowden's attention to a statement of Dr. Nicholson's which says "the fundamental rule of science, whether in history or elsewhere, is not what has been believed, but what is true." ("Pedigree of the English People Investigated.") It is not sufficient to make use of a number of sweeping assertions (as we find in this letter) simply because those views have been believed in the past. We must turn to modern science, archæological and ethnic research, when we will find that Mr. John Leech, M.A., LL.B., K.C., is quite justified in maintaining the identity of the British of to-day with ancient Israel.

Speaking of the fall of Samaria and the Assyrian Conqueror (Sargon II) this writer says "though the Society generally attributes this to Shalmaneser IV." I suppose he draws as an inference that this is an example of British-Israel inexactitude: otherwise he would not have raised the question of Shalmaneser IV at all. The British-Israel-World Federation does not maintain that Shalmaneser took Samaria instead of Sargon. Certain writers may have fallen into such an error, if so this vast Movement cannot be held responsible for individual members. One work in front of me, upon the question, says definitely that Samaria fell in the reign of Sargon ("European and other Race Origins," pp. 107-9). If any British-Israel works make this mistake to which he refers, it must be remembered the error (although to be regretted) is comparatively slight. Shalmaneser IV commenced the siege of Samaria and died in 722 B.C. before the fall of the city. His successor, Sargon II, in the same year (722 B.C.—old chronology 721 B.C.) completed the work. Had Shalmaneser IV lived a few months longer Mr. Snowden would have had nothing to complain of. I am convinced your readers will have sufficient erudition not to need Mr. Snowden to act as censor for them in historical matters—which office he seems to have taken upon himself.

Against the unfair statement of distortion of historical facts I might point out that the letter itself is not at all accurate in the majority of its statements. Neither is it expressed at all clearly in scientific language for one easily to follow or answer it.

An example of this is found when we find him referring to the "Teutonic Anglo-Saxons, Danes and Normans."

Such a race, or races, never existed. To persist in the antiquated view that those races were "Teutonic" is to move against the whole weight of ethnological evidence. Examples of the latest evidence may be adduced from Prof. Sir Arthur Keith, F.R.C.S., who says "It is undeniable, from an anthropologist's point of view, that the British and Germans belong to opposite European types." (The Weekly Graphic, December 4th, 1915.) Prof. Sir W. Raleigh says regarding this Teutonic or Germanic relationship, "The alleged kinship of England and Germany is based on bad history and doubtful theory." Again, "the British hat will not fit a German head," which clearly points to the difference in craniological type. Prof. W. J. Ripley speaks of the head as being the best available test of race known, and states that the British people are remarkable in uniformity of headshape. He says, "This ethnological comparison proves that the Anglo-Saxon peoples must be of an entirely different stock from the present German race, and that they therefore do not belong to the Teuton stock." ("Races of Europe.") Dr. Latham is equally emphatic when he says "throughout the whole length and breadth of Germany there is not one village, hamlet or family which can show definite signs of descent from the Continental ancestors of the Angles of England. There is not a man, woman or child who can say, 'I have pure Angle blood in my veins.'" ("Ethnology of the British Islands.") If one refers to J. R. Green ("The Making of England," Vol. I), the "Anglo-Saxon Chronicle and Flores Historiarum," by Roger of Wendover, he will find that there is ample evidence of the whole Anglo-Saxon peoples leaving Germany. Thus destroying any argument that a portion remained behind to become a part, or whole, of the Teutonic Nations of Europe. It is thus evident that the use of the term "Teutonic" on this occasion is most incorrect.

Speaking of our Israelitish descent, he says, "To prove this they have to show that (1) the Celtic Brythons, (2) the Teutonic Anglo-Saxons, Danes and. Normans were of Israelitish descent."

It is evident that he considers the Celtic Brythons (Kelts) and his "Teutons" (actually meaning Gothic invaders of Britain) are of totally different stocks. In this he is equally at fault as in the use of his term "Teuton" and far more than those whom he seeks to criticize.

Prof. Huxley has said, "I miss no opportunity of uprooting the notion that the people who form the British Nation are descended from various races. All the detachments who flowed into Britain are branches of the self-same stock." ("Unorthodox London," Rev. C. M. Davis.) Again, "The invasion of the Saxons, the Goths, the Danes, and the Normans changed the language of Britain, but added no new physical element. Therefore we should not talk any more of Celts and Saxons, for they are all one. I never lose an opportunity of rooting up the false idea that the Celts and Saxons are different races." ("Race Origins.") Prof. L. A. Waddell, LL.D., C.B., C.I.E., is equally clear when he says, "The Britons and Saxons are of the same race." ("The Phœnician Origin of the Britons, Scots and Anglo-Saxons.") Whilst the Medical Correspondent of The Times (June 6th, 1916), after quoting the authority of Dr. Young, of Glasgow University, quotes the Medical Journal which says, "The more we dig into the physical character of the English, Scottish, Welsh and Irish peoples, the more do anthropologists become convinced that all four nationalities are compounded out of exactly the same racial stocks of mankind." Jas. Bonwick, F.R.G.S. (in "Who are the Irish?") writes, "The argument about the difference between the Anglo-Saxons and the Celts is a mere sham and delusion." Dr. Nicholson takes up the same position: "A comparison of the various languages spoken in Britain, Ireland and Gaul in the time of Cæsar, in so far as these elements are now ascertainable, leads infallibly to the conclusion that those tribes and 'nations' who spoke them, though torn asunder by dissension and widely separated by locality, constituted substantially but one people." ("Pedigree of the English People Investigated.") Again "The researches of modern historians unequivocally favour the opinion that under the names of Κελται, Γαλαται, Gauls, Gaels, Gwyddils, Celts, Cimmerii, Cimbri, Cymry, Brython, Lloegrians, Scots and Picts, only one race, under different tribe or clan divisions, political organizations and periods of existence, is spoken of. . . . Still no such diversity prevailed as would materially affect their unity and integrity, and hence their classification as one people." And further, "The inquiry into what is true on the present subject discovers a strong link of relationship between the Cymry and the English." Sir F. Palgrave writes, "Britons, Anglo-Saxons, Danes and Normans were all relations however hostile, they were all kinsmen, shedding kindred blood." ("English Commonwealth," Vol. I.) As regards the common origin of the Gothic nations themselves, I do not think any doubt exists—Freeman says regarding the Angles, Saxons, Jutes, Frisians, Danes and Normans, "Thus grew up the English nation—a nation formed by the union of the various tribes of the same stock. The Dane hardly needed assimilation, he was another kindred tribe, coming later than the others. Even the Norman was a kinsman." One might go on indefinitely quoting authorities of the first rank to prove that any grounds for believing that an ethnic distinction exists between the "Celtic Brythons" and the Anglo-Saxon peoples is based on "bad history and doubtful theory."

I must draw your attention to the inaccurate statement that "We are not concerned with the bronze-using Gaels, insomuch as they were here long before 722 B.C." We are distinctly concerned with the early Gaels, of before 722 B.C., as they were ethnically of the same stock as the later Keltic nations. By "Gael" I presume Mr. Snowden means Goidhel or Gaedhal, these terms being used in their broad sense to connote Firbolgian, Danaan, Milesian (Scotic or true Goidhel) branches of the great Gaelic section of the Keltic people. I agree that they were here before 722 B.C. That does not destroy any reasons for believing they were descended from the ancient Ibhrian, Sakian or Hebrew stock. There is Scriptural, historical and archæological reasons for believing that migrations of Israelites as early as the period of the Exodus took place. ("Egyptian Monuments and remarks thereon," by Profs. Petrie and Sayce.)

His reference to the Gaels as bronze-using is quite contrary to archæological evidence. The earliest settlers of the Kelts (Firbolgian, Erse or Danaan, and Milesian-Gaedhal, in Ireland: and early Kymric Barats or B'rits in Britain) could not have arrived till well towards the close of the (late) Bronze Age. The countries from which they came in Central and Eastern Europe would be in the Iron Age at the period of their emigrations: even if those are placed as early as 1100 B.C. (Dechelette.) These Gaedhals probably used bronze implements along with iron and were in the Iron Age (as Sir John Lubbock, "Prehistoric Times," has so amply proved to be possible).

As early as 1000 B.C. the Hallstatt A. Iron Age (according to Schumacher) is believed to have come into existence among the Kelts. It would be by the latest at 900 B.C. (Dechelette.) (Also "Notions d'Archeologie prehistorique belgo-romaine et franque," by Baron dè Loe, Prof. a L'Ecole d'Anthropologie, Brussels, p. 132). Therefore as the Gael arrived in Britain about this time there is archæological evidence to show that they were already in the Hallstatt Iron Age. Hence they could not have been truly bronze-using.

Mr. Snowden's statement regarding Hallstatt culture being traceable westward into N.E. Gaul some centuries before Sargon captured Samaria is perfectly true, and bears out our contentions. Indeed this culture had reached the shores of the English Channel at the latest by 850 B.C. ("Notions d'Archeologie prehistorique belgo-romaine et franque," p. 138.) This does not disprove the possibility of descent from the ancient Benni Ibhri, Beth 'Sak or Benni Yisrael Nation, branches of which, as already pointed out, emigrated before the Exodus. There are also evidences to show that many of Israel escaped at the time of Jabin's depredations upon Israel (for ref. see "European and Other Race Origins," by Bruce Hannay, and "British History," by Rev. L. G. A. Roberts).

The period 600 B.C. to 350 B.C. for the settlement of the Kelts in this island is somewhat late. Prof. Waddell, and others, are of the opinion (and this is supported by archæological evidence as cited above) that the early Kelts (other than the Gaedhals, who largely settled in Ireland) were in Great Britain at a far earlier date than 600 B.C.—at the latest at 800 B.C. The very early remains belonging to the 1st Hallstatt Iron Age would place the Keltic nations here any time between 1100 and 800 B.C. At the latest, settlements must have taken place by 800 B.C., for at that time the Kelts (Galli) were already firmly established in Belgium and Northern France. This is evidenced by Baron De Loe and M. Salomon Reinach.

Britain was not settled by merely one immigration of dolicephalic-Aryan Kelts. The earliest was at any time between 1100 and 800 B.C. and these continued until 104 B.C. (the period of the Teutonic invasion of Gaul). The Galli, Erse, Gaedhal, and Keltic-Britons were only western representatives of the Keltic race. In the East they were represented by the Kimmeroi (vide ethnologists and others quoted concerning the unity of the Kelto-British Peoples). These facts show how impossible it is to speak of the period 600-350 B.C. as the date of the Keltic settlement of these islands. His previous mention of Gaels prior to 722 B.C. admits of a Keltic settlement prior to 600 B.C.

The argument based on the change of name from Albion to Britain at the best can only be a mere hypothetical explanation. If it should denote a change of government in the southern part of the island, there is no evidence to adduce that this was caused by the introduction of a new race, for we find that the cephalic index is fairly uniform and there is no evidence of the introduction of a totally different race (Guide to Early Iron Age Antiquities, B.M.), as would have been the case had Bronze or Neolithic races been the only inhabitants of the island prior to 600 B.C. An example of how untrustworthy this form of argument is will be seen from an examination of the ancient names of Ireland. It is first known as Ierna (Orpheus), later Hibernia (Tacitus, Cæsar, Pliny), and later it becomes known as Scotia (Egesippus and later Latin writers). When this last name was used the Scotic power was weakening in that country. According to Mr. Snowden's reasoning the name Scotia should not appear at a time when the Scots were losing dominance and having to emigrate to Dalriada (Argyle). On the other hand the Scots had more or less been in possession of Ireland, under the name of Milesians and Gaedhal for a millennium before the Christian era (O'Flaherty; Seumas MacManus, etc.). None of these names appear as that of Ireland although the Milesians were at the height of their power in the island. If we had not evidence to show, from historical sources, that at the adoption of the name Scotia the Scotic influence was fast waning, it would probably have been alleged that the change was due to the invasion and settlement of the Scots. Therefore the argument that there was a change of race with the change of name is very unsound.

Again, one might point out that the citing of 620 B.C. for the voyage of Himilco is not that usually regarded as correct by historical authorities. In fact Himilco is placed at 120 years later by modern writers. This is an oversight, or, as serious an error on Mr. Snowden's part as he can bring against the British-Israel Movement. (See "Guide to the Early Iron Age Antiques," etc.)

Mr. Snowden raises the question of the early Teuton settlement in Scandinavia. He says "As to the Teutons, modern research makes it clear that the long-headed, tall, flaxen-haired people of N.W. Europe have occupied the Scandinavian peninsula for at least 40 centuries, i.e., since before the time of Abraham." Once again I find myself in total agreement with Mr. Snowden. It is certain that an Xanthochroi or blonde race existed in that region somewhere about 2000 B.C. But that they were neither Gothic or Aryan (in the ethnic sense) is certain. They were undoubtedly aboriginal races of the Neolithic Age who gradually developed into the Bronze Age. In the use of the word "Teuton" for this race he is more or less right. We find that this race both in Scandinavia and North Germany has founded to some extent a basis upon which the modern Teutonic type is built. It is certain that Gothic-Aryan culture did not enter Scandinavia, at the earliest, before 500 B.C. (1,500 years after the appearance of the "Teutonic" Neolithic races). This is evidenced by the entrance of the La Tène Iron Age culture about that period, whilst the absence of the Hallstatt Iron Age culture is ample evidence that the newcomers had already progressed through that stage to the La Tene prior to their arrival in Scandinavia. ("Guide to the Early Iron Age, . . ." p. 83-4. This is authenticated in the National Museum, Copenhagen, and the Municipal Museum, Gothenburg, etc.). It must always be borne in mind that this Teutonic race of Neolithic and Bronze Age Scandinavia presents many differences in general ethnic and in craniological type of the Anglo Saxon Sub-dolicephalic type of Britain. This evidence absolutely disassociates the early blonde Neolothic men from the Gothic-Aryans, who later entered these islands under the names of Angles, Saxons, Jutes, Frisii, Danes and Norsemen. Whilst agreeing with Mr. Snowden I beg to point out that his statement is beside the point and does not affect our descent from Gothic races, who originally came from Asia.

Regarding the name Cymru. Although this name was adopted at a comparatively later date than those other names of the Keltic peoples, it is nevertheless certain that it is philologically allied to Cymry, Cimbri, Kimmeroi. It is a re-appearance of an old race name: This is the opinion expressed by most authorities on this question. In any case should Cymru not have any connection with Kimbri and Kimmerii, which is highly improbable, it does not in any way disprove the statements made by Dr. Nicholson and others that the Keltai, Galatai, Gauls, Gael, Gwyddils, Kelts, Kimmerii, Cymry, Brythons, etc., are all of one original stock—usually termed Keltic. Therefore the Cimbri and Kimmerii (Kimmeroi) and Cymry are branches of the same Keltic stock.

It is impossible to compress into the space of this letter an exegesis on the Ibhrian or Beth-'Sakian (Israelitish) origin of our race. Nevertheless in closing I should like to point out that not only is the British race pure and of unmixed ancestry, and certainly not Teutonic, but also according to very modern authorities is associated in descent from a Palestinian race. Prof. Sayce traces a blonde, dolicephalic race from Palestine (at the period of the early Israelitish settlement in Canaan) "through the peninsula of Spain and the Western side of France into the British Islands." (The Hittites.) Prof. L. A. Waddell also has identified the British with a Palestinian dolicephalic race of the same period. (See the Phœnician Origin.) Both Sayce and Prof. Petrie agree in tracing this early Palestinian-Aryan race to kinship with the Dardanians, who are traced by Prof. Waddell and Hannay to Britain, and, on the evidence of the Egyptian Monuments—bore Israelitish tribal names and were undoubtedly branches of that nation. ("European and Other Race Origins.") Whilst Sir Henry Rawlinson identifies both the Kimmerians (Eastern Kelts—Baron de Loe) and the Sacae (Sakai, Sacaseni or ancestors of the Gothic races) as of one origin when he says "We have reasonable grounds for regarding the Gimiri, or Cimmerians, who first appeared on the confines of Assyria and Media in the seventh century (B.C.), and the Sacae of the Behistun Rock, nearly two centuries later as identical with Israel." ("Origin of the Nations.")

Thus we are singled out as an Aryan race of Palestinian origin. This is verified time and time again, not only by the old chronicles of the British Peoples, but also by the statements of modern historians, ethnologists and archæologists. The Vetus Chronicon Holsatiae makes an interesting statement when it says "The Danes and Jutes are Jews" (obviously meaning Israelites) "of the tribe of Dan."

George Robert Gair.

TARSHISH.—I.

By Ben Israel.

With the settlement of the Twelve Tribes of Israel in Palestine, year 1443 B.C., three tribes, Dan, Zebulon and Asher, had their allotments fronting along the Mediterranean Sea. Dan's coastal line south of Mount Carmel was clear of its former inhabitants, and his tribesmen turned their attention to seafaring at an early period of their national life. Zebulon and Asher were nearer the Phœnician cities of Tyre and Sidon. The Zidonians had not been molested in the war of extermination waged by Joshua upon the adjacent Amorites. Tyre was situated in that day on the mainland, and, because of the fact that invading Israel suffered these two cities to remain with their populations intact, the Phœnician empire of the sea rapidly arose, which in time included Carthage and many island colonies. Their people and influence saturated the coast life in front of Asher and Zebulon as far south as Mount Carmel, so that long-shore interests, Hebrew and Phœnician, were permanently blended. In fine, it would appear that Asher's private outlet to the sea was by his estuaries or "creeks." (Vide Judg. v, 17, marg. reading.)

The close similarity of languages no doubt accounts for this situation which superinduced that joint partnership of maritime affairs in which both engaged. In the business of the sea one was necessary to the other. The Phœnician was an expert mariner. He had migrated originally from the Erythrean Sea in the East. Zebulon and Asher possessed excellent ship-building materials. They were not far from Lebanon with its cedars; there were firs of Senir; there were oaks of Bashan from which to fashion ship knees and oars.

Dan went into the traffic of the sea whole-heartedly. He built and operated his own ships, co-operated with the Phœnicians, but seems to have led rather than served; to have accompanied and shared with, rather than assisted. He sailed or rowed to distant emporia, bringing thence the commodities in current demand into the fairs and marts of Tyre.

He also carried colonies overseas. His ships are the pioneers and early representatives of the ships of Tarshish concerning which, together with the status of Hebrew colonies generally, we will devote a little time for discussion in this essay.

Tarshish, as the name of a place, as Hugh Murray and others have observed, has ever been the puzzle of historians and geographers, because of the apparent incongruity of reaching it by sailing both east and west. To cut the old, interminable, argument short, we believe the difficulty is in a misapprehension of the term and in the peculiar construction of the Hebrew of 2 Chron. ix, 21. We insist that the term is pure Hebrew, not Phœnician. Lexicographers refer the word tarshish to the verb, roshash, subdued, but this gives us only a half meaning of the noun in its practical application. Just here we note that tarshish is used in Scripture in several different connections, foreign to one another, which calls for a classification in order to clearly understand the subject before us.

(1) Tarshish, grandson of Japhet, settled Cillicia, from whom the city of Tarsus derives its name.

(2) A certain gem is called tarshish, mentioned in Exod. xxviii, 20. Dr. Parkhurst has derived this word from תאר, to go round, and שש, shone. Dr. McIntosh offers an explanation for tarshish in general, apparently following Dr. Parkhurst, deriving it from tar, to go round, and shish, shining. This definition involves the word in a luminous halo not at all unbecoming its truly majestic character.

(3) Tarshish or Tharshish, as applied to ships and places, is in a category by itself and requires special treatment.

The tremendous importance attaching to this word under its third classification leads us to conclude that it is in no way related to the foregoing terms etymologically or otherwise. A method suggests itself to us by way of interpretation, not made use of, we believe, by previous writers on this subject.

British and American seamen have a nautical phraseology amounting to a dialect of the English language, characterized by the running of two or more words together. E.g.'s, bos'n, gun'le, lab'rd, sta'b'rd, fo'c's'le, etc. This is a habit we presume handed down from remote antiquity like many other of our inherited traits. In fact our differences of uttering h on land is a point in evidence which takes us a long way back to a certain unpleasantness by a certain ford at the Jordan.

To continue our discourse, we believe the tarshish here considered is a nautical term and is constructed from three Hebrew words, about the simplest and most common in the language, תא, a chamber, ראש, chief, and איש, a man; combine by the ordinary sailor method of elision, drop the three quiescent א's, alephes, and we have t'r'sh'ish, pronounced tarshish, meaning Chamber of the chief man. This reveals the full significance of the term whether applied to a ship, a city, a sea, or a country. What better synonym for a ship of Israel than to call it a Chamber of the chief man? How better designate a city or colony of Israel than to refer to it as Tarshish, Apartment of the chief man? For Israel, since Joseph was sold into Egypt, has been furnishing the chief, the worth-while, men in the earth.

We will now proceed to ascertain the identity of Tharshish of 1 Kings x, 22, and Tarshish of 2 Chron. ix, 21. They are two accounts of the same transaction. The first in Kings reads: "For the king had at sea a ship (or fleet) of Tharshish with the ship (or fleet) of Hyram: once in three years came the ship (or fleet) of Tharshish bringing gold and silver, ivory, and apes and peacocks." We note distinctly that Tharshish qualifies the ship, fleet, or "navy" of Solomon, as distinguished from that of Hyram, who assisted by sending his servants with those of Solomon in this far-eastern adventure. We also note that the returning "navy" is qualified by Tharshish, giving to understand that the enterprise is wholly Hebrew and not Phœnician.

Turn to 2 Chron. ix, 21, and we have: "For the king had ships that went to Tarshish, with the servants of Huram. Once every three years came the ships of Tarshish bringing gold and silver, ivory, and apes and peacocks." The difficulty arising in many minds is in the consideration of the first Tarshish of the proposition as being the objective, or point of destination, of Solomon's fleet. I am fully aware that it has generally been thus regarded. The Targum refers us to Africa. The word, תוכיים, peacocks, however, settles that controversy, and locates the enterprise in Malaya. None seem to demur at accepting the usual reading of the text contrary to the established rules of reading Hebrew. Why regard tarshish as a place at all? There is neither a preposition before nor suffix after to indicate it. To my way of thinking, the clause, "For the ships for the king went tarshish," is cryptic, designedly so. We are understanding tarshish as Israel and may interpret accordingly, "For the ships went in the capacity of Israel for the king," though Huram's servants supplied the labour and seamanship.

Solomon's eastern voyages are described as successful, though just what part apes and peacocks played in the economy of his royal estate is obscure. The "Roadbuilder" in his book, entitled "Destiny of British Empire and U.S.A.," page 146, suggests that these were emblems on current articles of exchange. It would be gratifying if the archæologist would come forward now with one or more cart-wheels of pure gold, stamped or engraved with apes and peacocks! Until something of the kind occurs, conjectures will doubtless continue to be in order.

Is it in vain then that we look for a place called Tarshish accessible from the Indian Ocean by way of the Red Sea? I think it would have been when Solomon was building his fleet; but when Jehoshaphat attempted to revive commerce in that quarter which seems to have lapsed after the separation of the Ten Tribes from the kingdom of Judah, he built a fleet of ships at Ezion-geber for the purpose. 2 Chron. xx, 37, informs us that the ships were broken (vide Psalm xlviii, 7) so that they could not go אל תרשש to Tarshish.

There was a place, then, in the regions of Ceylon or Malaya at this time, known to Jehoshaphat and his contemporaries as Tarshish. Perhaps a Hebrew outpost or colony had been planted there during the earlier Solomonic voyages. Whatever it may have been, it was the forerunner and forecast of that Chamber of the chief man, so much in evidence now as the sphere of British supremacy and influence pervading the Indian Ocean throughout the whole vast extent of the Afro-Erythrean-Indian periplus. The breaking of Jehoshaphat's ships at Ezion-geber marks definitely the beginning of the westward outlook of Empire. No further mention is made of Israelitish, maritime, activities in the Far East. Why? It was not that the Lord God had not entered in by the Eastern gate and pointed the way, but man would and has always persisted in going the opposite direction. The West therefore now holds our attention. Psalm lxxii is a prophecy of David foretelling the felicity and greatness of the reign of his son Solomon. The kings of Tarshish mentioned in verse 10 furnish a subject for speculative argument. We should expect their identity to be revealed during Solomon's reign as tributaries.

The Canadian B.-I. Convention is to be held in Winnipeg on May 1st, 2nd and 3rd next. Rev. Pascoe Goard will be the chief speaker. It is expected that delegates will be going from U.S.A. and all parts of Canada.

We regret to say that the Rev. Canon Hollis, M.A., has been very seriously ill. We are happy now to hear from Mrs. Hollis that her husband has passed through the crisis safely and is now on a fair way to recovery.

A clergyman in Cambridgeshire writes: "I send my very sincere thanks for the parcel of books. I am very interested in the question of British-Israel and have great faith in its Truth, not only from the reasonable side, but also from a certain amount of experience, such as it is not always easy to explain, but the result cannot be hidden or put on one side. I shall read the books and also circulate them wherever there is opportunity." * * *

This paper will come to the hand of many who are in various parts of the world on the outposts of Empire. And this is a word for you.

In your region there are probably many who are living in darkness and the shadow of death; native races and adventurous white pioneers who may be without any Christian teacher or minister. Have you accepted the Truth for which we stand? Do you look upon yourselves as servants of the Kingdom of God on earth, which Kingdom is being administered under the rule of the House of David, the Royal Head of which is charged with the administration of the Common Law or the Law of the Lord, which is the British Law? Have you devoted yourself to the service of Christ the King, and also of Christ the Saviour? Then will you not assume that, being in the midst of such needy ones, and at the same time holding the truth, you are commissioned by the Great Head of Church and State to take steps to make the truth of Salvation and of Administration known to them?

If it is not in your power to do public speaking this you can do. Select from our books and from The National Message and Banner chapters and articles which will be suitable, and read them to the assembly. This is being widely done now in many out-of-the-way places. It is not hard to find a good reader. It may be impossible to find a public speaker.

A missionary official said to us the other day: We have no missionary in Somaliland. To which we replied: We have several readers of The National Message there, and they are passing on the Truth I have no doubt.

Wherever there is a British-Israelite there should be a missionary of the Cross and of the Crown.

Landseer MacKenzie, Esq., President of the Bournemouth Association, writes: "It is with great regret that I have to inform you that there is yet another name for our valued Secretary-General to add to his 'Roll of Honour.' It is that of the Rev. G. C. R. Read, M.A., incumbent of St. John's Upper Parkstone, Dorset. He died after an attack of "flu," March 21st. He was billed to address our Association at our March monthly meeting, his subject being 'Archæological Discoveries and the Bible' but was unable to fulfil his engagement owing to indisposition.

"We, in Bournemouth, feel his loss very keenly, a good, hard-working, Evangelical divine, and one of the three Clerical Vice-Presidents of our British-Israel Association.

"We mourn him though our loss is his eternal gain. He has gone to that great reward which a life of Christian faith and service can confidently claim."

A correspondent writes from Canada:—"I have tithed my income for many years. The question now in mind is, should I not give all my missionary money to B.-I. effort? It appears to me you are doing the greatest missionary work and the most effective work of any organization, then why not place my money there? I have the belief that British-Israel Truth will start the final great world Revival, that it has indeed already started in the wonderful manner this great Truth is advancing. I like your journal very much, as I do all your literature I have seen. I unhesitatingly testify that B.-I. Truth has saved me from agnosticism or worse; so I say God-speed the work. Enclosed please find my donation, with prayers for God's richest blessing on you and your work."

A Lancashire minister writes:—"Thank you for the handsome gift of books. I value highly your kindness and assure you the literature will have my earnest and diligent attention and study. I remember forty years ago my dear mother talking to us on B.-I. lines, and since those days the impression that we are Israel has been at the back of my mind. Had my life not been quite so crowded in other directions, I might have realized earlier what is now to me a matter of great and growing significance. Recently I have been reading my Bible and looking for indications and interpretations in the light of B.-I. Truth, and I confess I am amazed at the wealth of evidence, circumstantial and direct, and its practical manifestation in history and present-day experience. I fully intend to pursue this subject, and I am exceedingly grateful to you for the books."

A correspondent writes from Palestine:—"We praise God that we know that the Ten Tribes are not lost. We bow our heads in shame that they went away into such deep sin and idolatry, but God said He would forgive them. We praise God that when there was a cry to send the Gospel to the world, Israel arose and said we will go. And to China, where I have spent some of the best years of my life, going where a white man had never been seen before, Israel sent her messengers, to the islands of the seas and to darkest Africa. When there is a famine, who is there on the spot? Britain and America. When there is a calamity of any kind anywhere, who goes and sends help to the suffering? Who leads the way? Britain and America—ISRAEL."

BRITISH-ISRAEL MEETINGS IN WINNIPEG.

Even those whose past experience has led them to expect much from Rev. E. J. Springett must have been specially impressed by his exceedingly forceful address in Trinity Hall.

The Bible, said the speaker, presented a continued story from Genesis to Revelation, its chief Personality being Jehovah. The Divine plan required for its furtherance the calling out of a people destined by God to occupy a particular position in order to perform a special service to mankind, and the setting up of a chief convener to sit on the Throne of the Lord, which Throne must be perpetual. Three keys for unlocking the interpretation of the promises given to the seed of Abraham were considered: the Church, the continued existence of the Jews, and British-Israel Truth, and it was shown how only the latter satisfactorily fulfilled the requirements as set out in the different promises. The Anglo-Saxon-Celtic race, taken as being descended from Israel of the Northern Palestinian kingdom, proved prophecy, by its fulfilment, to be the inspired Word of God, and removed all necessity for abandoning any portion of the Bible.

We are now living in what is called the "Age of Reason," the modern stand being that the Bible is unscientific, unhistorical, and that its statements are not capable of proof. Quoting numerous scientific authorities, including Dr. T. J. McCrossan, formerly of Manitoba University, Mr. Springett was very convincing in showing that there was no quarrel between the Bible and genuine science.

The latest Commentary on the Bible presented nothing new—it was merely a continuation of the German propaganda which commenced at the time of the Reformation, and which was being discredited by every turn of the spade of the archæologist. The time has come when the Churches cannot exist except on the foundation of the Truth of Scripture, and they must stand four-square in defence of the Bible. No attack on that could succeed, for Christ had said: "Thy Word is Truth."—Exchange.

There was a full house to greet Miss Mabel Harbour in the auditorium of Trinity Hall on March 5th, when an illustrated lecture entitled: "Flowers in British History" was given. The outstanding fact brought out was that British history goes back much further than is usually suspected, and the emblems we know so well to-day were traced to sources in the East and connected with the People of Israel, in Egypt and Palestine, and through their later journeyings across Europe.

The use of the Shamrock on the Scottish Seal was a surprise, as also its connection with the Urim and Thummim of Scripture; the Welsh Leek was traced to Egypt, the Lily which appears on the Canadian Coat of Arms to Solomon's Temple; and the Olive, representing the United States, the Vine and Palm (Israel) and Fig (Judah) were interestingly dealt with.

Perhaps the most impressive feature was that of the famous Glastonbury Thorn, which bears its berries and flowers concurrently, and at Christmas-time; and which is so intimately connected with the ancient British Church which was established in the time of the Disciples of Christ.

The lecture was plentifully interspersed with lantern slides, including some of remarkable interest. Rev. E. J. Springett presided.

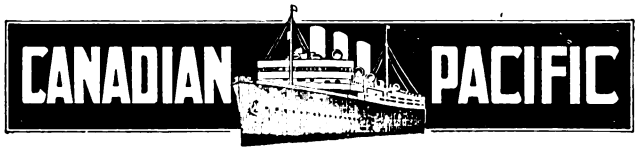
SAVE OUR SABBATHS!



4,765 Churches of all Denominations are taking part in Come-to-Church Sunday, April 7th. Special sermons, emphasizing Sabbath observance, are to be preached, and it is hoped the outcome will be a deeper appreciation of God's Sabbath gift, the Sign of His Covenant. Bishop Christopher Wordsworth's hymn, "O Day of Rest and Gladness, O Day of Joy and Light," is to be sung at the beginning of the services in these 4,765 Churches, the testimony of praise being led by Lincoln Cathedral, the Cathedral Church of Bishop Wordsworth's old Diocese. The organizing of this effort, which will commend itself to all lovers of British-Israel Truth, has been carried through by our friends of the Lord's Day Observance Society. God bless their labours!

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

"CONCERNING JUDAH AND JERUSALEM."

By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard, F.R.G.S.

This is the way in which the prophet Isaiah commences his book of prophetic literature. It may serve to illustrate the way in which the sacred Scriptures in the Old Testament and the New Testament speak of Jerusalem as an unit separate from the tribes of Israel, and distinct from all other cities of Israel.

It is well to remember the predominant position occupied by cities at various periods of world history.

We think of the city of Babylon and its relationship to the Empire from the time of Nebuchadnezzar to Belshazzar, the last of that dynasty to reign in the Empire of Babylon.

We think of the city of Athens in its relationship to ancient Greece. We think of the city of Rome in its relationship to the Roman world Empire. In modern days we think of Paris in its relationship to France at the time of the French Revolution.

We think of the present-day city of Washington in its relationship to the individual States of America. It belongs to no State; it is not within the borders of any State; it is the capital of that union which embraces all the States.

Now we return and think of Jerusalem.

Lying on the border-line between Judah and Benjamin, it did not belong to either of these, nor to any of the tribal territories. As in the camp organization of Israel, as described in the first chapters of the book of Numbers, the Tabernacle was planted in the hollow square in the centre of all the tribes, surrounded by the hollow square of the tribe of Levi, but occupied "holy ground"; so Jerusalem, the site purchased by King David from Arhona the Jebusite, was dedicated immediately as the site of the Temple which was to be. So also Mount Zion was captured by King David from the Jebusites, upon which it became "the city of the great king."

Henceforth Mount Zion and Jerusalem are constantly coupled together in the Psalms and the prophecies; the one as the capital of the nation Israel, and the other as the centre of worship for all the tribes of Israel no matter where they might be found.

Mount Zion and Jerusalem, usually spoken of as Jerusalem, was never absorbed by either of the tribes.

As we see in the quotation at the head of this article, it was usually coupled with Judah, and it formed the capital, first of all Israel; then of the kingdom of Judah; and, finally, of the nation of the Jews.

The same status is recognized for Jerusalem in the New Testament. Thus St. Peter in his Pentecostal sermon addresses the people, "Ye men of Judea, and all ye that dwell at Jerusalem."

When we remember these things, those Scriptures which deal with Jerusalem as a separate entity are more easily to be understood.

When the House of David, together with the throne and centre of administration, removed from the geographical city Jerusalem, we find the titles Zion and Jerusalem used for the centre of government and the centre of worship in Israel in a distant land.

We find the promise that Jerusalem, official, shall again return to Jerusalem geographical, as in the twelfth chapter of Zechariah, where we read, "Jerusalem shall be inhabited again in its own place even in Jerusalem." And in Isaiah the promise is made, "My watchmen shall see eye to eye when I bring again Zion." All will agree that only can "be brought again" which has first been taken away.

Digitized by Google

These things we have referred to once and again in the past in articles in this journal, and other writings.

Herr Baurath Von Schick, so well known through the Palestine Exploration Fund and otherwise, writes in the journal of that Society in the Quarterly Statement for 1893 as follows :—

"In one of my former reports I said that the city of Jerusalem, built after the Captivity, was in many respects different from other cities in the country; as, for instance, there were no private houses, the whole being an establishment of the Jewish State. Having been asked to give some proofs of this assertion, I will do so as briefly and clearly as I can.

1. If one studies carefully the history of this remarkable city, so exceptional in many things, one comes to the conclusion that the city must have been an establishment of the State, and hence private houses had no place.

2. The law and custom that every grown-up male had to go three times in the year, on the days of the feasts, to stay there implies that there must have been lodgings for such a great number of people, so that there remained no room for private houses.

3. Jerusalem was a Holy City and the centre of the whole nation, both in religious and secular matters, and needed, therefore, buildings for all the various purposes, as, for instance, Temple, schools, barracks, places for artists, and all kinds of workmen, treasuries, town halls, courts, prisons, magazines, etc., and pilgrims' houses for the whole nation. As all these were matters of State, so there was no room for private houses. And even the dwellings of the managers of all these things were not their own property, although they may have been called by their names.

4. The Talmud brings this out in explaining passages of Scripture. For instance :—

In Tractate Baba Kama, p. 82, col. b, it is said that the city of Jerusalem was in ten things different from other cities of the Holy Land. One of the ten is that no house could become the property of the heirs, or be inherited. In all other cities they could sell a house, and as it had nothing to do with the land or harvest, even at the Jubilee it remained with the purchaser and did not go back to the original proprietor—but not so in Jerusalem; hence there was no private property, but it belonged to the twelve tribes of Israel. The ground, the streets, the houses, the Temple, the city walls, everything was the property of the whole nation.

In Tractate Errikin, 32 b, the same is said; also in Tractate Megilla, 10 a, it is repeated. Further, in Tractate Aboth Rabbi Nathan, 35, Rabbi Nathan says that the law that the father and mother may bring their stubborn and rebellious son to the elders of his city and unto the gate of his place (Deut. xxi, 18–21) to be punished and killed, could not be done in Jerusalem, as the Scripture says: To bring him to the elders of his city and the gate of his place. Now Jerusalem was not his, or anyone's, city or place, but of the whole nation.

Again, in Deut. xiii, 12–16, it said: 'If thou shalt hear say in one of thy cities, which the Lord thy God hath given thee to dwell there, saying, Certain men, the children of Belial .... have withdrawn the inhabitants of their city, saying, Let us go and serve other gods .... then shalt thou enquire .... and if the thing is certain that such abomination is wrought among you, thou shalt surely smite the inhabitants of that city with the edge of the sword, destroying it utterly, and all that is therein .... and all the spoil and the city itself burn with fire .... and it shall be an heap for ever; it shall not be built again.' The city of Jerusalem was exempted from this law, as it was not their own city, but the city of the nation; this could be right if there were no private houses; if there had been private houses, why should they then be exempted from such a law? And yet Jerusalem was the city which stoned and killed the prophets (Matthew xxiii, 37).

Several other things could be mentioned proving that Jerusalem was in every respect an exceptional city, the property of the nation, and no particle of it private property."

TARSHISH.—II.

By Ben Israel.

Evidence, apart from Scripture, goes to show that his tax-collector, Adoram, served in Spain in official capacity. It may be assumed, accordingly, that the kings of Gades and other Keltibrian peoples contributed to the munificence of Solomon's exchequer. The one solitary king, named in the Bible, who helped enormously in the building of the Temple at Jerusalem, and the other royal edifices which Solomon erected there, as well as assisting in the seafaring adventures of that monarch, was Hyram, king of Tyre. In view of the Davidic prophecy, he can, by no means, be excluded from the list; nay, must even be accepted as paramount to all the rest. The question before us is, How can Phœnician and Spanish-Hebrew kings be kings of Tarshish at one and the same time?

The empire of Hyram and the Phœnicians was the Mediterranean Sea, and as much of the ocean as they navigated beyond it. Consensus of opinion among the learned is to the effect that the term, Tarshish, applied in that age to that sea. This is reasonable, considering the fact that Dan and Javan sailed, "roving to and fro," 300 years before Hyram's friendly alliance with king Solomon, and naturally would have surnamed its waters. The Mediterranean would, automatically, have become Tarshish, immediately upon Dan's establishing his routes of travel thereon. Regarding a definite place, however, in the West known as Tarshish, we are at no loss to find one in Tartessus, founded in remote antiquity on the site of the present city of Cadiz in Spain, its ancient predecessor being known as Gades by its founders, assumed to be Phœnicians by many historians, obviously Hebrews, Gadites, since the people of that city and surrounding country were known at a later period as the Gadeiri. No doubt remains in the mind of the Anglo-Israel fisherman after contemplating the splendid contribution of Sillius Italicus, the Roman poet, in his description of the temple of Hercules, shrine of the Gadeirian devotions which adorned that city. One would suppose the religious rites and ceremonies celebrated there would savour of Baal and the gods of the Zidonians. On the contrary, they are a copy of, and in conformity with, the sacred institutions in vogue in Solomon's Temple at Jerusalem. That Gades was always known to pre-exile Israel as Tarshish admits of no doubt, since its post-exilic name, Tartessus, is the Aramean form of the older appellative. Here was the emporium of international trade, situated at the strait connecting the Mediterranean with the Atlantic Ocean. Hither, Jonah assayed to flee from the presence of the Lord before the latter compelled him to go to Nineveh and execute his mission. If Tarsus of Cillicia had been his prospective refuge, he would have landed in the seaport nearest to Nineveh.

To further strengthen this position, we will examine the claim for Carthage which a number of the learned have put forth in favour of that city and state, as answering to the requirements of the Tarshish under consideration. Carthage is nowhere referred to in Scripture, for the plain reason, we believe, that its people came of a stock foredoomed to destruction when Joshua crossed the Jordan in the year 1451 B.C. The Zidonians were included within the territories to be possessed by Israel. The latter, for some reason, made no gesture to carry out the Divine mandate and utterly destroy these people, as they also failed to do in a number of other instances. Conversely, they entered upon friendly terms with them, made alliances, and, by so doing, laid the groundwork for a plan which, if Providence had not intervened, would have changed the destiny of Israel and the world. With Israel's help, Phœnician power and influence grew. Carthage rose and contested with Rome for empire. Had Carthage triumphed in the second Punic war, her colonies would have invaded and overrun Britain, rendering the situation impossible for Israel. Had Rome been content to allow her continuance as a vassal state the same thing would have been accomplished long ere Julius Cæsar crossed the British Channel. The dictum of Cato, "Certorum censeo Carthaginem esse delendam," was more than an obsession of the Roman mind ; it was Divine inspiration superadded to the original Divine judgment pronounced upon the Canaanites whose iniquity was full before Dido set forth upon her adventure in Africa. The third Punic war, just or unjust, from the Roman standpoint, accomplished at the hands of Rome what Israel had failed to do under the mandate of Jehovah. From these considerations it is not surprising that Carthage, great as she was, finds no place in Holy Writ. Further, all things considered, it is impossible that Carthage be admitted in explanation of Tarshish.

At Tartessus and other points in the Spanish peninsula were dug the advance trenches of the invisible Stone Kingdom looking West and North to the Isles—Fortunate Islands !

When the Lord God had sanctioned this Tarshish, His baseline from which to plant and transplant important representatives of His elect people, Israel ; had brought the Milesians into Ireland ; had safely placed Jeremiah and Baruch with the royal protegē, Tamar Tephi, in the capital at Tara ; the Bætic Tarshish seems to miraculously expand, until it comprehends the "Mountain of the height of Israel," the "High mountain and eminent," even the "Appointed Place." And why not ? Britain, having proven herself chief of the nations, must, of necessity, occupy the Chamber of the chief man. She must then be Tarshish, and her ocean-compelling fleet Tarshish, now that it has begun to part the foam eastward according to the original plan of king Solomon, author and founder of the British Navy.

Has it ever occurred to us how long it has taken the predatory powers to move west ? Or how far they have actually moved over the earth's surface since Nebuchadnezzar saw in vision their symbolic image ?

This empire dream occurred (circa) 603 B.C. From that time forward, empire rose upon the ruins of empire until the Romans reached Britain, 55 B.C., a period of 548 years. The distance from Babylon to London is 50 longitudinal degrees.

Britain's westward move began in A.D. 1498, with the voyage of John Cabot, the name he is known by in English history, and ended with the acquisition of Canada, at the close of the French and Indian wars, in the year A.D. 1759, a space of 261 years. The distance from London to Vancouver is 140°. But this holds no comparison with British development eastward.

Since 1759, a period of 170 years, the Stone Kingdom Empire has covered the remaining 220° longitudinally of the land and water surface of the earth, excepting a few patches that have fortuitously fallen to Uncle Sam. These facts argue the conclusion that the much-prated aphorism, "Westward the course of empire takes its way," may be taken under advisement. Four empires tried it and, after 548 years, are found dead where they started ! Their descendants are dreaming of reviving the Image, beginning over again at the original starting-point, the Near East. Earth with her Creator conspires against such presumption, and has ever conspired.

The predatory nations are sun-worshippers. They think they can win a place in the sun by chasing up his imaginary course. The world, alas ! is revolving in the opposite direction, and drags them back to the inevitable place of beginning. England and America may well look into the Eastern gates of promise as they open and unfold the true secret of empire which the others cannot discern, because they have their backs to it. We have learned by experience that where Israel is, his bivouac is Tarshish, on land or sea. It envelopes him like a magic coat of mail, invulnerable, which, when discovered by the enemy, is found to contain, not only the man, but all the elements beyond their reach which they would like to get. Well may they inquire, where is the limit ? Scripture answers doctrinally, "The Kingdom is the Lord's, and all nations shall flow into it." When that day arrives, the earth and the Kingdom shall be one, and they, Tarshish. It is as the pillar of cloud by day and the pillar of fire by night unto Israel ; thick darkness to the Egyptians, but a light and covering to the elect race on their march of destiny toward their universal dominion.

"And the Lord God planted a garden eastward in Eden, and there He put the man whom He had formed." (Gen. ii, 8.) Here is our first introduction to the chief man and his chamber, Eden. Our chief man, Adam, lost his Divine abode through disobedience. Our Day's Man, Christ, regained it and redeemed Adam and his posterity in so far as they will accept according to the terms imposed. Obviously, it is the will and purpose of God to restore this earth in its entirety to the original purity and blessedness of Eden. This is the Golden Age before us ; a mundane condition, in which man will have the facilities for developing the moral and spiritual faculties of his nature to the fullest possible extent in the body.

To this end was Abraham called, and Israel set apart, and the nation organized, to begin, carry on, and finish the work of executing judgment on false political and ecclesiastical systems; of presenting to the world a pattern of law and governmental administration, adequate to the requirements and happiness of men of every race; and, in short, of preparing the nations to receive the King coming again from Heaven to reign in the earth. The finesse of this preparation is the preaching of the Gospel of the Kingdom and salvation through Christ, in the manner of the Kelto-Saxon Israel evangelistic enterprises.

Wherever Israel rules, the Edenic conditions begin to reappear, faintly perhaps, but with sufficient signs to indicate a renaissance.

The Gentile world movements, however ingenious and powerful, have each died successively for want of breath, because they had not within them, and, consequently, could not impart that universal air of health, vigour, hope and satisfaction that surrounds the Anglo-Saxon institutions.

These are rapidly expanding, we observe, latitudinally, and in the same ratio crowding their enemies who hate them to the wall.

Exactly like Daniel's "Stone" (so much like it, they and the Stone must be identical), they are rolling up into "Great Mountain" proportions, filling the earth, and meeting all the requirements which should attach to the Kingdom which the God of Heaven set up in the days of the kingdom of Daniel's vision, and which should never be destroyed.

The atmosphere of "Liberty, life, and the pursuit of happiness" which surrounds these Kingdom institutions, is revivifying effete Asia, civilizing Africa, and will, at last, cause misled Europe to stand erect upon her feet, clothed and in her right mind, when awakened from her age-long nightmare, delirium of fallacious principles, and intellectual insanity which saturate her ecclesiasticisms, her statesmanship; vitiate her jurisprudence, and misdirect her administrations and rulers.

And Europe lies to the eastward of the Fortunate Islands! The panorama before us compels us to believe that Tarshish enlarges with every move of the Anglo-Saxon race. Being the Chamber of the Chief Man, it contains all the earthly blessings within the human conception. It enlarges in proportion as it bestows blessings on the race by overthrowing vicious and immoral systems, and not by conquest of territory. It enlarges by the voluntary incorporation of millions of people who perceive in Tarshish Utopia realized. But this is just the nature of the Kingdom about to be received by our Nobleman returning from a far country to take unto Himself the Throne thereof, and bring into it the glory and honour of all the others.

Paradise regained! But how shall we distinguish between that ideal state of earthly, Heaven-brought perfection, and Tarshish, Israel, Stone Kingdom, Anglo-Saxondom, which is the literal, practical, tangible interpretation of Scripture relating to it?

How are these things affecting the individual? To us they are a stimulant. We are face to face with wickedness in high places as never before. British patriotism across the water echoes to the voice of protest raised in America against atheistic intellectualism and spiritual tyranny. The political campaign through which the States have just passed reveals the reality of the diabolical complex confronting us and the rest of the civilized world. Accordingly, our faith in the Lord of Hosts must rise commensurate with the menace. He will bring the nations through that are His. My personal concern is, Will I ring true if the supreme test comes to me? I must present my own case daily at the Throne of Grace. United prayer works wonders. A greater plan was never advanced than that of simultaneous, nation-wide prayer to Almighty God for protection and wisdom in national affairs and governmental administrations; Christian England and Christian America owe it as a sacred, patriotic duty; the one, on behalf of Parliament and the King, sitting upon the Throne of the Lord in London; the other, to Congress and the people's Presidential Representative in Washington.

"The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." (James v, 16.)

FISHING AND HUNTING FOR ISRAEL.

By Daniel Farmer.

"Behold, I will send for many fishers, saith the Lord, and they shall fish them—Israel—and after will I send for many hunters, and they shall hunt them from every mountain, and from every hill, and out of the holes of the rocks." (Jer. xvi, 16.)

I.

These words apply to the search for the Northern Section of the divided Israel nation (2 Kings xvii) commonly spoken of as "the lost ten tribes," and known in Scripture as the House of Israel. The Southern Section—the House of Judah—commonly spoken of as the Jews—one-twelfth part of the chosen race, never were lost—and to-day are easily recognized everywhere—all the world over.

Now the very fact that God says they are to be "fished for" is a proof that they still live—no one baits for dead fish; and, secondly, that they are to be "hunted for" shows they are in a measure "hidden"—and equally so is a proof that they are not lost beyond recovery—for God never sends His servants on a fruitless errand. (Ps. lxxxiii, 3.) Here, then, is an adventure well worth our highest enthusiasm and best effort. A fishing and hunting expedition of a very high order. Whatever the result to the individual who joins in, it will at least develop his spiritual powers and mental intelligence. "It is the glory of God to conceal a thing, but the honour of kings is to search out a matter." (Pro. xxv, 2.) In his "Study of Early English History," John Pym Yeatman regretfully exclaims: "We are indeed poor blind children groping in the dark. . . . Would that Oxford and Cambridge might learn that there is something else beside their philosophy, mathematics and classics, that there is a great knowledge of ourselves and our history yet to be obtained, a knowledge more valuable than being able to count the stars, or to read the thoughts of ancient pagans." That is so, but whilst "the apathy and ignorance of the Old Testament in our universities," so denounced by Francis W. Newman, continues, the "groping in the dark" will continue also.

Dr. Foakes Jackson, of Cambridge, in his "Biblical History of the Hebrews," says: "The fall of the Northern Kingdom of Israel is one of the saddest and most impressive lessons of history. . . . It is hard to say farewell to so noble a branch of the Chosen Race without thinking how persistently the prophets dwell on the hopes of its restoration, and wonder whether in God's good time the dry bones of the lost tribes (Ezekiel xxxvii) may not again stand up a great army."

This they have done, are doing, and, in yet greater measure in the very near future, will do, in the shape of the Anglo-Saxon race. The student who has grasped this fact has in his hand the key which unlocks that part of Holy Scripture divinely intended for the guidance of God's true and only Church and State in the twentieth century.

II.

A Subject of the Deepest Interest.

The Rev. Chas. Forster, in his "Monuments of Assyria," says: "The search for Israel is the most interesting subject in the world." Again, "In a most subtle manner the Bible has increased the zest for the search for Israel. Most of the prophecies were uttered after the separation of Israel from Judah—but also the bulk of them were spoken after Israel had been lost for over one hundred years."

Here is a "cross-world" puzzle (Amos ix, 9) that will repay well all who seek to solve the same. God has set His "whole heart and soul" upon its solution. (Jer. xxxii, 41.) Imagine the condition of our religious leaders who cannot see "anything in it!" Or who regard the study of the same as unsound or unprofitable.

"Who are the British people
Who hold this island home;
From what far distant country
Have they in past days come?"

"How interesting that makes the Bible," said a young girl, whose mother had given her some instruction along these lines. "Why so, my dear?" replied the mother. "Why, because the Bible speaks about us," said the girl. Quite so. How much more interesting Somerset House becomes to us personally when we are bidden to read a copy of a will made in our favour. "Where there is no vision the people perish" (Prov. xxix, 18) we read. Here is a vision well calculated to turn the mind of our people Godward. This is no narrow, individual question, but the call of the greatest people the world has ever known to fall into line with the great scheme of Almighty God. A great writer has said: "Every nationality ought to adopt the watchword of the Monk Bernard, 'What art thou here for?'"

III.

How Shall We Look for Israel?

Lord Salisbury, when Premier, once told his political opponents to "Study large maps"—and at the outbreak of the Great War we were urged to "take long views." Opponents of British-Israel teachings have failed to approach the study of this subject in the spirit of these two injunctions. Instead of seeing a continent they are digging about on a small island. All the great promises of Israel's foretold greatness during Judah's rejection are overlooked. Finding a few Israelitish names intermingled with those of Judah, the conclusion is drawn that they are one and the same people. Able and devout men go about the country holding "Advent Lectures" who cannot discern between Israel and Judah. They have been well compared to men studying a hoarding poster with a microscope. Bishop Gore said, "To understand the Bible aright we must read it in large portions." Sermons on texts are good, and greatly helpful; but if we stop at such it is like a child who has been taught the letters of the alphabet, but never been taught how to read by combining the same.

Daniel Webster wrote: "There is yet more valuable truth to be gained from the sacred writings (that has thus far escaped the notice of the commentators) than from all other sources of human knowledge combined." And if we are prepared to agree with Bishop Butler that "the whole scheme of Scripture is not yet understood," then also we must equally agree with him when he further says: "If ever it comes to be understood before the restitution of all things, and without miraculous interposition, it must be understood in the way that natural knowledge is obtained—viz., by particular persons attending to, comparing and pursuing intimations scattered up and down in Scripture, which are overlooked by the generality of the world." When Judah possessed the Kingdom in Our Lord's day she accepted temporal values and rejected spiritual. Now the kingdom, during this age, has been transferred to Israel—as foretold (Matt. xxi, 43)—Israel accepts spiritual values, but rejects temporal. Well may we British-Israel believers pray the Lord to

"Open blind eyes in Church and State
To see this vision high and great;
For we believe our people then
Will heartily respond 'Amen!'"

IV.

Where Shall We Look for Israel?

Rev. Samuel Wilkinson says, "Look for a thing where it was lost." "Yes," replied the late Dr. Douglas, "but that all depends upon whether the thing lost had legs." Well, Israel had legs and made good use of them upon the very first opportunity. In 1860 the Rev. Isaac P. Labagh, of Brooklyn, said he "inclined to the view that the lost ten tribes were located somewhere in Central Asia." But Scripture speaks of Ephraim—the tribal name of the House of Israel—as "following an East wind" (Ho. xii, 1), and if we take that statement literally, as well as figuratively, we shall go West in our search. Tullidge said, "Too much haste has been shown in the search for Israel . . . with strange lack of wisdom the seekers have neglected to take with them the guide of Holy Scripture—

"With a clear shining light supplied
They first did put it out, then took it for a guide."

Now that is "Modernism" in a couplet—and if not Modernism, then the almost equally, in the language of Bishop Hooker, "pernicious habit of spiritualizing," and we are thrown off the search for this House of Israel by being told that they are only to be found to-day in a mystical and spiritual sense (Gal. iii, 29). In the year A.D. 1131 the famous Rabbi Moses Mamonides, called by the Jews their Second Moses, wrote, "I believe the ten tribes to be in various parts of Europe." The Apocryphal books of Esdras and Baruch tell of a large movement of Israel Westward—and Baruch comforts Zion by telling of her children being gathered from the WEST to the East in the latter days by the word of Jehovah."

The Archæological Journal in the British Museum mentions Seven Nations of Britannia, their language being Hebrew. Hebrew coins and graves are found along the westward journey—these journeys are marked on old maps. Eusebius, A.D. 246, wrote, "Some of the twelve tribes passed to what are called the Brit Isles." Julius Cæsar said, "The British Isles were peopled by a number of tribes." Here, then, we have some important guides, and, did space permit, their number could be added to almost without limit.

V.

WHAT SHALL WE LOOK FOR AS ISRAEL?

It has been well said that Israel is to be fished for as Christians, and hunted for as Hebrews, two phases we will keep before us when setting out on the search in Paper Number 2. To form a hunting party a man needs to be a good rider—if at the first hedge or ditch he cannot keep the saddle he is soon left behind. Now, that is just what has happened to many in this hunt for lost Israel. What, a nation as wicked as the British, God's chosen people? is the first fence many fall at. "We are not like the Jews in our features" is a ditch in which lots have come to grief. "What about circumcision?" is to many a barbed fence that brings the rider to a dead halt. And so on. Not a few of these principal hunters, wearing black coats, came such a "cropper" that it brought about concussion. And before they had properly recovered they wrote some very funny books—and contributed some astonishing articles in various religious periodicals—the titles of which may in brief form be described as "The Ten Tribes were never lost," or "Look for the Ten Tribes where they were lost," or "Israelitish names are to be found amongst the Jews—therefore they are one and the same people," etc., etc.

In this hunt a rapidly increasing number of able and intelligent Bible students are taking part—both lay and clerical—men and women—well able to "keep the saddle." As one singer has put it:

"Ye that would search for Israel
Go seek her on earth's highest throne,
Where, 'neath a thrice crossed banner, dwell
Great Nations joined, yet each alone.
There, holding sway in company,
Although by other names addressed,
In majesty from sea to sea,
Behold blest Israel confessed."

BIBLICAL METALLURGY.—I.

BY ANDREW B. BUCHANAN.

THIS series of articles, bearing upon the above subject, is written at the request of the Editor, and incidentally takes up the Secretary-General's appeal of March 16th.

The object is not to open out a field of controversy, but to add something to the literature of a subject which is little understood and rarely seen as an important aspect of Scriptural revelation and authenticity.

This revelation is so clear to the trained mind that it gives, in epitome, practically all that is contained in modern metallurgy.

The present writer does not profess to be an expert metallurgical engineer; he has, however, seen the great truths of the technical accuracy of the Scriptures in dealing with the subject, and presents them as such.

Metallurgy is the science of dealing with and finding out all about metals.

The subject is divided into three heads:—

1. The precious metals ... { Gold. Silver. Platinum.
2. The non-ferrous metals { Brasses. Bronzes.
3. The ferrous metals ... { Iron. Steel.

The foundry and the forge both deal with 2 and 3. The Scriptures clearly indicate the same classification. The golden vessels are kept separate from the silver vessels and the silver from the brass. The image of Daniel ii shows this in a remarkable degree.

The Head	Fine Gold.
The Breast and Arms	Silver.
The Belly and Thigh	Brass.
The Legs	Iron.
The Feet	Iron and Clay.

The image shown thus presents some striking aspects of metallurgical and engineering significance which are, perhaps, outwith the scope of these articles. The Tabernacle and Temple also show this classification of the metals.

Biblical metallurgy goes back to very early times. We read in Genesis ii of the ". . . . land of Havilah, where there is gold; and the gold of that land is good: . . ."

In Genesis iv we are introduced to Tubal-cain as one who was ". . . . an instructor of every artificer in brass and iron: . . . ."

Genesis xiii informs us that ". . . Abram was very rich in cattle, in silver, and in gold."

1 Kings vii refers us to mighty castings of brass, and (v. 46) the foundry workshop. Isaiah xliv takes us into the forge and shows us, "The smith with the tongs both worketh in the coals, and fashioneth it with hammers, and worketh it with the strength of his arms: . . . ."

The Psalmist (Psalm lii) directs our attention to the tool-room of a modern engineering work when he speaks of the "sharp razor. . . ."

And so the Scriptures take us through the whole range of metallurgy as we know it in these modern days.

The science—as such—is not presented to us, but the finished product is given in such a manner that an intimate knowledge of fundamentals is revealed.

Razors are quoted several times in the Scriptures, and are presented to us as an instrument of common use. The Psalmist, however, gives us the key to the science in the use of the word "sharp." The sharp edge of the razor could only be obtained by having knowledge of the composition of the metal and the necessary "heat treatment" to give this edge. "Heat treatment" is one of the fine arts of modern metallurgy.

Digitized by Google

A similar instance of this implied science is given in Isaiah xliv, 13 :—" . . . . he fitteth it with planes . . . "

The practical man knows that before the plane will work properly, the tool " fitted " must have a sharp edge.

IRON.

We have seen that iron comes into Biblical history at a very early stage. From whence came this iron? Pure iron—we use this phrase advisedly—does not exist in the earth's crust as such. True ; we have what is known as meteoritic iron, the use of which was known in ancient times. But this meteoritic iron is not sufficiently plentiful to be used commercially.

Iron is reduced to a metallic state from ore. We might be inclined to think that, in the earlier stages of history—Adam to the Exodus—some form of meteoritic iron was used but for the fact that Moses tells us (Deut. iv, 20) of the " . . . iron furnace . . . "

This furnace which Moses speaks of may have been for melting iron, such as a foundry cupola, or a blast furnace for reducing iron from iron ore.

ORE.

An iron ore is composed of a variety of substances of which iron is the chief constituent. The value of an iron ore consists largely in the percentage of iron which it contains. The ore may be mined or quarried from the hillside, and a large amount of work is expended upon it before it is transferred to the blast furnace.

Professor Turner* states : " We can only conjecture as to the period in which iron was first extracted from its ores and applied to the use of man."

Does the Bible throw any light upon the subject of ores? If so, it must stand out as a text-book of the first order.

We turn to Deut. viii, where Moses informs Israel that God will bring them into a good land, into (v. 9) " . . . . a land whose stones are iron and out of whose hills thou mayest dig brass."

Why should Moses refer to iron stones and to differentiate them from the brass? Moses was a trained metallurgist who knew the value of the iron stones as ore and could impart his knowledge to Israel. Israel likewise must have been familiar with the use of the iron ore and to the extraction of its iron by a furnace, else why was their attention drawn to these stones and their servitude likened unto an iron furnace?

Otherwise, what use were stones of iron to Israel? We hope to develop this in a later part of the subject.

Let the reader ponder over these things, for Moses was not speaking in similitude or poetical imagery, but in hard matter-of-fact technical phrases. We wonder at this knowledge of Moses with regard to the stones of iron when we remember that the famous Blackband Ironstone of Scotland was thrown aside on to the rubbish heap as useless and termed " wild coal," until Mr. David Mushet in 1801 discovered in it a valuable iron ore.

Here then we have in strict order the furnace and the ore which leads us to a discussion of furnaces which will be the subject of our next article.

A GOOD B.-I. STORY.

A VISIT TO WESTMINSTER ABBEY.

By WM. WHITTON.

SOME few months ago, whilst on one of my rare visits to London, I wended my way into Westminster Abbey, that Holy Place of the British people.

As I wandered around the sacred building I could almost feel like Jacob did at Bethel," Surely the Lord is in this place," and like Moses, as he stood by the burning bush, I felt that I was standing on holy ground.

The tombstones all around reminded me that in that place lay the dust of many of England's most illustrious men.

Just inside the door lies Mr. Gladstone ; hard by there is Shakespeare's memorial, and John Wesley's also ; soon I came to the tomb of that great missionary, traveller and philanthropist, David Livingstone, and near by was the grave of " The Unknown Warrior."

What hallowed memories were awakened within me as I remembered that all around me the heroes of our race lay sleeping side by side !

And so I wandered around the sacred place, all alone, until at last I found myself in Edward the Confessor's Chapel, which is immediately behind the Altar.

All the time I had been in the Abbey I had felt myself to be on holy ground ; but here a wondrous feeling of awe possessed me, and I felt that I was in the very HOLY OF HOLIES—surely I was in the very presence of God.

Behind a barrier, standing on a low pedestal, stood the Chair which contains the Coronation Stone, upon which all our Sovereigns are crowned.

