EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

A PRAYER.

Stir up, we beseech thee, O Lord, the wills of Thy faithful people; that they, plenteously bringing forth the fruit of good works, may of Thee be plenteously rewarded; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

A PROMISE.

Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign, and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In His days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely; and this is His Name whereby He shall be called, The Lord our Righteousness. Therefore behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that they shall no more say, The Lord liveth, which brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt; but, The Lord liveth, which brought up, and which led the seed of the house of Israel out of the north country, and from all countries whither I had driven them; and they shall dwell in their own land.

A.D. 1930.

By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard.

Look well at the number of the year as we begin to write it to-day.

The "twenties" have gone. The "thirties" are here.

When we think of a New Year, it is a matter of interest, and generally, because of maturing tasks and of work accomplished, it is a matter of cheer. The time which has passed away from the sum total of our lives is not of sufficient note to cause unease for those who look upon the passing of the years as a matter for unease. The accomplishments outweigh the time taken to bring them to pass.

But a decade . . . It brings the babe to boyhood. It brings the boy to the threshold of manhood. It brings the young man to the beginning of middle life. It brings the middle-aged to the beginning of age. It brings the aged to the threshold of eternity.

Seven decades go to the life of man: One to childhood; one to youth and school; one to apprenticeship to the task; perhaps two to full employ of physical and mental powers fully trained to the work of life; one to mastership in the chosen walk for the successful man; one to retirement; and one to the eventide of life.

What a decade means in the life of a nation as it is guided onward according to the ideals of a generation! What changes on the map of the world are brought about! What nations rise! What Empires pass! What nations fall! What pages are written in the book of the world's history! The record of the last two decades furnish a graphic illustration of all that.

The consideration of the decade leads us to think of the century in which it occurs.

This century has already been marked with the red, red years of international conflict. It has seen the passing of the Empires of the Babylon succession, plus the ancient Empire of China. At the beginning of this century, which is only thirty years old, the Empires continued to stand as they had stood for ages: China, Turkey, Russia, Austria, Germany; they were all there. There seemed no reason to expect, outside the fateful word of prophecy, that they would not continue to stand indefinitely. But the Word had gone forth. The time appointed for their continuance had all been expended, and they passed like shadows of the night.

The great system of Mohammedan administration, which centred in the Sultan and the Caliph, has also passed away.

The great national Russian Greek Church is no more.

The Papacy has at once lost much of its spiritual power in Europe, and has regained at the hands of one man, Mussolini, the temporal power.

Great institutions have passed away, and their places have been filled with provisional organizations. Through the instrumentality of these the nations are able to carry on after a fashion. But every observer of all these matters knows, and well knows, that the end is not yet.

In the Anglo-Saxon world there has been a day, not of the declaration of independence it is true, but of self-government and autonomy by the Overseas Dominions. It was a day which will be marked in history more clearly, and with more hopeful colours, than was the day of the declaration of independence by the United States. The Anglo-Saxon world is interdependent after all. That is the fact, and no declarations to the contrary, should any ever be made, will alter the interdependent circumstances in which they find that God has led and placed them.

The League of Nations is an unique thing. It is not primarily a League whose object is more effective war. It is a League for the maintenance of peace. It is a man-made affair. But its declared objects are good, and some good work has already been accomplished by it. On other occasions we have pointed out a danger to Britain. There is the danger that her hands will be tied in the dispositions necessary for her life and mission among the nations. There is also the greater danger that she will be induced to sign binding agreements which will be backed by her own honour, and by the higher Law which makes God Himself a party to every treaty Britain signs. On the other hand, we have had too many examples of the estimate other nations put on treaties when their own interests are at stake. For instance, Germany and the treaty with Belgium, which to us was an inviolable covenant, but to Germany was "a scrap of paper."

It is constantly set forth that Britain is in an unique position as to the sea. Her boundaries are so widely flung, and her trade routes are so extended, that she requires a greater Navy than any other Power. This seems to be an incontrovertible position.

Other Powers, such as America, may desire to build a Navy greater than they need in order to match that of Great Britain. That is not at all to the point. It will be a waste of money as far as the United States is concerned. But she is rich enough to waste it. There does not seem to be any more fear that an American Navy would be used to the detriment of the world's peace than that the British Navy should.

The above matter may illustrate that Great Britain has an unique task placed in her hands by Almighty God. To fulfil that task she may have to do things which would be objectionable to the League of Nations. In such a case as that, the Divinely-appointed task should have the first consideration. It is placed in Britain's hands as a sacred trust. In it the other nations cannot share. The danger is that, in the entanglement in the League of Nations, Britain's hands may be tied in pursuit of her task.

Anglo-Saxon union is to the fore. There is a spirit abroad which should foster that. The preaching of the Gospel of the Kingdom, and that the place of the Anglo-Saxon nations in it is that of God's Kingdom of Priests, a nation wholly set aside to the service of the Kingdom alone, should help to bring about that great union of the Israel-Saxon peoples. All the nations of the Anglo-Saxon Commonwealth of Nations are in that great Kingdom organization.

In the self-consciousness of Israel, in her right relationship to Jehovah the God and King of Israel, in her administration of the Common Law among the peoples under the flags of the Celto-Saxon nations, is wrapped up the world's peace and safety, nay, even the world's salvation.

Therefore Britain, as America does, must keep her hands and her honour free for the task to which God has appointed her.

With this proviso, then co-operation with all nations for the preservation of peace is the manifest duty of Britain and of all nations.

The present century is the last century of the second millennium of the Christian dispensation.

It is a pity that there is not a better report to show after two thousand years of Christian activity. But there is the record. Take a map and draw on it the chart of the peoples of the earth. Colour white those who are really Christianized, and colour, shaded white, those which are nominally Christian. Leave the rest of the world dark. How widely does the shadow of darkness rest upon the nations still. Surely the Church has failed lamentably to catch up with her task.

Wherein has she failed?

The Church has been proceeding along two lines. One section of the Church has been built upon the pure Word of God, read by each generation for itself, directly from the pages of the Bible. Wherever such has been the case, the chart shows white. There the Spirit of God has been most in evidence in the workings of the Christian Church.

Another, and larger section of the Church, has been founded upon tradition. Theirs has been the authority of the "Fathers." Their final appeal has been the voice of the Church.

Wherever such has been the case, the darkness has rested heavily on the charted ground.

The Apostles of our Lord reached an exalted stage of light and truth. They wrote upon the highest plane of intellectual and spiritual light ever reached in human experience. There is nothing to equal the Bible in human literature. There is nothing in the Bible to equal the writings of the New Testament authors. They stand out first and foremost as the exponents of the Word of God. Nay, they stand out as expressing in plain language the Word of God.

The Fathers who immediately followed them, as eminent scholars are now pointing out, produced a pitiful imitation.

Those who build upon the sayings of Moses and the Prophets, of Jesus and the Apostles, build upon the highest and firmest foundation known to man.

Those who build upon tradition build upon a pitiful imitation, and their structure is that of the man who built his house upon the sand. When the rains descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house, it fell, and great was the fall of it.

This building on tradition, and looking to tradition for the motive power of the Church and of the Gospel it preaches, is the cause of the weakness and of the failure of the Church in the two thousand years of opportunity God gave to her.

Remember He has given to the Christian Church a longer period of trial than He gave to the Mosaic Priesthood. That Priesthood failed and was swept away. This Ministry has failed, and it is now too late to fully remedy the matter. So there are those who will live to see the ecclesiastical system which has held the field for two thousand years swept away, as an unwieldy encumbrance, by the Lord when He comes.

Self-seeking on the part of those who have exalted themselves to be "lords over God's heritage" is very largely to blame in this matter. But in that blame all are involved and none of us may pass his or her share of the blame on to another.

There are yet some seventy years of the century left in which it is possible for us to do our best to catch up with the task. Let us go straight to God, and straight to His Word; let us seek the baptism of His Spirit and power, and let us do all that may be done, with His help and leading, to win the world for God. He will use His miracle power to that end if we will make the opportunity.

The present century ends a millennium of world history. It is the end of the sixth millennium from the Garden story of the commencement of the Adamic family. We are not touching upon the period of human occupation of the earth. That is another matter which we leave untouched pro and con. We say that we are in the sixth millennium from the Garden of Eden, and are coming to the end of the sixth thousand-year working day in the history of the Adamic race. None may doubt that this is the case.

The Lord, working as He manifestly does in sevens, is handling our race on the basis of a great week of millennia. Well, the last century of the sixth day is now three-tenths spent. The end of that day is marked, as our Lord makes very, very clear, with the reckoning time concerning all the preceding period of the six thousand years. That reckoning time and activity cannot now be long delayed.

Our Lord devotes the last paragraph of the twenty-fourth chapter of St. Matthew, which deals with "the wise and faithful servant whom the Lord has set over His household," to this reckoning theme. He also devotes all the twenty-fifth chapter to the same. In it He reviews His Coming at midnight as the Bridegroom, when the illumination which should have welcomed him, and which did so in part, was only half strength because of the five foolish virgins who had neglected to bring oil in their vessels with their lamps.

Then He reviews His Coming as Lord of those servants, to the ten servants to whom He had committed His money and His goods, saying to them "Occupy till I come."

He enters into reckoning with them "to see how much every man had gained by trading."

Then in more majestic terms He presents His official public Coming in His glory with all the holy angels, when He shall sit upon the throne of His glory, and enter into judgment with all nations.

Then the solemn entrance into the Kingdom prepared from the foundation of the earth.

This all seems to come within the century in which we are now living and moving. That these things all point to national and international matters on the largest scale who can doubt? That the Church and the State, the King, Lords and Commons, will find themselves taken up in the great movement, and brought to give an account of their stewardship, each in his own sphere of influence and labour, seems to be as matter of fact as that there will in due time be another Government elected, or the same one re-elected, in Great Britain. It is an event to be expected, and we shall be all in it when it comes.

Further, the present century ends a dispensation. It ends the greatest of the dispensations: namely, the Christian dispensation.

That is not to say that the saving Grace of God will come to an end. Dispensation has followed dispensation in world history, and the saving Grace of God has gone on, and has increased in manifestation and glory. The saving Grace of God will go on, but the dispensation will be changed at the end of the present millennium, which marks the end of the Christian dispensation.

The present century will inevitably see the end of the great non-Christian systems of religion, and of the organizations which have supported them, and been supported by them. The greater glory of the coming dispensation will lead all men to the knowledge of the truth of God as it is in Jesus Christ our Lord.

Already the disintegration of these things is manifest before us throughout the world. When these fall, as fall they will right speedily, it will make a great shaking of all things in the world. It will bring down non-Christian things, and it will bring to the ground, in the Christian world, all those things which have been built up which are not Christian. There will be a crash of systems outside the Israel peoples, and a crash of accretions to the Christian Biblical system in the Israel world. We shall see lively times in this regard soon. Many of these movements will show themselves during the "thirties" of this century.

The present century will see the passing of all the kingdoms and national organizations which are not, by the judgment of our Lord, incorporated into His Kingdom.

That this will be by the easy process of the adoption by them of the Common Law, and the election to be under the rule of the House of David, seems to be indicated by the course matters are taking in that regard as far as the nations of kindred blood and faith are concerned. That this has already been the case among the many peoples of India and so forth through the extension of the rule of the House of David and the establishment of the Law we see. How much further that movement will go before our Lord shall come we do not know.

Digitized by Google

Within our nation, as we have seen in other articles, this is the period of the cleansing and resurrection of Israel according to the teachings of Ezekiel the Prophet in chapters xxxvi and xxxvii.

The end of all these matters will be one of further disorder, but the Lord Himself has undertaken in His great kindness to fight the battles of Israel Himself. In fact, this is the day of the battle of the Lord God Almighty.

Let us strengthen our hearts for the task He has set us to do. Let us wait on Him for the outpouring of His Spirit upon us, and the manifestation of His Spirit through us; let us be obedient to His Word, and practise that faith which is the victory over the world, as the Apostle has declared:—"This is the victory which overcometh the world, even your faith."

NEW YEAR MESSAGES.

MAJOR J. KNOWLES, President, B.-I.-W.F.

I FEEL I cannot pass from the Old Year to the New without some expression of gratitude to the Almighty for the blessings which He has bestowed on the work of the B.-I.-W.F. during 1929. It has been a strenuous year for all those who are engaged at Headquarters; all have devoted themselves wholeheartedly to the work, which is steadily increasing. We look forward to 1930 with hope and confidence.

While thanking all our friends and supporters for the help they have given in the past, we ask them to continue to help us by every means in their power. This can best be done by organizing meetings in those parts of the country where hitherto no meetings have been held; by introducing our journals and literature to all those who are willing to read them, and by subscribing to our funds.

In conclusion, let me say that all of us in London wish all our friends throughout the Empire a happy and prosperous New Year.

THE REV. COMMANDER L. G. A. ROBERTS, R.N.

I cannot express the comfort and support I have received from the very early impression I had formed that the Bible was to be read through from Genesis to Revelation as God's own message to the human race.

Its individual theme God in Christ, and Israel as His Witness, grew as a natural result of reading it for myself and believing every word.

It made me consecrate my life to His service and to determine I would be a witness where others were so few. That we were Israel never presented a doubt in my mind. This made me look into the original languages as far as was necessary to hold these views against all who spiritualize the prophecies.

For close on eighty years God has never left me or forsaken me. My first witness was as a schoolboy at the time of the Crimean War, and I may say it has never ceased, nor will till He comes.

THE REV. HECTOR MACTURK, M.A.

A brief personal message of witness and encouragement to the readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE at this season.

I realize how dull and unhelpful my ministry would be, at this "time of the end," without the light of the Gospel of the Kingdom, for which our Federation stands; and I thank God that I am able to see and bear witness to His faithfulness to His Promises and His People; and though I deplore the blindness, and even obstinacy, of many of my fellow-ministers who will not give up that pernicious habit of spiritualizing the Scriptures, I rejoice in the increasing success of our Message in all parts of the Commonwealth of Israel. With best wishes and good fellowship.

THE REV. WM. BROWN POLLOCK, M.A.

It is a happy privilege to send a line of New Year greeting to THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER; to its promoters, contributors, readers, and all British-Israelites throughout the wide world, especially to the hard-working staff at Headquarters. May the New Year be full of the very best things for every one of them. May it be the bright harbinger of further, fuller tidings of the unfailing faithfulness of our Covenant-keeping God, and of the King of kings in the outworking of His great purposes for Israel, and with all the force of that appeal of a genuine repentance towards God and faith in our Coming Lord. It might be well for us to reconsider the meaning of the Mission of the Son of God to this sin-ridden and trouble-worn world so that in some sort we might all give ourselves more thoroughly to the hastening of the Kingdom in its fuller glory. Why did Christ come? For what was He sent? St. Matthew, chapter nine, after the calling of the twelve disciples, seems to give that meaning in no uncertain terms. "These twelve Jesus sent forth, and commanded them, saying, Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not; But go rather to the lost sheep of the House of Israel. And as ye go, preach, saying, The Kingdom of Heaven is at hand." Then follows a detailed account of what their experiences were to be, and some admonitions which were vital to the success of their Mission as an extension of that of their Master. This is closed in these remarkable words:—verse 23: "But when they persecute you in this city, flee ye into another: for VERILY I say unto you, Ye shall not have gone over the cities of Israel TILL THE SON OF MAN BE COME." The cities of Israel can hardly mean the cities of Judea, for either geographical or chronological reasons, or both. They must mean therefore the cities whither God had placed His people. But the main message seems to be that the work of finding them, and bringing them home to the flock of God, is urgent upon us, since we have arrived at a time when the signs are appearing which indicate the not very far distance when the King is to return in His Glory. Remember that HE is the GLORY OF HIS PEOPLE ISRAEL, inwardly in spirit now, and outwardly and fully when He comes. "Now are we the sons of God . . . but we know that when He shall appear, we shall be like Him; for we shall see HIM as He is." What greater destiny could British-Israelites conceive or desire? The Kingdom of the Heavens now and the Kingdom of Glory so soon to be come.

MR. W. H. HESKETH, J.P., President of the Manchester Association of the B.-I.-W.F.

One of the great blessings which I have received from the knowledge of the British-Israel Truth, as revealed through its interpretation of prophecy, is the deep consciousness which I have of the very near approach of our Lord's Second Advent, and the necessity for prayer and watchfulness, that I may not only be accounted worthy to stand in His Presence, but to lead others to a participation of the same blessing.

COLONEL EDWARD F. GOSSET.

In the year 1876, when I was at the Royal Military College at Sandhurst, before joining my regiment, an elder sister gave me one of Edward Hine's early pamphlets (47 Identifications). I at once accepted the truth of our origin, and have followed the study of this most absorbing question with ever-increasing interest. For many years world politics and racial problems have all been looked on by me in the light of British-Israel interests; and the wonders of the Great Pyramid, as expounded in those days by Piazzi Smythe (whose original book I still have), always appealed to me.

With all the new light that has been thrown on our history and destiny, it is a standing marvel to me how anyone can fail to believe in British-Israel Truth. I hope the time is not far distant when we shall all know it from the least to the greatest, and shall acclaim the wisdom and goodness of Israel's God and Saviour.

THE REV. T. H. WHITEHOUSE.

Pious students of the prophetical Word are finding the events of the day tremendously provocative; either to paralysing fear, bewildering perplexity, or crushing pessimism; or, on the other hand, to watchers in Zion, lifted head and eyes expectantly radiating the advancing glory of promised racial redemption, because the KING is at hand. Cannot we read in world events to-day, especially the Palestine situation, the DIVINE CHALLENGE to test God's faithfulness to the ancient Word of promise? Still that Word stands and awaits our acceptance, "I will yet for this be enquired of by the House of Israel, to do it for them." In this respect 1930 will also be our year of testing.

MR. H. D. HOUGHTON.

Another year of successful work is completed, and another year of great opportunity comes. May the glorious news of God's unfaltering faithfulness, which it is your place to make known and prove, be carried into thousands of fresh homes during this year of privilege, which I sincerely hope may prove to be a year of great blessing to all your readers.

THE REV. P. HUSBAND DAVIES.

To the leaders and fellow-workers in and of this great Movement—B.-I.-W.F.—congratulations and sincere thanks. Through them, to the Father of Lights, praise for more light breaking upon and out of His most Holy Word.

For the past—Gratitude, vide I Samuel vii, 12.
For the present—Consecration, vide Acts xx, 21.
For the future—The Assurance of Hope, vide Titus ii, 13.

LADY PRIESTLEY.

I count it a privilege to be able to send to all who are believers in B.-I. Truth, and to all who are so earnestly working on its behalf, a New Year's message. The longer I live the greater faith I have in prayer. It is one of the greatest factors which has made B.-I. Truth the great success it is. Prayer permeates into every branch of its work. What B.-I. Truth has brought into many lives it is impossible to say in a short message. To sum it up in a few words, it has brought one into such close touch with the Great Father of us all, and by bringing Him so closely in touch with our daily life, we are helped to fulfil duties with much more patience, courage and good will. God bless our B.-I. Federation in the future as He has done in the past.

THE REV. HUGH B. SIMEON, M.A.

I send you my heartfelt wishes for the year 1930, that your splendid work may be more and more successful in teaching the people of our Empire and the U.S.A. to "read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest" the Holy Scriptures, and grasp the meaning and value of them.

I regard every number of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE as a shovelling away of another spadeful of the earth of ignorance and prejudice which hides from the sight of many people the treasure hidden in the field of the Bible. You are doing a splendid work in thus helping many to prepare for the Second Coming of our Lord Jesus Christ to sit on the throne of David and rule the world in righteousness.

THE REV. W. C. BATTISCOMBE.

I will summarize, as shortly as possible, how I at first became interested in B.-I. Truth. Fifty-six years ago I was in Iowa, U.S.A., getting an insight into farming (an outdoor life being medically advised, on account of an accident, causing concussion of the brain) in a hamlet, sixteen miles from a railway, and with one mail a week. One afternoon, mail-day, I walked up to the village in the hope of receiving letters and brought back some pamphlets sent me by the lady who afterwards became my wife. These pamphlets were by Edward Hine. I set to work reading these pamphlets, together with my Bible to compare references. So interesting did I find the study that I continued reading till one or two in the morning, although I had to rise early. The pons asinorum with me was the same as it has been with others, viz., to differentiate between Israel and Judah, and it took some time to achieve this feat. At last the light filtered in. I can truly say that since accepting this great enlightenment, the Bible has become a new Book to me; and although I have read many so-called "answers" and repudiations, my belief in this Truth has not only not been disturbed, but has become strengthened and more confirmed.

Many of these attempts to discredit one's faith in it have had the opposite effect, and have exposed the ignorance of the opposer and his failure to grasp the subject. My close study of the Scriptures necessitated searching into the subject for several years, and proved afterwards to be of great service to me when passing my examination in Holy Scripture for Holy Orders.

The comment made afterwards (to my wife) by the Dean who examined me—who considered a general knowledge of the Scriptures essential—was, "He certainly knows his Bible."

MR. JOHN J. MOREY.

Wherever I go I hear sincere and grateful testimonies to the unspeakable value of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE and our general literature. Many thousands are rejoicing in the new light which shines upon the old Truth, and I meet everywhere glorious indications of the great national awakening which is rapidly proceeding.

DR. W. GORNOLD.

"Because ye have kept the patience of My Word, I will exempt you from that tribulation that is coming upon ALL THE WORLD, to test it." (Rev. iii, 10.)

Those of us who are alive to the abounding dangers, both spiritual and material, of this year of Peril, have heart to thank God for everything that has conspired to our national and individual safety and welfare; and in this New Year of Testing we can but put our whole trust in the merits of our Blessed Redeemer, the Lord God of Israel, by Whose saving Grace we shall not be found wanting. Let all of Israel thank Him for the increasing acceptance of the Gospel of the Kingdom and the Gospel of Grace whereby He has opened the eyes of His people to the great obligations and unique privileges of their glorious destiny, and let our thanks be shown forth in willing aid, to the measure of our means and powers, to all of His messengers and servants, honouring His Word and glorifying His Holy Name. "And all the people shall say, Amen." (Deut. xxvii, 15.)

LT.-COL. AND MRS. H. M. MAXWELL.

"A Happy New Year" to the Editor, contributors to, and staff of, our wonderful journal. Its arrival on Fridays marks our weeks, as our Congress marks our years. It helps us to "be strong and of a good courage," for it has taught us to know our Protector is Jehovah, the God and King of Israel.

"ISRAEL IN PROPHECY AND HISTORY."

(From "The South African National Message.")

"THE chief work of Israel, the Elected Race, is to spread abroad in the whole world the triumphs of Redeeming Grace; Israel at its highest is the missionary and Bible-spreading Israel, an Israel baptized with the Holy Spirit and using the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God, for the evangelizing of all nations, and for the exaltation of our God and Saviour, Jesus Christ, everywhere throughout the globe on which we stand, and on which He once stood."

This is the text of Mr. P. W. Thompson's work bearing the title of "Israel in Prophecy and History," and right well does he bear out his intention of showing how Israel was set apart by God to do special things, and in what way in her history God has seen to it that those things should be performed by a blind and frequently disobedient people.

Not everyone will have associated in the work of evangelization the Lollards and the Puritans, along with the Anglican Church and the Methodists, as fulfilments of the promise of God to the world of what He would accomplish through His people Israel; yet the writer shows how each in its own way contributed just that element to the religious life of the world which the Destiny of Israel required, and that each gave its quota exactly at the right time for the perfect carrying out of the Everlasting Promises of God. With the consequent problems of Predestination and Freewill Mr. Thompson deals openly and courageously, and may we say not only to his own conviction but to that of most of his readers.

Commencing from a survey of the history and economics of the Theocratic State of Israel, with which he deals in such a way as to make a modern critic wish it had been our privilege to be ruled under such free and equitable laws, Mr. Thompson leads to the great question of the Seven Times of Israel's Punishment. In this vexed question he avoids three pitfalls into which too often students of prophecy easily fall. These errors are, in turn, Narrowness of View, Slavish Adherence to Fixed Dates, and Fanciful Interpretation of the Fulfilment of Prophecy.

In the first place we are left in no doubt as to which school of prophecy has Mr. Thompson's whole-hearted support. Speaking of the Praeterists, the Futurists, and the Historicists, he says—

"If we are to choose between these three modes of thought, then we are bound to affirm that the Historicist argument has been completely made out. They have proved their case. If it is only mentally permissible to belong to one prophetic school at one time, then the Historicist school is the one that claims our allegiance on the ground of sheer reason and proven fact."

That is clear enough, is it not? There can be no doubt in any reader's mind as to where the author stands; yet he goes on to say, with a spirit for which we look too often in vain among professing Christian students—

"But if we have greater intellectual liberty than this, then . . . the Historicists are absolutely right, while the Praeterists and the Futurists are not wholly wrong."

The dates for the working out of the Seven Times' Punishment of Israel are reached on the usual basis, well argued out, that a "time" is 360 years, lunar, solar or prophetic; and consequently we are led from the Commencement of Israel Punishment in 741 B.C. and 676 B.C. to a series of dates, lunar, solar and prophetic, ranging between A.D. 1702 and A.D. 1845. The concluding dates of Judah's Punishment, as distinct from Israel's—and that distinction is very fully shown—are given as 1917, 1923 and 1934.

On this point of the different conclusions of punishment for Israel and Judah we have a characteristic statement as to what happens to the mentality of those people who still insist that Israel returned with Judah from Babylon.

"Suppose for the sake of argument that Israel and Judah returned from Palestine together at the end of the seventy years' captivity. Now where are we? The punishment of Israel, taking 721 B.C. as a central and convenient date, terminated in A.D. 1800. But the punishment of Judah, with whom Israel has, on the theory we are now considering, been hopelessly intermingled, so hopelessly that you can't tell one from the other, terminates in 1934. Therefore, when God said 2,520 years, He really meant for the greater part of the nation 2,654 years, but did not succeed in expressing His purpose clearly. Which, in the case of anyone possessed of the slightest reverence for God and for Holy Writ, sounds like scurrilous and abominable blasphemy."

With regard to the supposed "GAP" in prophecy, the position is made equally, almost cruelly clear.

"If Israel's punishment lasted only for, say, 750 years before the prophetical clock was stopped, and there is, on your theory, to be a further three and a half years of resumption of prophetic time at the end of the present age, and then the Millennium, then, on your own showing, Israel will have to face 1,766½ years of chastisement during a period of perfect bliss lasting for 1,000 years only."

One is tempted to turn aside to quote further examples of Mr. Thompson's almost mischievously logical attacks on certain schools of thought, but enough has been said to show something of the sheer fascination of these earlier chapters; and we have not yet begun the cream of the book.

We are now led, through a very clear résumé of the Promises made to the nation Israel, through Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Balaam, Moses, Nathan, and the prophets generally, through the wanderings of Israel from the cities of the Medes, by way of the history of the Scythians and Getae, to the settlement of the various sections of the race in the British Isles. Quoting Freeman, we have "Tribe after Tribe, Angles, Saxons, Jutes, Frisians, poured across the sea to make new homes in the Isles of Britain. Thus grew up the English nation—a nation formed by the union of various tribes OF THE SAME STOCK. The Dane hardly needed assimilation; he was another KINDRED tribe, coming later than the others. Even the Norman was a kinsman." To which categorical statement of the distinguished author of the "Origin of the English Nation," our author adds—

"We are inclined to venture the remark that the whole of Israel, rather obviously, did not take up its residence in Britain, and that it is incumbent upon us to cultivate the warm friendship of the Swedish, Norwegian, Danish and Dutch peoples. The Germans, as shown in chapter 2, are not of our kin. Comparing history with prophecy, we are driven to the conclusion that in Britain itself Ephraim must be the predominant tribe."

We here conclude with Canon Kingsley, whom none has ever accused of being tinged with British-Israel views, but who pertinently asks—

"Was there no one to lead these innumerable armies, on whose success depended the future of the whole human race? Did no one marshal them in that impregnable convex front, from the Black Sea to the North Sea? Did no one guide them to the two great strategic centres of the Black Forest and Trieste? No one cause them, blind barbarians without maps of science, to follow those rules of war without which victory in a protracted struggle is impossible? And by the pressure of the Huns behind force on their flagging myriads to an enterprise which their simplicity fancies at first beyond the powers of mortal man?"

And Mr. Thompson concludes his survey of early history with the remark, which should be emphasized in letters of gold as the greatest vindication of the honour of Jehovah as a Covenant-keeping God—

"FOR A SECOND TIME HE HAD BROUGHT HIS PEOPLE INTO A PROMISED LAND, INTO THE POSSESSION OF THE APPOINTED PLACE."

Having thus successfully settled the tribes in the place promised to them by the Almighty, our guide next takes us to the "Third Day" of Israel's history, on the text of Hosea vi, 2: "On the third day he will raise us up." Two "days" of 1,000 years each ("A thousand years is as a day") having passed since the commencement of Israel's punishment, we may expect something of revival in Israel as from the period commencing 1198 and running on to the final passing out of punishment. Whereupon our writer leads us gently through historic movements, all of which tend to prove his point.

The Historical treatment itself is too lengthy for us to be able to give any adequate account of its course, but it must be said that never have we read a more illuminative, more facile or even more humorous (if the word will not be misunderstood) history than this which covers the periods already mentioned. One or two phrases which spring up and catch the eye we cannot resist giving, if only to whet the appetite for more; but it must not be supposed that humour is the main attraction of this portion of the book. It is the freshness, the insight, and the inevitability of the rendering of the cold facts which attracts the attention most of all.

Here are one or two gems, the elucidation of which can only be obtained by reading the book itself.

"Stephen's reign was not so much a reign as a nightmare."

Does this not sum up Thomas à Becket, Archdeacon of Canterbury, who later became Archbishop? "The Archdeacon had a head; the Archbishop a swollen head. Hence the trouble."

On the Armada—

"In 1587 it was definitely known that Spain was preparing to attack. By way of lending a helping hand, Sir Francis Drake courteously sailed to Cadiz and destroyed a large part of the Spanish stores and transport. The consequent delay gave the then Spanish High Admiral time to die, and to be replaced by a fool."

"Cromwell was a Welshman called Williams."

"James the First would have made a respectable pedagogue in a village school, or he might have earned a just reputation at ruridecanal meetings as a learned and highly eccentric curate."

But it is on his more serious side that the real values are apparent, manifesting such a deep insight into root causes as will give food for thought for long periods of meditation. Take this priceless summing up of a fact not generally realized.

"A man is only useful as the expression of a fact. Henry VIII was the concentrated essence of 'no Popish dominion in these realms.' That is one fact. Cromwell is Puritanism; another fact. Wesley is Evangelism; another fact. Queen Elizabeth is Anglicanism. The greatest forces in our later history are Anglicanism and Puritanism, and their compound, Methodism."

And immediately we are launched on one of those clever parallelisms which his soul loves, when he compares Anglicanism and Puritanism with the Temple and Synagogue worship of the later Jewish Church. Similar parallelisms are worked out with equal fascination in other places between Wesley and Wycliff, between the reigns of John and of James II, and between Rome Papal and Rome Imperial.

For South African readers, the chapter on the reign of William of Orange, entitled "THE DELIVERER," will be of vital interest. Mr. Thompson sums up the advantages of that wonderful period under three heads: (1) a sound currency; (2) an excellent banking system; and (3) security for a man's old age. Strange as it may sound, it is proved that the best security for a man's old age is the National Debt, a paradox which would delight G. K. Chesterton, but which there is no gainsaying.

"Under such circumstances, England, after 1702, had nothing to do but to go on going on. It did."

And we conclude this section of the book with another strange, but fully provable statement.

"William of Orange had to die in 1702, that John Benjamin Wesley might be born in 1703."

Mr. Thompson's review of Wesley's work is as clear and unbiassed as any we have seen. He recognizes the impossibility of writing in the length of two chapters any true impression of what that work meant for England, but he sums it up with astonishing clearness.

"In John Wesley, all that was best in Anglicanism and all that was best in Puritanism met and had their full fruition, to the immeasurable benefit of our nation in all its varied spheres of responsibility. For there was a profound and prophetic truth in Wesley's exclamation: "I look upon all the world as my parish."

So we come, by pleasant pathways, to "The End of Chastisement; the Promises Fulfilled." After all, what other logical conclusion to the wondrous history of our nation can any man come to who believes in God's wisdom, power, and faithfulness to His word? Without such a perfected design, "our island story" is a mere meaningless hotch-potch of fantastic, almost impossible, coincidences.

Fixing the beginning of the "end of chastisement" at 1702, Mr. Thompson, out of an embarrassment of riches, chooses merely to name the ways in which there has come to modern Britain every detail of what was promised in the Bible to ancient Israel. In his own words: "Increase in wealth and population, naval pre-eminence, military prowess, possession of the gates of her enemies, colonial expansion . . . they ALL occurred in the experience of the British people ONLY, and at exactly the dates enumerated."

"UNDER THESE CIRCUMSTANCES, IT IS FOR OUR OPPONENTS DEFINITELY TO SHOW THAT THE BRITISH ARE NOT ISRAEL BY PROVING THE TOTAL IMPOSSIBILITY OF A WESTERN MIGRATION FOR ISRAEL. This they cannot do."

"These opportunities of increased usefulness . . . have been partly realized by the nation, but we have been sore let and hindered by our impenitent and stiff-necked selves."

"Has He to chastise us again, or will we yet repent before the Divine wrath once more falls upon Israel? The chastisement would not be to the destruction of Israel, but it might be to the destruction of all the wicked in Israel. And slackness is itself a wickedness. What if judgment began at the House of God?"

Such is the conclusion of the whole matter, and it is to be noticed throughout that the real force of this wonderful book is not so much in what is said—brilliant though that be—but in what is left unsaid and is inevitably SUGGESTED to the mind. No one who has brought mental effort to the digestion of this history of Israel can any longer ask "What does it matter, this question of the origin of the British?" Our author rightly claims that "this mode of thought is one most deeply and most wickedly dishonouring to Almighty God. It is the concentrated essence of don't-careism, parading under the guise of spiritual religion."

"British-Israel Truth means a greatly deepened sense of responsibility."

Of the last two pages of the book, one would like to quote the whole as being perhaps the most vitally practical of all. Like all "good" letter-writers (!) Mr. Thompson keeps his greatest interest for his P.S. We shall not here even mention the subject on which he here quotes so great an authority as the late Rev. Dr. Alexander Whyte. Those who know our author will guess what it is: the rest may look it up. We believe it to be vital to the individual, the Church, and the nation.

OBITUARY.

THE LATE REV. E. J. WEMYSS-WHITTAKER, M.A., OF BATH.

A FEW days ago there passed away the revered "father" of the Bath British-Israelites, the Rev. E. J. Wemyss-Whittaker, at the advanced age of 92, at the home of his son-in-law, Admiral Sir Richard Peirse, in Bath.

Mr. Wemyss-Whittaker was one of the founders of the old Bath Anglo-Israel Association, and for many years worked in co-operation with the late "Philo-Israel," for so long the Editor of the BANNER OF ISRAEL. He was a great authority on our subject, and for a long time a regular contributor to the pages of the BANNER.

A most persuasive speaker and of a most gentle and lovable spirit, his winning manner won many adherents to the Cause.

We tender our sympathy to his daughter, Lady Peirse, and her husband in their bereavement.

Copy of Resolution passed at a Meeting of British-Israelites in Bath.

"This Meeting of the Bath Branch of the British-Israel-World Federation desires to express to Lady Peirse and the other members of the family of the Rev. E. J. Wemyss-Whittaker its sympathy in the loss they have sustained by his death at the ripe old age of 92.

Mr. Wemyss-Whittaker was connected with the Bath Association since its inception in 1881, and, first as President and afterwards as ex-President, took a keen interest in the progress of the Movement in Bath as well as throughout the Country and Empire.

By voice and pen he was always ready to advocate the Cause, and his kindliness of spirit did much to commend his Message to those who might otherwise have opposed.

He maintained his deep interest in our belief until the last, and the infirmities of age alone caused him to withdraw from active participation in the work he loved.

His memory will long remain with Bath British-Israelites."

The following is taken from "The Biographer and Review":

"EDMUND JUXON WEMYSS-WHITTAKER, who was born on the 6th of August, 1837, at the Vicarage, Blackburn, Lancashire, is the sixth son of the late eminent scholar, John William Whittaker, D.D., Professor of Hebrew at, and Fellow of, St. John's College, Cambridge; Examining Chaplain to the late Archbishop Howley of Canterbury; Hon. Canon of Manchester Cathedral; and for thirty-two years Vicar of Blackburn, where he died in 1854.

The family of Whittaker, or Whiteacre, is of very ancient Saxon origin, supposed originally to have sprung from Witgar, nephew of the Saxon King Cerdic, to whom this latter gave the Isle of Wight in possession. The present village and castle of Carrisbrook was originally Witgarisburg, or the Castle of Witgaris. They have as their crest the white horse, standard of the Saxon kings.

On the maternal side, Mr. Wemyss-Whittaker traces his descent in an unbroken line from Edward the Third. His mother was the eldest daughter of the late Sir William Fielden, Bart., of Feniscowles, Lancashire.

His father, having an estate in the Lake district, many of his young days were spent there, and he attended the Grammar School at Hawkshead, where he sat at the desk on which Wordsworth as a boy had carved his name, the poet having been a pupil at this same school. On leaving Hawkshead he was sent for a time to a private tutor at Devizes, and afterwards was at St. Peter's College, York.

In 1856 he was articled to the late well-known civil engineer, Samuel C. Homersham, of Buckingham Street, London, under whom he was employed on the water works at Caterham, and other places, and some years later was engaged on railway work in Wales, in which the present Sir Alexander Binnie, Engineer to the London City Council, took part.

In 1861, at Streatham, Surrey, Mr. Wemyss-Whittaker became acquainted with the late Sir Arthur Blackwood, and the late Rev. Stenton Eardley, Vicar of Immanuel Church. This double acquaintanceship ripened into friendship, which had a lasting influence over him, and from this time may be dated those deep religious convictions, which at a later period of his life resulted in his taking Holy Orders. Through the rousing manly advocacy of the Rev. Stenton Eardley, and seeing the great need of temperance amongst the navvies working under him in Wales, he became a total abstainer, and carried on a most interesting and practical work amongst his men in Builth, Radnorshire, many of them following his example.

In 1865, he acquired a colliery in Nottinghamshire, where he did much evangelistic and temperance work amongst the colliers.

In 1869, he went to St. Mary Hall, Oxford, where he and the late Bishop Hannington, of Equatorial Africa, met and became fast friends (almost, if not the last sermon preached by the Bishop before leaving for Africa was in Mr. Wemyss-Whittaker's church in Bath).

In 1871, he was ordained deacon, and subsequently priest, by the late Bishop Fraser of Manchester, and was for two years curate to the late Thomas Daniels, M.A., of St. Paul's Church, Hulme, Manchester.

In 1873, he became curate to his old and valued friend, the late Hon. and Rev. John Venables Vernon, Rector of Nuttall, Nottinghamshire; and 1875 saw him private Chaplain at Newstead Abbey, interesting as the home of Byron.

In 1876, the Rectory of Falfield, Gloucestershire, was presented to him by the late Sir George Jenkinson, Bart, M.P. Here he remained for five years, until appointed by the Simeon Trustees to the important living of Lyncombe, Bath. For fifteen years Mr. Wemyss-Whittaker laboured incessantly in this large and difficult parish. During his Vicariate, he succeeded in restoring the Parish Church of St. Mark's, in starting two Mission Churches, a Parish Room, a Workmen's Rest, and was the first of the Clergy in Bath to suggest raising a Boys' Brigade, and one of the first to carry his suggestion into effect.

A work very dear to him was that amongst the young men and lads of his parish. During the whole of the many years he was Vicar, he had a regular and large attendance of these at his Sunday Afternoon Bible Class.

In Bath and other towns and villages of England he is well known as an ardent temperance advocate, and during the Bath Blue Ribbon Mission of 1883, which should have been presided over by the American total abstinence champion, Richard Booth, but who was taken so seriously ill, in Mr. Wemyss-Whittaker's house, as to be unable to appear at a single meeting, the then Vicar of Lyncombe was constantly to be seen and heard on the platform in the Grand Assembly Room, which was filled to overflowing. In this Gospel Temperance Mission work he was ably helped by many well-known total abstainers, notably by Charles Hathaway, M.D., who, by his eloquent pleading and practical knowledge as a medical man of the evils of intemperance, did much to further the cause. After a fortnight of crowded meetings, the result gained was 7,000 pledges!

In 1889, Mr. Wemyss-Whittaker had the honour of being elected President of the Western Temperance League, succeeding Mr. Stafford Howard, of Thornbury Castle, Gloucestershire.

In 1895 he broke down from the strain of overwork, and resigned the living of Lyncombe. His parishioners and friends showed their appreciation of his work in their midst by presenting him and Mrs. Wemyss-Whittaker with a most beautifully leather-bound and illuminated address, also a purse of £250.

Mr. Wemyss-Whittaker married, in 1863, his cousin, Frances Maria Caroline, second daughter of the late Sir William Henry Fielden, Bart., of Feniscowles, Lancashire (authoress and temperance advocate). He has an only child, Blanche Melville, married in 1889 to Commander Richard Peirse, R.N., gunnery expert, now Admiral Sir Richard Peirse.", ANNUAL SALE IN AID OF THE FUNDS OF THE B.-I.-W.F.

THE Annual Sale at Headquarters last month was an unqualified success, and the proceeds were over £100 beyond those of last year. We give three pictures showing portions of the Stalls and the Christmas Tree. The picture on previous page shows the President, Major Knowles. On his right is Mrs. Knowles, and next to her are the Rev. Pascoe Goard, Deputy-President, and Mr. Herbert Garrison, Secretary-General. Mrs. Garrison can just be seen on the extreme left inside the stall. On the President's left are Mrs. Van der Kiste (Mrs. Knowles' sister), and in front of him is Miss Ursula Van der Kiste. In the two other pictures are some of the stallholders and their helpers. It was unfortunately not possible to photograph the whole of the stalls. The one in the picture on previous page was in charge of Mrs. Knowles, Mrs. Garrison and Miss Gertrude Smith. Other stallholders were Mrs. Barrow-Doo, Miss E. C. Bird, Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. Fletcher Stevenson, Mrs. Freund, Miss Van der Kiste, Mrs. Cameron, Mrs. de Courcy Hamilton, Mrs. Vincent Wright, Mrs. A. SUPREMACY OF THE SEA.

BRITAIN'S HARD FIGHT FOR ITS DOMINION.

LECTURE AT EXETER.

MR. HALL presided at the weekly meeting of the Exeter Branch of the British-Israel-World Federation held in the King's Lodge Y.M.C.A., and the lecturer was the Rev. L. G. A. Roberts, R.N., who gave an interesting address on "The Supremacy of the Sea."

The Gate of Empire to Israel, he said, was God's gift to Abraham, and the ships of Tarshish were the original of the British Navy. A great difficulty with many people was the distinction between the Phocæans and the Phœnicians. These two great maritime powers were not the same by any means, whereas the Phocæans were mostly composed of Hebrews, and the Phœnicians were Hebrews and a very large mixture of Canaanites. Herodotus, in Book I, states: "Now the Phocæans were the first Greeks who performed long voyages, and it was they who first came to Spain. These Greeks, students of ethnology will tell you, descended from the Hebrews. The vessels used on their voyages were not the round-built merchant ship, but the long penteconter. The Phœnicians originally came from the Persian Gulf, settling down in Syria, and intermarried with the Hebrews. We must not confuse the Philistines with the Phœnicians. The Philistines came from Caphtor (Amos ix, 7). The Jewish Chronicle of May 28th, 1875, reports a lecture by Rev. A. L. Green, who stated: "Our forefathers in their happiest times, in the golden age of the nation's glory, were indeed the public carriers of their day. The ships of Solomon rivalled the Phœnician Navy. The ports of Elath and Eziongeber were filled with ships of Tarshish. Their ships sailed the Indian Ocean, and through the Pillars of Hercules, bringing tin from Spain and, possibly, Cornwall, to be used with the copper of Cyprus." Amongst the earliest inhabitants of Greece were the Pelasgi. The word has its root in Peleg, and this man, we are told in Genesis x, 25, derived his name from the fact the earth was divided in his days. His father's name Eber is the root word of Hebrew, so we recognize that those first Greeks sprung from the Hebrews.

Continuing, the speaker said the Phocæans from Phocis, situated to the north of Corinth, in Greece, established many colonies, Massalia, or the modern Marseilles, being one. With respect to the language, we know the ancient Greek is derived from the Hebrew, as instanced by their alphabet; the Greek colonization of Spain, Iberia; the very word is Hebrew. Then Gades, beyond the Pillars of Hercules, was one of the first Hebrew colonies. The westward tendency was all within the keeping of God's Word.

Britain: whence its name? The very Latin word Brittiam used by Prorcopius in reference to Angles is used in the Hebrew texts by Isaiah xlii, 6, and Isaiah xlix, 8. Step by step Israel came to Britain. Villalpando gives several instances proving the Sagontiaci to be descendants of the Children of Israel.

Concluding, Commander Roberts said: The history of the world was taking definite form at the close of the fifteenth century, and up to the eighteenth century we had to fight hard for the supremacy of the sea. In A.D. 1805, however, the war with Dutch, Spanish and French fleets ended in the great battle at Trafalgar, which gave Britain the dominion of the seas and the possession of the gate of her enemies only promised to Israel. In these latter days we find a great conspiracy. Under the cover of disarmament, the nations of the earth are endeavouring to put Britain's sea power in jeopardy. God forbid! The dominion of the seas was God's gift, and although there were men who would, not knowing the Scriptures, attempt to upset the Divine law, it would be found in the end that all Israel's enemies would be defeated.

The Chairman cordially announced at the close of the meeting that greetings from British-Israel members in Canada were sent to the Exeter Branch by Mrs. Painter, delegate to the London Congress.—The Express and Echo, Friday, November 29th, 1929.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor.

THE TITHE.

DEAR SIR,—As the Honorary Secretary of the Christian Stewardship Movement, and as one who is therefore in the closest touch with that Movement, I desire to place on record two or three facts for the encouragement of those who are interested, or are becoming interested, in the great question of tithing.

1. A generation ago a speech on tithing at the Keswick Convention proved a complete fiasco. Four years ago a similar speech led to over one thousand persons pledging themselves to the practice.

2. A generation ago an attempt to arouse correspondence on tithing in a religious journal had to be abandoned. Now the mention of the word produces more commendatory letters than can be utilized.

3. Pamphlets upon the subject are being called for. The distribution of one of these has run to over 175,000 copies. They are eagerly accepted by University Students' Christian Unions, to mention one channel only.

4. For the first time, as we believe, in literary history, a book on systematic giving has got into a second edition. We allude to the "popular" edition of The Whole Tithe, sold by the Covenant Publishing Co. at the reduced price of five shillings.

5. Our experience of the Christian public leads us to the conclusion that more and more believers are coming to see that until the expenses of the Kingdom are met, the Kingdom cannot come. The only method of carrying on the financial side of government is by a regular annual proportionate levy on the incomes of the subjects. This fact is universal, and does not pertain to purely earthly kingdoms only.

Yours faithfully,

J. WHITEHEAD CLEGG.

BRITISH-ISRAEL FACTS NOT FANCIES.

By MAJOR-GENERAL C. A. HADFIELD.

INTRODUCTION.—PART II.

OUR knowledge of early British history is limited, and many are too apt to be satisfied by commencing with the Cæsars. Why commence so late? Why imagine our National history only started from Rome? Green's History of the English People says: "For the fatherland of the English race we must look far away from England itself"—and the historian goes on to locate it in Northern Europe, but he does not go back beyond the fifth century, where he finds them as Angles, Jutes, Saxons, etc. The Israelites, as has been shown, when they left their Assyrian Captivity, made their way to the Southern shore of the Caspian Sea and thence on into Central and Northern Europe.

Is it not safe to accept the Bible as being, not only our Manual of Religion, but our Manual of History? That it gives us the foretold history of an ever-living Israel—"the Everlasting Nation"? Why, for instance, were the Romans unable to remain in the British Isles? Because, centuries before, the everlasting throne of David had, for its safety and security, been transferred from Palestine to the British Isles, and no weapon which was formed was to destroy it or to prosper. Our National archives denote, from the recorded charts, how our Royal House is directly descended from the House of David.

Thus it was God's plan of preserving Israel in safety—and unrecognized.

The utterances of some of our public men, made probably in ignorance or unbelief of any connection in their minds of Israel being existent in the British race, are of themselves remarkable. The late Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, for example, once publicly said: "The British race are a race specially chosen for a specific purpose in the world with great responsibilities."

Then again the Archbishop of Canterbury in a sermon remarked: "Do we constantly realize that we alone to-day are those whom God hath chosen in the world's history as a people to whom is to be given incomparably the greatest trust and decision for the world's safety that has ever been laid upon a great company of people?"

Our learned men are profoundly ignorant of the early history of our race. More knowledge of the history of the Saxons, Goths, Dacians, and Asiatic Scythians is needed. But in consequence of this "ignorance" it has been possible for Israel to exist and without the envy of other races to rise to the preordained greatness which was destined so long ago for "Israel" to possess in the "last days."

God's plan was to sow and scatter Israel through the "seven times" period of punishment. It was not until after the Reformation that Israel was allowed to "settle down" and make their influence felt in distant lands. Their "Mission" was then to commence their task, which was to build up the Empire—of "The Stone Kingdom"—to its future greatness as a Nation and a Company of Nations, i.e., as a Commonwealth of "free," not "subject" States, free to stay in, or leave the Empire as they willed.

That they will remain as a part thereof is a foregone conclusion! Our National history is a history which we may say our modern historians have failed to satisfactorily solve, arranged probably again, in order to complete God's plan of concealment of Israel until "the appointed time" when their existence shall be made generally known. Sharon Turner went so far as to locate the Saxons in Central Asia, from whence he traces them to the British Isles. If, as he says, they lived to the east of Araxe, we get to the very locality to which Israel had been carried captive, which is significant.

Where the Historian pauses let us now refer to the Old Testament giving us the history of Israel and may we say the early history foretold of the Anglo-Saxons. See 2 Kings xvii, 6: "In the ninth year of Hoshea, the King of Assyria took Samaria and carried Israel away into Assyria and placed them in Halah and in Habor by the river of Gozan and in the Cities of the Medes." (This was about 725 B.C.)

Why should we resent what seems to be so reasonably clear proof of our ancestry? Why should we resent the idea of our race springing directly from Abraham? It was through Isaac, i.e., "by faith" that God brought Abraham into the land of Canaan from the other side of the River Euphrates. See Joshua xxiv, 3: "And I took your father Abraham from the other side of the flood . . ." The Hebrew word here for "flood" is NAHAR, which means "a river" (doubtless the Euphrates in this reference). From Abraham came three distinct races: (1) The Ishmaelites from Hagar, i.e., The Ishmaelites—or Arabs; (2) the race from Keturah—or the Indians and Japanese; (3) the race from Isaac and Jacob, or the Israelites and the Jews. With this third distinct race we read in Gen. xxvii, 21: "But my Covenant will I establish with Isaac." Not with the other of Abraham's sons—but with Isaac's Sons—Saxons with the I changed! These, only, are the children and heirs of the Covenants and promises to Abraham. We are told much about Abraham, his name signifies, Ab—father, Ra—great, Ham—multitude. God sent away the sons of the concubines of Abraham. They went eastward. Where are their descendants? They must be among the living races of the world, just as much as are the Jews from the son Judah.

Anyone who desires to study this subject is referred to the writings of the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., which are most interesting.

It is amusing to hear educated persons talking of Abraham being "a Jew," and of God bringing "the Jews" out of Egypt, and so on!

Abraham was a Hebrew—but how could he possibly be "a Jew"? The first mention of the Jews was centuries after Abraham's day. (See 2 Kings xvi, 6.)

To arrive at the origin of the word BRITISH. It began as BRITH, or Covenant, made between GOD and Abraham and his Wife Sarah. The Hebrew word BRITH (Covenant) and ISH (man) makes up our word BRITISH; and the entry into the "Isles of the West," or the "United Kingdom," in the early days B.C., constitute the origin of the British Colony.

These notes go on to show how Zedekiah was the last of the line of David to occupy the Throne of David in Judah. That the King's daughter went thenceforth to Egypt in charge of the Prophet Jeremiah, and from there to Ireland, where the throne was established over the House of Israel—to this day.

Remember always that although the Old Testament does not disclose the final movements of Zedekiah's daughter and the Prophet Jeremiah, it emphatically records :

(1) The Throne of David shall be " everlasting."

(2) There shall be an " appointed place " (i.e., other than Palestine) for " My people Israel " (i.e., other than the Jews).

(3) The reunion of the twelve tribes.

(4) Israel to possess all its heritages " from the River in Egypt to the Great River Euphrates."

So we may well consider those words : " If ye believe not the prophets, neither will ye believe though one rose from the dead."

Have we all realized that if—as God's Word tells us—The " Sceptre should not depart from Judah " . . . " until Shiloh came " . . . that if " a sceptre " means a King—there must be " a Kingdom "? Therefore if Shiloh refers to Christ, " the Kingdom " (of Israel) must exist until our Saviour's " Second Coming "; and " Israel " holds that Kingdom and performs Christ's Missionary work Now (to the extent of nearly ninety per cent. of the world). Therefore Israel is a great, powerful, and wealthy Nation. The " Chief of Nations," in fact, for none other could accomplish the work! Where then is Israel?

The human race is composed of Israel, and Gentiles ; but to reckon the English-speaking races as " Gentiles " is to confuse the whole of the prophetical writings forecasting the world destiny of God's Israelitish people whose kingdom was to be an everlasting one. There is as much confusion over the term Gentile as there is in distinguishing Israel from the race known as " The Jews."

As regards the fallacy that " Israel " became " The Church." It is pointed out in the Reference Bible by the Rev. C. I Scofield, D.D., that " Israel in the Land is never called 'a Church.' In the Wilderness Israel was a true Church but not in any sense the N.T. Church " (see Acts vii, 38 ; Heb. xii, 23 ; Matt. xvi, 18). Both were " called out " by the same God, but this is the only similarity.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

WE deeply regret to say that Dr. W. Gornold passed away last week. We had not known that he was ill, and the sad announcement of his death came as a great shock. Some particulars shall be given in a future issue.

It is with great sorrow and sincere sympathy with Mrs. A. Macdonald, a member of the Council and the Executive of the B.-I.-W.F., that we have to report that her husband, Dr. C. R. Macdonald, was knocked down by a motor in Kensington on December 24th, and died on Christmas Day in a hospital near by to which he had been conveyed by ambulance. Dr. Macdonald was for many years Medical Officer of Health for Ayrshire. He attended many of our Congresses and other meetings with his wife. All who know Mrs. Macdonald, and who appreciate her generous support of our Cause and her devoted labour, will therefore deeply sympathize with her in her great bereavement.

Mr. John Leech, K.C., has been laid up with a severe cold. He wishes us to say that he will begin his series of lectures on January 15th instead of 8th inst. The speaker in his place on Wednesday afternoon next at Headquarters will be the Rev. T. Sparshott Johnson, M.A., and on Thursday evening next the address will be given by the Rev. Kenneth Dodds.

We have many letters from U.S.A. expressing great pleasure at the decision to hold an All-American Convention in April next. Various centres are suggested ; so far the weight of opinion seems to favour a place in the neighbourhood of Chicago or Detroit. We shall welcome further correspondence from our American readers on this matter, addressed to Herbert Garrison, Secretary-General, B.-I.-W. Federation, 6, Buckingham Gate, London, S.W.1.

Erratum.—The printer's devil seems to be a very real personality at times. There appeared in the address of Major Knowles given at the Central Hall Protest Meeting, and reported in the last issue, as written by him the following words : " The Rev. Pascoe Goard . . . who took part in a campaign against the 'Reds' in Vancouver during the war, and was instrumental in bringing about a complete victory against them." The error is simple. It consisted of the use of the word " and " for the word " which." As the matter stands it seems to indicate that Rev. Pascoe Goard was instrumental in winning a victory over the Reds. What the President meant was that the campaign organized and carried out by the Vancouver people was instrumental in winning a victory over the Reds. It was apropos of the campaign upon which we have entered and are waging in London and elsewhere now.

The Editor corrected this in the galley sheets when they came for proof-reading, but the printer missed the correction. The error was again corrected in the proof sheets when they came for final correction, and again the compositor missed the correction. Finally, to the annoyance of the Editor, the finished paper came to hand with the offending sentence as it was. Please take your last week's issue and make the correction. This is the last recourse of the Editor in the case.

Erratum.—In the Christmas article, " The Scholars' Quest of the Christ," the statement is made that the course of the wise men was first from the East to the West ; then the course was changed from the South to the North. It should have been reversed, from the North—Jerusalem—to the South—Bethlehem ; for Bethlehem, of course, is South from Jerusalem.

Miss Hamilton Hunter gave two excellent lectures at Dover on December 12th. All present thoroughly appreciated these well-thought-out lectures, going away with much to think over and study. Lieut.-Colonel G. F. A. Smythe was in the chair.

At the afternoon meeting a resolution was proposed by Colonel Smythe and seconded by Mr. F. Ayres, congratulating Headquarters on their splendid stand in regard to the Morning Post Christian Protest against Bolshevism. It was unanimously carried at both meetings.

Paignton recently greatly enjoyed Miss Hunter's convincing lecture on "The Stone Symbol," in which she revealed deep spirituality and vision.

The Barrow Branch held their bi-weekly meeting on Friday, December 13th, at which Mr. Taggart was appointed Assistant-Secretary. The President addressed the gathering on the subject "Is the Bible the Word of God or a Collection of Literature?"

BRITISH-ISRAEL FEDERATION OF CANADA.

Mr. A. A. Robeson, General Secretary, writes:—"It is with profound thanks to God we can report an entirely new spirit permeating the Canadian Federation since the Convention last Spring in Winnipeg. The fullest co-operation is now being received from every Province. The Financial Secretary reports that over seven hundred dollars has been received for the Commissioner's Fund and money is coming in daily. Our objective is $10,000.00, and when one realizes that nearly all of the Branches have been closed for the Summer months this is a splendid showing. One Branch here in Toronto has contributed over $200.00.

"The Rev. E. J. Springett reports a most successful trip through Western Canada. We here in the East are looking forward to his visit to us. Hamilton, Peterborough and Montreal are all hoping that his itinerary will include visits to them.

"Our Representative at the London Congress, Mrs. E. W. Painter, of Regina, has written a long enthusiastic letter. We wish that space permitted the printing of all of it. We copy one item: 'There were large audiences at each meeting, and the greatest theme running through it all was Christ.' Mrs. Painter has promised to write a report, and copies will be forwarded to each Branch.

"One of our prayers here in Toronto has been that we should have a Headquarters of our own. God has answered our prayers in a way never dreamed of. A fine residence, in Sherbourne Street, overlooking the beautiful Allan Gardens, has been acquired through the generosity of one of our members. The house was officially opened on the 14th of December. This was a great day for British-Israel in Toronto. The first official act was the passing of a resolution inviting the Canadian Federation to make its Headquarters there.

"Mr. Howard B. Rand, the Commissioner for the Eastern States of America, reports that headway is being made in the spreading of the Gospel of the Kingdom, and it is hoped that an All-American Conference can be held this Winter. We are co-operating in every way possible.

"Wonderful work has been done, and is being done, by Mr. R. J. Lymer, Chairman of the Publicity Committee. Over three thousand copies of the 'Special Message and Banner' have been mailed out. Copies have been placed in Public Libraries, Lodges, etc., and have been sent as far away as China and India. The wonderful results have proved the value of such propaganda. We would suggest that the ladies of each Branch form Committees to carry on this work. Names of enquirers, after local action has been taken, should be forwarded to Headquarters so that these enquiries can be systematically followed up. A quantity of literature is kept on hand for this purpose."

7 TIMES IN CHRONOLOGY
PYRAMID SYMBOLISM HEBREW PROPHECY
THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL
THE HOUSE OF JUDAH.

THE prophecy of the Seven Times applies to all the Children of Israel, and so it must apply to the people or Houses of both kingdoms. But it seems clear that the term "Times of the Gentiles" applies more particularly to the period of the oppression of Judah from the era of the subjugation of Jerusalem to the era of its deliverance. In the case of the Jews, we have a people who have never lost their identity, consequently it is comparatively easy to show how prophecy has been fulfilled in their case. But in the case of the Ten Tribes, we find that their identity was lost. They can be identified now by many signs in the Anglo-Saxon-Celtic race. It is not our purpose to mention these signs in detail, but rather to make a brief survey of certain periods of the history of Great Britain, the British Empire, and the United States, to show that the prophecy of the Seven Times has been fulfilled in their history as well as in the history of the Jews.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

CROSSING OF THE RED SEA AND JORDAN.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD, F.R.G.S.

"What ailed thee, O thou sea, that thou fleddest,
And thou Jordan, that thou wast driven back?"

Thus a most interesting question is raised for us in the Bible. It is an interesting question in itself. Being raised for us in the Bible, there is double reason for our undertaking a study of what the Bible tells us in regard to the matter.

As we follow the progress of the narrative of the Holy Scriptures, we are again and again brought into contact with miracle, concerning the details of which there is no information given, such as the resurrection of Lazarus from the dead. Perhaps the information given in regard to that miracle, however, lies in the revelation of the Personality of Jesus Christ, Who is Lord of life and death. But as to the manner of His procedure beyond His word of command, "Lazarus come forth," there is no information given.

Other miracles are presented to us, and at the same time information is given as to the agencies used to produce the results desired. Such is Israel's miracle of the crossing of the Red Sea, and also Israel's later crossing of the Jordan river while in full flood.

That we may inform ourselves of these things, the question is set for us in the Bible, and we are in duty bound to seek the answer. When we have found the agencies used to bring about these results the minds of men are relieved and satisfied, and we are inclined to tell ourselves, "This is a true statement, for we can understand how the results were obtained."

There has been much discussion of the matter. Practical scientists have advanced many possible explanations, especially regarding the crossing of the Red Sea. For instance, one such writer has of late suggested that Moses used the man-power of Israel to dam or fill in the inlet, or whatever stretch of water it was which occurred on the route of the Israel migration. He suggests that it was an irrigation canal. But this would have transformed it into a crossing of a branch of the Nile. This writer speaks in the highest terms of Moses as a practical leader of men. We agree so far. Any man who could organize such a mob of refugees into an organized army, and a still further organized nation, and could preserve and develop such a nation during a forty years' residence in the wilderness, deserves all the praise which may be expressed concerning him. It was an unparalleled feat of leadership and of organization.

To those who know how to read them, the Books of Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy are the most fascinating of matter-of-fact histories. These literary productions bear upon every page the assurance that they are veritable history. The facts which they record were established by actual experience of a major people who suddenly became a nation, and a powerful one. This we know from the history and national experience which lies back of the written record. Such was the later history of the people that, had the books named not been written, the great outline of the facts would have been established by succeeding history. Modern scholars hope even that it has been so. Such are the accidental features found in the Mosaic writings, which could not be later produced, that none but ill-equipped scholars and writers could possibly consign such literature to the realm of folklore and fable.