It is just an ordinary-looking piece of rough broken, soiled stone : 26 in. long, by 16 in. broad, and 10½ in. deep, by no means a thing of beauty, yet for all that, there it is, in the very HOLY OF HOLIES of the greatest Empire the world has ever known, and although it has no commercial value it is used as the THRONE of Britain.

I remained in the place, all alone for some time, carefully examining the Stone. I saw the iron rings, one on either side, now very much bent and nearly worn through.

I must have been musing, for suddenly looking up I saw that I was alone no longer, and by my side stood a young lady and gentleman who, I afterwards discovered, had only just come to London to spend their honeymoon.

It was the lady who had disturbed my reveries, for she had reached over the barrier and was trying to touch the Stone with her hand, in which attempt she was unsuccessful.

Looking up to her, I said, with a smile, " You are about a foot short."

" Oh," she replied, " I'd give anything if I could only touch that Stone."

I said, " Would you really? " To which she replied, " Indeed I would, wouldn't you? "

" No," I replied, " in fact, I don't think I dare touch it."

" And why dare you not touch it? " she asked.

" Because," I said, " I know the meaning of that Stone. Simple though it looks, it is nothing more nor less than the material witness that God is with us."

The lady was now more interested than ever, and said,

Digitized by Google

"That Stone the witness that God is with us! How can it be? Then there must be a story attached to it; do you know it? If so, I would like to know it too."

So I told her the secret of the Stone.

"That is the Stone upon which Jacob laid his head at Bethel. You remember," I said, "how he had a wonderful dream, in which he saw a ladder reaching from the earth to Heaven, and the Lord stood above it, and spoke to Jacob, and promised (1) that He would give to his seed all the land from the Nile to the Euphrates; and (2) that they should spread all over the earth, west, east, north and south; and (3) that all the families of the earth should be blessed in them. Moreover, the LORD also promised that HE WOULD ALWAYS BE WITH THEM, and would never leave them until He had fulfilled all His promises.

"When Jacob awoke out of his sleep, he was startled and afraid, and said 'Surely the LORD is in this place and I knew it not,' and remembering the things the LORD had promised to do for him, Jacob took THE STONE which he had set for his pillow, and he set it up for a PILLAR—remember that a PILLAR is a Memorial or a WITNESS—and he poured oil on it, and made a vow, and said, 'If the LORD will be with me, then the LORD shall be my God, and THIS STONE which I have set up for a PILLAR shall be God's House,' etc."

My new friends were now thoroughly interested, and the young bride, who was more curious than ever, asked, "But what has that to do with us? We are British, not Jews; not only that, but what evidence is there that God always has been with His Chosen People?"

It took me only a very little time to assure my friends that though we are certainly not JEWS, we are ISRAELITES, and as such are literally descended from Jacob. Of this we have abundant proof, but the fact that we call ourselves after Abraham, and also after Isaac and Jacob and Joseph, should be sufficient for anyone, for instance:—

BRIT is good Hebrew for COVENANT; ISH means MAN; it is passing strange why we should call ourselves BRIT-ISH if we are not from ABRAHAM, the Covenant man,

SAXON is another name we British People call ourselves. Why this name? The sons of Jacob were called ISRAEL until they went into exile in 721 B.C. when, because of their idolatry, the name ISRAEL was taken from them, and they were told "They should be known by a new name, a name which the mouth of the LORD shall name." We have ample evidence that these same people henceforth were called Saac Suna, which is good Hebrew for ISAAC'S SONS, and that they came across Europe and into Britain as the SAXONS. Surely this is good enough fulfilment of the Lord's promise to Abraham, "In Isaac shall thy seed be called."

Then, again, in calling ourselves ENGLISH we are called after JOSEPH, as "NGL" is good Hebrew for "a good branch of a fruitful tree whose branches run over the orchard wall," and did not Jacob say of Joseph, "Joseph is a fruitful bough whose branches run over the wall"? And don't our British Colonies (Branches) run over the wall?

Jacob's name was changed to ISRAEL when he came to himself and to his God. That name means "ruling with God" and has been taken from them, and now we are called British-Saxon-English, but when we again come to ourselves, and again return to God, the whole world will know that we are indeed God's Covenant People (BRIT-ISH) Israel.

Now thoroughly aroused, my young friends began to shower questions at me very rapidly. "What about the promises? How have they been kept? How do we know that God has always been with His people? How has the Stone got here from Palestine?" And "How is it this thing has not always been known by everybody?"

All I could do was to tell them that our people had been blind for centuries. "Now then," I said, "just open your eyes and then think of our Empire and then think of the promises; has not every one been amply fulfilled? For instance: (1) We have the land from the Nile to the Euphrates; (2) Our people have spread abroad, west, east, north and south; and (3) Wherever we go, we do bless the people by giving them liberty and good government, and we throw open the doors for the missionaries to take the Gospel."

Now I was able to tell the wondrous story of how the Lord always watched over His People Israel; how He had them educated in Egypt, how He delivered them from bondage and brought them to Himself at SINAI, and how He there established them as a Kingdom with Himself as KING, and also as CHIEF MINISTER IN EVERY DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

As this was new to them—they had never been told that the Lord had anything to do with the departmental affairs of Israel—I had more questions to answer.

"What proof have you of this?" I was asked.

Exodus xix onwards tells us how the Lord formed Israel into a Kingdom, and how He gave them their laws; and Leviticus xxvi and Deut. vii tell us that "If we keep all His laws He will give us prosperity; security; peace; and will remove all sickness from amongst us."

The very Names of God make it very clear to us that He is the Chief Minister in all Departments of our National Affairs.

HEALTH	JEHOVAH ROPHEKA	"Our Physician," Ex. xv, 26.

As we obey His laws we are well provided for, for He declares that "The land shall yield her increase."

We are defended, for then our enemies will come before us one way, but they will flee before us seven ways.

We shall have justice, and be ruled in equity, for He is the Lord our Righteousness.

We shall have peace within our borders, for the Lord is our Shepherd.

And even our hospitals will be emptied, for "the Lord will take away all sickness from among you."—Deut. vii, 15.

Then, "How is it we are experiencing so much poverty and terror and sickness?" I am asked.

My reply is very simple. "Because we have turned away from Our Lord, and have erred and strayed from His ways like lost sheep, and have followed too much the devices and desires of our own hearts; we have offended AGAINST HIS HOLY LAWS, and we have done those things which we ought not to have done, AND THERE IS NO HEALTH IN US."

The eyes of my two young friends were rapidly opening; they agreed that they could already see that there was at least a great deal of truth in the things I was telling them, but as time was pressing they asked me if I could tell them how the Witness Stone came to Westminster from far-away Palestine.

At that moment our conversation was disturbed, for a company of about forty people had come into the place, accompanied by an official guide, and as they crowded around the STONE, we three moved on one side to hear the guide tell his story —which story I will repeat as faithfully as memory will allow.

"We now come," said the guide, "to the famous Coronation Chair and Stone, but I want you clearly to understand that THE STONE is THE CHIEF THING, not the CHAIR, the Chair was only made to contain the STONE.

"For about six hundred years all the Kings of England have been crowned on that Stone, but before it came to England it was about a thousand years in Scotland, and all the Kings of Scotland were crowned on it during all those years, but any Irishman will tell you that before that Stone went to Scotland, it was in Ireland for a thousand years and all the chief Kings of Ireland were crowned on that Stone, so you see it has had a very long history."

At this point I ventured to ask the guide a question. Pointing to the worn rings on either side of the stone, I asked, "If that Stone has only been moved twice during the last two thousand five hundred years, how is it those rings are so badly worn—they are nearly worn through?"

"That question," said the guide, "introduces a very interesting subject. There is no doubt about it, this is a very ancient Stone, and there are many stories connected with it. For example, there is a body of people called British-Israelites who claim that THAT is the very Stone on which Jacob laid his head at Bethel, and which the Israelites carried with them through their forty years' wanderings in the wilderness, and they believe that Moses struck it, and from it came water."

"It is," he said, "a very interesting story, and they have a lot of evidence to prove it; anyhow I can say that though it has many names, its most popular name is 'JACOB'S PILLOW.'"

Here I ventured another question:

"IF THAT IS JACOB'S PILLOW MUST IT NOT ALSO BE THE WITNESS THAT GOD IS WITH US and THAT WE ARE HIS OWN CHOSEN PEOPLE?"

The guide agreed that the fact of the Stone being where it is, viz., in the most sacred place of even Westminster Abbey, and being used as our Throne, together with its ancient history and its name, did go a long way to establish my claim, though of course he could not commit himself further.

It was now time for us all to depart. My two young friends shook me warmly by the hand and expressed their thanks for the new light and knowledge they had received.

I have never met them since. I can only trust that they have made Christ their constant companion in their newly-married life. If they have done that, they must have had all the joy and happiness I wished them as we parted.

THE TRIBE OF JUDAH (PHAREZ).

BY COLONEL J. C. TYLER.

IT is still preached in the English pulpit that the Jews represent the whole House of Israel to whom the promises were made. It is still widely believed that the Jews represent the whole tribe of Judah. It is from many articles found in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER that the real facts are being gradually understood.

In this article it is desired to confine our subject to Pharez-Judah only, and to eliminate, except for a passing mention, Zarah-Judah (the branch of the tribe which separated itself from the Israelites during their sojourn in Egypt), as well as those great separate Houses belonging to Pharez-Judah, viz.: (1) The Royal House of David; and (2) the Jews.

Judah was born about 1750 B.C. at Padan-Aram. He was the fourth son of Leah. He was the father of Pharez and Zarah by Tamar. He was survived by another son, Shelah, who appears to have thrown in his lot with his brother Pharez.

When Jacob died, 1689 B.C., and blessed his sons, he foretold of Judah—"Thy father's children shall bow down to thee. Judah is a lion's whelp, he couched as a lion and as an old lion. The sceptre shall not depart from Judah until Shiloh come."

During the march of the tribes, 1490 B.C., on the east side of the square was the standard and camp of Judah with his army of 74,600, accompanied by Issachar and Zebulon, his two younger brothers.

In 1451 B.C. Moses blessed Judah saying: "Bring him unto his people."

After the death of Solomon and the withdrawal of the ten tribes (975 B.C.) "none followed the House of David, but the tribe of Judah only." Benjamin, however, remained with Judah.

Then there were two separate Houses in Palestine—the House of Israel, ten tribes, and the House of Judah, two tribes.

We may now turn our attention to that point of interest which has been veiled through all the past centuries, purposely veiled without doubt.

It has been well known that in the sixth year of Hezekiah (the seventh year, according to Ferrar Fenton), Shalmaneser, King of Assyria, carried away Israel into Assyria and put them in Halah and Habor by the river Gozan and in the cities of the Medes (721 B.C.).

It is also well known that, in the 14th year of Hezekiah, Sennacherib, King of Assyria, came against all the fenced cities of Judah and took them (713 B.C.). As there is no information to show what became of the inhabitants, very little notice appears to have been taken of this text.

But a knowledge of the facts is vital to the real solution of the prophecies in regard to the later history of the tribe of Judah:—

Were the population of these fenced cities transported to Assyria in similar manner to the men of Israel? If so, in what numbers?

And, how do these numbers compare with the population involved in the carrying away later of the Jews from Jerusalem to Babylon?

Digitized by Google

A reference to the head of the Assyrian Department in the British Museum elicits the information that they were certainly transported, carried away to Assyria, but that the date should read 704 B.C., or nine years later, in Hezekiah's reign. That later date is arrived at by the date of Sennacherib's reign and of his third campaign, Sennacherib having succeeded to the throne in 705 B.C.

These facts may be seen and read in the Reading Room in the British Museum in Professor D. D. Luckenbill's "Ancient Records of Assyria and Babylon" (1926-7), vol. ii, page 120:

Sennacherib, 705-681 B.C.

Taylor prism. Col. iv, Sennacherib's third campaign.

"As for Hezekiah, the Jew, who did not submit to my yoke, 46 of his strong, walled cities, as well as the small cities in their neighbourhood, which were without number,—by escalade and by bringing up siege engines, by attacking and storming on foot, by mines, tunnels and breaches I besieged and took. 200,150 people great and small, male and female, horses, mules, asses, camels, cattle and sheep without number, I brought away from them and counted as spoil. Himself, like a caged bird, I shut up in Jerusalem, his royal city."

Compared with these numbers we find that (588 B.C.) Nebuchadnezzar carried away only 10,000 captives of the Jews to Babylon when he carried away "all Jerusalem and all the princes and all the mighty men of valour and all the craftsmen and smiths, all but the poorest sort of people."

The tribe has been identified by modern writers and the highest authorities as the Jutes, or Jutlanders, or Judahlanders.

From the Historians' History:—The Jutes, the Angles and the Saxons seem originally to have constituted but one nation. They frequently changed their position on the firm land of Europe as the stream of population rolled forward The Jutes with the Angles dwelt in the peninsula of Jutland. Ptolemy places the Saxons in the Cimbric Chersonesus near the Jutes and Angles.

The Saxons, Jutes and Angles, although speaking the same language, had no political unity. They were not moved by one impulse or invited by one opportunity. The conquest of Britain (circa A.D. 460) was the result of a series of separate expeditions, independent of one another. (Stubbs.)

Of the Anglo-Saxons—the Jutes came first (A.D. 449), followed by the Saxons (477). In 495 a second band of Saxons came. The conversion of England (to Christiantiy) brought lasting good, as it united the many tribal peoples of England, viz., Britons, Jutes, Angles, Saxons, etc. (G. H. Lancaster.)

The Jutes eventually took possession of Kent, the Isle of Wight, and some small part of Wessex. (Danvers.)

OUR GLORIOUS BIBLE.

"What is written . . . How readest thou?"—LUKE x, 26.

BY R. W. ROSE.

THE Bible, written in Eastern lands, is to the British people of necessity a translation from the original writings. Please permit the writer, as briefly as possible, to deal with two only of the many translations that have appeared during the past nine centuries, viz., those known as the "authorized version," A.V.; and the "revised version," R.V.

Much of great interest could be herein introduced, but we will come to the period 1560 to 1603, when there were 130 distinct issues of Bibles and Testaments of different revisions extant. When King James I was approached first by the Puritans with the object of securing a better and more complete translation from the earliest then known manuscripts, the Bishop of London opposed the movement. The King, however, in this one instance, favoured the Puritans, eventually appointing about fifty educated and otherwise suitable men for the purpose. After much prayer and forethought for Divine guidance in such an important undertaking, the mode for the procedure of the translators was agreed to as follows: they were grouped in six companies, each company being assigned a particular portion of the whole Bible. Every member of a company was to take the same portion for himself, afterward meeting together to compare what each had done, and form one revised copy of the whole in which they could agree. When a portion had thus been finished by any company it was sent to the rest for their examination. If any doubt arose about any of the renderings, or improvement was suggested, such were referred back to the particular company who had executed the portion. If such suggested alterations were approved they were adopted at once; if not approved, to be referred to a committee of final revisers. It will be seen that, while the labour was great, correctness was likely to be secured by this plan, for every portion would first be translated by each member of the company to whom it was assigned, then considered by them all, then examined by the other companies, and then finally revised by the select Committee appointed to complete the work.

It is well to remember that the number of ancient MSS. known in 1611 was much fewer than in 1884. The translation of the A.V. occupied three years, but the whole time taken was from 1604-11. Thus was a real necessity provided for to the joy of the nation, and by its being "authorized" by the King to be used in churches (whereas the numerous other versions extant were neither permitted nor authorized) it became known as the A.V.

Surely no one will question the wisdom and sheer necessity of a further revised version being called for after a lapse of 250 years, among other reasons being that of the change of meaning of very many words. Although the Word of God and the eternal principles revealed therein remain unchangeable, human languages are ever changing. In 1870 the work of revision began in earnest, the earlier promoters desiring to confine it to the C.E. denomination. The Divine purpose was otherwise. "The Lord is a great God"; the eternal Son of God, Jesus Christ, is a great Saviour; Salvation is great; therefore the revealed Word is far too great to be bound by human cobwebs, hence this new work, being "of God," began and was continued in a true brotherly Christian spirit, quite undenominational, but all qualified by being Hebrew or Greek scholars, and imbued with the one purpose of giving the most accurate translations of the original into the English language; the time occupied was from 1870 to June, 1884. We in these days possess in the R.V. a priceless heritage; it moreover embodies so much of the manner and style of the A.V.

The wise rules by which the Revisers were guided, such as should satisfy every critic (except those who of set purpose are bent on destroying the authority of the Word of God, these will be dealt with in due course according to Scripture).

We in this land are once again beset with a multiplicity of independent translations which would not matter if they were kept only for private interest, but no exponent of Scripture—for obvious reasons—should make use of such in public, the very nature of the Bible demanding for its translation a company of eminently suitable men for so great an object, and this was the God-given method by which these two outstanding versions are before us to-day. It is lowering to the prestige and authority of the Bible publicly to use any private translation, no matter who the translator or reviser may be.

KINGDOM GOSPEL. PRACTICAL APPLICATION.

By H. E. Turner.

The kingdom and its gospel having already been presented in these pages, together with its aims, objects and future triumphs, we now come to consider how the knowledge acquired may be brought into reality and operation, so that this knowledge may not be allowed to lie dormant and ineffectual, productive of little if any practical results. There is evidence that the general reader of The National Message has only a vague idea of the literal interpretation of the gospel of the kingdom and could not put into words this gospel as it is to be preached; therefore we now venture to give an expression of the gospel in text and word and in practice.

The kingdom being that of the Heavenly Monarch, the King of kings, on Whose earthly throne of Great Britain reigns King George V, of the line of David, the subject nation being God's people Israel; the constitution of the kingdom, being the enactment of God's Word, for a natural fulfilment in this world of nature, this constitution comprises the gospel of the kingdom, that is to say, the gospel of the kingdom to be preached is the revelation of the "statutes, judgments and laws which the Lord made between Him and the Children of Israel in Mount Sinai by the hand of Moses." Foremost in importance are "The Ten Commandments," written with the finger of the Lord God on two Tables of Stone for the Children of Israel, expressly for their individual use, forming the foundation of the constitution, having a superstructure of the statutes and judgments, concerning national, legislative, judicial, commercial and domestic affairs of the kingdom.

"And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." (Matt. xxiv 14.)

We deplore that, just when this gospel is to be preached, the ministry of the gospel of salvation should have considerably displaced and abandoned the Commandments; it becomes therefore more than ever requisite for British-Israelites to take up the duty; this is not only obligatory on the National Federation Headquarters, but it devolves on every branch and on every individual on whom a knowledge of British-Israel Truth has placed the responsibility.

The "Gospel of the Kingdom" by the will of Jesus Christ ordained unto all the world.

"And God spake all these words, saying,"

"I am the Lord thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage."

"Thou shalt have no other gods before Me."

"Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of any thing that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth: Thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them: for I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate Me; and showing mercy unto thousands of them that love Me, and keep My commandments."

"Thou shalt not take the Name of the Lord thy God in vain; for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh His Name in vain."

"Remember the sabbath day to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labour, and do all thy work: but the seventh day is the sabbath of the Lord thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor the stranger that is within thy gates: For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the Lord blessed the sabbath day, and hallowed it."

"Honour thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee."

"Thou shalt not kill."

"Thou shalt not commit adultery."

"Thou shalt not steal."

"Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour."

"Thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's wife, nor his manservant, nor his maidservant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor any thing that is thy neighbour's."

These Commandments, written in the twentieth chapter of Exodus, together with the Statutes and Judgments recorded in the books of Moses form the legal basis of the Gospel of the Kingdom, decreed by Jesus in the twenty-fourth chapter of St. Matthew: "To be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations."

In the preaching of this gospel the Lord's Prayer holds a prominent place, for with majestic brevity, following the declaration of profound reverence to the Name of our Heavenly Father, the prayer comprehends the whole of the gospel of the kingdom, "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven." This short sentence embraces not only the gospel of the kingdom and its intention, but also the beneficent earthly system of Divine organization, together with the covenants of Abraham, blessings to all nations and much more than we are able to perceive; after asking God to bestow on us the necessities of life, forgiveness and deliverence from evil, the prayer terminates with this great and glorious acknowledgment: "for Thine is the kingdom, the power and the glory, for ever. Amen."

The Executive Committee of the B.-I.-W.F. met on March 26th and dispatched a large amount of business during a sitting of over two hours.

DEAR OLD IRELAND.

By Professor Edward Odlum, M.A., B.Sc., &c.

For a long time our thinkings have been looking towards the "Green Isle" out in the North Atlantic, the shield and protector of England. The west coast of Ireland is a hard, rugged, rock-bound region, of such a nature as is necessary to withstand the driving, oft-recurring storms of the ocean.

The prevailing winds of the British Isles and Europe drive from the north-west south-easterly, and leave their marks everywhere. The tempest-tossed pounding waves ceaselessly batter and grind the rocky coast of Ireland, which is the buffer and guardian of the larger island known as Great Britain.

Were it not for the protecting influence and ministrations of Ireland, Scotland and England would long since have been cut apart by the driving, grinding power of the Atlantic waters.

Some people tell us that Ireland would be bankrupt were it not for English gold which pours over constantly to replenish the Irish Exchequer. Very good! Even so! In spite of this fact, we are inclined to think that both Scotland and England are debtors to the Hibernians, or ancient Milesians, whose rock-bound coast has preserved the geographic identity of Britain major.

Finnerty gives us from tradition the statement that the second colony of Ireland went there from the shores of the Black Sea, across Russia to the Baltic, whence they reached the western Isle. Their leader was Nemedh, a Milesian, whose people primarily came from Miletus, one of the twelve cities of the famous and powerful Ionian confederation.

On reaching Hibernia, they came in contact with the Formorians, supposed to have been an African race; doubtless of Phœnician extraction. Many battles were fought between the Milesians and Formorians to the final defeat of the former.

Later, there appeared in Ireland the Firbolgs, or Belgae, led by five brothers, who divided the island into five parts and held the country until the Tuatha de Danaans appeared on the scene. These people were said to have descended from the Milesian Nemedh. Some say the Danaans brought with them the noted lia fail, or Stone of Destiny, the origin of the name Innis Fail, or Isle of Destiny, as applied to Ireland.

These Danaans were said to be Greek in origin, but this is only another way of saying they were Milesians of Ionia, who were Greeks of the "Twelve Cities." They were said to have subdued the Belgae of Ireland and reduced them to serfdom.

The Tuatha de Danaans ruled until they were invaded and defeated by the Gaels or Gaidels of comparatively late arrival, who were said to be of Eastern, Grecian or Milesian origin. These Gaels, or Milesians, were called Scots from Scota, the warlike mother of King Milesius. They were called Gaels or Gadels from Gadelius, a descendant of Foenius, an Egyptian Milesian.

The Milesians passed first into Spain from the eastern limits of the Mediterranean Sea, and in later years went north to Ireland. A very remarkable statement makes these Milesian-Spanish-Irish to have originated in the Caucasian Mountains, the actual great highway between Europe and Asia, the very highway the ancient Sacae or Scythae trod on their trek to north-western Europe and the British Isles.

The special Milesian said to have discovered Ireland was Ith, uncle of the Spanish king. He was on a voyage of exploration, sighted Ireland, went ashore, was attacked by the Danaans, wounded, escaped and died at sea. His body was taken to Spain. His son Looi, or Levy, summoned the Spanish Milesians to arms. His sons Heber the Fair, and Heber the Brown, with others, invaded Ireland with thirty ships, beat down all opposition, landed, conquered the island, and ruled it with a strong hand. The names Levy, Heber the Fair and Heber the Brown are suggestive of the Hebrew Israel peoples of Ionia, the Caucasus and the Black Sea shores

The Irish historians generally seem to agree that the Irish Milesians were of Celtico-Scythian origin, but the details of their passage from Scythia to Spain are not fully known.

THE LESSER FOLK.—II.

Among the poultry on our place at the seaside was a flock of white Pekin ducks; one proud mother had a string of fluffy little flappers. As they were about my feet one day I lifted one of the young ducks and held it in my hands; for a few moments it trembled violently; this soon passed, and it began to pick at my face in a pleasant kind of way with its bill. It quickly made friends, and as a farmer who stood by said, "If you give those fellows half a chance to get acquainted, they will follow you to bed."

Seeing that I had made friends with little Peter, the children—my neighbour's and mine—followed up the friendship, and soon Peter became quite humanized. He left the flock and cultivated entirely two sets of friends; one, his human friends, and seeing that the two bull-terriers were admitted to human friendship, Peter condescended to know them too; and when human companionship was lacking, sought their company.

The uncanny intelligence Peter developed was a constant source of interest. Our neighbour in pursuing his business did a good deal of driving about the neighbourhood; finding Peter wandering afield, having followed the children away, he one day lifted him to a place beside him on the seat of the carriage. From that time it was enough for Peter to see the horse put into the carriage; he would be on hand with loud quacking, demanding to be taken too! Lifted on the seat, he would quietly settle himself, and then with a contented "quack, quack" indicate that as far as he was concerned his master might go ahead.

Evidently feeling lonely one day, he started off on his own to the school half a mile away through the main street of the village, and appearing before the door made his presence known. When the door was opened he marched into the school, and sat at the feet of his little mistress until school was dismissed, triumphantly accompanying the children home.

Peter was full of practical jokes, and, although short skirts were not quite so much in vogue, it was amusing to see one and another of his girl friends start away with a shriek as Peter quietly came up behind and nipped a calf.

All the blandishments of the flock failed to bring Peter back into the duck world again. His feathers were not so glossy and his colour not so white, for he never saw his human friends nor even the dogs preening their feathers. Poor Peter was betrayed at last when Spot, the mother dog, was raising and training a brood of thorough-bred puppies. Harking back to the instinctive primary school course for puppy dogs, mother Spot saw in Peter the opportunity for a splendid object-lesson of how a dog should seize and kill his prey.

The horrified human friend was too late to rescue Peter from this four-footed vivisectionist. Peace to his memory; he gave a splendid illustration of how the bird life is capable of developing affection towards the human family.

OBITUARY.

COLONEL PORTEOUS— A LINK WITH NAPOLEON.

These words headed an obituary notice in The Times of March 16th which recorded the passing of another British-Israel veteran. The Times devoted the best part of a column to his memory, and we give some extracts. The Colonel belonged to a branch of the original Hawkshawe family of

THE LATE COLONEL PORTEOUS, C.I.E.

Porteous, which is said to have been established at Hawkshawe for over 1,000 years. His grandfather bought property in St. Helena and settled there in a house in which for a time Napoleon was accommodated and a friendship was formed with the ex-Emperor which continued after the latter removed to Longmore. Napoleon showed a liking for the children and often talked with the boys sitting on his knee.

Colonel Charles Arkcoll Porteous, C.I.E., was born in Madras in 1839, his father having risen to the highest place in the Madras Medical Service. Charles Porteous was gazetted to the 27th Madras Infantry when, in 1857, it was ordered to Calcutta to assist in quelling the Mutiny. The regiment remained staunch throughout what became years of arduous campaigning. It was at Cawnpore with the force under General Windham, and had to keep open the communications between Cawnpore and Lucknow. Porteous was present at the holding up of the bridge (part of which had been blown up by the rebels) and was employed in keeping open the road between Cawnpore and Lucknow throughout Sir James Outram's occupation of the Alumbagh from November, 1857, to the following March. He fought in many engagements and was in command of a small party of Sikh cavalry which conveyed important despatches from the Commander-in-Chief to the Governor-General. He was engaged until the last embers of the rising had been stamped out, and had the medal with clasps for Lucknow and the Central India Campaign. Afterwards Porteous joined the Madras Police Force and served therein with distinction for thirty-four years. He was in charge of the Madras Police at the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi to proclaim Queen Victoria Empress of India, and rose to be Inspector-General of Jails and for seven years Inspector-General of Police. For this service he was made C.I.E. in 1895, and on his retirement Lord Wenlock made hearty acknowledgment of the excellence of his record. Col. Porteous married in 1864 Catherine Sophia, daughter of the Rev. J. Thomas, founder of the C.M.S. Mission in Tinnevelly, and sister of the Rev. J. Davies Thomas, one of the pioneers of the British-Israel Movement, and father of Dr. J. Llewellyn Thomas (author of "God and My Birthright") and Mrs. T. Sparshott Johnson. A sister of Mrs. Porteous (Miss F. E. Thomas) is also a supporter of the B.-I. Movement, now living in retirement in England after sixty years of missionary work in Tinnevelly, and received the Kaiser-I-Hind medal for educational services. Colonel Porteous had a family of seven sons and four daughters. One son is Brigadier-General C. McL. Porteous, who, like two brothers and eight other members of the family, did combatant service in the war. Three were killed, three were wounded and four received honours. The eldest daughter was matron of a hospital on the Western Front.

CORRESPONDENCE.

"PREVAILINC PRAYER."

To the Editor of The National Message and Banner.

Dear Sir,—When reading the other day Mr. Henry Proctor's arresting title under the above heading in your issue of February 16th, 1929, the following supplemental thought occurred to me that perhaps you will allow me to express.

"And He said, Thy name shall be called no more Jacob but Israel: for as a prince hast thou power with God and with men and hast prevailed." May it not be that we, as the seed of Jacob, have inherited together with the name Israel this right to strive with God in prayer and to prevail? How many of us fail to claim the virtue of this gracious Birthright blessing when making our requests known to Our Heavenly Father?

Yours very sincerely,

F. S. Dobbs.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

Mr. John Leech, K.C., gave another of his lectures on the Book of Revelation on April 3rd at Headquarters to a good audience. He is continuing the series each Wednesday afternoon until further notice.

The speaker for Thursday evening next will be Mr. G. R. Gair, and his subject will be "Neolithic and La Tène Cultures in Britain."

The Rev. Pascoe Goard gave four valuable and impressive addresses in the Kensington Town Hall to large audiences on April 4th and 5th. Major J. Knowles, O.B.E., President of the B.-I.-W.F., presided at the opening meeting. The Chairmen at the following meetings were Mr. John Leech, the Rev. P. H. Davies and the Rev. Joseph Gay, who, with the Rev. J. Lumley Davies, gave short addresses. Among supporters on the platform were the Rev. W. A. Phillips, Colonel Brazier-Creagh, Dr. T. G. Wakeling and Capt. A. Morrell.

Many people had come long distances, and it was gratifying to note the presence and interest of many young folk.

Our readers will soon be thinking of visits to the country now that Spring is here and Summer near. We venture to suggest Glastonbury and our B.-I. Hostel there as being specially worthy of their attention. The associations of Glastonbury are of a peculiarly sacred character, and the grounds and ruins of the ancient Abbey have an interest not equalled by any other spot in Britain. Our Hostel will be found very comfortable, and every effort is made to cater for the wishes of guests. Delightful trips can easily be made to Wells, Cheddar, Weston-super-Mare, and many interesting spots in the neighbourhood. We shall be glad to hear from any of our friends who may wish to go to "Abbots Leigh."

If any ladies would care to help make up materials for the next Sale of Work, which we hope will be held on a day in June, will they kindly communicate with Mrs. Hamilton Short, 6, Buckingham Gate, London, S.W.1?

We have to record with regret the death of Mrs. Louis K. Smith, of Bath, an ardent British-Israelite and a regular attendant at our Congress each year. She was a daughter of the late General H. W. Matthews. Her sister, the widow of the late Rev. H. Macdonald Maugham, predeceased her in October last.

We tender our sympathy to the relatives of our good friend.

We are happy to learn that the Earl of Dysart, a Vice-President and a Life Member of the B.-I.-W.F., is making good progress after an attack of influenza. We trust that he may speedily be restored to health and strength.

Erratum.—In the Review of Bishop Titcomb's book, in The National Message of April 6th, page 217, line 41, for "Scientific race" read "Semitic race."

British-Israel books on our shelves are like ranks, battalions, regiments, divisions, army corps, armies of soldiers idle in the home depots while the battle is raging out on the field: the battle for truth and right; for God and King; for country, Church and home.

Stretching from the front to the rear of our large building are ranks upon ranks of our new books awaiting the touch which shall send them out to bear a part in the contest for truth.

We are sending them out as fast and as far as our means will allow. By the touch of your hand you may release as many as you will of these now idle soldiers, by sending a contribution to Headquarters for free distribution.

Remember you can take the best book, or the best recorded lecture, from our shelves, make it your very own at the cost of a few pence or shillings, and USE IT AS YOUR MESSAGE TO YOUR FRIEND.

The book costs much more than that to the author and the publishers in its production, counting cost and labour.

It awaits your touch to send it on its mission. Many of our workers have been won for the Truth by a sixpenny booklet or a ten-shilling book. What a triumph scored for the giver, who probably will not know of the credit entered in the giver's favour in the great balance-sheet, not affecting salvation at all of course, but vitally affecting the rewards which Our Lord declares He will distribute by and by.

The prayers of our friends are asked for the Rev. W. Turpitt, who lies ill in Guy's Hospital after an operation.

Mr. Turpitt will be remembered as an acceptable speaker at our last Congress. He came to us from Halifax. He now has pastoral charge of a church at Gravesend.

We earnestly hope and pray that he may be fully restored to good health.

The articles on "The Documents of Daniel" by the Rev. Pascoe Goard will be resumed next month.

Extract from a letter to Principal Dykes, of Westminster College, by the late Rev. Dr. Watson (Ian McLaren), September, 1899:—

"When we are at it (collecting funds for the new site of Westminster College at Cambridge) our Church must finish the job well and show that if we are one of the least we are one of the bravest of the tribes of Israel."

Speaking on one occasion on the Boer War (1899-1902), Dr. Watson said: "Israel was God's instrument in fulfilling His purpose in the world, and England, if one can make anything of history, has been God's instrument in spreading civilization and administering justice among oppressed peoples."

On another occasion, when speaking at a Wesleyan gathering, Dr. Watson said: "Are anyone's eyes so blind that he cannot see the mission of England? Have we not been surrounded by the seas and our national character formed for purposes that we can recognize? What other nation has planted so many colonies, explored so many unknown lands, made such practical contributions to civilization, or set such an illustrious example of liberty as our nation?"

Bishop Butler in his "Analogy" writes:—"And as it is owned the whole scheme of Scripture is not yet understood, so, if it ever comes to be understood before the restitution of all things, and without miraculous interpositions, it must be in the same way as natural knowledge is come at—by the continuance and progress of learning and of liberty, and by particular persons attending to, comparing, and pursuing intimations scattered up and down it, which are overlooked and disregarded by the generality of the world. For this is the way in which all improvements are made, by thoughtful men's tracing on obscure hints, as it were, dropped us by nature accidentally, or which seem to come into our minds by chance. Nor is it at all incredible that a Book which has been so long in the possession of mankind should contain many truths as yet undiscovered. For all the same phenomena and the same faculties of investigation from which such great discoveries in natural knowledge have been made in the present and last age were equally in the possession of mankind several thousand years before. And possibly it may be intended that events, as they come to pass, should open and ascertain the meaning of several parts of Scripture."

LEAMINGTON BRANCH OF B.-I.-W.F.

An afternoon drawing-room meeting was held, when Miss Hamilton Hunter made wonderfully clear the covenants to Abraham, Isaac and Israel, explaining the special blessings to the House of Joseph, and the significance of the crossing of the Patriarch's hands, conferring the birthright and headship upon Ephraim.

At 8 p.m. a public meeting was held, when, the President being unavoidably absent, his place was taken by a member of the local Committee, Mrs. F. Warner, who proved an ideal Chairman, and who has since sent in the following report:—

"On Friday, March 22nd, a most wonderful and inspiring address was given by Miss Hamilton Hunter, her subject being 'The Redemption of the Nation.'

"Although Miss Hunter spoke for over an hour, the flight of time was entirely forgotten; she treated her subject with such convincing argument and wealth of Biblical illustration that seldom has so much illuminating knowledge been packed into one address.

"The meeting was unanimous that, having regard to the coming national crisis, in view of the pending General Election, each member should join in prayer" (with G.H.Q.) "on Thursday mornings, for national blessings, knowing ourselves to be God's Israel."

The Rev. R. G. F. Waddington, M.A., lectured at Bingley on March 22nd, before an enthusiastic audience. He explained the rise of Israel from their "dead state" into a nation and a company of nations, and traced the various migrations, showing consequences of impact upon surrounding peoples. Mr. B. Broadbent was in the chair.

A Branch is being formed in the Hornsey district. The first meeting will (D.V.) be at 7.45 on April 23rd, at the Earl Haig Memorial Hall, Elder Avenue, Crouch End (one minute from Crouch End Clock Tower), and on each alternate Tuesday. Will all those near rally round the local Secretary and assist in making a lively centre for British-Israel Truth? Please send in your name and address to Headquarters.

THE EARLY BRITONS AND THE
EARLY BRITISH CHURCH

By

Rev. G. H. Lancaster, M.A., F.R.A.S., C.F.,
Vicar of St. Stephen's, Bow.

This little work contains the substance of Two Lectures, given at Glastonbury by Mr. Lancaster in 1925.

The former, brief though it is, is a remarkably clear exposition of what has now come to be accepted as the character of the pre-Christian Briton, not a painted Savage, but a well-educated, well-equipped man with a very considerable and justifiable pride of ancestry.

The latter, dealing with the establishment of Christianity in our island in the early years of the faith, cites a formidable list of authorities in support of his contention that St. Paul, Joseph of Arimathæa and many other New Testament Characters were the first bringers of the Gospel.—An arresting and convincing paper.

THE BRITISH - ISRAEL IDEAL.

By W. G. DUNCAN THOMPSON.

"The ladder up which the British-Israel Movement has climbed to a perception of a new aspect of the great Christian and British ideal is that of the historical identity of Britain with ancient Israel. This method—whatever may be the individual opinion of it—is gaining force steadily from research into history and other kindred subjects, and from its extraordinary relationship to Scripture, especially prophetical Scripture: this relationship being entirely complementary and harmonious. It has, moreover, the advantage of being able to provide a platform from which the present state of affairs can be surveyed in an historical, logical and comprehensive way, and its answer to modern criticism of the Bible is deadly. This method, therefore, beside possessing the credit for revealing the new aspect of the ideal, is invaluable for the work done in clearing the ground of the present out-of-date confusion and presenting the fresh conception in a perspective easily grasped and retained by the general intelligence."

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

THE MARCH OF PROPHETIC EVENTS.—III.

By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard, F.R.G.S.

A few weeks ago the world looked with interest on a matter in the high circles of Italy which has been progressing between the Vatican and the Quirinal; between the Pope and Il Duce.

The question at issue has been as to the restoring of the actuality of the temporal power of the Pope.

It is strange that two of the greatest political religious organizations in the earth have been essentially homeless. We refer on the one hand to the Jewish people and their organization, and on the other to the Papacy and its organization.

A.D. 70 made the Jewish organization homeless, and a homeless wanderer the Jewish organization has been to this very day.

A.D. 1870 saw the Papacy made homeless by the taking over of the whole of the Pontifical territories by the Government of Italy.

Now we see the Zionist effort to rehabilitate the Jew in Palestine, which is desired as a "national home for the Jews"; and we see the endeavour of the Vatican to secure from the Government of Italy a concession in the city of Rome large enough to form the base of the pedestal of the Temporal Power of the Papacy; and we see this granted as an accomplished fact.

Mark well these two movements of the decade in which we live; and then again, mark the Low Passage of the Pyramid, indicating a time of humbling and of difficulty for the British-Israel nation; a time which furnishes room for the nation on its knees, but not room to march with chest erect in the light of the sun.

The announcement has reverberated around the world.

While the representatives of many countries were called to witness the declaration of this fact, only one nation is involved in the transaction. It was a matter carried through between Italy—in fact, Mussolini—and the Pope. Because the matter is confined as to territory and governmental action within the realm of Italy, no other nation had an opportunity, or a right, to raise any objection, and we are glad to say no other nation had any right to ratify that which was done. So far our own Anglo-Saxon nations have been kept out from the responsibility of the matter by the force of circumstances. With the rest of the world we can only look on and wonder.

But while it is a matter which rested entirely with Italy and the Vatican, it is a matter which will affect, and speedily, the whole of the civilized world. Let Great Britain beware! One of the explosive happenings has taken place which is destined to affect the whole world.

The pin-point of territory accepted by the Vatican is geographically negligible. Internationally it is big enough to furnish the ground for housing a force which will yet shake the nations.

We regret to see the matter carried through. We regret it because of Italy. She will feel yet the hand of the monarch she has set up on a throne within her own borders. It is ill for that country which has two rulers in the one land.

The Church of Rome, with the Pope at its head, is now entering into a new struggle for temporal power. Never, perhaps, did her chances seem to be brighter than at the present moment. But never has the contest for temporal power been so fiercely contested in all the history of the world as it is being contested to-day.

In that conflict the Church of Rome will find itself suddenly surrounded with organizations and peoples which were ready to follow the Roman Catholic Church and to support her in her claims for spiritual dominance, but which will now look upon her as a rival claimant for temporal power. As such the Church will find a very different attitude from many of her former supporters.

Moreover, the whole of the administrative heritage of the "Holy Roman Empire" since the passing of the Empires in 1918 lies open as a coveted prize to be secured by the strongest in physical and psychical resources; and many claimants to that heritage are in the field.

Communism, a rival claimant to that power, is opposed to the Papal claim for temporal rule.

Socialism is a claimant to that power, and is opposed to any rule but that of the people.

Democracy is determined that rule shall be in the hands of the majority of the electorate only.

Monarchy is determined that secular authority, constitutionally exercised, shall rule in matters of State.

Non-Christian organizations in the religious world, such as the Jews, and so forth, will sharply collide with the claim for temporal power on the part of the nominally Christian Roman Catholic Church, or on the part of any Church.

Non-Roman Catholic Christianity will be on its guard against the ancient claims for the Papacy, which at best is but a branch of the tree, a grafted cutting from a wild olive tree, to overrule them all.

All this is felt to-day in the breasts of uncounted millions. What is felt to-day will be voiced by and by.

We regret it for the sake of Britain also, because it interjects into all the British Dominions questions which it were better there should be no occasion to raise. For instance, even the Communist Party in Britain taught its abstract doctrines with impunity. But when as the agents of a foreign temporal power Communism began to interfere and to carry on a propaganda in regard to matters of government and practical politics, the arm of the secular authority here took action.

There is a difference as wide as the poles in the doctrines taught by the Communists on the one hand and by the Papacy on the other. But there is this similarity in the position. While Roman Catholics of foreign extraction in Britain confine themselves to the spiritual realm and teach the abstract doctrines of the Roman Catholic faith, nothing happens. It is a land which protects the people in the exercise of freedom of conscience in regard to belief and worship. But when every Roman Catholic agent is transformed into the agent of a foreign secular power, then a similar question is raised.

In the age preceding this one, namely the Elizabethan reign and era, this very phase of the question became acute, and brought about historic things which it is not pleasant to recall. None were put to death by Christian England because of faith or worship. But some were brought to the grave because mistaken ideas of loyalty to the temporal power of the Papacy brought treason to the British Throne and Commonwealth.

We regret it for the sake of the world. The race for the possession of that administrative power which a decade ago fell from the hands of the Kaisers is growing more and more intense. The Papacy has now joined in the dangerous race. We are not prophets, but we are readers of the prophecies of the Bible, and we say that the step taken a few weeks ago will result in trouble for the world. We dreamed that the age of religious wars had passed. We now find both organization and propaganda moving towards the most calamitous form of war, namely civil war, in many lands. The ultimate result, as prophesied, will be the final breaking up of the Papal organization by the people of the Papal world, who will not endure to be challenged in the race for temporal power. In a day which is taken up with peace propaganda, what madness to plant such a cause of strife!

It is a day which will as surely mark the page of history as did A.D. 70, when the Jews lost their temporal power, or A.D. 1870, when the Papacy lost its temporal power.

* * *

THE EMERGENCE OF MUSSOLINI.

Now for a moment let us look at what the Papacy has done for Mussolini. Mussolini has been given the unique distinction of having conferred on the Pope the dangerous gift of temporal power.

What the College of Cardinals could not do, Mussolini has done.

What Austria in her palmy days of so short a time ago could not accomplish, Mussolini has accomplished.

What the powerful Jesuit order could not do, Mussolini has done; yet when we say this, has not the Jesuit order done this through Mussolini?

What the Roman Catholic world could not do, Mussolini has done, namely, ENDOWED THE POPE WITH TEMPORAL POWER.

Who then is Mussolini? And what has the Roman Catholic Church done for him?

Suddenly this man becomes a figure which towers in the heavens of the decade in which we live.

A short time ago he was simply the leader of the Black Shirts of Italy.

Then he became the Premier of Italy.

Then he became the Dictator of Italy.

His position in Italy brought him into such a position as made it possible for him to deal with the appeal of the Papacy for the restoration of temporal power.

What then is he who can crown a Pope of the Church of Rome with temporal power?

This is a matter which the world will have to ask itself. As to whether he is a beneficent personality, or the reverse, is not the question. What is the scope of his power for good or ill?

A short while ago one would have said that his power was limited by the resources of Italy. To-day it is a very different matter.

Assuming that the Concordat between the Pope and Mussolini involves mutual support, what is the effect on the position of Mussolini?

Those who know are aware that the Roman Catholic Church has for many years been developing an organization of Roman Catholic manhood. They know that the members of that organization are under oath to set up and to sustain the temporal power of the Pope, and to cast down other Governments to make way for him.

Digitized by Google

It is readily and widely stated that the army so enrolled must be counted by the million. They are in all the countries of Anglo-Saxondom and probably elsewhere. Is all this world-wide organization to be placed under the control of Mussolini for the achievement of his aims, in return for the placing of the resources of Italy at the disposal of the Pope in the pursuit of his aims?

This might seem to be playing the game of Mussolini rather than that of the Papacy. But there is this consideration. Mussolini will die in the natural order of events, within the natural limit of the life of man.

Judging from the past, the Roman Catholic organization will be as much alive as ever when Mussolini is dead. The Papacy may then inherit the widespreading structure that Mussolini has now set up, and will yet set up. It might be the height of that human wisdom, than which there is not a more outstanding example than that displayed in the Roman Catholic organization, to aid Mussolini to perfect to-day an organization so wide-spread as to be equalled by nothing in ancient history, and by nothing in this day short of the British Empire, so that when in due course Mussolini passes to his long sleep, the never-sleeping Church may inherit the power she has assisted him to build up.

There is only one thing about that. The never-sleeping, and so far undying, Roman Catholic organization is within a measurable distance of its tragic end. We do not so much judge this by events as we read it in the never-failing Word of Prophecy. And it seems that she is to meet her end by such a combination of her own people as Mussolini is now putting together.

There are now two rulers living in the same city: rival rulers on two of the seven hills of the city of Rome, the city of history and of prophecy. Is this the "two horns like a lamb"?

However, for the time being the dual policy of the two will march together, as two horns march together on one body.

Behind this combination of forces there is the question, never for a moment in abeyance in the underlying thought of the Powers of the world, "What shall we do with the British Empire?" Plans have been formed and great works undertaken. Organizations of people are in existence, and they are working to what seems to them a certain end in this direction. The ultimate end is always the subjugation of Britain—spiritually, mentally, physically. But it is solemnly written, "The Lord shall have them in derision. Then shall He speak unto them in His wrath, and vex them in His sore displeasure."

Another great Power will shortly emerge; and all unwittingly, and without intent, the power wielded by Mussolini, and supported by the Papacy, will find itself in a life and death struggle therewith—Great Britain wonderingly looking on.

The days are speeding to the great tragic end of the present age, and to the glorious new birth of the New Age which is coming.

Of the nature of the tremendous decade we are living through the Low Passage of the Pyramid gave us abundant warning. Its index-finger pointed to the time. Contemporary history is revealing the sequence of events from day to day. Men could count the units of time involved; and did so. Only the event can show what the time shall bring forth—1928–1936; that is the time. Step by step as the months go by, the event will be made manifest to all.

BIBLICAL METALLURGY.—II.

By Andrew B. Buchanan.

Furnaces.

In modern metallurgy there are many types of furnaces. Of the many, we have selected four for consideration. The writer has been considerably pressed for time in the preparation of these articles, and his thanks are due to his colleague, Mr. H. A. Speirs, for kind assistance given in preparing the diagrams. The diagrams are not technically accurate and have been purposely prepared so. The pictorial, rather than the purely technical, form has been adopted. This is necessary in dealing with the non-technical readers, so that they may be compelled to grasp the essential features presented. The descriptive text is, however, strictly accurate.

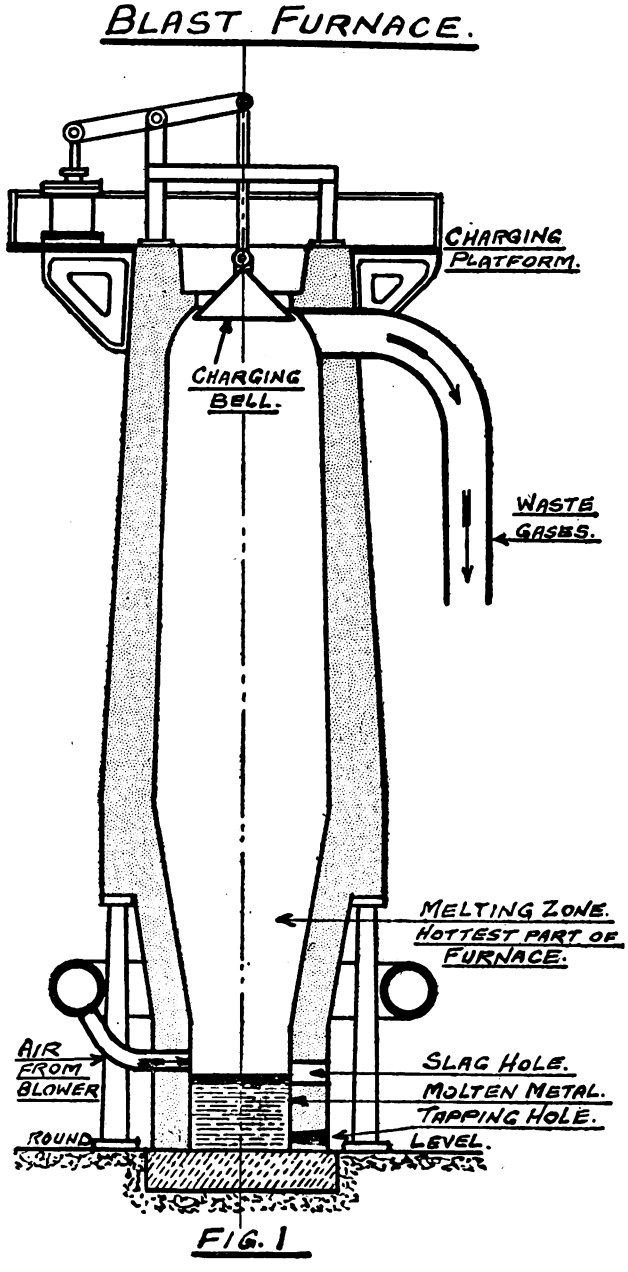

FIG. 1

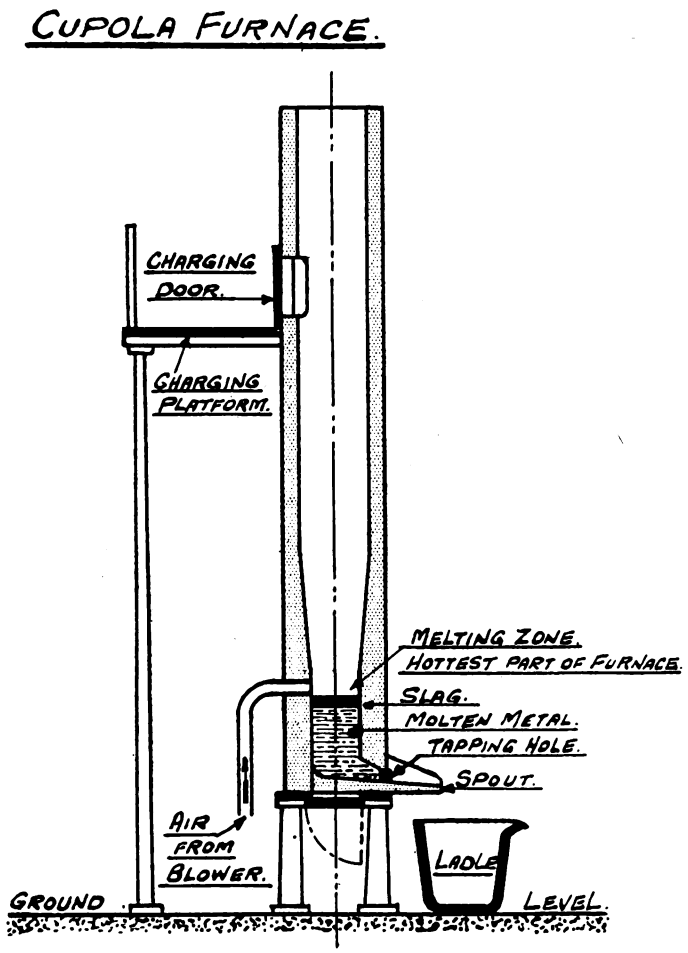
Digitized by Google



We would specially direct attention to the following special features in the diagrams and text :—

(See Fig. 1, page 243).

1. The position of the charging platform.
2. The hottest area.
3. The position of the slag.
4. The position of the tapping hole.
5. The use of the word "tapping," the significance of which will be dealt with later.
6. The pipe which admits air into the furnace.

Blast Furnace.

Fig. 1 shows the interior of a modern blast furnace. It should be noted that the primary purpose of such a furnace is to produce Iron out of the Ore.

SECTION OF CUPOLA.

FIG. 2.

The interior stonework is encased in an outer shell of steel.

At the bottom is the hearth which receives the molten metal as it descends from the upper layers. Above the molten iron is the slag (impurities of the ore) and above the slag the charge, consisting of alternate layers of coke or coal, ore and limestone. This is continued to within about 10 ft. of the charging bell, at the right of which is a pipe for the escape of the waste gases. Above the charging bell is the charging platform. At the extreme bottom is the tapping hole for withdrawing the molten metal, and at the slag level is an open hole for running off the slag. Near the slag hole is the pipe where air is blown into the furnace, and above this pipe the melting zone, or hottest part of the furnace.

The older type of furnace had no outer casing and was open at the top, from which large volumes of flame could be seen for miles around.

These furnaces vary in height from about 60 ft. in Scotland to 100 ft. in England, and produce from hot blast (heated air) about 350 tons to about 1,000 tons of pig-iron per week respectively. From cold blast the output is about 50 tons per week. The hearths, when full, may hold about 25 tons of molten metal, and are then tapped. The products of the blast furnace are various grades of pig-iron. The metal drawn from such a furnace is not always homogeneous, even when running for a particular grade. When homogeneous metal is required the contents of several furnaces may be run into a metal mixer which may hold 200 to about 600 tons of molten metal.

When working, the inside of a blast furnace is never seen.

Cupola Furnace.

Fig. 2 shows the interior of a modern cupola furnace which is used in an iron foundry. It looks like a miniature blast furnace, but its purpose is entirely different. The cupola is used for melting the pig-iron which comes from the blast furnace. It will be seen that the furnace structure rests upon pillars, at the top of which is a hinged door, which drops and allows the furnace to be cleaned out when the casting is over for the day. Then comes the molten metal, above which is the slag. Above the slag, right up to the charging platform, there are alternate layers of coke, pig-iron, scrap and limestone, and above the charging platform the charging door. Issuing from the door and the open top is the blue flame, which must be familiar to many readers.

At the bottom of the molten metal is the tapping hole which allows the metal to run into the ladle, and above the slag the opening for the pipe which admits the blown air.

Such furnaces vary considerably in size, and may be about 18 to 20 ft. above the ground to the charging platform. A good furnace should melt about 12 to 15 tons of iron per hour. Like the blast furnace, the interior working of a cupola is never seen, and the metal is not always homogeneous.

(See Figs. 3 and 4 opposite).

Siemens Regenerative Furnace.

Figs. 3 and 4 show interior views of a modern Siemens regenerative furnace which is used for the manufacture of steel.

Fig. 3 shows what the inside of the furnace would be like if we stood underneath the charging platform and imagined the whole front of the furnace cut away. Similarly, if we imagined the whole of the left-hand side of the furnace cut away, then Fig. 4 would show its interior appearance, with the charging platform in front and the tapping hole and ladle at the back.

Starting from the left of Fig. 3 it will be seen that air and gas pass, as shown by arrow heads, into the furnace where ignition takes place.

Upon the hearth lies the charge, consisting of pig-iron, scrap and ore, which is melted by the fierce heat of the gas as it passes on its way to the chimney, through the air and gas chambers on the right, which are heated to a very high temperature during the process.

—as shown by arrow heads—along the roof to the chimney, and on its way is deflected on to the charge which is thereby melted.

Air is admitted either by suction from the chimney (natural draught) or by being blown in (forced draught).

Such furnaces are capable of melting 12 to 25 tons of metal at one time.

The metal can be inspected during the process of working,

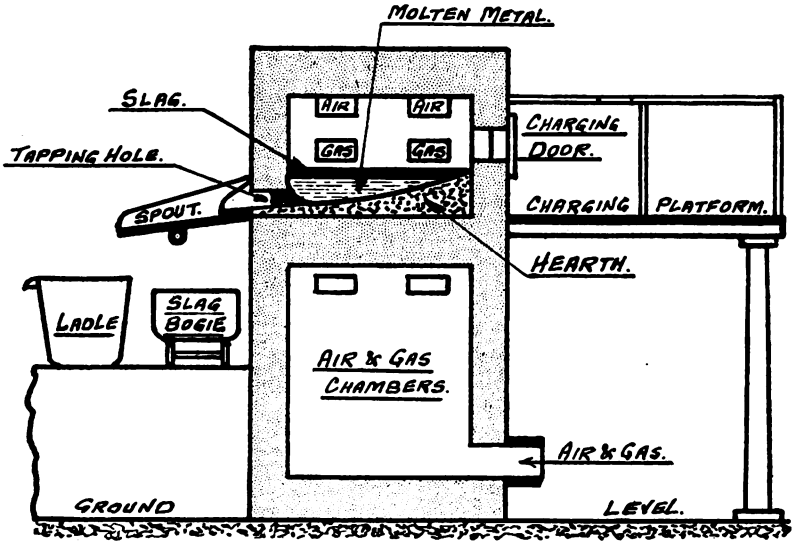

Fig. 4.

Suitable valves (not shown) are operated at the end of every hour, and the whole process described above is reversed.

Fig. 4 shows the charging platform, which is considerably above the floor level, and also the charging door. At the left hand are seen the tapping hole, ladle, spout and slag bogie. Both 3 and 4 show the molten metal and the slag.

In tapping the furnace, the molten metal runs by way of the spout into the ladle, but as soon as the slag comes, this is diverted into the slag bogie by tipping the spout.

On no account must the slag pass into the ladle, or the whole charge will require to be re-melted.

Particular attention is directed to this statement, for God's dealing with Israel is given in this technical form.

Such furnaces, capable of melting 80 tons of metal at one time, have dimensions at the hearth of over 30 ft. in length, 12 ft. in breadth and 6 ft. in height at the centre.

The metal may be inspected during the process of working, the whole charge can be made homogeneous and the temperature generally is well under control.

Fig. 5 shows the interior of a reverberatory or air furnace which is used for melting iron or brass.

The fire door, charging door and tapping hole are at the front of the furnace, and the fire-bars, slag and molten metal are clearly seen. The gas from the fuel on the fire-bars passes homogeneous metal is obtained and the temperature is under control.

Crucibles.

The crucible, as being capable of melting only small quantities of metal at one time, falls outside the scope of these articles This is not to say that crucibles were unknown in Biblical times.

In our next article we shall consider what the Scriptures have to say upon the subject.

THE NATIVITY DATE.

By F. S. Dobbs.

Dr. Gornold, in his very interesting article under the above title in The National Message and Banner of February 16th, 1929, cites "the evidences afforded by the writings of Josephus on the one hand and those of the Apostles on the other, in the hopes of laying to rest once and for all the uncertainties that disturb students of Bible chronology as to this fundamental datum of historical Christianity." Some of the uncertainties with regard to the chronology of Our Lord's life are due to the confused interpretation of a partly misunderstood and a partly mistaken Josephus, resulting in an error in the generally accepted dates assigned to events after 45 B.C., the year in which the Roman calendar as we know it came into use. May I attempt to substantiate this perhaps somewhat daring assertion? The regular Consular List for the nominal year 46 B.C. (for it actually covered the twelve months between 1st Oct., 47 B.C. and 1st Oct., 46 B.C.) was :—

"C. Julius C.F.C.N. Cæsar, IV Consul without a colleague."

When his term of office expired on 1st Oct., 46 B.C., it was necessary to elect another set of Consuls to serve for the following ninety days, so as to complete that year of "confusion," and enable their successors to begin the new Julian year in due Consular order on 1st Jan., 45 B.C. This special Consular List covering the last three months of 46 B.C. was :—

"Q. Fabius Q.F.Q.N. Maximus (replaced on 31st Dec. for one day owing to the sudden death of the former on the last day of the year) and C. Trebonius C.F."

By means of this special Consulate, the Fastes Consulares were also set right with the legal Consular calendar. In most discussions on the Consular Lists (see, for instance, that of La Rousse in his great Encyclopædia Universel) the above regular Consular List covering the period between 1st Oct., 47 B.C. and 1st Oct., 46 B.C. is assigned to 46 B.C., and the following special List for the remaining ninety days of that year is assigned to 45 B.C. By this error the Consular Lists for 45 B.C. and all the subsequent years are pushed one year too far down the B.C. and A.D. lines to the perpetuation of endless confusion. As, for example, the death of Julius Cæsar is placed in 44 B.C. instead of 45 B.C., and that of Augustus Cæsar in 14 A.D. instead of 13 A.D. Again, the Crucifixion is assigned to 30 A.D. instead of 29 A.D., when it actually occurred; and by working backwards, the date of the "Era of the Olympiads" is assumed to be 776 B.C. instead of 777 B.C., in which year were really celebrated the first Olympic Games. Therefore the 184th Olympiad, referred to by Dr. Gornold as mentioned by Josephus in connection with the death of Herod, would fall in 41 B.C. instead of 40 B.C., and it was in 41 B.C. that Calvinus and Pollio were Consuls, for the Consular List of that year was :—

"Cn. Domitius M.F.M.N. Calvinus II (abdicated) replaced by Cornelius L. F. Balbas; and C. Asinius Cn. F. Herii N. Pollio."

During this Consulate Herod and Phasael were elevated to the rank of Tetrarchs of all Judea, which probably accounts for the mistake of Josephus. It was late in 715 A.U.C., 39 B.C., that Herod was solemnly inaugurated King of Judea by Octavianus and Anthony in Rome, and the 37 years spoken of by Josephus and mentioned by Dr. Gornold extended from this latter event (715 A.U.C. + 37 = 752 A.U.C., the year Herod died, that is 3998 A.M. and 2 B.C.). Again, Dr. Gornold quotes Josephus as stating "that Herod reigned 34 years after the death of Antipater," which, he adds, according to Dr. Smith took place in 37 B.C. Of course he means Antigonus who at Herod's instigation was executed by Anthony near the Feast of Dedication in November, 36 B.C., whereas Antipater was assassinated and secretly buried a few days before Herod's death by his order. In mentioning these apparent inaccuracies in the writings of Josephus, it is not suggested that he himself was necessarily responsible for them. It is quite possible that they originated in the transcriptions of some of those through whose hands the original copies of Josephus came down to us, who may have glossed the matter to suit their own ideas of chronology! Be that as it may, Josephus is no more infallible than is any other historian. He was right only in what will bear verification at the bar of General Harmony, he blundered in what will not.