Nor could they assign them to a later age as to original production. This may seem a harsh judgment of those which are doing that very thing. It may even seem to be presumptuous considering the claims to exalted scholarship made by the "Modernist" who is guilty of this supreme absurdity. But there is an appeal to more than academic scholarship. There is the appeal to the developed experience of the practical man of affairs. The man of affairs reading the statements of these books, and then reading the unquestioned facts of later Israel history, will say that the later facts of Israel history would have been impossible without such antecedent facts as are recorded in the Pentateuch. The facts of Israel's sudden appearance among the nations, manifesting a higher form of civilization than is elsewhere to be discovered, would remain even though the record of them were destroyed. The facts vouch for the record. When practical experience is allied to practical scholarship and these two agree against the unpractical academic scholarship of the type exhibited by the "Modernist" who denies the historicity of these books, the latter will find himself relegated to his true position as an unpractical man and an unsound scholar.

In reading all these matters the practical mind must be brought to collaborate with the scholarly mind.

The old acceptance of the Book at its face value was a great demonstration of faith. To that very faith unimpaired we would add knowledge. The unfaith of the "modern" scholar is not to be compared with the faith of the earlier generation of scholars. The earlier scholars took the Bible as a working hypothesis, and, testing it by the touchstone of experience, found it to be true. We add to that test the acid test of history as fulfilment of prophecy, the accuracy of scientific reference and so on, and thus demonstrate its Divine source. We find that Moses did carry through his great mission, but he could never have carried through his task, his manifold task of which the crossing of the Red Sea was but an item, unless he had been backed by the miracle power of Jehovah, which was his to command in times of need and at all times.

Joshua also carried through his task. It was such a task as had never been set for men before. But he did it in a workmanlike and manly way. Yet the practical mind can see that he never could have carried through the task as he did had he not been aided by Divine direction and miracle power. Such aid was usually given apparently by accident through meteorological or other natural agencies. The agencies which were used to aid him in crossing the Red Sea were earthquake, hurricane wind, electric condition of the atmosphere, which resulted in freezing cold, and so forth.

The agency which was used in crossing the Jordan was earthquake and the overturning of the rock into the Jordan Valley, across the river bed, the result of which was "standing water."

The agency which was used for the weakening of the walls of Jericho was also the same earthquake.

So we shall study these things and find the answer to the question the Bible has set for us as it is supplied in the Word of God itself.

What does the Bible give to us in the way of information regarding the crossing of the Red Sea?

I.—"And the Lord caused the sea to go back

BY A STRONG EAST WIND

all that night, and made the sea dry land, and the waters were divided.

"And the children of Israel went into the midst of the sea upon the dry ground: and the waters were a wall unto them on their right hand, and on their left."—Exodus xiv, 21, 22.

II.—"With the blast of thy nostrils the waters were gathered together, the floods stood upright as an heap.

"And the depths were congealed in the heart of the sea. . .

"Thou didst blow with thy wind, the sea covered them:

"Thou stretchedst out thy right hand, the earth swallowed them."—Exodus xv, 8-12.

III.—"The waters saw thee, O God, the waters saw thee;
They were afraid:
The depths also were troubled.
The clouds poured out water:
The skies sent out a sound:
Thine arrows also went abroad.
The voice of thy thunder was in the heaven:
The lightnings lightened the world:
The earth trembled and shook.
Thy way is in the sea,
And thy path in the great waters,
And thy footsteps are not known.
Thou leddest thy people like a flock by the hand of Moses and Aaron."—Psalm lxxvii, 16-20.

IV.—"The mountains skipped like rams,
The little hills like lambs.
Tremble, thou earth, at the presence of the Lord."—Psalm cxiv.

Thus the Bible pours light upon that terrible day when the Israelites fled from before the armies of Egypt by a way that had suddenly and miraculously opened before them. The way had opened miraculously, and yet through natural agencies.

Moses stretched out his rod over the sea. That is the human side of it. What was the answering phenomenon?

All night long a cyclonic east wind blew, driving back the waters of the Red Sea. Not the deep broad body of the waters, of course, but the shallow and narrow waters of an inlet of the Red Sea.

This is a phenomenon not at all unusual. For instance, out of Lake Erie, which lies between Canada and the United States, there flows the mighty Niagara river, the sole natural drainage channel of the Great Lakes watershed. The rapids of that river above the falls, and the falls themselves, form one of the best known and most sublime river scenes in the world. Yet there have been times when a fierce east wind, of hurricane violence, blowing for days in succession, has so sent back the waters of Lake Erie, and has so piled them up at the west end of the lake that but a trickle of water has fallen over the falls during the continuance of the wind. Thus the waters "stood up as an heap" or were "heaped up"—that is to say, raised above the usual "water level" on the west—consequently in the eastern end of the lake the shallows were dry. If the writer's memory is right, a time was known when at least one venturesome person walked across on the river bed above the falls during such a period. Now a dry crossing of Niagara river would be equal, as a natural phenomenon, to the dry crossing of the Red Sea.

Other phenomena of this kind can be recalled on river, lake, sea and ocean. When we visualize the character of the inlet of the Red Sea we can understand that the phenomenon itself is not elsewhere unknown to meteorologists.

Electrical energy pervading the atmosphere so reduced the temperature as to congeal the floor of the sea laid bare by the wind, so that it hardened the floor of the sea, either by drying the crust, or freezing "the depths" . . . "in the heart of the sea." This also is a phenomenon not at all unusual. Bitter storms, with cold so penetrating as to destroy the life of man and beast, are known in many regions. Such storms produce hail, the stones of which are heavy enough to destroy the life of men and cattle. Such hail had been known disastrously in Egypt at that very period, and constituted one of the plagues of Egypt.

"The clouds poured out water." Torrential rains fell.

"The skies sent out a sound." Those who have had experience of storms of hurricane violence know that at such times there are sounds in the skies which are not caused by the wind in the ordinary way; neither are they thunder. Just how that sound is caused it is hard to say. Yet the explanation might be simple if one had space to pursue the subject.

"Thine arrows also went abroad." This seems to be not lightning of the ordinary type, but sharper and more deadly electric discharges. Forked lightning of an accentuated character perhaps is intended.

"The voice of thy thunder was in the heaven."

"The lightnings lightened the world." Ordinary lightning.

"The earth trembled and shook." Earthquake shaking the surface.

"The depths also were troubled." Subterranean seismic disturbances disturbed the depths below the Red Sea.

The path of the storm was narrow. It ran like a ribbon across the waters. Those who have experience of hurricanes, of irresistible power, which raze cities and forests in their path, will know that they are frequently narrow, and leave a clearly-defined lane of desolation behind them.

Thus the waters were swept to the right and to the left. The ooze of the sea bottom was congealed. The people marched on firmly frozen or dried up and temporarily solid ground.

"And the waters were a wall unto them on the right hand and on the left." The Hebrew word for "wall" is "chomah"—meaning a defensive barrier. One such use of the word we will give as follows:—

"But one of the young men told Abigail, Nabal's wife, saying, Behold, David sent messengers out of the wilderness to salute our master; and he railed on them.

But the men were very good unto us, and we were not hurt, neither missed we any thing, as long as we were conversant with them, when we were in the fields:

They were a wall unto us both by night and day, all the while we were with them keeping the sheep."—1 Sam. xxv, 14-16.

Thus the "walls" of water saved them from being surrounded by Pharaoh's horse.

Here was a day rich in phenomena. We should be glad if one of our trained meteorologists would write the matter up for us, and give definite illustrations from observed occasions where such phenomena have been recorded elsewhere.

Is it any wonder that the Psalmist sets the question, "What ailed thee, O thou sea, that thou fleddest?" as a riddle, to be answered by God's people, in order that they might keep in remembrance the great day.

CROSSING THE JORDAN.

"What ailed thee, O Jordan, that thou wast driven back?"

The answer comes like an antiphonal chorus:—

"The mountains skipped like rams, and the little hills like lambs. Tremble, thou earth, at the presence of the God of Jacob."

What ailed Jordan when its waters stood up as an heap far above, and the undammed waters failed? Jordan was driven back by a terrific earthquake.

How would this affect Jordan? It would, and evidently did, throw down one or more of the cliffs which overhang the Jordan, and thus made a temporary dam of the waters above the crossing-place of the Israelites. Thus the Lord turned—or, as the Hebrew word equally means, "overturned the rock . . . a standing water, the flint into a fountain of waters." The Hebrew word is "haphak," and the dictionary definition "to turn, be turned, overturn." Thus we are told "He overturned the rock—a standing water." The word "into" is not in the text as is indicated by its being in italics. The standing water resulted from the overturning of the rock.

Psalm cxiv says that Jordan was driven back by the skipping of the mountains and hills, by the trembling of the earth, and by the overturning of the rock.

This is sufficient for the engineer. He will know that it was a phenomenon similar to that which blocked up the Buller Valley in New Zealand in the late earthquake, and similar to that which buried the village of Frank in the Crow's Nest Pass in the Canadian Rockies some years ago, which threw a barrier of rock across the valley miles in extent and hundreds of feet deep. So the Jordan was dammed at the time of Joshua's crossing.

Someone will doubtless raise the cry of "modernism" in thus trying to explain a miracle by natural causes. Hold, my friend. There is a difference between accepting the statement of the Bible itself in explanation of the matter on the one hand, and in rejecting the statement of the Bible and substituting an hypothesis which would take the miracle element away on the other.

God used the earthquake in both instances. He used the earthquake in the crossing of the Red Sea, and in the crossing of the Jordan.

Seeing that "the mountains skipped like rams, and the little hills like lambs," and that the earth trembled generally, we know that we are reading of seismic activity on the largest scale, both as to the Red Sea crossing, and as to the Jordan crossing.

The mountains of Judah and the mountains of Moab, which rise over three thousand feet above the Valley of the Jordan, were shaken. How much more the bottom of the Valley itself would be shaken. The Jordan Valley is the product of seismic activity on the largest scale, and is subject to earthquakes at any time.

The earthquake came at the appointed time to allow the Israelites to cross. That time was when "Jordan overflows all his banks." The dam formed was therefore on the largest scale. The waters above accumulated in a temporary reservoir, taking time to fill up to the top of the obstruction. The waters below ran away. The way was thus open for Israel's crossing.

The Jordan was dammed during the present generation in the same locality, and in the same manner. The record of this can be found without difficulty, although it is not at the writer's hand at the moment. The writer read an engineer's report on the matter some two or three years ago.

THE FALL OF JERICHO.

What effect had this terrible earthquake on the walls of Jericho? Here at hand is an explanation of the shaken state of the walls of that city so that the vibration, the rhythmic vibration of the marching hosts of Israel, continued for seven days, not only threw them down, but caused them to fall in such ruin that every soldier of the Israel army was able to march over the debris straight before him into the city.

The mortar had been pulverized, the stones shaken loose from each other, the walls cracked and thrown out of alignment —it only wanted the rhythmic vibration of Israel's army marching around to bring the walls to ruinous collapse.

How wonderful is the might and the majesty of Jehovah, the God and King of Israel! How time and again do the sacred Scriptures ascribe to Him miraculous deliverance for Israel! But at the same time they show that in working out that deliverance again and again He uses the forces of nature.

Thus by way of giving glory to Him for our deliverance from the Spanish Armada, there is inscribed on Admiral Drake's monument on Plymouth Hoe :—

"He blew with His wind, and they were scattered."

Later we shall see the Lord followed this course in Joshua's unique day—usually called "Joshua's long day." That it was unique we know. As to its length we have no means of knowing. But that God set in motion well-known meteorological forces to accomplish His will we know. That, however, is a subject for a later study.

NEW YEAR MESSAGES.

THE REV. C. J. HOLLIS, M.A.

"ONLY the Eternal is important," so says the inscription on the gates of the cathedral at Milan. "The things which are unseen are Eternal," says the inspired Word.

Through acquaintance and identification with British-Israel Truth, with its presentation of the two sides of the Gospel, that of Salvation and that of the Kingdom, I have come to read my Bible in a new light. "The Eternal" claims my faith, my hope, my love, as I see how the Eternal God has been and is working among the nations all along, and especially with that chosen seed of Anglo-Saxon origin who are His witnesses to their brethren in the world; witnesses to that "Eternal Gospel" with its "good news" that God reigneth over all, that God is faithful to His promises, that God will gain the victory, and that His Son will shortly come to reign on and over the earth.

THE REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A.

We are gradually drawing nearer and nearer to one of the most momentous periods in the history of the Lord's people, which will far and away eclipse and transcend in importance this closing epoch of three decades which has elapsed since the South African War, and which has included the Great War.

The wheels of prophecy are still revolving, and the Coming of the Lord draweth nigh. Before very long Israel's redemption will be finally recognized, and "all that see them shall acknowledge them, that they are the seed which the Lord hath blessed." It therefore behoves us all to cling to that righteousness which alone "exalteth a nation," and to seek that personal holiness which Christ wishes to instil into the lives of His servants, that we may be "like Him" now, even before that day cometh when "we shall see Him as He is."

So with the passing of the paradoxical year of 1929, a year which has given us the greatest heat and the extremest cold, the mildest weather and the severest gales, let us enter into the responsibilities of 1930 with a greater trust in Jehovah, and with a higher sense of our redemptive privileges. We are Christ's children, the family of His love, the people of His choice. What a privilege! What a responsibility! What an opportunity! Let us take up the joy of our inheritance, and in so doing help to make 1930 a year of blessing to all nations, as we let the Love of God shine in our hearts, "to give the light of knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ," that all may see "Whose we are and Whom we serve." Deus Vobiscum.

FROM MR. J. A. FORD, Manchester.

With 1929 behind us and with our faces turned expectantly towards the eventful thirties stretching right out in front of us, we of the North Country send greetings of cheer and good hope to our B.-I. brethren everywhere. And, withal, we would look for a moment towards London while we praise God for splendid leadership and unfailing inspiration. The Lord of Hosts is with us! Surely the most obstinate and wilful opposition must give way before the strong and steady pressure of powerful and lucid articles such as those we have the joy to read week by week. Here and now for the first time men who know experimentally the blessedness of the Gospel of Personal Salvation are preaching in a new convincing way in the power of the Holy Ghost the companion Gospel of the Kingdom! Certainly "those that walked in darkness have seen a great light!" May all we privileged members of our great Federation walk worthy of our Cause.

THE REV. CHAS. W. COOPER, F.G.S.

In sending my prayerful wishes for a prosperous New Year to the work of the British-Israel-World Federation, I should like to add my testimony to the immense help I have received in understanding the Old Testament since I came to listen to British-Israel Truths. To me the Bible has increased in wonder and joy a hundred times. Over and over again I take some modern commentary into the pulpit and show to our people how sadly misleading, inconsistent, and manifestly untrue many of their interpretations are.

MRS. ALICE CRAVEN JONES.

Dear Fellow Israelites,—My message comes in the words of Suckling: "What the New Year will bring to us we mercifully know not, but one thing is certain, that if we ask humbly, He Who has blessed us in the past and present, will not leave us in the future." God's peace abide in you.

COLONEL J. C. TYLER.

I gladly avail myself of your permission and would add a word of congratulation on your successful year's work.

Reading all the articles each week in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, one gets familiar with the writers, and unconsciously groups them by their calling in life:—The clergy, discerned by the Scriptural and flowery language of their pulpit training. The lawyer with his each important point logically worked out. The civil engineer with his exact calculations. The military writer terse and pointed. And a lady most fascinating in her subject and language, and many others well known.

These all have the one object in view—the glory of God and the truth of the Bible—matters which they approach by entirely different channels and thus hold the interest of the reader.

MRS. A. MACDONALD.

I should like to tell how this Truth came to me through the printed word. A "Banner of Israel" came to me by post before the war, by whom sent I do not know. What a comfort this Truth was to me during those dreadful years I cannot express! I agree with others that the Bible becomes a new Book to those who accept this teaching. One's faith and love becomes brighter and stronger as the years pass. Therefore I am in great sympathy with the Movement to get our literature widely distributed and the seed sown far and wide.

THE REV. JOSEPH GAY, A.T.S.

Another year is added to the sum of recollection, and in many respects it has been a very wonderful year. Our witness to the truth of God's Holy Word has been steady and persistent. By voice and pen we have successfully sought to spread the good news of the Kingdom.

THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER has continued in the van of our great witness, and its living word will ever abide in the hearts and minds of the thousands who read its illuminating pages week by week. As one of the Federation Commissioners, exercising my ministry in every part of the country, I have had an unique opportunity of judging the effect of our many labours. In THE NATIONAL MESSAGE you continue to place a most effective instrument in our hands, and we shall do well to use it more and more during the year 1930.

The material you provide is most sound and consequently most valuable. I would throw out this hint to our readers that, in using the material thus provided, we should do well to commend our journal to all our friends. This should enhance the sale thereof which, great though it is, ought in my judgment to be very much greater. All good wishes for the New Year.

DR. J. RUTHERFORD, Harrogate Branch.

"Peace on earth, and good will toward men" was sung by the angels, and it has pealed out year by year down the centuries; but never such a Peace as is now ringing in the hearts of men and women throughout the world.

Is this the unconscious welcome for the Prince of Peace? Hosanna to the God of Israel!

THE REV. W. F. G. CLATWORTHY.

The value of B.-I Truth, as an inspiration to "Have Faith in God" (Mark xi, 22), cannot be over-estimated. It adduces the clearest positive evidence that God is faithful to His Word, and thereby encourages that complete confidence in God which assures to the believer the "peace which passeth understanding," whatever the circumstances of life may be. May the readers of the "N.M. and B." experience the blessedness of this Truth throughout the New Year.

MR. DANIEL FARMER.

I have for long years sought to study Holy Scripture in a broad and comprehensive sense, and I do not hesitate to say that what is known as "British-Israel Teaching" has thrown more light upon God's Word than any other form of exposition. Intelligently understood, it emphasizes and enhances all the great fundamentals of Holy Writ, opens up a rational and reasonable account of the Israel people in its major part, saves us from looking out of the window upon the Jews—one twelfth part of this race—and not being able to see the Israelitish House in which we stand. Enables us to avoid contradicting Euclid when he tells us "the lesser is contained in the greater." Deepens our interest in our brethren of Judah; incites to an endeavour to better understand God's great purposes for the Church and the world. Deepens our reverence for our Lord, not only as the Saviour, but as God's Great Statesman. Teaches a true Imperialism, and supplies a high note of optimism as this age closes.

LT.-COLONEL G. F. A. SMYTHE, President, Dover Branch.

As each year draws to its end, it is useful to look back upon the past, and, after noting our gains as well as our losses, to go forward prayerfully into the New Year with renewed hope, and a determination to do our utmost for the Cause of Christ's Kingdom, following the road so ably traced out by THE NATIONAL MESSAGE for our guidance.

We are indeed thankful for the courage with which it has raised the Banner of the Cross, in conflict with that of "the sickle," when so many of our spiritual leaders have timidly held back.

Truly has it been said that the love of money is the root of all evil, for the one great argument, that seems uppermost in the minds of most of those who are advocating closer relations with the anti-Deists, with the prospect of possible gain. We can understand that argument being advanced in financial circles, but not amongst religious leaders. Does it not rather look like crucifying Christ afresh? When we hold out the hand to welcome His enemies, we must not forget Christ's own words: "Forasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these My brethren, ye have done it unto Me." Truly the cry has again been raised of :

Who is on "the Lord's" side? and we are indeed rejoiced to see "the Banner of the B.-I.-W.F." leading well in the van.

MR. L. W. NOCK, President of the Barking Branch.

The unique position of the Anglo-Saxon race was long ago evident to me, but "orthodox" teaching as to our national future satisfied me not: nay more, I could not reconcile it with the righteousness of God. My dear wife often tried to point out why we were so blessed, but yet I could not see, and began to drift towards rationalism. Then one day I bought a little book entitled, "The Israelites Found in the Anglo-Saxons" (published in 1874). I read it Bible in hand, and how great was my joy when I found I had at last the key! No more doubts and perplexities, but a new and living Bible, a new and glorious vision of God, and of His plans and purposes! Glory be to God! Since then it has been a joy to help in spreading this light, and my prayer is that we may go forward to yet greater efforts in His strength and unto His glory and honour. A glorious privilege is ours. May God enable us to be worthy of it.

MR. W. T. CRAIG, F.R.G.S., President, Northern British-Israel Council.

As we watch with an understanding eye the rising tide of evil in the social, political and, so-called, religious world, we know that its sweep is against, and that its purpose is directed to the destruction of the British Empire, and the Faith of God for which that Empire stands.

We gratefully recognize that among the many Royal Titles and Dignities to which our Beloved King succeeded, when he ascended the Throne of David, that of "Defender of the Faith" is the most glorious of them all, and conveys an irresistible invitation to his loyal subjects to marshal themselves to meet the foe.

Much may be done individually, but an organized attack calls for an organized defence, and this we have in the magnificent work of enlightenment being carried on from day to day by the British-Israel-World Federation in all parts of the world.

As the year 1930 slips away, we must help with material contributions; but let us also, in our prayers, invoke the blessing of God upon the Leaders, and the hard-working staff at Headquarters, who are labouring for the spread of the Truth, and for the hastening of the time when the door shall be flung wide open to welcome the Light of the World into every home.

MR. ANDREW B. BUCHANAN.

Those who had not the privilege of attending the last Congress of the British-Israel-World Federation have their compensation in the official organ, THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER.

In it we had the reports of addresses which were diverse in ramification, uplifting in character, brimful of hope, and an inspiration to go forward in our work. The troublous times in which we are living were directed to us as stern realities and which must be faced, yet withal, the speakers held out the prognostication of a great spiritual Revival—a real message of hope. One of the messages of hope to the readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER at this time is metallurgical in its import and breathes the spirit of Revival.

"And I will turn My hand upon thee, and purely purge away thy dross, and take away all thy tin."—Isa. i, 25.

The Removal of the Tin.	The Spirit of Revival.
Now we know that something must be put into the molten metal (ISRAEL)	A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you :
to take away	and I will take away
the tin (the hardness of Israel's heart).	the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh.—Ezek. xxxvi, 26.

To Editors, contributors and readers, a most bright and happy New Year.

In a letter to the Editor, Mr. Buchanan says:—"I wish you to notice particularly the form of the message I have sent to your readers. If you will refer back to my articles of last spring you will observe that No. VI was entitled TIN. As a matter of fact the previous five articles were all leading up to this No. VI. Now before a constituent can be removed from any metal something must be put into the molten metal to take away the unwanted constituent. This is a fundamental law of the Chemistry of Metallurgy. You will observe, in the passage which I have quoted, that the TIN (the hardness of Israel's heart) is to be removed, but this can only be done by putting something in to remove the TIN.

"Please observe the Ezekiel passage and you will see that it follows the strict law mentioned above. You will notice that the new heart is given first and the stony heart (the TIN) taken away afterwards. The man in the street would first take away the stony heart and then give the new heart. This, however, would be against the laws of metallurgy, and the strict order and form of Ezek. xxxvi, 26, points me to a further proof of the inspiration of the Scriptures."

OPENING AND DEDICATION OF BRITISH-ISRAEL HOUSE, TORONTO, CANADA.

ON Saturday afternoon, December 14th, at 3 o'clock, Mr. W. H. Blackaller, President of the British-Israel Federation of Canada, turned the key in the front door of "British-Israel House" to officially open the new home of the Toronto Central Branch. Following the opening of the door by the Canadian President the large gathering present entered the building and a beautiful service of dedication was held in the auditorium.

During the opening ceremony the chair was taken by Mr. S. J. Frame, of Toronto, who is a Vice-President of the Canadian Federation and President of the Ontario Provincial Executive. Mr. Blackaller conducted the service of dedication and addressed the meeting. In retrospect he took the gathering back over the past years of the work in Toronto, concluding with the statement that in his opinion we are now entering "into the front line trenches" of the work locally. He pointed to what he considered the tremendous significance of the number of our new Branch home—313, and exhorted us to take courage in the knowledge that we are working with God. Then with great fervour he struck a note of service saying, "How sadly the reproach of Israel's Redeemer comes down through the ages—'Hear, O heavens, and give ear, O earth; for Jehovah hath spoken'; 'I have nourished and brought up children and they have rebelled against Me. The ox knoweth his owner and the ass his master's crib, but Israel doth not know, My people doth not consider.'"

The meeting reached a peak of enthusiasm when those present rose to their feet in a body when a standing vote was called for by the President of the Branch, Mr. C. O. Lucas, on a motion that a resolution of loyalty be sent from the gathering to Their Majesties King George and Queen Mary. A resolution of loyalty was also cabled from the meeting to "Headquarters" in London.

A beautiful Bible was presented to the Branch by its Secretary, Mr. D. M. Duncan, and was fittingly inscribed with the names of those who took part in the opening service.

The meeting closed with the pronouncement of the Benediction by the Chaplain, Rev. S. L. Gorbell, and the singing of the National Anthem, following which the members and guests of the Association took advantage of the opportunity to more closely inspect the interior of the Branch's new home while the young ladies of the Association served tea.

"British-Israel House" is situated at 313, Sherbourne Street, in the heart of the City of Toronto, with its population of some 750,000 souls, and overlooks the beautiful Allan Gardens.

For very many years the work of propagating our great Truth has been carried on in this "Queen City" of Canada under the great disadvantage of the lack of a hall belonging to the Association, and the resultant moving from place to place as year by year quarters had to be found in which the Branch's regular meetings might be held. Now that interest in B.-I. Truth is growing with such rapidity in this part of our land, the Toronto Central Branch has found that it is imperative that this forward step be taken and that the Central Branch of the work in Toronto be settled definitely in a home of its own.

Under the spell of the inspiration which filled the hearts of all our people as they listened to the words of our Secretary-General Garrison when he visited us last summer on his trip across Canada, while he told us of God's mighty workings in the procuring for our Headquarters in London, England, of No. 6, Buckingham Gate, our people here have risen nobly to the occasion when God has also given us an opportunity of procuring a "home in the heart of things." As God's Hand was most clearly seen working in connection with the purchase of our Headquarters in the heart of the Empire, so has it also been most clearly apparent in every move that has been made or attempted by His servants here in the purchasing of our new Headquarters in the heart of our fair Dominion.

The Toronto Central Branch has extended an invitation to the Dominion Federation to make full use of the newly-purchased building, and the directors of the Federation have been pleased to accept the kind offer and to designate British-Israel House, Toronto, as the Headquarters of the Movement in Canada, since the General Secretary, Mr. A. A. Robeson, resides in this city. The Ontario Provincial Executive will also consider this their Headquarters, and the building will undoubtedly be made much use of.

"British-Israel House" is superbly located, as it is in the centre of Toronto, which is the hub of Ontario, which in turn is one of the most central and most populous of the Provinces of Canada. It is hoped that from this central location will go forth a flood of Truth and Inspiration that will result in an ever greater awakening throughout this whole Dominion of the peculiar responsibilities which are the lot of our people Israel in the sight of our God. A. A. R.

ADDRESS BY MR. W. H. BLACKALLER.

PRESIDENT, BRITISH-ISRAEL FEDERATION OF CANADA, AT OPENING OF BRITISH-ISRAEL HOUSE, 313, SHERBOURNE STREET, TORONTO, THE PROPERTY OF THE TORONTO CENTRAL BRANCH, BRITISH-ISRAEL FEDERATION OF CANADA (INCORPORATED), AND HEADQUARTERS OF BRITISH-ISRAEL FEDERATION OF CANADA (INCORPORATED), SATURDAY AFTERNOON, DECEMBER 14TH, 1929.

WE are meeting this afternoon to inaugurate a very decided forward movement in the presentation of the Gospel of the Kingdom in this city and district. If I may be permitted to use a metaphor that one often hears since the Great War, the British-Israel forces in this city have moved forward into the front line trenches. The possession of this fine building in which we are gathered, made possible by the generous financial assistance and business acumen of the Vice-President of the British-Israel Federation of Canada, Mr. S. J. Frame, situated as it is on one of the main arteries of traffic and facing one of the beautiful public gardens of Toronto, will meet the eye of thousands. Your nest has surely been stirred up to some advantage. I know your frequent removals, brought about by circumstances over which you had no control, have been a cause of anxiety and a burden of much labour to the faithful workers in the Central Branch, but your zeal for the Cause has not wavered and you are now realizing some measure of satisfaction that your labour has not been in vain, and that God has crowned your effort by giving an opportunity in a larger sphere to spread abroad the good news of His Kingdom. On such an occasion it seems natural for one to take a retrospective view of the work leading up to the present advantageous position. My personal contact with the Movement in Toronto is only the experience of a decade, but in that short space of time it has been my privilege to enjoy the fellowship of many earnest Christian workers that has been most helpful. Some have passed on to their reward, others have joined with us and, through the united co-operation of all, God has enabled us to enter into this wider sphere of service. Will you allow me to point out what seems to me to be a significant fact in connection with our new home? It is a well-known point of interest that numbers have a meaning in Biblical teaching; for instance, 7 is the perfect number, 3 has reference to the Trinity, and so forth. Is it by chance or mere coincidence that the street number of our new Headquarters is 313? Let our approach to our new home remind us by its double reference to the Trinity that our work to be effective must ever be begun and ended in God; and in our appreciation of God's blessing in providing such a desirable meeting-place let us remember "I do not this for your sakes, O House of Israel, but for Mine Holy Name's sake," and may our hearts' response be—Yea, Lord, to Thy Name give glory. Then note our position by the combination of the figure 1; what feelings of gratitude should it engender in our hearts that He should call us to His service, co-workers together with God! The honour thus conferred should ever keep us in humble dependence on the strength of His grace, so that we may never bring any cause of reproach on His great Name. How sadly the reproach of Israel's Redeemer comes down through the ages. "Hear, O heavens, and give ear, O earth; for Jehovah hath spoken." "I have nourished and brought up children, and they have rebelled against Me. The ox knoweth his owner and the ass his master's crib, but Israel doth not know, My people doth not consider." As we shall continually have our position placed before us as resting between the number of the Triune God, may we be led to indite our prayer to Him for guidance that our walk and conversation may never merit such reproach at His hands. Then consider the value that our position implies—Can it be possible that Israel can be "My Glory"? The figure 1 adds its value to the full number—Think of the gracious words of our Saviour King, "This people have I formed for Myself; they shall show forth My praise." Oh, my brothers and sisters, redeemed by His precious Blood, let us ever keep before us the position of our high calling of God in Christ Jesus, that the unifying power of His love may never be disrupted by any action of ours. Another thought is borne in upon us, that is the Eternal security of our position implied in this number—I have previously referred to our advance into the front line of activity, we may rest assured that the powers arrayed against us will not fail to push their opposition to the truth. We have seen how that, having realized that the shafts of ridicule have failed to move us from the foundation of the truth of God's Word, the enemy has not hesitated to bear false witness against British-Israel teaching, and we may expect that, as we press forward in the work, efforts to destroy the benefits of its teaching will be increased. As this may come upon us let us give heed to the promise of the King of Israel, "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of Jehovah, and their righteousness is of Me, saith Jehovah." Let us enter into the possession of this glorious heritage; like the Psalmist let our exclamation be, "O, how I love Thy law, it is my meditation all the day; Thou through Thy commandments hast made me wiser than mine enemies; for they are ever with me. Through Thy precepts I get understanding; therefore, I hate every false way." The citadel of Israel is absolutely safe; listen, "Thus saith Jehovah, your Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel—I am Jehovah, your Holy One, the Creator of Israel, your King." Let us render to Him our loyal service and follow our King to assured and eternal victory, for hath He not said none can pluck us from His Hand? Yes, beloved, our safety is for ever sure. Our life being hid with Christ in God—the Triune God on either side 313. Many other helpful thoughts might be deduced from this parable, but time will not permit. I will ask you to allow me to mention one other that comes to my mind. The figure 1 is just one removed from a cipher, and its value is increased or diminished by its relation to other numbers; on which side of the cipher do we desire to appear? In this connection let us consider the Lord's parable of the talents. When He shall come to reckon with His servants, shall we with joy meet Him to present the increase of faithful service, or shall we be found among those who hid their talent in the earth, busy among our earthly possessions with no thought of the things pertaining to His Kingdom, placing ourselves on the wrong side of the cipher and thereby miss the "Well done" which, falling from His gracious lips, shall more than compensate for any sacrifice made or misrepresentation endured in making our contribution toward the extension of the Majesty of His Kingdom?

BRITISH-ISRAEL FACTS NOT FANCIES.—III.

By MAJOR-GENERAL C. A. HADFIELD.

DISTINCTION BETWEEN ISRAEL AND THE JEWS.

THERE are many people who seem quite unable to distinguish between the term "Israel" and the term "The Jews." They seem to imagine that the terms are synonymous; but the races are distinct and separate. The Jews are only descended from one of Jacob's twelve sons, and therefore can only comprise one-twelfth part of Israel. The Jews, or "The House of Judah," were originally known as the "Southern Kingdom." The Israelites are the descendants of ten of Jacob's sons, called "The House of Israel," and were originally known as the "Northern Kingdom." In stating this, we exclude the "House of Levi," for they had no inheritance, and were reserved for priestly offices, so do not count as a tribe. (Num. xxvi, 62; Deut. x, 9; xviii, 2.)

The Northern Kingdom are spoken of as "The lost Ten Tribes." This is because they were (in consequence of their evil ways) carried away into captivity by Shalmaneser, King of Assyria, as related in 2 Kings xvii. The Old Testament does not further record the history of these ten tribes; but the Old Testament contains many "signs" by which we can be sure, that although the "Northern Kingdom" was to disappear under the name of Israel, they were to reappear under a new name, and speaking a changed language. Do we not read: "For with stammering lips and another tongue will he speak to this people"? (Isa. xxviii, 11.) The preceding verse 10 is another "sign" to us of the change of language. And then we read: "And thou shalt be called by a new name, which the mouth of the Lord shall name" (Isa. lxii, 2); " . . . And call His Servants by another name." (Isa. lxv, 15). Thus we have God's Word as a warning that it is useless for us to look for Israel as a nation under that name, or speaking a Hebrew tongue. Both name and language, we are told in Holy Scripture, were to be changed. (See Chap. xv.)

From the time of exile the name Israel disappears as a nation, not so the Jews. Some 133 years after the exile of Israel (which took place as regards the main body 721 B.C.) the House of Judah, accompanied by the tribe of Benjamin (temporarily detached from the Northern Kingdom) were also deported but by King Nebuchadnezzar to Babylon for a named period of seventy years (Jer. xxv, 11). At the end of that period the House of Judah (called the Jews), accompanied by the tribe of Benjamin (as representatives of the "House of Israel"), returned to Palestine (see Ezra ii). These tribes alone were in Palestine during our Lord's time on earth. And, with the exception of Judas Iscariot, who was a Jew (of Kerioth, in Judea), we can safely assume the Apostles were of the tribe of Benjamin, and therefore "Israelites," in contradistinction to "Jews." But in regard to "the Race" of the Disciples see the further remarks in Ch. xvi.

"Israel" was the name given to Jacob, and to his twelve sons. It embraces the name: "The House of Israel," and "The House of Judah." It was, however, the name especially reserved for the "Northern Kingdom."

Thus the "House of Judah" is "of" Israel, from being descended from Jacob's Son Judah; but cannot be styled "Israel."

There is absolutely no doubt about the distinction between Jew and Israelite; the Bible is clear and definite on this point, and if there be any confusion, it is solely in man's mind. There is no confusion in the Bible, as any readers can see for themselves by reference to the following passages, amongst others: 1 Sam. xi, 8; 2 Kings xxii, 27; 1 Chron. xxviii, 4-5; 2 Chron. xiii, 15-16; xv, 9; xxxi, 1; Isa. vii, 1-8, 17; viii, 14; x, 12-13; xlviii, 1; Jer. iii, 8-18; vii, 2-15; xi, 10-17; xiii, 11; xxxi, 31; xxxii, 30-32; xxxiii, 14; l, 4-33; Ezek. xxiii, 4; xxxvii, 16-19; Dan. ix, 7; Hos. i, 11; iv, 15; v, 9, 15; vi, 10-11; viii, 14; xi, 12; Amos i, 1; Micah i, 5; Zech. viii, 13; x, 6; Heb. viii, 8, etc.

THE CAPTIVITIES OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

To enable students to readily and clearly follow the separate histories of the Israelites and of the Jews they must carefully study 2 Kings xvii, 6-23, and 1 Chron. v, 26, relating to Israel's exile to Assyria, at which time the tribe of Benjamin was (temporarily) attached, although belonging to Ten-Tribed Israel, to the House of Judah. They did not accompany "Israel" into exile to Assyria.

During the seventy years of exile and intercourse and social contact with another race, they naturally lost touch with their Hebrew language, and it is not surprising that in order to be understood on their return to Palestine it was necessary to employ interpreters. (Neh. viii, 4-9.)

This fact is an object lesson for many of us to-day who so constantly ask if Israel exists would they not speak Hebrew? And would they not follow Hebraic customs?

If seventy years caused the Jews to change their language so as to need interpreters, it follows that Israel, after nearly 2,700 years, would not speak Hebrew. Moreover, the Scriptures tell us that Israel would speak in another tongue. Naturally all customs would equally change.

The Benjamites were never, racially, Jews. When they all returned to Palestine, they became socially known as, and locally termed "Jews." (See Ezra iv, 12.) For example, in the Book of Esther ii, 5, we read of—"a certain Jew whose name was Mordecai . . . a Benjamite." He was a Jew locally by "custom," but certainly not by "race." It is precisely the same as regards St. Paul, who calls himself "a Jew of Tarsus"; but who explains that he is "an Israelite of the tribe of Benjamin." (Rom. xi, 1; Phil. iii, 5.) Thus we have Scriptural evidence to support the distinction which does not seem to be generally understood, and hence so much confusion.

The Rev. J. H. Allen, the prominent American writer upon this subject, says: "The fallacy which Biblical interpreters have fallen into is, because they failed to understand the genealogy of the two Kingdoms, two Houses of Israel, a

Northern and a Southern Kingdom, a ten-tribed Kingdom, and a Kingdom which was eventually composed of three tribes, who are the only Israelites in Biblical history called Jews." The two families which "the Lord has chosen—Israel and Judah, the birthright family, of which Joseph, Rachel's Son, is racial head, and Judah—the Sceptre family, of which Judah, Leah's Son, is the racial head. One House, Kingdom, or Nation, was ruled over by the Leah-Judah family, and the other Commonwealth was ruled over by the Rachel-Joseph family. So the House of Israel and the House of Judah were not the posterity of the same mother, and the law of heredity would most naturally leave its impress.

"Then, when we remember that Joseph married an Egyptian woman, and that his posterity were half Egyptian, we understand that the 'House of Joseph' would be still further removed in form and features from the Jewish people. Yet in hunting for the lost 'tribes'—the Birthright House—the common mistake is made of looking for Jewish form and features, as well as for a people who observe the rite of circumcision. But the facts are that the House of Israel, of Samaria, had ceased the practice of circumcision two centuries before they left Samaria. They were cast out of Samaria because of their idolatry and worship of the two Golden Calves which Jeroboam set up."

It may not be inappropriate to repeat here the words of Professor Totten, of Yale University. "I cannot" (he writes) "state too strongly that the man who has not seen that Israel of the Scriptures is totally different from the Jewish people is yet in the very infancy, the mere alphabet, of Biblical study, and that to this day the meaning of seven-eighths of the Bible is shut to his understanding."

We are told clearly (1 Kings xi, xii) that the Hebrews were finally divided into two nations (about 974 B.C.).

David had joined Judah and Israel and ruled over them, yet in 2 Samuel v, 4, 5, Israel is mentioned as separate from Judah. "In Hebron he (David) reigned over Judah seven years and six months: and in Jerusalem he reigned thirty and three years over 'All Israel and Judah.'

"The Rev. L. G. A. Roberts remarks anent the ignorance of the term 'Jews'—in comparison with Israel:

"'I am sorry so many people seem to read their Bibles with prejudiced eyes or biassed minds: they should be given to understand that the House of Israel went into Captivity to Assyria in 721 B.C. About seven or eight years after this Sennacherib came up against all the fenced Cities of Judah and took them. (2 Kings xviii, 13.) On his tablets he states he took 200,150 Captives from 46 Strong Cities: these he took to Assyria. Now Judah was not begun to be taken away until about 108 years after, to BABYLON, which is some considerable distance South of Assyria.

"'The return from Babylon under Cyrus is stated in Ezra i, 5, to be Judah and Benjamin (ii, 1). The term all Israel is simply that Benjamin belonged to ALL ISRAEL (a designation of the Northern Kingdom), for Benjamin was a tribe lent out of the Kingdom (of Israel) to David that he might have a light always in Jerusalem, since Jerusalem belonged to the tribe of Benjamin.

"'The tribe of Benjamin remained faithful to Judah until the Crucifixion (Zech. xi, 14), when, as they had been forewarned by our Lord to His Disciples, and previously by Jeremiah the Prophet (vi, 1), they escaped out of Jerusalem, as also did our Lord to His Disciples. Some few Israelites may have come to Babylon, but Ezek. xi, 15, 16, gives us to understand that the Captivity of Jechoniah mainly joined the Ten Tribes. This tribe of Judah has, ever since, been separated from Israel (Deut. xxxiii, 7) and will remain so as far as the Jew is concerned until they are united, as stated in Ezek. xxxvii, 15-22. Which has not yet been effected.'"

God said, "Ephraim is My First-born." (See Jer. xxxi, 9.) In the original the same word expresses "first-born" and "birthright." Ephraim was the son of Joseph, and in 1 Chron. v. 1, 2, we are told "the birthright was Joseph's"—and again we read that this birthright devolved upon Ephraim and Manasseh.

This is the race predestined of God to be for everlasting, and quite distinct and apart from "the Jews." God said: "How shall I give thee up Ephraim?" Is it then likely He would have cast them off?

Ephraim's descendants were destined by God, as we read in the Bible, to become a "multitude" or "fulness" of Nations (or fulness of the Gentiles for it is equally translated).

As God's "promises" were to "Ephraim-Israel" it is impossible to reconcile them as now being inherited by "the Jews" of the House of Judah. It is arguing that God has "failed," thus breaking down the very foundations of our faith, which is a despairing thought for those who either have not, or cannot see by modern history how exactly God has guarded and guided "Ephraim-Israel" from the wilds of Assyrian Captivity to "the appointed place."

The people of the British Empire and of the United States of America are not likely to realize nationally that they are Ephraim-Israel until Armageddon proves it.

ISRAEL TO BE CONCEALED AND UNRECOGNIZED.

The Jews, although sent into exile for a term of seventy years, were predestined to be always known and recognized; they had their part to play in the Crucifixion of Christ. They returned to Palestine to carry out the prophecies. The death of our Lord rests with the Jews, and not with the Ten-Tribed House of Israel, for the latter, although exiled to Assyria, and "lost," as regards their name, language, and connection with the Northern Kingdom of Israel, were destined to play a great part in the future of the world's history. To perform this destiny it was God's Will that they should pass through the world "hidden," i.e., unidentified in any way as Israel, until the time of the end.

We are permitted to know in Esdras II, Book xiii, 40-46, that the Ten Tribes escaped from Assyrian captivity, as the last two verses of Jer. xlvi imply they should do.

Many good Bible students seem to imagine that because the Old Testament ceases to record an historical sequence of Israel's doings—as with the Jews—that Israel became practically extinct; or, if not extinct, of so little importance as to be swallowed up among the nations, leaving only the Jews as representatives of Israel's race in the world's future. Such a view as this is entirely against Holy Scriptures; and, moreover, it immediately throws a doubt upon the ability of God to fulfil the promises which He so emphatically, upon oath, swore would be fulfilled "in the latter days." It is a very serious misinterpretation of Holy Scriptures, for where can any Bible student point to any passage which admits of changing a literal Israel into "the Church," or a "Spiritual Israel"?

Some years ago the late Dr. Ryle, Bishop of Liverpool, warned the clergy of daring to "spiritualize" Israel, saying he could find no authority for changing from a literal rendering of the Prophetical Books of the Old Testament! What a pity that more of our clergy cannot see their errors. Later will be shown what is probably the reason for this "confusion" in their minds over the term Israel and Judah.

We know that if Israel (of the Ten Tribes) has failed to exist, the Holy Scriptures cannot be fulfilled! Such an argument is impossible; "Scripture is given by the inspiration of God" (2 Tim. iii, 16). See also 2 Peter i, 21; and St. Luke i, 70; and 1 Thess. v, 20; and St. John x, 35. These passages must satisfy the greatest sceptic, if he believes in the Bible at all!

Let us here quote the words of the writer of the Book of Esdras, for although the Apocrypha is not one of the inspired books, it must be accepted as the best of ancient history; and in tracing "Israel" it is incumbent upon us to study the Bible together with history. These are the words of Ezra:

> "Those are the ten tribes which were carried away prisoners out of their own land, in the time of Osea the King, whom Salmanasar, the king of Assyria, led away captive; and he carried them over the waters, and so came they into another land. But they took this counsel among themselves that they would leave the multitude of the heathen, and go forth into a further country, where never mankind dwelt; that they might there keep their statutes, which they never kept in their own land. And they entered into Euphrates by the narrow passages of the river, for the Most High then shewed signs for them, and held still the flood till they were passed over. For through that country there was a great way to go, namely, of a year and a half, and the same region is called Arsareth."

This is surely definite and clear proof that the Ten Tribes did escape from Assyria, and after wandering for one and a half years found their way to Arsareth, which locality may be identified with South Russia as we know it to-day.

Thus we are permitted to know the place of locating the Israelite captives, and we find the modern historian tracing the British back to the same place, which is significant of the latter being the descendants of the former, i.e., one and the same people. It is surely remarkable proof and worthy of consideration.

But we have the writings of the Jewish Historian, Josephus (A.D. 70-90) to help us, he records that the Ten Tribes never returned to Palestine. This is borne out by Jerome, and also by the Greek historian, Herodotus, and others writing later; moreover, we have ample Scriptural proof that the Ten Tribes never, as "tribes," returned to Palestine, though possibly some individuals may have done so.

We have some Scriptural proof in support of this belief, for we read in 2 Chron. xxx, 6: "And he will return to the remnant of you that are escaped out of the hand of the Kings of Assyria." (1 Chron. v, 26.)

Thus a "remnant" returned to Palestine (i.e., a remnant of ten-tribed Israel); probably this was fore-ordained in order that their descendants should become "the men of Galilee" of our Lord's day, and from whom, with the Benjamites, Christ selected His Disciples (with the exception of Judas Iscariot the Jew).

These Galileans, although locally looked upon, and classed as "Jews," were in fact of quite a distinct race (of Israel). We read in the New Testament that Peter's Speech (as a Galilean) betrayed him—and again: "Are not all these which speak Galileans?" While in connection with the Ascension: "Ye men of Galilee."

The speech and other peculiarities here denote the differences between the races, although all probably were termed as Jews in the days of Christ on earth.

Through the providence of God, "the men of Galilee" were doubtless specially located in Palestine for a Divine purpose so that Christ's command to "the lost sheep of the House of Israel" could be fulfilled. This was not to be carried out by the Jews. St. Paul was sent to the Children of Israel: Commencing the missionizing efforts which were to convey the Gospel to all parts of the world. Did not St. Paul preach through all the Coasts of Judea, and in Galatia, addressing them as "Men and Brethren, Children of the stock of Abraham"?

THE WITNESS OF ARCHÆOLOGY TO THE BIBLE.—II.

By A. M. HODGKIN.

(By kind permission of the Council of the Victoria Institute.)

THE WITNESS OF ANCIENT BABYLONIA.

"IT would be difficult," writes Dr. Orr, "to exaggerate the brilliance and importance of the marvellous discoveries in Babylonia. The point which concerns us chiefly is the extraordinary light thrown on the high culture of early Babylonia. Here, long before the time of Abraham, we find ourselves in the midst of cities, arts, letters, books, libraries; and Abraham's own age—that of Hammurabi—was the bloom tide of this civilization. Instead of Israel being a people emerging from the dim dawn of barbarism, we find in the light of these discoveries that it was a people on whom from its own standpoint the ends of the earth had come. . . . I read sometimes with astonishment of the statement that Babylonian discovery has done little or nothing for the confirmation of these old parts of Genesis.

"Take that old tenth chapter of Genesis, the 'Table of Nations.' Professor Kautzsch, of Halle, a critic of note, says of that old table, 'The so-called Table of Nations remains, according to all results of monumental exploration, an ethnographic original document of the first rank which nothing can replace.' In this tenth chapter of Genesis, verses 8-10, we have certain statements about the origin of Babylonian civilization. We learn (1) that Babylonia is the oldest of civilizations; (2) that Assyrian civilization was derived from Babylonia; and (3) strangest of all, that the founders of Babylonian civilization were not Semites, but Hamites—descendants of Cush. Each of these statements was in contradiction to old classical notices and to what was currently believed till recently about those ancient people. Yet it will not be disputed that exploration has justified the Bible on each of these points. Assyria, undoubtedly, was younger than Babylonia; it derived its civilization, arts, religion, institutions, all that it had, from Babylonia. Strangest of all, the originators of Babylonian civilization, the Accadians or Sumerians, were a people, not of Semitic, but apparently of Turanian or what the Bible would call Hamitic stock."[7]

"The transformation of opinion is revolutionary. The effect has been most marked on archæologists themselves. Sayce, Hommel, Halévy, all formerly advocates of the critical view, have abandoned it."[8]

The cuneiform script of the Babylonians was not only the language of diplomacy and commerce, but the vast correspondence which has come down to us on the clay tablets shows that letters passed to and fro among the common people on the most trivial subjects. Evidence has been found of the establishment of a postal system in Babylonia extending to its Palestine province in the days of Naram-Sin, many centuries before the time of Abraham.[9]

"The Babylonia of the age of Abraham was a more highly educated country than the England of George III." "From one end of the civilized ancient world to the other men and women were reading and writing and corresponding with one another; schools abounded and great libraries were formed, in an age which the 'critic' only a few years ago dogmatically declared was almost wholly illiterate."[10]

From the Tel-el-Amarna tablets we find that even the Egyptian court had to use this language when corresponding with its Asiatic province. If Dr. Naville is right in his very interesting paper for the Victoria Institute,[11] in believing that Moses wrote the Pentateuch in cuneiform script on clay tablets, it will prove a very awkward fact for the critics. The idea, as he says, had already been put forward by Col. Conder and Professor Sayce. The latter gives several instances to show that "behind the present Hebrew text of certain portions of the Old Testament lies an earlier text in the language of the Tel-el-Amarna tablets."[12]

The discovery of the Code of Hammurabi, a contemporary of Abraham, proves that such a code as that of Moses was more than possible. "That Babylonian law should have been already codified in the age of Abraham deprives the 'critical' theory, which makes the Mosaic Law posterior to the Prophets, of one of its two main supports. The theory was based on two denials—that writing was used for literary purposes in the time of Moses, and that a legal code was possible before the period of the Jewish kings. The discovery of the Tel-el-Amarna tablets disproves the first assumption; the discovery of the Code of Hammurabi has disproved the second. Centuries before Moses the law had already been codified, and the Semitic populations had long been familiar with the conceptions of a code."[13]

The Assyrian tablets containing the legends of Creation and of the Deluge show a debased polytheism. Comparing the Creation tablets with the first chapter of Genesis, Prof. Pinches writes, "The important point is, that there is very little in all this that implies borrowing, as has been stated, on the part of the writer of the book of Genesis. In the opinion of the Babylonians the heavens and the earth came into existence and were not created . . . there is no appearance of the Deity as the first and only cause of the existence of things. . . . The simple theology which appears in the book of Genesis did not, therefore, exist with the Babylonians and Assyrians, but gave place to a clever and attractive cosmological theory. . . . Notwithstanding all that Freethinkers and others may say, it was not the source of the Creation story in Genesis which remains on a pinnacle all its own."[14]

In a discussion in the Victoria Institute in 1912, Mrs. Maunder, who is an authority on Babylonia, made the following statement:—"To speak of these writings as being influenced by Babylonian conceptions, when there is no trace of Babylonian sorcery in them, is to speak in ignorance of what Babylonian conceptions really were. The whole Bible is clean as driven snow from the Babylonian imprint."

The account of the Deluge in the book of Genesis is cited by the critics as being perhaps the strongest instance of a composite narrative, in which the stories of the two hypothetical writers, the "Jehovist," and the "Elohist," who wrote, according to Dr. Driver, in the "early centuries of the monarchy," are combined together. Here the Babylonian Story of the Flood steps in as a witness. It goes back in its present form to the age of Abraham, and when we compare it with the account in Genesis we find that it agrees with both the so-called Jehovistic and Elohistic writers. As therefore the Babylonian account of the Deluge agrees with the Biblical version as a whole, and as it goes back to an age long anterior to Moses, it proves that even the narrative in which the marks of composite authorship are supposed to be clearest is not really composite. "In the 'critical' theory of the origin of the Biblical narrative of the great catastrophe, archæology thus compels us to see only a philological mirage."[15]

The history of the campaign of Chedorlaomer against Sodom, in the fourteenth chapter of Genesis, has been questioned as historically impossible. But the very names of the kings mentioned in that chapter have been identified, the Amraphel of Genesis proving to be the Hammurabi who was reigning in Babylon at the time. Prof. Sayce says, "It is one more illustration of the fact that 'critical' difficulties and objections commonly turn out to be the result of the imperfection of our own knowledge. Archæological research is constantly demonstrating how dangerous it is to question or deny the veracity of tradition or of an ancient record until we know all the facts." "There is only one admissible test of the authenticity and trustworthiness of an ancient record, and that is an archæological test"—in other words, the test of "contemporaneous evidence." "Wherever archæology has been able to test the negative conclusions of criticism, they have dissolved like a bubble in the air."[16]

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

BY THE REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A.

QUESTION.—Will you tell me whether you believe in the League of Nations? For it seems to me that the very words of God, "Make no league with the inhabitants" (Judg. ii, 2; also Ezek. xxx, 5; Dan. xi, 23) warn us against such a League. Are we not a special nation, whom God has made to govern (righteously) all nations? Why the "League" with nations? I have been a believer in British-Israel Truth for over fifty years.—A. B. I.

ANSWER.—The League of Nations which the Bible upholds is the League of British and Anglo-Saxon peoples. This League already exists spiritually, but not politically. That is to say that whereas the Anglo-American Amity—or even Unity—exists in the friendship between us and "the States," it must not be confused with the political League of Nations, of which America is not a member.

We cannot here go into a discussion regarding the constitution and covenant of the League of Nations nor can we discuss the utility of the present League, i.e., as to what real power or right it would possess in the case of any international crisis to avert war. On this subject there is room for more opinions than one perhaps. But it may be stated that the League could not or did not stop the war between Greece and Turkey in 1921 and 1922. Nor did it prevent the recent riots and bloodshed in Palestine. Should therefore any European, Near Eastern or Far Eastern crisis suddenly arise, anxious minds would at once ask, "Can the League prevent war from breaking out again?"

The League of Nations, as at present constituted, cannot pretend to be the real League of Nations so long as America refrains from joining it, for how can you have a weighty and international League when the greatest democracy in the world is not a member of it?

On the other hand it may be asked, "Why should America join the League?" The answer is perhaps a difficult one to give!

Yet it must be confessed that the original intention of the founders of the League of Nations was to prevent further wars, and thus to enable arbitration to settle matters of grave issue or dispute. Such an ideal is a noble one in the cause of humanity and the peace of the world. But the foundation should have been God's foundation, and that is the recognized union of the British and the American peoples, without whom in combination of ideals there can be no real or lasting League.

It is not God's Will for Great Britain to be in league with non-Protestant countries, nor is it God's Will for His Israel to seek advice from or to be in committee with other nations, since we are to be "the head and not the tail," and the leader in Divine, national and international righteousness. (See also Num. xxiii, 9.)

One great and outstanding difficulty lies in our friendly attitude towards Rome. There are 220,000,000 Roman Catholics in Europe, and a very large number who are subjects of His Majesty in Britain and the British Empire, nearly one million and a half being in Australia alone. Surely God would wonderfully bless us if we were to recall our Minister-Plenipotentiary from the Vatican!

Another important fact not to be overlooked is that whereas 54 nations, or three-quarters of the whole world, belong to the membership of the League, Russia holds aloof as well as does America. What power therefore can the League of Nations exercise in seeking to prevent the present relentless war which Soviet Russia is waging against Christianity in particular, and all religion in general?

By all means let us contribute in thought, prayer and influence towards the development of God's League of Anglo-Saxon and English-speaking Nations, for He has given us a task to perform in the world by His grace, and to His glory.

In conclusion, I may refer our readers back to an article which I wrote in the BANNER OF ISRAEL, December 7th, 1921, in which was reported the substance of an interview which the Earl of Dysart and I had with Lord Robert Cecil (as he then was) on the subject of the League of Nations (p. 427 428).

MANITOBA NOTES.

The Rev. E. J. Springett is doing excellent work for the British-Israel Association in Winnipeg. At two addresses recently his Chairmen were Mr. G. W. Jones and Dr. H. W. Wadge, B.A., M.D., M.C., respectively. Keen interest was manifested, especially in the subject of "The Coming King of Israel."

Mr. B. Stewart writes:—"With reference to the two paragraphs in your 'News and Notes' pages (November 30th), referring to the (so-called) submarine earthquake in the North Atlantic on November 18th, I would like to point out that all the reported phenomena attending this event are in accordance with the meteoric impact theory described in my article in the MESSAGE of March 9th last, particularly the gales and heavy rainfall immediately following it, and which reached us—as I expected they would, after reading the report in the newspaper the next day—early Tuesday morning. The resultant tidal wave caused enormous damage on the south coast of Newfoundland and considerable loss of life.

"In March last was issued the B.O.T. report on the loss of the s.s. Cartagena, which sailed on January 15th, 1928, and has never been heard of since. The only clue was a lifeboat and drum of oil washed up later on the Welsh coast. The report stated: 'The condition of the lifeboat pointed to the fact that the disaster must have been sudden and overwhelming.' 'Struck by a meteor' is doubtless the explanation. The ship was a new one on its maiden voyage."

At a recent Meeting of the Christian Protest Committee, a resolution proposed by Mr. Garrison was unanimously adopted, which provided that in future it should be called the "Christian Protest Movement," and that the word "Council" should be substituted for "Committee," and that the former Finance Committee should be enlarged and called the "Executive and Finance Committee."

The Earl of Glasgow and Viscount Brentford are joint Presidents of the Movement.

There is a representative list of Vice-Presidents and a strong Council, of which the Rev. Prebendary Gough is President.

Major Knowles is Chairman, and Mr. Herbert Garrison Deputy Chairman, of the Executive and Finance Committee.

Public meetings are being arranged throughout the country. At the moment the following can be announced: Manchester, Free Trade Hall, January 24th ; Worthing, Picturedrome, February 5th ; Bristol, Colston Hall, February 6th.

We can supply free pamphlets on application.

Mr. John Leech, K.C., will begin his new series of addresses on "Prophecy" on Wednesday next, January 15th, at Headquarters, at 3 p.m.

A meeting will be held on the Thursday evening following, at 7.30. The speaker will be Mr. L. W. Nock.

The speakers last week were the Rev. T. Sparshott Johnson, M.A., and the Rev. Kenneth Dodds.

The Rev. Pascoe Goard addressed the Brotherhood at Brentwood, Essex, on Sunday afternoon last. His address was very keenly appreciated.

Owing to circumstances over which we have no control, the meetings which had been arranged for the Hove Town Hall for the 14th, 15th and 16th January have had to be postponed to later dates. These will be announced as soon as arrangements can be completed.

On January 21st, 22nd and 23rd the Rev. Pascoe Goard and Mr. Garrison are holding meetings at St. Peter's Hall, Hilton Road, Bournemouth, afternoons at 3, and evenings at 8 o'clock.

A series of meetings have been arranged for the Kensington Town Hall for January 29th, 30th and 31st, afternoons at 3, and evenings at 8 o'clock.

THE B.-I.-W.F. CLERICAL AND MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION. QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.

The Clerical and Ministerial Conference will be held on Thursday, January 30th. The morning session will be held at Headquarters, commencing with a Prayer Meeting at 10.30. Adjournment for lunch at 12.45. Afternoon and evening sessions will be held at the Kensington Town Hall, at 2.45 and 8 o'clock, respectively. A business session will follow the afternoon meeting.

It will be desired to arrange for a Forward Campaign by the Clerical and Ministerial Association. Every Clergyman and Minister who is willing to bear a share in such a campaign is requested to bring a list of days which he could devote to the campaign for the general diary of work. Also each Clergyman and Minister is asked to prepare suggestions as to when and where such Forward Movement missions may be carried out during the approaching quarter. These missions may well take the form of evangelical meetings such as will be helpful to the general work of the Churches. It is sufficient in such cases that the Gospel should be presented with the Biblical background of Kingdom Truth. In this way both the Churches and the Forward Movement will be helped onward.

A. E. C. writes :—"As the old year passes I want to express the feeling of deep gratitude, shared, I am sure, with the whole Federation, for the strong action taken by you and the other leaders against the awful persecution of our fellow-Christians in Russia. The visible effect is already great. One hopes the Movement will grow and increase in force and volume until the whole Christian world is turned to action. The year has been marked by so many happenings of deeper significance than most people perhaps realize. We of the Federation have to thank you and all the Staff for your unwearied efforts to bring the lessons home to us all ; for the unfailing high standard set by THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, and the great refreshment of its weekly appearance, we are indeed more than grateful."

E. writes from Durban, South Africa, to one of our readers in Natal :—"Moving, as we mortals do, through a world of doubt and argument, I have felt impelled to translate to paper the plain thoughts of a plain citizen who, through studying British-Israel literature, has had the veil of doubt and unbelief torn aside, and at last made the wonderful discovery that Christ is real—that Christ is the Great Comrade, the ever-present Rock upon which a man may safely lay burdens too heavy for him to bear alone. I have listened to arguments between agnostic and Christian, between Jew and 'Gentile.' I have heard priests and parsons on occasion, and have come away feeling they were not able to put anything in their preaching to awaken in me a spark of belief in the reality of Christ. I have stood upon one of the many battlefields during the Great War and stared at a heap of dead. On that occasion I have said to myself: 'There can't be any God or else why does He allow this!'

"Wherever I have gone I have found doubt, I have even seen clergymen bewildered with questions. I have heard from others of their belief and have listened to their arguments—each and everyone striving to show that their particular form of doctrine and ritual was the right one. But nobody had shown me how to find out about Christ—whether He was real or not.

"Up till a year ago I had a lukewarm interest in the Royal Family. I had no particular interest above the ordinary for the Union Jack. Real belief in God was practically nil. I had read the Bible in parts, but I could never make it out.