Dr. Gornold claims that the eclipse mentioned by Josephus as "having occurred on the night preceding one of the Fasts," and shortly before the death of Herod, was that of 13th March, 3 B.C., as a proof that he died before the Passover of that year. The likelihood of such being the case is precluded by the fact that it would not have allowed time for all the recorded events to have happened. There are two other eclipses either of which may have been the one referred to by Josephus: on 17th July, 2 B.C., and on 20th January, 1 B.C. Dr. Gornold puts the former "out of court" as not having been, he asserts, visible at Jerusalem, but Wm. Page—an astronomer of no mean repute—when considering this eclipse in "New Light from Old Eclipses" (pp. 73–91) used the following words: "Early in the morning the moon went down still eclipsed (middle of eclipse 5h. 53m. 51s. true civil time) and the incident not only agrees in every particular with the record of Josephus, but gives ample time for all the occurrences between it and the death of Herod, and between the death of Herod and the succeeding Passover."

The difficulties surrounding the assignment of the death of Herod to a period just after the eclipse of 13th March, 3 B.C., as claimed by Dr. Gornold, led even so high an authority as Scaliger to abandon it and select instead that of 20th Jan., 1 B.C. For the following reasons, however, the latter choice seems to have been ill advised: Ussher cites a Jewish tract "Megileth Thanith" or "The Book of Fasting," in support of his claim that the death of Herod occurred in November. In it under the month Casleu the following words are found: "The 7th—a Fast Day—because on it Hurudes an enemy of the wise died." Again, on the twenty-ninth page of "De Sola and Lyons Standard Jewish Calendar" for the fifty-year period 1853–1903 is the following record under the same month, Casleu, and opposite its 7th day: "Festival on account of Herod the Great." The 7th Casleu here mentioned was the 3rd of November, 2 B.C., and is near enough to be covered by the somewhat vague expression "the Passover was approaching." Therefore, taking everything into consideration, notwithstanding Dr. Gornold's veto, I am quite satisfied to accept the eclipse of 17th July, 2 B.C., as that referred to by Josephus when the Fast occurring on the following night would be the eve of the Feast of Tabernacles, one of the three festivals that fall in the middle of the lunar month, a necessary condition as Dr. Gornold points out.

To fit in with his claim that Herod died before the Passover of 3 B.C., Dr. Gornold is forced to make the arrival of the Magi synchronize with the birth of Christ, the latter being the only occasion previous to that Feast that the Holy Family was in Bethlehem. By noting the following points, it will be easily seen that this view does not agree with the narrative. Christ was born in a stable, whereas the Magi paid Him their homage in "a house" (Matt. ii, 11). Evidently these were different occasions. Again, it is surely not unreasonable to assume that the first appearance of "The Star in the East" was what the Magi with their extraordinary astrological knowledge understood it to be, an indication that the Messiah was already born. They at once recognized it and began their preparations for that long anticipated, never to be repeated mission; we can well imagine they were lengthy. The long and tedious caravan journey from their far distant home, possibly in Persia, must have occupied many months, so that they did not arrive at Jerusalem till the Passover season of 2 B.C., when as we read they startled Herod and all the city with him by their question, "Where is He that is born King of the Jews?" Herod having first enquired from the chief priests and scribes where the Christ was to be born "privily called the wise men and carefully learned from them what time the Star appeared" (Matt. ii, 7, R.V.), by which he knew that the Child was already some fifteen months old. Therefore, being determined to take no risks, when the Magi failed to return, he "sent and slew all the male children in Bethlehem, as well as all that were in the neighbourhood, from two years old and under, so as to include the date he had ascertained from the Magi" (Matt. ii, 16, F.F.). Had the Babe been only just born, as Dr. Gornold implies, there was absolutely no object in fixing this age limit of two years.

Dr. Gornold cites what he calls "the 1st Nisan 3995 A.M. incident" as a proof that Christ was born in September, 4 B.C., 3996 A.M., but he gives no reason for not using the alternative method he himself suggests, namely, "employing the Civil year as a basis of the calculation, with the weekly rotation of the Priestly orders."

The late Professor Totten, in his consideration of this Gabriel and Zacharias incident, asserts that the actual priestly rotation of 24 weeks, for the 8th of which it was Zacharias' turn to officiate, began with the civil New Year's day. This fact, which is in accord with the alternative method that Dr. Gornold suggests, "was arrived at as the result of many concentrating calculations, no more to be enumerated than are those that go towards establishing the data necessary for an almanack." He shows that the Sabbath occurring during the said 8th course fell on 24th Bul (2nd civil month). That the incident took place on the Sabbath is shown in Luke i, 10. The ministry of Zacharias concluded on 26th Bul (Oct. 22nd) and he departed to his own home. We may assume that Elisabeth conceived two days later, and "hid herself five months." After which Gabriel appeared unto Mary with his startling announcement, followed immediately by Mary's conception at the beginning of "the sixth month with her," etc. (Luke i, 36). In the natural course of events John would have been born about the end of July, 4 B.C., and Jesus five months later. John became eligible to begin his ministry on his 30th birthday, about the end of July, 27 A.D., but did not actually do so till the 19th August following, the day on which, as Dr. Gornold shows, the 15th year of Tiberius began. Christ was also eligible for the same duty on Dec. 25th, 27 A.D., but could not be anointed, as a preliminary to commencing His ministry, till the 8th Jan., 28 A.D., because Gabriel had announced that the Anointed One would only live three score and two weeks from the day of His anointing. And He was accordingly "cut off" on Nisan 14th, 17th March, 29 A.D., 62 weeks or 434 days later.

Dr. Gornold asserts that three Passovers are mentioned in John's Gospel—the first in 28 A.D. (ii, 13), the second in 29 A.D. (vi, 4), and the third in 30 A.D. (xiii, 1), at which Christ suffered. We know His ministry began in the 15th year of Tiberius, and there is a certain work extant, "The Acts of Pilate," in which it is recorded that the Crucifixion took place in the 16th year of Tiberius, that is 29 A.D. There is no reason to doubt this statement. It is simply history. If Dr. Gornold or any other of your readers will take his Bible and sit down quietly, with an open mind, to study the question, he will find that the Passover spoken of (John vi, 4) was "at hand" when the miracle of feeding the 5,000 was performed. Let him then read the accounts given of this miracle by Matthew, Mark and Luke, with the chapters following in each case, and he will find that shortly after the miracle Jesus and His disciples began their last itinerary which culminated in the triumphal entry on 10th Nisan, 29 A.D. The Passovers spoken of in John vi, 4 and xiii, 1 are therefore one and the same. The fact is self-evident. There are certain difficulties, of course, or the almost universally accepted misunderstanding would not have arisen. If anybody among your readers would wish for a fuller demonstration of the fact, I shall be very pleased to supply it at 2½d., post free.

I am not versed in "Cosmic Symbolism," to the evidence of which Dr. Gornold appeals in support of his views, but I have no doubt that both it and astronomical facts rightly understood must agree in every detail with the General Harmony that exists under the Supreme Control of the Almighty, and must securely establish the "Calendarics of the Bible" in accordance with historical events correctly recorded, and the infallible evidence derived from the Scriptures themselves.

DANIEL THE MAGNIFICENT.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED AT HEADQUARTERS ON THURSDAY EVENING, MARCH 14TH.

By the Rev. Joseph Gay, A.T.S.

We must all be reading, I feel sure, the very helpful, illuminative articles which are appearing in The National Message week by week from the pen of our so excellent friend, the Rev. Wm. Pascoe Goard, on the Book of Daniel.

I thought it might not be amiss if I were to endeavour this evening to visualize the character of Daniel, so that the man as well as his message may be before our eyes.

I have styled him "Daniel the Magnificent," for there is such a spaciousness in this man Daniel which justifies the term MAGNIFICENT. His mind is deep and broad, a conjunction seldom seen in these modern days. His mind is profound beyond all plumbing. It is only a man of similar mentality who can get right into Daniel's mind. It is only the man with the heart and soul of a Daniel who can ever hope to understand this man.

Digitized by Google

You and I may hope, by much exercising of the will, to know a little about this man Daniel, but more than the half will never be told as far as we are concerned.

The meaning of his name will set us thinking in the right direction. Daniel :—" God-is-my-Judge." Think of that. This man Daniel, by the meaning of his name, sets us thinking about God. But it is not in the mere meaning of his name that Daniel sets you thinking about God. Eastern names always approximated to the characters they designated. We have lost the meaning of names because there is no earthly meaning in the persons who bear them. Not so the names, and the persons bearing the names, in ancient times, especially in the Bible. The first question I ask in studying Biblical biography is : What does that name mean ? The answer goes a very long way towards an understanding of the character which bears the name. I will set down a few for your consideration along this line.

Abram :—" High father," afterwards Abraham :—" the father of a multitude."

Isaac :—" Laughter " or " jest," a very good joke. The incredulity of Sarai gives the name to her son and stamps him the created of the Lord.

Jacob :—" He supplants," or " a heel holder."

Israel :—" God fights," " contender," " soldier of God." שָׂרָה—to fight. אֵל—God.

Jochebed :—" God my glory."

Moses :—" Drawn out."

Joshua :—" Jehovah is salvation."

Daniel :—" God-is-my-Judge."

All these names turn one's thoughts God-ward.

According to the Book which bears his name he was a youth of noble descent and high physical and intellectual endowments, carried by Nebuchadnezzar, in the third year of Jehoiakim, from Jerusalem to Babylon, and with other Jewish youths, especially three companions, Hananiah, Mishael and Azariah, assigned for education at the king's college.

Hananiah :—" Jehovah is gracious."
Mishael :—" Who is like God."
Azariah :—" Jehovah helps."
Daniel :—" God-my-Judge."

Always God. God is in all their thoughts, and cannot be absent from ours while we dwell in their company.

What a list of names to be sure, and all turn our thinking towards God.

Now there are three things specially prominent in Daniel. (a) Resolve. (b) Proficiency. (c) Clarity.

Resolve.

The incident recorded in the first chapter is set down in order that we may early come to appreciate a trait in the character of this man Daniel which we may all covet and ought certainly to make every effort to emulate. " Daniel purposed in his own heart that he would not." Put a full stop there for a moment. This is a quality of all truly great and godly minds. To come to a determination—that is the quality of true greatness. Daniel teaches you and me that resolve is a matter of the heart. Yes ! of the willing heart. The man who resolves upon compulsion, even though it be the compulsion of the heart, is not resolving on the highest level. " God-is-my-Judge," then the purpose of the heart must be as high as Heaven itself where God is.

" He would not defile himself with the king's meat, nor the wine which he drank." What was wrong with the king's meat and the king's wine ? Was it a case of meats offered to idols ? Or was it that he refused to compromise himself with the feasting and riotous living offered by the king and indulged in by the Chaldean youths ? Or was it, without any regard to anyone else, a wise and noble self-control and self-denial at the king's table by one who had set himself to the serious study of the Chaldean schools ; their literature, their true science and their pseudo-science, their architecture, their music, their political and military methods, their religion and the sacred arts connected with their religion, that in the after years he might serve his God, his Judge, all the better in the land of his enforced exile ? Whatever was his real motive, " he purposed in his heart that he would not," and he did not.

Refusing to compromise himself at the beginning, we find him all through his subsequent life, whether dealing with his own people Israel, or the Chaldean ; with the king and his court, or with the common people, standing uncompromised, and the universal testimony was well voiced by his deadliest enemies when they said :—" We shall find no occasion against this Daniel except we find it against him concerning his God." When your enemy praises you it is indeed praise ; when he pays a tribute to your steadfastness then you may take it that your determination is as the strength of the eternal rocks, as enduring as the everlasting hills.

Proficiency.

The proficiency of Daniel is seen in his penitential and intercessory prayer. Daniel knew how to pray. The man who knows how to pray knows how to live. Prayer is the food of all true life. As Dr. White so truly observes :—" There is no royal road ; there is no short or easy road to proficiency in prayer. It is like all the other arts that you have ever mastered ; it must be early begun and assiduously practised, else you will be but a bungler at it all your days." But Daniel's proficiency is not a routine, though he prayed thrice a day with his windows opened towards Jerusalem. Daniel had special and extraordinary, original and unparalleled, seasons of prayer. There were times when he could do nothing else day or night but pray. His proficiency in everything else, his governmental proficiency, the excellence of his dream interpretations, all rested on that one foundation which he laid deep in " God-my-Judge " through all-prevailing prayer.

The Book of Daniel can only be understood by the man who is proficient in prayer. What did Daniel do when Nebuchadnezzar issued the decree for the slaughter of the wise men of Babylon ? Having secured a stay of execution he called a prayer meeting of his three Hebrew companions and himself. Ever since I noted that Daniel called a selected prayer meeting I have always had my doubts about the public prayer meeting. Can he pray ? That is the question. If he can, then invite him to the prayer meeting.

We have made much, not too much, of Daniel's interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar's dream. We have gloried in its truth. We have pointed back over the centuries, and, with a confidence born of a strong conviction, we have proclaimed Israel-Britain to be the Stone Kingdom which the God of Heaven would set up in the days of those kings. It may be we have lost sight of the tremendously important fact that the interpretation of that wonderful dream came from "God-my-Judge," as an answer to the efficient prayers offered on that never-to-be-forgotten prayer meeting. (Dan. ii, 17–19.)

Digitized by Google

If Daniel received his interpretation from God-my-Judge in answer to efficient, all-prevailing prayer, then we can expect to receive our interpretations of this great Book of Daniel in no other way.

Proficiency here is all-important. No intellectual proficiency, and no scholastic proficiency, will make up to us for the lack of prayer proficiency. In saying that, I do not belittle either the intellect or scholarship.

Now do we understand what prayer really is? On one occasion the disciples asked Our Lord to teach them to pray. With all His willingness, and with all His ability, Our Lord cannot teach us to pray offhand. He can show us how by permitting us to see and hear Him pray. Are we ready for that? When James and John, the sons of thunder, asked to sit the one on His right hand and the other on His left hand in His kingdom, Christ made answer, "Are ye able to drink of the cup that I drink of, and be baptized with the baptism with which I am baptized?" It is even so here. If we would be proficient prayer-men, by seeing and hearing Christ pray, then we must be prepared for soul travail such as we have never before experienced. Gethsemane. Ah! that is the place where Our Lord permits us to see and hear Him pray. "He went a little farther, and fell on His face, and prayed." (Matt. xxvi, 39.)

"And being in an agony He prayed more earnestly; and His sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground." (Luke xxii, 44.) Now that is prayer, all-prevailing prayer, which God-my-Judge must answer and that speedily. Daniel is a true type of Christ in this matter. "In those days I, Daniel, was mourning three full weeks. I ate no pleasant bread, neither came flesh nor wine in my mouth, neither did I anoint myself at all, till three whole weeks were fulfilled." (Dan. x, 2, 3.)

That is the way to pray. Our prayers have become so futile, because this atmosphere of intense proficiency has not wrapt us round about, that a philosophy has arisen, finding expression where we least expected to find it, and where it never ought to have been found, in the Christian pulpit; that prayer is a pious exercise which may do the individual soul good but which can never influence God, and it is unreasonable to ever think it could.

Such prayers as Daniel's and all those who have followed in his train right down to Our Lord and on from Him through the Christian centuries, God is in honour bound to answer. Never, surely, was there a man, until the coming of the Son of man, so greatly honoured for his proficiency in prayer as this Daniel. "And he said unto me, O Daniel, a man greatly beloved, understand the words that I speak unto thee, and stand upright: for unto thee am I now sent. And when he had spoken this word unto me, I stood trembling. Then said he unto me, Fear not, Daniel: for from the first day that thou didst set thine heart to understand, and to chasten thyself before thy God, thy words were heard, and I am come for thy words." (Dan. x, 11, 12.)

Let us read Daniel's great prayer recorded in the ninth chapter; let us read it over and over again until the whole subject matter of it, and all the spirit and passion that is in it, sinks deep into our souls, and finds permanent abiding in our hearts.

"Now therefore, O our God, hear the prayer of Thy servant, and his supplications, and cause Thy face to shine upon Thy sanctuary that is desolate, for the Lord's sake. O my God, incline Thine ear, and hear; open Thine eyes, and behold our desolations, and the city which is called by Thy name: for we do not present our supplications before Thee for our righteousnesses, but for Thy great mercies. O Lord, hear; O Lord, forgive; O Lord, hearken and do; defer not, for Thine own sake, O my God: for Thy city and Thy people are called by Thy name. And whiles I was speaking, and praying, and confessing my sin and the sin of my people Israel, and presenting my supplication before the Lord my God for the holy mountain of my God; Yea, whiles I was speaking in prayer, even the man Gabriel, whom I had seen in the vision at the beginning, being caused to fly swiftly, touched me about the time of the evening oblation." (Dan. ix, 17–21.)

Note this that God answers Daniel's prayer, as He answers all true prayers, not according to our limited thought, but according to His own infinite thought. Daniel's prayer is for the restoration of Jerusalem, "for the holy mount of my God," for the return of the exiles of the southern kingdom of Judah to the land of their fathers. God's answer sweeps through the ages and comes down to our own day and generation, enfolding in its infinite embrace the whole House of Israel, lifting the veil of destiny and unfolding before the astonished eyes of all devout saints the purposes which He has purposed from before the foundation of the world. We pray in terms of the finite; God answers in terms of the infinite. Thus are His revelations vouchsafed unto the sons of men.

Clarity.

And so Daniel sees clearly without a veil between. Every detail of his vision is told with a clearness which admits of no mistake. If we have confused the issues it is because we have not come to the interpretation of this wonderful Book with the true spirit of prayer out of which the visions sprang in the first instance. A true perspective is what we need to-day; the ability to see the hand of the Lord God Almighty moving, in the fulfilment of His prophetic Word, among the nations that are upon the earth. This we can receive in greater measure than any previous age by the mercies of Jesus Christ Our Lord. Christ not only gives us vision but He gives us correct vision. He never leaves us with partial sight. "I see men as trees walking," said the blind man whose eyes He had anointed. "After that He put His hands again upon his eyes, and made him look up: and he was restored, and saw every man clearly." (Mark viii, 22–26.)

If we are to understand Daniel then, and all that Daniel wrote, we must dwell deep in the mysteries of God in penitential and intercessory prayer.

THE TWO STAVES—BEAUTY AND BANDS.

By JOHN H. TENCH.

A QUESTION was asked at a meeting in Durham County in regard to the covenant mentioned by the prophet Zechariah, chap. xi, v. 10: "I took My staff, even Beauty, and cut it asunder that I might break My covenant which I had made with all the people." Some of the audience evidently thought that this was the covenant God had made with Abraham, but a little consideration shows that was an impossibility, for Abraham's covenant was unconditional and never could be broken, whereas the covenant mentioned in verse 10 God had made with "all the people."

Now this covenant was made at Mount Sinai, for we read in Exodus xxiv, 6–7: "And Moses took half of the blood, and put it in basons; and half of the blood he sprinkled on the altar. And he took the book of the covenant and read in the audience of the people; and they said, All that the Lord hath said will we do and be obedient. And Moses took the blood and sprinkled it on the people, and said, Behold the blood of the covenant which the Lord hath made with you concerning all these words."

Therefore we are taught that this covenant was a type of the blood of Jesus and, after His coming to die for the redemption of His people Israel and for the salvation of the world, was to be broken or discontinued as no longer necessary.

Paul, when writing to the Hebrews, says in chapter ix: "When these things were thus ordained, the priests went always into the first tabernacle, accomplishing the service of God. But into the second went the high priest alone once every year, not without blood, which he offered for himself, and for the errors of the people: The Holy Ghost this signifying, that the way into the holiest of all was not yet made manifest, while as the first tabernacle was yet standing: Which was a figure for the time then present, in which were offered both gifts and sacrifices, that could not make him that did the service perfect, as pertaining to the conscience; Which stood only in meats and drinks, and divers washings, and carnal ordinances, imposed on them until the time of reformation [rectification, F.F.]. But Christ being come an high priest of good things to come, by a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, that is to say, not of this building; neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by His own blood He entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us. For if the blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh: how much more shall the blood of Christ, Who through the eternal Spirit offered Himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God? And for this cause He is the mediator of the new testament, that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament, they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance."

Paul goes on to say, "Almost all things are by the law purged with blood; and without shedding of blood is no remission. It was therefore necessary that the patterns of things in the heavens should be purified with these; but the heavenly things themselves with better sacrifices than these. For Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands, which are the figures of the true; but into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us; nor yet that He should offer Himself often, as the high priest entereth into the holy place every year with blood of others; for then must He often have suffered since the foundation of the world: but now once in the end of the world hath He appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself. And as it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment: So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for Him shall He appear the second time without sin unto salvation."

Paul then goes on to say: "It is not possible that the blood of bulls and of goats should take away sins. Wherefore when He cometh into the world, He saith, Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not, but a body hast Thou prepared Me: in burnt offerings and sacrifices for sin Thou hast had no pleasure. Then said I, Lo, I come (in the volume of the book it is written of Me,) to do Thy will, O God. Above when He said, Sacrifice and offering and burnt offerings and offering for sin Thou wouldest not, neither hadst pleasure therein; which are offered by the law: Then said He, Lo, I come to do Thy will, O God. He taketh away the first (covenant), that He may establish the second (covenant)."

The Scripture therefore teaches us that the Staff, Beauty, is the Lord Himself. Who was cut asunder that the blood covenant made at Mount Sinai, made with all the people, should be broken, discontinued, a new and a better covenant having been made. The Saviour said at the Last Supper when He took the cup and gave thanks and gave it to them, "Drink ye all of it, for this is My blood of the new covenant, which is shed for many for the remission of sins." How very remarkable that those who love Our dear Lord, and are about to drink of that cup in obedience to His command, first of all listen to the Ten Commandments recited by the minister and then offer this prayer, "Lord, have mercy upon us, and write all these Thy laws in our hearts, we beseech Thee."

How wonderfully this fulfils the bringing in of the New Covenant as foretold by Jeremiah and confirmed by Paul in the Epistle to the Hebrews. "This shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel:—After those days, saith the Lord, I will put My law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be My people."

I have not the slightest doubt that the Staff, Beauty, is the Lord Himself, for Isaiah when writing to the man that "walketh righteously and speaketh uprightly, that despiseth the gain of oppressions, that shaketh his hands from bribery, that stoppeth his ears from hearing of blood, and shutteth his eyes from seeing evil; he shall dwell on high, his place of defence shall be the munitions of rocks, bread shall be given him, his waters shall be sure. Thine eyes shall see the king in His beauty."

The Psalmist also writes in the twenty-seventh chapter, "One thing have I desired of the Lord, that will I seek after, that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life to behold the beauty of the Lord and to enquire in His temple."

Zechariah goes on to tell us "that the covenant made with all the people was broken in that day." Which day was Good Friday, when Our Lord died to redeem His people.

Digitized by Google

"See the destined day arise!
See a willing sacrifice,
Jesus to redeem our loss,
Hangs upon the shameful Cross!

Jesu, who but Thou had borne,
Lifted on that Tree of scorn,
Every pang and bitter throe,
Finishing Thy life of woe?

Who but Thou had dared to drain,
Steeped in gall, the cup of pain,
And with tender body bear
Thorns, and nails, and piercing spear?

Thence the cleansing Water flow'd,
Mingled from Thy side with Blood,
Sign to all attesting eyes
Of the finished Sacrifice.

Holy Jesu, grant us grace
In that Sacrifice to place
All our trust for life renew'd,
Pardon'd sin and promised good."

When the Staff, Beauty, was cut asunder "and it was broken in that day so the poor of the flock that waited upon Me knew that it was the word of the Lord," men like aged Simeon, to whom it had been revealed by the Holy Ghost that he should not see death before he had seen the Lord's Christ, "Then took he Him up in his arms, and blessed God and said, Lord, now lettest Thou Thy servant depart in peace according to Thy word. For mine eyes have seen Thy salvation, which Thou hast prepared before the face of all people. A light to lighten the Gentiles and the glory of Thy people Israel." He furthermore said unto Mary His mother, "Behold, this child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel; and for a sign which shall be spoken against. Yea, a sword shall pierce through thy own soul also, that the thoughts of many hearts may be revealed.

"And there was one, Anna, a prophetess, the daughter of Phanuel, of the tribe of Aser, and she was a widow of about fourscore and four years which departed not from the temple, but served God with fastings and prayers night and day. And she coming in that instant, gave thanks likewise unto the Lord, and spake of Him to all them that looked for redemption in Jerusalem."

Men like Zacharias, the father of John the Baptist, who when filled with the Holy Ghost prophesied, saying, "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, for He hath visited and redeemed His people, and hath raised up a horn of salvation for us in the house of His servant David."

Women like the blessed Virgin Mary, who said, "He hath holpen His servant Israel in remembrance of His mercy, as He spake to our fathers, to Abraham, and to his seed for ever."

The Staff, Bands.

Zechariah foretold that the Staff, Beauty, Our Lord Jesus, was to be sold or betrayed for a price, and we know that the price was for thirty pieces of silver. All the things foretold of Jesus, our King, and foretold of His people, the Kingdom, must come to pass, so we read in the Gospel by Matthew:—"Then one of the twelve, called Judas Iscariot, went unto the chief priests, and said unto them, What will ye give me and I will deliver Him unto you. And they covenanted with him for thirty pieces of silver." The same Evangelist tells us later on, "Then Judas, which had betrayed Him, when he saw that He was condemned, repented himself, and brought again the thirty pieces of silver to the chief priests and elders, saying, I have sinned in that I have betrayed the innocent blood. And they said, What is that to us? see thou to that. And he cast down the pieces of silver in the temple and departed, and went and hanged himself." In fulfilment of Zechariah's prophecy Matthew tells us:—"The chief priests took the silver pieces, and said, It is not lawful for us to put them into the treasury, because it is the price of blood, and they took counsel and bought with them the potter's field to bury strangers in. Wherefore that field was called The field of blood, unto this day."

This wicked action of Judas, and the chief priests and elders, was the cause why the other Staff, Bands, was cut asunder, for God Almighty states, "That I might break the brotherhood between Judah and Israel."

The division of Israel and Judah took place in the days of Rehoboam, who, taking the counsel of his foolish young companions, determined to tax the people more heavily than his father Solomon had done. The separation then occurred between Israel and Judah, but one of the tribes of Israel, Benjamin, was lent to Judah for a special purpose and for a certain time. The Lord had already foretold to Solomon that for the sin of idolatry He would rend the kingdom from him, "Howbeit I will not rend away all the kingdom, but will give one tribe [Benjamin] to thy son for David My servant's sake, and for Jerusalem's sake which I have chosen." (I Kings xi, 13.) The special purpose we see in verse 36 of the same chapter. "And unto his son will I give one tribe, that David My servant may have a light alway before Me in Jerusalem, the city which I have chosen Me to put My name there." Had not Benjamin thrown in their lot with Judah at the rending of the kingdom, Jerusalem, which was in Benjamin's territory (Josh. xviii, 28), would have become the capital of the Northern kingdom. Moses when foretelling the future of the tribes of Israel said of Benjamin, "The beloved of the Lord shall dwell in safety by him; and the Lord shall cover him all the day long, and he shall dwell between his shoulders" (Deut. xxxiii, 12). Therefore, when the Lord came to His own [the tribe of Judah] and they received Him not, the tribe of Benjamin did receive Him, and when He had made the Gospel lamp to shine in their hearts, they so let that light shine that others saw their good works and glorified God. The Apostles, with the exception of Judas Iscariot, were of this tribe, to whom Our Lord said, "Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." These Galileans of the tribe of Benjamin were, indeed, a little flock when compared with the whole House of Israel who formed the kingdom of Heaven. Micah says, "And thou, O tower of the flock, the stronghold of the daughter of Zion, unto thee shall it come, even the first dominion; the kingdom shall come to the daughter of Jerusalem" (iv, 8). It has already been pointed out that Jerusalem is in the territory of Benjamin, and the names, daughter of Zion, daughter of Jerusalem, belong to this tribe and not to Judah. The first dominion was to come to this little flock, who were to become the torch-bearers to proclaim to the lost sheep of the House of Israel, "The kingdom of heaven is at hand."

How long was the union, or brotherhood, between Judah and Benjamin to continue? Shortly after Our Lord's death Jerusalem was destroyed, and though thousands of the Jews perished in that fearful siege, none of His disciples were destroyed because they obeyed His command. "Then let them which are in Judæa flee to the mountains; and let them which are in the midst of it depart out" (Luke xxi, 21). In fleeing from Jerusalem they fulfilled the prophecy of Jeremiah, "O ye children of Benjamin, gather yourselves to flee out of the midst of Jerusalem, and blow the trumpet in Tekoa, and set up a sign of fire in Beth-haccerem: for evil appeareth out of the north, and great destruction" (vi,1). This tribe had now fulfilled the purpose for which it was lent to Judah, and according to Zechariah, the Staff, called Bands, was cut asunder, "I took the thirty pieces of silver, and cast them to the potter in the house of the Lord. Then I cut asunder Mine other Staff, even Bands, that I might break the brotherhood between Judah and Israel" (xi, 13, 14).

The tribe of Benjamin is no longer with Judah, but guided by the Spirit of God across Europe they came at last as Normans to the British Isles; they joined themselves with the other tribes of Israel, in the appointed place, as promised by Almighty God to David. "Moreover I will appoint a place for My people Israel, and will plant them, that they may dwell in a place of their own and move no more; neither shall the children of wickedness afflict them any more, as beforetime" (2 Sam. vii, 10).

One battle, that of Hastings, was sufficient to establish the right of Benjamin to dwell once more with Joseph, in whose mother's tent they had passed their early days.

It is stated in the Encyclopædia Britannica, Vol. ix, page 751: "There can be no doubt that the establishment of the Norman power in England was, like the establishment of the Danish power, greatly helped by the essential kindred of Normans, Danes and English." The same writer says, on p. 753: "By the end of the twelfth century the Normans might fairly pass as Englishmen, and they had largely adopted the use of the English language. The Normans in England therefore became Englishmen, because there was an English nation into which they could be absorbed."

After the blending of British, Saxons, Angles, Jutes, Scots, Danes, Normans, etc., in the island home, the appointed place, we are kept in peace and no weapon formed against us has ever prospered, as witness the efforts of Philip of Spain in 1588, Napoleon in 1805, and the Kaiser in 1914.

When will the joining of the Staff, Bands, and the uniting of the brotherhood of Judah and Israel again take place?

In His parable of the Good Shepherd Our Lord said, "Other sheep I have which are not of this flock; them also I must bring, and there shall be one flock and one shepherd."

The two flocks are becoming one, for we read in Ezekiel xxxvii: "I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah, and make them one stick, and they shall be one in Mine hand . . . And I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel, and one king shall be king to them all; and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all."

After the capture of Jerusalem and Palestine in the Great War we must not forget the Balfour Declaration.

We remember also in the past such names as Benjamin Disraeli, twice Premier of the British Empire; and Viscount G. J. Goschen, who served his King and country as Chancellor of the Exchequer and as First Lord of the Admiralty. Many other names of our Jewish brethren could be named, which shows the truth of God's Word from the prophet Isaiah: "The envy also of Ephraim shall depart, and the adversaries of Judah shall be cut off; Ephraim shall not envy Judah, and Judah shall not vex Ephraim" (Isa. xi, 13).

NOTES ON IRELAND.

By PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc., &c.

WE are told that the ancient Irish used bronze 1450 B.C., which would suggest that at that time they were advanced in applied science and civilization.

The language of the Goidels, 600 B.C., was Celtic, and education was well advanced.

The Belgic and Brythonic peoples settled in Britain between 300 B.C. and 150 B.C. They, at that time, used iron.

We read elsewhere that the Belgæ and Brythons, under Hu Gadarn, left the Caucasian mountain regions about 595 B.C., and moved westward through Europe until they reached the shores of the North Sea or British Ocean. Just as the Irish Milesians are traceable to the Caucasus, the home of the Saxon-Scyths, so the Belgæ and Brythons seem to have that region as their ancestral home.

The Brythonic Kingdom of Tara was established during the fourth century A.D.

The early inhabitants of Ireland had many origins, and it would not be wise to derive them from any one racial genealogical tree.

Ptolemy mentions no less than sixteen peoples who figured in early Irish times. One of these we may give a moment's attention. They were the Iverni with several alternates, as Iverio, Hiverio, Heberio. How natural to connect Hebernia and Hebernians with these names!

The two words Hiverio and Heberio are literally the same. They can be detected in the word Heber, Hebrew and Hebrews. The plural of Heber is Averim, "b" and "v" being interchangeable. Hence, it is not strange to find the early Irish names, as Iverni, Hiberio and Hiverio.

We are told that Nemed, with 900 men from Scythia, reached Ireland about 1150 B.C., and fought the Formorians or sea pirates at Tory Isle—Bull's Isle!

Nemed destroyed the fortress on Tory Isle, but the Formorians, receiving help from Africa, fought the Scythians until both parties were nearly exterminated. It is said that only thirty Scyths survived the battle, and three of these descended from Nemed. From these the Firbolgs are said to have descended, and in the eighth century B.C. they made an invasion of Ireland.

Digitized by Google

Their leaders divided the country, and each ruled in his own territory.

We are told that the Tuatha de Danaans fled from Greece to escape the Syrians who were invading that part of south-east Europe. In their flight they reached Scandinavia whence they later on proceeded to Ireland. In all probability some of these people crossed the Mediterranean Sea, settled in Spain, and in after years moved northward into the Emerald Isle, of which they had sure knowledge. It would appear that the Greek Danaans visited Scotland on their way to Ireland.

The Firbolgs, after a fierce battle, fled to Arran, Islay, Rathlen and the Hebrides, the isles of the Hebrews. The Danaans ruled the country until they were invaded by a later contingent of Milesians—also from the regions of Greece and Scythia.

Two Milesian brothers, Eber Find and Eremon, divided Ireland between them, quarrelled, fought, and Eber Find was slain.

It seems to have been in the reign of Eremon that the Picts from Scythia arrived. While many settled in Leinster, the majority went to Scotland and settled in Argyle and adjoining regions.

The King of Munster, Eogan Mor, who reigned about A.D. 170, descended from Eber Find.

The Ulsterites descended from the Ulidians and Spanish Milesians from Ionia. When the Milesians established rule and a kingdom, they made Tara their capital; however, there is a statement that the Brythons made Tara their capital. Suppose this to be true, then we have the Scythic Brythons instead of the Scythic Milesians, for both peoples are said to have come from the Caucasus.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor of The National Message and Banner.

Dear Sir,—In The National Message of March 30th appeared a photograph of the Garden Tomb, Jerusalem, with a brief allusion to this site.

Doubtless the attention of thousands of your readers has thus been drawn to the existence of what may be the most sacred spot on earth. That it is so is claimed by the Garden Tomb Association, the owners of the property purchased from the Turkish Government in 1896, and managed by a Committee elected triennially by the subscribers.

Any of your readers, whether resident in Great Britain or Overseas, who wish to identify themselves definitely with this work of maintenance, are invited to join the Association. Annual subscriptions from half-a-crown upwards are heartily welcome, and donations from one shilling. An illustrated booklet is available, post free for 2s. 1½d., giving full information, from the Hon. Secretary, who will gladly receive and acknowledge all subscriptions and donations.

As a British-Israel worker himself he feels assured of sympathetic response from your readers. It may be noted that several members of the Committee are members also of the B.-I.-W. Federation Executive.

"The Garden Tomb Maintenance Fund" was instituted so that the Garden Tomb, Jerusalem, may be kept sacred as a quiet spot, and preserved on the one hand from desecration, and on the other hand from superstitious uses.

Yours faithfully,

Charles C. Robertson (Lieut.-Col.),

Hon. Secretary, Garden Tomb Maintenance Fund.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

By the Rev. G. H. Lancaster, M.A.

Question.—Regarding the words, "Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin" (Dan. v, 25), can any explanation be given as to why instead of Upharsin being interpreted, the word "Peres" is substituted in verse 28, meaning "Thy kingdom is divided, and given to the Medes and Persians"? No explanation of Upharsin is given in the chapter, although that is the word which the Hand wrote. This has always been so puzzling to me, and doubtless to others also.—E. M. S.

Answer.—The doubling of the first word, Mene, appears to be a token of the certainty and nearness of the approaching judgment thus declared (cf. Gen. xiv, 10; xli, 32; Deut. ii, 27; xiv, 22; and the expression, "Verily, verily," so often used by Our Lord). The words "Mene, Tekel, Upharsin" are Aramaic; and to the majority of those Babylonian courtiers would hardly have been intelligible even if Assyrian forms had been given to them; e.g., sakalu (cf. Hebrew sakal) for "Tekel." The "wise men," who would have undoubtedly been familiar with Aramaic and its alphabet, would also have been able to read them, had they been written in the hieratic (i.e., priestly) writing or characters. That they did not read them rather tends to prove either that the writing was of a character familiar to the eye of the Hebrew Daniel, but one with which they were quite unacquainted; or, that not being sufficiently acquainted with the foreign language to explain the mystic and prophetic allusions in it (cf. verse 15), so that they either declined or were afraid to make the attempt at interpretation before the panic-stricken yet despotic Belshazzar.

The words are names of weights. Thus "Mene" means "numbered" (and in this case, finished and completed), "counted" and "handed over" (cf. Isaiah lxv, 12). "Tekel" means "weighed" and "thou art light," hence "art found wanting." "Upharsin" signifies "and breakings"; the "U" in Upharsin stands for "and," while P(h)arsin is the plural of Peres (verse 28). There is in this word an allusion (which is the more apparent in the English version) to the "Persians," as well as to the Empire of Babylonia being "broken up," "divided and given." The expression is an example of that paronomasia or play upon words which is so common in the Bible. Parsin means equally (1) "fragments" or "they break through" and (2) the Persias. The Persias would thus stand for Media and Persia, just as with the Arabs "the Euphrateses" means the Tigris and the Euphrates, "the Basras" meaning also Basra and Kufa.

It may be noted with interest that the Latin Vulgate of Jerome uses the word "Phares" in both verses 25 and 28, thus bringing the writing of the Hand into agreement with the interpretation. Strangely also it does not repeat "Mene" ("Mane") in verse 25.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

THE REV. PASCOE GOARD sailed by the s.s. Montcalm from Southampton on Saturday last for Canada to be in time for the B.-I. Convention at Winnipeg on May 1st, 2nd and 3rd, where he is to be the principal speaker. The steamer is due at St. John, N.B., to-day (April 20th). In response to an urgent cable, Mr. Goard agreed to speak at Montreal on April 22nd, and at Toronto on April 25th and 26th. After the Winnipeg Convention he will probably speak at Edmonton on May 5th, going on thence to Vancouver, where, as also at Victoria, B.C., he will be addressing meetings.

Mr. and Mrs. Garrison, Mrs. Zoe Bell, Mr. John Leech, K.C., and Mr. Wm. Sleeman saw Mr. Goard off by train from Waterloo. The President and Mrs. Knowles and other members of the Council were unable to be present, but sent their messages of Au revoir and Bon voyage.

We look forward to welcoming our beloved friend back in September, in good time for the next Congress. Our President, the Secretary-General, and the Commissioner-General, had pressing invitations to attend the Winnipeg Convention, but were unable to accept. Mr. Garrison was urged to bring a selection of his Lantern Pictures, and to give a series of lectures, but he found it impracticable to absent himself from his office for such a period as this would involve. Whether the plan can be carried out later on remains to be seen. There are similar requests from South Africa, Australia, New Zealand and India.

Applications for reserved seat tickets are already coming in for the Tenth Annual Congress, which opens (D.V.) on September 30th next, in the Central Hall, Westminster; these are being dealt with in order by our Headquarters' staff.

Mr. John Leech, K.C., had another good audience at Headquarters on April 11th. He continues his series of instructive lectures this week, and on April 24th, at 3 p.m., on prophetical subjects. Mr. Daniel Farmer gave an interesting and helpful address on April 12th, at the close of which the Rev. Pascoe Goard contributed some important remarks upon the future of our work, and offered prayer, followed by the Benediction.

The audience were glad of the opportunity to say "God be with you until we meet again." Our readers will, we may be sure, continually pray that God will graciously protect our good friend in all dangers to which he may be exposed, and bring him safely back to us in the Autumn.

The Rev. Joseph Gay, A.T.S., is to give an address at Headquarters on Thursday next, April 25th, at 7.30.

* * *

The Annual Public May Meetings are to be held at Headquarters on May 23rd and 24th, at 2.45 and 7.30. The Annual Meeting of Members for receiving the Annual Report and Financial Statement will be held on May 24th, at 5.30 p.m.

The Rev. G. H. Lancaster, M.A., lectured at Leicester on April 9th. His subject was "The Hebrew Passover in the light of the Holy Communion Service." The Branch reports that this fine address left them with an understanding of the Holy Communion Service which they never had before.

Miss Hamilton Hunter has lectured at Salisbury, Ealing, Blackheath and Stoke-on-Trent. In the Town Hall at the last-named place the President, Gresham Copeland, Esq., made an appeal to the audience that each member should promise to include in their morning prayers every Thursday a special petition to Almighty God for His blessing upon the work of the Federation. This was strongly supported by Miss Hamilton Hunter, and the audience gave an earnest response. The hope was expressed that other Branches would follow this example.

Mr. J. J. Morey has lectured at Fittleworth, Gravesend, Surbiton, Dover, Stratford, Tunbridge Wells, Portsmouth, Woking, Dorking, Guildford, Reigate, Chatham and Sutton. At Dover, a clergyman opponent asked a number of questions, and these were answered by Mr. Morey in a manner so effective that the audience vigorously applauded.

We regret to announce the passing away of Miss Keer, a devoted worker in the B.-I. Cause, and a member of our Hull Branch. Miss Keer was a native of Colchester, Essex. We tender her sister, Miss Mary M. Keer, with whom she lived, our sincere sympathy.

F. A. writes from Ireland: "Please let me have some more copies of the Special Number of your JOURNAL; it is full of beautiful reading. I have been a believer in British-Israel for nearly fifty years, when I first heard of it at my school from our Bible Class teacher. My brother and I have revelled in this teaching, and we have given away quantities of the literature, and thus helped to interest a good many. The members of the Bible Class I conduct love to hear about this Truth, and we all love the clear teaching on God's Holy Word contained in the articles in your weekly journal.

"It is a glorious privilege to be God's Israel, and to realize it in these awful days of rank apostasy and false 'isms of many kinds."

H. D. M., a lay preacher, writes from the Isle of Wight to the Rev. Pascoe Goard: "Your parcel of books safely to hand; all are new to me. I assure you I shall read every one of them eagerly, thoughtfully and prayerfully. I am exceedingly grateful to you for this generous and acceptable gift. Peace be with you and ever-increasing success in the glad service."

A Vicar writes from Lincolnshire: "I am indeed grateful for the parcel of books. I find THE NATIONAL MESSAGE very helpful in these critical days. Many of my brethren of the clergy do not believe in the whole Bible: I am very glad that the B.-I.-W.F. stands for the whole Bible, and therefore I am in sympathy with that grand Movement. May God bless it and extend the great work."

A Rector in Suffolk writes: "I was simply delighted with the parcel of beautiful books you so generously sent me. Thank you for them very much indeed. I consider myself very fortunate in having so acceptable a gift.

"One finds a freshness in your methods of teaching which is the opposite of the 'modernity' of many theological books, which are not only unsatisfying but even soul-withering.

"I have in the past made jokes about British-Israel teaching. Until recently I had been too prejudiced to read a book by a British-Israel writer. I only read books against the teaching. However, on being challenged I at last did read a British-Israel book, viz., that by the Rev. Dr. Mountain, and some others.

"I have had something of an inner conflict about the matter but, like Bishop Titcomb, I have at length hauled down my flag and capitulated.

"Thank you again for your generous gift, which I deeply appreciate. May the Divine blessing rest on your work."

C. P. writes from Salisbury: "Miss Hamilton Hunter's two lectures here on the subjects, 'The Magna Charta of the Anglo-Saxon Race' and 'The Redemption of the Nation Israel,' were so absorbing that her audience would gladly have listened for much longer than the hour given. In spite of a bitter wind and much illness, a large number were present both afternoon and evening, some from Fordingbridge."

A lecture on the Union Jack and its place in British-Israel teaching was given by Mr. S. Millar for the West Belfast Association on April 11th. There was a large audience, and intense interest was shown by all as the speaker unfolded the history of the most wonderful flag in the world, and its relation to the Bible, under which peoples dwelling find justice, liberty and protection.

THE ANGLO-SAXON RACE.

British-Israel-World Federation at the Cambridge Guildhall Meetings.

An interesting and enlightening exposition of the British-Israel-World Federation's position was made by the Rev. Pascoe Goard at the first of a series of meetings in the Guildhall on Monday afternoon. The Anglo-Saxon race, he claimed, was Israel the nation, and to it God was fulfilling the promise he made to Israel through the prophets. The chair at this meeting and in the evening was taken by Mr. John Leech, K.C., supported by the Rev. Joseph Gay.

In his introductory remarks, the Chairman said that this subject of the origin of the British race was one that would one day have to be taught all over the Empire and the world.

The Rev. Pascoe Goard said that there was a great confusion in English Christianity as to their attitude to the Bible. It was largely due to this, that unless the promises made to Israel by God were, in fact, carried out, much of it was only meaningless jargon. The common mistake was to suppose that Israel was the Jew. Israel was a nation, not a church.

It was a white nation. Herodotus called them "white Syrians." By Biblical investigation they could rule out all the ancient empires and the Moslem and Papal dominations over Palestine. They had only the great Anglo-Saxon nations left.

The rule of Israel would be a Constitutional Monarchy, not a republic, and not an autocracy, with a Royal line going back 3,000 years. The English Royal line did go back so far to Solomon and David.

Israel did live and every prophecy made to her was being fulfilled. Once that was admitted, questionings about the Bible would cease. They would realize that they were a holy nation of priests, who would make the whole world equal in the sight of God. Their law was the law of the Bible, and it had spread over one-third of the entire world.

Further addresses, expanding the same thesis, were give at the evening meeting by the Rev. Joseph Gay and the Rev. Pascoe Goard. The meetings will continue till Friday, taking place each afternoon and evening at 3 and 8 respectively. Besides the speakers at Monday's meetings, the Rev. Lumley Davies, the Rev. T. Sparshott Johnson, and Mr. Herbert Garrison will also give addresses on various aspects of British-Israel teaching.—Cambridge Daily News.

It shows how the British Coat of Arms is built up from ancient emblems given to our race some 4,000 years ago. The Chart illustrates the contemporary history of the Houses of Judah and Israel.

Some independent comments which have reached the Author read as follows :—

"I think your chart and volume the best collection of B.-I. data that has ever been published. The chart is an excellent idea and gives the whole mass of evidence at a glance."

"I have your wonderful chart and key book. It is the most comprehensive study I have yet read. A joy to the Believer and an arresting study to an outsider."

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

THE MARCH OF PROPHETIC EVENTS.—IV.

By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard, F.R.G.S.

For many years past prophetic students have known that in the last period of prophetic history Russia would be found in conflict with Israel-Britain. A library of books carried this statement in many forms.

It is interesting to read in Mr. Ashmead Bartlett's articles on "Russia," especially that dealing with Russian military matters, that a part of the training of the million and a half of Russia's standing army through which classes of officers and men are rapidly passing, is the teaching of them that Russia is in danger and must be defended from attack by capitalistic powers, chief among which as a potential enemy is Great Britain.

A little while ago the United States was assigned second place among such potential enemies, but the U.S.A. has now been dropped into the background, and second place is assigned to France, with Italy as a close third. Probably Italy will move up to second place as the power of Mussolini and his organization becomes more apparent.

It seems strange to have Moscow sending broadcast the doctrine foretold by Ezekiel 2,520 years ago and more, that Russia would head an organization in an attack upon "the merchants of Tarshish, and all the young lions thereof," which, of course, is Britain and her kindred nations.

Here, then, is emerging at the end of the ages a definitely forecasted prophetic event.

Neither must we consider this instruction Russia is disseminating altogether new. From the time of Peter the Great the expansion of Russia to the Mediterranean and to the Indian Ocean has been the fundamental doctrine of the Russian State.

So we shall look at the progress of this great power and its menace to the peace of the world at the present time.

The primary object of Russia, or rather that power that is ruling in Russia, is to bring about a world revolution from individual enterprise to communism. This is not the thought of the great bulk of the Russian people—which number about 170 millions—but of that group which penetrated and which is now dominating Russia—which group numbers less than half of one million. It would have been much more to the taste of the central communistic group to have seized upon the citadels of the national life of the western nations, and to have inherited their rich treasuries and great institutions of industry, commerce and finance, rather than the more barren and less richly organized semi-Asiatic State of Russia. But they took that which came to their hands, and are putting their experiments into operation as an external body lodged in the heart of the body politic of Russia.

They have caught their idea, apparently, from the widely diffused and wonderfully organized Jewish system. In fact these people call themselves, and are called, Jews; but a venerable Jewish scholar here told us that they are not Jews by descent, but are made up of proselytes from all races, who have put on Jewish forms, Jewish profession, and the Jewish name for the advantage it would bring them.

The Jewish encyclopædia on our shelves tells much the same story, as the reader can see who will turn up for instance the article under the head of "Anthropology."

Digitized by Google

The position in Russia to-day is that of an armed minority ruling an unarmed majority, less than half-a-million ruling one hundred and seventy millions. Let the pacifists of Britain who would disarm the majority, namely, the whole Anglo-Saxon people, consider that they may be placing the whole of our race in danger of a similar coup which would place our people in a similar undesirable position.

The position of the present ruling party in Russia is much that of the position formerly occupied by the Manchu rulers in Pekin. During the whole time of their rule they occupied the inner city; which constituted an armed camp in the midst of a subordinated people, which later threw off the yoke.

The ruling caste in Russia is entrenched in the Kremlin as in a fortress.

Its standing army is watched day and night in every company of every battalion of every regiment throughout the service for fear the standing army might itself bring off a coup d'état.

The territorial troops are necessarily still more loosely held, and these shade off into a hostile people.

One thing only prevented foreign action on the part of Russia in order to bring relief at home last spring, and that was the certainty that if Russia were mobilized and armed she would first turn upon her tyrants and rend them.

It seems, therefore, that the present rulers of Russia are shut within their own barriers, and are not at present in a position to move.

What lines of action are open to Russia?

(a) By doctrinal propaganda to convert the Russian mind to their own communistic way of thinking, so that they could entrust the masses of Russia with arms. Those, however, who have had experience of the inflexibility of the Russian mind will see that it must take more than a generation to bring about such a change of mental attitude.

(b) By a Russian leader who could organize and mobilize the great mass of the Russian people, who should successfully lead them against the armed minority now overriding them. But such is the efficiency of the striking force of the governing body in the heart of Russia that it seems to be a very unlikely development. The Government can get more troops, better organized and equipped, to any vital point within the Empire quicker than could any popular leader.

(c) By the arising within the ranks of the inner circle of communists, or within the standing army, of a leader, or a group of leaders, or a party, who or which, despairing of success for the communistic experiment, could seize the military machine, turn and rend the communist central organization, and, raising the standard of counter-revolution, place itself at the head of united Russia in a war for freedom and expansion.

The history of such great movements as the French Revolution, which provided the opportunity for Napoleon, shows the possibility and perhaps the probability of the latter event taking place.

This seems to be the mind of Trotsky, who knows Russia, who knows the communist rule, and who knows the army as it now stands. He has uttered his warning, which, although written some months ago, was lately published in America. The following is taken from the Daily Telegraph of February 5th:—

"THE NAPOLEON OF RUSSIA."

Trotsky's Warning.—Attitude of Soviet Army.

"In a letter written from Alma Ata (Vjerny), Turkestan, last October, which appears to-day in the Militant, the New York extremist publication, Leo Trotsky gives warning of the approaching counter-revolution in Russia, and declares that he already sees the shadow of a man on horseback, 'the Napoleon of Russia,' spreading menacingly over the Union of Soviets.

"It is Trotsky's conviction that the policies of Stalin are bearing Russia to another overturn, which will be accomplished 'by supreme and purely military power, lifting itself above the classes.'

"'Watch with the greatest attention the processes that are taking place in the army,' he says. Whether the 'man on horseback' will be Stalin, or whether Stalin will go down under the hoofs of the horse is to Trotsky quite unimportant.

"'We have no lack of Bonapartes,' he writes.

"The programme of the right wing, including Rykoff, Kalinin, Tomsky, and Bukharin, he says, is leading directly 'along the Thermidorian Bonapartist road,' and the policies of the Centre, as expressed by Stalin, merely zigzag along the same road.

"'We must not forget,' he continues, 'that in his June report to the Moscow conference of party workers the Right leader, Rykoff (Lenin's successor as President of the Council of Commissars), referring to his friend Klim (a Soviet air officer), said, "If you undertake any more extraordinary measures the army will answer with an insurrection." That is a very significant formulation—half-prophecy, half-threat.'

"In the same issue of the Militant appears a letter written in December by Trotsky's wife, Natalia Ivanovna, describing the terrible hardships they endured in Alma Ata. All the family were suffering from malaria, and the cold in the house assigned to Trotsky was 'torturing.'"

(d) There is still another possibility. The communists of Russia, that is to say, the ruling group, are instructing their officers that Poland will be used as a mode of entrance into Russia. Although no names of such potential invaders are specified, this would seem to point to a consideration of the possibility of action on the part of Prussia, and perhaps of Germany. Certain it is that with the long-delayed appearance of any success of the communistic experiment in Russia, it has long ago become apparent to keen-eyed Prussia that the natural resources of the one-time Russian Empire, together with the abundant man power, the low standard of living and low wage obtaining there, offers a field for enterprise and exploitation second to none short of the British Empire.

Could Prussia appear as the liberator of Russia and succeed to administrative control, what a field for opportunity, for Teutonic enterprise; and what an outlet from the confines of constricted Germany into a wide field of endeavour!

The ancient prophets have shown that "Gomar and all his band" will be in the final Russian combination.

When the horseman of which Trotsky speaks appears

Digitized by Google

"riding over Russia," there will then be in Europe two great potentialities facing each other: Mussolini, supported by the Papacy, on the one hand; and the unnamed horseman riding over Russia on the other.

The Hebrew prophet indicates that, as in the late great struggle, so in the one that is yet ahead, the crux of the whole situation will be reached in Palestine in the struggle between the two tremendous contending powers. The prophet Ezekiel further declares that the Russian combination shall come "all of them riding upon horses."

The language of Trotsky answers the language of prophecy, and the prophecies concerning these great events are rushing speedily to their fulfilment.

In the series of studies on Daniel, to be resumed in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, we shall later come to the study of the eleventh chapter of Daniel. Perhaps the unnamed horseman of Russia on the one hand, and Mussolini and his organization on the other, will carry out the final dramatic act therein portrayed on the great stage of world history before the wondering eyes of Israel-Britain.

THE LEVITES STILL OFFERING SACRIFICE.

By the Rev. Commander L. G. A. Roberts, R.N.

THIS promise is on the same footing as that "David should never want a man to sit upon the throne of the House of Israel." "Neither shall the priests, the Levites, want a man before Me to offer burnt offerings, and to kindle meat offerings, and to do sacrifice continually."—Jer. xxxiii, 17, 18.

The fact that the promise stands, whether we can realize it or not, is as sure as that God's covenant of day and night and the ordinances of Heaven still exist.

All we have to do is to endeavour to apply the promise, if challenged, upon the integrity of God's Holy Word.

There are very few British-Israelites who will question to-day the fact that our King George V is sitting upon the earthly throne of David, and also that he would immediately be willing to hand it over to the Lord Jesus Christ when the time comes. We must remember here that for a very long time we ourselves did not understand how literal this promise was. It is only since the identity of Britain and the U.S.A. with Israel has been made known to us that the question of David having an earthly descendant out of his own loins, constantly reigning over the House of Israel, has been an interesting subject of serious investigation. There has been a very long gap between the passing away of the last visible heir to David's throne (Zedekiah reigning over Judah; Benjamin and Levi) and the time that our Gracious Lady Queen Victoria became known as a visible heir sitting upon the throne of Britain, and that Britain became known as Israel. Yet all the time the Word of God told us that David's throne should be established for ever, and that God would not take the throne from the son of his loins, as He had taken it from Saul. It also says God Himself would transplant that throne in an appointed place where it should move no more. The very time of this transplanting is also told us (Ezek. xxix, 21), and it is only within one's life that all these things have come to light, within the last seventy years or so. This other promise lies also in the same manner obscure until some reason appears to make one see that every word of God is true. The kingly office attaching to the throne of Israel goes back to Gen. xlix. The priestly office likewise goes back to Gen. xiv: Melchizedek, Priest of the Most High God. In Exod. xix, 6, Israel is appointed as a Kingdom of Priests; this was before the giving of the law from Mount Sinai, it was a promise foreshadowing God's purposes. Under the law, the Levite especially is chosen instead of all the first-born, and to them is given the Urim and the Thummim, the teaching of the judgments and the law to Israel; Aaron having been previously selected as the High Priest of Israel under the law. Evidently, however, before this we have the head of the family, as Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and Job. These offered sacrifices as Noah did for their households. Under the Old Testament we have the nations that forget God, and the families that call not upon Thy Name, given over to reprobation.

Under the law sacrifices were ordained continually as an atonement for sin, and the ceremonial law laid down what these sacrifices were to be. But we are told in the 40th Psalm, "Sacrifice and offerings Thou wouldest not, but a body hast Thou prepared: in burnt offerings and sacrifice for sin Thou hast had no pleasure. Then said I, Lo, I come (in the volume of the book it is written of Me) to do Thy will, O God." He taketh away the first (the sacrifices, burnt offerings), that He may establish the second. That is, the presenting of the body of Jesus instead. This in order that, by these mercies of God toward us in giving us His dear Son, we might present our bodies a living sacrifice to God, which is our reasonable service.

In Dan. ix, 25–27, we have the very time when our Blessed Lord should make His soul an offering for sin, and as a result put an end to sin, to bring in everlasting righteousness by the anointing of Himself as the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world. This tragedy, as told us in Isa. liii and Zech. xi, 10–14, should bring about "He should see of the travail of His soul and be satisfied." It brought about the rending of the veil of the Temple so that the way into the Holiest was no more through the blood of bulls and of goats, but by the precious blood of Jesus. No wonder the High Priest Zacharias, when as his custom was to go in within the veil with the blood of atonement, tarried so long in the Temple, having seen a vision, proclaiming the birth of the great fore-runner of Jesus Christ, John the Baptist. Notice the type here foretold. While the priest was within, all extraneous sacrifice ceased until he came out again, and then he should have blessed the people But he tarried long, became speechless, and came out saying nothing. Here was a type that the Lord Jesus was prefigured as entering in with His own blood within the most holy place into the presence of God, and He will come again, and then to bless His people. "When the Lord shall build up Zion, He shall appear in His glory."—Ps. cii, 16. Again, the Psalmist, li, 17–19, says, "The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit, a broken and a contrite heart, O God, Thou wilt not despise. Do good in Thy good pleasure unto Zion; build Thou the walls of Jerusalem. Then shalt Thou be pleased with the sacrifices of righteousness, with burnt offering and whole burnt offering; then shall they offer bullocks upon Thine altar." So, the cessation of sacrifices and offerings is merely suspended whilst our High Priest Himself is within the veil presenting for us His blood, and all we who look to Him as our Atonement are expecting Him to return and come with blessings unto all who wait for His appearing.

Now look at Mal. iii, where we have the Coming of the Lord Jesus, His sitting as a refiner of silver, and by judgment causing the offerings of Judah and Jerusalem to be pleasant unto the Lord as in the days of old. Then again, in Ezek. xliii, 19 and following, xliv, 15, we have the restoration of the priesthood of the sons of Zadok that went not astray, but kept the charge when the Children of Israel went astray. This forms an interesting study when we look back to the time, after Our Lord's Resurrection, and see "a great company of the priests were obedient to the faith."—Acts vi, 7. Here then are the sons of Zadok that went not astray. Now these are evidently with us to this day, and yet they cannot now be recognized. Nor can any of those faithful followers of the Lord Jesus Christ for certain be identified, and yet they are with us. Now, these are certainly in the Christian ministry at the present time in their descendants. But what about their method of service, since the sacrifice of bullocks and of goats has temporarily been discontinued? We are told that we are to offer our bodies a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable to God, which is our reasonable service. Now St. Paul is the only one who gives up a direct key. Others, such as St. John and St. Peter, tell us we are priests and kings unto God through Jesus Christ, and these words apply to the whole nation. "For ye are a chosen race, a royal priesthood, an holy nation," confirming to us Exod. xix, 6. But this applies to every true Christian. Let us see what St. Paul says in Romans xv, 16, That I should be λειτουργον.—Hebrews x, 11.

APPLIED TO LEVITICAL PRIESTHOOD AS IF SERVING AT THE ALTAR.

The minister of Christ Jesus, performing the office of the priest in respect of the Gospel, in presenting the offering of the Gentiles who were converted that they might be acceptable, being sanctified by the Holy Spirit. This word ιερουργοντα is significant.

This should be taken in connection with every true Israelite, as St. Paul also stated in Romans xii, 1: "I beseech you therefore brethren by the mercies of God that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice (as the Body of Christ) . . . . . unto God." This takes the place of the sacrifice of bulls and of goats. It is not that we can do this as a propitiation, for that has been done by the only Body acceptable, which is Jesus Christ, but it is the least we can do for Him Who has done so much for us.

Now let us go back to the return from Babylon. We shall find from the book Ezra that very few Levites returned with the Jews; so much was this the case, that Ezra had to send to Casiphia to bring from there ministers for the house of God (viii, 15-19). Also we notice that of the priests there were some who had lost touch of their genealogy, and were reckoned as polluted, and put out of the priesthood. "The Tirshatha said unto them that they should not eat of the most holy things, till there stood up a priest with Urim and with Thummim" (ii, 61-63). If then the loss of genealogy was so marked, how much easier must it have been for those Levites and priests who were with the whole House of Israel (Ezek. xi, 16).

But great numbers of Levi must have been with the Northern Kingdom, of whom at present we cannot speak confidently, except that God's Word being true some of these may not have gone astray when the Children of Israel went astray. This we seem to be assured of from the epitaphs taken from the sepulchres of Israel in the Crimea, dating from the captivity of the Northern House taken into captivity by Assyria.

Lastly, should anyone be highly critical, it must be remembered we have, as alluded to before, in Acts vi, 7: "A great company of the priests were obedient to the faith."

A good rule to make is to believe all Scripture is by inspiration of God; it is His revelation of what He wishes us to know, and every promise is of no private interpretation; but the Word is its own interpreter, and when the time comes God Himself will make it plain. We are advancing in Scriptural knowledge and archæological discovery at such a rate that even the Urim and the Thummim will probably be recovered. This may be alluded to in Isaiah xxiv, 15: "Wherefore glorify ye the Lord in the FIRES,* even the name of the Lord God of Israel in the isles of the sea."

BIBLICAL METALLURGY.—III.

By ANDREW B. BUCHANAN.

FURNACES (continued).

IN our last article we presented the furnace from the modern metallurgical standpoint. In attendance upon the furnace we had: the air, the fuel, the charge, the molten metal, the slag, the tapping and the ladle.

The reader may think that, in attempting to place the above upon a Biblical basis, we have entered into the speculative. This is not the case, however, as the Bible is quite clear and specific upon its own technical teaching.

The reader must not under any circumstances take the furnaces which we have described, as the actual furnaces of Biblical times. We can only point out the characteristic features which the Scriptures present, and note the corresponding features in the modern furnaces. Beyond this we do not go.

Let us examine the Scriptures step by step.

THE FURNACE.

We have already seen that Moses speaks of the iron furnace and informs us about the iron ore. Job xxviii, 1-2, gives us further information regarding ore:—"Surely there is a vein for the silver, and a place for gold where they fine it.

"Iron is taken out of the earth, and brass is molten out of the stone."

The blast furnace must have been in existence at the time of Moses.

In Judges iv, 13, we are informed that Sisera had 900 chariots of iron.

1 Chron. xxii, 3, states that David ". . . prepared iron in abundance. . . ."

1 Chron. xxix, 6-7, states that "the chief of the fathers and princes of the tribes of Israel . . . gave for the service of the house of God . . . one hundred thousand talents of iron."