"In that state of mind a year ago you accosted me with the question, 'What religion are you?' 'Well, I am supposed to be C. of E.' said I. I did not like to offend you and tell you what I thought of it all. You informed me you were a British-Israelite. You got the usual retort: 'I didn't know you were Jewish!' said I. You explained and then asked me if I would read a book about it. To please you I said Yes, I would. I took the book home. I fully intended to glance through it and hand it back. But amongst some things I could not then understand I came across several passages that re-awakened my interest in the Bible. I turned up the Bible, and for the first time in my life received a glimmer of something that rang amazingly true. I had another book from you, and another and another. At last I got my feet upon solid ground. I carefully read B.-I. books and read about Christ. Gradually the sublime truth and reality of Christ dawned upon me. Christ has since proved my Great Comrade. I know He will never desert me. I am now happy. No doubts in my mind whatsoever! I now understand the death of my comrades in the Great War. I believe they passed on and answered a greater Roll Call for a greater service. I, like them, expect no rewards for any humble service I do here, I only hope to be good enough for greater service when I hope to join them.

"The great truths of British-Israel must become apparent to anyone who will conscientiously study them. I cannot help asking myself, 'If British-Israel Truth is wrong, how comes it that I, after hearing many arguments, was brought to Christ?' Of all the different forms of worship held out to a believer I have asked myself, 'Which is right?' They are all so many signposts. But I would certainly say that British-Israel is the greatest signpost. The main road is Christ. A daily consciousness of the nearness of the Great Comrade is mine. Christ said Himself: 'I am the Way ——' What better than to follow Christ." * * *

The Headquarters Staff and their friends were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Garrison and the Rev. Pascoe Goard on the 3r inst. at 6, Buckingham Gate. Between 60 and 70 sat down to high tea, and after an ample repast the toast of the "King, Queen, Prince of Wales and all the Royal Family" was given by Mr. Garrison and heartily drunk by all, followed by a verse of the National Anthem.

Rev. Pascoe Goard gave the toast of the "British-Israel-World Federation." This was responded to briefly by Rev. Sparshott Johnson, M.A., and Rev. E. A. Couldrey. Mr. J. J. Morey proposed the health of our "Hosts and Hostess," not forgetting Mrs. Goard, to whom we sent kindly greetings. Mr. Garrison and Mr. Goard suitably replied.

After tea a very happy evening was spent. Songs were beautifully rendered by Mrs. Lumley Davies, Miss Davies, Miss Morey, Mr. Henderson, Rev. E. A. Couldrey, and Mr. Harrison Hill, who sang the first hymn written by the ancient Caedmon to music composed by the singer. Mr. Couldrey gave a most effective rendering of Edgar Allan Poe's famous poem, "The Raven," and Rev. Joseph Gay entertained in his own inimitable manner by selections from some of Charles Dickens' famous character sketches.

Mr. N. K. Vivian entertained the company by his clever conjuring tricks, and two most interesting competitions were organized by Mr. Morey and Miss Morey. Mr. Garrison told interesting stories, and gave a remarkable imitation of the kokoburra—the laughing bird of Australia.

A stirring incident of seafaring life was related by Captain Young, R.N., and Rev. Pascoe Goard concluded the proceedings by a few suitable remarks on the work of the Federation, and its far-reaching results in some of the outposts of our Empire.

The proceedings terminated with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne," the "National Anthem," "God Bless the Prince of Wales" and the Benediction, pronounced by Rev. Lumley Davies

Mr. J. J. Morey acted as M.C.

Second Edition.

If the British Constitution is an accident, one fate is in store for us. In these Islands will be re-enacted the French and Russian Revolutions.

THE WONDER RACE

By G. E. ALTREE COLEY

Is the most remarkable book dealing with this subject which has so far been published.

The expansion of Britain is not the outcome of a chain of fortuitous accidents. Behind it, through the centuries, a Supreme Will and Purpose has worked, unsuspected, yet never wearying. Even as night follows day, the destiny of our race is sure. Would that our leaders, both religious and civil, would recognise this one vital fact, that in that Divinely-ordained destiny lies the solution of to-day's baffling problems. Mrs. Coley proves that the Anglo-Saxon genius for self-government is, and always has been, directed and inspired. She has built her foundations on the rock of the Sacred Word, and on those foundations she has reared an unassailable superstructure. Her book is restrained, yet powerful. Her logic is unanswerable. If it be read by every earnest citizen, its conclusions accepted with humble faith, and its principles personally applied, this nation MUST go on from strength to strength until the Divine purpose reaches its triumphant fulfilment.

Here, then, is a book which we offer to readers in full confidence that they will find every page full of interest and informed with ripe scholarship. It is a book that should be read and passed on. Even the most hardened sceptic cannot reject the ruthless logic of its proven facts.

The most vital book yet written by Mr. Goard

The Law of the Lord, or the Common Law

By Rev. W. PASCOE GOARD.

¶ Statesmen of every race and every tongue are seeking a system of government which will give security, establish peace—which is a final expression of ideal law-giving.

Is there such a system ?

This book demonstrates that such a system exists, and that that system is at the disposal of every nation.

It is the Common Law of the Anglo-Saxon Races.

¶ When an alien race is brought under British rule it automatically comes under the Common Law of Britain ; privilege of class is abolished ; personal rule no longer holds sway.

When the Pilgrim Fathers set forth in the Mayflower to escape the personal domination of the Stuarts, next to the Word of God, the old Anglo-Saxon Common Law was their most cherished possession.

¶ Yet the Anglo-Saxon Common Law is older than Anglo-Saxondom, older than Christianity itself. It had its first codification on Mount Sinai when the mouth of the Lord spake unto Moses.

¶ There then is the PRINCIPLE, the root of the only system of laws which can succeed. Its amplification, its application in the form of constructive co-operation, to the needs of the present are all that statesmen need consider. The ideal system is ready-made for them.

¶ Let every thinking man read this book.

THE ORIGIN OF THE ENGLISH

By MAJOR B. de W. WELDON.

SECOND EDITION (REVISED)

Here is a book which once read will be read again and again.

Our history traced for three thousand years. Of necessity, many details must be left out, for the whole of our history could not be compressed into the two hundred and eighty pages this book contains. The fact that a second edition has been called for is evidence of the value of this work for students of the history of the English People.

" The present writer does not claim that the story to be told in the following pages is anything of a new discovery. All the essential facts were in the possession of a man who lived many centuries ago, in the reign of the Emperor Justinian. And one German at least, the philologist Grimm, early in the last century knew a good deal more about the identity of Israel than he cared to disclose in books which were intended to glorify the great German race.

" The chapters that will now be written have to contain many Biblical quotations. But they are no more designed as a theological disquisition than a Government blue book or a standard history would be.

" They are merely the missing pages of the history of Israel, the pages that centuries ago were blotted out until the time came when they might safely be restored to their proper place in the world's historical libraries. All histories are dull reading ; and condensed history is perhaps the worst of all, where no time can be given up to the ' drum and trumpet ' details, interesting though these might be made.

" This book is no exception ; having to be condensed, many interesting points must be omitted. Before our case can be established, many witnesses will have to be called ; men who lived in different ages and in countries far apart—prophets and saints, as well as dignitaries of the Church ; Greeks and Romans and Jews ; pagans from the North ; modern scholars of the most profound learning ; and writers of gossip who would be exceedingly astonished to find fragments of their work still in existence after so many centuries have elapsed. All these diverse sources of information will be placed on a friendly footing of equal credibility before the reader."

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

THE SECOND COMING OF OUR LORD AND THE MILLENNIUM.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

IN the twenty-fourth chapter of St. Matthew our Lord is introduced to us, seated alone upon the Mount of Olives after He had finally withdrawn Himself from the Temple. To Him came His disciples with the following threefold question: First, as to the destruction of Jerusalem and the Temple; secondly, as to the signs of His Coming; and, thirdly, as to the end of the age.

The question was put as follows:—

"When shall these things be?"

"What shall be the sign of Thy Coming?"

"And of the end of the age?"

The first clause of the question was fulfilled in A.D. 70, when the City and the Temple were destroyed.

The second two clauses of the question are yet to find fulfilment.

It will be seen that in the mind of the disciples, who had been carefully taught by our Lord, the threefold question covered a process stretched out for nearly two thousand years.

We ask the question still as follows:—

What shall be the sign of Thy Coming, and of the end of the age? Or to put it in more familiar words: What shall be the sign of the Second Coming, and of the millennium being ushered in?

The question as it was asked of our Lord involved upwards of two thousand years in the process of its fulfilment. As we shall see later, measured by our Calendar, which is only approximately correct, the last phase of the question has only seventy years to run.

If the order of the question is any guide, which mentions the Lord's return prior to the end of the age, then the Second Coming would not have so long to run. Inasmuch as the first clause received fulfilment nearly two thousand years before the last clause of the question, it may be that the intermediate clause, referring to the Second Coming, will considerably precede the last.

The important thing for us, in this article, is to see that the disciples and our Lord carefully distinguished between His Coming and the end of the age.

In my late articles on the Second Coming I have pointed out that the Coming itself may be a process, unfolding step by step before the eyes of the wise who shall understand.

That process may be very rapid and short; or it may be extended over a period of years. Regarding that we have no information.

The heavens which declare the glory of God, and the firmament which sheweth His handiwork, may furnish us with a material illustration of a chronological series of events. Many of the stars which shine so brightly in the heavens as one unit of light, when observed by instruments of power and precision, are found to be a cluster of stars separated from each other by considerable distances, even judged by astronomical space.

So the Second Coming, as it has shone low down toward the horizon of the age, has appeared to us to be one event. But as we get closer and closer to the event itself, and examine it in the light of Holy Scripture, we find that the Second Coming embraces a series of events.

Those named are:—

Our Lord's Coming for His Church.

I have not found it possible, yet, to chronologically relate this to the remainder of the sequence of events, but probably, unnoticed by me, such time indication lies plainly in view on the sacred page ; but the remainder of the events are placed in sequence by our Lord Himself. They are as follows :—

Digitized by Google

(a) Coming as a thief to Armageddon.
(b) "His feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives."

The first of these is at the beginning of the battle of the great day of God Almighty ; the second is at the end. Then :—

(c) The midnight cry, "Behold, the bridegroom cometh."
(d) "Then the Lord of those servants cometh and reckoneth with them."
(e) "When the Son of Man shall come in His glory, and all the holy angels with Him, then . . . "

It is thus that our Lord Himself indicates the sequent events of His Own procedure when He comes.

It is in regard to this that the disciples asked "What shall be the sign of Thy Coming ? "

These things were dealt with in the articles published in last year's volume of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER.

We now proceed to consider the end of the age, and the ushering in of the millennium.

All that the Lord has to do in the way of cleansing and reconstruction, and the full establishment of His millennial reign, it would seem must be done in the remaining years of the present age ; for the "millennium" which is approaching is the Sabbath millennium in which no such work will be done.

This may serve to accentuate the probability of our Lord's presence and activity during the remaining period of the present millennium.

We shall understand this better when we consider what the word "millennium" means, and how it is applied to this great theme. The word means one thousand, and used in this connection it means one thousand years. It is a specific term indicating one specific space of time ; it can neither be advanced, nor postponed. Even the Coming of our Lord before that time begins would not hasten the millennium by a single hour. Six millennia—that is to say, six periods of one thousand years—from the zero date of Adamic history must pass away before the seventh millennium can begin. This is a matter of the Divine Calendar.

I do not know when God first created man in His Own image and likeness as recorded in the first chapter of Genesis. Some believe it to be many millennia ago ; some believe it to be less than six millennia ago. I am not concerned about that matter, for I find no data in the written Word of the first chapter of Genesis, or in reference to it in the later Scriptures, that will furnish me with the information. The important point is, God is dealing with the race to which we belong as descendants of Adam, who was formed and inbreathed with the breath of God, and placed in the Garden, according to a period of six one-thousand-years working days and one one-thousand-years rest day.

The one one-thousand-years rest day is called the millennium, and it cannot begin until the preceding six millennia have run their course to the very last day.

As of old, that rest day will be preceded by the "preparation for the Sabbath," and our Lord has clearly told us, in the twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth chapters of St. Matthew, that in that preparation He will have much to do.

By human means what He has outlined would take a long time to do ; but He does not work by human means, and the possibility is that the whole task will be hastened beyond our conception.

Now, as to the signs. Read the twenth-fourth chapter of St. Matthew, and see that He gave clear warning of the approaching destruction of the Temple and Jerusalem. Read again, and see that He gives a synopsis of history during the Christian dispensation, and then concerning the end, among other things, indicates this as the final sign :—

"THIS GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM SHALL BE PREACHED IN ALL THE WORLD FOR A WITNESS UNTO ALL NATIONS, AND THEN SHALL THE END COME."

The preaching must be by the agency of the Lord's messengers, and it is a wonderful thing that we find ourselves engaged in this very task. Mark, it is not the preaching of the Gospel of Salvation, but it is the preaching of "This Gospel of the Kingdom."

As an Advent testimony, carrying with it the importance our Lord gave to it in the twenty-fourth chapter of St. Matthew (as above quoted), we say with awe that there has come, and is still coming, a stream of letters and of callers to our Headquarters, bearing the testimony that this Gospel of the Kingdom is in very deed being preached to-day as a witness to all nations. It is being preached by tens of thousands of voices whom no man has commissioned, nor sent, but who are impelled by the Holy Spirit to preach this Gospel to the ends of the earth.

Mark this again ; our Lord declared that when this took place, and had been accomplished, THEN the end should come.

It is therefore manifest that our Lord well understood that the Gospel of the Kingdom would not be preached to all nations in the interim period of the Christian dispensation. Here is a sign to quicken one's heart-beat in anticipation of greater events to come.

Again, in the sixteenth chapter of Revelation, in the brief account of the pouring out of the sixth vial, His Coming as a thief is bound up with the passing of the Turkish Empire, or the drying-up of Euphrates, and the unloosing of the three evil spirits like frogs, who, by their propaganda, carried on among the kings of the earth and of all the world, should gather them to the battle of the great day of God Almighty.

That the earth is now filled with the croaking of these frog-like propagandists none are permitted to doubt, for they are disturbing every nation.

Another sign, the last among four, is the gathering of the Hebrew forces to Armageddon. It has long been said by myself, and others, "Keep your eye upon Haifa and the Plain behind it." When Israel-Britain begins to develop a naval and military base there, the last of the four signs in the sixth vial will have begun to appear. Needless to say, our Government has been busily at work at that task for some time past.

Between the first two and the last of these signs our Lord says, "Behold, I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame."

Thus it would appear from these and many other signs that the Coming of our Lord is imminent indeed.

Yet let it be remembered that the time between such Coming and the actual year A.D. 2001 must be a preparation time, for the seventh one-thousand-years day cannot begin one single day before the expiry of the sixth-thousand-years day.

NEW YEAR MESSAGES.

THE REV. GILBERT DAVIES, M.A.

I WRITE to express my profound thankfulness to the Editor and staff of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER for the extraordinary output of solid Bible Truth given from week to week, proclaiming not only the Gospel of Salvation through our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ, but also the Gospel of the Kingdom, showing the unfailing love and faithfulness of God Almighty to His chosen people Israel, destined to be the channel of Divine blessing throughout the world, through whom our Covenant-keeping God would work out His sovereign purposes for literal as well as for spiritual Israel—those grafted in. Without a firm grasp of British-Israel Truth, and keeping in the mind the fact that Israel is the Key of the Old Testament, and that the covenants and promises to Abraham were unconditional, and that there was a time of punishment (seven times) as recorded in Leviticus xxvi, meted out for disobedience, it is absolutely impossible to comprehend, in all their fullness, the meaning of the Old Testament prophecies, which, to those who have eyes to see and read under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, have been, and are being rapidly fulfilled; prophecy fulfilled in His-story.

The Bible is becoming a new and living Book—for the first time—to thousands and thousands of people, as it has become to myself in the light of a recognition of Israel's destiny being different to that of Judah; to adopting the Historical interpretation of prophecy, and to a recognition of the fact that all the signs and marks whereby Israel was to be known in the "latter days," prior to the Second Coming of our dear Lord, are to be found in the British race, who are actually carrying on the work marked out for Israel, which cannot by any stretch of fancy apply to the Jews or the Church, as so many of us were in the past erroneously taught to believe; which line of argument, and by spiritualizing away the prophecies, or placing them in the millennial period, did away with the harmony underlying the Holy Bible as a whole, and made it, alas! meaningless, thus playing into the hands of Modernists and higher critics, causing doubt and neglect of the Word in the lives of so many, which THE NATIONAL MESSAGE is doing such valiant work in exposing, and in giving a right and reasonable interpretation to what with eyes open, and the veil removed, seems so clear in pointing the method and order underlying the government of God in the affairs of men. Your articles inspire courage and give consolation in the coming years in the face of the troubles and pressure which are about to overtake the end of this age. Your assurance on the deliverance of Israel by the Coming of the Lord enables all believers to lift up their heads, for their redemption draweth nigh. Even so come, Lord Jesus! May each one of us be so filled with the light of God's Holy Spirit, and thankful to our Saviour for His redemptive work, that we may be prepared for a life of service and sacrifice, which was the role assigned to Israel-Britain among the nations, the servant Nation, loving God's Word.

How people can fail to accept British-Israel Truth is surprising to me. May God grant a rich blessing on your work for 1930, at home and in our world-wide Dominions.

FREDERICK H. CARTER, M.D., F.R.C.S. ENG.

May I, though a novice in the acceptance of the B.-I. Truth, add a word of thanks and gratitude for the splendid call which THE NATIONAL MESSAGE is sending forth to our people in support of this great Truth? What a debt we owe to the inspired writings and spoken words of its chief contributors! I first heard of the matter through a dear Scottish friend. As a member of the Church of England one deplores our sad divisions; the attempt to alter our Prayer Book—the extreme tendencies of the Anglo-Catholic party—the still more insidious and dangerous Modernist teaching, which undermines belief in the Holy Scriptures—these matters must cause tribulation. Apart from these serious divisions, it is quite clear to those who have realized the B.-I. Truths that the present failure of the Churches is due to the fact that as a body they have ignored, or failed to recognize, that we Anglo-Saxons are the literal descendants and continuation of the Israel nation. Our Prayer Book stands out, from beginning to end, as a perfect Israel Book of worship; compiled as it was in the purest and most classic period of the English language, it is impossible to conceive of a better form of Liturgy than it sets forth. But, surely, it is well for us to suffer tribulation. Our Blessed Lord knew little but this during His life on earth! But it will pass. Already we may see the rays of the approaching glory of our King and Saviour above the dark clouds of our present trials and difficulties. "Magna est veritas et prævalebit."

MR. F. S. DOBBS.

To all those who participate in the production of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE week by week, greeting and my best wishes. May God bless your efforts during 1930 a hundredfold more than in the past. I look forward with the greatest pleasure to my Sunday's perusal, from cover to cover, of each issue as it comes to hand, and am never disappointed. I have studied this glorious subject for the past thirty years, and as I grow older, my absolute confidence in the God of Israel grows stronger and my conviction that no matter what national troubles and difficulties and even apparent misfortunes befall us, He that keepeth Israel never slumbers nor sleeps.

Wishing you a very happy and prosperous New Year.

BRITISH-ISRAEL FEDERATION OF CANADA.

AFFILIATED WITH BRITISH-ISRAEL-WORLD FEDERATION, BRITISH-ISRAEL HOUSE, TORONTO.

FROM THE PRESIDENT, MR. W. H. BLACKALLER.

The year 1929 will stand out as a beacon light in the history of British-Israel endeavour throughout Canada. We have abundant reason to thank God for the manifest token of His guidance of our efforts to make known to sons of men throughout our great Dominion the Glory and Majesty of His Kingdom, and their privilege and responsibilities in regard thereto.

Among the outstanding features in respect to our work stands recorded the very successful Convention which was held in the City of Winnipeg. This was the inaugural gathering of representative members of Branches extending from Montreal in the East to Victoria in the West, and was marked in an especial manner by the unanimity and enthusiasm of those present. The public meetings were well attended, the hall being filled to capacity on each occasion ; the various addresses were well received, and from the many enquiries it was felt that the interest was very widely extended, which has subsequently been confirmed. Mention should be made of the excellent manner in which the friends in Winnipeg arranged matters in regard to the gathering which ministered in no small degree to its success ; and their unbounded hospitality manifested towards the delegates, culminating in the splendid banquet at the Hudson Bay Store, will never fade from the memory of those who had the good fortune to partake of this good will.

On account of the central position of Winnipeg, and with the unanimous approval of the friends in that City, it was agreed that it would be advantageous to the Cause to hold our next Convention in June, 1930, in Winnipeg.

Another very helpful factor in the furtherance of our work was the visit to Canada of the Secretary-General of the B.-I.-World Federation, Mr. Herbert Garrison, and Mrs. Garrison.

The splendid presentation which the Secretary-General gave of British-Israel Truth before the many large enthusiastic and influential gatherings that greeted him throughout his journey from coast to coast of our Dominion could not fail to create a widespread enquiry into our teaching.

In the closing month of 1929 a very important move has been the acquisition of a property by the Central Branch in Toronto, situated in an outstanding position on one of the main arteries of traffic, facing one of the beautiful public gardens of the City which is visited by very large numbers of people throughout the year.

This British-Israel House, the House of the Central Branch, the Headquarters of the Provincial organization and that of the Canadian Federation, will become a busy hive of industry in the B.-I. Cause, and cannot fail to exert a very wide and beneficial influence on the work throughout the Dominion.

For the year before us, what shall we resolve? Shall it not be that with redoubled activity we will try and remove the reproach that Jehovah, through the prophet Isaiah, so forcefully laid against His children—see verses 2-4 of the first chapter—which, alas ! is as true to-day as when first declared. With all the encouragement of the past year, let us seek continually the aid of the Holy Spirit that thereby we may bring His people " to consider " their position before the King of Israel.

"PEACE : AND THERE IS NO PEACE."—I.

By HERBERT W. WADGE, B.A., M.D.

" Destruction cometh ; and they shall seek peace, and there shall be none."—EZEK. vii, 25.

" Think not that I am come to send peace on earth ; I came not to send peace, but a sword."—MATT. x, 34.

" Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you ; not as the world giveth, give I unto you."—JOHN xiv, 27.

WORLD-WIDE PEACE.

IN these days there is so much discussion of the League of Nations, of the international court of arbitration, of armies and of navies, and of disarmament and world-wide peace, it behoves us to study the Holy Scriptures carefully and endeavour to find what our Lord Jesus Christ and the Holy Spirit teach in reference to such problems. For the Bible is the Book of all times ; it will give us enlightenment on our present world conditions, just as it has helped the saints of God all down through the ages. To us, as British-Israelites, it is especially important that we take up this study carefully, for we have been carelessly, and at times maliciously, branded as believing in war and as preaching war. Of course such an allegation is not true. We worship God, trust in Jesus Christ His Son as our Saviour, and believe in the Holy Scriptures as being the in-breathed message of the Holy Spirit. Of all people we are the most willing and anxious to live at peace with all men. We will be glad to see the time of which Tennyson sang so beautifully :—

" For I dipt into the future, far as human eye could see, Saw the Vision of the world, and all the wonder that would be ; * * *

" Heard the heavens fill with shouting, and there rained a ghastly dew
From the nations' airy navies grappling in the central blue ; * * *

" Till the war-drums throbbed no longer, and the battle flags were furl'd
In the Parliament of man, the Federation of the world."
(Locksley Hall.)

We preach, not war, but the Gospel of the Kingdom and the Gospel of Grace. We look forward to the time when our Saviour shall return, and, as the Messiah, shall take the throne of His Kingdom upon the earth, and shall govern the world in righteousness. This blessed time, we hope and believe, is near, even at the door. Believing this then let us see what our Bible teaches about peace.

ENGLISH, HEBREW AND GREEK WORDS.

The English word " peace " is used in the Old Testament to represent the ideas expressed by two or three Hebrew words with somewhat different though similar meanings, and also a Greek word in the New Testament with a closely related meaning. Consequently, great confusion has arisen among the public at large, as so many appear to think that this English has exactly the same meaning all through the Bible. But actually it conveys several different ideas, though these ideas, however, can be gathered into two chief groups of thought, viz., spiritual peace and worldly peace. These two groups, moreover, are intimately related to each other, in that they are both based on righteousness.

SPIRITUAL PEACE.

Spiritual peace is obtained by the individual when he accepts the sacrifice which Jesus Christ made for him, and the salvation which He offers. Then by God's grace his filthy rags of unrighteousness are cast off, and he is clothed in the righteousness of his Saviour. Not before that cleansing can he have peace in his heart. This peace then follows the reconciliation of man to God through the death of our Lord Jesus Christ, as Paul says in Col. i, 20 (R.V.): "And through him to reconcile all things unto himself, having made peace through the blood of his cross." It is this spiritual peace which Paul also refers to in such other passages as:—Rom. v, 1: "Being therefore justified by faith, let us have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." Rom. xv, 13: "Now the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing, that ye may abound in hope, in the power of the Holy Ghost." Gal. v, 22, 23: "But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law." Col. iii, 15: "And let the peace of Christ rule in your hearts, to the which also ye were called in one body." This peace which Paul declares is the fruit of the Spirit, and which is the result of the reconciliation of the individual to God through the blood of Jesus Christ, is the same peace which Jesus Himself declares He gives unto His followers. John xiv, 27: "Peace I leave with you; my peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you." And again, Christ, in addressing His Apostles after the Resurrection, gives them greeting (John xx, 19, 21, 26): "Peace be unto you." Note that this salutation was only to His own followers, and not to the public at large.

Peter also, in closing his first Epistle, gives the benediction (1 Peter v, 14): "Peace be unto you all that are in Christ," thus indicating that this peace is the spiritual peace obtained by all the followers of Christ.

EARTHLY PEACE AMONGST CHRIST'S FOLLOWERS.

Now it is this spiritual peace, which is the work of the Holy Spirit following reconciliation with God, which brings earthly peace or tranquillity amongst Christ's real followers. We say "real followers," because this peace is not seen amongst those who merely profess to follow Christ, but only amongst those who have received His salvation. Matt. vii, 16, 20: "By their fruits ye shall know them." And the fruits are the fruits which are born of the Spirit—"love, joy, peace," etc. So this peace amongst Christ's followers, which both He and the Apostles enjoin upon them, is closely allied to and is the result of spiritual peace. Our Master enjoins this peace on His disciples when He says (Mark ix, 50): "Have salt in yourselves, and be at peace one with another." Also the Holy Spirit instructs us in the Epistles in reference to this matter. Rom. xiv, 19: "So then let us follow after things which make for peace." 2 Cor. iii, 11: "Finally, brethren, farewell. Be perfected; be comforted; be of the same mind; live in peace; and the God of love and peace be with you." Take note that this peace is among the brethren, and that they are brethren because they have become partakers of the salvation of Jesus Christ. Further, our Lord Himself, in the Sermon on the Mount, in which He lays down the principles by which His Kingdom shall be governed, blesses this active manifestation of peace, for He says (Matt. v, 9): "Blessed are the peacemakers; for they shall be called sons of God."

TRIBULATIONS TO CHRIST'S FOLLOWERS.

But on the other hand we are definitely warned by Jesus, that though we have this spiritual peace which passeth all understanding, we are still subject to troubles and trials and adversity in this world. John xvi, 33: "These things have I spoken unto you, that in me ye may have peace. In the world ye have tribulation; but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." Here we note two important points; first, that Jesus expressly declares that our peace is in Him; second, that though we have peace from Jesus, still we have tribulation in the world, that is, that during our life on earth we are subject to troubles, trials, tribulations (threshings). This, of course, indicates that there must be other people in this world that have not obtained this spiritual peace; for if not, then there would be no one to cause our tribulation. Therefore, there can be no real peace between those who follow Christ and those who do not. Even though we wish no evil to our fellow-citizens who do not follow Christ, we cannot be at real peace with them, because they themselves are not at peace with God.

NO PEACE TO THE WICKED.

But, again, we are definitely told that there is no peace to the wicked. Isaiah lvii, 15, 19-21: "For thus saith the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, whose name is Holy: I dwell in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones. . . . I create the fruit of the lips; Peace, peace, to him that is far off and to him that is near, saith the Lord; and I will heal him. But the wicked are like the troubled sea; for it cannot rest, and its waters cast up mire and dirt. There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked." Who then are the wicked? Plainly, they are all those who have not a contrite and humble spirit. Evidently the word "wicked," as here used, is a comprehensive term, and includes all those who have not humbled themselves before Jesus in a spirit of repentance, and have not received in their hearts the peace that passeth all understanding resulting from reconciliation with God. Thus, not having this spiritual peace, they are in a state of mind and heart which leads to discord rather than to harmony and contentment and tranquillity. Having such a state of mind, how can they be at peace with their fellow-men, either individually or nationally?

WORLDLY PEACE.

This brings us then to the second class of peace referred to in the Bible, viz., worldly peace. This form of peace, which is simply quietness or calmness or security between or among nations as opposed to strife, contention and war, is referred to in the Bible in such passages as :—1 Kings iv, 24 : "For he (Solomon) had dominion over all the region on this side the river . . . . ; and he had peace on all sides round about him." 2 Kings xx, 19 : "Then said Hezekiah unto Isaiah, Good is the word of the Lord which thou hast spoken. He said moreover, Is it not so, if peace and truth shall be in my days ?" Eccles. iii, 8 : ". . . . a time for war, and a time for peace." Luke xiv, 31, 32 : "Or what king, as he goeth to encounter another king in war, will not sit down first and take counsel whether he is able with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand ? Or else, while the other is yet a great way off, he sendeth an ambassage, and asketh conditions of peace."

Christ did not bring Worldly Peace.

But Christ emphatically declared that He did not bring this kind of peace into the world. Matt. x, 34 : "Think not that I am come to send peace on earth : I came not to send peace, but a sword." Luke xii, 49-52 : "I came to cast fire upon the earth ; and what will I, if it is already kindled ? But I have a baptism to be baptized with ; and how am I straitened till it be accomplished ! Think ye that I am come to give peace in the earth ? I tell you, Nay ; but rather division ; for there shall be from henceforth five in one house divided, three against two, and two against three." These statements of Christ's are pointed and emphatic. There is no getting away from them. They indicate that it is no part of His plan for the redemption of the world to bring this kind of peace into it.

But why did Christ take such a position, and why did He make such definite, positive statements as to the futility of worldly peace ? Here we come back to the relationship of spiritual peace to worldly peace. This relationship is found in the fact that they are both based on righteousness ; the former on the righteousness of man before God through the sacrifice of Jesus on his behalf ; and the latter on righteousness between man and man, and between nation and nation. No doubt Christ, in His knowledge of human nature, both from His earthly experiences and from His Divine attributes, could see that in the long vista of future ages there could be no permanent world peace, for as long as there existed lust for pomp and power, and greed and covetousness for the possessions of this world, might and not right would be the controlling factor in the affairs of this world.

Righteousness and Peace.

But if righteousness was not to be the mainstay of the relations of man to man, and nation to nation, then there could be no real peace in this world, for all peace is based on righteousness. Psalm lxxxv, 10 : "Mercy and truth are met together, righteousness and peace have kissed each other." Isaiah xxxii, 17 : "And the work of righteousness shall be peace ; and the effect of righteousness quietness and confidence for ever." And this teaching of the Old Testament, that peace depends upon and is the effect of righteousness, is confirmed also in the New Testament. The writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews shows (vii, 1, 2) that the Lord was a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec ; and then he shows that Melchisedec was first king of righteousness and then king of peace. And the Apostle Paul shows that righteousness is of God. Ephes. iv, 23, 24 : ". . . and that ye be renewed in the spirit of your mind, and put on the new man, which after God hath been created in righteousness and holiness of truth."

Some Results of Righteousness.

The result of the righteousness of God in the lives of individuals is peace ; and one of the results of the preaching of the Gospel of Christ is peace between large numbers of people. The more the preaching of this Gospel prevails in any community, and the more the people are brought to the salvation of Christ, the greater will be the actual conditions of peace in such community. And among large communities, such as our English-speaking nations, which have accepted and adopted the teachings of our Lord Jesus Christ, and in which a large proportion of the population worship Him in spirit and in truth, there is a natural inclination and longing and desire for peace to be more and more extended till it covers the whole world. But with the public at large the conception of peace is not of that condition of spiritual peace which is the basis of all real quietness and absence of strife ; rather is their conception simply that of the effect of peace, that is, the restraining of war between nations, and this again by mutual agreement.

Translations of Luke ii, 14.

A misconception of peace has been developed to a large extent by an unfortunate translation, in the King James' Version of the Bible, of the song of the angels at the birth of Jesus. This translation, which appears to follow the text of the Vulgate, is as follows :—Luke ii, 14 : "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." If this translation means anything at all, it means that there was at Christ's birth, and is now, peace and good will among men on earth even as there was then, and is now, glory to the Great God on high. That this statement has not been and is not now true has been shown down through the centuries from Christ's time until now, during which ages there has been a constant succession of wars based on lust and covetousness for power and possession. Clearly, then, so far as the relations of nations to each other are concerned, the assertion, supposedly made, that there would be peace among men on the earth, was not correct. Now, this idea of peace among all men, whether they were true followers of God or not, has been proclaimed constantly, and there can be no doubt that as one result of such teaching, many people seeing the constant presence of bitterness and strife and war on earth in spite of the preaching of peace have rejected the whole message of the Saviour.

The Revised Translation of Luke ii, 14.

The translation of this glorious pæan of praise, as given in the English Revised and the American Standard Versions of the Bible, is (Luke ii, 14) :—

> "Glory to God in the highest,
> And on earth peace among men in whom he is well pleased."

In this rendering we find that peace is referred to as being among men in whom God is well pleased—men of good will—men of righteousness ; and thus we find the teaching of this song agrees with the teachings of the Lord Jesus Christ and of the Holy Spirit as to peace as found elsewhere in the Scriptures. It agrees also with historical records of world conditions from the time of its singing to the present day. That this translation is correct is further confirmed by the translations of this song as made by many individual modern translators, who all express the same idea as the Revised Version, though in different words and styles. Herewith are several notable translations :—

1. Douay Bible :
" Glory to God in the highest ;
And in earth peace to men of good will."
2. Twentieth Century New Testament :
" Glory to God on high,
And on earth peace among men in whom he delights."
3. Richard Francis Weymouth, University College, London :
" Glory to God in the highest heavens,
And on earth peace among men who please him."
4. Edgar J. Godspeed, University of Chicago :
" Glory to God in heaven and on earth, Peace to the men he favours."
5. Ferrar Fenton :
" Honour among the highest to God,
And peace upon earth to men who accept."
6. James Moffatt :
" Glory to God in high heaven,
And peace on earth for men whom he favours."

These six translations thoroughly confirm the translation of the Revised Version as to the nature and extent of peace on earth, and thus enforce the real message, which indicates that the peace referred to by the angels in this song of jubilation is simply the peace found among the spiritual followers of God. It is not the peace so commonly referred to in our pulpits and on our platforms, viz., the quiescent condition of nations in the absence of war.

MEANS OF OBTAINING PEACE.

The aspiration of all people for this form of peace (abstention from war) is quite natural, but in view of the teachings of Christ on this subject, the present methods of the nations in seeking to obtain such are quite irrational, as they take no notice of the fact that until the individuals of our nation and of every other nation have, in large numbers, become reconciled to Christ, there can be no real reconciliation or peace between men or between nations. The desires and passions and lusts of man in his natural unregenerated state will ever cause him to be jealous and covetous of that which his brother man possesses, and such conditions will sooner or later, but inevitably, lead to war. The real means of obtaining peace is by the preaching of the Gospel of Grace to the individual that he might obtain the salvation of Jesus Christ, and so be blessed with the peace which passeth all understanding. The rapid spread of such salvation would equally rapidly bring general peace. But most of our religious leaders of the present day, both clerical and lay, of all denominations, appear to be following that alluring will-o'-the-wisp, peace by treaty, which has always been vanishing, instead of the enduring light of the world, Jesus Christ, Whose peace is satisfying and permanent.

NATURE OF PRESENT PEACE.

There is, of course, a certain amount of international agreement or peace in the world, but it is only really present among those nations who have adopted the law given on Sinai as their basis of government, and accepted the teachings of Jesus Christ as their standard of life. This peace is found among those nations whose governments are based essentially on righteousness. Also there is a certain amount of peace between these particular nations and those other nations who have been compelled by force to deal internationally in a righteous manner. This form of peace, being virtually the result of compulsion in one form or another, might better be called a forced truce. But compulsion leads to rebellion, and such peace cannot therefore be permanent, as nations which have not yet based their system of government on God's law will not agree for long periods to such forced conditions of peace. And, further, the lust of such nations for rank and control and wealth, for pomp and power and possession, will be abetted and aided by all the forces of " the prince of this world." In all such instances of forced peace obtained either by defeat, or conquest, or threats, or agreement through the force of circumstances, war will eventually break out. Such has been the history of the world down through the ages. Such agreement has virtually been considered as but " a scrap of paper." When such nations were strong enough they ignored such agreements, and sought satisfaction for their grievances or lusts in war. And so it will be in future. No agreement for peace that the League of Nations or other groups can make can prevent war unless each and every nation participating in such agreement is doing so in accordance with the ethics of government as laid down by Jesus Christ for His Kingdom.

DANIEL IX, 26.

BY PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.SC.

OF this verse in Hebrew there are many translations to be had in the English language. Doubtless, the German, French and other interpreters have found similar difficulties.

This arises from the fact that the various translators fail to clearly find, or perceive, the context which, if definitely known, would be a safe guide. This, in fact, applies to the work of translating any language into any other language.

The King James' translation of the above verse is :—

" And after threescore and two weeks shall Messiah be cut off, but not for Himself : and the people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary ; and the end thereof shall be with a flood, and unto the end of the war desolations are determined."

A marginal reading is given as follows :—

A.—" And they (the Jews) shall be no more His people."

This note is taken from " The Comprehensive Teachers' Bible," published by S. Bagster and Sons, Ltd., London.

There seems to be no good ground for such a statement.

A second marginal reading is given, same Bible :—

B.—" And shall have nothing."

This is given as an alternative to : " But not for Himself," as is given in the King James' translation.

Digitized by Google

This, in like manner, seems to fall short of the intent of the Hebrew words we ain lo : and gives no real help.

We now give the Douay version of this verse :—

C.—"And after sixty-two weeks Christ shall be slain : and the people that deny Him shall not be His. And a people with their leader that shall come, shall destroy the city and the sanctuary : and the end thereof shall be waste, and after the end of the war the appointed desolation."

A marginal note on "a people with their leader" is this :—

"A people with their leader—the Romans under Titus."

D.—The Scofield Bible gives the same translation as the King James' version.

However, a marginal reference to the words, "but not for Himself," is :—

"Christ (First Advent)." Doubtless Scofield means the Crucifixion.

A second marginal note by Scofield is :—

"Shall have nothing. Nothing that is which rightly was His."

My note on this reference is that it does not seem to catch the basic idea. Moreover, it is scarcely an exact translation, even though he says "literally."

A third marginal reference by Scofield is on the word Prince. He uses the word Beast, and gives Scripture references.

To the writer's mind, this is not the intention of the Hebrew word Nagid. Were we to use the word BEAST for the word Prince, as given in the several translations, then we would get for the two Hebrew words Ain Nagid, the people of the Beast, or the Beast's people.

This cannot be the intent of the writer Daniel, and seems to be grammatically and historically excluded.

A fourth marginal note by Scofield is :—

"Lit. Unto the end wars and desolations are determined."

Concerning this note, we would remark that Milcham cannot well be translated to mean "wars." Moreover, it would seem to be better used as a determinative of the phrase We ad katz, thus meaning to the end of the war, or at the end of the war.

Further, it does not appear wise to say "wars and desolations," as if they were subject of a verb. Were this the purpose of the writer, he surely would have used the conjunction AND.

In a footnote, Scofield, translating, gives the following :—

"The prince that shall come."

This will scarcely do, for the words are "AIN NAGID HABBA," hence the word ain is left out in the translation. However, it is fair to say that Scofield translates these words in verse 26, thus :—

"And the people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary."

This translation gives precedence to the word PEOPLE rather than to the PRINCE, for it says the people shall destroy the city, etc. ; and not the prince.

Now, if the purpose be to say "the people of the prince," the Hebrew wording is not explicit.

The Douay says : "A people with their leader."

Here again we would say the grammatical construction requires a different wording to give such a translation. Hence, we object to the Douay, Scofield and the King James' versions ; as in the Hebrew, there is no prepositional prefix to give the translation with. Hence, we cannot say "the people with the prince," etc.

Ferrar Fenton translates thus :—

"And after the sixty-two weeks the Messiah will be slain—and none support Him. After that the city and the sanctuary will be desolated by a dominating people who are brought on—but its end will be with a torrent, and its abolition by war. The desolations are fixed."

When we compare this translation with that of the King James and the Douay versions, we wonder how such variances can arise among these first-class Bible scholars. We now make a few comments on Ferrar Fenton's conclusions, which were arrived at after much study and comparison.

A.—"After the sixty-two weeks." This "the" is grammatically correct, and suits the context as seen in verse 25, where 62 weeks are mentioned.

B.—"And none support Him." This is intended for a free, but not a literal translation. Perhaps a close rendering would be :—

AND NONE FOR HIM OR WITH HIM.

Fenton's "And none support Him" seems to be close to the meaning. If we recall the statement elsewhere in Scripture—"Of the people there was none to help Him," and "He trod the winepress alone," and His cry on the Cross, "Why hast Thou forsaken Me ?"—we get material help with these words of Daniel.

They all refer to Christ's great Sacrifice when all left Him. Hence, if we translate the words, "and none for Him" by "and none to help Him," or more freely, forsaken by all, we would get :—

"Messiah shall be cut off and He shall be left alone, forsaken by God and man," which we judge to be the full and exact meaning.

The ordinary translation, "but not for Himself," is not explicit, and fails to bring out the meaning.

C.—"After that the city," etc. There is no word in the Hebrew text to warrant the use of the words "after that," which might mean "after that," or "after that the city," etc.

Fenton has as good ground for a free translation as is used by myself and others. The exact connecting link is in the introductory conjunction seen in WEHAIR, We-ha-ir, giving literally "and the city," instead of after that the city.

D.—"By a dominating people." This seems a better translation than the King James' version—"And the people of the prince that shall come," etc.

"AM NAGID," a ruling people, rather than "the people of the prince"! The Romans were a ruling, dominating, masterful nation, or people. AM may be translated nation.

E.—"Who are brought on." Perhaps a better phrase would be "having come," or just the participle, "coming."

This, then, would give the following :—

"And a ruling people having come shall destroy," etc.

F.—1. "But its end will be with a torrent."—Fenton.

2. "And the end thereof shall be with a flood."—King James, Scofield.

3. "And the end thereof shall be waste."—Douay.

But the end, or and the end !

The exact translation seems to be his end or its end. What end ? Its end might mean the end of the sixty-two weeks ; or the end of the Roman war of A.D. 70 ; or the end of the terrible siege and destruction of the city of Jerusalem.

Digitized by Google

If we translate, using the words "His end," then so far as the verse context is concerned we would be forced to mean Messiah's end, i.e., the end of His life on the Cross, as prophetically referred to by Daniel.

G.—Fenton uses "its" again, thus :—" Its end will be with a torrent and its abolition by war."

We venture the following, which is intended as a free translation based primarily upon the Hebrew wording of verse 26, guided by various other Scriptures which help to make a fairly safe context, and much aided by the above-quoted authorities :

1. "And after the sixty-two weeks, Christ will be sacrificed and there will be no one to help Him. A ruling people having come, will destroy the city and the temple. The end will be with destruction, and calamities will continue to the end of the war." (E. O.)

2. "And after the sixty-two weeks, Christ will be slain and no one by His side. A ruling people will come and destroy the city and the sanctuary. Its end will be with an overwhelming flood, and desolations will continue to the end of the war." (E. O.)

In all attempts at exact word translation and meaning translation, it becomes necessary to go carefully and not dogmatically. The above seems to be as near to the translated meaning as we can reach at present.

DESTINIES OF ISRAEL AND EGYPT.

LECTURE BY MR. ARTHUR EXLEY, J.P.,

TO OUR BRISBANE BRANCH, OF WHICH HE IS PRESIDENT.

MR. EXLEY said : Egypt is the best preserved of all the ancient civilizations. Babylon and Nineveh fell into heaps of ruins, and the very sites of these cities were forgotten for centuries, but Egypt with its ancient monuments and temples has always been a land of absorbing interests. The Hebrew name for Egypt is Misraim, and the first syllable Misr is the Arabic designation of the country to the present day. The total area of Egypt proper is 294,000 square miles, of which some 13,000 in the valley and delta of the Nile are cultivated, but these lands are so fertile that two most productive crops are taken from them yearly. Stretching from Cairo to the head of the Gulf of Suez is one of the few lateral valleys known as the valley of the wanderings of Israel.

A link connecting the destinies of Israel with those of Egypt occurs very early in the Bible. When Abram, obedient to the call of God, left Ur of the Chaldees and journeyed into the land of Canaan, he pitched his tent at Bethel. There was a grievous famine in the land and Abram went down into Egypt to sojourn there.

PROMISE TO ABRAHAM.

When Jehovah made covenant with Abram, and changed his name to Abraham, and Sarai's name to Sarah, He promised Abraham that all the land from the river of Egypt into the great river Euphrates should be for a possession to his end, who would become a multitude of nations. He also foretold that Abraham's descendants should suffer oppression in Egypt : " Know of a surety that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them ; and they shall afflict them 400 years ; and also that nation whom they shall serve will I judge " (Gen. xv, 13, 18). At this time Abraham was 100 years old and Sarah 90. Isaac was not yet born.

Egypt next comes into the history of Israel when Joseph was sold as a slave by his brethren and taken to Egypt, there to obtain advancement, to suffer imprisonment on a false charge, to be taken from thence to become second only to Pharaoh in the land of Egypt and to receive as guests and to succour those very brethren who had sold him into slavery, and finally to settle his father and his father's household in the land of Goshen.

A marked period of prosperity now came to the seed of Israel. The people multiplied exceedingly and grew rich in sheep and cattle. It was during this period that the Zarah branch of the tribe of Judah, together with adventurers from the tribe of Dan, left Egypt to found new settlements in Europe and Northern Africa.

During their sojourn in Egypt the two great obelisks before the temple of On at Heliopolis must have been familiar sights to the children of Israel, and it is worthy of note that one of these famous pillars is now set up on the Thames Embankment, a familiar sight to Ephraim's descendants in Britain, whilst the other is in the possession of Manasseh at his chief city, New York.

PERIOD OF SERVITUDE.

The prosperity of Israel in Egypt aroused the jealosuy of the Egyptians and a Pharaoh arose who knew not Joseph. Then commenced a period of long and cruel servitude under the lash of Egyptian taskmasters till the Lord raised a deliverer in Moses, who rescued his people from captivity and led them out of Egypt to the Land of Promise.

Egypt next appears in Israel history during the reign of Solomon, when the prophet Abijah met one of Solomon's mighty men of valour, and by the token of the rent garment foretold a division of Israel, ten tribes of which were to be rent from the House of David and given to Jeroboam the Ephraimite, who was chosen to be King over Israel.

Solomon sought therefore to slay Jeroboam, who fled to Shishak, King of Egypt, and remained in Egypt till after the death of Solomon. Doubtless the refugee told Shishak of the wonderful treasures of Solomon's Temple, for five years after, during the reign of Solomon's son, Rehoboam, over the Kingdom of Judah, Shishak invaded Southern Palestine, captured Jerusalem, and took away the treasures of the House of the Lord, and the shields of gold which Solomon had stored there, " for Judah did evil in the sight of the Lord."

As Palestine formed a buffer State between the mighty nations of Egypt and Babylon, invasions of the territories of Israel and Judah by the armies of these nations were frequent, and ended in the total removal of the Northern House of Israel into Assyria, and 120 years later, the captivity of Judah under Nebuchadnezzar, and the final flight of the remnant of Judah into Egypt, during the time of the prophet Jeremiah.

The final consequence of this flight was the subjection of Egypt by Babylon shortly after Jeremiah had escaped to the "appointed place" with the daughter of Jerusalem, to whom was given the Kingdom. "And thou, O tower of the flock, the stronghold of the daughter of Zion, unto thee shall it come, even the first dominion; the Kingdom shall come to the daughter of Jerusalem" (Micah iv, 8).

HEROD'S MASSACRE.

We next read of Egypt in the New Testament, when Joseph, warned by an angel, took the child Jesus into Egypt to escape Herod's massacre of the innocents. Matt. ii, 14-15: "When he arose, he took the young child and his mother by night, and departed into Egypt. And was there until the death of Herod; that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, Out of Egypt have I called my Son."

The prophet Hosea foretells that in the latter days after Israel has disappeared from the Assyrian captivity, Ephraim, although not yet able to dwell in the Lord's land, shall return to Egypt, and continues in spite of their iniquity:—"I will heal their backsliding, I will love them freely; for mine anger is turned away from him (Ephraim) . . . . He shall grow as the lily and cast forth his roots as Lebanon . . . . They that dwell under his shadow shall return; they shall revive as the corn and grow as the vine; . . . . Ephraim shall say, What have I to do any more with idols? . . . . Who is wise, and he shall understand these things? Prudent, and he shall know them, for the ways of the Lord are right" (Hosea xiv).

BRITISH SUPREMACY.

Ephraim, the leading tribe of the House of Israel, holder of the birthright now vested in the British, or Covenant, people, returned to Egypt in A.D. 1798, when Nelson won the battle of the Nile, and shattered Napoleon's ambitions of an Eastern Empire. Napoleon abandoned the French forces to their fate—a final defeat by the forces of General Abercrombie, A.D. 1801.

The cutting of the Suez Canal by M. De Lesseps, a French engineer, greatly shortened the sea route to British possessions in the East and South, and thus became of vital importance. By a masterly stroke, Disraeli, the British Premier, himself of Jewish descent, purchased sufficient shares from the Khedive of Egypt to give Britain control of the Canal, and thus British interests in Egypt were greatly enhanced.

Finally, the quelling of a serious insurrection in Egypt by the bombardment of Alexandria, A.D. 1892, and successive victories at Tel-el-Kebir and Omdurman made Britain supreme in Egypt and the Soudan. The prediction of Hosea, that those who dwell under Ephraim's shadow shall revive as the corn and grow as the vine, has been wonderfully fulfilled in Egypt.

Britain by just rule and the completion of great irrigation works has ensured an ample supply of water to the Egyptian farms, and has greatly increased the productiveness of the soil. Egypt after a long eclipse has once again entered the full light of prosperity.

Politically, the Egyptian question is not so satisfactory. Egyptian tax-gatherers had been accustomed to impose great burdens upon the Jellahin, and Britain has intervened to make taxation more just and equitable, to the detriment of the overlords who have now and again raised the cry of Egypt for the Egyptians, which being interpreted means, Egypt for the Turkish ruling classes. Already Britain has twice tried to leave Egypt to the Egyptians, only to be thwarted by the Divine Will.

CHANGE OF GOVERNMENT.

Another attempt seems to be in process of incubation, and should it be allowed to hatch out into a retirement from Egypt, the result is likely to be disastrous to British interests in the East. The situation foretold by the prophet Isaiah (ch. iii, 12) seems to have arisen as a result of the recent elections in Great Britain, "As for my people, children are their oppressors, and women rule over them."

The final gathering of Israel and Judah into the land promised to Abraham, now, for the first time in history, under the dominion of a single Power, is thus described by Isaiah: "He shall cause them that come of Jacob to take root: Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit. And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall beat off from the channel of the river (Euphrates) unto the stream of Egypt, and ye shall be gathered one by one, O ye children of Israel." (Isaiah xxvii, 6, 12.)

The Promised Land is bordered by Egypt, and will develop into a land of unfenced cities, fertile and prosperous. From the prophet Joel it appears that Egypt will ally herself with the Powers of the North and East. "To take a spoil and to take a prey," for the prophet states, "Egypt shall be a desolation, and Edom (Turkey) shall be a desolated wilderness, for the violence against the children of Judah (now reassembling in Palestine), because they have shed innocent blood in their land. But Judah shall dwell for ever, and Jerusalem from generation to generation . . . . for the Lord dwelleth in Zion." (Joel iii, 19-21.)

THE MILLENNIUM.

This points to the millennium, but we learn that the Peace of God is not instant, for He shall reign till He has put all enemies under His feet. The last enemy to be destroyed is Death. From the prophet Zechariah we get a glimpse of the coercion to be applied to those who have fought against Israel. "And it shall come to pass that everyone that is left of all the nations which came against Jerusalem shall even go up from year to year to worship the King, the Lord of Hosts, and to keep the feast of tabernacles. And it shall be, that whoso will not come up of all the families of the earth unto Jerusalem to worship the King, the Lord of Hosts, even upon them shall be no rain." (Zech. xiv, 16-17.)

But as Egypt does not rely upon rain over its territory for fertility it is specially mentioned (v. 18), "And if the family of Egypt go not up, and come not, that have no rain, there shall be the plague, wherewith the Lord will smite the heathen that come not up to keep the feast of tabernacles."

The thorn and pricking brier of Canaan, instruments of constant irritation to Israel, will finally disappear, and Joshua's initial mistake be cancelled, for Zechariah concludes his prophecy with the statement: "In that day there shall be no more the Canaanite in the house of the Lord of Hosts."

OBITUARY.

THE LATE DR. W. R. GORNOLD, D.A., F.A.S., M.S.A.

OUR prayers and our sincere sympathy are for the dear ones of Dr. W. R. Gornold, D.A., F.A.S., M.S.A., who was called to the life beyond on Monday, December 23rd, 1929.

He devoted many years to the service of Christ; in fact, his life was fully taken up with religion and science. Dr. Gornold was a lecturer of repute and was frequently heard in London and throughout the Provinces. A sincere believer in British-Israel Truth, his lectures invariably dealt with phases of this great revelation, and our Movement has lost an able, eloquent, convincing exponent. Such a loss imposes an added responsibility upon all our supporters, for the time is short and there is much work yet to be done.

Dr. Gornold was widely known by his writings on scientific and religious subjects.

When so many are falling away he proved himself to be a true soldier of our Lord Jesus Christ; ever ready to spread His Message and never failing when it proved necessary to hit the enemy hard.

May God, Who is rich in mercy and loving-kindness, give the bereaved ones His comfort and His peace. We know that they are facing their loss in the spirit of Christian faith and hope, knowing that all are truly one in Christ Jesus, though for the time being withdrawn from sight. Hard as it is to have a loved one leave us, his gain is to dwell eternally in the sunshine of the Divine Presence.

BRITISH-ISRAEL FACTS NOT FANCIES.—IV.

BY MAJOR-GENERAL C. A. HADFIELD.

SUGGESTIONS FOR SCEPTICS REGARDING PROPHECY.

IT is difficult to follow the minds of the sceptics, for can they not see how many of the prophecies have been actually fulfilled? They believed only those that they have seen; their eyes are blinded as regards an historical sequence of events—purposely blinded, no doubt. It is not their fault; for, in order that Israel might go forward to her great destiny in the world, it was, for Divine reasons, necessary that the eyes of the theologians, commentators, and teachers generally, should be "blinded" to the fact that any part of Israel other than the Jews existed in the world.

Let us consider how many of the prophecies have been fulfilled. And, if so with these, why should we doubt any? With regard to our Lord we can read that—

Moses	declared	His family.
Micah	,,	His place of birth.
Isaiah	,,	The virginity of His Mother.
Zechariah	,,	His triumphant entry into Jerusalem.
David	,,	His Life, Resurrection, and Ascension.

Do not let us, with all the "signs" at hand for our guidance, and with the knowledge that so much, as originally prophesied, has come to pass, doubt the fulfilment of that, which so far, seems to be unfulfilled. Do not let us follow in the footsteps of the Jews who claimed to be well versed in the Old Testament, and yet, in spite of the prophecies, persisted in the rejection of Christ.

When we consider the oft-repeated statement in the Bible of the great "future" before Israel "in the latter days," and when we see so many of those identical promises being constantly fulfilled, it is surely time to try and awaken from our slumber. It is a case: "For I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be wise in your own conceits; that blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in" (Rom. xi, 25). This is very significant!

Are we not clearly told: "With God all things are possible, that no prophecy of the Scripture is of any private interpretation. For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man, but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost"?

SOME OF THE PREDICTIONS FOR ISRAEL TO FULFIL.

To possess land—the area of which we are told.
To become a great people—great multiplicity.
To possess a King for ever.
To be an everlasting Nation.
To become Sons of the Living God (i.e., Christians).

Digitized by Google

To dwell in their land for ever.
To have a place appointed for them as their own.
To dwell alone.

The Bible is replete with passages denoting that, however much Almighty God may be displeased with sinful Israel; however much it may be necessary to punish Israel—yet God will extend His mercy, and will "save" Israel in the end.

Opponents to the idea of Israel—as apart from the Jews—still existing, are anxious to quote isolated texts on which to support their views, and to endeavour to satisfy their own conscience that God finally "cast off" Israel; that their deportation to Assyria wiped them off the earth as a nation for ever. That there was an end of them. They quote: "I will no more have mercy upon the House of Israel, but I will utterly take them away." "Then said God, Call his name Lo-Ammi, for ye are not My people, and I will not be your God" (Hos. i, 6-9).

Let these "doubters" read the context, and they will find that God immediately afterwards promises great multiplicity to this self-same Israel: "Where it was said unto them, ye are not My people, there it shall be said unto them ye are the sons of the living God"! A reversal of the utter casting out! There is no confusion, except by taking isolated texts and trying to build up a theory thereon.

If we refer to the 89th Psalm we find it is repeated that God has made a covenant which shall not be broken. Then see 2 Chron. vii, 18: "As I have covenanted with David." God swore an oath to keep His covenant: "I have sworn unto David My Servant." How, in the face of this, can we impeach the veracity of God by declaring that Israel was finally "cast off"? Was not the Throne of David to be everlasting? Certainly the Jews have had no king since Zedekiah; therefore the passage cannot refer to the Jews.

When in 587 B.C. the downfall of Jerusalem came, the temporal kingdom of Judah was destroyed, but not so "the seed Royal"; that was destined to be preserved, in order that the prophecies might be fulfilled. The promised line from David was to be maintained through the female line—King Zedekiah's daughter.

It is the failure to grasp this significant "sign" that is responsible for much of the unbelief in the Prophetical Books.

Reference to 2 Chron. vi, 16; vii, 18; Jer. xxxiii, 17, proves that Israel's kings were to be Judah's tribe without cessation, until the Coming of the reigning Messiah.

Let us consider what is prophesied in regard to the "future" of Israel, i.e., the "House of Ephraim-Israel"—in the "latter days,"—always bearing in mind that the "birthright," which Esau sold for a mess of pottage, devolved upon Joseph (1 Chron v, 1), and not upon any of the other sons of Jacob. Thus, from Joseph the "birthright blessings" descended upon Ephraim; such as—

(1) A great and mighty nation (Gen. xii, 2, and xviii, 18).

(2) Possessing the gate of his enemies (Gen. xxii, 17; xxiv, 60).

(3) A nation and a company of nations (Gen. x xv, 11; xlviii, 4).

(4) Under the new covenant and therefore Christians (Hos. i, 10; ii, 23; Isa. xlii, 4-6—8; 16-19; xliv, 21-22; Jer. xxxi, 31-34; Heb. viii, 8; Ezek. xi, 16; xx, 35-37; Zech. x, 9).

(5) The chief of the nations, Ephraim-Israel (Jer. xxxi, 7).

(6) Manasseh-Israel to be "a great people," but Ephraim-Israel is to be "greater than he," and is to become "a fulness of nations" (Gen. xlviii, 19; Rom. xi, 25).

(7) Both of these immensely populous, as "the stars of Heaven" for multitude, as "the sand upon the seashore," as "dust of the earth," and "increasing as fishes do increase" (Gen. xxii, 17; xxvi, 4; xiii, 16; xlviii, 16; Isa. x, 22; liv, 1-3; Hos. i, 10).

(8) The people of the House of Israel were to be planted in a place of their own, move no more, and to be no more afflicted by "the children of wickedness," their enemies (2 Sam. vii, 10), and there to dwell alone; having been wanderers among the nations (Hos. ix, 17), from whence they have been sifted out (Amos ix, 9), and gathered out from among the nations (Ezek. xx, 35, 41; Hos. ii, 14; Jer. xxxi, 2).

(9) In "the islands of the sea" (Isa. xi, 11; xxiv, 15); "The isles afar off" (Jer. xxxi, 10; Isa. lxvi, 19); in the "North country" (Jer. iii, 18; xxxi, 7-8); also in the "West" (Hos. xi, 10), which is the "appointed place." This place is to become too limited in area for their immensely increasing numbers. "The place is too strait for me" (Isa. xlix, 20).

(10) Pushing the people together to the ends of the earth (Deut. xxxiii, 17).

(11) A great maritime people, whose "seed shall be in many waters," and the chief navigators of the world (Num. xxiv, 7; Psa. lxxxix, 25).

(12) Ephraim-Israel was to be unconquerable as a military power, their national emblems being the Lion and the Unicorn (Micah v, 8; Num. xxiii, 24; xxiv, 9; Deut. xxxiii, 17; Gen. xlix, 9).

(13) A means of blessing to all other nations (Micah v, 7; Gen. xii, 3). Blossoming and budding and filling the face of the world with fruit (Isa. xxvii, 6; xliii, 7-21; Matt. xxi, 43).

(14) God's witnesses to the world and His messengers of salvation to the heathen (Isa. xliii, 1, 10, 12, 21; xliv, 1, 2-8).

(15) Possessing a great heathen or non-Christian Empire (Psa. cxi, 6).

(16) Possessed of enormous wealth, and thereby enabled to lend to all nations, but to borrow of none; and is also to rule over many nations, but never to be ruled over by them (Deut. viii, 18; xv, 6).

(17) To possess "the ships of Tarshish," in order to be able to take back their brethren of Judah to Palestine (Isa. lx, 9).

(18) Observing the Sabbath, thus showing that they possess the "sign of the Sabbath," given only to Israel, as a sign between the Lord and the Children of Israel for ever, for a perpetual covenant (Exod. xxxi, 13, 16, 17; Ezek. xx, 12-20).

(19) So highly blessed above all people that they are to be known "as the seed whom the Lord hath blessed" (Isa. lxi, 9).

THE WITNESS OF ARCHÆOLOGY TO THE BIBLE.—III.

By A. M. Hodgkin.

(By kind permission of the Council of the Victoria Institute.)

The Witness of Egypt.

Fresh to-day, as when they left the hand of the painter, the frescoes on the ancient tombs of Egypt give us a complete picture of the life in that far-off time. The vividness of the colouring is a true reflection of the fascination that the stories of Joseph and of Moses had for us as little children. The whole atmosphere of Egypt was real and living to us. We could not have put it into words, but we felt we were in a different land from Canaan. Pharaoh's bakemeats, his cup, the great river, the rushes, the frogs, the locusts, the seven kine—fat-fleshed and well-favoured—the brick-making, the treasure cities, the granaries—all these made up the Egypt of our childhood's imagination, and they are true to life as revealed in the monuments and the frescoes of the past. There is hardly a sentence in the Bible account which we do not find reflected in some form through modern discovery. They answer to each other as the wax impression answers to the engraving on a seal.