* This may allude to the flashing on the breastplate when consulted: "Give a perfect lot."

Yet this iron could only be prepared by passing through :—

(a) The blast furnace, to produce iron from ore ;

(b) The cupola, for cast iron ;

(c) A modified form of the reverberatory furnace, for wrought iron.

Ezekiel xxii, 18 and 20, speaks of the furnace for melting brass, which points to the reverberatory furnace.

Daniel iii speaks of the burning fiery furnace. Commandment was given that this furnace should be heated seven times above its wont.

Three men were " . . . cast into the midst of and fell down bound into the midst of the burning fiery furnace." And Nebuchadnezzar saw : " . . . four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt, and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God."

Please refer to Figs. 3 and 4 in last week's number of this Journal and it will be seen that Nebuchadnezzar's furnace conforms to the Siemens type of furnace.

Note the size of the hearth and the height of the furnace at the middle, and we can understand " four men " walking therein. As this type of furnace has the temperature under control, we realize what Nebuchadnezzar's commandment meant.

Is this poetical or pictorial imagery ?

Fuel.

We know that wood was largely used for fire in Scripture. In the olden days, pig-iron, of a very superior grade, was made from charcoal as fuel and the use of " cold blast " (cold air) in the blast furnace. But wood was not the only fuel used.

The passage in Isaiah previously quoted (xliv, 12) refers to the smith who " . . . worketh in the coals . . ." Isaiah liv, 16, says : " Behold, I have created the smith that bloweth the coals in the fire . . ." And lest we should misconstrue the word coals, Lamentations iv, 8, informs us that " . . . their visage is blacker than a coal . . ."

Before pursuing this study further, let the reader now take the Bible and carefully read Ezekiel xxii, 17 to 22. What an enigma this is, and yet how wonderfully clear !

This is the Bible text-book upon metallurgy. These six verses contain, in condensed form, practically all that is known of metallurgy. Please keep your Bibles open as we proceed.

The Slag.

18, " . . . , the house of Israel is to me become dross . . ."

Dross, in this instance, does not mean coal. It is a purely metallurgical term, and is known in our day as slag.

When we watch the making of jam or jelly, we notice that a pink frothy substance, known as scum, rises to the top of the fruit. The scum represents the impurities of the fruit. In like manner, in dealing with molten metal, all the impurities rise to the top of the metal, and must be skimmed off.

What the housewife knows as " scum," God speaks of as " dross," and the metallurgist as " slag." Please refer to all the furnaces now and note the place of the " slag," the " dross " of the Bible.

The Charge.

18, " . . . all they are brass, and tin, and iron, and lead, in the midst of the furnace . . ."

20, " As they gather silver, and brass, and iron, and lead, and tin, into the midst of the furnace . . ."

In the blast furnace we have a charge of ore.

In the cupola a charge of pig-iron and scrap.

In the reverberatory furnace the charge is such as is given in the two passages quoted above. Such a charge goes to make up the composition of brass castings.

The Air.

20, " . . . to blow the fire upon it . . ."

21, " . . . and blow upon you in the fire of my wrath . . ."

Please examine all the diagrams and note where the air is blown into the furnaces, and remember that this blown air is " forced draught."

The Molten Metal.

20, " . . . to melt it . . ."

This refers to the melting of the silver, brass, iron, lead and tin at the beginning of the verse. All the diagrams show the molten metal.

The Tapping and the Ladle.

It is essential that the reader should thoroughly understand the tapping of a furnace and the use of the ladle.

For this purpose take two empty tins and mark them No. 1 and No. 2, respectively.

Take No. 1 tin and fill it with water, then take an awl and bore a hole near the bottom, and let the water run into No. 2 tin. This is exactly what happens when a furnace is tapped.

Now take No. 2 tin, and pour out the water as you would pour out a glass of milk.

No. 2 tin is the " ladle," and the emptying of the water represents the pouring out of the metal.

The reader should now have a clear understanding of the difference between " tapping " and " pouring."

Fig. 1 shows tapping only.

Figs. 2 and 4 show the tapping into the ladle which is then ready for pouring.

Turn now to verse :

22, " . . . and ye shall know that I the Lord have poured out my fury upon you."

We should hesitate to use this " pouring out " as a metallurgical term had it not been used in the setting contained in the context.

We take from this verse that ladles had possibly been used in Biblical times.

It was consideration of all this which led the writer to refer to " ladles " in a former article.* We would point out, however, that at no time have we ever made the categorical statement that ladles were used, or that these were of 10 tons' capacity.

We shall return to this metallurgical passage of Ezekiel when, in a later article, we deal with its symbology.

Our next article will deal with the Temple Castings.

THAT BLESSED HOPE.

By CHARLES H. CORRIN.

"LOOKING for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ" (Titus ii, 13).

"Now faith is the substance of things hoped for" (Heb. xi, 1).

Hope is always proportionate to faith.

Faith is the root, hope is the fruit; no fruit without root; a root without fruit is a stunted growth.

Why are the majority of nominal Christians without this hope, and content to be without it?

Because their hearts are elsewhere; described by Peter (2 Peter iii, 3-4) as "scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of His coming?"

Not that all such are content to lay hold of material things, many seeking a satisfaction in their philosophies, in old theories revived and re-stated in these last days, which theories are by no means modern, and, having no basis in fact, are expressed in terms of the theory of Evolution extended from the realm of the material to the mental and spiritual, and all resting upon the theory of Uniformity, viz., no miracles, no catastrophes, all things following uniform law. These ancient and modern philosophers are identified by the Holy Spirit in verse 4: "And saying . . . all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation"; and this theory is destroyed, as any theory may be destroyed, by one concrete fact (verses 5 and 6), which "they willingly are ignorant of."

But Paul, in his Epistle to Titus, has a different objective than Peter. He is writing to believers in "that blessed hope."

Hope, we have seen, comes from faith.

Upon what do we base our faith for that hope?

The word of Our Lord Himself. Yes!

But the Holy Spirit is our Teacher, and here He teaches us by an object lesson (Titus ii, 11).

"The grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared . . ."

Our faith in He "hath appeared" is a root of our hope of His "appearing"; and the measure of our faith in that "hath appeared," and all that it connotes to us in prophecy, history and personal experience, is the measure of our hope in His "appearing."

Why do not God's people give more attention to teaching and speaking of this "blessed hope"? There are three reasons which are often given.

(1) That there have been so many extravagant interpretations. True! And they started very early, the Thessalonians amongst the first. Therefore Paul wrote a second letter to them to correct their errors. Why not follow his example and study and proclaim this truth? Not dogmatically; because we rejoice to find that all interpreters of the details of these last things, whether as historical, futurist, pre-millennial or post-millennial, are agreed on the promised fact of His "appearing" and they are all obeying the command to "watch." The Christian Church has always been pledged to the doctrine of His "appearing" personally; and remains pledged whilst the Apostles' Creed stands in her formularies.

(2) That we must maintain the balance of truth and not ride a hobby on one subject.

What are the subjects chiefly occupying the attention of all the Churches to-day?

Apart from some hazy enthusiasm for Service and Brotherhood, are they not stressing almost exclusively Sacraments and Church order?

Necessary subjects! They are there in the New Testament for our learning, but they occupy a small space therein. This "Blessed Hope" is a theme in twenty-two out of the twenty-seven books of the New Testament, and is set forth at greater length and detail than any other subject.

Let this therefore be given the same proportionate prominence in preaching and teaching to-day; also noting that the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper has its function limited by this, "Till He come." (1 Cor. xi, 26.)

(3) That it is not practical; it deals with matters far off; people need help and instruction in the life to be lived here and now.

But note that in this chapter the reference to this hope is set in the midst of most practical direction for Christian living, and almost everywhere that this hope is mentioned in the Book it is similarly set forth as an inspiration for the life that now is.

Therefore let us, led by the Grace which "hath appeared," live the life set forth in this chapter, looking for that Blessed Hope and His "appearing."

MORS JANUA VITÆ.

By HENRY PROCTOR, F.R.S.L., M.R.A.S.

THAT "Death is the gate of life" is an axiom which the world is unwilling to accept. The most selfish and worldly are seeking to "see life," as they call it.

"SEEING LIFE"

means to them the gratification of various forms of lust,

"THE LUST OF THE FLESH, the lust of the eyes, and the vainglory of life." But the end of these things is death, for "he that soweth unto his own flesh, shall out of his flesh reap corruption."

If we live after the flesh, we shall die; but if by the Spirit we make to die (put to death) the doings of the body, we shall live. So then, they that seek death find life, and they that seek for life (apart from God) find death.

This is not the mistake of the worldling alone, however, but even of the professed believer. For, as Thomas a Kempis says, "There are many believers, but few disciples." And what constitutes the difference between believers and disciples? "If any man willeth to come after me," saith Jesus, "and hateth not his own soul, he cannot be my disciple. For he that seeketh to save his soul [ψυχη = life] shall lose it, but he that loses his soul for my sake shall preserve it," shall keep it unto life eternal. The majority of believers are seeking life, but are unwilling to enter by

THE GATE OF DEATH.

"Narrow is the way that leads to life and FEW there be that find it." During the earthly lifetime of Jesus, it is said, that "many believed on him," but He did not believe on them; He did not entrust Himself to them, "for he knew what was in man"; He saw that they were not willing to pay the price. And if that was true in that day, when it was dangerous to acknowledge Him, how much more true it is to-day, when Religion, as Bunyan said, "walks in the sun, in silver slippers." Outward circumstances have greatly changed since then, but the eternal law does not change; the requirement of the law of Christ, the conditions of discipleship, are just the same to-day as when He first laid them down. Death is still the gate of life; if we put to death the doings of the body, we shall live. "And they that are of Christ Jesus [therefore] have with the passions and lusts thereof."

Digitized by Google

There are some, to-day, and thank God, an increasing number, who have entirely renounced the lust of the flesh, and have become dead to it for the Kingdom of Heaven's sake. The riches and honour of this world have lost all charm for them. They neither long for its favours nor fear its frowns, for they are crucified to the world, through the Cross of Christ; "always bearing about in their bodies the dying of the Lord Jesus, that the life also of Jesus may be manifested in their mortal bodies." St. Paul emphasizes this distinction between believers and disciples in that remarkable sentence, "So then death worketh in us, but life in you," or as it might be rendered, "So then His death energizes in us, but His life in you." This experience, then, which he characterizes as was superior to that of the Corinthian believers, which he characterizes as

LIFE-ENERGY.

The blessed Lord Jesus put this death-energy as the essential condition of fruitfulness, for "Except a corn of wheat fall unto the ground and die it abideth alone, but if it die, it beareth much fruit." There is no true follower of the Lamb (slain from the foundations of the world) who is not brought, sooner or later, face to face with this death of experience. Some have recognized the moment of passing over—like George Muller of Bristol (who was renowned throughout the world for his faith), who testifies: "There came died to the likes and dislikes of George Muller; to the praise of my friend; to the blame of my enemies, and studied only to show myself a workman approved unto God." Madam Guyon, "of whom the world was not worthy," speaks thus of passing through the gate of death into the abundant, overflowing life: "After nearly seven years of inward and outward desolation, the darkness passed away and the light of eternal glory settled upon my soul. It was on the 22nd of July, 1680,

A TIME WHEN I DIED;

THAT HAPPY DAY

that my soul was delivered from all its pains. On that day I was restored, as it were, to and set wholly at liberty. I was no longer depressed, no longer borne down under the burden of sorrow. The peace which I now possessed was all holy, heavenly, inexpressible. One day of this happiness, which consisted in simple rest or

PERFECT LIFE,

HARMONY WITH GOD'S WILL,

was sufficient to counterbalance years of suffering. Certainly it was not I, myself, who had fastened myself to the Cross, and under the operations of a law, of a Providence, just but inexorable, had drained, if I may so express it, the blood of the life of nature to the last drop. It was the Lord that did it. It was God Who destroyed me that He might give me the true life."

The trouble with most of us is that we will not look Death in the face. We refuse to follow our Master to Calvary. We hide our faces from the shame and spitting. We are too ready to take Peter's advice to and we "shrink back" like the patient from the surgeon's knife, instead of quitting ourselves like men. Hence the reason why so many saints have suffered excruciating physical agonies, which might have been avoided. It is not the will of Our Father—that "many among [us] should be weak and sickly," and that "not a few sleep," but we compel Him to take these extreme measures for our good; and after all we go a long way round, and instead of entering the land of corn and wine and oil at Kadesh-Barnea, we turn back and spend forty years in the wilderness.

It is better at once to go through and walk along the edge of the razor; to enter into life through the narrow wicket-gate of death, for then shall we suddenly find ourselves in a "land of broad rivers and streams," where we shall see the King in His Beauty. For though the Way may be narrow, it is straight; and though it may be "straitened," it leads to the Land of Beulah — to the "Days of Heaven upon earth."

THE SEASON FOR DIVINE HELP.

By the Rev. George Matheson, M.A., D.D.

"Jacob went on his way, and the angels of God met him."—Gen. xxxii, 1.

The important word here, as I think, is the word "met." It is distinctly implied that no supernatural help came to Jacob at the beginning. He went out on his own way and on the strength of his own resources; it was only in the middle of his journey that he encountered the angels of God. And I believe this is typical of the life of every man. We are most of us under a mistake on this point. We often see young people waiting for a special call to some mission—for a manifest intervention of God that says, "This is the way; walk ye in it." I would tell such that the special call does not come at the outset; they must start without it. There is a great difference between not having a special call to go and having a special call not to go. The latter case is a very common one, and it should certainly be taken as a prohibition. Many a man has a family dependent on him for bread. Many a woman has an aged mother to nurse. Many a youth has an ancestral taint of delicacy which incapacitates for active service. All these hear a voice which says, "Do not work to-day in my vineyard." But sometimes a man has no prohibition, but simply an inability to see the full length of the way. In extreme youth I was offered in a crowded town an appointment which involved weekly preaching at two services.

Digitized by Google

I had only twelve sermons, and I did not see where the thirteenth was to come from. I was tempted to decline. But I asked myself the question, "Are you adequate to the twelve?" and I answered "Yes." Then I said to myself: "God's presence will not reveal itself till your own power is exhausted. He has given you twelve talents to begin with. Do not bury them, do not lay them up in a napkin; go in your own strength as far as you can; and on the way He will meet you and light your torch anew." The experience was abundantly realized—but I turn aside from the personal. The principle is as true to you. If there is a multitude to be fed in the wilderness, it is no proof of your disqualification that you have only five loaves. You have five; and that is your call to a beginning. You have probably material for ten people. Minister to the ten! Do not let the eleventh frighten you beforehand! Take each case as it comes! Break the bread as far as it will go! Refuse to paralyse yourself by looking forward! Keep the eleventh man in abeyance until you have come up to him; and then the angels will meet you with their twelve baskets, and the crowd will greet you with their blessings, and the limit will expand into an overflow.

Lord, free me from the dread of to-morrow! I have often heard it said of a man, "He sank beneath the burden and heat of the day." I do not think that is the real experience of life. I have never found insupportable the burden and heat of the day; Thou hast never made that too strong for any man. No, my Father, it is the burden and heat of to-morrow that overwhelm the traveller. Not by the load of present weights, but by the sense of weights to come, do we fall. There are not more drops in my Gethsemane cup than I can bear; but in looking into that cup I see the shadow of something which seems unbearable—to-morrow. I would say with reverence, "Father, let every cup pass from me except the cup of each hour! Veil from me the vision of to-morrow's fear; nay, let me myself veil it! Let me refuse to look at it until the hour has come! Let me decline to measure my strength with a day which has not dawned! I can measure my strength with yesterday, for yesterday is past and my strength for it is chronicled. But my strength for to-morrow is as much in the future as to-morrow itself; it does not yet appear what it shall be. Let me wait for it, O Lord! Let me close the shutters against the threatened cloud! Men tell me that in the midst of the way I shall meet the storm and the roar and the battle; but they forget that in the midst of the way I shall meet also Thy ministering angels."—(Messages of Hope.)

There are more fulfilments to come before Britain is established at the head of a righteous world.

N.B.—The 4 items of No. 1 show the fulfilments in regard to Russia and Germany. The 12 items of No. 2 have greater reference to Britain than to other countries as shown by the inclusion of its leading Statesmen, General and Government. Note the wonderful connection between dates, numbers and events.

It is important that we should pay more attention to the "times and seasons," for obviously there is great truth in the prophecy of Esdras, that "By number hath he numbered the times," and since the foregoing was written, the death of the great Marshal Foch has added to the evidence.

Marshal Foch has died exactly 11 years after the commencement of the German attack of March 21st, 1918, which led up to his appointment of Generalissimo of the Allied Armies and thus practically made him a British General; also this has come in the 11th year of the Armistice which he arranged. Thus the number 11 appears to be most significant at the present time.

GREAT BRITAIN AND ISRAEL.

"THE Historial Connection between Great Britain and Israel" was the subject of an address delivered in Brisbane by Mr. L. P. Knight, M.A., at a meeting of the local Branch of the British-Israel-World Federation.

Mr. Knight said: When Palestine was settled by the Hebrew people the land was divided into twelve sections, and one section given to each of the twelve tribes, the thirteenth tribe, Levi, receiving no province, but, since they were to be the clan of priests, was assigned cities in each of the tribal areas. Subsequently these arrangements were modified, and the final division was as follows: Between the Mediterranean and the Jordan settled Asher, half the tribe of Dan, Zebulon,

Digitized by Google

Naphtali, Issachar, half the tribe of Manasseh, Ephraim, Benjamin, Judah; to the south of Judah was an ill-defined region intended to be settled by Simeon, and a further area set aside for the other half of the tribe of Dan. Across the Jordan dwelt the other half of the tribe of Manasseh, Gad and Reuben. In the treating of our subject we deal firstly with the two sections of the tribe of Dan, then with Asher, Naphtali, Reuben, Gad, and half Manasseh, and lastly with Issachar, Zebulon, half Manasseh and Ephraim, ending with Benjamin.

THE DANITE EMIGRATIONS.

North Dan had become a maritime race in imitation of the Phœnician; South Dan was too far away from and too separated from the other tribes to render much allegiance to judge or king. We see, therefore, a gradual emigration of these two sections overseas, where they intended to develop into independent nations (938–850 B.C.). South Dan emigrated to Argos in Greece under their leader Enoch, whom later historians called Inachus. They taught the original inhabitants, who were then untutored savages, the science of water conservation, well sinking, and irrigation.

North Dan passed over to Cyprus, where they became known as Curetes (Argos, Cyprus, and Curetes are derived from Argob and Cypron, in Palestine respectively. Curetes may be derived from Cypron, the u and y being interchangeable letters, and the letter p having been dropped. But the best authorities hold that the name is derived from the Hebrew word "Cabir," meaning powerful or great men). These Curetes were venerated by other nations for their wisdom. They left Cyprus after some decades and came to Crete (the name of the island is derived from Curetes, the letter u having been dropped). In Crete they were the founders of that ancient civilization of which the modern world has only recently gained cognizance. Leaving Crete they arrived in S.W. Asia Minor. Subsequently they continued their journey northwards and founded a town named Miletus (derived from the Hebrew Millo). The surrounding nations then gave the tribe the name of Milesians. They finally settled in the Troad, where they formed a league of nations with the capital of Dandania or Ilium (Dandania was afterwards corrupted to Dardania). The tribe now returned to their own name, being called after their city (hoi Dardanoi). Whoever caused the Trojan war, the most important nationality taking part were these Dardanoi, who therefore naturally enough gave their name to the combined Troad forces.

On the completion of the war North Dan, or the Dandanoi, crossed the Dardanelles into Thrace, and passing over the river Hebrus (the present Maritza) they came to Dalmatia. We find them again in Spain, where they named Mt. Dardania, and finally they reach Ireland as Milesians about 500 B.C. The Irish historians insist that these Milesians introduced the Semitic language and writing, and came from the land of Miletus. In Ireland the tribe of North Dan meets South Dan, who, having left Argos under pressure of the Doric invasion, travelled through Macedonia as Argeades or men from Argos, thence to Danemorg (portion of Dan), the modern Denmark, where they remained for awhile, and from there to Scotland. From Scotland they removed to Ireland, where they were known to the original inhabitants or rather earlier immigrants as the Tuatha de Danan (tribe of Dan); the Fir Bolgs, a Celtic race (not Gaelic) who had originally come from the region of the Ægean Sea, and who were the forerunners of the Gauls and Belgae from Galatia, disputed the Danites' right of settlement.

A battle was fought in the plain of Moytura, at the foot of a mountain they named Ben Levi, which ended in a complete rout of the Fir Bolgs and their almost total annihilation. The Danites in their turn tried to keep out the Milesians, but all to no avail. They came to terms, and the Danites became junior partners in the Irish firm. They preferred independence; wherefore they returned to Scotland about 330 B.C. They were known as Scots or Sceits, meaning a dispersed people, and gave this name to the land of their adoption. I may add here that the Milesians traced back their lineage to Eber Scot—that is, Hebrew Sceit, the Hebrew nation scattered, a band of emigrants far from home.

Returning to events in Palestine, we come to the Israelitish captivities, comprising:

ASHER - NAPHTALI - REUBEN - GAD AND HALF MANASSEH.

The land of Israel became embroiled with the Assyrian Power, resulting in the transportation of the above tribes to other regions of the Ninevite kingdom, namely, Albania, bordered by the Caucasus and the Caspian Sea and Mygdonia, comprised in the area then known as Armenia (734 B.C. approximately). In 727 B.C. Shalmaneser IV carried away captive Issachar, Zebulon, half Manasseh and Ephraim, and transported them to the same area. Finally, Sargon took Samaria, the capital, in 722 B.C., and finished off the transportation begun by his predecessor Shalmaneser IV.

The now practically empty land of Israel was filled with foreign settlers from other parts of his empire. Now this land of Armenia was known to the Assyrians as Mandaa, from which the original inhabitants had been destroyed. In the tablets of Shalmaneser II and other Assyrian monarchs we find that they referred to the Israelites as Bit Khumra, house of Omri, after one of the most powerful and notorious kings of that nation. When we read therefore of an invasion of Assyria by the Gimirai (pronounced Ghimrai) from Armenia we realize that Reuben, Gad, etc., have made their first attempt at liberty and the overthrow of the Assyrian Empire. They were defeated by Esarhaddon, and part returned to the mountains of Armenia, and went thence via the Caucasus to the N. shore of the Black Sea, to a spot known as Cimbric Chersonesus, while part went westward and attacked the Lydian king Gyges. These also were defeated and subdued 665 B.C., their chief Dugdanne and a lieutenant being sent by Gyges to the Assyrian king, Assurbanipal, who had succeeded Esarhaddon that year, as a present. Assurbanipal did not like Dugdanne and called him "a limb of Satan," from which we probably derive our present-day expression.

In 667 B.C. the other tribes break out, and invading Assyria are defeated by Assurbanipal. Now, Reuben, Gad, etc., again attempt to overthrow the Lydian king, and this time succeeding, they take and burn the capital, Sardis, in 626 B.C., placing their own chief, Atys, on the Lydian throne. But a persistent drought occurred which lasted for nine years, wherefore the king divided his people into two sections, and having cast lots, sent one section by sea from Smyrna to go and find a better land, while he remained in Lydia with the rest. The Lydians, seeing the plight of their conquerors, and that their numbers had been halved by this emigration, rebelled under Abyates and overcame their former lords, reducing them to a state little better than serfdom (617 B.C.).

Digitized by Google

The division which had left Smyrna under Tyrsaeneas arrived in Italy, where they settled for awhile around Lake Avernus. Continuing their journey, after having sent Brython back to fetch their brothers, left behind in Lydia, they reached the Mountains, which they called the Alps, after their land of Albania, on the shores of the Caspian, and finally arrived in the peninsula of Brittany, under their leader, Hu Gadarn. Brython found the other Ghimrai reduced to serfdom. He organized a rebellion, proved victorious, and staged a second exodus. Sailing from Asia they kept too much to the south, and instead of striking Italy, they reached Spain, where they met a party of Ghimrai under Corineus, a branch of those tribes whom we had left north of the Black Sea, and who by this time had reached West Europe.

But more about these later. The parties join and reach the river Loire. There they dwell for some decades and come into Roman view under name of Pictones. Foreign invasion of Celtic tribes compel them to take to the sea again, and they reach Ireland. The Milesians suggest that they go to the big neighbouring island, and the Picts and Peithi find their home in Scotland. The name Peithi is derived probably from Petha, a town in Armenia. The Welsh or Ghimrai or Khimraech call the Picts Brythons. The first division of the Lydian Ghimrai whom we had left in Brittany had already long previously crossed the sea under Prydain, and settled in the west and south of England.

Now the Ghimrai whom we left N. of the Black Sea continued their journey westward through Macedonia, then called Mygdonia, after the land of their captivity: the main body followed the Rhine, and going northwards reached Denmark, which also became known as Cimbric Chersonesus, and crossing the North Sea landed in Great Britain as Ghanbricant (the bands of Ghimrai), which the Romans latinised into Brigantes. The Welsh or Lydian Ghimrai received them gladly, and the Brigantes settled in N. England.

In their passage through Europe some bands had wandered away from the main body, and one such troop being greatly swelled in numbers by other tribes, made themselves unpleasantly known to the Romans as the Cimbri, who inflicted so many defeats on them until they were at last conquered or rather finally driven off by Marius, the consul, in 101 B.C.

Now Ephraim, etc., whom we had left in Armenia, made a second attempt at regaining their liberty, and this time their chief Cyaxares, having allied himself with Nabopolassar, the regent at Babylon, attacked Saracus, the Assyrian king, and besieging Nineveh, took the city, being helped by the phenomenal floods, which carried away the city wall. Please note here that subsequent historians have been led astray by Nabonidus, who identified Ephraim, etc., invading as Uman Mandaa (hordes from Armenia) with the Madaa or Medes, who had been utterly decimated and enslaved by the Assyrian kings and deprived of their country, and at this time were all but non-existent. Cyaxares inaugurated what is known as the Median Empire, but should be known as the Empire of the Manda kings. The Greeks called these Uman Manda Scythians (of Sceits—a nation dispersed; or Sakai or Sacai).

Now, while the king of the Manda had established an empire, his tribes had had only two objects: (1) To overthrow Assyria; (2) to go to a land where they could leave the idolatrous nations far behind and make peace with Jehovah. They continued their journey eastward, leaving their king in oriental splendour to work out his fate. The Manda king was overthrown by Cyrus, and the Mandai or Sacai helped him overthrow Babylon, but they defended their independence, and Cyrus had to allow the Sacai autonomy. The Sacai now dwelt in Bactria, and sent troops as voluntary allies to help Darius the Persian king to overthrow Alexander the Great. The latter gained a victory over Darius at Arbela, and to keep the Sacai from raiding his dominions he built a wall across the Caspian Mountains. The Sacai in their journey eastward came into Magog, the land of Gog, and seem to have been reduced to a state of vassalage by this nation (Koran Sura 18, v. 59-99).

We read in the Norse Saga that the tribe of Benjamin left Palestine when Pompey, the Roman general, overran the country and laid siege to Jerusalem, and travelling in the tracks of their brothers the Sacai, under the leadership of a Levite by the name of Sigge, which name he changed to Odin, defeated Gog and set his fellow tribesmen at liberty. At the head of his five tribes he continued his journey through Europe to Scandinavia and the shore of the North Sea, whence most of his followers crossed over into Great Britain under the name of Anglo-Saxons, Jutes, Danes, and eventually Normans.

We must add here that Cæsar never met the Ghimrai; he only saw the Celts, who had subsequently invaded Great Britain and driven the Gaels or Ghimrai back into the mountains of Wales, Cornwall, Strathclyde, and Cumberland. Numerous place-names along the routes I have described mark and testify to the historical connection between Great Britain and Israel.—Brisbane Telegraph.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

By the Rev. G. H. Lancaster, M.A.

Question.—A few weeks ago a Vicar during his sermon mentioned the command of God to go and utterly destroy all the Amalekites. He said of course God said nothing of the kind; that was the human element in it. I should like to have your version of the Bible command?—S. A. T. (Northants).

Answer.—I do not see how any Christian can deny the actual command given by God through Samuel to Saul. The words are, "Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, I remember that which Amalek did to Israel, how he laid wait for him in the way, when he came up from Egypt. Now go and smite Amalek, and utterly destroy all that they have, and spare them not; but slay both man and woman, infant and suckling, ox and sheep, camel and ass." (1 Sam. xv, 2, 3.) It is quite obvious that the Lord did give the above command, and it is equally obvious that Saul was severely reprimanded for not obeying it fully, and for blaming the people (1 Sam. xv, 10, ff.), for which reason God rejected him from being king (verse 23).

But this does not mean to say that there is no human element in God's dealings with men, since "holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost," which shows that the inspiring Spirit of God used men with their various personalities, failings and faults, as inspired agents, and not necessarily as controlled automatons. No "holy man" has ever been sinless—save Jesus Christ—wherefore inspiration has to allow for the human element while never eliminating the whole fullness of the complete power of God.

On the other hand, allowance has to be made for dispensational development of morality within the scope and practical efficacy of Divine Revelation. The latter is progressive, so that commands which were in some cases given in the Old Testament would not have been given in the New Testament, since by a higher spiritual development in Christ morality advanced. Similarly it will be observed that our modern legislation is much more advanced to-day than it was, say, a century ago. An illustration of this will be apparent in the case of capital punishment, as hanging only takes place nowadays for murder.

Samuel did not consider it an unrighteous command of the Lord to order Saul to exterminate the Amalekites, including their women and children and their cattle also. In his day it was a natural command on the level of the code of morality then in existence. But Our Lord would have given a higher command in His day, and it will be noticed that when He drove out the money changers and the cattle from the Temple (without hurting them) He was very tender and gentle with the doves, saying, "Take these things hence."

But there is a much bigger question involved in the above command given by God to destroy the Amalekites, and in order to appreciate this, a deeper study of Semitic life, religion, manners and customs must be prosecuted more fully. In Old Testament days, before the Hebrews entered the Land, there was a highly-developed Semitic cult, of which we get many interesting glimpses in the Bible. Each tribal people would have its own god or gods; Melcart was the god of Tyre; Milcom was the god of the Ammonites; Chemosh the god of the Moabites; Molech (Moloch) was the heathen god of Jerusalem, and possibly the deity of the ancient Jebusites. "Baal" (Bel) was the general name applied to the god of the high-place, and each Baal-god was regarded as the father of the tribe. We have no clue so far as to the name of the actual Baal-god worshipped by the Amalekites—in fact the only personal name amongst those people known to us is that of "Agag," their king.

Amongst the Semites "religion was patriotism." This meant loyalty to the race, and loyalty to the presiding deity. They had a very convenient way of displaying their religion by patriotism, and their patriotism by religion. If they wanted to go to war with another nation, they would say that their god wanted them to do it. This would then result in their god warring with the other god, and they would presume to take commands from their god (see the Moabite Stone, which tells that Mesha, the king of Moab, was commanded by Chemosh, his god, to go "and take Nebo against Israel"). If they were unluckily beaten in war they would then say that their god was angry with them. If they won they would offer sacrifices of praise to their deity in order to retain more fully his acknowledged pleasure.

This will then help us to understand the above situation regarding Samuel, Saul and the Amalekites. It was quite in accordance with Semitic ideas for the God (Jehovah) of the Hebrews to give a command through Samuel for the King of the Hebrews to war against the Amalekites and to exterminate them. So intensive was the revealed religion of Jehovah that not only were the people's enemies the Lord's enemies, but the gods of the surrounding nations were Jehovah's enemies also (cf. Judg. v, 31). The old Hebrew battle-cry was "El-fights," hence "For the Lord and for Gideon" (Judg. vii, 18, 20—R.V.) was the war-cry for Gideon's victory, and typical of old Hebrew war-cries. All Israel's victorious wars were therefore wars of Jehovah. Hence He was called in comparatively early times, "Jehovah, God of Hosts."

Had the Lord not vindicated His anger at Saul's disobedience by punishing him severely, it would have looked as if He (the God of the Hebrews) were an inferior Deity, since He had given a command which had not been—or could not have been—obeyed. Thus, in accordance with Semitic thought and custom, He would have been lowered in the eyes both of the Hebrews and the Amalekites.

Lest, however, any should think that Jehovah was in any sense a tribal God of the Hebrews, it may be pointed out that whereas He was "The Lord God of Abraham" (Gen. xxviii, 13, etc.), "The Lord God of the Hebrews" (Ex. iii, 18; v, 3; vii, 16; ix, 1; x, 3), "The Lord God of Israel" (Josh. vii, 3, etc.), "The Holy One of Israel" (Isai. i, 4, etc.), in contra-distinction to the local tribal gods above referred to, Jehovah was thus regarded as the Lord God of the Hebrews and of Israel in order that through the Chosen people He might become recognized as the Lord God of all mankind (Isai. vi, 3; xi, 9; Zech. xiv, 16, 17; John iii, 16, etc.).

CORRESPONDENCE.

A STARTLING DISCOVERY.

To the Editor of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER.

SIR,—The rule with Bible chronology is that a part of a year is reckoned as a full year; for example, Zedekiah's reign is given as eleven years, whereas it was actually ten years, four months and nine days. If this rule is applied and an average deduction of half a year is made from all applicable periods, it leads to startling results.

The birth of Abraham, instead of dating 2,009 years from Creation, dates precisely 2,000. The birth of Isaac will be 2,100 and the Exodus 2,500. Disregarding the statement of the period of 1 Kings vi, 1, which appears to have been altered or added, and following the more detailed periods of Acts xiii, 18 to 21, which conform to those given in Judges, we find that the birth of David will be just three millenaries from Creation. If we synchronize the reigns of the kings of Judah with those of Israel, we find the completion of 3,500 years brings us to the centre of the seventy years' captivity, which is the centre of the great millenary "week" of human history.

The rise of Imperial Rome and the Advent and Presence of Our Lord will then come in the first century of the fifth millenary; the Crucifixion, Resurrection, and the descent of the Holy Spirit marking the close of this century.

We do not know the precise year when Athelstane assumed the title of King of All Britain, but it must have about marked the beginning of the sixth millenary, the centre of which witnessed the events that led to the separation of England from France through the instrumentality of Jeanne D'Arc (Joan of Arc).

According to this we have now reached the end of the sixth millenary, and are on the verge of the opening of the great Sabbath millenary, the Millennium.

Does not the application of this accepted principle of a part of a year being reckoned as a whole one provide us with a solution of the problem of human chronology? And if the true solution, how startling its verdict on our present position in it. I append a short summary of this chronology:

	Years.
Creation to Abraham as Gen. v, 3–28; viii, 13, 14; xi, 10–32; and xii, 4—2,009 years, less 9 years' average deductions from 18 patriarchs	2,000
Abraham to Isaac, Gen. xxi, 5	100
Isaac to Exodus, Gen. xv, 13, and Acts vii, 6 ...	400
Exodus to King Saul, 40 and 450 years, Acts xiii, 18–21	490
Kings of Israel and Judah, according to reigns 513 years, less 11 years in which Uzziah reigned concurrently with his father, Amaziah, as is shown by synchronizing with the kings of Israel and also from 2 Kings xiv, 19–21, and 2 Chron. xxv, 27—xxvi, 1, and 8 years' average deductions where synchronizing allows. The 70 sabbatical years of 2 Chron. xxxvi, 20, 21, point to this period being not less than 490 years and not more than 495 years, about	494

WANTED A LEADER.

To the Editor of The National Message and Banner.

Dear Sir,—With the great War, Naval, Military and Parliamentary leaders arose, but not so a Church leader, and how can we to-day, with its rifts and dispirited sections, sing from the heart, "Like a mighty Army moves the Church of God . . . one in doctrine," etc.?

We have notable preachers that provide intellectual treats, but they seem to lack "heat," the essential "Flame of Fire" that should characterize "His Ministers." Verily we need another Luther, for so many are worshipping relics of the tomb rather than the Glorified Risen Lord.

Thank God for The National Message, which sets forth the Bible Truth concerning Britain's identity with Israel, which teaching tends to consolidate the Church. But there is "sin in the camp"; the grave sin of apostasy—the father of most other sins. Hence the need to "cry aloud, spare not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet and show my people their transgression, and the House of Jacob their sins."

Had the National Church been true to label "Defender of the Faith," safeguarding the simple truths uncovered by the Reformation, there would not as now have been a leaderless Church, comprised of a hundred and one competitive sects. Moreover, the troubles that continually beset us are chiefly due to a general "let down" on fundamentals, for verily Jehovah is a jealous God.

So long as Britain is blessed with a Protestant constitution, obviously the National Church should defend Protestant principles. Hence when the true leader appears, Paul-like, he may needs "rebuke them sharply that teach things that they ought not," or like Luther he may resort to hammer and tacks, nailing truth to church doors. Where Temple desecrators are concerned, "The truth as it is in Jesus" may even have to be expressed via a whip! After all, what is "the Faith" for which Protestants should contend? Faith in the Genesis account of Creation—that God the Father Almighty was really "the Maker" of heaven and earth. That grape juice remains "grape juice" in spite of priestly genuflexions and incantations. That Christ "ever liveth to make intercession for us," without the aid of a priestly go-between. Faith to believe Acts i, 11, etc.

Britain is fast exhausting an inherited spiritual bank balance, and unless the semi-Romish priests and professors are speedily unfrocked from Protestant institutions, the hand of a long-suffering jealous God will be against her.

I am, etc.,

A. E. Gay.

To my Correspondents.

Dear Friends and Friendly Acquaintances,—There will many of you be wondering why letters written to me have remained unanswered. The reason is simple. There are set tasks which I must of necessity fulfil. There are others which arise from time to time which will not be denied. After these there remains personal correspondence. I have used up all my available moments and more than my available energy to keep up with correspondence, and have failed. I have used the aid of Secretaries as far as I dare call for it, and have had recourse to multigraph letters. But still there remain a large residuum unanswered, and most of them are not answerable by others.

Please take this as an answer to all. Write again and I shall gladly read your letter. Take the writings which appear from week to week in The National Message and Banner as my effort at reply. You hear from me in the paper. I shall not hear from you except by letter.

Thank God for the fact that such calls are increasing so rapidly. They indicate a marvellous growth in the work we are all engaged in.

Sincerely yours,

W. Pascoe Goard.

M. G. writes from Teignmouth, Devon : "After a most instructive address by the Rev. Commander Roberts, R.N., in the Temperance Hall here, the members of the Teignmouth Branch of the B.-I.-W.F. took the opportunity, with many regrets, of saying good-bye to their Honorary Secretary, Mrs. M. Cooke, who owing to ill-health is leaving for Southbourne. The President, Miss Carr, on behalf of the members, presented to Mrs. Cooke a beautiful electric reading lamp as a token of appreciation of what their beloved leader has done for the British-Israel Cause in the town. For the past twelve years Mrs. Cooke has been an ardent worker, holding Bible Study Circles, etc., and ever ready to be at the call of those desirous of learning British-Israel Truth. She gave a résumé of how the Teignmouth Branch was formed, and of its progress ; the number of speakers from Headquarters, who from time to time have given excellent lectures, and closed by saying that she would like to give a message to all, viz., 'God having provided some better thing.' She urged the members ever to strive after that better thing, Heaven. May God bless Mrs. Cooke and restore her to health and strength. Teignmouth is fortunate in having the Rev. Commander Roberts to carry on the good work. He has been lecturing at Paignton, Exeter and Newton Abbot, and preaching and lecturing in Teignmouth, where also he conducts a fortnightly Bible Class. He is indefatigable in his efforts to spread the Truth."

The Rev. Joseph Gay gave two excellent addresses in the Town Hall, Folkestone, on April 16th, to large and appreciative audiences. His subjects were "The Abrahamic Covenants" and "The Bible—Is It True?" Many testified to having received help and blessing from his lectures. In the afternoon Lt.-Col. Du Pré, D.S.O., presided, and in the evening Frank Fletcher, Esq.

The Vicar of an historic church on the South Coast writes to the Rev. Pascoe Goard : "I have two things to thank you for. First, for the gift of books ; I have already read some of them with more than pleasure. So many of your thoughts run in exactly the same line as my own, and your books are full of thought which supply germs for further thought. The second is for your leading article in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE for April 20th. Some months ago I wrote to Mr. . . . . suggesting that the Low Passage in the Great Pyramid represented just what you suggest. I feel that history will show it to be right."

A Rector in Kent writes : "I thank you for the very acceptable gift of your books which you have so kindly sent me. I shall study them carefully. I am very much impressed with your teaching and that of the Rev. Dr. Mountain, and Bishop Titcomb. I have been impressed for some years with Israel in the Prophets being Israel in fact, and not spiritual Israel or the Church. I ask for your prayers as a co-seeker after the Truth."

We have received a two-column newspaper report of an excellent British-Israel sermon preached by an Anglican Vicar in the Province of Quebec, Canada, on the text : "Thou hast given a banner to them that fear Thee, that it may be displayed because of the truth."—Psalm lx, 4.

H. C. H. writes from Hertfordshire : "I have an old special number of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE which has done splendid propaganda work. It is torn and shabby now with constant use, but it has been the means of convincing many, and of converting them to British-Israel Truth. My husband and I have been believers for many years. We eagerly look forward to your journal each week."

The Rev. T. H. Whitehouse gave one of his most excellent addresses, entitled "Imperishable Britain," to a good audience in the Town Hall, Congleton, Cheshire, on Wednesday night, April 17th. Much preparation, advertising and other propaganda had been done by Mrs. Elson, at whose instigation the meeting was held, the organization being done through the Stoke-on-Trent Branch, the President of which, Mr. A. G. Copeland, took the chair.

The Chairman, in opening, outlined what British-Israel teaching stood for, and Mr. Whitehouse followed, demonstrating why the chosen race had been appointed and for what service in the world, illustrating the Abrahamic Covenants and demonstrating their fulfilment in the British Race of to-day.

Mr. Pamphilon, in proposing a vote of thanks, said that the subject was new to him, and that he was quite open-minded about it, realizing that he could not say he believed in such a big question without adequate study, which he recommended all present to do, saying that any subject which led to a study of the Bible could do nothing but good.

His motion was seconded by two gentlemen, both well acquainted with the subject, affirming that it was one of the most real things which had ever come into their lives and from which they could not get away.

The Daily Chronicle has printed a lengthy review of a book by Mr. Michael Macdonagh, entitled "Sidelights on the English Throne," and in it there is the following paragraph: "The English monarchy is the oldest in the world, and though there have been many dynasties, they have all been more or less akin, and the principle of heredity has been maintained. . . . . Mr. Macdonagh tells us, indeed, that Queen Victoria favoured the theory that the British were descended from Israel, and was convinced of her own descent from the Royal House of David. In 1869, when an Anglican clergyman, the Rev. F. R. Glover, addressed to Her Majesty the results of his researches into her pedigree, which convinced him of her descent from the Psalmist, she was exceedingly pleased, and commanded his attendance at Windsor, when he said she informed him that the descent was part of the secret history of her House, and showed him a Royal pedigree with David as its root."

All of the Toronto Branches have been looking forward to hearing the Rev. Pascoe Goard again. Public meetings are being held on April 25th, 26th and 27th.

An intensive campaign of propaganda is being carried on in Ontario. Thousands of pieces of literature and "Special Messages" have been mailed out, the ladies gathering for an afternoon each week to prepare and mail out this literature.

On Thursday, April 4th, at the Toronto Central Branch, the Rev. F. C. Ward-Whate, Vicar of St. Alban's Cathedral, gave an inspiring address on "The Empires of the World in the Melting Pot." He stated that, as far as he had yet studied the subject, he believed that the British-Israel position was the true one, and that the British Empire was indeed that Kingdom foretold by Daniel which would never be destroyed.

GENERAL LITERATURE

IS THE BIBLE CREDIBLE?

Do you realize that if you accept the Modernist theory of Evolution you deny the Divine inspiration of your Bible?

Modernism and German-made Higher Criticism combine to destroy faith in the truth and the sacredness of our beliefs. God either created man in His own image or He did not, and if not, we are as the beasts that perish.

Dr. McCrossan's book comes as a refreshing draught to a thirsty man, to those who truly believe that God's Word is in the Bible—that God's Word is the Bible. His array of facts and his forceful style chastise the Higher Critic and the Modernist. He takes his stand on God's Word and is unassailable.

Everyone who holds the Christian faith should read

PREHISTORIC LONDON

By E. O. GORDON.

With two appendices by Rev. John Griffith.

Here is a book which gives food for much thought. Of all the books we have published on the early history of the British Race, this proves, perhaps, more deeply than any.

¶ Read herein of the coming of Brutus the Trojan, and the connection between his landing and the twentieth-century customs of Totnes in Devonshire.

¶ Read of the foundation and the growth of our great city.

¶ Read of the development of Druidism, the belief of our early forefathers in the Divine Creator, and in the life Eternal.

¶ Read of the customs of these ancestors, and find in them the true explanation of many of our present ways and ideas; seemingly inexplicable, yet inevitable when their origin is understood. Altogether a most fascinating book.

THE LAW OF THE LORD OR THE COMMON LAW

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

PRAYER: THE GREATEST DYNAMIC IN THE WORLD.

By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard, F.R.G.S.

Prayer! What a wonderful content there is in that well-known word.

What is prayer? It is an old question. It has received many good answers. But the trouble with such question and answer is, that both are forgotten as the generations pass away, each of which has asked and answered it in turn. The question and answer die with the generation so passing; and it becomes necessary to ask and answer the question again.

There was a recurrence of the question a little while ago, and the theological world discussed it from the then existent viewpoint. The answer generally was, that prayer is a devotional exercise beneficial to the worshipper, but having no recognizable effect upon the mind or activity of God.

It will be very generally agreed among the readers of The National Message and Banner that this is an answer which might well die with the generation which gave birth to it; and indeed it is trusted that the answer will die, and be buried before the generation which formulated it has wholly passed.

We come back to the question: "What is prayer?"

In giving an answer to the question we are assured that it will be in essence the answer which has been given by experienced Christians throughout all the ages; and by the experienced Israelite before the Christian dispensation threw its glorious light upon the world.

In order to make answer to the question, "What is prayer?" it will be necessary to outline the field in which prayer plays its part.

The first element of the answer to this question is that the Central Person in the field in which prayer plays its part is God, the Lord.

He introduces Himself to us in varying degrees of intimacy and of relationship. We shall look at these degrees once more, and see how they apply to this matter of the exercise of prayer.

Elohim—God.

By this Name God introduces Himself to us in the sacred Scriptures as the Creator and Sustainer, the Great Architect of the Universe.

This name is used when the Scriptures refer to God as the Creator in His relationship to the material universe. Thus in Psalm xix: "The heavens declare the glory of El, and the firmament sheweth his handiwork."

In this realm, and approached from this standpoint, prayer is universal in the creation. "For we know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now.

"And not only they, but ourselves also, which have the first-fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body."

The next Name is used in the field of Divine relationship to all the human family.

Elyon El—The Most High God.

This is the Name by which is indicated the relationship of God to all the human family.

So in the great chapters which record God's dealings with,

Digitized by Google

and self revelation to, Nebuchadnezzar and the succeeding kings of Babylon, the name used is "The most High." "To the intent that the living may know that the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men . . . " "And at the end of the days I Nebuchadnezzar lifted up mine eyes unto heaven, and mine understanding returned unto me, and I blessed the most High, and I praised and honoured him that liveth for ever . . . ." See Daniel iv.

The relationship of mankind to God is of a more intimate character than is that remainder of the created universe as we know it. That more intimate relationship is indicated in the name Elyon El—the Most High God.

Still another relationship is indicated, and a much more intimate one, by the Name El Shaddai—translated "God Almighty."

This is the Name by which God revealed Himself to Abraham. By it He indicates His Fatherhood to the seed of Abraham, intensified above that which is indicated by Elyon El. The Name begins with the "El" Name, to which is added Shaddai. Now the word Shaddai is formed upon the Hebrew root Shad—breast—and indicates the "nursing Fatherhood" of God. We have taken the term "nursing Father" from the use of the word in Isaiah which occurs as follows: "Kings shall be thy nursing fathers . . . ."

The Name, El Shaddai, is used in connection with the birth of Isaac, and the Saxon seed of Abraham. The Covenant is set forth in the seventeenth chapter of Genesis. The Name there translated, Almighty God, is the Hebrew El Shaddai.

While it is true that the Lord is in some sense the Father of all the human race, and indeed of all the creation, it is nevertheless true that within the scope of the Covenant signed by the Name El Shaddai; of which El Shaddai is the "party of the first part" and of which Abraham is the "party of the second part," the seed of Abraham in all its generations are granted a more intimate relationship, and a closer degree of Fatherhood, on the part of God, and of sonship on the part of the seed of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

A race was herein "created," "formed," "redeemed," "called" and possessed by God for His own purpose, that they might serve as the agents of His own scheme of Government and of Redemption, first for His people, and through them for all the world.

In this connection He says "Fear not, Abram; I am thy shield, and thy exceeding great reward." (Gen. xv, 1.)

We have here the establishment of the household of God in the earth. Both nationally and spiritually all nations henceforth must come to God through this household, of whom Our Lord is the earthly head; and El Shaddai is the heavenly head. Into this household St. Paul tells us all who are in Christ Jesus come and are recorded as members thereof.

How comforting is the conception, and the fact, that El Shaddai gathers His people into the embrace of "the everlasting arms."

Our Lord in the Book of Revelation makes this self declaration: "I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith the Lord, which is, and which was, and which is to come, the ALMIGHTY."

This seems to us to be the equivalent of saying "I am El Shaddai."

It is a comforting thing for all men who are so privileged to be within the scope of the embrace of "the everlasting arms."

Proceeding we come to the Name which has, above all others, a national significance, namely,

JEHOVAH—LORD.

This Name appeared with the appearance of man, in the creation activity of God. See the second chapter of Genesis.

There is no excuse for the assumption of German scholars that the Name Jehovah indicates a different authorship or origin for one thread of the early Scriptures as contrasted with another authorship or origin indicated by the Name Elohim.

Valuable time has been wasted and valuable efforts lost in assuming differences of origin for the Elohistic and the Jehovistic Scriptures, etc. This time and effort might have been spent to great advantage in pursuit of facts which should have been obvious from the beginning regarding the Name. The whole generation which has been bewildered by such strange and erratic teachings of multiple origins would have been strengthened and instructed. As it is, "ignorant men" have wrested to their own and the people's hurt this majestic proof of the unity of the Scriptures and of the Godhead.

The higher the scholarship of those who have thus gone astray, the farther from the truth they have gone. They have turned aside in scholarly ignorance of facts which should have been manifest from the beginning of the question, and scholarly ignorance is more dangerous than the ordinary variety, because it poses as learned, and is followed. Once a wrong turn is taken from the highway of truth, not all the scholarship in the world can save the people who take that path from the sad consequences of error.

The Name Jehovah—an additional Name for the same personal God—appeared when there arrived the opportunity of establishing the relationship with the Adamic family which it indicates. The Name Elohim was not replaced by it, but continues and must continue while the material universe remains with which it is related. The various Names of God are separate threads spun into one strong line of truth regarding one Central Personality.

This Name Jehovah is revealed when the Adamic family appears upon the earth and furnished scope for the active care of Jehovah.

The Name Jehovah becomes national with the sixth chapter of Exodus. There the Name assumes an added significance which it never loses to the end of the Scriptures.

Henceforth it is the Name of that Person Who dwells in the centre of the camp of Israel. As organized in the wilderness, according to the first chapters of the Book of Numbers, the Tabernacle, or dwelling-place of God, is set in the very centre of the camp.

This illustrates the fact that God is in the midst of HIS NATION, and is never absent therefrom.

The time was when the nation knew this, and when they sought the Lord, as in these later days the people seek the King, and rejoice when they have the opportunity to see his face.

The nation and people have lost this consciousness of the immediate Presence of Jehovah; but that Presence, although veiled, has never been withdrawn from Israel—nor from Israel-Britain.

Digitized by Google

The promise is that when the heart of the people shall turn to Him, the veil which hides Him shall be taken away.

The Spirit of this national indwelling is set forth and expressed in the Psalm which begins

"O come, let us sing unto the Lord: let us make a joyful noise to the rock of our salvation.

Let us come before his presence with thanksgiving, and make a joyful noise unto him with psalms.

For the Lord is a great God, and a great King above all gods.

In his hand are the deep places of the earth: the strength of the hills is his also.

The sea is his, and he made it: and his hands formed the dry land.

O come, let us worship and bow down: let us kneel before the Lord our maker.

For he is our God; and we are the people of his pasture, and the sheep of his hand. To day if ye will hear his voice,

Harden not your heart, as in the provocation, and as in the day of temptation in the wilderness:

When your fathers tempted me, proved me, and saw my work.

Forty years long was I grieved with this generation, and said, It is a people that do err in their heart, and they have not known my ways:

Unto whom I sware in my wrath that they should not enter into my rest." (Psalm xcv.)

We have one further Name. "Thou shall call His Name Jesus, for He shall save His people from their sins."

Thus then we are progressively introduced to God in the Word of Divine Truth. Shall we take the privilege of approaching Him in prayer? If so, how shall we approach Him?

Shall we approach Him as Elohim, the Creator, the Great Architect of the Universe? Surely we shall do so. Who can help bowing in spirit before Him, when going abroad in the glories of a spring morning or evening, when all creation is praising the Lord? The glory of the sky blazing with illuminated clouds; the smell of the dew and of the rejuvenated earth, with all its glory of botanical colour and perfume under foot and around; the air filled with the songs of birds, and the voices of contented beasts; while the hum of insect life makes nusic universal, calls us with all nature, as exhorted in the sacred Scriptures, and instructed in the Liturgy, to bow our heads and worship God, the Creator.

Or, shall we join in the worship of God with all the human family, possessed as all are with some kind and degree of God consciousness. Shall we look at the great Brahmin, Buddhist and Mohammedan structures, where men pour out their souls before God, Who is to them a dim consciousness, an unknown Personality. Yes, with all men we shall reach out hands of longing to "the God of the whole earth."

Shall we as part of the family of Abraham, of the household set up by God Almighty, El Shaddai, come closer to Him and realize for ourselves that underneath are the everlasting arms? It is our privilege to do so. Those who are of the physical descent have this assured to them as a birthright. Those who are not of the Abraham descent have this held out to them as a free gift of God, to be entered into by the act of faith which first introduced Abraham, the father of us all, into the experience of imputed righteousness, and into the possession of the promises.

It is thus the Saviour urges us to pray. In the Lord's Prayer there is no NAME for God. It is by the intimate word "OUR FATHER" we are taught to address Him.

Shall we as citizens of His nation, and loyal subjects of His Majesty, come to Him as Jehovah the God and King of Israel?

Yes, we shall do so in all things pertaining to His Kingdom, which He has made our Kingdom also. He declares Himself to be profoundly interested in the welfare of the Kingdom in all its branches and activities. But He has laid it down a rule as follows:—

"Nevertheless I will be enquired of by the House of Israel to do it for them." With this condition we must comply if we are to rejoice in the Divine activity put forward on our behalf as the Israel nation and company of nations.

So, in the final analysis of the national situation, prayer is made the most potent and irresistible power for good in the Israel group of nations, and in the world. By prayer we clear the way for the Lord Jehovah to put forth His Almighty power on our behalf.

God has set His mind to the development and deliverance of Israel. He has it in His purpose to cleanse us individually and nationally from our sins, and to make us fit instruments for the carrying out of His purpose in the earth. This is His declared purpose and immediate desire. The only thing which can effectually prevent His carrying out this purpose is heart alienation of the people of Israel from Him. Now, the very act of prayer brings us to the foot of His Throne. The very contact made with Him in prayer furnishes the chosen avenue for His Grace and His Power to flow towards us. As Moses prayed in the wilderness, the power of God enabled Joshua to vanquish the hosts of Amalek. But when the hands of Moses fell, the enemy prevailed against Israel.

So must it be with our beloved Empire. We are that very Israel "Who are Israelites; to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises.

"Whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen." (Romans ix, 4-5.)

Jehovah is still among us as our King. His purpose is based upon His nation. His Word is pledged to the Kingdom and to the people of the Israel combination. Through the agency and service of these His Word is pledged to all the world. It is the desire of His heart and the purpose of His mind to make the Kingdom and the law of the Kingdom universal in the world. It is a Kingdom in which no slave can live. The Word is still "Proclaim liberty throughout the land and to all the inhabitants thereof." Other nations coming into the Kingdom will step into the administration of the law of perfect liberty.

Within its boundaries is peace. Within its boundaries there shall be prosperity to the exclusion of poverty. In it there shall be the knowledge of Jehovah, as universal as are "the waters which cover the sea."

Digitized by Google

All this blessing, stated and implied, is to be obtained by Israel upon the fulfilment of one condition, namely, "enquiry of the Lord to do it for us." Shall we then, as loyal subjects of the Crown, approach Jehovah our God and King in prayer?

The question arises, What is the position assumed and occupied by Our Lord Jesus Christ in this matter?

He does not offer Himself as the object of our prayers. He offers Himself as the medium of our prayers. "He ever liveth to make intercession for us." So when we humbly approach the Throne, we are conducted into the High and Holy presence of the Father by Jesus Christ the Son. He Himself declared "No man cometh to the Father but by Me."

Every prayer we offer is in the Name of Jesus Christ Our Lord. He is the universal Advocate. He is the "Daysman" Who, taking us by the hand, leads us to the footstool of Our God and King.

In the meantime the Holy Spirit helpeth our infirmity, "making intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered."

The machinery of Divine Grace is perfect, and the approach to God is made easy for every penitent heart. There is no intervention of mortal men, neither priest nor layman; neither father, nor mother, nor friend. The only conductor to the Throne of the Father is Jesus Christ Our Lord, and He is eagerly watching for the opportunity to bring to pass that for which He gave His life, namely, to reconcile us to God.

So then "Let us pray."

"But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly."

PRAYERS FROM THE BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER WHICH MAY BE USED IN OUR BRITISH-ISRAEL MEETINGS.

General Confession.—Almighty and most merciful Father; we have erred, and strayed from Thy ways like lost sheep. We have followed too much the devices and desires of our own hearts. We have offended against Thy holy laws. We have left undone those things which we ought to have done: And we have done those things which we ought not to have done: And there is no health in us. But Thou, O Lord, have mercy upon us, miserable offenders. Spare Thou them, O God, which confess their faults. Restore Thou them that are penitent: According to Thy promises declared unto mankind in Christ Jesu, our Lord. And grant, O most merciful Father, for His sake: That we may hereafter live a godly, righteous, and sober life, To the glory of Thy Holy Name. Amen.

VENITE.

(Psalm xcv.)

O come, let us sing unto the Lord: let us make a joyful noise to the rock of our salvation.

Let us come before his presence with thanksgiving, and make a joyful noise unto him with psalms.

For the Lord is a great God, and a great King above all gods.

Unto whom I sware in my wrath that they should not enter into my rest.

BENEDICTUS.

(St. Luke i, 68.)

Blessed be the Lord God of Israel: for he hath visited, and redeemed his people;

And hath raised up a mighty salvation for us: in the house of his servant David;

As he spake by the mouth of his holy Prophets: which have been since the world began;

That we should be saved from our enemies: and from the hands of all that hate us:

To perform the mercy promised to our forefathers: and to remember his holy Covenant;

To perform the oath which he sware to our forefather Abraham: that he would give us;

That we being delivered out of the hand of our enemies: might serve him without fear;

In holiness and righteousness before him: all the days of our life.

And thou, Child, shalt be called the Prophet of the Highest: for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare his ways;

To give knowledge of salvation unto his people: for the remission of their sins,

Through the tender mercy of our God: whereby the dayspring from on high hath visited us;

To give light to them that sit in darkness, and in the shadow of death: and to guide our feet into the way of peace.

Glory be to the Father, and to the Son: and to the Holy Ghost;

As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be: world without end. Amen.

JUBILATE DEO.

(Psalm c.)

O be joyful in the Lord, all ye lands: serve the Lord with gladness, and come before his presence with a song.

Be ye sure that the Lord he is God: it is he that hath made us, and not we ourselves; we are his people, and the sheep of his pasture.

O go your way into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise: be thankful unto him, and speak good of his Name.

For the Lord is gracious, his mercy is everlasting: and his truth endureth from generation to generation.

Glory be to the Father, and to the Son: and to the Holy Ghost;

As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be: world without end. Amen.

O Lord, shew Thy mercy upon us.

And grant us Thy salvation.

O Lord, save the King.

And mercifully hear us when we call upon Thee.

Endue Thy Ministers with righteousness.

And make Thy chosen people joyful.

And take not Thy Holy Spirit from us.

Prayer for the King.—O Lord our heavenly Father, high and mighty, King of kings, Lord of lords, the only ruler of Princes, Who dost from Thy throne behold all the dwellers upon earth. Most heartily we beseech Thee with Thy favour to behold our most Gracious Sovereign Lord, King George: and so replenish him with the grace of Thy Holy Spirit, that he may always incline to Thy will, and walk in Thy way: Endue him plenteously with heavenly gifts: grant him in health and wealth long to live: strengthen him that he may vanquish and overcome all his enemies: and finally, after this life, he may attain everlasting joy and felicity; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Psalm xcviii.

Psalm lxvii.

Taken from the Litany.—Remember not, Lord, our offences, nor the offences of our forefathers; neither take Thou vengeance of our sins: spare us, good Lord, spare Thy people, whom Thou hast redeemed with Thy most precious blood, and be not angry with us for ever.

Spare us, good Lord.

From all evil and mischief; from sin, from the crafts and assaults of the devil; from Thy wrath, and from everlasting damnation,

Good Lord, deliver us.

From all blindness of heart; from pride, vainglory, and hypocrisy; from envy, hatred, and malice, and all uncharitableness,

Good Lord, deliver us.

From all sedition, privy conspiracy, and rebellion; from all false doctrine, heresy, and schism; from hardness of heart, and contempt of Thy Word and Commandment,

Good Lord, deliver us.

We sinners do beseech Thee to hear us, O Lord God; and that it may please Thee to rule and govern Thy holy Church universal in the right way;

We beseech Thee to hear us, good Lord.

That it may please Thee to illuminate all Bishops, Priests, and Deacons, with true knowledge and understanding of Thy Word; and that both by their preaching and living they may set it forth, and shew it accordingly;

We beseech Thee to hear us, good Lord.

That it may please Thee to endue the Lords of the Council, and all the Nobility, with grace, wisdom, and understanding;

We beseech Thee to hear us, good Lord.

That it may please Thee to bless and keep all Thy people;

We beseech Thee to hear us, good Lord.

That it may please Thee to give to all nations unity, peace, and concord;

We beseech Thee to hear us, good Lord.

That it may please Thee to give us an heart to love and dread Thee, and diligently to live after Thy commandments;

We beseech Thee to hear us, good Lord.

That it may please Thee to give to all Thy people increase of grace to hear meekly Thy Word, and to receive it with pure affection, and to bring forth the fruits of the Spirit;

We beseech Thee to hear us, good Lord.

O God, merciful Father, that despisest not the sighing of a contrite heart, nor the desire of such as be sorrowful; Mercifully assist our prayers that we make before Thee in all our troubles and adversities, whensoever they oppress us; and graciously hear us, that those evils, which the craft and subtilty of the devil or man worketh against us, be brought to nought; and by the providence of Thy goodness they may be dispersed; that we Thy servants, being hurt by no persecutions, may evermore give thanks unto Thee in Thy holy Church; through Jesus Christ our Lord.

O Lord, arise, help us, and deliver us for Thy Name's sake.

O God, we have heard with our ears, and our fathers have declared unto us, the noble works that Thou didst in their days, and in the old time before them.

O Lord, arise, help us, and deliver us for Thine honour.

Glory be to the Father, and to the Son: and to the Holy Ghost;

As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be: world without end. Amen.