The value of this sense of atmosphere, or imagery, in its witness to the truth of the Bible, is well brought out by Dr. Kyle. Imagery supplies flesh and blood and the breath of life to the picture, and something more—it supplies that which in a person we call the countenance. And when we find the imagery of a book correct, it goes a long way to recommend its trustworthiness by giving it a good countenance.

How could a writer living hundreds of years later, in a country many miles away, have drawn a picture so accurate in its minutest details? The account could only have been written by one who had lived amidst the scenes described. Moreover, the presence of a number of Egyptian words in the Pentateuch, without any explanation of their meaning, is evidence that those for whom it was written could understand Egyptian. The word "abrek," correctly translated "bow the knee" in the Bible, was long a puzzle to scholars as they assumed it to be a Hebrew word, and it seemed to bear no relation to Hebrew. But it is an Egyptian word, and therefore was familiar enough to the Israelites. It remains in the living speech of Egypt to-day; when the Arab wishes his camel to kneel he says "abrok!"

The fact that the throne of Egypt was occupied by an alien and Semitic race—the Hyksos, or Shepherd Kings—is not mentioned, for it was well known by the people for whom the account was written. But it explains several things which otherwise would have been unintelligible to us, such as the royal reception accorded to Abraham, and again to Isaac; it accounts for the mention that Potiphar, a high official, was an Egyptian; for Joseph's instruction to his brethren to tell the king that they were shepherds, and for the king making them rulers over his cattle.

The Egyptian colouring of the dreams is striking. Formerly the mention of wine was used to discredit Genesis, as the cultivation of the vine and its use in Egypt was denied by Herodotus. But the frescoes picture the vintage in all its details, even to the grapes being pressed into Pharaoh's cup as he holds it in his hand, just as recorded in the chief butler's dream.

The whole process of baking is also portrayed, down to the carrying of the "bakemeats" in baskets on the head. One record describes the chief baker as delivering more than a hundred thousand loaves at a time for the use of the royal household.

Pharaoh's dreams were exactly calculated to make the deepest impression upon him. The Nile was the life of Egypt; on its overflow depended the fertility of the land. The gods Osiris and Isis, symbolized by a bull and a cow, were associated with its rise and its overflow. They were sometimes represented as accompanied each by seven cows. Seven-eared wheat was well known in Egypt.

The plagues which were sent upon Pharaoh were directed against the gods of Egypt. The conflict was thus in reality a war between the powers of light and of darkness.

On the walls of a tomb at Thebes there is an accurate picture of such bondage as the Israelites endured. The features of the workmen seem to be Semitic. All the processes of brick-making are represented, including the Egyptian task-master with his rod, and he is saying to the workmen, "The stick is in my hand; be not idle."

Pharaoh's treasure cities, Pithom and Rameses, are mentioned on the monuments, and the remains of both have been discovered.

Each reference in later Bible history to kings of Egypt fits with the monarch known to be reigning there at that particular time.

Professor Petrie's discovery of the site of Tahpanhes, a fortified palace and outpost on the borders of Egypt, is a remarkable confirmation of Jeremiah's account of his forced flight thither. At the entrance of the fort Prof. Petrie found a large platform of brickwork, and he writes:—"This platform, or mastaba, is therefore unmistakably the brickwork, or pavement, which is at the entry of Pharaoh's house in Tahpanhes. Here the ceremony described by Jeremiah (of hiding the stones) took place before the chiefs of the fugitives assembled on the platform; and here Nebuchadnezzar spread his royal pavilion. The very nature of the site is precisely applicable to all the events."[17]

The predicted overthrow of this stronghold occurred so suddenly that Prof. Petrie found the kitchen with the jars in their accustomed place, and even the fishbones left in the scullery sink.

The Witness of the Hittites.

We are told in the Second Book of Kings (vii, 6), that when the Syrians were camped about Samaria, and the Lord sent a panic among them, "they said one to another, 'Lo, the King of Israel hath hired against us the kings of the Hittites, and the kings of the Egyptians, to come upon us.'"

At one time this statement was discredited as being altogether unhistorical. The Hittite Empire was unknown in history, and it was considered evidence of the greatest ignorance to compare the Hittites for a moment with the power of Egypt.

But by means of the hieroglyphics of Egypt and the cuneiform inscriptions, this lost empire has been brought to light. The pictures on the monuments have made us familiar with the Hittites, or Kheta as the Egyptians called them, with their ugly faces and peaked caps; with their snow boots, turned up at the toes, and their long fingerless gloves, witnessing eloquently to the cold of their northern home among the mountains of Kappadokia and Taurus; and their own sculptures, discovered in Asia Minor and various other regions, show that the Egyptians did them no injustice in their representation of their features.

This long-forgotten nation existed nineteen centuries before Christ, and lasted for more than a thousand years. It extended its sway from the Ægean in the west to Lake Van in the east, with Carchemish as its capital. It pushed southwards through Syria and Palestine and proved a formidable foe to Egypt. During the long reign of Rameses the Great there was a ceaseless struggle between the two nations, bringing disaster and ruin on the cities of Canaan, their land being devastated by the hostile armies. We can understand now why the Canaanites offered so slight a resistance to the invading Israelites.

When a lasting peace was concluded with Rameses, its conditions show that "the great king of the Hittites" treated on equal terms with the great king of Egypt, and the treaty was sealed by the marriage of the Pharaoh with the daughter of the Hittite king.[18]

[18] "The Hittites, The Story of a Forgotten Empire," Prof. Sayce.

"Hittites! Hittites!" With these words a young schoolmaster used to be greeted by the boys whenever he came into their classroom. For he had fired their imagination by stories of this great empire, recovered by the monuments from oblivion; and they were always eager to hear more. If only the children in our schools and the theological students in our colleges were taught the facts of archæology instead of the theories of "higher criticism," there would be fewer lives shipwrecked through the undermining of their faith in God's Word.

"In dealing with the history of the past," writes Professor Sayce, "we are confronted with two utterly opposed methods, one objective, the other subjective, one resting on a basis of veritable facts, the other on the unsupported and unsupportable assumptions of the modern scholar. The one is the method of archæology, the other of the so-called 'higher criticism.' Between the two the scientifically trained mind can have no hesitation in choosing."[19]

Eardmans, successor to Kuenen at Leyden, "definitely and absolutely breaks with the Wellhausen School of criticism, chiefly on the ground that archæology has discredited their critical viewpoint, and made impossible, indeed absurd, the historical atmosphere with which they surround the Old Testament. He says, 'To sum up in conclusion, I believe that an explanation of the text from the standpoint of the old Israelitic thought will lead to a reformation in Old Testament criticism."[20]

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

"The Lawyer and Banker and Central Law Journal" of the United States, in a review of the book by the Rev. Pascoe Goard, "The Law of the Lord, or the Common Law," says:—

"This work demonstrates that the 'Common Law' of the Anglo-Saxons is based on the laws given to Israel at Sinai. This book should be carefully studied in view of the unrest prevailing among the nations, and in the search by statements of all nations—for a system of government which will bring peace to the world. The book establishes that the basic principles of such a system are in existence, and can be applied to the benefit of all nations. It is of deep interest and should be read by every legal student."

Mr. John Leech, M.A., K.C., resumed his lectures on Prophecy on 15th inst., and will continue them until further notice on Wednesday afternoons at 3, at Headquarters. The speaker for Thursday evening next, at 7.30, is the Rev. E. A. Couldrey. Addresses were given last week by the Rev. Sparshott Johnson, M.A., and the Rev. Kenneth Dodds.

Mr. Garrison lectured with lantern pictures at Holloway on January 9th, and addressed a large meeting of our Barking Branch on 10th inst. Mr. L. W. Nock, the local President, in the chair. * * *

The Rev. Pascoe Goard and Mr. Herbert Garrison are addressing meetings in St. Peter's Hall, Hinton Road, Bournemouth, on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday next, January 20th, 21st and 22nd, afternoons at 3 and evenings at 8, and not on the dates wrongly given in our last issue.

The demand for our issue of December 28th was much greater than was anticipated; although we printed a good supply of extra copies, there have been hundreds of orders we are unable to fill. As some compensation we can supply pamphlets containing the speeches delivered at the Royal Albert Hall on December 19th last.

Miss Hamilton Hunter gave a very interesting address in the Masonic Hall, St. Leonards, on January 9th, on "The Coronation Stone and the Union Jack," to an audience which exceeded all expectations. The meeting was convened to inaugurate a local Branch of the Crusader Movement. Several of the clergy and ministers had kindly announced the meeting, and this swelled the attendance. Many present expressed their desire to join. A further meeting is to be held at an early date.

We have many letters from our readers in the United States offering suggestions in re the All-American Convention. Opinion is hardening that the Convention should be held in May instead of April, and it has therefore been decided that the dates shall be May 6th, 7th and 8th. The place will be announced later; the present consensus of opinion is that it should be in the neighbourhood of Chicago. In the meantime our friends in U.S.A. are advised to note the dates in their diaries.

The Rev. Joseph Gay gave two lectures for our Southampton Branch on January 8th, which the local Secretary reports were of a high spiritual tone, giving great satisfaction and pleasure to the audiences.

The oldest member of one of our Country Branches recently called on the local Secretary and gave a donation of five pounds to the work of the Federation. She is nearly 98 and is hale and hearty, and desires that we should know that British-Israel Truth and THE NATIONAL MESSAGE have been the greatest joy and comfort to her; she reads THE MESSAGE every Sunday morning, and it is her sermon. Her one infirmity—deafness—keeps her from Church. Sometimes she will attend the local B.-I. meetings, although unable to hear, but likes to be there and see others listening to the Truth we teach.

Mr. C. H. Corrin, President of the Liverpool Branch, lectured on January 9th on "The Kingdom of Heaven."

Mr. Renton Gibbs writes:—"It seems to me we did wrong in accepting the Mandate for Palestine from the League of Nations. When God gave the whole region from the river of Egypt to the Euphrates to Israel, it was absolute and without question. When God commanded Moses to take possession of Palestine, he was told to drive out the inhabitants, and no league was allowed to interfere.

"Can anything be clearer than that when General Allenby conquered the country in 1917, it was God's doing, and that Jerusalem was delivered 'as birds flying over'? The Turks understood they had to trek; they took it to be the will of God.

"Was not the whole Palestinian campaign British? No other nations took part in the operations. Was it not all Divine planning?

"We had but to accept the victory as the gift of God. General Allenby showed his sense of the sacredness of the entry into the Holy City by ignoring all pomp and marching in unarmed."

In The Mystery of the Great Pyramid, by Basil Stewart (demy 8vo, 6s. net), we have another acceptable volume from one who is a frequent writer on British-Israel subjects, and one who has the gift of making difficult things easy.

Study over a vast field has gone to the making of this new book, for we have a collation of all the various traditions as to the intentions of the builders of the various pyramids; these traditions are analysed, and the author shows that the Great Pyramid was the model for all others except for the upper passages which were sealed.

The pet theories of each particular school of thought as to the reason for the existence of the Great Pyramid are criticized, and, by careful analysis, are discarded, one by one, in favour of the true reason, that it is the "Bible in Stone."

The unique astronomical and terrestrial position of the Great Pyramid is explained in such a simple way, by word and diagram, as to be clearly understood by the merest tyro.

We also have various portions of the ritual of the Egyptian "Book of the Dead" lucidly explained with reference to the salient features of the Great Pyramid's passages, etc., while, earlier in the book, the author shows how this cult of Osiris prepared Egypt for the easy assimilation of Christianity.

The hieroglyph discovered over the inner entrance doorway, discussed by the author, adds mystery to this mysterious "Bible in Stone."—F. W.

A NEW PUBLICATION BY A NEW AUTHOR.

". . . the Bible is the only book that tells the whole truth about us, the only book to study for an elucidation of the world problems existing to-day. We are the descendants of the Ten Tribes of Israel. The DOCUMENTS of DANIEL

By
Rev. W. PASCOE GOARD

HANDSOME RED CLOTH BINDING.

GOLD LETTERING

. . . Many have gone into the details of prophecies and many more will doubtless do so. Our purpose is to show the order of the prophecies so clearly that it will be easy for the student of the Word to follow up the study of Daniel. By separating the various documents and taking note of their outlines and purposes, this object should be accomplished.

The Book of Daniel relates itself to the great sweep of that history which began with the call of Abraham. It pre-writes the period of that history contained in the "seven times" of prophecy. It will not be hard for the student to make or select a chronological table, and to relate to it the various documents of Daniel, and the events therein portrayed. The predictions have been so fully fulfilled that there can now be no question in the informed mind of the fact that Daniel in his prophecies does indeed deal with very concrete facts, most of which have in due course appeared on the pages of the world's history. So very far has this been the case that we are justified in assuming that all the remaining facts so indicated will appear in due time.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

THE END OF WAR—PSALM XLVI.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD, F.R.G.S.

"GOD is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. THEREFORE . . . . . ":—

Someone is speaking with a very great deal of confidence, basing his statement upon a fact personal in the experience of all those for whom he speaks. Manifestly the whole statement and argument will be meaningless unless the identity of the speaker and of those for whom he speaks can be ascertained. Who is the speaker? And for whom does he thus speak in the first person plural "our"?

We see later on that he distinguishes between himself and associates, and the "heathen." Of the heathen he speaks in the third person plural: "The heathen." This key furnishes the identification; the heathen, in the language of the Bible, are the non-Israel peoples who neither know nor serve Jehovah, the God and King of Israel. The heathen cannot sing "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble," for when they array themselves against Israel, God moves to defend Israel and to scatter their forces.

The Psalm is a perpetual one, incorporated in Israel's worship for all time. All down through the ages people have been singing it with heart and voice as an everyday fact. Some people sing it with understanding, conscious that it is one of the greatest statements of fact a nation can make; others simply sing it as an ancient form of worship with no practical modern application, but which was usable as an expression of spiritual devotion.

Let us see in which class we who use it in our national worship are to be found.

If, as so many hold, we have an "heathen" ancestry and are still a "Gentile" people, then we have no specific interest in this Psalm. But such is not the fact. Our ancestry is that of Israel. We are "Gentiles" only in the sense that St. Paul used the word, wrongly translated "Gentile," namely, "ethnos" in the Epistle to the Romans.

In using that word he made it abundantly clear that he was referring to ten-tribed Israel, writing towards the end of the first century A.D. The Apostle Paul thus indicates the standing of ten-tribed Israel in the New Testament, and in the Christian dispensation.

Every man who, in the name of scholarship, will be found questioning the latter statement will be answering the matter before he has examined it; for our statement is not one of opinion, but of very obvious fact.

The whole weight of the identity of the Celto-Saxon as Israel comes in at this point. That identity having been established as it has been, the important statement with which this Psalm begins is also established beyond cavil or question as made on behalf of ourselves.

As the Israel of prophecy we take up this statement of the forty-sixth Psalm and say with emphasis "THEREFORE":—

Having settled the question concerning identity, let us ask another question: Upon what ground is the statement made that "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble"?

Is this statement made on the assumption of God's uncovenanted mercy extended to us as an act of free grace? This might form a good basis for our faith, provided in penitence and trust we as a nation came to Him in supplication.

But could we presume to say that what we thus hope for is in very deed an established fact? Could we say, "God IS our refuge and strength"? The answer to this must be in the negative. Such statement must be made, not on the basis of our hope, nor even on the basis of our faith; it must have, as its basis, the COVENANTED WORD OF GOD.

Thus, as Israel, we go to our treasure-chest—the Bible—and from that treasure-chest we take the original charters and covenants which God made UNCONDITIONALLY, and for all time, with our forefathers, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, who were the charter members of our family. We next take from that treasure-chest the contingent covenants which God made with our nation, established by Himself, at Sinai, circa 1496 B.C.

If, for instance, we read the twenty-sixth chapter of Leviticus, and chapters v–vii of Deuteronony, we shall find an outline of the covenants God made with our nation.

We next take from that treasure-chest the unconditional covenant which God made with the House of David, as recorded in 2 Samuel vii and the thirty-third chapter of Jeremiah.

We finally take from that treasure-chest the new covenant made with the House of Israel, as recorded in Jer. xxxi and Heb. viii.

In those covenants, upon certain conditions as far as the national covenants are concerned, God undertook to defend, maintain and keep Israel under all possible circumstances.

At the time of David, who penned and sang such Psalms as this, Israel was walking under the blessing of the national covenant. Later, from 740 B.C. to A.D. 1800 (circa), Israel walked under the punitive clauses of the national covenant. But since A.D. 1800 we, who are Israel of the ten tribes, have again come under the blessings of the national covenant as an act of sovereign grace, which act of grace is provided for in the terms of the covenant—"I WILL be their God, and THEY SHALL be my people."

So we say with as much assurance as the Psalmist, stating a matter of covenanted fact, "God IS our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. THEREFORE:—

Will not we fear, though":

Now the Psalmist faces certain great national and international upheavals which he describes as the removal of the earth and the carrying of the mountains into the midst of the sea, and the sea itself disturbed by the violence of the removal.

The Psalmist is using upheavals in the inanimate world to illustrate great commotions in the sociological and international world.

The earth is a term sometimes used to indicate the planet on which we dwell; at other times it is used to indicate the people who dwell on the planet. It is in the latter sense that the word is here used; though all the inhabitants of the earth should be swept by international commotion, and removed from their dwelling-place, "Though the earth be removed."

The word "mountain" is used in a geographical sense in the Bible, but it is also used to denote the central government of the people or nation. Thus:—"A high mountain and eminent, even the mountain of the height of Israel" to indicate the throne and government of Israel.

It is in this sense that the word is used in this Psalm—"though the mountains"—or government—"be carried into the midst of the sea."

What was it the Psalmist foresaw but the coming commotions which should sweep over the whole of Central and Western Asia, which was then the home of the world civilization; and should send both the peoples and the governments moving elsewhere? Because "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble," even these elements of disturbance would furnish no cause for ultimate fear on the part of Israel.

The removal of Israel and Judah from Palestine took place. The migrations of Israel, and the return of the Jews to Palestine, followed. These things caused disturbance and furnished cause for individual fear; but in the national consciousness—which causes even the dying patriot to rejoice in a cause which has been successfully defended, even at the cost of his life—he found no cause for fear in all these things. The nation should survive and ultimately triumph.

The mountains were removed. That is to say, the centres of government and the throne of David were removed and were literally "carried into the midst of the sea," in the Isles of Britain. The prophet Isaiah, writing during one of such periods of historic upheaval, when "the earth was removed," namely, during the Assyrian campaign against Israel and Judah, sang of this movement as follows:—

> "When thus it shall be in the midst of the land among the people, there shall be as the shaking of an olive tree, and as the gleaning grapes when the vintage is done.
> They shall lift up their voice, they shall sing for the majesty of the Lord, they shall cry aloud from the sea.
> Wherefore glorify ye the Lord in the fires, even the name of the Lord God of Israel in the isles of the sea.
> From the uttermost part of the earth have we heard songs, even glory to the righteous."—Isa. xxiv, 13-16.

Though the waters, the symbol of the people, roar and be troubled, and though the mountains—governments—shake with the swelling thereof.

All that has happened of calamity, and of removal, history makes clear. Yet, in spite of all this, and we are now towards the end of the history foreseen in this paragraph of Holy Writ, the nation has been preserved, and is standing in its appointed place among the nations of the earth at this advanced day of history.

"A river the streams whereof shall make glad the city of God, the holy of the tabernacles of the Most High."

We have left out of the quotation the words in italics which, because they are in that type, we know were supplied by the translators to cause the verse to show that which they considered it to mean. We follow the actual translations with every consideration. We are at liberty to dispense with the supplied words.

The whole of this Psalm is about the people of God and His relationship to them. "City" is a word which means the dwellings, streets, defences, etc., in which people dwell—"city" is also a word to denote the people who dwell and function in such a "city" of residences. The "city of God" here is the organized capital of God's people—not their geographical dwelling. "The city" and "the river" are symbols used in pursuit of the same theme. The river which shall make glad the city of God is the river of His people, who, beginning in Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, flow in their generations down through the ages, and in their migrations on through the continents and lands, until they have traversed all the ages and have compassed and traversed all the continents and lands.

Wherever that river has gone, it has carried the knowledge of God and the light of righteousness and truth.

"God is in the midst of her, she shall not be moved. God shall help her, and that right early." That is to say, in the capital of His people wherever that may be. It is always at the centre of the Davidic Administration.

"The heathen raged—the kingdoms were moved."

How prophetic this was, how historic it is. The heathen, Assyrian and Babylonian, raged, and the kingdoms of Israel and of Judah were moved. "He uttered His voice. The earth melted." When the movement of the kingdoms was accomplished, then the rage of the heathen was caused to cease, as at the court of Nebuchadnezzar, as on the night of the feast of Belshazzar, as at the court of Darius, and of Cyrus.

But these have not been the only occasions when the heathen have raged. They have not been the only occasions when the kingdoms have been moved. God has used the heathen again and again to press the people of Israel onward in their appointed migrations and task.

Now the migrations are nearly ended. Now the raging of the heathen has come near to the end. Yet as we listen, we still hear the raging going on from Moscow, from Egypt, from India, and from many another quarter. Still they are crying concerning the rule of the House of David, "Let us break their bands asunder, and cast their cords from us." Still "He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh, the Lord shall have them in derision; then shall He speak unto them in His wrath and vex them in His sore displeasure."

The Psalmist visualizes the end of the whole matter. In his preview the river has reached the ocean. The heathen have ceased their raging. The governments, or mountains, shall no more be removed nor moved; the mission of Israel has been accomplished, and the time of peace is come.

This is still a prophetic vision. There are some days of raging of the heathen, and of melting of the earth, to take place before the day is fully arrived. Still it is near, and it is well to see what is in store for us and the world.

What is it? PEACE, so sure, and so well established, that the only attitude of mind is wonder at the madness of the days of war when men struggled madly for the privilege of attempting to do that which only the wisdom and power of the Lord God Almighty could accomplish, namely, to rule in the earth.

This triumphant period of peace is ushered in by the triumphant shout, "THE LORD of Hosts is with us, the God of Jacob is our refuge." Seeing that this is true of every person and of every people who are under the Administration of the throne of David; and seeing that little by little the nations of the earth are seeking refuge under the shadow of that throne, the cry will soon become universal in the earth. Then there will be left no heathen. All nations will own the Rule of the Lord, and all nations will know and worship Him.

Visualizing the coming of that state of affairs in the earth, the Lord issues a call to a wonderful spectacle.

"COME, BEHOLD THE WORKS OF THE LORD, WHAT DESTRUCTIONS HE HATH MADE IN THE EARTH." The Authorized Version says "desolations." The Prayer Book Version says "destructions." We believe that the context shows the latter to be the rendering which is in line with the full text of the sentence and paragraph.

Come and see . . . What? The destructions He hath made in the earth. What has He destroyed? A list of the things destroyed is given:—

1. Wars. 2. The bow. 3. The spear. 4. The chariot. These are the things the Lord has destroyed, in the vision of the prophet, and He has destroyed them because His Kingdom has become universal in the earth.

What a pile of useless lumber is the accumulation of war equipment in time of peace!

Mark, however—mark well—it must be the Lord Who does these things. These are His destructions in the earth. And these destructions are made because of the fact that the Lord has subdued all nations by the Gospel of His Kingdom, and by the actual establishment of His Kingdom, that is to say, of His national rule in the earth.

Men are trying, by the destruction of the weapons of war, to banish war at this time. Ecclesiastics and laymen are busily preaching the doctrine. It is not so easily done, gentlemen all. If we would banish war, or, rather, bring about that condition of things in the earth that will justify our Lord in doing so, it must be, on our part, by preaching to all nations the Gospel of His Kingdom—not by denying it, and when "this Gospel of the Kingdom" has been "preached as a witness to all nations," we have the word of our Lord "Then shall the end come."

Weapons of all kinds, from the ancient bow and the flint spear, which, as the Prayer Book Version has it, shall be "knapped" asunder—as the workers in flint are "knapping" flints in England to the present day—to the modern fleet, such as the late German fleet, and army, such as the armies of the Powers in the late war, shall be exhibited in that pile of antique war material. All these are piled in a great exhibition of useless relics of a devilish game which was introduced into the earth, and forced even upon the Lord of Hosts, through the agency and personal leadership of Satan. What a pile of ancient and modern trophies!

And now comes the welcome command to the nations of the earth:—

"BE STILL, AND KNOW THAT I AM GOD: I will be exalted among the heathen, I will be exalted in the earth."

Thus after the storm of ages of war, the earth, at the command of the God of Jacob, is at peace for ever.

Well may the Psalmist shout with gladness, as he foresees and triumphs in that day, "THE LORD OF HOSTS IS WITH US, THE GOD OF JACOB IS OUR REFUGE."

NEW YEAR MESSAGES.

DR. HORACE SWORDER.

THE Psalmist says, "If the foundations be destroyed, what can the righteous do?" What, indeed! No observant person can hide from himself the fact that even in this highly favoured land the foundations are getting sadly undermined.

I am firmly persuaded that the dissemination of British-Israel Truth is the best we can do in the way of securing the foundations.

We are thankful to know that in the past year we have helped in ever-increasing measure this glorious work.

Believing as we do in the sure Word of prophecy, we have not the scintilla of a doubt but that "the Lord will not cast off His people, neither will He forsake His inheritance."

MR. J. ARTHUR JUTSUM.

I have read that Mr. James Douglas, the journalist, has expressed his belief:

1. That the time is ripe in England for another such evangelical revival as John Wesley's preaching aroused.
2. That if such another as John Wesley appeared, the people would flock to hear him.
3. That in the fullness of time there is always a John Wesley born whose "Parish is the World."

These conditions exist in our land to-day, and men arise before my vision who, by God's grace, are chosen to fulfil them.

Truly it may be said of our great leaders, the World is their Parish, for their writings on the "Gospel of the Kingdom" are arousing people to the ends of the earth. As John Wesley revived the doctrines of "Justification by Faith" and "The Witness of the Holy Spirit," thereby bringing new life into the Churches; so these are throwing fresh "Light on the Old Paths" by reviving Christ's own teaching on the "Gospel of the Kingdom."

These gifted men stand for the same great Truths, and it is the duty of all who have been spiritually enlightened by their labours to strengthen their hands by supplying the Federation with the "sinews of war" for a great Forward Movement, which shall awaken the English-speaking peoples to their destiny as God's chosen "servant nation."

LADY STANLEY.

As one of the many thousands of readers of our Magazine, I am writing these few words to say that I have been influenced more or less all my life by the view that the Anglo-Saxon race is the Israel of the Bible; and as time goes on this Truth grows and expands under the guidance and teaching of the leaders of the British-Israel-World Federation.

All through the war it was a sustaining help and stay, and it is the same now. We can look up and beyond and know that our Heavenly Father will protect and draw His "backsliding children" to Himself and deliver them from the power of the "Evil One," through the Second Advent of the Redeemer and King—when they will "all be taught of God," Who will "heal their backslidings" and make them in word and in deed His true "serving nation."

REV. JAMES MOUNTAIN, D.D.

During the forty years or more that I have been a British-Israelite, I have always found its teaching comforting, illuminating, instructive and inspiring.

When, some years ago, God's B.-I. call came specially to me, it was with a trembling heart that I answered, "Here am I, Lord; send me!" It has been happy work, both by pen and voice; for I am convinced that the message of our Federation is God's gracious, clear and definite message to our Empire to-day in defence of His fidelity, the Bible as His Word, and the Second Advent of our blessed Lord.

Since last March I have been laid-aside by weakness from all public work. I have felt as St. Paul must have felt when he was a prisoner in Rome. But it was while there, as a prisoner, that he wrote several of his Epistles. And, possibly, the Lord has imprisoned me in my study in order that I may complete my new B.-I. book, which I hope in a few months to lay at His feet as the concentrated gift of my 86 years of life.

May God bless and sustain our leaders in the years of conflict which are yet before us; and, ere long, may Jericho's stone walls of ignorance and prejudice fall down at the trumpet blast of Truth. Then will the sneers of incredulity give place to the greetings of our returning Redeemer's voice: "Come, ye blessed of My Father!"

THE REV. COLONEL A. D. SETON, B.Sc.

A Happy New Year to all at No. 6, and may God prosper the good work they are doing! I am thankful to say that the "little grain of mustard seed" that I have been enabled to sow in this Diocese is slowly growing into a plant, young but healthy. My own country congregations are largely believers, and I am encouraged by more and more enquiries from outside. I never lose a chance of judicious pulpit propaganda, and intend (D.V.) to make the best of such opportunity when preaching at the Cathedral shortly.

I breathed a prayer of thankfulness, when reading the Lessons from Isaiah last Sunday, for the revelation of B.-I. Truth which has turned them for me, from more or less unintelligible, oriental hyperbole, into the wondrous message they convey. Would, indeed, that our people's, and most of all our clerics', hearts and understandings were more open to receive it!

MR. A. GRESHAM COPELAND, President, Stoke-on-Trent Branch.

Pray that God will cleanse and restore us, His people, refreshing our memories by reading the 36th and 37th chapters of Ezekiel, and knowing that we shall receive because it is God's declared purpose and His will that we ask. Let us pray unitedly that He will breathe into us the Spirit of life that we may live, that He will set this nation and company of nations on fire with His Holy Spirit that we may return to His ways and keep His Commandments, that His Name may be sanctified in us, and that as a nation we may witness that He is God.

We all know the story of Elijah and the prophets of Baal, and how by fire Jehovah demonstrated that He was God. Have you ever considered the wonderful way He is demonstrating in these days that He is God by the development of prophecy into history, as shown by British-Israel Truth? It may not be quite so dramatic, but surely suited to the times and in no way less supernatural.

The times seem to me to have many analogies; let us be up and doing.

AN ADDRESS BY REV. T. H. WHITEHOUSE.

A STRIKING résumé of the world situation to-day was given by Rev. T. H. Whitehouse at a meeting of the Walsall Branch of the British-Israel-World Federation recently. He referred at the outset to the great increase of population since the war, and the fact that vast spaces in the world had been entrusted to the British nation—spaces that needed development at the hands of man, and yet our people would not go out into them as they might. Unfortunately, the largest growths of population were seen in the most undesirable surroundings, viz., the "slum" districts, while the residential quarters were sparsely populated. Turning to other lands, China was much in the public eye to-day with her 400 millions of human beings. China was over-populated, and the wonder was how much longer this could go on without, as it were, boiling over. This was the "yellow peril"—economic rather than military, but none the less a peril. As an illustration of this, the speaker mentioned the migration of something like two millions of the population of North China into Manchuria, usually without preparation, plan or resources of any kind, so that the road was lined with the bleached bones of those who fell, unable to continue the march.

China to-day, he said, was in political chaos. India with her 300 millions was the scene of political aspirations, seeking a place among the nations of the earth.

Then there was Russia, with perhaps 167 millions seeking to impose her will on all the other nations of the earth.

All these conditions were such as the world had never before witnessed, and had all come about in less than 25 years.

The question arose, Would the earth continue to provide food sufficient for the constantly increasing population? A further question arising out of the universal demand for education was, Whither was that education leading? All kinds of education, the lecturer feared, were leading mainly in the wrong direction, viz., materialistic; how to make money, how to have most pleasure, how to obtain the greatest power over others. The result of such materialism was seen in the elimination of God, tending to grossness and profligacy both in literature and in practice, and leading eventually to racial suicide. It was not the child races of the earth in whom this tendency was so marked, but in the more developed and more highly civilized nations, and here was the most serious aspect of the question and the greatest danger.