From our enemies defend us, O Christ.
Graciously look upon our afflictions.
Pitifully behold the sorrows of our hearts.
Mercifully forgive the sins of Thy people.
Favourably with mercy hear our prayers.
O Son of David, have mercy upon us.
Both now and ever vouchsafe to hear us, O Christ.
Graciously hear us, O Christ; graciously hear us, O Lord Christ.
O Lord, let Thy mercy be shewed upon us;
As we do put our trust in Thee.

For the High Court of Parliament.—Most gracious God, we humbly beseech Thee, as for this Kingdom in general, so especially for the High Court of Parliament, under our most religious and gracious King at this time assembled: That thou wouldest be pleased to direct and prosper all their consultations to the advancement of Thy glory, the good of Thy Church, the safety, honour and welfare of our Sovereign, and his Dominions: that all things may be so ordered and settled by their endeavours, upon the best and surest foundations, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety, may be established among us for all generations. These and all other necessaries, for them, for us, and Thy whole Church, we humbly beg in the Name and Mediation of Jesus Christ our most blessed Lord and Saviour. Amen.

Fourth Sunday in Advent. The Collect.—O Lord, raise up (we pray Thee) Thy power, and come among us, and with great might succour us: that whereas, through our sins and wickedness, we are sore let and hindered in running the race that is set before us, Thy bountiful grace and mercy may speedily help and deliver us; through the satisfaction of Thy Son our Lord, to Whom with Thee and the Holy Ghost be honour and glory, world without end. Amen.

First Sunday after the Epiphany. The Collect.—O Lord, we beseech Thee mercifully to receive the prayers of Thy people which call upon Thee: and grant that they may both perceive and know what things they ought to do, and also may have grace and power faithfully to fulfil the same; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Almighty and everlasting God, mercifully look down upon our infirmities, and in all our dangers and necessities, stretch forth Thy right hand to help and defend us: through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Communion.—Assist us mercifully, O Lord, in these our supplications and prayers, and dispose the way of Thy servants towards the attainment of everlasting salvation: that, among all the changes and chances of this mortal life, they may ever be defended by Thy most gracious and ready help: through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Prevent us, O Lord, in all our doings with Thy most gracious favour, and further us with Thy continual help; that in all our works begun, continued, and ended in Thee, we may glorify Thy Holy Name, and finally by Thy mercy obtain everlasting life; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Almighty God, Who hast promised to hear the petitions of them that ask in Thy Son's Name: We beseech Thee mercifully to incline Thine ears to us that have made now our prayers and supplications unto Thee: And grant, that those things, which we have faithfully asked according to Thy will, may effectually be obtained, to the relief of our necessity, and to the setting forth of Thy glory; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Extemporaneous Prayer.—Almighty God, Who didst constitute Thyself the everlasting Father of Thy people, and Who didst further constitute Thyself the King of kings in Israel, we humbly approach Thy footstool.

Thou hast made us to know that in Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, Thou didst call the seed of Abraham in all their generations for ever; didst predestinate them to be a kingdom of priests unto Thyself, setting them aside that, as Thy servants, they might minister to the nations. Thou didst develop the people into "an holy nation" and didst establish Thyself therein at Sinai, giving to the people Thy holy law, and establishing among the people Thy holy worship, which is our continued heritage.

Thou didst establish in the nation the house of Thy servant David, anointing him and his descendants to rule over the house of Israel for ever.

Thou didst establish the kingdom of Judah to be Thy sanctuary, and the kingdom of Israel to be Thy dominion, separating them, and appointing to each kingdom its separate task.

Thou didst lead Israel like a flock through the "wilderness of the people," and didst ultimately establish them in this, the appointed place, to which in Thy Providence the house of David had preceded them; And didst there bring them together: Thine anointed King to rule over Thine appointed people, and hast there preserved them to the present day.

Thou didst cause the captivity of Judah to be revoked: and didst lead a moiety of the people back from Babylon to the land of their fathers, there to rebuild Thy holy city, and to re-establish Thy holy worship.

To that city in the fullness of time Our Lord came, taking upon Himself "the seed of Abraham": there He accomplished His ministry, His death, His resurrection, and His ascension to the right hand of the Majesty on High.

To the Jews He declared "therefore the kingdom is taken from you and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof."

By the assured word of Holy Scripture we know that nation to have been Israel, to which at last Judah should walk, and so be reunited in the kingdom of Israel.

Thou hast caused us to know that we, Thy servants, are still Thy kingdom of priests, and Thy holy nation, set apart for the service of the kingdom and the uplifting of humanity.

Now, therefore, we, the present generation of Israel, pray that the remnant of Judah may be speedily brought to the knowledge of Jesus Christ, the Redeemer of Israel and the Saviour of men.

We further pray that we Thy people Israel may be restored to the consciousness of our inheritance in Thee: and may be brought to repentance and restoration to full rulership with God.

We confess before Thee the sins of our fathers, and that the sins of our fathers, and more, are our sins; we pray for forgiveness, and for cleansing according to Thy Word.

We pray that the glory of the Lord may arise upon us, according to Thy promise: and that we may carry the light of the Gospel and the knowledge of Thee, Our God, to the ends of the earth. Amen.

O Lord, shew Thy mercy upon us.
And grant us Thy salvation.
O Lord, save the King.
And mercifully hear us when we call upon Thee.
Endue Thy ministers with righteousness.
And make Thy chosen people joyful.
O Lord, save Thy people.
And bless Thine inheritance.
Give peace in our time, O Lord.
Because there is none other that fighteth for us, but only Thou, O God.
O God, make clean our hearts within us.
And take not Thy holy Spirit from us.

And so will we magnify and glorify Thy Holy Name, through our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRAYER.

BY THE REV. COMMANDER L. G. A. ROBERTS, R.N.

"WE know not what we should pray for as we ought: but the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered. And He that searcheth the hearts knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit, because He maketh intercession for the saints according to the Will of God." —Rom. viii, 26-27.

"Ask me of things to come concerning my sons, and concerning the work of my hands command ye me."—Isa. xlv, 11.

"I will be enquired of by the house of Israel to do it for them."

We have had wonderful instance of answer to prayer. When we were led to come to No. 6, Buckingham Gate we made our request known unto God, pleading, if it was His Will. The answer was immediate, and above our expectations. Another instance, when shortly after we sought guidance, the answer again was immediate.

In the Lord's work never act without His approval. We are at present, as it were, in a half-hour's silence looking upon the things which are coming.

This is the opportunity for prayer before greater trouble comes.

In everything by prayer and supplication make your requests known unto God; but do not omit thanksgiving for past love. A grateful heart makes a cheerful recipient. Prayer, of course, is the result of urgent necessity and deep conviction that He to Whom we come has the power to grant our request. The more one realizes the love and relationship of Him to Whom our prayer is addressed, the more assured will the answer be to our petition.

We must not only believe that He is, and Who He is, but also that He is able to do what we ask. Again, we must ask in accordance with His will, and with the knowledge that what we ask is for, not only our good, but His glory. The Lord's Prayer itself is our model. Let us first seek the honour due to His Name, the Kingdom of God first, His will over all: "Not as I will, but as Thou wilt"; then for ourselves, the things which go to make up our own status in order that the desire we present may be untainted with selfishness, or lack of love to those around us, even to the forgiveness of those who have offended us.

We could name numerous instances in our own experience in which prayer has been directly answered, even above our expectations. Our own progress as a work for God's glory has been the result of very earnest and believing prayer, and our object has been for the advancement of His Kingdom and righteousness. The Lord Jesus Christ is God, to Him we appeal; He is man, He knows our wants and all our weakness. He will sift out anything wrong in our method or motive of approach if we unfeignedly trust Him. Trust ye in the Lord Jehovah, for in the Lord is everlasting strength.

CONTINUE IN PRAYER.

BY THE REV. ARTHUR PRITCHARD, M.A.

THREE Greek words in Col. iv, 2 are so translated in the A.V., but the R.V. adds "steadfastly," whereas other translations suggest "Persevere with prayer," "Devote yourselves to prayer," "Be earnest and unwearied in prayer." The Greek verb is a metaphor taken from hunting dogs that never give over the game till they have obtained their prey or prize. A Christian must not only pray but hold on, in prayer, till he has obtained the heavenly prize. We all know what it is to hold on to a thing we don't wish to lose. A lady, when asked to write out the fourth Commandment, began with: "Remember that thou keep hold on the Sabbath day." Happy are the people who "keep hold on" the Sabbath day and happy the results of people who "hold on" in prayer. Continue praying until the blessing is secured. It is the lesson of importunity taught by Our Lord under the strong imagery of a double parable: The Unjust Judge and the Friend in Need.

"Continue steadfastly in prayer." What is the good?

I. Can men change the Mind, the Will of God? Yes, certainly as to means if not as to final results. The Bible is full of instances. God sent Isaiah to Hezekiah to say, "Thou shalt die and not live." The king prayed and God sent His prophet apparently in the same hour to say, "I have heard thy prayer, and I will add unto thy days fifteen years."

And the life of George Muller, of Bristol, is also full of instances. He kept a faithful record of his prayers and answers, and in 50,000 cases he calculated that he could trace distinct answers to definite prayers.

II. Will God, the Unchangeable, go on working miracles every day at the request of changeable man?

Yes, the hand that moves the universe is prayer. Five Greek words in James v, 16 are translated in the R.V. by eleven English words: "The supplication of a righteous man availeth much in its working." The Cause of Causes can interfere with visible as well as remote causes and can fix, determine or change what chain of events He pleases. But, since Christ promised that greater works would be done after His death than in His lifetime, we mustn't look so much for the lesser works, the miracles of Nature, but for the greater ones, the miracles of Grace—the changing of the slave of passion into the servant of Christ, the changing of the curse, "Thou shalt surely die," into the blessing, "Thou shalt surely live."

III. Since God is good, won't He give His blessings without being importuned for them? Yes, "He giveth to all men liberally" all the blessings of Nature, but the blessings of Grace it is the Father's will to give to His trustful children only as they ask for them, only as they need them, only as will be good in the long run for them.

Hence we musn't always expect God to answer our prayers in our own way and at our own time. Christ, in His human weakness, prayed in Gethsemane, and He "was heard." That is, the Father gave Him the requisite strength to go through His unparalleled experiences. There was the good of praying. And what was good in the Master's case must be equally so in the case of all His servants.

What is the good of praying?

Let the answers come thick and fast, the answers that Christians can give to one another. Because God heareth prayer. Because God answers all true prayer either in kind or in kindness. Because our Father is able and willing to change His attitude to the sons of men when they change their attitude to Him. Because we are always in need of spiritual health and strength. Because prayer brings us nearer to God, and the nearer and the oftener we come to God, the more we shall be like Him and like Moses, too, when he brought back a bright shining from the Mount. Because it brings us into the right relation with our Heavenly Father, Who gives to us His abiding peace. Because it encourages us in the drudgery of life. Because it stimulates us in our journey heavenward. Because this world of ours is like an organ (not a barrel organ to which the fatalist would liken it), but a keyboard organ, on which, without violating one of those laws on which the forces of the organ act, the organist may play what melody he will. Even the prayer of a child may change the tune. Because, because, why, there is no end to them. Every book in the Bible save one contains references to prayer. The one exception is the single chapter of Obadiah, but as "Obadiah" means "worshipper of the Lord" it really is no exception after all. We may therefore conclude that prayer is the golden link which binds all the books of the Bible together. Let prayer be the golden link which binds all our years, weeks, months, days and hours together.

"Continue in prayer." "Evening and morning and at noon will I pray and He shall hear my voice." So said the Psalmist; and Daniel, Prime Minister of Persia, with 120 Provinces on his mind, found time to go into his chamber three times a day that he might pray and give thanks to God. "Go and do thou likewise." In the morning wait on the Lord. Throughout the day live for the Lord, and when the season of night comes on thou shalt rest in the Lord.

"BEHOLD HE PRAYETH."

By the Rev. J. Lumley Davies, L.D.

When we are told of Saul of Tarsus "Behold he prayeth," was this the first time he ever prayed? Having lived a Pharisee of the strictest sect, he was scrupulous in his observance of religious duties: he had said his prayers thousands of times, but it may be that he now prayed for the first time. A converted man once said:—"Before my conversion, when I prayed in the presence of others, I prayed to them: when I prayed in secret I prayed to myself: but now I pray to God."

Prayer is at once the most easy and the most difficult of all our spiritual exercises, and it may be that we are more forward with other matters than we are with our prayers. Our sermons, collections, music, and our organizing powers—they are all better than our prayers, and because of this we do not progress as well as we would desire. An old Welsh preacher said that Christian communities resemble a large factory in which all internal arrangements are faultless, every wheel in its place, and every screw, spindle and cog perfect, and yet the whole concern is at a standstill with the exception of a revolution or two. Presently the sluices are raised, and the floodgates roll back. Mark the difference: the ponderous machinery revolves with a whirl, the building resounds from roof to foundation, every part seems charged as with electricity. What is the moral? Let us by prayer open the floodgates, and "there shall be showers of blessing." We have made more than "a revolution or two," and for this we thank God; but the battle against sin in the form of indifference, prejudice, and vituperous attacks is stern, and we do not make headway as we would like.

How to promote the revival our hearts desire? Have we to wait any particular time for it? No: "Thy Kingdom come" is the believer's daily wish. "Now is the accepted time." The "day of salvation" has dawned, the Sacrifice has been offered, the Holy Spirit has been given. We need not wait, let prayer be made at once. Is it necessary to have any change in our method of working, and more variety introduced? Some contend that old "ruts" should be abandoned, and new lines adopted, in order to keep pace with the age. But if we look at the number of religious sects in action to-day, with their various methods and operations, we can hardly think of a new plan. Those who seek variety will find it if they look round. If variety is charming, the Christian world can supply the charm. Societies bubble into existence and the market is stocked with a variety of doctrines. In the pursuit for novelty, Christian believers would do well for themselves and for others if they asked "for the old paths."

"Ask for the old paths." We are not a new sect, and we have no new creed to issue. We are simply working along "the old paths" prescribed by the law of God, the written Word, that true standard of antiquity (as Matthew Henry says). Our method is right, but we need more prayer for the Divine. Let us pray that the Holy Spirit may tenant every heart. Pray, Pray, Pray. Our machinery is in order. What we need to-day is not more head-power, nor tongue-power, nor heart-power, but more God-power; and this God-power (literally His dynamite = dunamis) will remove all stubborn obstacles. "And ye shall know that I am in the midst of Israel, and that I am the Lord your God, and none else: and my people shall never be afraid."

A REMARKABLE EXAMPLE OF ANSWER TO PRAYER.

"One of the most remarkable illustrations in recent times of the power of prayer may be found in the experience of Mr. Moody. It explains his unparalleled career of world-wide soul winning. One marvels that more has not been said of it. Its stimulus to faith is great. I suppose the man most concerned did not speak of it much because of his fine modesty. The last year of his life he referred to it more frequently as though impelled to.

The last time I heard Mr. Moody was in his own church in Chicago. It was, I think, in the fall of the last year of his life. One morning in the old church made famous by his early work, in a quiet conversational way he told the story. It was back in the early seventies, when Chicago had been laid in ashes. "This building was not yet up far enough to do much in," he said; "so I thought I would slip across the water, and learn what I could from preachers there, so as to do better work here. I had gone over to London, and was running around after men there." Then he told of going one evening to hear Mr. Spurgeon in the Metropolitan Tabernacle ; and understanding that he was to speak a second time that evening to dedicate a chapel, Mr. Moody had slipped out of the building, and had run along the street after Mr. Spurgeon's carriage a mile or so, so as to hear him the second time. Then he smiled, and said quietly, " I was running around after men like that."

He had not been speaking anywhere, he said, but listening to others. One day, Saturday, at noon, he had gone into the meeting in Exeter Hall on the Strand ; felt impelled to speak a little when the meeting was thrown open, and did so. At the close among others who greeted him, one man, a minister, asked him to come and preach for him the next day morning and night, and he said he would. Mr. Moody said, " I went to the morning service and found a large church full of people. And when the time came I began to speak to them. But it seemed the hardest talking ever I did. There was no response in their faces. They seemed as though carved out of stone or ice. And I was having a hard time : and wished I wasn't there ; and wished I hadn't promised to speak again at night. But I had promised, and so I went.

" At night it was the same thing ; house full, people outwardly respectful, but no interest, no response. And I was having a hard time again. When about half-way through my talk there came a change. It seemed as though the windows of heaven had opened and a bit of breath blew down. The atmosphere of the building seemed to change. The people's faces changed. It impressed me so that when I finished speaking I gave the invitation for those who wanted to be Christians to rise. I thought there might be a few. And to my immense surprise the people got up in groups, pews-full. I turned to the minister and said, ' What does this mean ? ' He said, ' I don't know, I'm sure.' Well," Mr. Moody said, " they misunderstood me. I'll explain what I meant." So he announced an after-meeting in the room below, explaining who were invited : only those who wanted to be Christians ; and putting pretty clearly what he understood that to mean, dismissed the service.

They went to the lower room. And the people came crowding, jamming in below, filling all available space, seats, aisles, and standing room. Mr. Moody talked again a few minutes, and then asked those who would be Christians to rise. This time he knew he had made his meaning clear. They got up in clumps, in groups, by fifties ! Mr. Moody said, " I turned and said to the minister, ' What does this mean ?' He said, ' I'm sure I don't know.' " Then the minister said to Mr. Moody, " What'll I do with these people ? I don't know what to do with them ; this is something new." And he said, " Well, I'd announce a meeting for to-morrow night, and Tuesday night, and see what comes of it ; I'm going across the channel to Dublin." And he went, but he had barely stepped off the boat when a cablegram was handed him from the minister, saying, " Come back at once. Church packed." So he went back, and stayed ten days. And the result of that ten days, as I recall Mr. Moody's words, was that four hundred were added to that church, and that every church near by felt the impulse of those ten days. Then Mr. Moody dropped his head, as though thinking back, and said : " I had no plans beyond this church. I supposed my life work was here. But the result with me was that I was given a roving commission, and have been working under it ever since."

Now what was the explanation of that marvellous Sunday and days following ? It was not Mr. Moody's doing, though he was a leader whom God could and did mightily use. It was not the minister's doing ; for he was as greatly surprised as the leader. There was some secret hidden beneath the surface of those ten days. With his usual keenness Mr. Moody set himself to ferret it out.

By and by this incident came to him. A member of the church, a woman, had been taken sick some time before. Then she grew worse. Then the physician told her that she would not recover. That is, she would not die at once, so far as he could judge, but she would be shut in her home for years. And she lay there trying to think what that meant ; to be shut in for years. And she thought of her life, and said, " How little I've done for God : practically nothing : and now what can I do shut in here on my back ? " And she said, " I can pray."

May I put this word in here as a parenthesis in the story—that God oftentimes allows us to be shut in—He does not shut us in—He does not need to—simply takes His hand off partly—there is enough disobedience to His law of our bodies all the time to shut us aside—no trouble on that side of the problem—with pain to Himself, against His own first will for us, He allows us to be shut in, because only so can He get our attention from other things to what He wants done ; get us to see things and think things His way. I am compelled to think it is so.

She said, " I will pray." And she was led to pray for her church. Her sister, also a member of the church, lived with her, and was her link with the outer world. Sundays, after church service, the sick woman would ask, " Any special interest in church to-day ? " " No," was the constant reply. Wednesday nights, after prayer-meetings, " Any special interest in the service to-night ? there must have been." " No ; nothing new ; same old deacons made the same old prayers."

But one Sunday noon the sister came in from service and asked, " Who do you think preached to-day ? " " I don't know, who ? " " Why a stranger from America, a man called Moody I think was the name." And the sick woman's face turned a bit whiter, and her eye looked half scared, and her lip trembled a bit, and she quietly said ; " I know what that means. There's something coming to the old church. Don't bring me any dinner. I must spend this afternoon in prayer." And so she did. And that night in the service that startling change came.

Then to Mr. Moody, himself, as he sought her out in her sick room, she told how nearly two years before there came into her hands a copy of a paper published in Chicago called the Watchman that contained a talk by Mr. Moody in one of the Chicago meetings, Farwell Hall meetings, I think. All she knew was that talk had made her heart burn, and there was the name M-o-o-d-y. And she was led to pray that God would send that man into their church in London. As simple a prayer as that.

Digitized by Google

And the months went by, and a year, and over; still she prayed. Nobody knew of it but herself and God. No change seemed to come. Still she prayed. And of course her prayer wrought its purpose. Every Spirit-suggested prayer does. And that is the touchstone of true prayer. And the Spirit of God moved that man of God over to the seaboard, and across the water and into London, and into their church. Then a bit of special siege-prayer, a sort of last charge up the steep hill, and that night the victory came."

S. D. GORDON, "Quiet Talks on Prayer."

DEFINITIONS OF PRAYER.

BEGINNING OF PRAYER.

IN every building the first stone must be laid, and the first blow must be struck. The Ark was one hundred and twenty years in building; yet there was a day when Noah laid his axe to the first tree he cut down to form it. The Temple of Solomon was a glorious building, but there was a day when the first huge stone was laid at the foot of Mount Moriah. When does the building of the Spirit really begin to appear in a man's heart? It begins, so far as we can judge, when he first pours out his heart to God in prayer.—BISHOP RYLE.

PRAYER BREVITIES.

When thou prayest rather let thy heart be without words, than thy words without heart. Prayer will make a man cease from sin, or sin will entice a man to cease from prayer. The spirit of prayer is more precious than treasures of gold and silver. Pray often; for prayer is a shield to the soul, a sacrifice to God, and a scourge for Satan.—JOHN BUNYAN.

BUSINESS AND PRAYER.

The greater thy business is, by so much the more thou hast need to pray for God's good-speed and blessing upon it, seeing it is certain nothing can prosper without His blessing. The time spent in prayer never hinders, but furthers and prospers a man's journey and business; therefore, though thy haste be never so much, or thy business never so great, yet go not about it, nor out of thy doors, till thou hast prayed.—BISHOP BAYLEY.

DEFINITENESS IN PRAYER.

A Christian lawyer lost some legal papers of great value at a critical time, as they were required in a case at nine o'clock next morning. He hunted the office through in vain. He then resorted to prayer, and asked God to relieve him before the appointed hour. He was at his office early, and a quarter before nine a stranger entered and handed him a parcel, which was found to contain the missing papers.

DIRECTION OF PRAYER.

We must come to God in the Name of Christ, then He will be our bondsman, surety, indorser, intercessor with the Father. He will present our petition, and plead His own merits in our behalf; and He never pleads in vain. As the high priest, under the Levitical dispensation, entered the Holy of Holies once a year, bearing the names of the chosen tribes on his breastplate, so the great High Priest of our profession now stands in the holiest of all, bearing the name of every follower and friend on his heart. When you send up your prayers, be sure to direct them to the care of the Redeemer, and then they will never miscarry.—MATTHEW HENRY.

DISCOVERIES OF PRAYER.

A man bought a house and lot for one hundred pounds, which he was to pay by instalments. During his life he paid all but ten pounds. His widow managed to raise this balance, and went with it to redeem the estate. She was then informed that she must produce the receipts, or the property would be sold to pay the debt. The distressed widow searched her house through for them, but in vain. Her little son suggested that Jesus would help them in their trouble. So they prayed to Him about it. As they rose from prayer a brilliant firefly darted into the window, wheeled around the room, and then settled down under an old chest of drawers. The boy had it pulled out a little, that he might catch the insect, and as it moved, out fell the lost receipts. An angel from heaven could not have revealed the receipts more successfully or opportunely than did the straying firefly.

AGENCY OF PRAYER.

Prayer can obtain everything; can open the windows of heaven and shut the gates of hell; can put a holy constraint upon God, and detain an angel till he leaves a blessing; can open the treasures of rain, and soften the iron ribs of rocks till they melt into a flowing river; can arrest the sun in his course, and send the winds upon our errands.—JEREMY TAYLOR.

ANSWER TO PRAYER.

A minister related the case of a little boy with a sore hand which had become so bad that the physician decided it must be amputated to save the boy's life. The day was fixed for the operation. On hearing this, the boy went to a retired spot, fell on his knees, and begged God, for Jesus' sake, to save his poor hand. The next day the physician came and examined the hand, when, to the astonishment of all, it was found to be so much better that amputation was unnecessary. The hand got quite well again, the little boy grew up to be a man, "and," continued the minister, holding up his right hand, "this unworthy hand can now be shown to you as a monument of prayer answered through Divine mercy."

ACCESS IN PRAYER.

However early in the morning you seek the gate of access, you find it already open, and however deep the midnight moment when you find yourself in the sudden arms of death, the winged prayer can bring an instant Saviour; and this wherever you are. It needs not that you ascend some special Pisgah or Moriah. It needs not that you should enter some awful shrine, or pull off your shoes on some holy ground. Could a memento be reared on every spot from which an acceptable prayer has passed away, and on which a prompt answer has come down, we should find Jehovah Shammah, "the Lord hath been here," inscribed on many a cottage hearth, and many a dungeon floor. We should find it not only in Jerusalem's proud temple and David's cedar galleries, but in the fisherman's cottage by the brink of the Gennesareth, and in the upper chamber where Pentecost began. And whether it be the field where Isaac went down to meditate, or the rocky knoll where Israel wrestled, or the den where Daniel gazed on the hungry lions, and the lions gazed on him, or the hillside where the Man of Sorrows prayed all night, we should still discern the ladder's feet let down from heaven—the landing-place of mercies, because the starting-place of prayer.—DR. J. HAMILTON.

POWER OF PRAYER.

At the close of a prayer meeting, the pastor observed a little girl of about twelve years of age remaining upon her knees when most of the congregation had retired. Thinking the child had fallen asleep he touched her, and told her it was time to return home. To his surprise he found that she was engaged in prayer, and he said, "All things whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive." She looked at her pastor earnestly and inquired, "Is it so? Does God say that?" He took up a Bible and read the passage aloud. She immediately commenced praying, "Lord, send my father to the church; Lord, send my father here!" Thus she continued for about half an hour, attracting by her earnest cry the attention of persons who had lingered about the door. At last, a man rushed into the church, ran up the aisle, and sank upon his knees by the side of his child, exclaiming "What do you want of me?" She threw her arms about his neck, and began to pray, "O Lord, convert my father!" Soon the man's heart was melted, and he began to pray for himself. The child's father was three miles from the church when she commenced praying for him. He was packing goods in a wagon, and he felt an irresistible impulse to return home. Driving rapidly to his house, he left the goods in the wagon, and hastened to the church, where he found his daughter crying mightily to God on his behalf, and he was there led to the Saviour.

NO UNANSWERED PRAYER.

There is no such thing in the long history of God's kingdom as an unanswered prayer. Every true desire from a child's heart finds some true answer in the heart of God. Most certain it is that the prayer of the Church of God since creation has not been the cry of orphans in an empty home, without a father to hear or answer. Jesus Christ did not pray in vain, or to an unknown God, nor has He spoken in ignorance of God or of His brethren when He says, "Ask and receive, that your joy may be full."—NORMAN MACLEOD.

PRESENTING PRAYER.

Nehemiah obtained a commission from King Xerxes to rebuild the city and temple of Jerusalem, and also requisitions for aid of all kinds upon Adeus, Governor of Syria, and others. Nehemiah took these letters up to Jerusalem with him, there presented them to the Lord, and then sent them on their way. When Sennacherib sent his letter of defiance of the living God to Hezekiah, he spread it out before the Lord, and the Lord answered him by a letter by the hand of Isaiah. It was a literal reply to his petition, and assured his heart. It was followed by the signal overthrow of Sennacherib's host. That night the angel of the Lord passed through the camp of the Assyrians and slew one hundred and eighty-five thousand of them. Nehemiah lays his epistles of encouragement before the Lord when he goes to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem, and the Lord gives him success. Hezekiah lays open the proud and boastful Assyrian's letter of insult to the living God, and pleads for vengeance and the preservation of the city, and the Lord sends Sennacherib the most signal defeat in all the annals of war.—2 Kings xix.

BIBLICAL BIOGRAPHY.

BY J. G.

NAOMI—OBED'S NURSE.

Call me not Naomi, call me Mara.—Ruth i, 20.

THE book of Ruth is a peculiar treasure of the Bible. Its name arrests. The character it unfolds demands attention and wins our admiration. It is chiefly concerned with a Moabitess who came into the line of descent through David to Christ. Indeed it is for that very reason that the story is told. It was while the judges ruled in Israel that a certain man, Elimelech by name, left his home in Bethlehem-Judah to sojourn in the land of Moab. It was perhaps natural that he should seek to escape from famine with all its accompanying hardships. From the experiences through which he and his passed, it would appear that he made a mistake when he left his home. One cannot help thinking as he reads the story that he would have fared better if he had trusted God a little more and remained where he was. Abram, under the same pressure, went down into Egypt, so did Jacob, and both fared badly, returning with bitter experiences. He is never privileged to see his home again, nor gaze upon his inheritance in Bethlehem. He dies and so also his two sons after having taken to themselves wives amongst the daughters of Moab. Naomi, his wife, now a widow, doubly bereaved of husband and sons, hearing that the famine had passed away, determined to return to her home from whence possibly she had reluctantly accompanied her husband when she could not dissuade him from his purpose. It was a very sad and sorrowful home-coming for her, and she crept into Bethlehem as quietly as she could, hiding herself for very shame. The difficulties of her life were indeed very great, but the shame was greater. No one to care for her, no one to defend her and secure for her the inheritance which was lost to her when Elimelech left the homestead. In this woman we have a sad picture of sorrowful loneliness. The tone in which her old friends and associates recognized her contained a dagger which went straight through the heart. "This Naomi?" Surely not. This, the proud mother of sons, whose house seemed in them established for ever? It cannot be. Why has she returned only to see the ruin of her house and the emptiness of her family sepulchre, for her husband and sons lie in the unhallowed graves of a heathen land? All this while Ruth stands in the shadow alone and neglected. She counts for nothing. If she were a subject for notice at all it would only be for further commiseration. "Oh! that this Moabitess should have returned with you" I fancy I can hear some say—"only to perpetually remind you of your sorrow, the tragedy of your life, which it would be better for all concerned that you should forget, and also to add to your daily care." And Naomi acquiesces in the judgment thus pronounced upon her. "Call me not Naomi, call me Mara." "Call me not pleasant, that is what I was, a happy wife, and a proud mother. Call me bitter, for that more nearly describes me now."

Digitized by Google

I have chosen to call this a wrong perspective, and it will not be difficult to show that this is even so.

Notice 1.—The vision of the past as Naomi saw it and interpreted it. "I went out full and the Lord hath brought me home again, empty: why call me Naomi, seeing the Lord hath testified against me, and the Almighty hath afflicted me?" The vision she saw was indeed a dark one. The picture is painted in dark and sombre hues, without any lighter shade to relieve the surrounding gloom. She saw nothing in her past for which to thank God. "I have returned empty. God has been against me." That was her judgment passed upon her life in Moab. This is a very human picture. This is a vision which many to-day are seeing concerning their past life and that of our nation. It is not that we are born pessimists. We have fought against our circumstances, we have borne up against very many storms, we have often hoped against hope. But the rainbow has not appeared and the clouds have conspired to shut out the sun and have refused to let even a few rays through. Darkness has been under our feet, while the powers of darkness have triumphed. There is no getting away from the fact, we have been bereaved. We have lost that which we counted our treasure. Our support has been taken away. We are left alone. We started out with high hopes. By our side, husband and sons, wife and daughters. We return again to our place empty. So with our nation. Through all the weary years we have waged our war against greed of gain, lust, and passion. Old age has found us wearying of the strife and the foe still strong in the field. Israel is as blind as she ever was. The Sabbath is desecrated more than ever. Our pre-war blunders we still make, and war-clouds are still moving over a leaden sky. Change our name, for these things have changed us, and call us no longer pleasant, and profitable, but bitter and worthless.

Now I believe the facts are there, but the perspective of the facts is wrong. We have neither interpreted the facts, nor yet the God who made the facts, correctly. We have been too much influenced by the things seen, and our vision has been too much coloured by the materialistic elements. What was the emptiness of which this Naomi complained? It was the emptiness of her worldly possessions. True, it was a great void which the death of her husband and sons had made. But may I ask you to read the facts in another light?

Notice 2.—The vision of the past read in the meaning of the higher light. I speak of the higher light. The light that comes from the moral and spiritual, from the things unseen. Those facts had undoubtedly brought her an experience. They had introduced into her life a test and a discipline. Chastened by sorrow she returned to the home of her childhood still believing in God. That was a great deal. But her faith in the God who seemed to be slaying her won another to that faith. From out the dense darkness of heathenism came Ruth with a word which was well worth all the tribulation through which this woman had passed to accomplish and effect. "Entreat me not to leave thee, nor return from following after thee, for where thou goest I will go; and where thou lodgest I will lodge, thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God." That, I say, was a word which was well worth all the tribulation through which Naomi had passed to effect. And that it was what she had passed through which had influenced this Moabitess, and won her to her side for ever, cannot be doubted. She came back empty? Nay, rather with the very Christ in her womb. She came back laden with sorrow 'tis true, but that sorrow which opens the gates of heaven and admits the light of eternity upon the doings of time. I want us to realize this truth as British-Israelites. When we read the subsequent history of this Naomi and Ruth, we cannot but realize that all things had worked together for good for these two who believed God and loved Him. We know that they are not, by any means, the only ones whose tribulations have been ladders up to heaven, and entrances into the light of God's throne. We cannot read our subsequent history; but we can, nevertheless, believe that what has happened to those of old time will happen again to us. God does not declare His purposes every year. He writes them deep in rocks and trees and running brooks, and in the boundless ocean depths. "Call me not Naomi, pleasant; call me Mara, bitter." Nay! Nay! No untoward circumstances shall change the character of him whose trust is in the Lord. Read the facts of your life, and the life of your people, in the higher light which shines in the face of Jesus Christ. You will discover what was a rapturous vision to Paul.

Notice 3.—The vision of the future as influenced and coloured by a true reading of the past. "Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous: nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby." "We glory in tribulations also: knowing that tribulation worketh patience," etc. This book of Ruth is well worth studying in this thought. Ruth means, "a friend." And that she indeed was to Naomi. How heartening is the heroism of these two lonely women struggling to maintain themselves! How full of encouragement their battling with all manner of difficulties which might have daunted many a stouter heart! Their necessity drove Ruth into the fields, and the good hand of God, whom Naomi said was against her, brought her into the field of Boaz. Then began that future which brightened more and more until its glory, in the shepherd King of Bethlehem, linked them on to an imperishable fame.—Ruth iv, 14-17. And that future, so exceedingly glorious, was coloured and influenced by the sorrowful facts of the past. Even the going into Moab from the famine, an act which might have been wrong in itself, was used of God for the making of that future. To the faithful child of God, from out the affliction, the sorrow, the bereavement, there comes the unspeakable glory. "For our light affliction, which is but for a moment," etc.—2 Cor. iv, 17-18. And we find this so very true, do we not? through all the course of the world's history. The first steps to greatness seem to have been almost without exception down the hill. And a prolonged down hill at that if the story of Israel's wanderings through the years be correct. It is through the valley of humiliation that the Christian reaches the delectable mountains. It is after the stern and serious climb of hill difficulty, with its temptation of the arbour of ease, and the terror of the lions, that the Palace Beautiful is reached and enjoyed. No man really enjoys the sunshine who has not experienced the shadow and the oppressive darkness.

If that be so, then why change the name while passing through the one towards the other? Naomi did not know it, but, as she uttered these words, she had her face towards the sun-rising. "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." No man who faces the dawn, though he may be surrounded by present darkness, need change his name from pleasant to bitter. It was well that her neighbours did not take her at her word, for Mara would have been very much out of place for the name of Obed's nurse. Darkness is not the permanent thing. "No night there." Sorrow is not the permanent thing. "Neither sorrow nor sighing." Tears are not abiding. "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes." Hills and valleys strangely mingle in this vale of tears. "Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be brought low, and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places plain, and the Glory of the Lord shall be revealed and all flesh shall see it together, for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." You must not name yourself by that which is temporal, lest in eternity you find that you are altogether out of harmony. Naomi, in the sorrow, in the bereavement, in the emptiness, for the future contains the abiding revelations of the Father's love and power.

Thus shall it be that in every varying mood of our earthly pilgrimage we shall bear the mark of eternity, the smile of hope, the rainbow of peace, the joy of salvation.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE MARCH OF PROPHETIC EVENTS.

To the Editor of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER.

DEAR SIR,—May I supplement Mr. Goard's very interesting article under the above heading in your issue of April 20th, which sets forth so ably the significance of the recent establishment of a Vatican City in Rome, by a few observations of my own?

Does not this act on the part of Mussolini seem to presage what I suggest in my "Times of the Gentiles" (p. 72)—written just two years ago—as the attempt to fulfil the Futurist view of prophecy in a revival of the fourth beast of Daniel for a literal forty-two months, or three and a half years, at the very end of the present Dispensation, under the individual Futurists designate as Antichrist?

We know, however, from the Historical viewpoint, that the correct interpretation of Rev. xiii, 4-5, is on a scale of "a day for a year," not a day for a day, as Futurists hold, and that consequently this prophecy has already run out. They are, however, correct to this degree: that the attempt is to be made to give it a literal fulfilment on the short scale of time. But since this is not the scale of prophecy, the attempt will fail (see p. 112, "Times of the Gentiles").

Those of your readers who are philatelists will be interested in the fact that very recently—but before the pact with Mussolini was signed—the Pope issued a set of postage-stamps in Spain bearing his effigy wearing the Triple Papal Crown, alongside that of King Alfonso. They have no postal-carrying value, but were issued to raise funds for research in the catacombs of Rome! A similar series for Italy was announced last January, but so far have not eventuated. The appearance, however, of the Papal Crown alongside the portrait of a reigning Sovereign is indeed significant.

Yours sincerely,

B. STEWART.

To the Editor of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER.

SIR,—In THE NATIONAL MESSAGE of January 12th, 1929, an article appeared on page 22 by Gresham Copeland, on "The Whale." Dimensions, etc., were the following:—

Length, 45 feet.
Weight, 15 tons, or 33,600 lbs.
Circumference, 23 feet 9 inches.
Mouth 38 inches wide, 43 inches deep.
Tongue, 40 inches long; several thousand teeth.
Pectoral fin, 5 feet long, 3 feet wide.
Dorsal fin, 3 feet long, 2 feet 9 inches wide.
Hide, 3 inches thick.

The article above referred to says:—"The largest ever caught." I have on various occasions seen on the West Coast of the Island of Barra dead whales washed ashore measuring 70 and 80 feet long. But I happened to be at the towing into Castlebay, Barra, from the west side of this island of one of the largest BLUE WHALES ever seen landed here.

Dimensions:—

Length, 126 feet.
Weight fully 100 tons.
Mouth, 36 feet wide.

As the whole mass was lying on the rocks, depth of the mouth could not be ascertained. The two bones forming the upper mouth are still lying in the garden attached to Eoligary House, Barra, and Mr. McGillivary, the tenant, informs me that the bones are now mistaken for stems of trees with moss growing on them. Some time during the present spring there was landed at Oban a sort of shark, weighing only a ton; his stomach on being opened was found to contain three full grown seals undigested, besides the usual quantity of fish partly digested. If a small shark could swallow a full-grown seal, how very easy it would be for the BLUE WHALE referred above to swallow forty Jonahs at one gulp with its 36 feet wide mouth, provided that Jonah was not much larger than the average man.

Moreover, if the Almighty could bring the three young men out of the fiery furnace after being heated seven times hotter than usual, He could bring Jonah out of the belly of the whale as well.

Yours faithfully,

DONALD MCAULAY.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

THE present issue of this journal is largely devoted to the subject of prayer, and this may be considered fitting and timely, seeing we have entered the month in which a General Election is to take place, and the urgent need for prayer that God will overrule, guide and govern the affairs of the nation. Only He can cause truth and right to prevail over the Babel of tongues, and He wills to be enquired of by His Israel to do it for them. Therefore let us pray continually and believingly. There are, says S. D. Gordon, five outlets of power :

First : Through the life, what we are.
Second : Through the lips, what we say.
Third : Through our service, what we do.
Fourth : Through our money, what we do not keep, but loosen out for God.
Fifth : Through our prayer, what we claim in Jesus' Name ; and the greatest of these is the last named.

The first form of prayer is communion. The second form is petition. The third form is intercession.

Now, we have " Israel's Scripture and Prayer Union," of which the Rev. Commander Roberts is the Secretary, and there are some thousands of members. They subscribe sixpence each and they receive a card and a leaflet. We suggest that any of our readers who are not yet members of the Prayer Union might like to join it.

At least let us one and all use the mighty power of prayer at this time of the nation's need.

Mr. John Leech, K.C., had another good audience at Headquarters on April 24th. He continues his series of addresses this week and on Wednesday afternoon next. The Rev. Joseph Gay was the speaker on April 25th. On Thursday next, May 9th, at 7.30, the speaker is to be Mr. J. A. Jubb, of Southend.

An announcement of the May Meetings will be found in our advertising columns. Our friends are wondering what the surprise is to be. In the words of a certain statesman, we will say " WAIT AND SEE."

We have to record with regret the death of Mrs. Onslow, the widow of the late Mr. Douglas A. Onslow, J.P., a British-Israel veteran, who was for many years the President of the Imperial British-Israel Association, and a champion of the Israel Cause. He was a cousin of the late Lord Onslow. Mrs. Onslow was in her ninety-second year ; she was the daughter of the late Robert Loftus Tottenham, Chaplain to H.M. Legation at Florence, and grand-daughter of the Rt. Rev. Lord Robert Tottenham, Bishop of Clogher. She spent the early years of her life in Ireland, and later she went to Italy with her father. She married Mr. Douglas Onslow in 1863. We are thankful to know that her last years were as happy as possible, and that she passed away quite peacefully and without pain. We offer our sympathy to her two surviving sons, one of whom is Mr. F. R. D. Onslow, the well-known lecturer on Natural History.

Mr. R. H. Filtness, Honorary Secretary of our Brighton Branch, reports on the work of the year as being successful and encouraging. Seventeen meetings were held, with a good attendance. Several experienced speakers have given much-appreciated addresses, and keen interest has been aroused. Over 20,000 leaflets, etc., have been given away. Major Knowles, O.B.E., is President, and Major Holland is Chairman.

Mr. Geo. R. Gair gave two lectures on April 19th. The next meetings are fixed for May 9th, when Mr. Marchant is to speak at 3 p.m. and Dr. Gornold at 8 p.m., in the Hove Town Hall.

The Harrow and District Branch held their monthly meeting on April 25th, when the Rev. Kenneth Dodds gave an address on " The Bed-Rock of Latter Day Israel " to an appreciative audience. Miss B. M. Beck presided.

* * *

Mr. Herbert Garrison addressed the Brentford and Chiswick Rotary Club on " The British Empire " on St. George's Day, April 23rd, and the Chiswick Brotherhood, on " The Great Biblical and Racial Discovery of the Age," on Sunday afternoon last.

The Rev. F. W. D. writes from Michigan, U.S.A. : " British-Israel Truth is spreading fast in this part of the country. I have been teaching it weekly in my church. I have sold seventy-five copies of Bishop Allen's book, ' Judah's Sceptre and Joseph's Birthright,' this winter.

" I have had as many as 225 at my Bible Class on British-Israel lines. I have never found a more interested people in this line of Truth than we have here in the different churches. We will have a good Branch here. I am getting more calls than I can fill. We are seeing souls saved every Sunday night. We have built two new churches this year."

C. H. A. B. writes from Liverpool : " Mr. Daniel Farmer delivered an address for this Branch on April 25th, which proved one of the best we have ever had here. Everyone seemed to thoroughly enjoy it."

* * *

The Rev. O. V. W. writes from California, U.S.A. : " British-Israel teaching makes the Bible a new book. I am sorry I did not know it earlier in my ministry. It would long ago have solved diffculties that loomed large."

* * *

On April 22nd, in the absence of the Rev. T. H. Whitehouse, who was taking a meeting elsewhere, Mr. Jones presided over a good audience at Ebenezer Church, Birmingham, which was addressed by the Rev. Gilbert Davies, M.A., Vicar of Branston, Staffs, who was listened to with great interest and profit. At the close the Rev. Arthur Pritchard, Vicar of Rowington, felicitated himself and his fellow-members of the Birmingham Branch on having had the welcome presence of a " live wire " among them. Mr. Davies was a lawyer until he was thirty-eight years of age, and if he had not acquainted the audience beforehand, his manner, method and tongue would have betrayed him. He presents British-Israel Truth wherever he goes, and he has been the means of starting a number of Branches.

On April 10th and 11th the Rev. Guy Waddington, of Bradford, gave two lectures in the Congregational Church, Dent. The lecture on the Wednesday evening was on "The Resurrection of a Nation," and on Thursday, on "The Kingdom." Both lectures were much enjoyed by a company greatly interested.

It is seldom that lectures such as Mr. Waddington gives reach our out-of-the-way villages with the torch of light and truth respecting our Identity as the Israel of God. Something more needs to be done in this direction, for greater impression can be made upon the minds of our folk tucked away in our Yorkshire Dales than upon the greater towns and cities, with all their bewildering interests; these Dale folk have time to think. We are greatly indebted to the Rev. Guy Waddington for his splendid service.

A very successful social meeting was held on Thursday evening, the 18th ult., in the Unionist Hall, in connection with the newly-formed Branch for West Belfast. After tea the chair was taken by George Stewart, Esq., who gave a very helpful and encouraging address. The popular lecturer, Mr. Samuel Millar, also addressed the meeting, taking for his subject some of the objections levelled against the Movement, and dealt with them in his usual masterly style.

Mr. Millar also read to the audience the Rev. Pascoe Goard's article in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE on "The March of Prophetic Events," No. 3. Our Branch wish him God-speed on his journey, and trust that God's blessing may be upon him continually.

During the evening a recitation was given by Miss Hunt, followed by one from Mr. Hamilton, both of which were thoroughly appreciated by the audience. The National Anthem and Benediction brought a most enjoyable evening to a close.

* * *

W. M. K. writes from Missouri, U.S.A.: "It is amazing how the interest in British-Israel Truth is growing here. The Rev. . . . preached a series of five sermons on the topic. Several Jews came to hear him and were greatly impressed. Our literature is out all the time, and we cannot supply it as fast as the people want it."

* * *

At Harrogate, on April 15th, Mrs. Bloxam delighted her audience with one of her interesting lectures, receiving great applause at the close. Dr. Rutherford was in the chair.

A large company gathered in the Earl Haig Memorial Hall on April 23rd at the first meeting of the Hornsey Branch, when Miss Dickinson spoke on "God with us, God in us." Mr. W. Gray, of Barking, presided. Prayers are asked that this new Branch may be a live centre for the proclamation of God's Truth. The next meeting is arranged for May 7th, at 7.45. The speaker will be Mrs. Aiers, and the subject from the Book of Revelation.

Our Commissioner-General, Mr. John Leech, presided at a meeting in Putney on April 22nd to consider the formation of a Branch there. As a result of the discussion a Branch has been organized, a Committee was elected, and Mr. S. Chasemore was appointed Honorary Secretary. A great future is looked for in this district in the extension of Kingdom Teaching.

* * *

The report of the year's work submitted by the Secretary of the Lord's Day Observance Society at the annual meeting, held at Caxton Hall, Westminster, tells a story of many-sided and (in many cases) effective activity. Sunday games have been effectually opposed at Bingley, Carshalton, Filey, Darlington, Hastings, Leeds and Leicester, Portsmouth, Romford, Sheffield, Tonbridge and Watford. In the Counties of London, Middlesex and Surrey, as well as in various boroughs, the opening of cinemas on Sundays has been fought. Sunday motor-races were stopped at Ashford (Kent) and Sunday boxing contests at Ilford. A renewed agitation on the part of West End theatre managers for the passing of the Sunday Theatres Bill is being strenuously opposed. The first Sunday after Easter this year was observed in more than five thousand churches of various communions as "Come to Church Sunday," special sermons being preached on the observance of the Lord's Day. A long list of publications, reaching a total exceeding 1,100,000, have been issued during the year. A branch of the Society has been founded in Wales, with the Bishop of Llandaff as President. Subscriptions and donations show a large increase, the total receipts for the year reaching £10,273. New Headquarters for the Society have been secured, these being a fine block of freehold premises in Red Lion Square. It is hoped that this new development will lead to still further expansion in the Society's work.

IMPORTANT

READ THE FOLLOWING:

Did you hear the Prime Minister's speech on the wireless on the 22nd of April, and reported in the newspapers on Tuesday the 23rd ? Amongst other things Mr. Baldwin is reported as follows :— " Our Empire covers one quarter of the surface of the globe. It comprises one quarter of the population of the world. There are in that Empire some sixty millions of our own race, but, above that, four hundred millions of men of every colour, every race, every creed, every kind and degree of civilisation. Their welfare, the peace of that whole quarter of the earth, depends on the maintenance of stable government and wise statesmanship on the part of the British—a most tremendous thought, and that is our responsibility—the responsibilities of this little island comprising one hundred and seventieth of that area, and only one-tenth of that population . . . great is our heritage and great is our responsibility . . . ."

True words, but when will our statesmen, our business men and leaders in the churches realise that there is a way provided for righteous government which will bring peace and prosperity to all the nations, and that it must come through Israel-Britain ?

We wonder if any of the leaders of the nation have ever read the following books and if they had read and digested their contents would be willing to put the matter to the test by making it a political issue and a rallying " call to the Nation " to come back to the Bible and God's plan of world government ?

OUR HERITAGE THE BIBLE.

The Gospel has been the salt of the earth which has saved the nations from utter decay. According to the simplicity and sincerity in which they have held and lived that Gospel, the nations have prospered. In departing from it they have perished, such of them as have perished.

The result of that Gospel has been the Christian civilisation, which means, for the last ages, world civilisation.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

During the whole of His Ministry on earth, Christ's teaching dealt with the Kingdom of God. He taught, during the period before His Crucifixion, the Gospel of that Kingdom. THE DOCUMENTS OF DANIEL.—XI.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD, F.R.G.S.

DOCUMENT VII. (Daniel vii.) Date: Ussher 555 B.C. Scope: the full seven times of prophecy.

DANIEL THE PROPHET.

This chapter contains the first of the prophetic messages which came to Daniel personally. The former chapters represent the messages and manifestations which came to the kings of Babylon, of which Daniel was the interpreter.

The date of this chapter is earlier than that of the last, namely, chapter vi. The chronological order is not followed. The messages are divided according to their address; the first collection being, as we have seen, messages and manifestations addressed to the kings of Babylon. The latter are messages addressed to Daniel the prophet.

The chapter before us, regarded as literature, stands among the world's masterpieces. When the content is considered and carefully compared with the 2,520 years of succeeding history, covered by the content of the chapter, it becomes manifest that we are reading a message from a higher source than the mind of man.

The theme of the chapter is the pageant of world Empire as it should sweep across the stage of world history. Empire succeeds Empire in majestic order; and the latest of the Empires passes from stage to stage of internal division until the end should come as forewritten.

Then above and beyond the pageant of Empire comes the great and triumphant succeeding age and world movement. This great movement begins in Heaven. "ONE LIKE UNTO THE SON OF MAN CAME TO THE ANCIENT OF DAYS, AND THERE WAS GIVEN UNTO HIM DOMINION . . ."

This great vision of then coming history was given to Daniel, to be proclaimed to the people of Babylon by writing and by speaking. We are assured of this, because of the language in which it is written; namely, the Aramaic language, used by the Court and the people of Babylonia.

The former messages were addressed to the rulers. This message was addressed to Daniel, as the prophet of God, for, and to, the people. It is said of Daniel "Then HE WROTE THE DREAM, and TOLD THE SUM OF THE MATTERS."

Let us disentangle our minds of the wealth of detail to be found in this chapter until we get the setting and outline firmly fixed in our minds. To become confused with detail would be to lose the significance of the setting and outline, and it would be better that the detail should be disregarded altogether than that the great outline should be lost sight of.

The setting of the prophecy is the world Empire established by the hand of God. The former chapters instructed the rulers: the proclamation in the present chapter was given for the instruction of the schools of the day and the people.

The basic thought of the message is God, the Founder of the Empires, active in the Empires, and the Judge and Disposer of the Empires. That which we term the miraculous element—but which is really the normal—is present at every point. By this we mean God, manifested, attentive, and active in national, imperial and world affairs.

It will be wise to compare : —

The Divine self-manifestation at the inauguration of the Israel nation at Sinai :

The Divine self-manifestation at the inauguration of the Babylonian succession of Empires :

The Divine self-manifestation foretold at the coming establishment of the kingdom of the Son of man.

The importance of the great fact that God is so related to world affairs, and the importance of the knowledge of that fact by the nations, will be manifest to every thinking man. Such a conception, deepening into positive knowledge, must of necessity guide the ethics and morals of the people in their social, national and international life, and lift the morale of the people to the highest plane.

Manifestly God has been endeavouring to write this conviction deeply on the hearts of the people by the agency of the Holy Scriptures, which were and are inspired by the Holy Spirit.

The destructive critic, and so-called "modernist," who has been fighting day and night with all his powers to prevent the writing of this consciousness, and the fixing of this conviction upon the mind and heart of the people, is producing an opposite effect upon the minds of his generation, and is striving mightily against the purpose of God. If he would only get out from under the feet of those who are carrying forward the Word of this truth he would be doing the world a service.

This is not spoken of the honest enquirer after truth, but it is spoken in all seriousness concerning those who formulate their doubts into positive forms of expression, and then proclaim them as though they were ascertained truths.

The outline which we are to see is the "march past" of the great succession of world Empires. So they pass before us : Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece and Rome ; the latter in all its stages of division and disintegration. Finally, after they have passed, there bursts upon us the glory of that event of history yet hidden in the future : the Coming of the Son of man with His saints, and the establishment of His reign in glory upon the earth.

Let us carry our minds back to the heart of Asiatic civilization centuries before Christ, and hear this thrilling proclamation by the voice of the prophet Daniel. Let those who can, read it in the ancient Aramaic tongue. Let us remember that the critic has been debarred from bringing the date of these documents down to this side of the translation of the Scriptures into Greek by the LXX. It is certain that the Hebrew scholars, who made that translation not longer after the events recorded than we at present are from the days of Queen Elizabeth, and the writings and writers of her age, believed whole-heartedly in the genuineness and authenticity of these documents. Their knowledge of Hebrew was at least equal to that of modern scholars ; to them it was their own living tongue. To the scholars of to-day it is a dead language. They dealt with original documents of their own age. Our scholars to-day deal with transcriptions and translations of documents of a long past age, which were written in a now "dead language," without one scrap of original writing in hand.

In the chapter itself we read that Daniel wrote, told, and spake these things. It is certain that the modern destructive critic has no real evidence to offer to the contrary. If any wish to follow that question further, let them read "Studies in the Book of Daniel," by Prof. R. G. Wilson, an up-to-the-minute production dealing with the critical attack upon the Book of Daniel.

We now return to the text before us, which is so clear and graphic that we shall give it just as it appears in Dr. Schofield's Bible, together with his paragraph headings as they stand.

The beast vision of Daniel.

"In the first year of Belshazzar king of Babylon Daniel had a dream and visions of his head upon his bed : then he wrote the dream, and told the sum of the matters.

Daniel spake and said, I saw in my vision by night, and, behold, the four winds of the heaven strove upon the great sea.

And four great beasts came up from the sea, diverse one from another."

The world-empire of Nebuchadnezzar.

"The first was like a lion, and had eagle's wings : I beheld till the wings thereof were plucked, and it was lifted up from the earth, and made stand upon the feet as a man, and a man's heart was given to it."

The world-empire of Media-Persia.

"And behold another beast, a second, like to a bear, and it raised up itself on one side, and it had three ribs in the mouth of it between the teeth of it : and they said thus unto it, Arise, devour much flesh."

The world-empire of Greece under Alexander.

"After this I beheld, and lo another, like a leopard, which had upon the back of it four wings of a fowl ; the beast had also four heads ; and dominion was given to it."

The Roman world-empire.

"After this I saw in the night visions, and behold a fourth beast, dreadful and terrible, and strong exceedingly ; and it had great iron teeth : it devoured and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with the feet of it : and it was diverse from all the beasts that were before it ; and it had ten horns."

The ten kings (v. 24) and the "little horn."

"I considered the horns, and, behold, there came up among them another little horn, before whom there were three of the first horns plucked up by the roots : and, behold, in this horn were eyes like the eyes of man, and a mouth speaking great things."

The vision of the Coming of the Son of man in glory.

"I beheld till the thrones were cast down, and the Ancient of days did sit, whose garment was white as snow, and the hair of his head like the pure wool : his throne was like the fiery flame, and his wheels as burning fire.

A fiery stream issued and came forth from before him : thousand thousands ministered unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him : the judgment was set, and the books were opened.

I beheld then because of the voice of the great words which the horn spake : I beheld even till the beast was slain, and his body destroyed, and given to the burning flame.

As concerning the rest of the beasts, they had their dominion taken away : yet their lives were prolonged for a season and time."

Scene in heaven before the Coming of the Son of man.

"I saw in the night visions, and, behold, one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him.

And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed."

The interpretation of the beast vision.

"I Daniel was grieved in my spirit in the midst of my body, and the visions of my head troubled me.

I came near unto one of them that stood by, and asked him the truth of all this. So he told me, and made me know the interpretation of the things.

These great beasts, which are four, are four kings, which shall arise out of the earth.

But the saints of the most High shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom for ever, even for ever and ever.

Then I would know the truth of the fourth beast, which was diverse from all the others, exceeding dreadful, whose teeth were of iron, and his nails of brass; which devoured, brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with his feet;

And of the ten horns that were in his head, and of the other which came up, and before whom three fell; even of that horn that had eyes, and a mouth that spake very great things, whose look was more stout than his fellows.

I beheld, and the same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them;

Until the Ancient of days came, and judgment was given to the saints of the most High; and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom.

Thus he said, The fourth beast shall be the fourth kingdom upon earth, which shall be diverse from all kingdoms, and shall devour the whole earth, and shall tread it down, and break it in pieces.

And the ten horns out of this kingdom are ten kings that shall arise: and another shall rise after them; and he shall be diverse from the first, and he shall subdue three kings.

And he shall speak great words against the most High, and shall wear out the saints of the most High, and think to change times and laws: and they shall be given into his hand until a time and times and the dividing of time.

But the judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion, to consume and to destroy it unto the end.

And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him.

Hitherto is the end of the matter. As for me Daniel, my cogitations much troubled me, and my countenance changed in me: but I kept the matter in my heart." (Daniel vii.)

We have now come to the end of that majestic series of documents which constitute God's revelation of Himself to Babylon and the succeeding Empires.

The nation Israel, God's "kingdom of priests," received a more vivid self-revelation of God at Sinai, and continued in the enjoyment of Divine self-manifestation until the last contribution to the Bible was made by the latest writer in the New Testament.

Next to Israel the Babylon succession of Empires started out upon its march across world history with the clear-cut Divine self-revelation contained in these magnificent chapters and documents as their own particular revelation from God.

With this chapter the last message in the tongue of the Babylonian people ends. Hereafter the prophet makes his contribution in the Hebrew tongue, and for the Hebrew people, keeping step with his contemporaries, Jeremiah and Ezekiel.

To those no less wonderful contributions we shall turn in due course.

DAVID THE MANY-SIDED.

BY THE REV. GEORGE MATHESON, D.D., LL.D., F.R.S.E.

IT is very rarely that a nation has associated all her attributes with the life of a single man. I say "rarely" to avoid the possibility of exaggeration; but I do not myself know one instance of a purely national gallery having done so. The pride of a country has generally been to have a diversified gallery—to divide her great professions among different men. Britain places her Shakespeare in a unique position of glory; but she would not seek to claim for him a union of all the professions. She is content to behold his genius in his special sphere—the sphere of the poet. She does not insist on recognizing in him a concentration of all departments—the science of a Newton, the logic of a Bacon, the statesmanship of a Chatham, the military skill of a Marlborough. She is proud to think that in enumerating her different sources of glory she can assign each of them to a separate name.

But in that one Gallery which is not national we meet with the spectacle which is elsewhere absent. We find a people, through long centuries of its history and through devious changes of its fortune, consistently and persistently agreeing to heap upon a single individual the aggregate glories of every profession in life. Israel has fixed her affections upon an ideal whose very name expresses the object uniting all desires—David—the beloved. To claim one man as the object of all national desires is a claim not easily sustained. It can only be supported on the supposition that this one man has passed through every national experience, has filled every sphere, has partaken of every circumstance. Accordingly, the David of Israel is not simply the greatest of her kings; he is the man great in everything. He monopolizes all her institutions. He is her shepherd boy—the representative of her toiling classes. He is her musician—the successor of Jubal and Miriam and Deborah. He is her soldier—the conqueror of all the Goliaths that would steal her peace. He is her knight-errant—bringing mercy into war. He is her king—numbering her armies and regulating her polity. He is her priest—substituting a broken and contrite spirit for the blood of bulls and rams. He is her prophet—presaging with his latest breath the everlastingness of his kingdom. He is her poet—all her psalms are called by his name. The truth is, in the estimation of Israel this man is the personification of the nation itself—the embodiment of her qualities, the incarnation of her spirit, the type of her destiny. A conception so unique deserves consideration. How can we better photograph the form of David than by presenting the analogy between the picture of his life and the life of ancient Israel—that Israel which saw in him a mirror of her own soul!

Even the history of Israel seems to repeat itself in David. What do we see at the outset of his life? A shepherd boy with a very unlikely prospect of success and a very big presentiment of glory! Like the nation, he was born to a pastoral life; he fed his father's sheep on the plains of Bethlehem. Like the nation, he was deemed, in his morning, very insignificant. He had seven brothers—strong, stalwart, gigantic men. These were pointed to as the men who would serve their country. Little David was, like little Israel, a pigmy among the giants; and the world said, "He will never equal his brothers!" Yet little David had within that soul of his an ambition, compared to which that of his brothers was a molehill. He, like his tiny country, had a dream of empire—that dream which had its beginning when Abraham heard his mission under the Chaldean stars. He, like Abraham, had received a prophetic voice, had felt the touch of an anointing hand. Ever, amid the bleating of the sheep, there had sounded in his ear a deep refrain, "You will be king of Israel! you will be king of Israel!" He kept the dream in his heart, he told it not; but all the warmer did it burn because it could not be spoken. And though it could not be spoken, it could be sung; it made songs without words. It tuned the strings of his harp; it accompanied his music; it imparted to his notes a wild dash and daring which made them seem to strike the stars. He was unconscious of their power; he played spontaneously—played to relieve himself. But just on that account he was overheard; unconscious genius ever is overheard. Men stood and listened in the night to the great musician. They spread his fame. They told how a nightingale had come. They spoke of a harp with chords inspired.

And by and by the tidings reached the most august ear in all the land. They came to the royal palace; they were heard by Saul the king. Saul was passing through an hour of mental darkness. There had come to him, as there comes to many of us, an unaccountable unrest. We are told of a peace that "passeth understanding"; there is also a *dis*peace that "passeth understanding." There are clouds in the mind which are not explained by clouds in the sky, for they often come in our days of outward sunshine. Saul had such an experience. He was afflicted from within—afflicted in the midst of his exaltation, on the pinnacle of that proud height to which fortune had raised him. Material conditions had not caused the malady; material conditions could not remove the malady. Might not *im*material conditions be tried! If the disorder originated from within, might it not be conquered from within! Might not music have power to minister to a mind diseased! Why not call in the aid of this wonderful player whose powers of melody were known everywhere! Why not send for David!

David is sent for, and comes; and, as he comes, the Gallery repeats in him another of its past stages. He has already heard the call of Abraham; he is about to experience the call of Isaac. The call of Abraham was the summoning to a life of glory; the call of Isaac was the summoning to a life of domestic ministration. When David entered the house of Saul he abandoned, for the time, his dream. He laid aside his desire to rule; he tried to serve, to dig wells of comfort for the heart of another. And not without success. As he played, the malady of Saul subsided; the clouds parted, and a stream of sunshine burst upon his soul. If a pupil in a Sunday-school were asked, "Who was the first man influenced by the Psalms of David?" he would not go very far wrong if he answered "Saul." It is true these melodies were songs without words; but they were not songs without thoughts. On the poor wandering soul of the monarch they had all the effect of a sweet and solemn prayer; they said, "Peace! Be still!" They were the earliest psalms of David—psalms of unspoken words, psalms of undefined comfort, psalms whose Divine message came only in music. When the critics have disposed of all the rest, they will leave to the minstrel these first chords.

And now the scene changes once more, and there is repeated another past phase of the Hebrew Gallery. The experience of David has echoed the call of Abraham and the domestic ministration of Isaac; it is now to echo the troubles of Joseph. He has had the dream of empire; he has had the stage of domestic life; he is now to have the experience of private jealousies—jealousies of which, like Joseph, he is to be, not the sharer, but the victim. There is a passion which music cannot quell, which culture cannot calm, which art cannot allay; it is envy. In the court of Israel the personality of the young minstrel is magnetic; he draws all eyes, he wins all hearts. Men begin to contrast his face of morning brightness with the dark and lowering countenance of their monarch. Saul awakes from his nervous derangement and looks round. He sees the situation at a glance He is losing ground; he is being superseded in the affections of his people—superseded by a stripling! He must remove this centre of magnetism from the eyes of men. What is he to do! How is he to get rid of him! By open violence? No; that would be unpopular. He will follow the method of Joseph's brethren; he will cause him to disappear by seeming accident. He will make him captain of a thousand men; he will send him into the front of battle, into positions where death will be almost inevitable. By means that will waken no suspicion he will remove this shepherd boy.

But the means are all in vain. David at the head of the thousand is only more magnetic still. He performs deeds of prowess and becomes the right hand of Israel. What is to be done with this troublesome prodigy! A new device presents itself to the mind of Saul—so at least I read the narrative. He will simulate a return of his malady. He will pretend to be again mad; and in this seeming madness he will give David his deathblow. Again the project fails; the musician eludes the javelin. Did the penetrating eye of David see through the subterfuge? I think it did. Be this as it may, the mask is now withdrawn. The baffled monarch turns at bay. He has failed in strategy; he will take means direct, to rid himself of this rival. David is warned—warned from within the palace, warned by Saul's own son. There is but one refuge—flight. David disappears from court. He wanders awhile in the secluded parts of Israel. But no part of Israel is secluded enough to screen him from the eye of Saul. He must fly farther. He must leave his country altogether. He must become a stranger in a strange land.

Again the national history repeats itself in David. He, like his country, becomes an exile, and wanders in a land of Egypt. He treads a foreign soil; he is a fugitive and an outcast; he is indebted to the charity of others. He is oppressed and weary, now on the mountain, now in the vale—to-day skirting a ravine, to-morrow lurking in a cave—sometimes alone in the wilderness, sometimes within touch of his adversary. At one moment he is seen in Philistia; at another he treads the mountains of Engedi; at a third he is by the waters of the Dead Sea. The sea of his own life is dead; he has hung his harp on the willows; he has resolved to sing no more.

Then the curtain rises anew, and the life of David continues to repeat the history of Israel. After the exile comes the exodus; after the land of bondage comes the conquest of Canaan. David's life has hitherto been itself a harp of many strings. Each chord has renewed the existence of some bygone age of the national annals. He has begun with the shepherd life of Abel. He has received the anointing mission of Abraham. He has served at the domestic hearth with Isaac. He has experienced the envy that assailed the life of Joseph. He has passed into that exile where dawned the day of Moses. He is now to emerge into that struggle which secured the land to Joshua, and to repeat in his own life the transition from exile into empire.

Nor is there wanting a point of resemblance between the conquest by Joshua and the conquest by David. In both cases there is an absence of personal glory. It is not really David's prowess that wins him the kingdom; it is the trend of circumstances—or, as men would then have called it, the hand of the Lord. The battle which shattered the fortunes of Saul was not fought by David—was not fought even in the interest of David. It was the Philistines that made room for David in Israel—made room without meaning to do so. It was on the field of Gilboa that the pride of Saul was extinguished—a field on which Israel and Philistia fought for their own ends. That battle almost annihilated the house of Saul. He perished; three of his sons perished; the flower of his army perished. Israel was in the position of England after the Wars of the Roses. She had lost "the last of the barons"—the last of the great leaders on whom Saul's house could depend. Any strong hand would be sure to hold the reins in a nation so struck with panic. Yet, even in this panic-struck nation, the strong hand of David did not at once become supreme. There was a lingering loyalty to the house of Saul. Eleven of the tribes clung to his memory and enthroned his son. One tribe alone declared for David—the tribe of Judah. For seven years there were two kings in Israel—each claiming undivided empire. For seven years there was internecine war between David and the remnant of Saul's house; and, though the balance of success inclined to David, his final triumph came not from his sword. It came from an act of desertion on the part of an enemy, from the abandonment of the house of Saul by one of its leading supporters. On the whole, I am disposed to think that David realized his mission mainly by the grace of God; or, if you prefer its rationalistic equivalent, mainly by the stream of tendencies which converged, in place and time, so as to effect the issue. His stage of climax was the stage of Joshua. The walls of his Jericho happened to fall precisely at the moment when he happened to blow the trumpet. He was little more than a spectator of the scene which crowned him. His merit was in waiting for the tide and taking the tide. He was never more humble than on his road to the throne.

I have thus sought to institute a parallel between the history of David and the history of the Jewish race. But it is not only David's history that reveals the collective life of Israel; his character does so too. There is not in all biography a more remarkable delineation than the character of David. We have pictures of strikingly good men; we have pictures of singularly bad men; we have pictures of men who are half good and half bad. None of these designations will cover David. Measured by a Christian standard, he is no saint. Measured by a heathen standard, he is no sinner. Measured by any standard, he is no mixture—he never exhibits a blending of good and bad. How, then, shall we describe him? If he is not a telescope of uniform sublimities, nor a microscope of uniform littlenesses, nor yet a union of telescope and microscope in which one eye can see the sublime and the other the small, what is he? He is a kaleidoscope. He reveals a series of seemingly disconnected scenes of which the later often reverses the picture given by the earlier. In each scene appears, not a phase of the man, not a quality of the man, but the whole man. Yet the David of to-day is often a direct contrast to the David of yesterday; but for his face and form we should not recognize him. Yesterday, he had one pure spiritual friendship—the devotion to Jonathan; to-day, he has many sensuous loves. Yesterday, he was modest and retiring; to-day, through vanity, he vaunts the number of his fighting men. Yesterday, he was open and confiding; to-day, he deceives his benefactor Achish. Yesterday, he was chivalrous to his enemies; to-day, he denies forgiveness to his greatest general. Yesterday, he saved the life of Saul, his foe; to-day, he takes the life of Uriah, his friend. How came such a character to exist? Is there any connection in its acts beyond what is effected by the shaking of life's kaleidoscope? Can we account for a phenomenon seemingly so grotesque and really so contradictory?

I think we can. I believe this man epitomized not only the past history, but the past passions, of Israel. I believe the two streams of heredity which had run in separate channels through the path of the nation met at last in a single life—the life of David. If I were to christen these two streams, I should call them "The Lion" and "The Lamb." Look back over the history of the Hebrew race, you will find the moral life of that race ever depicted as a strife between two. Go where you will, you are ever confronted by a pair. Every lamb has its opposing lion. Abel has his Cain; Abraham has his Lot; Isaac has his Ishmael; Jacob has his Esau; Joseph has his "Brethren"; Moses has his Amalek; Joshua has his Achan. In David the two pass into one. He becomes the heir to a double heredity. The strings of his life-harp are swept by two impulses—a south wind and a north—the one bringing music, the other discord. When you see him proceeding from the altar of God to a life of sensuality, it is not correct to say that he has had a fall from grace. If you walk through a town and at certain parts come to vacant spaces, will this prove that the city is losing its inhabitants? It will prove the reverse. These vacant spaces are the survivals of yesterday. They suggest that yesterday there were no buildings at all—that the present amount of population has been planted on spots which were originally in the same condition. So is it with the bad deeds of David. They are survivals of an old time—not falls from new grace. Not all at once could the city of God be built within him. Not all at once could the barren swamps be filled with homes and hearths of culture. Not all at once could the wild beasts of the forests be rooted out and the voice of Man be made to echo through the waste places. Not all at once could the forms of the past that lived within him die—the violent Cain, the wild Ishmael, the selfish Lot, the reckless Esau, the deceitful brethren of Joseph. These remained as the memories of yesterday; they waited the expansion of the city to clear them away.

Here, then, was a region in which David was not king—the region of the heart. I mean, his own heart. He had a power of captivating the heart of others; but he never took captive his own. All the winds of the past strove for the mastery of that great sea. Each prevailed in turn. Sometimes it was swept by the gust of anger, sometimes by the blast of impurity, sometimes by the storm of doubt, sometimes by the breeze of generous sympathy. At morning it caught the glow, at noon the glare, at evening the gloom. It was the heart of a child; the impression of the moment ruled it. David felt the weakness, and cried out for a king over himself. He called aloud for some one mighty enough to still the tempest of his heart. This is the deepest note of his whole biography—his distrust of himself, of his own power, of his own judgment. I do not wonder the hymns of Israel are called the psalms of David; they reflect him, they mirror him—mirror most of all his distrust of himself. When they cry "I have made the Most High my Refuge!"—when they exclaim, "O God my Shield, look on the face of Thine anointed!"—when they pray, "Hide me in the secret of Thy pavilion!" do we not hear the refrain of that life which could find no help but in God! There is not in the whole Gallery the picture of a soul so conscious of its weakness. David will do nothing without God. He will neither lead an army nor build a temple without the preliminary Voice. He has no confidence in his own will. Saul had confidence in his own will. He was a weaker man all round; but he rarely felt the need of the Lord. David has in his veins the strength of two conflicting streams of heredity; yet his deepest sense is that of his own nothingness. His name has become almost a synonym for the conviction of personal sin.

And do you not see that David's sense of moral impotence has originated precisely in the strength of the contending elements within him. Had there been only one element—whether good or bad—he would never have felt that impotence. Had he been simply an amiable passionless creature untempted by violent impulses and unassailed by the glitter of vice, he might have done less harm to his generation, but he would never have cultivated his special flower—the thirst for God. Why is this man ever longing in a dry parched land where no water is? Precisely because his was not an untempted nature. He wanted to be good, but he could not. He had too big an inheritance of past corruption to believe in his own strength. His thirst for God came from his personal experience of the meagreness of his own soul. A placid nature would never have felt the impotence and would never have known the thirst; he would have failed to cultivate David's special flower. David stands in the Gallery with a unique message—that the forces of the natural world are not sufficient to make a man good. It is the message commonly called evangelical. The man who preaches it from his heart must ever be one who has come fresh from the storm. He who knows not the power of passion, who feels not the seductions of sense, who never sails except on summer seas, may say indeed, "Give us our daily bread," but will find little need to say, "Deliver us from evil." If David is to cultivate the flower whose "language" is that prayer, he will have to hear the roar of the breakers and experience the crash of the timbers and learn what it is to utter the piercing cry, "Save us; we perish!" That was the education adapted to him; that was the education he received. To the city of his habitation he was led by a rough way, because the rough way was for him the only right way; his mission was to proclaim the heart's need of God.

My heart needs Thee, O Lord, my heart needs Thee! No part of my being needs Thee like my heart. All else within me can be filled by Thy gifts. My hunger can be satisfied by daily bread. My thirst can be allayed by earthly waters. My cold can be removed by household fires. My weariness can be relieved by outward rest. But no outward thing can make my heart pure. The calmest day will not calm my passions. The fairest scene will not beautify my soul. The richest music will not make harmony within. The breezes can cleanse the air; but no breeze ever cleansed a spirit. This world has not provided for my heart. It has provided for my eye; it has provided for my ear; it has provided for my touch; it has provided for my taste; it has provided for my sense of beauty—but it has not provided for my heart. Provide Thou for my heart, O Lord! It is the only unwinged bird in all creation; give it wings, O Lord! Earth has failed to give it wings; its very power of loving has often dragged it in the mire. Be Thou the strength of my heart! Be Thou its fortress in temptation, its shield in remorse, its covert in the storm, its star in the night, its voice in the solitude! Guide it in its gloom; help it in its heat; direct it in its doubt; calm it in its conflict; fan it in its faintness; prompt it in its perplexity; lead it through its labyrinths; raise it from its ruins! I cannot rule this heart of mine; keep it under the shadow of Thine own wings!

ICH DIEN.*

BY THE REV. C. H. PRICHARD, M.A.

HAVE we ever wondered why the motto on the Prince of Wales' arms is in the German language? Its origin dates back, we are told, to the battle of Crecy, 1346, in which the blind King John of Bohemia fell in fighting against the English forces. His motto, Ich Dien, which means "I serve," was adopted by the Black Prince and has ever since that date

* We understand the motto now used on the Prince of Wales' arms is in the English form: "I serve."

been part of the scutcheon of the heir-apparent to the throne of this land.

"I serve." Does not this legend indicate a princely destiny? What two words could sum up better the utterance of the Prince of Life, Who said: "The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister"; Who contrasted the conception of worldly greatness with that of the exaltation of service: "Whosoever will be great among you shall be your minister; whosoever of you will be the chiefest, shall be servant of all." (St. Mark x, 43-44.)

He knelt on one occasion and washed the feet of His Apostles, when apparently no one else was willing to undertake the duty—the reason probably being that they had just been quarrelling about precedence in the Kingdom and did not wish to undertake a humble task which no doubt they had previously performed quite willingly in rotation. After this act of stupendous condescension, which must have proved a revelation to those present of what true greatness consists, He brought home the real significance of the action. He did not descend from His accepted position, He was still their Lord and Master, but He bade them imitate what He had done in their relation to others.

These words or very similar ones on the true meaning of greatness occur again—St. Mark ix, 35: "If any man desire to be first, the same shall be last of all and servant (slave) of all." And again in St. Matthew xx, 26, 27.

In St. Luke there is an addition, xxii, 25: "The kings of the Gentiles exercise lordship over them; and they that exercise authority upon them are called 'Benefactors' (Greek Euergetai, probably some official title = Magistrates); but ye shall not be so; but he that is greatest among you let him be as the younger, and he that is chief as he that doth serve. For whether is greater, he that sitteth at meat, or he that serveth? Is not he that sitteth at meat? but I am among you as he that serveth." This seems an allusion to the episode of the washing of the feet, only recorded by St. John xiii, 13, 14.

This paradox is well illustrated in the history of the word "Minister." It originally denoted, as in our Authorized Version, "a servant or attendant." A Latin word, it was evidently contrasted with Magister = Master, from which Magistrate is derived. In these days the Prime Minister or First Servant holds the highest political position next to His Majesty the King.

I had a letter the other day in which the writer—as an objection to one of the tenets of the British-Israel theory—stated that it seemed we were intended to "boss the world." Such a pretension is utterly repugnant to British mentality. We are naturally unwilling to magnify ourselves; and it is, I think, one of the best traits in the English character that we do not render service for the object of getting thanks or obtaining material benefit. "Something for nothing"—not in the way of acquisition, but in the way of service.

It was the crews of our ships that helped the destitute inhabitants after the earthquake that destroyed Corinth last year. Our seamen assisted the victims at the time of a similar disaster at Syracuse some years ago. We have always been ready to help at any great emergency outside our own land.

We are called arrogant by other nations. We are not really so. Was it not the lot of Joseph, who was separate from his brethren? Was it arrogance to undertake the liability for all the debts incurred by the Allies in the War? It is the arrogance that many object to in the claim that we are God's special people. If it is once clearly understood that this call to Greatness is a call to Service, I think the objections of many will be removed. I used to grow weary, when I first attended lectures on the British-Israel question, at the recitation of the numerous advantages which we possess as a nation. If this aspect of the question (often illustrated—and quite rightly—by a map with our colonies marked in red), viz., that the test of true greatness be service, I think many people would be more easily convinced.

This great principle has been recognized verbally by the Vatican—but surely not its true significance. The Popes call themselves "Servi Servorum Dei," the Servants of the Servants of God, yet they regard as outcasts all who will not recognize their infallibility.

A Cardinal washes the feet of some votaries who have been prepared for the ceremony, but the attitude of the Roman hierarchy towards our Church Ministers is supremely contemptuous. I was once acting as temporary Chaplain at Trafoi, a large hotel in the Dolomites. On the Saturday evening on which I arrived I found myself without part of my luggage containing a surplice, which had been held up at some frontier station through my inadvertence. I sent a note through the proprietress of the hotel to the local Curé describing my difficulty and asking for the loan of a surplice. My request was refused on the plea that such a loan was contrary to his religion.

Does not our Royal Family answer the test, and carry out the Christ-like conception of greatness? What is the secret of our King's popularity? What has endeared him to his subjects as has been shown during his illness by the crowds of anxious enquirers even in the worst weather? Is it not his willingness for service? his constant attendance and genial presence at all functions and ceremonies, where it has been needed? Has not our gracious Queen been a model of patience and courage, as, e.g., when she opened the Seamen's Institute at a time of the most intense anxiety. Does not our Prince of Wales act up to his motto? Has not the greater part of his life in later years been spent in the discharge of his high office, in travelling to all parts of our Empire and even beyond its boundaries? His unfailing cheerfulness, his spirit of camaraderie, his renunciation of all regard for rank and ceremony, and last but not least his unerring tact, explain why he is the idol of all the nation. His perilous journey home at the crisis of his father's illness shows how devoted a son he is. Surely he has in the splendour of Service discovered the hall-mark of true Greatness.

The Honorary Secretary of our Adelaide Branch reports steady progress in South Australia. He says they are going in for an all-Australia forward movement and for a whole-time organizer. This is good news indeed. Australia, like Canada, South Africa and India, is a land of magnificent distances; it is some 2,400 miles from East to West and nearly 2,000 miles from South to North, with over 8,000 miles of coast line. We are glad to see that our good friend, the Rev. W. Floyd Shannon, O.B.E., is to the fore in the work, and that he is being helped by the Rev. D. Morgan and others.

BIBLICAL METALLURGY.—IV.

THE TEMPLE CASTINGS.

By ANDREW B. BUCHANAN.

IN the consideration of this article certain assumptions will be made.

The reader is warned against taking these assumptions and converting them into statements of actual facts. This warning is essential. Where an assumption is made, the basis of the assumption will be given, so that the critic may apply his own data and draw his own conclusions, without entering the field of controversy.

The writer regrets that he is compelled to present some calculations. This is unavoidable if we are to understand the nature of the subject being dealt with and at the same time satisfy the conditions of the Secretary-General's appeal of the 16th March.

Having discussed the ore, the furnace, the composition of the metal, the molten metal and the apparent use of the ladle, let us turn our attention to the foundry and certain castings.

THE FOUNDRY.

In making castings it is necessary to have a foundry and suitable soil for making the moulds.

This soil must be of sufficient depth to enable the moulds to be formed for large castings.

The description of the foundry and its soil is given in 1 Kings and 2 Chronicles.

1 Kings vii, 46: "In the plain of Jordan did the king cast them, in the clay ground between Succoth and Zarthan." The marginal reading of the Bible gives the actual Hebrew meaning of the phrase "clay ground" as: "in the thickness of the ground."

When we consider that, in making the mould for the Great Sea, a hole over 10 feet in depth was required, we see the strict technical accuracy of the Hebrew rendering. How marvellous that so much is revealed in those six words!

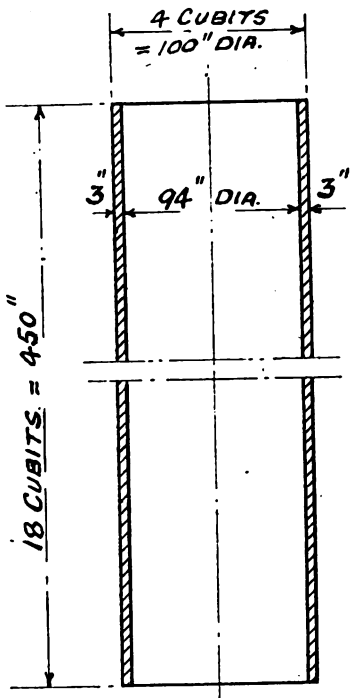
CASTINGS.

The massive castings of the Bible are described in: 1 Kings, 2 Kings, 2 Chronicles, and Jeremiah.

Of these castings, the Pillars and Great Sea have been discussed in former articles; their approximate weight* and points relating to their manufacture.† From these articles we deduced the weight of the Pillars as being not less than 55 tons each, and the Great Sea not less than 72¼ tons.

In Figs. 6 and 7 we reproduce the diagrams from which these weights were originally calculated. In addition we append the following data:—

Ornamentation not taken into account.



One sacred cubit taken as 25 B. inches.

Four fingers taken as 3 inches.

The handbreadth taken as 4 inches.

* THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, Vol. II, pages 128-130.

† THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, Vol. III, pages 428-430.

THE PILLAR.
SCALE 1" = 100"
FIG. 6.

THE PILLARS.

The description of the Pillars in Kings and Chronicles is not complete. Jeremiah, however, gives the full specification from which we are enabled to construct Fig. 6.

lii, 21: "And concerning the pillars, the height of one pillar was eighteen cubits; and a fillet of twelve cubits did compass it; and the thickness thereof was four fingers: it was hollow."

This passage goes much further than merely stating the dimensions; it indicates quite clearly that each Pillar was cast in one piece. Note the construction of the verse:—

The height of one Pillar,
Twelve cubits did compass it,
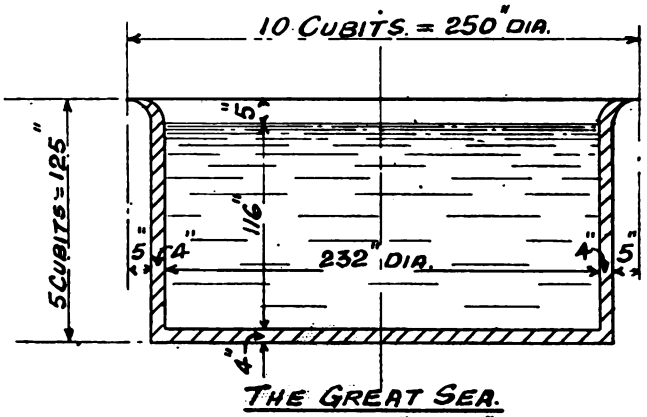
The thickness thereof,
It was hollow.



THE GREAT SEA.

The specification of the Great Sea is complete in 1 Kings and 2 Chronicles.

1 Kings vii, 23: "And he made a molten sea, ten cubits from the one brim to the other: it was round all about, and his height was five cubits: and a line of thirty cubits did compass it round about."

24: "And under the brim of it round about there were knops (similitude of oxen, Chron.) compassing it, ten in a cubit, compassing the sea round about: the knops (oxen, Chron.) were cast in two rows, when it was cast."

26: "And it was an handbreadth thick, and the brim thereof was wrought like the brim of a cup, with flowers of lilies: it contained two thousand baths."

THE GREAT SEA.
SCALE 1" = 100"
FIG. 7.

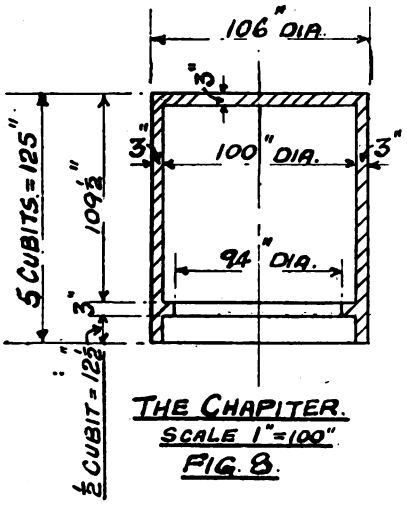
Digitized by Google

The data given here enables us to construct Fig. 7.

The indications as to the Sea being cast in one piece are even more emphatic than in those of the Pillars: the knops were cast in two rows when IT was cast.

Verse 45 informs us that the castings were of "bright brass" or as given in the margin "scoured bright."

Now this means that the colour of the brass would be apparent and should therefore be uniform throughout the whole casting.



In passing through the brass shop of a modern engineering work, it is surprising to see the marked difference in the colour of the various brasses, as used in different kinds of work.

To produce an even colour throughout, the metal would require to be homogeneous, and we have directed attention to this matter in the description of the furnaces in articles II and III. Such metal requires to be melted at one time and in one furnace.

To produce castings of the size of the Pillars and Great Sea would therefore require a large furnace of the Siemens type, Figs. 4 and 5.

THE CHAPITERS.

1 Kings vii, 16, gives the description of the Chapiters thus: "And he made two chapiters of molten brass, to set upon the tops of the pillars; the height of the one chapiter was five cubits, and the height of the other chapiter was five cubits."

THE CHAPITER.
SCALE 1" = 100"
FIG. 8.

From this description we have prepared Fig. 8.

It will be seen that we have not attempted to speculate upon the ornamentation of the chapiters. Our purpose at present is, if possible, to estimate their weight.

We have accordingly carried the chapiters straight up, instead of bulging them out, as in Fig. 9. This will have the effect of at least giving the minimum weight.

We have taken the thickness as four fingers, the same as for the Pillars.

	sq. ins.		cu. ins.
Area of 106 ins. dia. ...	= 8,825
Area of 100 ins. dia. ...	= 7,854
Nett area	= 971
Volume of the outer portion	= 971	× 125 ...	= 121.375
Area of 100 ins. dia. ...	= 7,854
Volume of the top ...	= 7,854	× 3 ...	= 23,562
Area of 100 ins. dia. ...	= 7,854
Area of 94 ins. dia. ...	= 6,940
Nett area	914

	sq. ins.		cu. ins.
Volume of the inner portion	= 914	× 3 ...	= 2,742
Total volume... ...			= 147,679

Taking one cubic inch of brass = 0.3 lb., then the weight would be:—

147,679 × 0.3 ... ... = 44,304 lbs.
= 19¾ tons

Each Chapiter would therefore weigh approximately 20 tons.

CHAPITER AND PILLAR.
SCALE 1" = 100"
FIG. 9.

In 2 Chron. iii, 15, the height of the two Pillars is given as 35 cubits. This has led to some criticism as to inaccuracies in the Scriptures.

The present writer puts forward Fig. 9 as a possible solution to the problem.

It will be seen that the Chapiters are let down into the Pillars to a depth of half a cubit. This would be sound engineering practice and at the same time preserve the architectural feature necessary, in forming the projection, separating the Chapiter from the Pillar. Verse 16 of 1 Kings vii would seem to bear this out in the words: " . . . to set upon the tops of the pillars."

Referring to Fig. 9, it will be observed that the full height of the Pillar is 18 cubits, but as seen from the outside, only 17½ cubits; it will also be observed that Fig. 9 supplies the shape for Fig. 8.

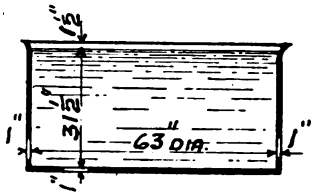
THE LAVERS.

The only reference as to the size of the Lavers is given in 1 Kings vii, 38, where it states: " . . . one laver contained forty baths . . ."



The same chapter gives the Great Sea as containing 2,000 baths. The Laver therefore had a capacity equal to one-fiftieth of the Great Sea. From this we can proportion the Laver to the Sea.

This proportion will not be affected by the 3,000 baths of 2 Chron.

Refer now to Fig. 6, and take the water volume as shown.

	sq. ins.	cu. ins.
Area of 232 ins. dia. ...	=42,273
Volume of the water ...	=42,273 × 116	...=4,903,668
Let this be the volume of 2,000 baths.
Then one-fiftieth or 40 baths		=98,073

Which gives the Laver as:—
63 in. dia. × 31½ in. in height to the top of the water.

LAVER.
SCALE 1" = 50"
FIG. 10.

Such Laver would require at least one inch in thickness for the casting, and from Fig. 10 we can estimate its approximate weight.

	sq. ins.	cu. ins.
Area of 65 ins. dia. ...	=3,318
Area of 63 ins. dia. ...	=3,117
Nett area	= 201
Volume of the outer portion	= 201 × 34 ...	=6,834
Area of 63 ins. dia. ...	=3,117
Volume of the bottom ...	=3,117 × 1 ...	=3,117
Total volume		=9,951
Weight =9,951 by 0.3		=2,985 lbs.
		=1⅓ tons.

Each of the ten Lavers would therefore weigh about 1⅓ tons.

In our effort to keep clear of speculation, we must consider the residue of the Temple Castings as having an unknown weight.

Summarizing what we have been discussing in relation to these castings, we can at least approximate to the minimum amount of brass which was carried to Babylon.

This was one of the problems set by the Editor.

Castings of unknown weight:—
12—Brasen bulls.
10—Bases for the Lavers.
40—Wheels for the Bases.

Castings which we have been discussing:—

	tons.
2—Pillars of 55 tons each	110
2—Chapiters of 20 tons each	40
1—Great Sea	72
10—Lavers of 1⅓ tons each	13
Total ...	235

This brings us to Nebuchadnezzar's image which we shall discuss in our next article.

A GREAT EMPIRE MOVEMENT.

BY PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc., F.R.G.S.

LOOK where we will, we are sure to see human movements, great and small, and most of these movements are indicative of unrest and attempts to better the condition of those thus moving.

We all know that the British Isles and several countries of Europe are over populated, and the surplus peoples are ever seeking, or longing, for a passage to Canada, Australia, the Africas, New Zealand and the United States.

This condition is intensifying and not ameliorating. So far as Canada is concerned and also the British Isles and North Europe, we can, with great advantage, accept and accommodate millions, until Canada has at least 100,000,000 tucked away in her vast areas.

What earth and human movements have in store for this old world while Canada is increasing her population to one or two hundred millions, we cannot guess, or speculate upon, but mighty human and national movements are on the wing.

Of the countries labouring to solve effectively a great population difficulty, and forced to find a solution, or suffer civil calamity, perhaps Japan is one of the most conspicuous. Her enterprising pioneers for hundreds of years, and especially the last fifty years, have been pushing out into many countries and islands. In fact, these progressive Japanese, during many centuries, have occupied great areas of wild lands, forests, seacoast and rivers—far more so than most readers suspect.

Late last century, and early this century, the Japanese ventured to find an outlet in Canada, the States, Mexico, South America and elsewhere. And while, on a large scale, making test in this way, they did not forget their own home vacant areas, and the lands of their near neighbours.

They have pushed south to the large island of Formosa, north to Hokaido, the Chishima and Karafutu. In addition, they ventured into Eastern Siberia, Corea and Manchuria.

In due time overgrown Russia undertook to wipe Japan from the map, was badly beaten, lost her fleet, Port Arthur, and Corea.

To-day Japan holds Port Arthur, the south of Karafutu, and Corea. Moreover, our enterprising neighbour Empire, Japan, has the control of Manchuria.

Digitized by Google

Necessity, arising out of many causes, some of which were unjust legislative acts of other nations, forced the Island Empire to turn her attention to Asia.

Russia, beaten; China, in her age-long confusion and internal chaos; Corea, in the hands of Japan, and the population question growing more urgent and voiceful, all opened the way for the Sunrise Kingdom to enter Manchuria, invest billions of dollars and pour her population and men of enterprise thereinto, until Manchuria is becoming more and more the hope, safety and strength of the Empire.

No people on earth were in greater need of an open door into vast vacant areas, and no people on earth, at any time, with greater enlightenment saw the open door and entered therein.

Wisely and timely they entered, and now have established a safe government and, in a little while, Manchuria will be as sanely and strongly governed as is the homeland itself. And Japan governs herself and people of all classes wisely and helpfully.

In the near future, Manchuria, Corea, Eastern Mongolia, and the Empire proper, will number 100,000,000 well-governed, successful, comfortably occupied people.

The unjust and even cowardly legislation of other countries is making it much better for Japan than if her population had scattered indefinitely and been lost to the Empire.

We learn that under the wise and safe control of Japan in Manchuria, and as a result of the anarchy and chaos of helpless China, hundreds of thousands of Chinese are pouring into Manchuria.

These may be looked upon as the human raw products going to where they can be fed, housed, clothed, homed and trained for better things and conditions.

Thus Japan, from the national, economic, agricultural, industrial and military standpoint, is truly pursuing a wise course, a course in due time a great blessing to China, Manchuria and Corea, and to civilization. We wish our friend Japan perfect success.

THE PYRAMID.

THE SPHINX.

By A. E. GATES.

A CERTAIN Professor, in a talk on the Pyramids of Egypt, emphasized the statement that they were all the tombs of kings, etc.

As the lecture was "listened in" to by vast numbers of people, it makes it extremely difficult to make these people understand that, whatever some of the Pyramids were built for, it is a certain fact that the Great Pyramid was in no way built for such purposes.

To-day we so often read articles which express the why and the wherefore of the chambers and passages of the Great Pyramid that we are apt to forget that there are others of a smaller type of which we hear but little.

We may read of the Pyramids of Egypt, but the interest, the wonder, the quickening of our imagination, our utter amazement, begins when we study the Great Pyramid. Time, remoteness of origin, enormity of proportion, all these added together compose such a thick curtain as to almost shut out all contact from our minds. So much is this the case that we often feel constrained to ask in imitation of our ancestors, when they first saw the manna on the ground, "What is it?" In answer, some are always ready to aver that the Pyramids are the tombs of ancient kings; but we are now thinking of the Great Pyramid.

Possibly most of these triangular elevations were piled up into the air for the realization of some kingly notion about immortality, or to prove to the oncoming nations all over the world the possibilities of men of power who had acquired the knowledge of conic section and geometrical precision combined with building construction (and all this is seen and more also by those who read the articles by Mr. Davidson or listening to his most interesting and informing lectures in reference to points only understood by qualified engineers), and, according to Herodotus in an after age, thought he could estimate the exact returns of all rations served out to numberless slaves whose diet consisted of onions and bread as a reward for their labours!

By the law of association we are impelled in mind and thought towards the Sphinx, from whom generations have perhaps evolved the idols of stone, and monuments of unchangefulness in the midst of change.

How he has watched, from the Ethiopian and Egyptian kings, right along the ages to Napoleon and the "Assyrian" Kaiser, as they dreamt of an Eastern Empire, and has looked upon the ceaseless misery of the Egyptian race, as well as upon travellers with keen eyes—Herodotus centuries ago, and Warburton of more recent times.

So, I say, the Sphinx has watched with earnest and tranquil mien.

And we shall die, and Islam will wither away, and the British Lion straining far over his loved India has planted a firm foot on the banks of the Nile, and the Sphinx may keep looking while the British Lion obtains the equipoise of his body by placing another foot upon the banks of the Euphrates and prepares to sit in the seats of the faithful.

And still that sleepless head of rock will watch the works of a busy race as they gather in countless numbers and continue their onward march in the direction marked out by God, the Alpha and Omega, Who said in the beginning: "Let there be light"—and light was, and Who also said, "Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world"; whom "He sent to be a light to lighten the Gentiles and the glory of His people Israel"; whom Jesus came to redeem, and by whom the Gentiles also can be saved from the wrath of God.

So we say with gladness, "Look on, O Sphinx, for the time is at hand, thou wilt not be required much longer to guard the land that was promised to our father Abraham, because the promise is about to be fulfilled, the Chosen Seed is about to be recognized."

"He who should come will come," and the Chosen Nation looks for no other leader, and we begin to wish that the stony eyes of the Sphinx might be able to see what we are destined to gaze upon in the end of the age, viz., the King in His beauty, Emmanuel, of whom the angels said, "Why stand ye gazing up into Heaven? This same Jesus shall come as ye have seen Him go up into Heaven."

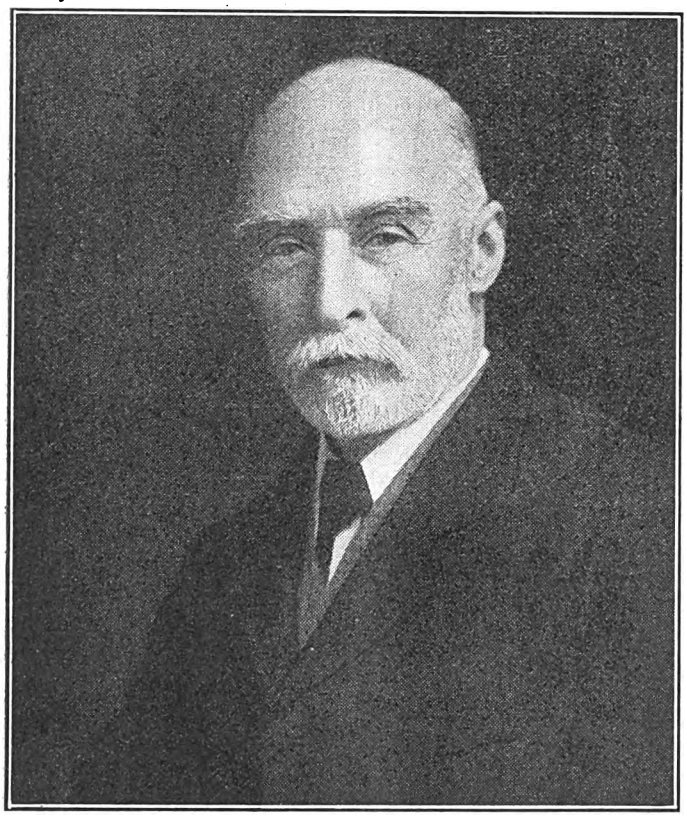
Truly the House of Israel has whereof to be glad.



"It is high time to awake out of sleep." His glorious appearing is about to take place, and remember He Himself said, "What I say unto you I say unto all—WATCH."

"Let the living stones cry out!
Let the sons of Abraham shout!
Praise we all our lowly King,
Give Him thanks, rejoice and sing!"

OBITUARY.

THE LATE MR. H. O. SOUTTER, M.A., J.P.

MR. SOUTTER has passed on to the new and better life. He had attained a ripe old age. For some years he had been in failing health, in fact he was never the same after the tragic death of his wife through a street accident at Edenbridge where they lived.

THE LATE MR. H. O. SOUTTER, M.A., J.P.

Mr. Soutter was a solicitor of high standing; for some forty years he acted as solicitor in important cases which came under the cognizance of the House of Lords. He had been an ardent British-Israelite for many years, and served on the Council both of the Imperial B.-I. Association and later on the Council of the B.-I.-W. Federation, the Constitution of which he helped to draft.

We offer our sympathy to his son and daughter in their bereavement.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER.

DEAR SIR,—On reading the reports of the recent heated debate in the House of Commons on the question of the inter-allied War Debts Settlement, I could not fail to be strongly impressed by the close analogy existing between Britain's attitude, as crystallized in the Balfour Note of 1922, addressed to various European States, and the stand taken by Abram after his victory over the Kings of Shinar, Ellasar, and Elam, as recorded in Genesis xiv, 21–24. It should be noted that, by his combat with the latter kings, Abram constituted himself, in a military sense, the ally of the Kings of Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, Zeboiim and Bela.

The following quotations from the relative documents illustrate the parallel:—

Genesis xiv, 21–24.

"And the King of Sodom said unto Abram, Give me the persons, and take the goods to thyself. And Abram said to the King of Sodom, I have lift up mine hand unto the Lord, the most high God, the possessor of heaven and earth, That I will not take from a thread even to a shoelatchet, and that I will not take anything that is thine, lest thou shouldest say, I have made Abram rich: Save only that which the young men have eaten, and the portion of the men which went with me, Aner, Eshcol, and Mamre: let them take their portion."

Balfour Note.

Par. 5.

". . . . It is true that if all inter-allied debts were paid, the British Treasury would, on balance, be a large gainer by the transaction . . ."

Par. 8.

". . . . The policy favoured by His Majesty's Government is . . . that of . . . . writing off, through one great transaction, the whole of the body of inter-allied indebtedness. But if this be found impossible of accomplishment, we wish it to be understood that we do not in any event desire to make a profit out of any less satisfactory arrangement. In no circumstances do we propose to ask more from our debtors than is necessary to pay our creditors. . . . ."

Secretary of State for War:
(Same Debate.)

". . . The fundamental principle of the Balfour Note, namely, that Great Britain should take no more from Europe by way of debts and reparations than she requires to pay her own obligations to the United States. . . ."

Chancellor of the Exchequer:
(Debate of April 17th, 1929.)

". . . . We have never taken and never will take a penny more from Europe than what is required on the other hand from ourselves. . . . Above all we base the proud principle that we our-

The post-war financial settlement laid down by Abraham thus becomes the basis of the War Debts Settlement arrived at by his children millenniums afterwards. It is more than mere coincidence. It is an illustration, a reminder maybe, of the fact that the Spirit which inspired and animated Abraham to-day guides in the same manner that corporate entity—the "servant nation"—which, springing from his loins, is fast realizing in its national experience the fulfilment of the destiny promised to Abraham's seed.

M. K. SIMINGTON.

To the Editor of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER.

DEAR SIR,

You can have no idea of the wonderful uplift your articles in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE give to me.

I am writing in reply to your request for information as to furnaces, re your inspiring articles on Daniel's visions.

The furnace you have so minutely described to which Daniel went "UP" is one that would be used for the smelting of iron, and the "servants of Nebuchadnezzar" would be slain by the heat while on the charging platform at the top of the furnace.

Bronze or brass cannot be melted in contact with fire but only by being surrounded by fire, i.e., in a crucible; the reason for this is that bronze is an alloy of copper and tin (sometimes with a small admixture of zinc and, or, other metals), while brass is an alloy of copper and zinc (sometimes with a small admixture of tin and, or, other metals), the varying admixtures being determined by the purpose to which the alloy is to be put.

Now Copper has a melting point of			1970° F.
Zinc	,,	,,	650° F.
Tin	,,	,,	415° F.

The copper is melted first and the other metals are added and stirred in immediately before pouring into the mould.

Of the various metals simultaneously placed in the crucible, it will be seen from the above table of melting points that the zinc, tin, etc., would be melted and evaporated before the copper was melted.

Bronze or brass can be, and is, often re-melted, but is spongy or porous owing to the elimination by evaporation of the zinc, tin, etc., and the re-melted metal can be strengthened by the addition of copper, zinc, tin, etc., but is always inferior to the virgin alloy and would not have the same fine, close grain, nor would it take on the same highly polished surface.

Further, you ask what kind of furnace would be used for the smelting of bronze or brass? This is really determined by the difficulty of man handling the crucible containing the molten alloy (usually about 2 cwts.), so that the furnace is quite a small one, approximately 3 feet diameter and 6 feet deep.

The Bible tells us that Hiram cast the Temple ornaments in the plain of Jordan, where the particular "clay ground" is found for making the moulds in which only can bronze or brass be cast; this is wonderfully informative to the engineer, and is one more small instance of the astounding accuracy of the much-disputed Book, but the statement that completely staggers the engineer's mind is that the Temple ornaments were each of "one casting, one measure, and one size."

From the dimensions given, it can be easily calculated that the two pillars before the Temple weighed 42 tons and the molten sea 72 tons (ignoring the embossed ornaments on each); with a crucible holding a paltry 2 cwts. it will be seen that 420 and 720 furnaces, respectively, were required (neglecting the weight of the runners, gates, feeders, etc., needed for the castings), and one's imagination is simply staggered when considering the short time available between the drawing of the crucible from the furnace and pouring the alloy into the prepared mould, the enormous organization and the very fine estimation in time required to ensure this large number of consecutive pourings of metal in strict and speedy rotation, without a hitch, to make a satisfactory casting; one can only stand aghast at the engineering knowledge displayed by the builders of the Ark, the Great Pyramid, Solomon's Temple and its furniture, as a whole; one is forced to the conclusion that these ancients were infinitely more advanced in knowledge than we are to-day with our vaunted science.

Another engineering point is that bronze or brass, if in contact with the elements and particularly air, would oxidize and perish with the passage of centuries; this compels one to the idea that, since the Temple pillars, etc., have to be returned to Jerusalem, they are buried and protected from the attack of the elements; therefore, we may look forward with confidence to God's good time, when those humble tools, the pick and the spade, will discover them and once more bring confusion to the ever-increasing horde of Bible critics.

May the great God of Israel preserve you, Sir, for the few remaining years till the glorious Advent, when His Law is to be written on the hearts of all of us.

Yours very sincerely,

FRED WALKER.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

BY THE REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A.

QUESTION.—Can anyone supply the end of the following sentence, "Give a sweet savour, and a memorial of fine flour; and make a fat offering, as not being." (Ecclesiasticus xxxviii, 11.)—B. M. G.

ANSWER.—The verse quoted above is complete and concluded as it does not require any additional ending. The language is slightly archaic, as is so often the case in our beautiful English Version. The words "as not being" mean more literally in the Hebrew, "as a dead man." The chapter is divided into two parts—verses 1–23 and 24 to the end. The first part is sub-divided into three stanzas, verses 1–8, 9–15, and 16–23. The general teaching is that the physician is to be honoured, since he is from God, while the second stanza shows that healing is from God, and that it implies repentance and good works on our part. Dangerous sickness—so often according to Hebrew ideas—is regarded as the judgment of the Lord, hence the transition in the third stanza to death and mourning is as easy as it is natural.

Hence in this middle stanza the young man (cf. "my son," verse 9) is not only instructed in his sickness to pray unto the Lord, and to leave off from sin, but to humble himself as one who is dead or has no existence—"as not being"—whereupon having need of the physician, the latter will in God's goodness be successful.

Strangely enough the whole of the above verse is omitted in the Syriac Version, while the last clause is omitted in the Vulgate (Latin Version).

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL received the following cablegram from Toronto, signed by the Rev. Pascoe Goard, the Rev. George Speedie, and Mr. S. J. Frame :—"This great gathering under British-Israel auspices profoundly thanks God for the recovery of His Gracious Majesty the King, and devoutly prays he may long be spared to reign over a happy and loyal people. Please convey this message to His Majesty."

This was duly done, and a gracious reply was received from the King. Mr. Garrison sent a cable of good wishes to the B.-I. Convention held in Winnipeg on May 1st, 2nd and 3rd, to which the President, Mr. Blackaller, sent the following reply as we go to press :—"Cordial greetings reciprocated Dominion Convention, Winnipeg, also convey to our King congratulations on recovery, and loyalty of Canadian Federation."

Miss Hamilton Hunter addressed a deeply-interested audience at Fittleworth on April 30th, on "What the Stone means to Israel," enlightening and inspiring her hearers as she unfolded by the searching light of B.-I. Truth more and more of the unfathomable wonders of the Book of books.

L. T. writes :—"Some time ago I found the following in 'The Children's Newspaper' :—'A prayer for Queen Elizabeth : Grant, O merciful Father, that our Governess and gracious Queen may live and judge this little Isle—a corner of Israel, with as good success, and long continuance, as great felicity and much godliness as ever did any, to the honour and glory of Thy Name. Amen.'

"I wonder where it came from, and how some Elizabethan came to know what I have always thought was a modern discovery?"

The Secretary-General begs to remind our readers that the immediate and urgent need of the Federation is for funds wherewith to carry on its great and ever-increasing work. He hopes they have not overlooked his undertaking to raise £10,000 by the next Congress, which opens on September 30th, and he asks that generous help may speedily be forthcoming.

"Bible Mystery Numbers, and their Present-day Application : Some Startling Facts," is the title of a booklet by the Rev. Cyril C. Dobson, M.A. Price 4d., on sale in our Book Room. Numbers in the Bible is a profoundly interesting subject, though one but little understood by the average reader. Some extraordinary and startling things are brought to our notice in this booklet.

Correspondents in South Africa send us encouraging accounts of the wonderful work, the long journeys, and the excellent meetings of our Missioner, the Rev. Maxwell Carnson. We wish him and his indefatigable helper, Mr. J. T. Burton, continued success, with God's richest blessing.

Mr. Herbert Garrison addressed a good meeting of the Thornton Heath Brotherhood on Sunday last. His subject was "The Greatest Biblical and Racial Discovery of the Age." He was listened to with intense interest and received an ovation at the close. Large numbers of the Special NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER were taken, and all were applied for ; in fact, there were not enough to meet the demand.

We look for full audiences at Headquarters for the Annual May Meetings, on Thursday and Friday, May 23rd and 24th, at 2.45 and 7.30 each day. We are glad now to learn that our veteran, the Rev. Commander Roberts, R.N., one of the Deputy Presidents, expects to come up from Teignmouth in order to be with us and take part. Members are again reminded of the Annual Meeting, for receiving the Annual Report and Balance Sheet for 1929, at 5.30 on May 24th.

The special lectures on the Book of Revelation by Mr. John Leech, M.A., K.C., are to continue on Wednesday afternoon next, and each Wednesday during the month of May. The Rev. W. A. Phillips was the speaker on Thursday evening last. He has been a missionary in different parts of Africa for several years, and he related some of his experiences and difficulties, also some triumphs. Mr. Phillips is an out-and-out B.-I. He has a warm heart and a deeply devotional spirit. He goes shortly to Latvia to take up mission work there, and we wish him God's richest blessing and protection. The Thursday meeting will be held as usual, next week, at 7.30. The speaker will be announced later.

Will friends please make known locally, and help with their presence, the opening meeting of a new Branch at Plumstead, in the Vestry of St. James' Church, Burrage Road, on Thursday, May 16th, at 8 p.m., when the Commissioner-General, Mr. John Leech, is to give an address?

The Rev. T. Sparshott Johnson has recently addressed meetings at Southampton, Chichester, Herne Bay, Barking, Stratford, High Wycombe, Oxford, Headingley, Abingdon, Highgate and Cambridge, and has met with a very cordial reception everywhere. The lectures have been received with close attention, and there has been no opposition; waverers have been convinced, and the desire to hear more has been general.

Our readers will be cheered by the following incidents occurring at meetings addressed by some of our Commissioners. On one occasion when questions were asked for, there was dead silence for a few moments and then a gentleman among the audience said, "Sir, it is unquestionable." In another place the silence was broken by the remark, "It has all been so clear there is no room for questions." A lady and her son said that several questions they had been desiring to ask had been answered during the course of the lecture. Such remarks as "I am very sorry your lecture has come to an end," "The most enthralling lecture I have ever heard," "You have set my mind at rest," have been frequent.

A Correspondent writes from Palestine:—"Who were the Wise Men from the East who came to Jerusalem, saying, Where is He that is born King of the Jews? No other than representative men from the tribes who were carried to Assyria, from the Ten Tribes who were carried away. They had been studying the Scriptures and saw His star in the East and followed it. They returned to carry the good news to the tribes. How glorious it is to have this good news. Only to-day a young Jewish man said, 'When I came to Palestine I came as a Zionist and was very religious, I would not even make a fire on the Sabbath. But I soon learned that it was not well for the Jewish people to come here in unbelief just to have a Jewish home. I learned that if one believes the Old Testament and then observes what has been fulfilled he must believe the New Testament that the Messiah has already come. Look at the Christian world to-day. The Christ has come and will come again soon.' He went on to say, 'The Christian world is proving by their doing that the Messiah has come. They are a blessing to the world in every way, spiritually and temporally. Scripture is being fulfilled in them.'

WATCH. BE READY.

"Some of these Jewish young men have said the Jews want to build Palestine without God. That is just what many people are endeavouring to do in every part of the world. They say, Look what we have done. The great inventions and discoveries and universities that men have built are wonderful. See what man can do. That is very true in every part of the world, they are trying to build a world without God. They are getting the world ready for the Antichrist. The Antichrist may be living somewhere now, and may soon appear. That will mean GLORY for those of us who are looking for the CHRIST.

WATCH. BE READY."

Great Britain Great

BY

PROFESSOR E. ODLUM,
M.A., B.Sc., F.R.G.S., F.R.C.Inst.

Somewhere there is to-day a mighty Kingdom in "The Isles," a great "Coloniser," a wonderful "Lender to the Nations," a mighty "Battle-axe" and "Weapons of War," "A New Sharp Threshing Instrument," a grinding, smashing "Stone Kingdom," a Holder of "The Gate of His Enemies," ruled over by the "Seed of David," a spreader of the "Scriptures of Truth," the protector of weak nations. . . . Somewhere in this world there is a Nation which is God's Old Israel, which was, and is, to endure while the "Sun, moon and ordinances of heaven endure."

The situation of that mighty Kingdom to-day Professor Odlum indicates by the sayings and writings of many prominent men who have written or spoken concerning the British Empire. These opinions, the majority of which were expressed by men of nations other than our own, all point to the conclusion that the only nations conforming to every detail of this description are the British Empire and America.

The Fellowship of the Kingdom.

or, The Triune Kingdom of the Triune God.

By J. G. MODIN.

This book is chiefly addressed to clergy, ministers and theological students. It should especially be read by all Christians who, through misconception, are fundamentally at variance with B.-I. teaching. Send it to your clergyman.

By an entirely new way of approach it opens up an essential aspect of the Divine revelation which no reverent mind can lightly put aside, nor any logical mind gainsay, viz., the revelation of a Triune God working out His purpose in and for the world, in and through His Triune Kingdom.

A Scottish Minister writes: "The threefold aspect of the Kingdom and indeed of all the manifestations of God is a matter of which I was aware, though dimly . . . Your book has developed the theme in directions I did not dream of. I have, and can have, nothing but praise for it."

THE DOCUMENTS OF DANIEL.—XII.

By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard.

DOCUMENT VIII. (Daniel viii.) Date: Ussher 553 B.C. Scope of movement: to the establishment and fourfold division of the Grecian Empire and a further 2,300 years of "desolation"—"then shall the sanctuary be cleansed."

The Daniel literature now changes back to the Hebrew language. Henceforth the message of Daniel is to the Hebrew people.

The Divine messages to the kings and people of Babylon have ended. The messages to the people of Israel and of Judah are now to begin. As we shall see, these messages deal with:—

1. The cleansing of the sanctuary after the Babylonian treading down is finished.

2. The setting up, progress and end of the seventy weeks' nation of the Jews.

3. Daniel's prayer and confession on behalf of Judah and Israel.

4. An outline of history, including two sections of Alexander's Empire, which affords a guide by which to interpret the course of world history until the end of the age, and indicates who are the contestants in the last great struggle, namely, the successors of the said two sections of Alexander's Empire.

5. The "standing up" of Michael, the great Prince.

All of these things are outside of the Babylonian activity, but are of most vital interest to the people of Israel and of Judah; and so they are written in the mother-tongue of the Israel people—the Hebrew language.

The date of the giving of the vision is indicated by reference to the king list of Babylon. "In the third year of the reign of Belshazzar." It will be seen that this is an earlier date than the record of the happenings at the feast of Belshazzar in the preceding chapter v. But inasmuch as this is not a message to the Babylonian kings and people, it is not included among those documents which were given to them in their own language.

The place of the reception of the vision is stated. Daniel says, "I was at Shushan in the palace, which is in the province of Elam." The form of this statement does not convey the idea of residence, but would give the impression of one who was attending, or visiting there.

Thus time, place and circumstance are made to equally tie the announced message to standard world history.

"In the third year of the reign of king Belshazzar a vision appeared unto me, even unto me Daniel, after that which appeared unto me at the first.

And I saw in a vision; and it came to pass, when I saw, that I was at Shushan in the palace, which is in the province of Elam; and I saw in a vision, and I was by the river of Ulai.

Then I lifted up mine eyes, and saw, and, behold, there stood before the river a ram which had two horns: and the two horns were high; but one was higher than the other, and the higher came up last.

I saw the ram pushing westward, and northward, and southward; so that no beasts might stand before him, neither was there any that could deliver out of his hand; but he did according to his will, and became great.

And as I was considering, behold, an he-goat came from the west on the face of the whole earth, and touched not the ground: and the goat had a notable horn between his eyes.

And he came to the ram that had two horns, which I had seen standing before the river, and ran unto him in the fury of his power.

And I saw him come close unto the ram, and he was moved with choler against him, and smote the ram, and brake his two horns: and there was no power in the ram to stand before him, but he cast him down to the ground, and stamped upon him: and there was none that could deliver the ram out of his hand." (Daniel viii, 1-7.)

The passage first presents the rapid development of the Medo-Persian Empire, westward and northward and southward, all of which prophecy was duly translated into history.

Then suddenly the advent of the Grecian power is shown under the figure of an he-goat which came from the west on the face of the whole earth, and touched not the ground. And the he-goat had a notable horn between his eyes. The he-goat was Greece; the notable horn between the eyes was Alexander the Great.

Take notice of the fact that the he-goat was an unicorn, or single-horned animal, which from the beginning has been a symbol in Israel heraldry. (See Balaam's prophecy—Num. xxiv.)

Alexander and his Grecian troops were a branch of the Israel people. In accordance with the prophecy in the second chapter that the Stone Kingdom should destroy all these kingdoms, Alexander was rushing to destroy the Medo-Persian Empire, even as secular history tells us the Sacae had formerly helped to destroy that of Babylon.

Thus Medo-Persia, the silver Empire of Nebuchadnezzar's dream, passed away into history.

THE SETTING UP OF "THE THIRD KINGDOM OF BRASS."

The history of Alexander's reign follows, pre-written in a few powerful words. These are the words:—

"THEREFORE THE HE-GOAT WAXED VERY GREAT: AND WHEN HE WAS STRONG THE GREAT HORN WAS BROKEN . . . ."

Is it not manifest that the unicorn had fulfilled its destiny when it had rushed at and overturned the Medo-Persian Empire.

The death of Alexander the Great is vividly indicated by the breaking of the great horn at the height of his strength.

The kingdom of Greece now ceases to be an unicorn. In the place of the one great horn "came up four notable ones toward the four winds of heaven." In accordance with this prophecy, history shows the kingdom of Alexander to have been divided into four.

Everything has gone straight forward in the vision thus far. We have no difficulty whatsoever in checking up the progress step by step by simple reference to ancient history. We know of the marching of Alexander, the he-goat from the west; and of his progress against Persia.

We know of his untimely death, and the circumstances of it.

We know of the breaking of his kingdom into four.

Now we have a general statement of a line of activity which follows the movement, not of all the four parts of the Grecian Empire, but of one of the four divisions out of which arose the "little horn" of Idumean and Moslem power.

The sweep of the activity of this one division of the Empire occupies the attention of the seer in this vision. It is that part which produced Antiochus Epiphanes, and the later kings which ruled over Palestine; and then produced the Moslem power. These great movements of history are embraced in the sweep of the pregnant sentences contained in verses 9–12, and cover the full 2,300 years indicated as remaining.

The message of chapter vii undoubtedly follows the Empire till it centred in Rome. The "little horn" which arose there finds its fulfilment in the Papal power.

Chapter viii follows that division out of which arose the Idumean and the Moslem power, the latter headed by the Sultan and the Caliph. The two chapters are like a great river of history which divides into two great streams: Papal and Moslem. The one portrays the European power, and the other the Asiatic power.

Now comes the most interesting part of this wonderful chapter. We are invited to listen to the conversation between one saint speaking unto another saint who was the "wonderful numberer." This is the question asked: "How long shall be the vision concerning the daily sacrifice, and the transgression of desolation, to give both the sanctuary and the host to be trodden under foot?"

"And he said unto me, Unto two thousand and three hundred days; then shall the sanctuary be cleansed."

Now let us look at this question as to time—2,300 days.

"The vision of the evening and the morning which was told is true: WHEREFORE shut thou up the vision; for it shall be for many days."

There are certain guides as to the meaning of the answer.

1. "And he said unto me, Unto two thousand and three hundred days; then shall the sanctuary be cleansed."

2. "Understand, O son of man: for at the time of the end shall be the vision."

3. "Behold, I will make thee know what shall be in the last end of the indignation."

4. "For at the time appointed the end shall be."

5. "And the vision of the evening and the morning which was told is true; for it shall be for many days."

Before we can understand the two thousand three hundred years we must understand what the vision of the evening and the morning is.

It is something which had been told, and the knowledge of which is assumed. What then has been told of such a prophetic day?

We venture to say that beyond doubt it is the day of "seven times" of which Moses spoke (Leviticus xxvi), and of which the later prophets have spoken to Israel, none with more clearness than Daniel.

Seven times of punishment for Israel. Seven times of punishment for Judah. Seven times of rule for the Babylonian succession. This is the evening and morning day of prophecy. The "time, times, and dividing of a time" of Daniel, added to the "time, times, and half a time" of the sequel to Daniel, namely, the Book of Revelation.

The passage before us gives the remainder of the seven times' evening morning of prophecy, namely two thousand three hundred years, and makes that to date from the struggle between Persia and Greece. There is no specific day mentioned. It is a rule by which to measure from certain definite points in ancient history to corresponding definite points in modern history. Thus the time of the struggle between Greece and Persia should be centred about two hundred and twenty years after Nebuchadnezzar.

Now we know that the two thousand five hundred and twenty years' measure was applied on five separate occasions.

It was applied twice in the measurement of the punishment of the House of Israel.

It was applied twice in the measurement of the punishment of the House of Judah.

It was applied as the time element of the charters granting rule to the Babylonian succession of Empires.

This we believe to be the evening morning of the vision mentioned in the passage quoted above. So we shall apply it as to Israel and as to Judah.

Israel's first captivity was	740 B.C.	2300
From this subtract ..	220	520 (subtract)

Israel's second captivity..	721 B.C.	2300

Judah's final captivity ..	587	2300

Thus it will be seen that the two thousand three hundred days work out as the remainder of the periods of the great day of Israel-Judah's punishment and of Babylon's opportunity to rule.

During all this terminal period, covered by the figures given, Israel-Britain has been making head slowly against the "beast" powers of the Babylon succession: The Kingdom of the God of Heaven against the kingdom of the dream image.

The end of the first of these periods saw Europe thrown into utter confusion by the French Revolution and the Napoleonic activity which followed. It saw Israel-Britain take the field to "break in pieces" this phase of the Babylonian succession of Empires. This she did characteristically by sending out an army of some forty thousand men to meet all the forces, and all the resources, of Napoleonic Europe. Britain's great leader was the Duke of Wellington. In Spain he met all the great Marshals of France, with their forces, and routed them; and at Waterloo he finally met Napoleon himself and finished the titanic struggle. In the meantime Nelson had fought Trafalgar at sea, and had similarly finished the matter off there.

All this is great when considered as a stirring period of world history. How much greater does it appear when it is recognized as the beginning of the transfer of world power from the successors of the Cæsars to the kingdom of Israel-Britain.

Following these successes Britain at once began to make her hand felt in regard to the land of the Fathers. In 1844 Britain took up the defence of the Christians of Palestine and elsewhere in the Turkish Empire, and compelled the Porte to abolish capital punishment of Christians on account of matters of faith. The Parliamentary documents regarding this matter are of great interest.

In itself this was a great achievement. But how much greater is it seen to be when it is recognized that herein Britain was beginning to reassume the responsibilities of "rulership with God"—which is implied in the name Israel—which she forfeited when she followed Jeroboam into idolatry and rebellion against God; finally forfeiting all right under the name Israel when she was carried into captivity for the period of two thousand five hundred and twenty years, at the end of which time that right should be restored again.

The Judah series of punishment began in 603 B.C. (circa), when Nebuchadnezzar took Jerusalem, and carried the chief of the people captive. Two thousand five hundred and twenty years from this date saw Allenby march in and set Jerusalem free from the military powers of the Turk. The last of the sentence on Judah falls in about 1934–6, and thereafter the "Sanctuary shall be cleansed." Up to the present the city has been delivered from the military power and civil rule of the Turk, but "the abomination which maketh desolate" is still upon Mount Moriah, and the daily sacrifice is still "taken away." After the final end of Judah's sentence of 1934–6 we shall doubtless see the ancient site of the Temple restored to the pure worship of the God of Israel. Then the Sanctuary also will be cleansed.

We turn now to the Divine interpretation of the vision.

"And it came to pass, when I, even I Daniel, had seen the vision, and sought for the meaning, then, behold, there stood before me as the appearance of a man.

And I heard a man's voice between the banks of Ulai, which called, and said, Gabriel, make this man to understand the vision.

So he came near where I stood: and when he came, I was afraid, and fell upon my face: but he said unto me, Understand, O son of man: for at the time of the end shall be the vision.

Now as he was speaking with me, I was in a deep sleep on my face toward the ground: but he touched me, and set me upright.

And he said, Behold, I will make thee know what shall be in the last end of the indignation: for at the time appointed the end shall be.

The ram which thou sawest having two horns are the kings of Media and Persia.

And the rough goat is the king of Grecia: and the great horn that is between his eyes is the first king.

Now that being broken, whereas four stood up for it, four kingdoms shall stand up out of the nation, but not in his power.

And in the latter time of their kingdom, when the trans-gressors are come to the full, a king of fierce countenance, and understanding dark sentences, shall stand up.

And his power shall be mighty, but not by his own power: and he shall destroy wonderfully, and shall prosper, and practise, and shall destroy the mighty and the holy people.

And through his policy also he shall cause craft to prosper in his hand; and he shall magnify himself in his heart, and by peace shall destroy many: he shall also stand up against the Prince of princes; but he shall be broken without hand.

And the vision of the evening and the morning which was told is true: wherefore shut thou up the vision; for it shall be for many days.

And I Daniel fainted, and was sick certain days; afterward I rose up, and did the king's business; and I was astonished at the vision, but none understood it." (Daniel viii, 15-27.)

It will be seen that this present document leaves the then distant future hazy in the mind of the prophet.

Take note of the clearness of the statements regarding the things which occurred in Nebuchadnezzar's day. Also the history-like manner in which the last scene of the Nebuchadnezzar dynasty appeared, namely, the feast of Belshazzar, and the equally clear eyewitness-like narrative of the opening act of the Darius kingdom. See the clearness of the general vision in the seventh chapter. Then note the increasing difficulty the prophet has in foreshadowing even the overthrow of the Persian kingdom; while beyond that he is made ill by the fact that he cannot send his gaze sufficiently into the future to be clear as to what he sees.

He says, "I, even I Daniel, had seen the vision, and sought for the meaning . . ." The later events are not as clear as the earlier ones. This being the case, why do our most uncritical critics say that these things were written in post-captivity times after the events? If such had been the case, the later things down to the date of writing would have stood out most clearly.

Daniel saw and recorded the things concerning the succession of Empires as a great outline of world history.—Chapter ii.

He had seen the religio-financial system established.—Chapter iii.

He had seen and understood the dynastic vision, at least as far as it pertained to Nebuchadnezzar, and probably to the end of the seven times.—Chapter iv.

He had seen the fall of Belshazzar and the Nebuchadnezzar dynasty.—Chapter v.

He had seen the establishment of the Empire of Cyrus in which Darius was king of Babylon.—Chapter vi.

He had witnessed the vision of the march-past of the Empires, and had both written and spoken the matter.—Chapter vii.

He now saw clearly the break-up of the Persian, and the rise of the Grecian power. But beyond that his gaze becomes confused as to detail.

He hears from Heavenly witnesses that this great series of historic events shall still sweep forward for twenty-three hundred years beyond the point which he sees clearly. But of the more distant details he is not made the master. That time stretches on before him as a succession of weary years to be endured by his people before the Sanctuary can be cleansed.

Thus in suspense he faints, and is sick certain days. After that he arose and did the business of the king. He says, "I was astonished at the vision, but none understood it."

Thus stood Daniel's prophetic insight at the close of chapter viii.

TWO COLONIES OF JEWS ACKNOWLEDGE THAT WE ARE ISRAEL.

BY THE REV. COMMANDER L. G. A. ROBERTS, R.N.

WE had already heard from our Palestinian traveller, Mrs. Bloxam, that there was a Jewish Colony in Palestine whose members were not only Christians indeed, but also British-Israelites.

But it is only to-day that we have seen three letters from different people affirming the same. We are therefore perfectly satisfied and encouraged in the thought that this Movement is already taking root, not only in Palestine but in Jerusalem itself. It is to be hoped that our people will take courage and assist in this propaganda of the Kingdom in the Holy Land itself. One of these Colonies has for its object the acquisition of land in order to plant Christian Jews in the possession of tenements whereon they can acquire a living in poultry farming, which seems to be a paying concern. The head of this work is a Christian Jew and a British-Israelite. It is to be said for it, that the one who is organizing the work of settling the Colony is well known amongst the Societies' agencies in Jerusalem and elsewhere as a Christian convert of inestimable character. This work is vouched for also by Mrs. Bloxam and a Christian lady stationed in Palestine to whom she wrote for corroboration.

The other work we wish to call attention to is

THE RELIEF COLONIZATION AND REGENERATION.

This work, undertaken by a Universal Committee, whose offices are on Mount Moriah, Jerusalem, has just issued its balance-sheet, and is circulating letters attesting to its rescue work. The letters accompanying are also full of attestation to the soundness of the views held by its supporters. The doctrine of the Trinity in Unity is clearly stated. The custom of Spiritualizing the Word of God is held up as a work of Satan to hide the Truth. This Truth concerns the Kingdom of God which was taken from the Jew and given to a nation bringing forth the fruit thereof. This they show to be Israel (not Judah) headed by Ephraim, which is already a Company of Nations. This they explain to be that kingdom spoken of by Dan. ii, 44, which shall never be destroyed and is Gentilized Israel. At the same time there are with Israel 12,000 of Judah. These are all under the King. "We pray for this" they say. "Thy Kingdom Come, Thy Will be done ON EARTH," etc.

Articles written by individual Jews of this organization, such as :

" Preaching and teaching of the Kingdom,"
" Pentecost past, present and future,"
" Who is Antichrist ? ? ? "
" The Fall of Babylon," might each of them have been written by one of ourselves ; and yet they are Jews who wrote them.

Other articles we have received are full of Scripture and all in connection, and showing minds well versed in the Word of God.

They point out that the Bolshevist and Communistic scourge will at Armageddon overthrow all but the Kingdom of God.

It is a most hopeful sign how near we are to the Great Day when Our Lord shall come when we see testimony like this setting forth by Jews themselves that we are Israel. It is to be hoped that we may do our part to hold their hands up. One of them independently tells us that many Christians will have nothing to do with them because they believe the British to be Israel. So that this knowledge is made use of by some as a wet blanket to their work. What can we do to counteract this narrow-mindedness ?

QUESTIONS ANSWERED IN THE ADDRESS WHICH NOW FOLLOWS.

1. Why did the Hebrews of old keep the seventh day as the Sabbath ?
2. Why do Christians keep the first day of the week as the weekly rest and worship day ?
3. Was the Commandment binding on Gentiles as well as Hebrews ?
4. Which is the greater : Man or the Sabbath ?
5. Was man made for the Sabbath or the Sabbath for man ?
6. Is the Fourth Commandment binding on us now ?
7. How can we best observe the Sabbath ?

" The Day the Lord hath made."—Ps. cxviii, 24.
" The Sabbath was made for man."—St. Mark ii, 27.

AN ADDRESS BY THE REV. ARTHUR PRITCHARD, M.A.

" The Sabbath was made for man," for the first man even to the last man that shall exist, not only for the Hebrew but for the Gentile " stranger " also ; and both are referred to in the Fourth Commandment to emphasize the fact. So that wherever is found, at whatever period in the world's history is found, a man, the Sabbath was made for him.

The Sabbath was made for all mankind. No man therefore ought to be robbed of his Sabbath. The rich have no right to take away the Sabbath from the poor, the employer from the employees, the pleasure-seekers from the pleasure-caterers. Wherever man exists, there the Sabbath is his lawful birthright. The Sabbath was made for him. But who made it ? Well, He Who made all things is God. God worked in the world of nature for five successive " days," issuing progressive laws and putting them into operation ; at the end of the sixth day He made man, and on the next day, which began at once before man had begun his work in the world, the Sabbath was made for him. Thus man's existence began on this principle :—one day's rest preceding six days' labour. There is no record in the Word of God of this order of a day of rest and worship first and six days of work afterwards ever having been altered as regards the human race. When men left the worship of the one true God and worshipped Lucifer as the Sun God this day began to be designated Sunday, actually the name by which British and Americans know it to-day.

The Sabbath of Paradise was a day of rest and worship preceding work, and the Christian Sunday is really the same. This primeval Sabbath was kept by Adam, Abel, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and by Jacob's children when they went down to Egypt. After their sojourn there for hundreds of years (where probably as slaves they had to work seven days a week) and after the Exodus, God instituted for the Hebrews and their Gentile dependents the Saturday Sabbath, which was preceded by six days' work, and He enforced its observance by giving manna six days in succession and withholding it on the seventh days for a period of forty years. This Saturday Sabbath is referred to in Deut. v, where it says : " Observe the Sabbath day to keep it holy "—not to keep it resting in bed but resting in worship. Again, in Ex. xx : " Remember the Sabbath day " (Sabbath-rest) " Remember the rest day to keep it holy." It is a Sabbath made for man but it is also a Sabbath unto the Lord thy God. It is worthy of notice that the wording of the Fourth Commandment is such as to apply equally to the original Sabbath for the world as to the temporary Saturday Sabbath of the Hebrews, both being seventh days.

" The seventh day is A Sabbath (not the Sabbath of the A.V.) unto the Lord thy God." If there hadn't been a well-known rest day in the ancient world and a pre-existence of the Divine Law, the Fourth Commandment wouldn't have been heralded by the exhortation to REMEMBER. Remember the primary claim which God, as the Creator, makes upon the whole of human life. Six days shalt thou do thy ordinary business, but each seventh day thou shalt be free from it. Mark the position of this Commandment in the Decalogue.

The first three Commandments relate solely to the Godhead, then comes the command on Sabbath observance which is given precedence over all the other Commandments relating solely to man. And the first word is REMEMBER. " Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy," keep it apart and differently from the other days. God sanctified it in the beginning for man's sake before man fell. Thus it is a pleasing thought that every Sabbath day we have a day without the curse on man's work for disobedience resting upon it. Could God have singled out the Sabbath more than He has done ?

Sabbath observance was the first command given by God at the Creation ; and the first recorded public execution, carried out by the direct command of God, was for Sabbath breaking (Num. xv), when a man found gathering firewood for a fire which he was forbidden to light was stoned to death (Ex. xxxv, 1-3). The Fourth Commandment is the longest in point of time and the longest in point of measurement. The length and detail show not only the danger of breaking it but the care of the Lawgiver to have it observed. Right throughout the Old Testament blessing is joined on to Sabbath observance, and punishment for Sabbath breaking.

Digitized by Google

There are long passages in Isaiah, Jeremiah and Ezekiel most instructive on the importance of Sabbath observance.

Here is one of the Divine promises at the end of Isaiah lviii (R.V.):—

"If thou turn away thy foot from the Sabbath, from doing thy pleasure on My holy day; and call the Sabbath a delight and the holy of the Lord honourable; and shalt honour it (or Him), not doing thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words; then shalt thou delight thyself in the Lord; and I will make thee to ride upon the high places of the earth: and I will feed thee with the heritage of Jacob thy father."

Of course this is really a National Message (as the enlightened know) to Israel-Britain, and what stronger inducement could be given to our nation or to mortal man to keep the Sabbath God has graciously made?

When Jesus was upon earth we read that His custom was to enter into the synagogue, the Jewish place of worship, on the Sabbath day. His sermon on the Mount of Beatitudes didn't do away with the Commandments of Mount Sinai. Rather it intensified them and established them, and insisted on not only the letter of them but the spirit being observed by Christ's disciples.

What blindness on the part of the men who wouldn't allow works of necessity and mercy by the Lord of the Sabbath, and who yet suffered themselves to plot His murder on the Sabbath day. These were the men who abused the Sabbath, and their abuse Our Lord would abolish, not its use.

Man was not made for the Sabbath; on the contrary, the Sabbath was made for man's benefit, and man must get all the good out of it that God has in store for him.

The New Covenant Sabbath.

When the Levitical system came to an end the Saturday Sabbath also came to an end, for it was part of the old conditional Covenant of Sinai whose tragical close seems to have been typically foreshown by Zechariah in xi, 10; and thus the Saturday Sabbath made way for the restoration of the Consecration-before-work Sabbath. This primeval rest day was the first day of the first Adam and marked the beginning of a new state of things for this world, and 4,000 years after, on the day of the Resurrection, this same first day of the week was the first day of the Second Adam, namely, Our Lord Jesus, and marked once again the beginning of a new era for this world.

This holy day was constantly called, under the Levitical system, "the morrow after the Sabbath," for which remarkable typical ceremonies were instituted, like the waving of the first-fruits after the Passover and at Pentecost.

These types were fulfilled on Easter Sunday when Christ became the first-fruits of them that slept, and on Whit Sunday when the 3,000 souls were a kind of first-fruits of His creatures. This morrow after the Hebrew Sabbath, this first day of the week (marked out repeatedly as the third day from the day of Redemption), was the day that the Lord had made in the beginning, and its world-wide observance didn't need any new Commandment. The original, primeval institution by the Unchangeable God stood, and stands for all time, but when the Lord Jesus honoured the day by His Resurrection it was to be known as the "Lord's Day," a better name than the misnomer Sunday.

The Lord's Day.

The first Lord's Day He sanctified by appearing at the service in the Upper Room, the second Lord's Day He did the same, the eighth He sanctified by the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, and it was in the same Holy Spirit, on the Lord's Day, that St. John was when he was vouchsafed his wondrous vision, recorded in the last Book of the New Testament. On another Lord's Day we read of the celebration of the Lord's Service at Troas, where St. Paul abode seven days and then it was the first day, and the disciples came together to break bread, apparently the chief thing on the Sunday, though St. Paul also preached to them.

Every Lord's Day the Christians at Corinth when they assembled themselves together were to contribute to the offertory as God had prospered them. So also in the Church gatherings of Galatia, Macedonia and Greece.

Such are some of the references to the keeping holy of the first day of the week in the lifetime of the Apostles. The Day was observed as a day of rest and worship, a day of peace and joy, and a day for the Holy Communion.

"This is the day which the Lord hath made"—a sacred trust committed to His Church, and it is the duty of every member to keep it, to help others to keep it, and to help to raise up an embankment against the tide of secularism and industrialism which seems to be fast coming in.

"Ye shall keep My Sabbaths and reverence My Sanctuary." It is a permanent charge to "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." As Baxter said: "Shall God allow thee six days and wilt thou not afford Him one?" Remember it beforehand and prepare for it, remember it as the sanctification of a new week of life in which all our labour can be done with sanctified intention. Remember it, as one suggests, as a Divine institution for the whole world, in busy city, in quiet village, in battleship and ship of commerce, at home or abroad; remember it as a law of necessity for man—the day, the whole day, to keep it holy. And this can't be fully done in isolated rest but in actual communion with the smaller family at home and the larger family in the Church of God.

We must not forsake the assembling of ourselves together, we must not be afraid of the world's contempt and the charge of narrow-mindedness, we must resist the downward tendency to claim for work and for recreation the whole of man's time or God's. We "must," on the Lord's Day, be in our Father's House and about our Father's business (St. Luke ii. 49). Oh that we might know more of the must of love, the compulsion of Charity! The Scribes and the Pharisees were impelled by the must of duty, but Our Lord says to Christians that their righteousness is to exceed that of the punctilious Scribes and Pharisees. The Christian who realizes the must of love finds duty and the "fulfilling" of every Commandment a delight. Yes, he finds the duty of observing the Sabbath a delight, and his question is not, "What may I not do lest I bring dishonour on the day," but "What may I do to honour it, to reverence it, and to make it a day of blessing for my own soul and for others."

This is the Day of Light, let there be light to-day and plenty of it.

Sunlight? Yes, greet it early in the morning and be present at the Lord's Own Service.

Mental light? Yes, read more of the Bible on Sunday than any other day and, discountenancing the Sunday newspaper, peruse a serious book.

Spiritual light? Most certainly. Open wide the eyes of your heart to the Holy Spirit, Who is the Giver of spiritual light, and never let a Lord's Day come and go without bracing the conscience for the solemn realities of life and death.

"This is the day the Lord hath made,
He calls the hours His own;
Let Heav'n rejoice, let earth be glad,
And praise surround the Throne."

LIFE: A WHITSUN MESSAGE.

By J. G. MODIN.

"I AM come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." (John x, 10.)

Christmastide, Eastertide, Whitsuntide. Here, in that simple saying of Jesus Christ, are summed up for us the messages of the three great festivals of the Christian year!

"I AM COME—"

We celebrate the glorious fact at Christmas, when the "Word made flesh" came as a little Babe at Bethlehem, to be Emmanuel—"God with us"—and to make God manifest to the world as the "brightness of His glory and the express image of His Person."

He came, also,

"THAT THEY MIGHT HAVE LIFE—"

The gift of God which especially occupies our thoughts at Eastertide.

Not physical life, for that man has enjoyed since the sixth "Day" of Creation, but life Eternal, bought with the price of Calvary's Cross—since "without shedding of Blood there can be no remission of sin"—and sin was the great impassable barrier which the Prince of this world had erected between a Holy God and fallen man; between life, the life which the Lord of Glory came to bestow, and death, which is the wages and penalty of sin.

But to break down the barrier, and open up the way of everlasting life for "whosoever will" to enter in, was not the final goal of the earthly ministry of Our Lord, for He said He came that His followers might have life, and that they might "HAVE IT MORE ABUNDANTLY."

How better could the message of Whitsun be described? It is the outpouring of the Pentecostal fullness of Grace in fulfilment of the promise of the Father; the enduement with power from on high of the surrendered life of the disciple.

These things are the secret of the "life more abundant"; yet, how much do we who profess and call ourselves Christians know, or show, of the dynamic force of this Grace and Power of God which should be ours through His indwelling Spirit? How many of us "follow on to know the Lord" any further than the transaction which we made with the Christ at the Eastertide of our life?

Some of us have been content to believe that the promise of the Holy Spirit received its fulfilment in Baptism or Confirmation, and that there is nothing further to be obtained; yet such lives display little power and Christ-likeness in the face of an unbelieving world! But, in reality, these outward signs, together with Church-going, "saying our prayers," and reading the Bible are no direct evidence or proof of a Spirit-filled life, they are merely evidences that the Holy Spirit has entered and is working in that life; but too often His Influence and Power is restricted to those few periods which by habit are set apart for the things of God. It therefore depends entirely on the human will to what extent the fullness of the Pentecostal Grace and Power may flow in and take control, to lead that soul into the more abundant life which Christ came to bring.

"Until ye be endued with Power from on high." (Luke xxiv, 49.)

"Ye shall receive the Power of the Holy Ghost coming upon you." (Acts i, 8, marg.)

POWER! Something irresistible, an unconquerable strength, a controlling influence. Would the world have pronounced the verdict of "failure" over Christ's religion—as it has—if Christ's Church as a whole had displayed this powerful force which has been at its disposal since the early days of organized Christianity, when indeed that Power did "turn the world upside down"? (Acts xvii, 6).

"God giveth not the Spirit by measure," either to individuals or to the Church as a whole. The key of life more abundant is placed in the hands of every soul who receives the gift of life Eternal. The trouble is, and we say it reverently, men are afraid to submit themselves to its power; they hold back from the possible consequences; they are unwilling to respond to its demands—to submit to its prohibitions—to follow where God may direct! They therefore control the working of the Holy Spirit in their lives, instead of letting the Spirit control them.

Let us get down to plain thinking here, for what may not the Lord require and expect, at His Coming, of us to whom He has granted such enlightenment in His Word, concerning His Plan and Purpose, as is the privilege and responsibility of British-Israelites? These solemn festivals were almost better left unobserved if they do not serve—not only to remind us of events of long ago—but to shake us out of the ruts of conventional Christianity, and do something to make us more like Our Lord and more anxious to fulfil His declared purpose for us, that is, "that we might have life, and that we might have it more abundantly."

What is this life more abundant?

Surely Kipling was inspired with the vision of its tremendous possibilities when he wrote his immortal poem "If," which has been such an inspiration to so many brave lives.

But Paul probed deeper, analysing the progress of the Christian life from stage to stage. Of the average life of the professing Christian he never wrote truer words than when he said: "The flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh; and these are contrary the one to the other; so that ye cannot do the things that ye would." (Gal. v, 17.) In other words, the words of the Lord Jesus Himself, "Ye cannot serve God and mammon"; there must be a line of demarcation somewhere if we are to "stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ has made us free." What are we to do? Paul tells us the only remedy is to "walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfil the lusts of the flesh." The marginal rendering gives "and fulfil not the lusts of the flesh," indicating the necessity of personal effort, as well as relying on the promised power of God to enable us to stand.

But the question next arises: What are the lusts of the flesh which so war against the Spirit? Are we guilty of them?

Paul gives us in the same chapter a very complete list—and it covers some very "human" failings—but his verdict against those who trifle, and do not cut them right out of life, is clear-cut and sharp: "I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the Kingdom of God." (v. 21.) What a warning—God help us to heed it!

Let us ponder over them for ourselves, putting into modern terms, as we read, some of the old-fashioned words which tend to hide their present application to our lives.

"Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these:—

Adultery,	Hatred,	Heresies,
Fornication,	Variance,	Envyings,
Uncleanness,	Emulations,	Murders,
Lasciviousness,	Wrath,	Drunkenness,
Idolatry,	Strife,	Revellings,
Witchcraft,	Seditions,	and such like."

He is indeed a saint whose heart does not convict him a sinner somewhere in such a list; yet—remember Paul's warning; remember Paul's remedy.

Let us look at the other picture which he draws of the Christian who is striving to walk in the Spirit, for the fruits he displays are the very antithesis of those we have just enumerated.

Love, Joy, Peace—these, when the old Adam would rise up within in the spirit of hatred, wrath or strife.

Longsuffering, Goodness, Gentleness—when the natural instinct would tend to the spirit of variance, seditions and envyings.

Faith—when the temptation is strong to dabble in heresies or new cults.

Meekness—when the spirit of emulation flatters.

Temperance—when the call of world revels and seemingly harmless pleasures bid fair to entrap the unwary pilgrim into paths inconsistent with his high calling.

Truly, no one could achieve such a standard of life except by some Power and Grace other than his own; and therefore Paul commends to us as the only proved and effective remedy that (v. 24) "they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh, with the affections and lusts"—that is, we too must make a clean sweep of every walk and habit of life that is not compatible with, or that wars against our "walk in the Spirit" of "Life more abundant."

God, Who is calling us to this life, would have us willing to give up, and determined to surrender every habit, indulgence or occupation that our conscience tells us we cannot invite the Holy Spirit to share. And until, as did the early Christians, we have thus "crucified the flesh," Our Father cannot endue us with Power from on high, and we shall be living far below the standard which the Lord Jesus Christ declared it was His will that His followers should attain.

"Happy is he that condemneth not himself in that thing which he alloweth!" (Rom. xiv, 22.)

The world pronounces this pathway to be narrow and unbalanced. Narrow—in another sense—it is indeed, as the Lord Himself declared it to be; but surely the unbalanced man is the Christian who stands with one foot in Heaven and the other on earth, and feels the tug both ways to his constant undoing—and unrest—and entire dissatisfaction with both ways. As the Heavenly vision widens, so the earthly vision correspondingly narrows; so that the Christian who plants both feet firmly on the Heavenly road finds the so-called pleasures of earth beneath his feet and out of harmony with his life, just as surely as he who plants both feet firmly on the world's highway finds the pleasures of Heaven above his head and out of harmony with his life. "Ye cannot serve two masters."

Narrow; yet fuller and freer than any life the world can offer; not hedged around with endless prohibitions, but a glorious "pressing toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." (Phil. iii, 14.)

Yes, these things are the secrets of the life more abundant which is the real reflection of the Holy Spirit in man, and which can be the precious possession of every follower of Christ who unreservedly surrenders his whole nature, body, soul and spirit to the indwelling, controlling, power of the Holy Ghost.

Let us fearlessly face the issues, the logical issues, this Whitsuntide.

If we believe that the Lord is Coming again; if we believe that His Coming is near at hand; if we believe that Israel-Britain is the Forerunner of the King, just as John the Baptist was the Forerunner of the Saviour; dare we trifle with our life—with our personal relations with the world and its standards—lest we be ashamed to meet Him at His Coming, and lest we forfeit the place prepared for us in His Kingdom?

Bunyan knew both sides of life; listen to his advice:—

"When Christians unto carnal men give ear,
Out of the way they go, and pay for't dear;
For Master Worldly Wiseman can but shew
A Saint the way to bondage, and to woe."

* * *

"Now, Faithful, play the man, speak for thy God:
Fear not the wickeds' malice, nor their rod;
Speak boldly, man, the Truth is on thy side;
Die for it, and to LIFE in triumph ride."

"Thine ears shall hear a Word behind thee, saying: This is the Way, walk ye in it,—when ye turn to the right hand, and when ye turn to the left." (Isaiah xxx, 21.)

Francis W. Newman justly observed that "the apathy and ignorance concerning the Old Testament in our English Universities had made the Hebrew History almost a sealed book to us," and to this may be ascribed his own scepticism and his brother's turning to what he calls a belief in "magical sacraments"; for such apathy or unbelief sets aside that great historical and ethical foundation on which the whole Bible scheme is founded, and makes it consist of disjointed sections, bald abstractions, and barren theories; depriving it of all harmony, consistency and moral force.

BIBLICAL METALLURGY.—V.

THE TEMPLE CASTINGS AND NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S IMAGE.

BY ANDREW B. BUCHANAN.

Two Hundred and Thirty-five Tons of Brass!

What a record! What an achievement!

Were those mighty castings made in our own day, the leading engineering and metallurgical papers would be devoting special articles to their description and to the whole process of their manufacture.

Yet the Scriptures pass them over in such an unassuming manner that many fail to see the wonderful revelation given of Israel's ancient glory.

What became of all this array of Brass?

We learn from Scripture that it was carried to Babylon.

2 Kings xxv, 13: "And the pillars of brass that were in the house of the Lord, and the bases, and the brasen sea that was in the house of the Lord, did the Chaldees break in pieces, and carried the brass of them to Babylon."*

2 Chron. xxxvi, 18: "And all the vessels of the house of God, great and small, and the treasures of the house of the Lord, and the treasures of the king, and of his princes; all these he brought to Babylon."

We direct attention to the structure of this verse:—

All the vessels . . . . great and small, the treasures of the house of the Lord.

Jer. lii, 17: "Also the pillars of brass that were in the house of the Lord, and the bases, and the brasen sea that was in the house of the Lord, the Chaldeans brake, and carried all the brass of them to Babylon."*

Where is all the Brass now?

The opinion is held in some quarters that the brass came back to Jerusalem under Ezra.

We are quite certain, however, that the brass DID NOT RETURN TO JERUSALEM UNDER EZRA.

Ezra i, 7: "Also Cyrus the king brought forth the vessels of the house of the Lord, which Nebuchadnezzar had brought forth out of Jerusalem, and had put them in the house of his gods;"

9-10: "And this is the number of them . . . ." 30 chargers of gold, 1,000 chargers of silver, 29 knives, 30 basons of gold, 410 silver basons, 1,000 other vessels.

11: "All the vessels of gold and of silver were five thousand and four hundred. All these did Sheshbazzar bring up with them of the captivity that were brought up from Babylon unto Jerusalem."

Here, then, we have the inventory of the material returned from Babylon. We have also the information as to these vessels being kept apart from secular use in Babylon, for Nebuchadnezzar ". . . . . had put them in the house of his gods." [See Secretary-General's Notes of the 16th March.]

We must also remember that Ezra felt the need of an escort (viii, 22). What, then, would his plight have been with a burden of over 250 tons of brass, on the long trail of over four months' duration? (vii, 9.)

The Brass is still in Babylon.

Jer. xxvii, 19: "For thus saith the Lord of hosts concerning the pillars, and concerning the sea, and concerning the bases, and concerning the residue of the vessels that remain in this city,† 20: "Which Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon took not, when he carried away captive Jeconiah the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah from Jerusalem to Babylon, and all the nobles of Judah and Jerusalem:

21: "Yea, thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel, concerning the vessels that remain in the house of the Lord, and in the house of the king of Judah and of Jerusalem;

22: "They shall be carried to Babylon, and there shall they be until the day that I visit them, saith the Lord; then will I bring them up, and restore them to this place."†

In the passages of Scripture quoted, it will be observed that there are two apparent interpretations:—

(1) The brass was all broken to pieces and as such carried to Babylon. [Refer to *.]

(2) The various pieces were preserved intact: as such they were carried to Babylon and are still there. [Refer to †.]

The study is thus one of extreme complexity and has been engaging the constant attention of the present writer for over six years.

No. 2 appealed very strongly to us in that it seemed to point to God using those castings to show forth His glory. That He would produce them in His own good time as witnesses to the truth of the Bible when the age had become materialistic. Also that, through them, there would be preserved for all time the measures of length and of capacity.

No. 1, however, was a powerful weapon in the hands of the critic and remained a vital force to be reckoned with.

Five years ago we presented our problem to a Hebrew scholar, who pointed out that "to break in pieces" did not necessarily mean in the Hebrew TO SMASH TO BITS; but could be taken as: to take to pieces or to separate the pieces.

This interpretation would seem to be in line with: 2 Kings xvi, 17: "And King Ahaz cut off the borders of the bases, and removed the laver from off them; and took down the sea from off the brasen oxen that were under it, and put it upon a pavement of stones."

Here, then, we had an interpretation which allowed the theory to fit the facts without straining. Upon this single premise and with the full knowledge that the critic might descend upon us, we wrote the article,‡ calling attention to the Jeremiah passage (xxvii, 19-22).

We had hoped that some Hebrew scholar would have opened out the subject; this, however, has not been done.

It is always dangerous to formulate a theory upon a single premise, it was therefore necessary for us to investigate the "break in pieces" aspect. For this purpose we submitted the following questions to various Hebrew scholars:—

What is the exact Hebrew sense of the phrase:

"Break in pieces?"

Does it mean to smash to bits?

Does it mean to take to pieces or to separate the pieces?

In every case the answer came back:—THE HEBREW SENSE IS: TO SMASH TO BITS.

Let us then accept this finding.

The brass therefore went to Babylon as scrap, and according to Jeremiah it must be kept in Babylon.

What became of it in Babylon?

This leads us to consideration of

NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S IMAGE.

We must now refer the reader to Mr. Goard's article in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER, dated March 2nd, 1929.

In this article Mr. Goard makes the suggestion that the brass carried to Babylon was worked into the Nebuchadnezzar image of Daniel iii.

It might seem at first sight that this article was built up upon pure speculation. The careful student, however, never rejects a theory until it has been tested out. Let us test the theory out. We hold no brief for Mr. Goard; we are dealing with the subject from the purely technical standpoint.

The first thing that the reader must get a clear conception of is the shape of the image as given in Daniel iii.

The specification gives it as 60 cubits in height and 6 cubits in breadth, and as no width is given we have assumed that this is the same as the breadth, i.e., 6 cubits.

Now there are three cubits mentioned in Scripture:—

(1) The cubit of a man (Deut. iii, 11).

(2) The cubit as given in the Tabernacle and Temple measurements.

(3) The cubit and an handbreadth of Ezekiel xl.

Let us take the cubit of the image to be the cubit of a man;

NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S IMAGE.
FIG 11.

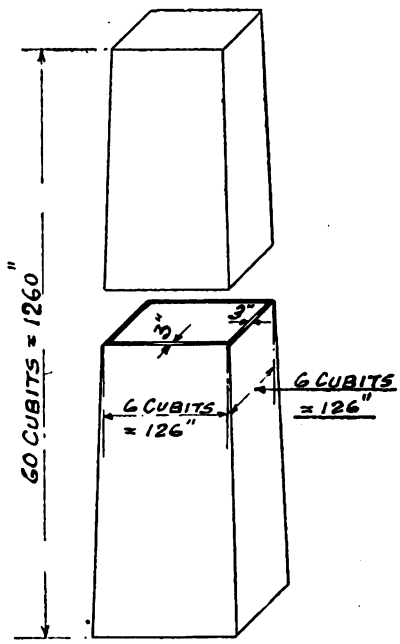
let it be the Egyptian cubit of 20.63 B. inches as given by Mr. Davidson, and since we are dealing in these articles with round numbers only, let the image cubit be taken as 21 B. inches.

From the data given we get Fig. 11.

A glance at the diagram will reveal at once that it cannot under any circumstances be converted into the image of the human form.

The ratio of height to breadth is 10—1.

Imagine a human figure 6 ft. in height and only 7¼ inches in breadth.



Mr. Goard's warning therefore on page 130 (foot of page) is timely.

Now since the image is not that of the human figure, the worship was not that due to personal homage, but worship due to some system. This we think should be perfectly clear.

Our next objective is to find out if the image could absorb all the brass taken to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar.

Let us assume that the image pedestal was hollow, and that the thickness was 3 inches, the same as the pillars of the Temple.

Fig. 12 will show what we mean.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S IMAGE.
SCALE 1" = 200"
FIG 12.

Volume of back and front:
2 × 1,260 × 126 × 3 ... ... = 952,560 cu. ins.
Volume of the two sides:
2 × 1,260 × 120 × 3 ... ... = 907,200 cu. ins.
Assuming the taper to be 4 ft., then vol. of top:
96 × 96 × 3 ... ... = 27,648 cu. ins.

Total volume ... = 1,887,408 cu. ins.

Weight = 1,887,408 × 0.3 ... ... = 566,222 lbs.
= 253 tons.

It will thus be seen that the pedestal of Nebuchadnezzar's image could absorb all the brass of the Temple castings.

In view of the Hebrew scholarship which we have already discussed, the present writer was at a dead end in his study of these castings until Mr. Goard's article appeared.

Mr. Goard's thesis therefore accounts for the brass taken to, and the present form of the brass in, Babylon. Until Hebrew scholars open up the "break in pieces" aspect this thesis must stand.

We do not suggest that a pedestal of such a height (105 ft.) could be cast in one piece. The engineering and practical difficulties involved are to the present writer insurmountable.

The pedestal could, however, have been cast in three pieces each 35 ft. in length, somewhat less than the pillars of the Temple. Each part of the pedestal could therefore have been 84 tons in weight, and for such castings a large furnace would be required.

It is remarkable that a furnace should be mentioned in this chapter of Daniel.

That the furnace was large admits of no doubt. The presence of the furnace admits also of no doubt. Let the reader now revert to the Siemens furnace, Figs. 3 and 4, and go over again the description. Should there be difficulty in visualizing the size of the furnace at the hearth, then measure the largest room in your house and judge accordingly. In our description of the furnaces we directed attention to the height of the charging platform. We omitted to state that the heat at the charging platform is so great no one can stand near this type of furnace.

Look now at Fig. 4 and note the Biblical significance.

Daniel iii, 19: ". . . . that they should heat the furnace one seven times more than it was wont to be heated."

20: ". . . . and to cast them into the burning fiery furnace."

21: "Then these men . . . . were cast into the midst of the burning fiery furnace."

22: ". . . . and the furnace exceeding hot, the flame of the fire slew those men . . . . "

22: ". . . . those men that took up Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego."

25: ". . . . Lo, I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, ..."

What a record! What a description!

Only those who have been through a modern steelwork can realize the wonderful spectacle presented to us in this veritable inferno.

Let the modernist beware! Let the theologian scoffer pause and consider these things!

This Scripture is dealing with veritable facts which no metallurgist would set aside as myth or pictorial imagery.

We shall deal further with this aspect of the subject in our next article:—TIN.

AN ELECTION PRAYER.

ALMIGHTY GOD, the fountain of all wisdom; Guide and direct, we humbly beseech Thee, the minds of all those who are about to be called to make choice of fit persons to serve in the High Court of Parliament. Grant that, in the exercise of their choice, they may promote Thy Glory, and the Welfare of this Realm. And this we beg for the sake of Our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ. Amen.

A NOTE ON THE SACRED LETTER "H" IN THE NAME ABRA-H-AM.

By HORATIO MATTHEWS, M.D.

THE Bible is the key-stone of all knowledge; and, not the least, of secular knowledge. Since the discovery by L. Woolley, in Ur, of mud-sediment from the Flood, the high-minded among archæologists have lost prestige considerably. The fact is, "history and science" do but support the statements of Holy Scripture. In the matter of the migration westward of the tribes of Israel, history and tradition have rendered their services to the student of Biblical history. And in doing so they have established more firmly than ever the principle of design and designation in the universe. The destiny of the British people has clearly been the concern of the great Designer from the first moment when the Adam of Genesis ii was created; a moment, often commented on in both secular and sacred history—vital to the whole realm of living souls on this remarkably interesting planet. The race of the "sons of God" (for so it is described in Luke iii), in spite of its shame of intermarriage with the daughters of men, and of their glory in thus appropriating honour, is destined to be white, and white all through. A covenant-keeping people, reverencing Jehovah and His Commandments, gentle as a Lamb, strong as a Lion. Such is the race that must teach the nations to beat their swords into ploughshares, and to judge with equity the oppressed of the earth. Not without being first redeemed, of course. But triumphant, because, being redeemed, it learns to overcome by the blood of the Lamb, and keeping close to the Living Word, prepares to meet its God.

Proud of its custody of the Bible, vociferous in its appeal to prophecy and the monuments, our Israel flock never wearies in its search for truth. The stones cry out at our touch; stones which have slumbered as if in death for millenia. Hear them from Gizeh, from Ur, from Stonehenge or Elheyondune; hear them from all over the world. When was there such a day of glorious victory as this? A mighty harmony begins to drown the discordant voices of mythology. The same host of angels as sang at Jesus' birth, but multiplied by ten thousand and thousand voices is heard in the distance, unmistakably, ever drawing nearer, emerging here and there from the deep mysteries of Greece, of Crete, and of earlier Sumeria, advancing overpoweringly to proclaim the Christ; to usher in peace on earth and goodwill among men. Everywhere there is a movement among the long slumbering minds of men. The dry bones begin to come together. To the wide-awake it is impossible now to sleep. Excitement forbids it; immense spiritual power descends as at Pentecost and prevents it, makes it unnecessary. Awake! and speak in tongues, O Britain. Tell the story of the dawn in rapture. Broadcast the good news! The mystery is opened; the temple of God becomes visible. A shining light illumines the sacred page; reflected from a thousand mythologies, histories and traditions! The truth of the Book is such, that, already we can disentangle the mesh of racial intermarriage and see once more the whole Israel of God.

In the twenty-two letters of the Hebrew alphabet is contained the whole of the Old Testament; and in one of them, the letter "H" or "hey," such a wealth of information as set agoing the ancient builders of tri-lithons, propylæ and sacred pillars. For it is acknowledged on all sides that the two pillars of Solomon's Temple are a consecrated form of the universal megalith. All three forms being symbolical expressions of the two trees of Eden. And in that picture—talk was at one time deposited, sermon upon sermon, the story of Paradise lost, the Fall, the coming Redemption—all these, and more, were taught by the Great Man of antiquity (variously described as Noah, Adam, the Ancient of Days, etc.), to the families of the earth, before their dispersion. This is why we find the sacred sign of "H," or, as it is called in Greek "Pi," all over the world. Before Midas had established his throne in Crete, the Masons had written much of their Bible in stone at Stonehenge, at Maes Howe, and at Carnac in Brittany; in which latter place, by the way, the tradition is still extant that the key to the inner meaning of these massive symbols is hidden away in the Tower of London.

Ten volumes would not exhaust this letter "He." Abram's name received an additional "H" as the sign of inexhaustible wealth. And in its two upright strokes (the veritable pillars of the Temple) we see the Alpha and Omega of Revelation. In our own day, the West Pi-stones of Stonehenge have fallen. Timed according to our national needs and destiny, the finger of God has moved, writing, now in the dust, and now on the wall; sometimes, in giving national victory (for the Great War ended on a 31416 or Pi-day), and sometimes, beginning in judgment at the House of God. Everywhere the stones are crying out. Dead stones to living men now; but to-morrow living stones to dead men. And alas! dead men crying out thereafter to living stones! O! Britain, awake, awake! The long winter passes! The watchman cries! The morning-star has arisen. Listen! Do you hear those sweet but distant voices? O virgin daughter of Israel! let us speak to you of what we know; let us tell you of what we see; let us be to you voices back from the dead. Why seek ye the living among museums? they are not there, but risen. Seven living eyes on one stone peer through the darkness of history; the eyes of God run to and fro through all the earth; wheels within wheels unlock the mysteries of Eden lost, and plan out clearly the site of Paradise regained, Britain's green pastures—the New Jerusalem.

May we tell you of these secrets in numbers, in letters, in stones, in names; yes, and even in folk-lore and classics? The Kingdom of Heaven is like a net cast into the sea. It is now drawn to shore. All the fish are there. See how they flounder for the most part. Little did they think their false stories of early gods, and their corrupt versions of what was taught them of God at Borsippa would be dragged to shore so ignominiously as now we have them! Hinduism, Buddhism, Taoism, and every other Ism taken captive by one letter alone, the letter "H" or "Pi," the inheritance of Abraham.

Death made writing a necessity. Bardic song is not always passed infallibly, unaltered, pregnant and full of meaning from dying father to living son. Good as human memory is when so consecrated, it could not sustain the Eden promise uncorrupted in tradition against such odds as Cain's cult, and the apostasy of Canaan's mixed peoples. Sooner or later, dispersion and strange tongues would redact the great histories and misapply the symbols, recitational gestures, ritual and parrot-like repetition, until they would become altered out of recognition, unless letters were invented. And, apart from the vowels, H was the first to come forth. The open mouth gives us, from the posterior entrance, the sound "Hey"; and from the anterior, the sound "Pi." They are one and the same originally, in meaning. The Egyptian hieroglyph "P," like the Hebrew "H," means "The." And in such a day as that, when every letter was a compressed library of tradition, "The" meant distinction, originality and highest value. Like the open mouth, it also meant starting-point, or opening. The expulsion of Eden from between the two trees was such a starting-point. Everywhere the two trees, at first represented with interlocked branches, as seen even now in the sacred entrances of many Oriental temples and areas, but later, on account of the restrictions of stone, reduced to one cross-bar, as at Stonehenge; and even omitting the cross-bar where the space between Jachin and Boaz was too great to span, as at the opening of the Great Sea towards Britain, namely, the pillars of Hercules; everywhere, we say, they are resounding the Gospel.

And what an immensity of matter both sacred and secular history and prophecy have erected on these two pillars; what innumerable repetitions of this Pi-motif in design and ornament everywhere in antiquity! Not the least was the use made of this sign to express a circle. This led to its use as a mathematical expression for the circle's ratio, without which there could have been no astronomy, no architecture, and no knowledge of the inner secrets of matter. The Great Teacher of antiquity knew all this. Tradition had to be secured, and was secured, not only by parrot-like repetition (both of which words are themselves derived from the root "Ratio," or "Ra," sun, and "Tau," cross), but by so spelling the words as to make each letter a numerical unit, in a deep scheme of circle numbers. The Hebrew names for fallen Adam and Eve, for example, will deliver up to us with ease the soli-lunar ratios for a far more accurate estimation of modern eclipses than can be got by Greenwich Observatory. And so on. The chief point, at this juncture, is that such methods of writing the sacred records were adopted for purposes of securing the unalterability of the written Word of God. The subject is too vast to admit of our saying more than this at present. In the letter "H" are secreted all the libraries of the world. The difficulty is to know where to begin. Such a vast string of costly pearls was bought by the man who discovered a hidden treasure in his field, and went and sold all that he had to buy it. This is our only difficulty; we lack enough printer's ink to tell our story. Our pen is the tongue of a ready writer, but our stationery is limited. Genesis to Revelation lies before us; what wealth lies hidden even in one little word. Bethlehem Ephratah! In this word God has recorded not only the town where the Saviour should be born, but the ph-rata, or pi-rata value giving the fraction of a mile the Inn was distant from Bethlehem.

ISRAEL'S BENEDICTUS.

By BISHOP J. H. ALLEN (U.S.A.).

THE special benediction, the closing congregational blessing which the Lord God of our fathers gave to the Aaronic priesthood to be pronounced upon the congregations of Israel is definitely set forth in the following :—

"And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, Speak unto Aaron and unto his sons, saying, On this wise ye shall bless the children of Israel, saying unto them,

"The LORD bless thee and keep thee : The LORD make His face to shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee : The LORD lift up His countenance upon thee, and give thee peace."

"And they shall put My Name upon the children of Israel, and I will bless them."—Num. vi, 22-27.

This last verse is translated by Ferrar Fenton as follows :—"Then will I place My Name upon the children of Israel and bless them."

Surely nothing could be more lovingly expressed. Nothing could express greater tenderness, favour, or watchful care. And when one grasps the great fact that by using this Divinely-given benediction, the Lord has promised to bless those of His people over whom it is said, or upon whom it is pronounced, then none could refuse to thus use it.

Hence our conviction is that this is the benediction that should be used by all our ministers, teachers and leaders at our special British-Israel services. Surely nothing could be more appropriate or desirable. Therefore, we would suggest and kindly ask that our brethren get into the habit of using this beautiful and unctuous blessing in our assemblies until it shall eventually become of universal use among us. "The Lord bless thee and keep thee : The Lord make His face to shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee : The Lord lift up His countenance upon thee, and give thee peace."

Result : "I WILL BLESS THEM."—Jehovah.

THE LESSER FOLK.—III.

A HORSE'S TEARS.

A FRIEND took up a fresh ministry in the country. The previous minister had left a trap, and a blood mare about twenty years old. Soon a man came and warned my friend that the animal was vicious. Later came her old groom, and said that she had tried to kill him. The minister promised to watch. He had seen no sign of vice. He never did.

The secret was this. The mare would of her own free will strain every nerve to pass any horse in front. The unjust touch of a needless whip turned her into a demon.

Once my friend went to call his small boy and girl to dinner. He heard shouts and loud laughter come from the neighbourhood of the stable. Going closer he found that the two mites had let the mare out and were playing "Follow my leader" round and round her forelegs. She stood quite still, but shared the play. As the straw hats came under her nose she pretended to seize them.

The faithful creature lived mostly in a meadow that surrounded the house, and constituted herself the guardian of the home. She would see no stranger approach it without her rushing to defend the entrance.

Once the minister was away ill for some months, and returned, still weak, in a closed carriage. He came one day to sit in the garden wearing a red dressing gown. The mare, head lowered and heels flying, dashed towards the fancied intruder. But when she saw her loved, lost master, from her heart broke a glad whinnying, and she came and laid her head on his shoulder, whilst tears of joy ran down her face. Said my friend—"I am not ashamed to say that I wept too."

AMOR VINCIT OMNIA.

GENESIS III.

"Yea, hath God said?" So first the seed is planted
Of doubt in Him Who never broke His word—
Leading to wonder why the boon's not granted.
This be our firm reply : "Thus saith the Lord!"

"God is not fair or just! He is denying That which He knows would make you truly wise."
Which shall we choose, on which are we relying.
"Thus saith the Lord," or Satan's subtle lies?

"God is not true! You shall not die in eating
That which such certain pleasure will afford."
Which sounds the note of truth our queries meeting,
"Thus saith the Tempter," or "Thus saith the Lord."

"God hath not said! Your Bible is but fable,
Your 'Word of God' is only word of men."
To meet this scornful libel are we able?
Yes! Answer this "Thus saith the Lord" again.

"There is no God!" Ah! Now the word is spoken ;
So blank denial follows springing doubt.
Slowly, but surely, thus faith's stand is broken
Unless "Thus saith the Lord" the lie shall rout.

The only safeguard is the word from Heaven—
The only weapon is the Spirit's sword—
The only answer, sure—the only leaven
For the world's ills, is still "Thus saith the Lord!"

(Canon) C. J. HOLLIS.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER.

DEAR SIR,—With reference to the interesting letter by Mr. Basil Stewart, which appeared in your issue of May 4th, there are two things deserving attention connected with the date of Sunday, February 10th last, the day on which the document was signed in Rome, restoring the Temporal Power of the Pope.

This date is precisely 1,260 days from the centre of the second low passage in the Pyramid ; the centre of the passage coinciding with July 23rd, 1932. That is according to the inch-month scale of thirty days to the month.

Secondly, from the commencement of the granite pavement (Mr. Davidson dates this as December 12th, 1919) to February 10th, 1929, is 3,500 days, less the number 153.

The significance of the latter figure must be familiar to all your readers, while many will recall the most interesting article dealing with three thousand five hundred days, which appeared in your journal of August 6th, 1927.

Yours sincerely,
GEORGE BEALBY.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

WE expect full audiences for our May Meetings at H.Q. on Thursday and Friday next, May 23rd and 24th, at 2.45 and 7.30 each day. The speakers have been announced in our advertising columns. Major J. Knowles, O.B.E., our President, will take the chair at the opening meeting. In addition to the pleasant surprise before mentioned, it is possible that an important announcement may be made.

We again remind members and associates that the Annual Meeting for receiving the Annual Report and Financial Statement for 1928 will be held on Friday, at 5.30.

* * *

Mr. John Leech, M.A., K.C., will give another address on Prophecy, on Wednesday afternoon next, May 22nd, at 3. The speaker last Thursday evening was Mr. J. A. Jubb, and he gave a pleasing address on "The Romance of the Davidic Throne." Mr. Garrison presided.

* * *

Our good friend, the Rev. Dr. Lincoln McConnell, D.D., has removed from St. Petersburgh, Florida, having responded to an urgent call to a larger sphere at the First Baptist Church, Jacksonville, the largest and one of the oldest cities of Florida, where the work is the most important in that part of America. Dr. McConnell sends cordial greetings to all his friends on this side of the Atlantic, who with us will, we feel sure, wish him God's blessing in his new charge. We hope he may be able to come over for the next Congress, which opens (D.V.) on September 30th, 1929.

* * *

By kind invitation of the Earl of Dysart, Miss Hamilton Hunter gave a B.-I. address at Ham House, Richmond. The Rev. Kenneth Dodds presided. Miss Hunter has also addressed a crowded audience at Blackheath, for our Branch there, on "The Redemption of Israel"; she was impressed with the high spiritual tone of the meeting, which was concluded with a prayer by the President that her presentation of Israel Truth would be followed by the Divine blessing. Another visit is looked forward to eagerly.

* * *

The Rev. Joseph Gay addressed a good company in connection with our newly-formed Branch at Highgate on May 1st, where there is excellent promise for the future. On May 7th he addressed two large audiences for our Branch at Portsmouth, over which the Rev. Watkin Davies and Dr. Hall presided. Mr. Gay has preached on two Sundays for the Rev. W. Turpitt, B.A., at Gravesend. Mr. Turpitt is now recovering from his illness we are glad to say; he is at present recuperating at Brighton.

* * *

The Rev. R. G. F. Waddington, M.A., paid a welcome return visit to the Dublin Branch, April 30th to May 3rd, and addressed seven good meetings, which included a full audience to hear his illustrated lecture on "Impressions of Palestine." The chair was taken on the several occasions by the Revs. J. S. Crockett, R. Northridge, W. W. Dungan, Eric H. Flint, Esq., and Miss A. F. Morton. The keenest interest was manifested at all the meetings.

* * *

We are very grateful for hundreds of encouraging letters from many parts of the world with donations towards the £10,000 the Secretary-General has undertaken to raise, and we are still in the Oliver Twist frame of mind on this matter.

ATROPHIED LITERATURE AND RELIGION.

England is suffering from auto-intoxication—a form of slow poisoning. The symptoms are muddle-headedness on the part of our "leaders of thought," and bewilderment on the part of the people. We are fast becoming a nation of scatter-brains. "With desolation is the whole land made desolate because there is no one who thinketh in his heart."

The result is that the two great forces which make for civilization—literature and religion—have become atrophied. Seventy-five per cent. of our "high-brows," despite their arrogant assumption of intellectual superiority, seem unable to put together two consecutive logical ideas. Their grouping after truth would be amusing if it were not so tragically pitiful, but, then, the prostitution of genius is the Nemesis which overtakes all overweening, self-appointed prophets and high pontiffs of thought.

Our modern literature is superficial. There is no primacy of thought directing it. It is largely emotional. So, too, is our religion. Here everything is in confusion, from Agnosticism through High Church and Low Church to No Church. Men are blown about by every wind of doctrine. We are asked to believe in everything and nothing. Everything is done in the name of science and humanity (and God is generally bracketed).

The national outlook—the nation's philosophy of life, has been vitiated. The national mind is starved. It has been slowly poisoned for centuries. One must go back some 400 years to seek the cause, and, incidentally, the remedy.—R. E. VEILLE, in Britannia.

Decidedly pessimistic, perhaps rather too sweeping. What is the remedy? British-Israelites have the answer.

The monthly Bible Study Class for Women, led by Mrs. Zoë Bell, is to be held at Headquarters on Saturday, June 1st, at 3 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to this class.

* * *

At Bingley, on April 30th, the speaker, Mr. Wm. Whitton, of Sheffield, unfolded to his audience the story of the British Throne and the Coronation Stone. Mr. J. Foster Beaver was in the chair. This Branch is continuing the Thursday evening

Bible Study Circle during the summer, held at 7.30, at Sutton House. Mr. Whitton has also addressed drawing-room meetings at Sutton House and at Springmount; great interest was aroused at each of these.

* * *

We have received the following post-card dated 20/4/29: "Kindly note my address:—C/o Standard Bank, Mooi River, Natal." Will the writer kindly send us his or her name so that we may be able to accede to the request.

Our readers will be pleased to learn that, in the charming town of Sevenoaks, one of the loveliest spots in the Garden of Kent, there is a splendid private and family hotel (The Lime Tree) owned by a B.-I. member, whose enthusiasm for our teaching ensures an altogether congenial atmosphere. We are satisfied that, combined with efficient service and reasonable charges, the hotel offers attractions that bring it into line with the best establishments.

One singles out for special mention the beautiful lawn, with its climbing rose arbours, where teas are served on sunny days. On the south side of this lawn are three full-sized tennis courts. In addition, there are a putting green, so popular nowadays, and a unique boating lake, whilst it is important to mention that excellent accommodation for motor cars is available.

In the vicinity is situated Knole, the ancient seat of Lord Sackville, dating from 1480, which is full of historical and antiquarian interest, in a setting of sylvan charm afforded by undulating glades and valleys. Knole contains pictures by Van Dyck, Porbus, Reynolds, Dobson, Gainsborough, and a fine collection of portraits of eminent celebrities in English history, together with armour, statuary and ancient furniture.

Knole Park is open day and night to all.

EIGHTH EDITION.

THE DESTINY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE AND THE U.S.A.

By "THE ROADBUILDER."

Colloquial and racy, this book has a fascination entirely its own. The Author, a well-known officer, sets himself the limited objective of giving clearly and fully an outline of British-Israel Truth. Full from cover to cover with stimulus towards further investigation, the book forces the reader to seek ever farther into its fascinating theme.

In the Author's own words :—" . . . the side-lines are so many and every one so interesting that other pursuits are apt to be neglected while you search for data."

A BOOK TO READ—TO OWN—TO LEND.

LORD BYNG OF VIMY writes :—
" Thank you and bless you for your wonderful book."

THE BISHOP OF KOOTENAY says :—
" It is a long way the best book on the subject of B.-I. Truth that I have ever read."

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

THE DOCUMENTS OF DANIEL.—XIII.

By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard.

DANIEL IX. Scope, lxx weeks = 490 years, the lifetime of the nation of the Jews.

"In the first year of Darius the son of Ahasuerus, of the seed of the Medes, which was made king over the realm of the Chaldeans;

In the first year of his reign . . . "

Here we have an interesting bit of reference to the organization of the Medo-Persian Empire. This sacred literature insists upon being national. It is a sacred record of secular history.

The political geography changed so rapidly from century to century, and from decade to decade, that such a reference as the above raises many interesting questions. Some of these questions can be answered with the knowledge at hand, some after long waiting are being answered by new knowledge, and some will perhaps never now be fully set at rest.

Darius the Mede and Cyrus the Persian are personalities which are important to an understanding of the Daniel references. Cyrus is well known in secular history. Darius is known to secular history under other names, but not yet by the name Darius.

We follow authority when we assume that Darius the Mede who "took the kingdom" on the night that Belshazzar was slain and the Darius of this chapter are identical. Now why should we be called upon to note that it was in the first year of the reign of Darius that Daniel was engaged in the study of books dealing with the captivity of Judah?

This is no accidental reference. Its duplication means that we are to pay attention to the conjunction.

Darius was the immediate superior of Daniel. He would be the means through whom Daniel would reach Cyrus, the supreme ruler of the Empire. What had happened that Daniel should thus be engaged?

Ussher dates this document the same year that Daniel was cast into the lions' den; and therefore the same year that Darius, influenced by Daniel's miraculous deliverance, made a decree "That in every dominion of my kingdom men tremble and fear before the God of Daniel; for he is the living God, and steadfast for ever, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed, and his dominion shall be even unto the end."

This decree constituted the establishment of the worship of the God of Daniel through the dominions of Darius. We are not to suppose that this decree took in all the Persian Empire, or embraced Persia. That the kingship of Darius was that of a sub-king under Cyrus we are led by known facts to believe.

Now, having been aroused to the conviction that the God of Daniel was the living God, and himself being the son of Ahasuerus who was probably the husband of Esther, Darius the son of Ahasuerus would be instructed in the Israel faith and had knowledge of his mother's God.

At all events, however that descent may be, Darius knew and proclaimed God to be the living and steadfast God.

Judging by all that we now know of ancient Assyria and the nations which were included in it back to the Sumerians, the first thing a king would do who had thus been brought into contact with the miracle power of God, or, in the case of heathen gods, that which he esteemed to be such, would be to restore or to rebuild, or to decorate and enrich the temple of that god.

Judging from known facts, we may be assured that conversations had taken place between Darius and Daniel on the question of restoring the Temple of God at Jerusalem, and for that purpose of securing permission for the people to return thither.

Now Daniel knew that God had set certain times for Israel and for Judah, and that matters would have to fall into line with that plan. But what were the exact times? So Daniel set himself to "understand by books" the number of the years whereof the word of the Lord came to Jeremiah the prophet, "that he would accomplish seventy years in the desolations of Jerusalem."

This is something of the position in which we find Daniel at the beginning of this chapter. Let us now hear his own words, and follow his supplications.

"And I set my face unto the Lord God, to seek by prayer and supplications, with fasting, and sackcloth, and ashes:

And I prayed unto the Lord my God, and made my confession, and said, O Lord, the great and dreadful God, keeping the covenant and mercy to them that love him, and to them that keep his commandments;

We have sinned, and have committed iniquity, and have done wickedly, and have rebelled, even by departing from thy precepts and from thy judgments:

Neither have we hearkened unto thy servants the prophets, which spake in thy name to our kings, our princes, and our fathers, and to all the people of the land.

O Lord, righteousness belongeth unto thee, but unto us confusion of faces, as at this day; to the men of Judah, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and unto all Israel, that are near, and that are far off, through all the countries whither thou hast driven them, because of their trespass that they have trespassed against thee.

O Lord, to us belongeth confusion of face, to our kings, to our princes, and to our fathers, because we have sinned against thee.

To the Lord our God belong mercies and forgivenesses, though we have rebelled against him;

Neither have we obeyed the voice of the Lord our God, to walk in his laws, which he set before us by his servants the prophets.

Yea, all Israel have transgressed thy law, even by departing, that they might not obey thy voice; therefore the curse is poured upon us, and the oath that is written in the law of Moses the servant of God, because we have sinned against him.

And he hath confirmed his words, which he spake against us, and against our judges that judged us, by bringing upon us a great evil: for under the whole heaven hath not been done as hath been done upon Jerusalem.

As it is written in the law of Moses, all this evil is come upon us: yet made we not our prayer before the Lord our God, that we might turn from our iniquities, and understand thy truth.

Therefore hath the Lord watched upon the evil, and brought it upon us: for the Lord our God is righteous in all his works which he doeth: for we obeyed not his voice.

And now, O Lord our God, that hast brought thy people forth out of the land of Egypt with a mighty hand, and hast gotten thee renown, as at this day; we have sinned, we have done wickedly.

O Lord, according to all thy righteousness, I beseech thee, let thine anger and thy fury be turned away from thy city Jerusalem, thy holy mountain: because for our sins, and for the iniquities of our fathers, Jerusalem and thy people are become a reproach to all that are about us.

Now therefore, O our God, hear the prayer of thy servant, and his supplications, and cause thy face to shine upon thy sanctuary that is desolate, for the Lord's sake.

O my God, incline thine ear, and hear; open thine eyes, and behold our desolations, and the city which is called by thy name: for we do not present our supplications before thee for our righteousnesses, but for thy great mercies.

O Lord, hear; O Lord, forgive; O Lord, hearken and do; defer not, for thine own sake, O my God; for thy city and thy people are called by thy name." (Daniel ix, 3-19.)

THE MAN GABRIEL.

We are now introduced to a "man" from the other side of the veil. Shall we turn away from this statement because we have not had experience of such visitors; some will do so no doubt, and the rest of us will have no reason to raise objection to their doing so, for each person must be master of his own mind. But it is another matter altogether if one should throw doubt upon the narrative because of one's own lack of experience in such a realm.

Let us consider the facts related to this matter for a moment.

We begin by postulating the Personality of God and His intelligent conception, purpose, will and activity towards the universe, the earth in which we dwell, and the life that dwells on the earth—not least among which is our own human race.

But if God, the timeless One, carried activity so far, at what point did He cease to do so; or, on the other hand, is not that personal activity ceaseless?

We recognize, on this earth of ours, differing orders of life, divided into countless species, above all of which we believe our human life to be the highest form. Stretching away below us are intermediate forms, and below that such minute forms as to be below our observation, manifesting themselves only by their effects.

That ours is not the highest order of intelligence, that ours are not the greatest powers for action in the universe, we have reason to know.

Probably the life orders ascend above us in the scale of intelligence and power in countless grades, even as they descend below us.

We know that in this Christian dispensation God reveals Himself to the individual in the Third Person of the Holy Trinity, the Holy Spirit. This is the day of His ministry. The day of His ministry began at Pentecost, as the New Testament makes clear to us.

Jesus promised and foretold the coming of the Holy Ghost in the Gospels, and His Coming is told as an historical fact and experience in the Acts of the Apostles, and in the Epistles.

Surely it is a greater thing that God Himself in the Third Person of the Trinity should make Himself known to us than that men should receive a visitation of angels!

This dispensation is marked by the continued activity of the Holy Ghost. The preceding dispensations were marked by the ministry of angels.

The testimony to the ministry of angels in the Old Testament is so frequent, so varied, and stretches over such a long period, as to leave no room for doubt as to the matter-of-factness of the testimony. The Bible was intended to convey to us that impression as a statement of well-known fact.

We as Christians believe it to be an historic fact that the angel Gabriel appeared to Mary, the Mother of Jesus, to announce the coming birth of the Son of God.

If we accept these things, as most of us do, as more than beautiful doctrines, being matters of historic fact, where is the difficulty in believing that the same angel Gabriel came to the prophet Daniel at an earlier period, to make important announcements concerning the erection of that nation which should prepare for, and receive, the Christ Who should be born?

Accepting the matter as a grateful rift in the veil which hides the higher sphere from us, giving us a glimpse of higher activities around the throne of the Lord, Who is served by the angel hosts, we read the following verses with gladness:—

"And whiles I was speaking, and praying, and confessing my sin and the sin of my people Israel, and presenting my supplication before the Lord my God for the holy mountain of my God;

Yea, whiles I was speaking in prayer, even the man Gabriel, whom I had seen in the vision at the beginning, being caused to fly swiftly, touched me about the time of the evening oblation.

And he informed me, and talked with me, and said, O Daniel, I am now come forth to give thee skill and understanding.

At the beginning of thy supplications the commandment came forth, and I am come to show thee; for thou art greatly beloved: therefore understand the matter, and consider the vision." (Daniel ix, 20-23.)

We cannot now discuss what the appearance of this "man" Gabriel means in all its implications. Every such appearance is a renewed demonstration of a whole world of activity, inhabited by whole orders of such glorious beings, eager and busy in doing the commands of God. And the further fact that that world is closely linked to our world, and the inhabitants of it are eagerly interested and active in the affairs of our human race; the affairs of the nations into which we have become divided, and—what is of special interest to us—in the affairs of our Israel nations. Further still, the demonstration shows Divine and angelic interest in the personal affairs of God's people.

WAS JESUS THE SON OF GOD?—I.

By HENRY D. HOUGHTON.

(President of the Nottingham British-Israel Association.)

IT is of the greatest importance that we should be able to answer this question fully and completely, and if we are prepared to accept the evidence of Scripture, it can be answered most clearly and definitely. And all other evidence is absolutely useless.

God has given us the great Book as a revelation of Himself; and He has given it to us because, otherwise, we could neither know Him nor His ways.

Therefore, "To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." (Isa. viii, 20.)

And the Holy Book, the Law and the Testimony, does not speak with an uncertain voice.

Now there are three alternatives which it is well to have before us in considering this vital question.

The Lord Jesus was one of the following:—

(1) Divine, as He said He was; or

(2) A good man; or

(3) A bad man, a deceiver, an impostor.

And every man must give Him one or other of those three places!

Surely, surely, there is no man who will say, "He was a bad man"!

Then there remain only the two former alternatives, either a good man, or Divine.

Seeing that this subject is fraught with such far-reaching consequences, let it be declared at once that the evidence in Scripture showing that the Lord Jesus Christ was the only Begotten Son of the Father is overwhelmingly conclusive: and it is well for us in face of the deceit and craftiness of the opposing forces (for they are not of men only) to make ourselves familiar therewith.

Was Jesus the Son of God?

We answer "Yes," as proved:—

(1) BY DIRECT ANNOUNCEMENT FROM HEAVEN. The Angel Gabriel visiting the Virgin Mary boldly declared, "The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called THE SON OF GOD." (Luke i, 35.)

Upon the very first day of His earthly life, even as He lay a babe in a manger, heavenly visitants came to the earth, and announced to the shepherds watching their flocks by night; "Unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord." (Luke ii, 11.) There is the Divinity of Our Lord clearly and plainly stated.

To the old man Simeon, waiting for the consolation of Israel, there was revealed unto him by the Holy Ghost, "That he should not see death before he had seen the Lord's Christ."

And taking up the Holy Child in his arms he blessed God, and said, "Lord, now lettest Thou Thy servant depart in peace . . . for mine eyes have seen Thy salvation." (Luke ii, 26, 30.)

There again is the Lord's Divinity revealed by the Holy Spirit to Simeon.

Digitized by Google

Then there is the testimony of John the Baptist: "The next day John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and saith, Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world . . .

"And John bare record, saying, I saw the Spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and it abode upon Him. And I knew Him not; but He that sent me to baptize . . . said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on Him, the same is He which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost. And I saw and bare record that this is the Son of God." (John i, 29, 34.)

Again, testimony direct from Heaven, for John boldly declares, "I knew Him not," till the Divine revealing was given.

The same Divine revealing came also in a flash to Nathaniel, the moment he saw Jesus. "Rabbi, Thou art the Son of God: Thou art the King of Israel." (John i, 49.)

St. Matthew (iii, 17) also records His baptism thus: "And lo, a voice from heaven, saying, This is My beloved Son in whom I am well pleased."

Again, at the Transfiguration, too, we read that "A voice came out of the cloud, saying, This is My beloved Son, hear Him." (Mark ix, 7.)

Later on we read how that Jesus said: "Father, glorify Thy Name." Then we read that there came "A voice from heaven, saying, I have both glorified it, and will glorify it again." Then we read how that the audible voice came for the standers by to hear: "This voice came not because of Me, but for your sakes." (John xii, 28, 30.)

So much for the voice direct from Heaven, and heard by earth-dwellers and recorded in the great Book.

(2) By His authority over Nature.

The whole of the four Gospels teem with these peculiar evidences.

Stilling the wind and waves with a word! Walking on the sea! Feeding the five thousand! Causing the miraculous draught of fishes! Healing the blind: some without touching! Making the deaf to hear, the dumb to speak, the lame to walk; and even the dead to rise up from their graves, and come to life again!

Diseases of the mind or of the body alike fled at His word. The issue of blood was staunched! The leper was cleansed! The paralytic cured! The sick of the palsy given new life and vigour!

He could touch the leper without being polluted (Luke v, 12, 13). He woke the dead young man at the gates of Nain as he was being carried out to be buried, and that simply with a spoken word!

It would have been no use for a mere man to say to the dead: "I say unto thee arise"; but at the voice of Jesus the dead man sat up, "and He delivered him to his mother."

(3) By His assuming of the power to forgive sins!

Let us ask, concerning the sick of the palsy, as he heard the words spoken, "Thy sins are forgiven thee," Did he actually receive forgiveness of sins, or was it all show and pretence?"

That he actually received the forgiveness of sins is proved by the fact that his palsy departed, and he took up his bed and went forth before them all . . . and even the unbelievers said, "We have seen strange things to-day." (Luke v, 26.)

Now if this palsied man received healing which testified to the forgiveness of sins, then who could He be that spake the delivering words? Certainly no mere man!

Again, what about the woman, a sinner, who stood at Christ's feet behind Him weeping, and began to bathe His feet with her tears, and did wipe them with the hair of her head, and kissed His feet?

He knowing who she was, and what she was, to the utmost consternation of them that sat at meat, boldly announced before all the assembled company, "Her sins, which are many, are forgiven." (Luke vii, 47.) Now, what about it? Were they forgiven? If not, He was an impostor: and if forgiven, He was more than man! And mark the sublime confidence and authority with which Christ made these two announcements!

(4) By Christ allowing men to worship Him.

The Apostle Peter going to instruct Cornelius had first to rebuke him for worshipping him, saying, "Stand up. I myself also am a man!"

The Apostle John we are told in Revelation fell down to worship an Angel, but even he said, "See thou do it not: for I am thy fellow-servant and of thy brethren the prophets." Worship God! But Christ received worship!

Declaring Himself to the blind man to be the Son of God, we read that he said, "Lord, I believe." And he worshipped Him!

Again, "Behold there came a leper and worshipped Him, saying, Lord, if Thou wilt, Thou canst make me clean." (Matt. viii. 2.)

The ruler in Matt. ix, 18, also "came and worshipped Him."

After the deliverance of Peter sinking in the water, it says, "Then they that were in the ship came and worshipped Him, saying, Of a truth Thou art the Son of God." (Matt. xiv, 33.)

The woman of Canaan, too, "came and worshipped Him."

And of the disciples after His Resurrection it says, "And they held Him by the feet, and worshipped Him." (Matt. xxviii, 9.)

Now, quite contrary to the action of Peter and the Angel, Our Lord never forbade or repudiated this worship! And surely if He had only been a good man He would have done so! No good man would ever dare to receive worship! But Christ did!

(5) By His own words and claims.

We have had the testimony concerning Mary, John the Baptist, Nathaniel, the Angel voices; now what about Jesus Christ Himself? Did His life, works, testimony and death confirm all this? Most emphatically they did!

Not only did Christ claim the Divine Sonship, as will be shown, but He carried it off! He was it in fact and in deed before all men!

Let us take first the strange incident in the Temple, when Christ was only twelve years of age. After being vainly sought for three days, Joseph and Mary find Him in the Temple, sitting in the midst of the doctors, hearing them and asking them questions.

His mother, rebuking Him, said, "Son, why hast Thou thus dealt with us? . . . And He said unto them, How is it that ye sought Me? Wist ye not that I must be about My Father's business?" (Luke ii, 46-49.)

Digitized by Google

Think of it; a boy twelve years of age, going behind His mother's declaration and proclaiming a different Father!

How did He know it? Most assuredly Mary had not told Him: still less would Joseph tell Him! How did He know? The only answer is, The Divine Sonship here asserted itself! And from that moment the Father's business began.

Was Jesus the Son of God?

If He was not, mark the alternative, with all its implications, and see if it can be faced.

For Mary could not have been blameless, and the scurrilous and damaging words of the Jews to-day concerning Our Lord and His mother cannot be denied!

But mark how clearly and deliberately Christ repudiated Joseph as His father.

There is not recorded a single place in Scripture where Our Lord called Joseph "Father"!

He knew he was not His father; for there is a definite repudiation of the human fatherhood of Joseph, and in the presence of Mary herself: even correcting her own word when she said of Joseph, "Thy father and I have sought thee sorrowing."

And the fact that all this took place at so early a period in His life greatly enhances the value and importance of this strange testimony.

All this was according to prophecy.

Isaiah had long before foretold the coming of the Divine One as a child!

"For unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given: and the government shall be upon His shoulder: and His name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God" (There His Divine origin and nature are clearly shown), "The everlasting Father" (still speaking of the same Divine Son), "The Prince of Peace." (Isaiah ix, 6.)

So much for His childhood. What about manhood?

Did there develop in Our Lord Jesus Christ any strange and remarkable superiority of mind and character, of life and purpose, which would plainly show His separateness from man, and declare in unmistakable terms His association with and His direction and controlling by a Higher Power?

The answer is undoubtedly "YES"!

When His enemies the Pharisees and chief Priests sent officers to take Him, they were so amazed at His words that they could not execute their commission, and they returned, saying, "Never man spake like this man." (John vii, 46.)

CORONATION STONE JOTTINGS.

IN "Life of Columbia" (Adamnen) by Reeves, Edin., 1874, p. 97:—

"Columba, at Iona, is stated to have laid his head on the stone, and, like Jacob, beheld a vision of angels."

Dean Stanley wrote in "Historical Survey of Westminster Abbey," 1911, p. 52:—

"Of all explanations concerning the stone the most probable is that which identifies it with the stone pillow on which Columbus rested; on which his dying head was laid in the Abbey of Iona . . . and if so, it belongs to the minister of the first authentic Western Coronation of a Christian Prince—that of the Scottish Chief Aidan."

There is a contest of authorities as to whether the stone was at Tara before Iona and at Scone after Iona; e.g., Keepe in "Monumenta Westmonasteriensa," 1681, p. 142, writes:—

"It was brought out of Ireland by King Ferguze about 370 years afterwards into Scotland."

And Anderson n "Royal Genealogies," 1736, p. 752, writes:

"According to the modern Scots' historians, and the vulgar opinion of that nation, the said Simon Breac (possibly Baruch, Jeremiah's Secretary) brought the Lia Fail into Ireland. Fergus brought the aforesaid stone to Argyle—according to a short Scotch Chronicle."

There is a manuscript in the College of Arms, London, written in Henry III's reign and therefore before 1272, which tells of the existence of a sacred stone—kept in Scotland for a long time—not a native stone but foreign—that it came from Egypt—that it was brought from Egypt by a Princess—the daughter of an Eastern Monarch—brought and used as a Coronation Stone.

(Skene, the antiquary, evidently did not know of this and others, as he quotes Baldred Bisset (1301) as being the earliest to mention the Coronation Stone and who, as suggested by Skene, "invented" the records of its coming from Ireland and from Egypt.)

There are other authorities older than Bisset, therefore Skene has done injustice to the "Royal Commissioner from the Scotch Government to the Pope."

Now as to the Coronation Stone being red sandstone, which geologists tell us is not found at Iona and Tara, but is found near Scone. Is it likely that at the beginning of the tenth century one of the most memorable combats with the Danes should have taken place over the possession of a block of red sandstone from the Perth quarries, and at a time when it could only lately have been made a relic?

The learned Canon Tristram in "The Land of Moab," p. 41, 1873, tells that red sandstone is found near the surface by the Dead Sea. Thus not far from Bethel a strata has been found of the very rock of which Ramney and Geike say the Coronation Stone is composed.

Conclusion. The proved and obvious fact that the English are descendants of Joseph (The Shepherd of the Stone) establishes also the identity of the Coronation Stone of the Westminster "House of God" with the consecrated stone of Bethel and carried away by Jacob as the title-deeds to the Land of Promise when he left another consecrated stone in the same place.

See Gen. xxviii, 22, and Gen. xxxv; Gen. xlix, 24.

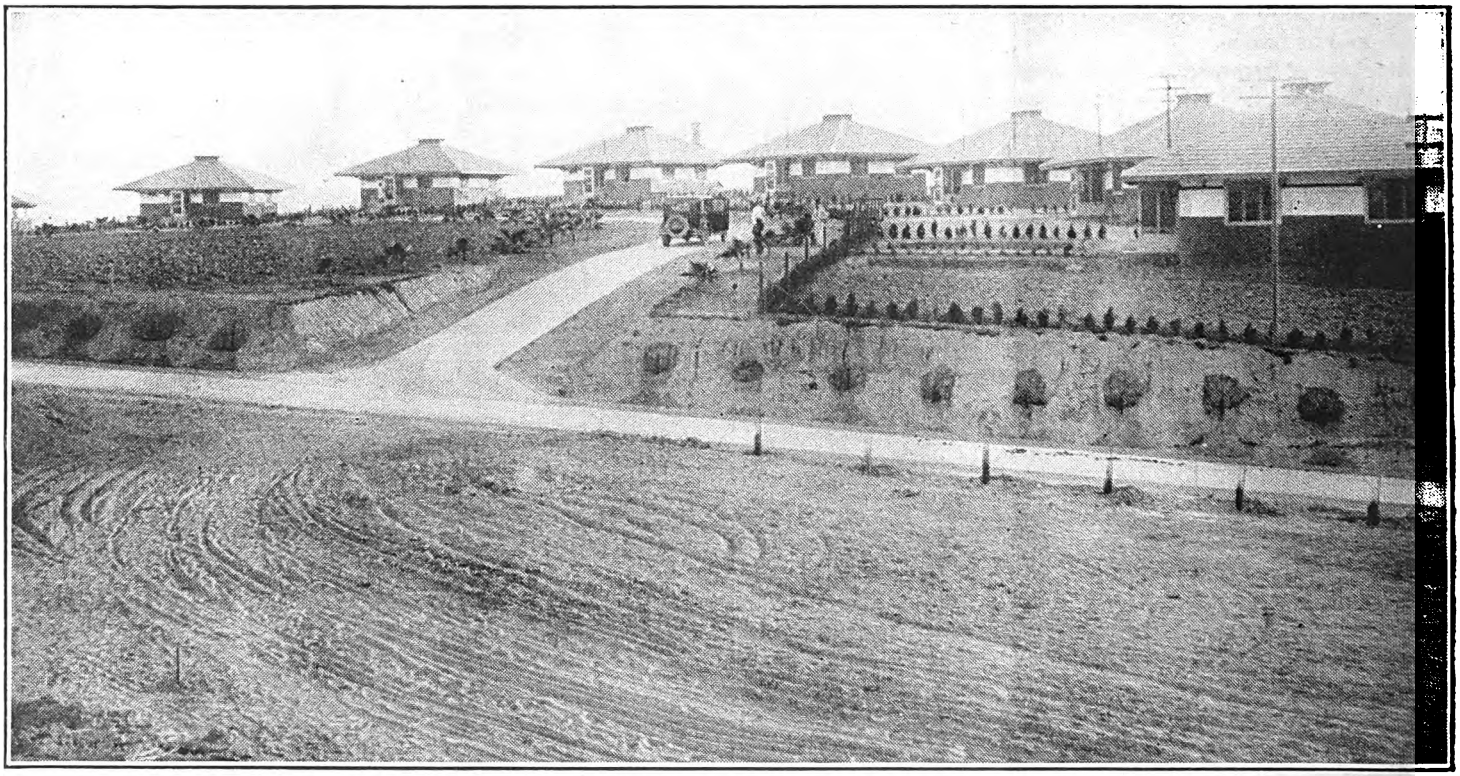
HARNESSING THE RIVER JORDAN.

SACRED STREAM TO PROVIDE ELECTRICITY FOR THE HOLY LAND.

By HAROLD J. SHEPSTONE, F.R.G.S.

What Palestine needs to-day is cheap electric power, and this is to be supplied by harnessing the Jordan. On this sacred stream three modern power-houses are to be erected, and the accompanying article describes how this work is now being carried out. The waters of the Jordan are to be made to drive great turbines and so produce electrical energy which will be distributed to the cities and settlements throughout the country, and used for lighting, heating and power.



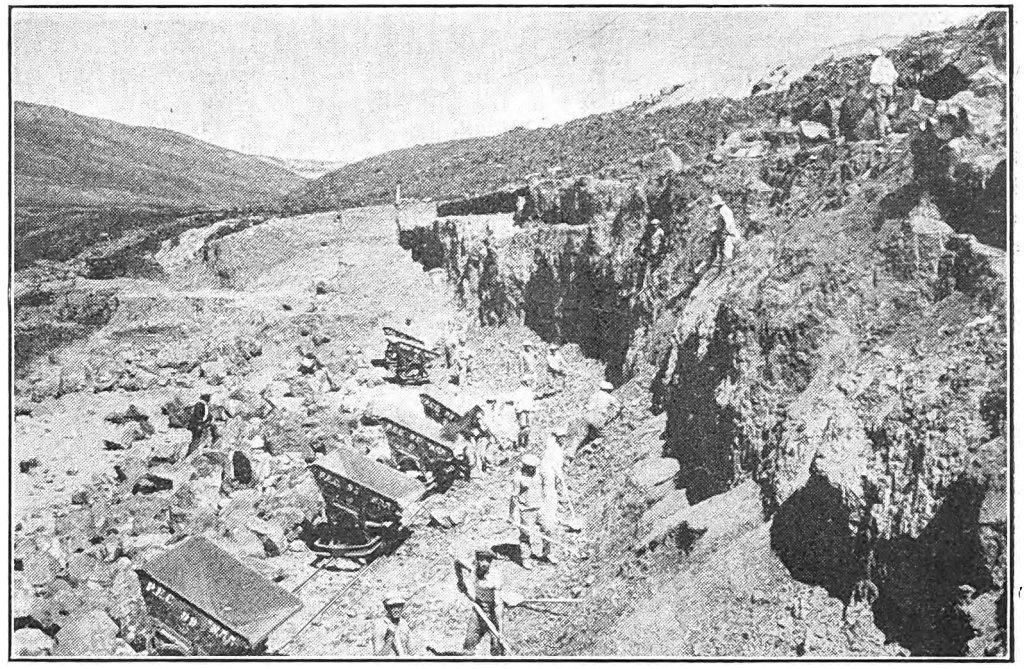
PALESTINE'S most sacred river, the Jordan, so closely associated with Old and New Testament history, will shortly be lined with modern power-houses, great dams, canals and huge reservoirs. This historic stream, which the Israelites crossed dry-shod while the Ark of the Covenant rested in the middle of the bed of the river; in whose waters Naaman bathed and was cured of his leprosy, and where Christ was baptized, is being harnessed to supply the cities of the Holy Land with cheap electric power.

In many respects the Jordan is a remarkable stream. Rising on the slopes of snowy Mount Hermon in the Anti-Lebanon range, it flows into Lake Huleh, or the Sea of Merom, as some call it, and thence into the Lake Tiberias, or the Sea of Galilee, a district closely associated with Christ's earthly ministry. The waters of this historic lake are to be maintained at a given level so as to ensure a sufficient flow for driving turbines of the two power-houses which are being erected on the banks of the Jordan away to the south. This will be accomplished by directing the flow of the River Yarmuk, a tributary of the Jordan, into the lake.

It is from the Sea of Galilee that the Jordan emerges as a rushing torrent, finally emptying itself into the Dead Sea. Although the distance between these two points in a straight line is only sixty-six miles, the river, owing to its many windings, makes almost three times that distance. Then the drop is tremendous, over 2,000 feet. For the most part the river flows between high banks lined with willow trees and tamarisk bushes, while intercepting its course are picturesque islands. Owing to the cataracts in the stream the Jordan could never become a highway of commerce, being unnavigable except for short distances.

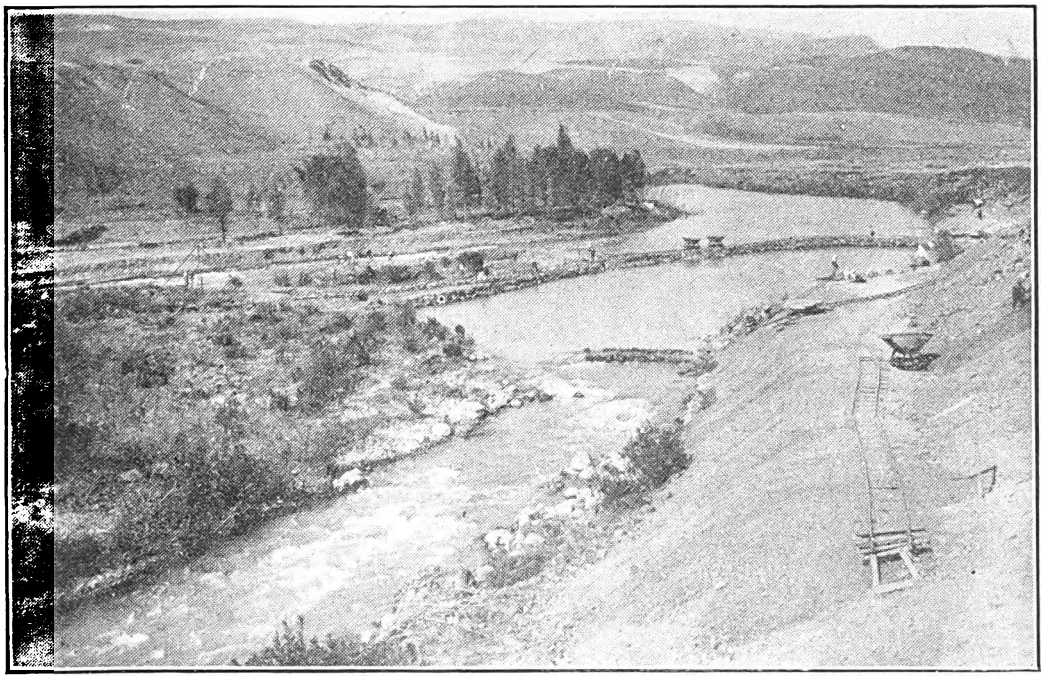
It discharges over five million tons of fresh water into the Dead Sea daily, which up to the present has not been utilized in any way. Now it is to be harnessed not only for power purposes, but for irrigating vast unproductive areas in the Jordan valley. Here, on what is to-day waste land, thriving agricultural settlements will arise, on which cotton and tropical fruits will be cultivated. Experiments have shown that in the hot Jordan valley the cotton plant changes its character of an annual herb into that of a perennial bush.

The erection of the Jordan power-houses is being carried out by the Palestine Electric Corporation from plans prepared by Mr. P. Rutenberg, a civil engineer, whose name has been much to the fore in Palestine development schemes. He has worked out a scheme for the complete utilization of the power resources of the Jordan from the Hermon to the Dead Sea, including its main tributaries, the Rivers Yarmuk and Jabbok.



Naharaim (Two Rivers), the Modern Camp in the Wilderness where the workers on the Jordan Power Station reside.

Digitized by Google



The plans having been approved by the Palestine Government, the work has now been put in hand. It calls for the dredging and damming of the River Jordan, the creation of artificial lakes for storage purposes, the construction of both power and irrigating channels, and the erection of three modern hydro-electric generating stations.

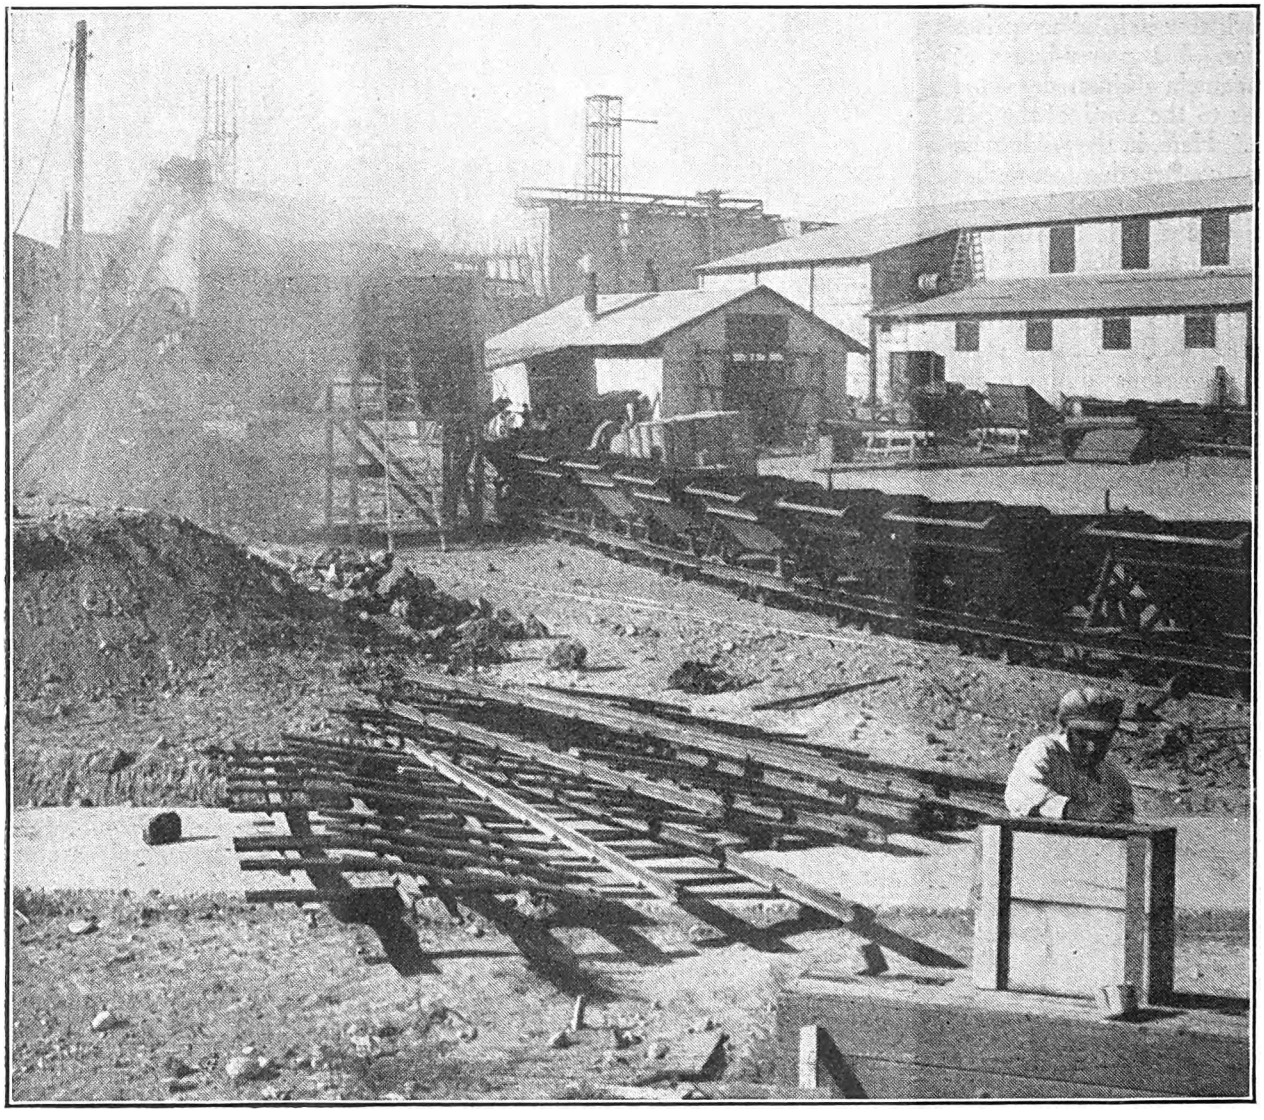
The work now in hand comprises the erection of a power-house at Jisr-el-Mujameh, situated some seven miles to the south of the Sea of Galilee. Here, in the wilderness a modern construction camp has arisen and the settlement has been given the name of "Naharaim" (Two Rivers). Some 600 workmen have taken up their residence here and everything is being done for their comfort. They take their meals in a spacious dining-room which is run by the company, and sleep in concrete bungalows specially designed to counteract the heat. As this spot lies 700 feet below sea-level it is inclined to be hot in summer. Workshops have been constructed, rails laid, and the necessary machinery and plant collected for carrying out the work. A temporary power-house generating 640 horse-power has also been installed for lighting the camp and driving the machinery.

At work on the Banks of the Jordan.

Across the Yarmuk a dam is being thrown. It will be 30 feet high and result in the formation of a lake with a water area of 1,200,000 square metres. A second dam, slightly smaller, will cross the Jordan at the village of Delhamuch. It will result in the creation of another reservoir, but what is more essential, will raise the waters of the Jordan to the necessary level and permit them to be diverted by a canal, 6,000 feet in length, into the Yarmuk reservoir. The canal will pass under the Haifa-Damascus Railway as well as under the Semakh-Beisan road, necessitating the erection of special bridges at these points.

Temporary closure of the left arm of the Jordan.

A second canal, 600 feet long, will carry the waters of the Yarmuk reservoir to the penstocks of the power-house at Jisr-el-Mujameh. This station will have an output of 24,000 horse-power, generated by three turbines of 8,000 horse-power each, while a fourth unit will be added later should the demand warrant it. The station is expected to be complete and in operation by the end of 1929 or at the beginning of 1930 at the latest.



The second power-house will be erected at Abadieh, some five miles above the site of the first station, when the requirements for power approach the maximum capacity of the first station. The penstocks of this second power-house, however, will be fed by the flow of the Sea of Galilee. To ensure the waters of this lake being maintained at a level sufficient to provide this flow the waters of the Yarmuk reservoir, built in connection with the first power-house, will be diverted into the Sea of Galilee. The Jordan outlet from the lake will then be dredged to a depth of 20 to 25 feet, and through this channel the Yarmuk and Jordan waters, stored in the lake, will be conducted to the turbines of both the Jordan power-houses at Abadieh and Jisr-el-Mujameh. It will be a case of making the same stream fulfil a double purpose.

from the tradition that it occupies the site of the ford by which the Patriarch sent his family over the Jordan when he lingered behind to engage in that famous wrestle, "Unto the break of day," which resulted in the change of his name to Israel. These three power-houses, all of which will be operated by the waters of the Jordan and its tributaries, will constitute the first stage of the project for the comprehensive electrification of the Holy Land.

High transmission lines will distribute the coveted energy

Scene of activity on the Site of the first Jordan Power House.
On the right is the temporary Power House and on the extreme left a Stone Crushing Plant. Skeleton towers of a concrete plant may be detected in the background.

The third power-house will be situated to the north of the Sea of Galilee, and the turbines here will be driven by waters of the Jordan, the fall of the stream in its course of some twelve miles between Lake Huleh and the Sea of Galilee being no less than 600 feet. The power station here will be close to Jisir Banah Yakoub (Bridge of Jacob's daughter), so called to all parts of the country. The poles for these lines are now being fashioned in the workshops at Haifa, and their erection is to commence shortly. High tension is essential when it is desired to transmit electrical energy over long distances. For this purpose a step-up transformer station will be erected at the first Jordan power-house, where the electric current generated at 6,300 volts will be transformed up to a pressure of 66,000 volts. The overhead transmission of this pressure will run from here to the main sub-stations at Haifa and Jaffa, where the pressure will be stepped down to the values required for the distribution in the towns and corresponding districts. The second and third power-houses will, at a later date, be interconnected with the first one. Fuel-power stand-by stations forming an important element in the assurance of the continuity of the supply of electric energy have already been erected in Jaffa, Haifa and Tiberias, having an output of 1,000, 1,200 and 500 horse-power respectively.

This scheme for the electrification of the Holy Land is unique in that it is designed to cover the needs of the whole country. In the near future every city, town and agricultural settlement will be able to obtain electrical energy for lighting, heating and power purposes. Furthermore, the Government will regulate the charges, and cheap power will be the result. For the first time Jerusalem, Bethlehem, Nazareth and Nablous, and scores of other places famed in the sacred narrative, will be lighted by electricity. It is startling to know that the Via Dolorosa, along which Christ passed on His way to Calvary, will be illuminated by modern electric standards operated by the waters of the Jordan, in which He was baptized. Thus is the Holy Land, so long neglected, being modernized along western lines.

BIBLICAL METALLURGY.—VI.

TIN.

By Andrew B. Buchanan.

In engineering work it often happens that a large amount of work is expended upon castings before they are found out to be defective.

The defects are due to a variety of causes : dirt getting into the mould, porous metal, carelessness due to the moulder, and sometimes causes which are outwith the immediate control of those concerned.

Should the defect be due to the metal, the chemist is at once called in to investigate the cause of the failure.

There is usually nothing else for it but to break up such defective castings and remelt them.

In the manufacture of steel, it is imperative that the slag should not enter into the molten metal. Please refer again to Fig. 4. Should anything go wrong with the spout when tapping the furnace, and it should fail to tilt up when the slag comes, then the slag would enter the molten metal in the ladle and the whole charge would require to be remelted.

Slag.

In general, it may be taken that the slag is not inherent in the metal itself, it is something extraneous to the metal.

With these remarks in view, let us return to Ezekiel xxii :—

18 : "Son of man, the house of Israel is to me become dross : . . . . ."

Moses had likened Israel's servitude in Egypt unto the iron furnace, here we have Israel likened unto slag.

The pure metal of God's working had developed into "dross," into slag.

Israel had taken unto itself the idolatrous practices of other nations, it had come into contact with extraneous substances and in the process had become contaminated. So Israel had developed into dross, into scum, into slag, and hence for Israel there remained nothing but the furnace again and remelting.

Remelting.

In such manner does Scripture unfold the story.

19 : "Therefore thus saith the Lord God ; Because ye are all become dross, behold, therefore I will gather you into the midst of Jerusalem."

20 : " . . . ; so will I gather you in mine anger and in my fury, and I will leave you there, and melt you."

21 : " . . . and ye shall be melted in the midst thereof."

22 : " . . . , so shall ye be melted in the midst thereof ; and ye shall know that I the Lord have poured out my fury upon you."

So the melting process is going on and most assuredly God has poured out His fury upon Israel.

Israel, as the nation Israel, passes out of sacred history when it leaves Palestine. The prophets, however, prefigure its future history.

Is it not remarkable that the metallurgical story is the same, it is all in wondrous harmony? The passages just quoted show that Israel was left as molten metal in Jerusalem. We shall see shortly that the melting process has an end and Israel will again come forth.

Alloys.

In modern metallurgy pure metals are rarely used ; all metals are usually in the form of alloys. An alloy is a composition of two or more metals. So we have alloys of the precious metals, the brasses, the irons and the steels.

The whole resources of the metallurgical chemist are being taxed to the utmost at the present time, to supply alloys to satisfy the exacting demands of modern engineering.

Special metals are required for Diesel engines, aeroplanes, motor cars and other branches of engineering ; and the chemist has answered the call made upon him.

The Scriptures, conforming to the strict metallurgical laws, gives us its own alloy.

Ezekiel xxii, 18 : " . . . : all they are brass, and tin, and iron, and lead, in the midst of the furnace ; . . . "

20 : "As they gather silver, and brass, and iron, and lead, and tin, into the midst of the furnace, . . . "

Here we have what is known as a brass alloy, in which several metals go to make up the composition.

Now iron does not usually occur in the composition of brass, but Messrs. McWilliam and Longmuir* show compositions in which iron is present and refer to its effect upon the alloy.

It is remarkable that the Scriptural alloy should contain iron as one of the constituents.

It would appear that silver was also used as one of the constituents of the alloy. We need not be surprised at this, for in the time of Solomon silver was accounted as nothing. (1 Kings x, 21.)

The Constituent.

In making up an alloy the chemist must know the effect of each individual constituent upon the metal as a whole. Adding to or taking from the metal completely alters its structure.

* "General Foundry Practice," page 319.

Digitized by Google

It is not our purpose to go into the effect of each constituent as mentioned in Ezekiel. Our purpose will be served by the consideration of one :—

TIN.

Now the effect of the tin upon a brass composition is to make the metal hard. If we add too much tin to the composition, it would make the metal so hard that it could not be filed and hence would be useless for engineering purposes. If the metal should be too hard, then the chemist puts something into the metal to take out the excessive tin. Try to understand this, for it is vital to our study.

In early Biblical times had they knowledge of the effect of each constituent upon the alloy? Was the Great Chemist at work?

Turn to Isaiah i, 25 :—

"And I will turn my hand upon thee, and purely purge away thy dross, and take away all thy tin :"

Read right on to the end of the chapter and remember that Israel is referred to. (v. 3.)

What a strange verse this is. What an enigma!

The modernist or theologian scoffer would take this passage as a powerful weapon against British-Israel teaching. They would state that here was the evidence of the loss of Israel's commercial activity ; the loss of coal, the loss of all their tin. How derisively they would point to "the decline and fall of the Israel Empire!"

It is the Great Chemist, however, who is speaking in this Isaiah passage.

It is a metallurgical passage.

When the molten metal is nearly ready for tapping, it is an anxious time for the chemist. Samples are taken frequently and tested ; then the command is given : tap the furnace and remove the slag.

So, in this passage, the time has arrived when Israel is come forth from the remelting process. The slag is to be drawn off : ". . . and purely purge away thy dross . . ." and this can only be done when the metal is "tapped."

But before the slag is drawn off, one of the constituents is to be removed : ". . . and take away all thy tin." We have seen that tin hardens the metal, so in Israel the hardness of Israel's heart—the tin—must be removed.

Ezekiel expresses it in another form (xxxvi, 26) : ". . . and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh . . ." Read the emergence of Israel from the melting process, verses 16 to 38.

We have seen that when a constituent is to be taken out of a metal, something must be put in to remove it.

The tin, the hardness of Israel's heart, had been the cause of their idolatry (the slag) and hence it must be taken away, so God says (Ezekiel xxxvi, 26) : "A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you. . . ."

Expressed in Old Testament language it is the New Covenant of Jer. xxxi.

Expressed in New Testament language it is the New Covenant of Hebrews viii, 10 : ". . . and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people :"

So this little verse of Isaiah stands out in a setting all its own. It is a little gem sparkling with brilliancy. How clear it all becomes in the light of the metallurgical technology of the Bible!

What a wonderful story is here unfolded! The metallurgical science in perfect harmony with the connected history of Israel running throughout the Scriptures.

The knowledge also that Israel was familiar with the effects of the different constituents upon metal. Are we then so very modern?

In articles IV and V we discussed the Temple castings, and these castings were of brass, the alloy which we have just been considering. Were these castings symbolic of Israel's regeneration?

The Temple was destroyed and nothing left of Israel's ancient glory but a name. So in the great ornaments and vessels of brass we have the symbology that before Israel should ultimately emerge forth fitted to be vessels of the LORD they must be broken up and remelted.

Then will Israel take up and finish the work which was given to them on Sinai.

How often do we hear from the modern pulpit that the prophets had to come down to the level of the intelligence of the people. They were so primitive that knowledge had to be imparted to them in pictorial imagery.

So the modernist says.

POOR IGNORANT ISRAEL!

Yes, the prophet speaks in the language of the people, but it is the language of the technical specialist.

It is a language which the modernist does not understand.

What a sorry mess has been made of the destructive criticism of the Bible! We see the evidence of this in the terrible apathy of the Church to-day. The call has gone out from Church and Press, "What is wrong with the Churches?" The present writer has followed this with much interest, and noted the various projected remedies.

In all these remedies the one thing essential is excluded ; that one thing is, we must come back to the Bible.

Our LORD said : "Search the Scriptures ; for in them ye think ye have eternal life : and they are they which testify of me." (John v, 39.)

Some of us are privileged to sit under men who preach the Bible as it stands. What a privilege this is!

Two outstanding utterances were given by the writer's present minister :

"There will be no real revival in the Church until the Church, nationally and politically, returns to Christ."

"There will be no progress made in the Church until the Church realizes the tremendous forces for evil that are opposed against it."

To each of these statements every British-Israelite will say AMEN! and AMEN!

But the Church will not rise upon the ashes of a mutilated Bible.

Prophetical students know that the Church dispensation is running out. Will the Church only realize its tremendous responsibilities when IT IS TOO LATE?

Yes, let us get back to the Bible!

It rears its head above all the critics, ringing out the old truths and revealing to us knowledge which modern metallurgists are groping after.

The story we have tried to unfold was given in prophetic form to ancient metallurgical Israel.

What of the modern metallurgist?

Will he heed the call of the Scriptures that veritable things are taken hold of and the message thrust home?

Will he read the remelting process of Israel and, as he sees the molten metal pouring out from his own furnaces, take to heart the lesson of the return of a purified Israel?

We shall conclude this series in our next article.

BROTHER MANASSEH.

AN ADDRESS BEFORE THE BRISBANE BRANCH.

By Mr. Arthur Exley, President.

We learn from Numbers xxxvi that, on the eve of entering into possession of the Promised Land, the tribe of Manasseh numbered 52,700 men of renown, capable of bearing arms, even after the disastrous effects of a plague which had devastated the camp of Israel, consequent of their intercourse with the daughters of the Moabites. When the tribes were apportioned their territory in Palestine, one half of the tribe of Manasseh settled on the north-east of Jordan, having for immediate neighbours the tribes of Reuben and Gad; and they joined with these tribes in erecting an altar of remembrance upon the site of the crossing of Jordan.

To the other section of Manasseh was allotted the plain of Megiddo, one of the most fertile tracts of country, with the tribes of Dan and Ephraim on their southern borders. Unfortunately the leaders of these tribes did not carry out the Divine command to drive the Canaanite out of the land, but put them to tribute, with the effect that right throughout their history, down even to the present day, these alien people have been and are a constant source of turmoil and political unrest.

People of Enterprise.

Even in that early period of history Manasseh was a people of enterprise, and not being content with the amount of territory granted them were permitted by Joshua to extend their borders into the forest-clad hill country.

When the Government of Israel changed from patriarchal into monarchal, Manasseh espoused the cause of the House of David, and upon the rebellion of Israel under Jeroboam, the son of Nebat, many families of central Manasseh removed to Jerusalem and became part of the southern kingdom of Judah; and on two subsequent occasions, under Kings Asa and Hezekiah, favoured the kingdom of Judah and joined with Benjamin and Ephraim in an endeavour to eradicate idolatry from their territory, and had it not been for the presence of the alien within their borders would probably have been successful.

Northern Manasseh was, from its position, one of the first tribes to engage in war with Assyria, and were finally carried into captivity by Pul, King of Assyria, to be followed at a later date by central Manasseh and the remaining peoples of the northern kingdom of Israel, who were transplanted by Shalmaneser, King of Assyria, to Habor by the river of Gozan in the city of the Medes. Henceforth Manasseh, Ephraim, and the remainder of Israel are no longer known to Biblical history, although the subject of many prophecies as to their ultimate destiny.

Spread to Britain.

Breaking from their captivity, when the time became opportune, the tribes of Israel, under many names, followed the east wind, travelling ever westward, till they reached the shores of the North Sea, and joined their brethren of Zarah-Judah, and of the maritime tribes of Palestine, who had reached the appointed place in the Western Isles of Britain. There, in fulfilment of prophecy, they had rest from their enemies and grew and multiplied exceedingly.

The House of Joseph, Manasseh, Ephraim and Benjamin are typified as a fruitful bough of a tree whose branches ran over the wall. The enterprise of the peoples called for extension of territory, and units of Manasseh crossed the Atlantic and formed colonies in North America. Possibly the subconscious knowledge of a previous successful revolt against excessive taxation led to the thirteen States combining in another successful revolt which established the United States Commonwealth, and Manasseh became united into a great people, whose territory totals some 2,970,000 square miles.

Influence between Nations.

The attempted subjugation of the American colonies was by no means popular with the commonalty of England, so that the greater portion of the troops engaged by England in that war were mercenaries. Although from time to time differences have arisen between the two great branches of the race of the Sons of Isaac, British-Israel has a certain pride in the development of the Saxon across the Atlantic, and on more than one occasion has afforded substantial diplomatic assistance to the United States.

It was the English statesman, Canning, who suggested the Monroe Doctrine to the President of the United States through Richard Rush, the American Minister in London, and right up to the period of the Great War the security of the Monroe Doctrine has rested upon the British Navy. This is one probable cause of the anxiety of America to augment her naval power. Many disputes as to boundaries, and intervention in America, already have been settled by arbitration between the two nations, and it is unthinkable that any other settlement but arbitration should take place between these two great branches of the Covenant peoples. Alien races who dwell within their borders may plot to cause jealousy and friction, but these plots are more than neutralized by such societies of good will as the English Speaking Union, the Magna Charta Association, and last, but by no means least, the British-Israel-World Federation.

At the close, Mr. Exley was thanked for the address. Reference was also made by several speakers to the splendid services Mr. Exley has rendered as President during the year and to the instructiveness of the many addresses he had delivered to the Queensland Branch of the British-Israel-World Federation. Votes of thanks were accorded to the President, Secretary and the Treasurer (A. G. Calow), for their services during the year.—Brisbane Telegraph.

"HE MADE THE STARS ALSO."

By the Rev. Martin L. Streator, M.A.

JEHOVAH said in his challenge to Job:—

"Canst thou bind the sweet influences of the Pleiades,
Or loose the bands of Orion?
Canst thou lead forth the Mazzaroth in their season?
Or canst thou guide the bear with her train?
Knowest thou the ordinances of the heavens?
Canst thou establish the dominion thereof in the earth?"
(Job xxxviii, 31–33.)

God numbered the stars and called them all by their names. Some of these names given by God, and revealed through His prophets to man, have come down from afar through the ages. Among them is Alcyone, one of the Pleiades. It means centre or axis. Modern astronomy indicates that it is the centre of the revolving systems of the universe. This indicates what is the sweet influence of the Pleiades. It is the power of God as manifested in the law of universal gravitation, holding all things in submission to the head of the whole creation. In harmony with this, the Psalmist says:—

"Thou hast established the earth, and it abideth.
They abide this day according to thine ordinances;
For all things are thy servants."—(Ps. cxix, 90, 91.)

Modern research has demonstrated that the ancients had a juster conception of the system of the universe and, in the language of Bishop Warren, "one of a far more advanced type than has been attributed to them." (Paradise Found, p. 122.) Frances Rolleston, who took peculiar delight in searching into ancient lore, says:—

"The group called the Pleiades is, perhaps, the best known of all the constellations. It is a spot of dim light, in which ordinary eyes can distinguish six stars; by some more are discerned; and by the telescope still more and more, as its powers are increased. Greek tradition tells that there were originally seven stars distinctly seen, but that at the time of the Trojan war one disappeared, going off like a comet toward the north pole. . . . Alcyone is the base, the foundation, the centre. . . . Wasat, an Arabic name either of the Pleiades or their brightest star, transmitted from early Arabian astronomy, is the centre. It thus testifies, like that of Alcyone, to the knowledge of the first astronomers of the long lost but lately recovered fact that in this group is the centre of the astral system of which our sun forms part. Its meaning, centre, foundation, anticipates one of the greatest achievements of modern astronomy, the discovery that to this point, this centre, gravitates the whole magnificent arrangement of stars called the Galaxy, to which our sun belongs. The latent, long-overlooked meaning of these names exists in the dialects of the countries in which it is allowed astronomy had its birth." (Mazzaroth, Second Part, pp. 28, 29.)

With these thoughts of the ancients in mind, we can rise to a better conception of the import of the creation oracle concerning God Himself the Creator, as the head, source, centre, of the mighty cosmical forces dominating the universe, as themselves divine powers developing the heavens and the earth. In confirmation of this, I present from the Bible itself, from its most ancient book, for Job was older than Moses, a brief extract, using the metrical version of the Orientalist, Tayler Lewis:—

"Through drenching rain the dense cloud He exhausts,
The thin light-breaking cloud He scattereth.
In circling changes is it thus transformed,
By His wise laws, that they may execute
All His commands o'er all the sphere of earth."
(Job xxxvii, 11, 12.)

From God, the Originator, the Creator; from God, the Former, the Fashioner, the Sustainer of the cosmos; from God, the Head, the Source, the Centre of all things, proceed to the circumference of the immense circle of the universe the powers divine, that bring forth from the chaotic swirl of the spiral nebulæ, the order, the arrangement, the form and beauty, the organization and the life in its manifold unveilings of the cosmos.—(From "Our Race Quarterly.")

BRITISH-ISRAEL: A STATEMENT.

1. As to evangelical teaching: Redemption of Israel and salvation for mankind was wrought out by the sacrifice upon the Cross of "The Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world."

2. As to the personality of the Lord Jesus: That He is "Very God of very God." "Very Man of very Man."

3. That as the living Christ He is now verily King of kings, Lord of lords, and only Ruler of Princes.

4. That at the time appointed He will come again, and "God shall give unto Him the throne of His Father David."

5. As to Israel: That this name, as a birthright, was "called upon" Ephraim and Manasseh. As the birthright-bearers these hold the right to that Royal Title.

6. That the title Israel accordingly followed the ten-tribed House when the severance of the Ten Tribes from the House of Judah took place.

7. That the House of David is a separate organization, standing by virtue of its own covenant, and possessing its own inheritance and dignity.

8. That the House of Judah passed from the land "for their good" and as a reconstituted nation has never returned, and in their return they will be merged in Israel as one of the Twelve Tribes.

9. That previous to this final merging in the land, there will be an attempt of such Jews as will not throw in their lot with Israel to rehabilitate themselves in Palestine on their own merit. Those who persist in this will as surely be against Christ and will be overthrown.

10. That the people of Judah will be merged once more in Israel, and with the enlarged nation of Israel will enter into the final blessings assured to Israel for ever.

11. That the nation of the Jews has its distinct place and history in the Scriptures, and that as a People they have been scattered without promise, and can only escape final condemnation by way of the Cross. That in view of this, and the final return of the Lord, it is necessary to press the acceptance of Christ upon them to the utmost.

12. That Britain is Israel (official) after the flesh. That she is in line with the faith of the Scriptures nationally, as declared by the national liturgy.

13. That being Israel she is subject, and always has been, to the Israel Constitution, but that she is in rebellion, having, in some cases, replaced the Commandments, Statutes and Judgments with human legislation. And yet our ancient British Laws were founded upon the Divine Law, and the Romans left these to us intact.

14. That it is incumbent upon the nation to take action to get back to the Israel Constitution as far as God intends. For upon her doing so she is guaranteed immunity from poverty, sickness, war and other evils, and is guaranteed priceless national blessings.

15. That Israel after the flesh must be urged through regeneration to become indeed the Israel of God.

A PRAYER.

ALMIGHTY AND MOST MERCIFUL FATHER, in Whom we live and move and have our being, to Whose tender compassion we owe our safety in days past, together with all the comforts of this present life, and the hopes of that which is to come; we praise Thee, O God, our Creator; unto Thee do we give thanks, O God, our exceeding Joy, Who daily pourest Thy benefits upon us. Grant, we beseech Thee, that Jesus Our Lord, the Hope of Glory, may be formed in us, in all humility, meekness, patience, contentedness, and absolute surrender of our souls and bodies to Thy holy will and pleasure. Leave us not, nor forsake us, O Father, but conduct us safe through all changes of our condition here, in an unchangeable love to Thee, and in holy tranquillity of mind in Thy love to us, till we come to dwell with Thee, and rejoice in Thee for ever.—Amen.

SIMON PATRICK.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

BY THE REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A.

QUESTION.—Will you tell me when we were first called "Britain" and "British," and what is the meaning of these words? A. M. B.

ANSWER.—The word "Britain" has come to us through the Greek and Latin writers, and was apparently unknown to the Celtic peoples, since no Celtic dialect uses the word "Briton."

The first name of Britain before it was inhabited was, as we learn from a triad, Clas Myrddin, which means "Myrddin's Enclosure" (Hibbert Lectures, p. 168). Myrddin is given a wife whose attributes recall those of Nuada and Llud. She is described as the only daughter of Coel—the British name of the Gaulish Camulus, a god of war and the sky—and was called Elen Lwyddawg, i.e., "Elen, Leader of Hosts." Her memory is still preserved in Wales in connection with ancient roadways, such as Sarn Elen (Elen's Causeway). It is said that as Myrddin's wife, she founded the town of Carmarthen (Caer Myrddin), which perpetuates his name. Mackenzie says (Celtic Myth and Legend, p. 323) that Myrddin is the Zeus of Arthur's cycle, his name appearing in Norman-French Romances as "Merlin."

A bardic name for Britain in pre-Christian times was "the Island of the Mighty," a title which is certainly reflected in the classical descriptions of early Britain, and which has found its modern echo in the late A. C. Benson's "Land of Hope and Glory."

The first Greek writer to use the names now so familiar to us was Aristotle, who wrote 340 B.C. In his De Mundo (section 3), he says, "Beyond the Pillars of Hercules (i.e., the Straits of Gibraltar) is the ocean which flows round the earth. In it are two very large Islands called Britannic; these are Albion and Ierne." Thus the term "BRITANNICÆ INSULÆ" was employed by Greek writers generally to describe the whole group of the British Isles, but more especially the two largest of them, Great Britain and Ireland. After the time of Julius Cæsar these two were distinguished, the former as Britannia, or Albion, and the latter as Hibernia, or Ierne.

There are several ways in which the name Britain may have originated, and it is difficult to speak with definite certainty upon the subject. Those who would derive the word from the Hebrew b'r'th, meaning "covenant," must not forget that no Hebraist or etymological dictionary suggests or admits this origin. On the other hand this may be a Divinely allowed assonance. Others trace it from the Celtic brit, "painted," in view of the way in which the Britons painted their bodies or tattooed their arms, etc. (Cæsar, The Gallic War, Lib. V, 12, 14).

Others, again, derive the word Britain from the name of Brutus the Trojan, who, according to persistent tradition, as recorded again and again in mediæval English history, built the first City of London, calling it New Troy. The story of Brutus was, so far as we know, first told by Geoffrey of Monmouth (who died 1154). It is repeated again by so great an authority as Stow in his famous Survey of London. It is urged, however, that because the Venerable Bede makes no reference to the Brutus tradition in his Ecclesiastical History, it must have been a pure invention on the part of Geoffrey of Monmouth, who is famous for his fabulous tales. But silence on the part of Bede proves nothing either way. Space forbids my relating the full account of the Brutus tradition here, but I have written about it in my Old Testament Studies (Preface, pp. x, xi), and in my Early Britons and the Early British Church (pp. 4–7).

The first page of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER tells us each week that authors alone are responsible for views expressed in their articles, which leads me to say that I, for one, am not inclined to believe that the "-ish" of "British" comes from the Hebrew 'iysh (pronounced eesh), which means a man as an individual or male person, husband, etc. The Hebrew word for man in a generic sense (as opposed to animals, etc.) is 'adam, meaning a human being or mankind generally. This is the word used in the sentence, "Let us make man in our image" (Gen. i, 26), and which subsequently occurs over 400 times in the Hebrew Bible (Old Testament).

The termination "-ish" is adjectival, as, for example, in the words British, Spanish, Irish, Scottish, Polish, Moorish, Turkish, feverish, devilish, yellowish, womanish, etc., etc. Hence, whether or not there be any connection between the syllable "Brit-" and the Hebrew b'r'th, the termination "-ish" is purely adjectival, as instanced in these other examples.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

MR. JOHN LEECH, K.C., will give another of his series of lectures at Headquarters on Wednesday next, May 29th, at 3. There will be no meeting here on Thursday, May 30th, owing to the General Election.

* * *

Mr. Herbert Garrison, Secretary-General, gave two lectures for our Canterbury Branch on May 16th to good and keenly-interested audiences. Canon Watkins presided in the afternoon, and the Mayor supported by the Sheriff in the evening. A number of the members of the Dover and Herne Bay Branches motored over for the Meetings.

Two special lectures on Pyramid subjects are to be given at Headquarters by Mr. Basil Stewart on Monday evening, June 3rd, at 7.30, and Tuesday afternoon, June 4th, at 3.

The Annual Meeting of the Walsall Branch on Wednesday, May 15th, was preceded by a Social Tea, kindly arranged by ladies of the Local Committee. This was followed by the half-yearly opening of the collecting boxes in support of the Commissioners' Fund. This movement is growing in the Midlands, as members are realizing the importance of the work and the need for additional Commissioners. A report of the work of the past session was given at the meeting, and the Officers and Committee elected for the ensuing year. Mention was made of the open-air campaign which has been decided upon for the autumn, and each member was asked to pray daily for guidance in the arrangements and for blessing on the campaign.

The Rev. Joseph Gay visited Rye on Wednesday, May 15th, and Hastings, May 16th, and delivered three lectures to good audiences. New members were added to the Hastings Branch in response to Mr. Gay's appeal.

We regret to have to announce that the Rev. T. H. Whitehouse, our energetic Commissioner for the Midlands, has had a temporary breakdown which will necessitate some weeks of rest and retirement. His engagement in Birmingham on May 13th was ably fulfilled by Mr. C. Lavender, the Hon. Secretary of the Walsall Branch. Mr. J. P. Jones presided, and the Vicar of Rowington, the Rev. Arthur Pritchard, M.A., led the meeting in its devotions. The subject was "God's promises, conditional and unconditional," and the speaker constructively showed that God's promises are always God's performances. Incidentally he emphasized the fact that we find God's truth centred alike in Jesus and in the Bible, and he fortified the reasonable contention by telling his audience that Pilate could have found the answer to his question Quid est veritas? (What is truth?) by transposing the letters into Est vir qui adest (He is the man who is here present) and by quoting a noteworthy manifesto recorded in "Moses and Geology" by Professor Samuel Kinns, Ph.D., which will be of interest to our readers.

MANIFESTO drawn up and signed by 617 scientific men at the Meeting of the British Association in 1865. This was printed for the signatories and the original document deposited in the Bodleian Library at Oxford.

(See Prof. Samuel Kinns' (Ph. D.) "Moses and Geology," 7th thousand, 1884, p. 5. Signatories pp. 479-498.)

"We, the undersigned students of the Natural Sciences, desire to express our sincere regret that researches into scientific truth are perverted by some in our own times into occasions for casting doubt upon the truth and authority of the Holy Scriptures.

"We conceive that it is impossible for the Word of God as written in the book of Nature, and God's Word written in Holy Scripture, to contradict one another, however much they may appear to differ.

"We are not forgetful that physical service is not complete, but is only in a condition of progress, and that at present our finite reason enables us only to see as through a glass darkly, and we confidently believe that a time will come when the two records will be seen to agree in every particular.

"We cannot but deplore that Natural Science should be looked upon with suspicion by many who do not make a study of it, merely on account of the unadvised manner in which some are placing it in opposition to Holy Writ.

"We believe that it is the duty of every scientific student to investigate Nature simply for the purpose of elucidating truth, and that if he finds that some of his results appear to be in contradiction to the Written Word, or rather to his own interpretation of it, which may be erroneous, he should not presumptuously affirm that his own conclusions must be right, and the statements of Scripture wrong. Rather leave the two side by side till it shall please God to allow us to see the manner in which they may be reconciled; and instead of insisting upon the seeming differences between Science and the Scriptures, it would be as well to rest in faith upon the points in which they agree."

Mr. Wm. Whitton has addressed three drawing-room meetings and one public meeting at Bingley, Yorkshire. He was greatly aided by Mr. and Mrs. Foster Beaver, who are doing splendid work for our Cause in the district.

The Speakers' Training Class, which Mr. Gay was instrumental in forming some two years ago, gave us a taste of their quality in a public meeting specially promoted by them at Headquarters on Wednesday evening, May 8th.

Mr. Gay presided. Mr. G. P. Stevens, the President of the Class, and Miss Barber, who has rendered valuable service in elocution and voice culture, commended the work.

Addresses were given by Messrs. Bradbury, Barrett, Simington, Bragg, Innis, Townend, Steers, Mrs. Ridley, and Miss Gray.

British-Israel Truth was presented from many points of view. The addresses evinced a thorough grasp of our subject; Mr. Bradbury stressed three points: (1) The Bible, (2) King and Country, (3) Jesus Christ, Saviour and King. The Bible was verily the Word of God written. Our King and Country, read in the light of Holy Scripture, could be none other than the Throne of David on the one hand, and the Israel nation on the other.

Jesus Christ as Saviour and King was set forth as the Redeemer of Israel and the Saviour of the world. Mr. Barrett pointed out that the nation spoken of in the Old Testament, and especially by Our Lord in Matt. xxi, 43, could not possibly be the Church. He also pointed out that the Apostles spoke of the twelve tribes of Israel and not merely Judah—one tribe. He cited the First Epistle of St. James and Galatians in proof of this.

Mr. Bragg devoted his address to a defence of the Great Pyramid, which he contended would justify itself, and that great exponent of the Pyramid, Mr. Davidson, would be vindicated before the eyes of the whole world.

Mr. Simington gave in the first place a personal testimony and a tribute to Mr. Goard, a true prophet of God. Mr. Simington is an Irishman, converted from Roman Catholicism. His address showed great promise in every way.

Mr. Innis drew attention to the importance of the British Empire read in the light of British-Israel Truth. He gave a clear explanation of the British character and instituted an interesting comparison with the teaching of the Great Pyramid.

Mr. Townend spoke of the Divine Grace which had been manifested in the Israel race, and pointed out that in Isaac the seed of Abraham was to be named.

Mr. Steers called attention to the necessity of keeping words in their original meaning, and said that much confusion of thought and conflicting opinion would be avoided if this were done.

Mrs. Ridley devoted most of her address to a long quotation on the white cattle of Chillingham, and Lord Tankerville.

Miss Gray, the Secretary of the Class, asked a series of questions and briefly answered them relative to the British nation in these Islands of the West.

"Great Britain. Why Great?"
"Why were the British most successful colonizers?"
"Why does this nation hold strategic points?"
"Why do our statesmen speak of this Empire as 'A Commonwealth of Nations'?"

The meeting was most successful and, as all present agreed, revealed talent which can be used to great advantage both indoors and in the open-air.

The Class meets at stated periods. Any anxious to train for service would do well to communicate with us.

P. G. Smith, Denver, Colorado, writes:—"It is quite a distance from Denver, Colorado, U.S.A., to London, England, and we anticipate and look forward eagerly for the mail to bring us THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER, with its clearly defined articles and inspiring message; and with this great help the Great Bible has become our greatest treasure."

A good example to follow:—W. L. writes from Edinburgh that he has circulated over 300 copies of the Special Number of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER: 70 per cent. to ministers and lay preachers all over Scotland, and the other 30 per cent. to others from Berwick in the South to the Orkneys in the North. He says: "I thank you for allowing me the privilege of doing this little bit in spreading the joyful news of the Kingdom and our ever-present Jehovah in the midst thereof. May our nation awake to the full knowledge of the Kingdom at an early date."

LLANDRINDOD WELLS BIBLE CONVENTION, AUGUST 25TH-31ST, 1929.

We have succeeded in getting the usual railway concessions on the understanding that we can guarantee the requisite number. We are most anxious to be able to claim this concession, and in order to do so we require several more names. Will the friends who purpose to attend let us know as soon as possible? It will be a great occasion. A deeply interesting programme is in process of completion. We appeal to our readers to support us in this important Convention.

Miss Wylie, of Ramsgate, one of our dear and valued members, passed to her rest in April in her 80th year. A devoted British-Israelite, a convinced believer of many years' standing, she was tireless in her efforts to spread the Truth. Her copies of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE regularly went round a reading-circle of her friends, to whom also she lent her B.-I. books, of which she had a goodly store, including some now out of print. She was a member of the Baptist Church. Let us draw inspiration from her example and follow in her footsteps.

PREHISTORIC LONDON

By E. O. GORDON.

With two appendices by Rev. John Griffith.

Here is a book which gives food for much thought. Of all the books we have published on the early history of the British Race, this proves, perhaps, more deeply than any.

¶ Read herein of the coming of Brutus the Trojan, and the connection between his landing and the twentieth-century customs of Totnes in Devonshire.

¶ Read of the foundation and the growth of our great city.

¶ Read of the development of Druidism, the belief of our early forefathers in the Divine Creator, and in the life Eternal.

¶ Read of the customs of these ancestors, and find in them the true explanation of many of our present ways and ideas; seemingly inexplicable, yet inevitable when their origin is understood. Altogether a most fascinating book.