The lecturer then went on to speak of different governmental factors which had emerged from the welter of the world war. Dealing first with Italy, he reminded his hearers that, not long before the collapse of the Central Powers, Italy was on the verge of giving way, and was talking about a separate peace. Some of our men had to be detached from other fronts and were sent to stiffen the Italian troops. The principal danger had come from within; the "Reds" had largely succeeded in their propaganda amongst the Army of Italy. At that time there was in their ranks a young man named Mussolini. He soon manifested qualities of leadership, and gathered followers around him who became known as "Black Shirts," or Fascisti. His influence and power developed rapidly and by various stages he soon became Dictator, the master and virtual king of Italy. He was one of the governmental factors emerging from the world war. What were his aims? He seemed to be dreaming of the restoration of the ancient Roman Empire on a scale never dreamed of by the Roman Emperors of old, with the Mediterranean as an Italian lake. Such a dream was dangerous to ourselves. What about our "Gates"? What about the right of way to our Eastern Empire? These things would have to be taken into consideration. Mussolini had been asking his Fascisti if they were ready to follow him implicitly, even to war and to death if necessary. What did this mean?

While Mussolini had been dreaming and talking of war and conquest, the two wings of the Anglo-Saxon race had been planning for peace. Our Prime Minister and the President of the United States had met and had laid plans for the reduction of armaments. Invitations were being issued for the five great Powers to meet and to consider these suggestions—Britain, U.S.A., France, Japan and—Italy. Italy could not afford to remain outside, but we must take account of Mussolini and his declared plans. What about the Pope? Since 1870, when the Papal States were finally absorbed by the kingdom of Italy, he had retired to the Vatican, and remained within its boundaries until a few months ago. Not because of anything relating to the Church or the Faith, but because he had lost his crown, his kingly power over those Papal States which used to rank on a par with other nations. Now we learn that a reconciliation had taken place between the Vatican and the Quirinal, and that the Pope had a small State with his own government; he was a king once more. Let it not be forgotten that what the Papacy was 400 years ago that it was to-day, so far as opportunity allowed: Semper eadem. The earthly crown gave the Pope the right to a seat on the League of Nations if he cared to claim it. Should Mussolini and the Pope decide to seize the ancient Roman Empire, including important places now in the British Empire, what would happen? The Pope could issue a Bull ordering all Roman Catholics to rally to his standard! Truly a masterstroke to divide the nations! Remembering that Mussolini was an Imperial and imperious Dictator, would he stop at anything in time of stress? Mussolini, the speaker said, had found many imitators; Dictatorship seemed to have found suitable soil in the Latin races—Spain, Portugal, Turkey,

Digitized by Google

Poland, and now Austria were all ruled by Dictators to-day. This idea of government had emerged from the welter of the world war.

There was another governmental factor to be considered: like, yet unlike the last described; the one was brought about with the consent of the people, the other was without consent; the lecturer referred to the Soviet principle. Russia, he remarked, was terribly unprepared for war in 1914—far less so than we were in fact, but she came in. Her doing so, happily for us, blocked the way of the Central Powers to our Eastern Empire, which otherwise would have been open to our enemies. But she was short of everything—arms, ammunition, equipment of all kinds, and we had to supply them. Our need, too, was terrible at that time, for there was a serious shortage of shells and other necessaries. Kitchener's ill-fated effort to reach Russia in the Hampshire, that he might hearten and encourage her, showed that it was impossible to reach her, for German mines were sown too thickly for supplies to get through, and Russia had to go. Transferring large forces from the Western front Germany struck at Russia in her helplessness and soon she was down and out. Forced to sign the Treaty of Brest-Litovsk, forced to get rid of the Imperial Government, the whole Imperial family had to go, and we know the awful tragedy of their fate. Kerenski, the first President of the Union of Russian Soviets, proved too weak for the position and was superseded after six months by Lenin and Trotsky, and Russia became "Red." The form of government was allied to blasphemous blatant atheism. The first Christmas after the government was transferred to Moscow was celebrated by the churches being turned into theatres, where, on stages erected in the sanctuaries, prostitutes and others performed blasphemous pantomimes of the Gospel stories, and street processions were organized in which effigies of Christ were exposed to ridicule. War was thus declared against God. Something like 200 Bishops, thousands of priests and a million and three-quarters of the people were massacred at the setting up of Soviet Russia. It might be said that we had no right to interfere with the internal affairs of any nation, but when attempts were made to infect the people of our Empire, with intent to debauch them, we had every right to resist. Soviet Moscow was typical of the principle of world degradation through world revolution. All idea of civilization, morality and religion was to go, to make room for Soviet Moscow. There was no doubt that Soviet principles had caused disaffection in India, Africa, China and other countries, bringing industrial strife in all sections both here at home and in our Dominions.

So both the Dictator principle and the Soviet principle seemed to think that the British Empire must go.

But there was yet another factor emerging recently. Through war debts every nation had become fettered to the United States of America, which had financed them. America now seemed to think that if she "bled" all nations till their debts were paid they would have nothing left to fight with; thus would world peace be secured.

Again, France looked across the Atlantic and in the person of M. Briand saw an assembly of 46 States living at peace with each other, with no interior tariff walls, but with a stiff tariff wall all around them. He seemed to have thought—"Why not a United States of Europe?" Level all interior fiscal barriers; have one currency; and put a heavy tariff against the rest of the world. Surely a tremendous scheme in the interests of Peace. But—would Britain join? If so, would she drag in the whole of the Empire, or would she drop it? If she declined to join she would have to put her house in order, for the United States of Europe would include France, Italy, Germany, Austria, Russia, and so on, and they would be against her. Yet another scheme had been put forth during the last few weeks. Lord Beaverbrook had been thinking along similar lines, but in the direction of Britain and her overseas Dominions; why should not they become an economic unit, abolishing all barriers except those around the Empire?

These various factors summed up, on broad lines, the world situation to-day, and gave us as British citizens food for profound thought.

As students of prophecy we saw that the Bible spoke of a period of Gentile rule, during which God's kingdom, His "kingdom of priests," should undergo training for 2,520 years; that this period should extend down to these days in which we live. Nebuchadnezzar's image symbolized these great Gentile Powers. The extremity of the image with its ten toes was smitten and destroyed by the "Stone cut out of the mountain without hands"—the Stone Kingdom of Israel-Britain. Briand wanted a united Europe, which, including France, would probably consist of ten nations or countries, perhaps with Mussolini or his successor at the head as supreme Dictator. Then, it would seem, it would fall to Britain's lot to destroy them. C. L.

THE OPTIMISM OF HOLY SCRIPTURE.

BY DANIEL FARMER.

NO attentive reader of the Bible can fail to note the wonderful cheerfulness and hopefulness of its message. Indeed, it may be truly said that it alone amongst the sacred books of the great world religions has an optimistic outlook. Eastern religions are pessimistic, they talk of the "Golden Age" that was. Holy Scripture draws a glorious picture of the future, and confidently adds: "It shall come to pass in the last days" (Isa. ii, 2).

Buddhism and Hinduism are profoundly hopeless in their outlook, and preach a joyless submission to the inevitable. Eastern philosophy is embodied in the saying: "It is better to stand still than to walk, better to sit than to stand, better to lie down than to sit, better to die than to live." How different to the cheerfulness of the Great Teacher of the Christian Faith, with His oft-repeated "Be of good cheer" and "Be not afraid, believe only." The moment we open God's Word we are confronted with the Personality of Goodness—God. A few verses down we find that "the morning," not the evening, is the completion of the day. No sooner does the shadow of sin and death fall upon the fair landscape than a rainbow of hope spans the whole future, and a promise of complete and ultimate triumph is given (Gen. iii, 15). So that :—

" He who 'midst the coarsest sounds
Still listens for the finest,
Shall hear this noisy world go round
To music the divinest."

Now in the age-long struggle between right and wrong the forces of evil " wear out the saints " (Dan. vii, 25), who, unless Divinely supported, must succumb, for " the time is long " (Dan. x, 1).

This feeling of weariness and despondency is always accentuated as an age or dispensation closes in. Noah must have felt it. In the walk to Emmaus we hear it given expression to (Luke xxiv), and as this period in which our lot is cast draws to a close, we need to lay to heart our Lord's admonition to " Lift up our heads " (Luke xxi, 28), remembering :—

" There's a Hand on the rudder that will not flinch,
There's no fear in the Pilot's face,
As He guides the world like a boat in a storm
O'er the rocking seas of space."

Roman history informs us that on the eve of a great battle, about the issue of which the soldiers were talking with apprehension, Julius Cæsar, looking in at a tent, exclaimed : " I am Julius Cæsar, how many do I count for ? " Under the inspiration of that presence and question his men went forth to victory.

Now of all Christian people British-Israelites have the greatest cause for cheerfulness. Possessing a far better, happier and more reasonable interpretation of both Old and New Testaments than is to be found in any other school of religious thought, they are able to face a set of circumstances in the working out of God's great purpose which, while often causing a feeling of depression, yet need never cause defeat, or even dismay. Believing in the integrity and inspiration of the Bible, they stand upon " The Impregnable Rock of Holy Scripture "—and although, like the dear old Christian lady, they at times may have to confess to a feeling of trembling, nevertheless they boldly assert that the Rock never trembles. From this vantage-ground they look with a feeling of equal vexation and amusement upon the Lilliputians who, with their Continentally-made peashooters, are attacking this Rock of Divine Truth, realizing that no matter who claims to upset it, it is always left the right side up. No matter how often it is " exploded," blown up, it comes down upon its feet again, and runs through the world faster than ever.

The heads of all these hammers come off on this anvil.

" How many anvils have you had," asked I, " to wear and batter all this hammer so ? "

" Just one," the blacksmith said, with twinkling eye. " The anvil wears the hammers out, you know."

This Book goes to many funerals, but never has one of its own.

But not only have British-Israelites a general belief in God's Word, such as may be possessed by any evangelical person or body of believers, but in the careful study of that part of it which relates to the choice by God of one—and only one—particular race (Amos iii, 2) for the carrying out of His purposes, in connection with which His Son came ; by this study they gain such a clear, rational and orderly view of the Divine procedure, that the conviction of an unseen Personality moving in the affairs of men becomes so sure as to dispel all doubt and silence every fear.

What, then, do British-Israelites believe ?

In a sentence, we believe that the Anglo-Saxon peoples are the major part of the Israel race, divided into two sections during the reign of its fourth king (1 Kings xii), and that upon the failure of the southern section—viz., the Jews—to recognize and respond to the claims of Christ, the " Kingdom," or national witness to Him, was transferred to us—Israel—under another name (Isa. lxv, 15), and that we are during this age that " other nation " to whom our Lord referred (Matt. xxi, 43).

That " Nation " was the Ten-tribed Race
By God Himself for this prepared (Luke ii, 32) ;
If Judah should reject His grace (John i, 11),
It should by Israel (Britain) be declared (Isa. lxvi, 19).

Now, if this conclusion is correct, as we believe it to be, it gives occasion for the profoundest optimism, for we are part of the one and only nation of which Scripture declares " it shall never be destroyed " (Dan. ii, 44).

History bears witness to this fact : Rome, Pagan or Imperial, tried to destroy us, but failed. Rome Papal has endeavoured to do the same, both politically and religiously, with a similar lack of success, and will herself come to grief on this " Stone Kingdom " in the near future. All the would-be despots of Europe have finally been broken on Britain, including the German Kaiser. " I have a fixed faith, and unalterable, that between England and America lies the future of the world," said Lord Reading.

Next, we recognize that within this Stone Kingdom there is an elect company, which during this age is called in Scripture " The Church." In this body is included " all that in every place call upon the Name of Jesus Christ our Lord, both theirs and ours " (1 Cor. i, 2), they being by faith " Abraham's seed " (Gal. iii, 29), and " All one in Christ Jesus."

This " Church " our Lord declares is built upon His Divine Personality (Matt. xvi, 18), against which no hostile force can prevail.

" See the Gospel Church secure
And founded on the Rock."

Here is a cause for optimism indeed. True, Churches may fail, but not the Church. Do not let us confuse the scaffolding with the building. The removal of the former, which we witness around us, is not a sign of failure, but that the " Building " (Eph. ii, 21) approaches completion. You cannot drown a man whose head remains above water, nor can this " Body " (of believers) be destroyed as long as the Head is above (Col. i, 18), however " cast down " in experience they may be (2 Cor. iv, 9).

Further, we believe that the Race we belong to has been, is, and will be so preserved and purified in a national sense as to be the principal agent which God will use, from the human standpoint, for the bringing in of that better order as set forth in Holy Scripture ; and recognizing the high honour conferred upon us we call upon the English-speaking peoples to respond by laying aside that which discredits the national life and hinders the bringing in of that glorious Kingdom.

" Shall one great temple rise to Thee,
Thy Church one broad humanity.
White flowers of love its walls shall climb,
Sweet bells of peace shall ring its chime ;
Its days shall all be holy time.
The hymn, long lost, shall then be heard,
The music of the world's accord.
Confessing Christ, Earth's rightful Lord,
That song shall swell from shore to shore,
One faith, one love, one hope restore
The seamless robe that Jesus wore."

The need of both Church and State to-day is the upward look. " Look now toward heaven," said the Lord to the father of our race " (Gen. xv, 5).

When Peter looked down he went down (Matt. xiv, 30).

The Lancet said : " Sunlight is fatal to germs, it is one of the most important disinfectants known."

" Wondrous is the strength of cheerfulness," wrote Carlyle. " Altogether past calculation is its power of endurance."

" Shall we get in ? " asked a timid passenger on a small steamer endeavouring in a stormy sea to enter the harbour. " I don't know," was the reply, " this is a leaky old tub, and we may go down ; not only that, but our boilers are all wrong, and we may go up any minute. Anyhow, we are going on."

Individual Christian, Church of Christ, Nation of Israel, we shall not go down in despair, not up in disorder, but ON to great consummation foretold by Him Who knows the end from the beginning (Acts xv, 18).

" So He bringeth them unto their desired haven " (Ps. cvii, 30).

"PEACE : AND THERE IS NO PEACE."—II.

By Herbert W. Wadge, B.A., M.D.

Examples of Defence Wars and Sacrifice.

Is it to be said then that we should prepare for war ? For aggressive war, No ; decidedly, No.

But in the case of trouble threatening our country, or those depending on us for protection, we must be ready for defence, even if we have to keep armies, and to build cruisers, and to develop aerial forces. We must be prepared to defend our own. Can we imagine a man, a real man, who would not protect his wife and family in time of danger, even if he had to use a rifle in doing so ? Can we find a well-ordered city where there is a police force, armed either actually or potentially for the protection of the lives and property of its citizens ? Did the American nation do away with slavery by moral suasion, or did they abolish that iniquity by the sacrifice of blood in a war within their own family ? Did the British nation break up the traffic in African inhumanity by treaty, or was it done by their Navy, sacrificing the life blood of their sons in doing so ? Did Queen Elizabeth protect her kingdom and the civil and religious liberties of her people from the Spanish Armada and the invasion of the Catholic forces of Charles V by submissive bargaining, or did she do all she could in the way of defence with her small Navy and her patriotic subjects, Providence assisting ? Did King John sign the Magna Charta because he was persuaded it was good for the people of England, or was it because the barons and people were armed and so compelled him to sign it ? Did King Alfred agree to subjugation by the Danes when his kingdom was so badly crushed, or did he rally his forces and steadily, if slowly, drive them back by force of arms and thus re-establish his kingdom and the rights of his people more securely than ever ?

Liberties Secured by Sacrifice.

All down through the ages our race has had to fight and shed blood in defence of our rights, our liberties, our homes, our religion, and also for the liberties of the slaves, the down-trodden, and the persecuted of many lands and many races. It is true that our wars of defence have not all been fought on our own shores, e.g., our defeat of the Spanish Armada, our crushing of Napoleon's power, and our recent shattering of the armies and navies of Kaiser William. Nevertheless, these terrific struggles, though fought in many lands, were essentially wars of defence. And always in defending our rights we must do so by sacrifice. Much as we deplore the loss of life, there is yet no means of defending our property and our lives, our religion and our liberties, except by force, which involves the shedding of blood. Our personal salvation was not obtained for us without sacrifice, but it was purchased by the shedding of the blood of our blessed Saviour, Jesus Christ, on the Cross for our sakes. God has given our race great powers and responsibilities in the world, and we must not surrender these powers or fail in our responsibilities even though it involves the upkeep of great defence forces and the possibility of the sacrifice of life.

Christ's Illustration.

Jesus Himself also showed the necessity of defence in a military illustration which He used to explain one of His teachings. Luke xi, 21, 22 : " When the strong man fully armed guardeth his own court, his goods are in peace : but when a stronger than he shall come upon him, and overcome him, he taketh from him his whole armour wherein he trusted and divideth the spoils." By this illustration of Christ's we see that we must not only be strong, and we must not only be fully armed, but we must defend that which is ours. And in spite of the popular cry for the abolition of war, this is the attitude of all Governments at present. The English-speaking nations have reduced their armies since the Great War, until now they are actually less than they were in 1914 before the war. They cannot reduce further and be able to protect themselves, i.e., protect their own countries and also the countries within their dominions.

The Peace Pact of Paris.

On the 27th August, 1928, the Peace Pact of Paris, more familiarly known as the Kellogg-Briand Pact, or the Kellogg Peace Treaty, was signed by fifteen nations ; and since that date it has been signed by nearly all the nations of the world, including all the large and important ones. The essence of the Treaty is contained in the following words of the contract :—" The High Contracting Parties solemnly declare in the names of their respective peoples that they condemn recourse to war for the settlement of international controversies, and renounce it as an instrument of national policy in their relations with one another. The High Contracting Parties agree that the settlement or solution of all disputes or conflicts of whatever origin these may be which may arise among them, shall never be sought except by pacific means."

However, they did not renounce defensive war. On the contrary, several nations, in signing the Pact, made definite reservations, pointing out specifically that they must be free to protect their dominions from assault. Mr. Kellogg, the then Secretary of State for the United States, in discussing the Pact, specifically stated that:—"Every nation is free at all times and regardless of the Treaty provisions to defend its territory from attack or invasion, and it alone is competent to decide whether circumstances require recourse to war in self-defence." Though this statement is made in general terms, it is tantamount to a reservation by the American Secretary of State on behalf of the United States.

Great Britain has been assailed for making any reservation at all, though in fact her reservation is to all intents and purposes nothing more than that which is contained in Mr. Kellogg's statement. Sir Austen Chamberlain, the then Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs of Great Britain, in a letter to Mr. Kellogg, outlined Great Britain's position as follows:—"The language of Article I as to the renunciation of war as an instrument of national policy renders it desirable that I should remind your Excellency that there are certain regions of the world the welfare and integrity of which constitute a special interest for our peace and safety. His Majesty's Government have been at pains to make it clear in the past that interference with these regions cannot be suffered. There protection against attack is, to the British Empire, a measure of self-defence. It must be clearly understood that His Majesty's Government in Great Britain accepts this new Treaty upon the distinct understanding that it does not prejudice their freedom of action in this respect. The Government of the United States have comparable interests, any disregard of which by a foreign Power they have declared they would regard as an unfriendly act. His Majesty's Government believe, therefore, that in defending their position they are expressing the intention and meaning of the United States Government."

Surely this position, as taken both by Mr. Kellogg and by Sir Austen Chamberlain, is an eminently common-sense and right position. Certainly it is in accord with the teaching of Jesus already quoted:—"The strong man fully armed, guardeth his own court." No Government which would reduce its forces till inadequate for proper defence would be justified in its actions; and no Government in a democratic country, such as are all our English-speaking countries, would dare to do such and face the country.

THE AMERICAN NAVY.

When the Senate of the United States ratified the Paris Peace Pact in December, 1928, it passed, at almost the same time, the Cruiser Bill sent up from the House of Representatives, providing for the building of fifteen ten-thousand-ton cruisers. According to one American critic, they thus appeared to be offering the world "peace with the left hand and war with the right." This critic should study the emblems of his country. The eagle on the silver dollar holds forth in his right talon thirteen laurel leaves, offering peace. But in his left talon he grasps thirteen arrows, suggesting that if peace is refused, he is prepared to defend himself. However, it is to be noted that the United States Navy Department is building these large cruisers as rapidly as the Bill calls for their production. The Peace Party of the country is cackling and cluttering and making a big to-do about it. But there can be no doubt that the Omnipotent Lord God is overruling the Governments of the United States and Great Britain in these matters of defence preparations, so that when the War of the Great Day of the Lord occurs, Uncle Sam will stand beside John Bull—the American Republic with the British Commonwealth of Nations—all of the British Race—the merchants of Tarshish and the young lions thereof—in the defence of the heritage committed into our keeping until His Beloved Son, Jesus Christ, shall come and claim it as His Kingdom.

THE BRITISH NAVY AND DISARMAMENT.

It is far, very far, from the truth to say that the peace of the world is menaced because Great Britain has not consented as yet to reduce her Navy. Since the Great War she has reduced her land forces to the utmost limit. Also at the Washington Conference she whole-heartedly entered into a naval agreement with the United States, Japan, France and Italy, by which the American Navy was placed on a parity with her own in capital ships. She does not want war with the United States, and has no intention of preparing for such, so there is no need for either country to build armaments against the other. Yet Great Britain must maintain a Navy powerful enough to protect her far-flung Empire. The world is not menaced by the British Navy, but every outpost of Empire would soon be menaced by covetous nations and would be grabbed up quickly if the might of England were to be reduced by any further disarmament. If there is no further disarmament among the nations of the world, it will not be because of Great Britain, in spite of what her many calumniators persist in claiming, but rather will it be because of conditions in Europe and Asia, which are at present so unsettled and so potentially full of menace that responsible statesmen in all countries dread to face the outcome, and so are trying to hide their fears by making frantic efforts to inaugurate an era of world-wide peace.

THE TRUTH.

BY HENRY PROCTOR, F.R.S.L.

"YE shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." This is one of the weightiest utterances of Him who of things which had been hid from all ages and generations in God, and Who is Himself the Truth, and "In whom all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge are hidden." But what, then, is the Truth?

Many think that it is that form of doctrine which is held by the orthodox Churches, embodied in articles, and crystallized into Creeds. But that this is not so is proved by the fact that it brings no sense of freedom, but rather an added bondage, just as the orthodox religion did to its devotees in the days of our Lord's earthly pilgrimage. By them His Name was cast out as evil. He was counted a blasphemer, and His authority over demons imputed to Beelzebub.

And there has been no true follower, no real disciple of His, who has not been excommunicated and ostracized up to the point that they really followed Him. For the world still "lieth in the evil one," and still says "Away with him: crucify him." And so he is crucified on the same Cross, and lives only because the Resurrection and the Life is in him, for when he died Christ became his life. So far as the world is concerned he is crucified, an alien, a foreigner, whose citizenship is not here, but in Heaven. But being thrust out, he goes forth to the Despised and Rejected One bearing His reproach. But this becomes to him "Greater riches than all the treasures of Egypt." He has had a baptism of fire truly, but it has burnt his bonds, and now he is free. The scales drop from his eyes, and he sees the truth which brings freedom from all limitation, as God Himself is free. Dwelling in love he dwells in God, and God in him, becoming a sharer. "In the very nature of God, having completely escaped the corruption which exists in the world through earthly cravings." For it is these latter that hold men in bondage, but he no longer courts the world's favour, nor fears its frown, for he has overcome the world. He sees it all as as unreal as a cinematograph, and as fleeting; here to-day, gone to-morrow. But this is only the negative side. It is possible to stop here, to retire from the world, and leave it to go down the broad road to destruction. Many have done this—immured themselves in living tombs, as in monasteries, or as hermits in the desert. But this is not following the Master. This did not Jesus, but He showed Himself every day to the world. He came into the world to save it, sent for this purpose by the Father. And just as the Father sent Him into the world, so He sends us into the world, not to judge but to save it. "Ye are the light of the world," not to be hidden away in any safe retreat, hiding our light under a bushel, but as a city set on a hill

WHICH CANNOT BE HID.

He went about doing good and healing all that were oppressed of the devil. He made the deaf to hear, the blind to see, and the lame to walk. The Spirit of the Lord God abode upon Him, in order that He might preach deliverance to the captives of sin and sickness and death, for He healed all that were sick. And he that says that he abides in Him ought himself also to walk even as He walked, teaching the same teaching, and doing the same works of power which He began to do and to teach—"and even greater works than these shall he do, because he is a joint-heir with Christ, of the omnipotence of the Infinite." For as there is no limit to the Power of God, so there can be none to that of the Son of God, for he knows that while abiding in Christ, God heareth him always. His power to help others is limited only by their unbelief, for this is that which limits God: he cannot do many mighty works because of their unbelief. But to God-given faith called there is no limit, it is omnipotent. To it all things are possible. The most transcendent truth which can be uttered is this, that the man who lays hold on the faith of God becomes a sharer in attributes of the Divine Nature.

God's boundless truth is open to all. Let the inward eye see; let the inward ear hear. Enter into thine inner chamber, and shut the door. Do away with the sense of separateness. Hold to the thought of your oneness, and truth, once conceived, will grow into your very being.

A REVIEW

ON

"THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM," BY PHILIP MAURO.

G. E. ALTREE COLEY

(Author of "The Wonder Race.")

THE full title of this book is "The Gospel of the Kingdom, with an Examination of Modern Dispensationalism," and it is no doubt the second part of the title that is the chief reason for the special interest that the book seems to be creating in Evangelical circles. The author, who is announced on the wrapper as a member of the Bar of the Supreme Court of the United States, is well known as a speaker and writer upon Scripture themes from an Evangelical standpoint.

In examining the conclusions and teachings of Dispensationalism Mr. Mauro is doing a valuable and much-needed service. For some time it has been growing more and more patent even to those brought up in the system that there are "inconsistencies and self-contradictions" as the author charges; that, in short, it does not square with the whole Word of God. It is felt that while it explains some things otherwise difficult to understand, it leaves others unexplained or even involved in deeper difficulty. Specially is it true that by placing the Kingdom in a future "dispensation" "the era of grace and the gospel of grace were stripped of what specially belonged to them—the blessed and glorious truth of the Kingdom." And the author rightly proceeds, "I solemnly declare my deep conviction that so closely is the Kingdom of God identified with the Salvation of God, that if this be not the era of the former it is not the era of the latter." In proof of this he cites Isa. xlix, 5–9, where the restoration of Israel is shown to be synchronous with the "day of salvation" which the Apostle Paul states is now—not in some future dispensation.

This recognition of an important fact is most welcome, and the reader would naturally suppose that the author will proceed to show how the restoration of Israel is being accomplished, but what is his surprise and pain when he finds that the author then definitely turns aside from the plain words of Scripture and says that the "tribes of Jacob," "Israel," "Seed of Abraham," etc., are all to be understood spiritually, and that—"of all the as yet unfulfilled promises of God, whatsoever and how many soever they be, nothing remains for the natural Israel." (Author's italics.)

It will at once be recognized that this doctrine is a return to the old interpretation of Scripture, best exemplified by the chapter headings of the Authorized Version, and this Mr. Mauro frankly avows. But long ago it was discovered that this interpretation makes a dead letter of the greater part of the Bible, which is thronged with passages foretelling, if language means anything, earthly blessing for Israel in terms that simply cannot be spiritualized. It is impossible to take the national promises of Genesis, which have the same guarantees as the spiritual promises, and say they are symbolic of spiritual things. How does the Church possess the gate of her enemies? How does she exhibit the aspect of a company of nations? How does she possess the wealth of the land and of the deep? In the past men have discarded the Bible because they could not believe an interpretation so obviously untrue yet which they were told was the only possible one. Therefore it is only the truth to say that the old spiritualizing system which Mr. Mauro is trying to revive is directly responsible for the prevailing disbelief in the inspiration of the Bible and the prevalence of the infidelity which he no doubt deplores as deeply as anyone.

In attacking Dispensationalism Mr. Mauro states that it originated in the Christian body known as Plymouth Brethren, though his chief point of attack is the "Scofield Bible," which is simply an edition of the Authorized Version with notes explaining the text from the dispensational standpoint. The true history of the case is that the spiritualizing system prevailed generally in the Church until about the third decade of the last century, when the Brethren movement began, initiated by some of the most solid Biblical scholars of the day. It is the glory of these devout students that they saw that God had engagements to Israel that were national and literal, and therefore must at some time be fulfilled. They knew that they had not been fulfilled in any former age, they did not see any process of fulfilment in the present age, consequently they taught that it must be in a future "dispensation," hence the genesis of dispensationalism. Where they erred was in failing to recognize that national blessing was associated with salvation and therefore at least began in this age. As a consequence their system came short in explaining those points which Mr. Mauro has detected as the weak spots in it.

Possibly due to his forensic training, Mr. Mauro is a master of epithet and invective. As this system undoubtedly was a change from the old teaching of the Church, he stigmatizes it as a "novel doctrine" and "modernism in the strictest sense," though acknowledging that he once believed and taught it. He bitterly condemns the teaching of a restored literal Israel enjoying earthly blessing as "grossly carnal" and a "rabbinical dream." But no one need be disturbed by such invective. It does not matter in the least about any doctrine whether it be new or old—for the instructed scribe brings out of his treasure things new and old—nor even that it is shared by undesirable associates, the only question that matters is: Is it true?

But the only way to arrive at the truth, to get the true perspective of the revelation of God's purposes, is to begin where the Bible begins, that is at Genesis, and read through to the end. It will then be seen, if read with attention to what Scripture is actually saying, and not through a veil of preconceived ideas, that God originated, selected and trained for Himself a special race, the race of Israel. To Israel, through its great progenitors, He gave absolutely unconditional promises of national as well as spiritual blessing, embodied in a covenant which the Apostle Paul distinctly states "the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect." Therefore, in addition to being unconditional, the failure of Israel to keep the law could not prevail to undo the covenant. But who is "Israel" of the promises? The prophecies make it abundantly clear that the Israel of the blessing is the same racial Israel of the punishments. It is impossible to twist language to make it mean a totally different people.

For the language of the prophets is not—with the exception of obvious parts as in Daniel and Ezekiel—couched in the language of symbology. It is the language of sober history, though it be history written before the event, which is prophecy. It is astonishing to find a believer with such acute penetration of mind as Mr. Mauro possesses overlooking this fact. From Leviticus xxvi and Deuteronomy xxviii-xxx onward, throughout the prophets, Scripture foretells that Israel would be scattered because of their sins, and that they, the same people who were scattered, would be redeemed, gathered again and blessed. But Mr. Mauro believes that the Israel of the blessings is the Church, made up indiscriminately of "Jews" or Gentiles with Heaven as their promised land. Let us test this. In Ezek. xi, 16–20, we read concerning "the house of Israel wholly" (v. 15): "Thus saith the Lord God: Although I have cast them far off among the heathen, and although I have scattered them among the countries, yet will I be to them as a little sanctuary in the countries where they shall come. Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord God: I will even gather you from the people, and assemble you out of the countries where ye have been scattered and I will give you the land of Israel. And they shall come thither, and they shall take away all the detestable things thereof and all the abominations thereof from thence. And I will give them one heart, and I will put a new spirit within you; and I will take the stony heart out of their flesh and will give them an heart of flesh; that they may walk in my statutes, and keep mine ordinances, and do them; and they shall be my people, and I will be their God."

Words cannot be plainer, it is the people who were scattered that are gathered again. Ezek. xxxvi and xxxvii confirm and expand this passage, and Jer. xxxi, 10, puts it in a nutshell, "Declare it in the isles afar off, and say, He that scattered Israel will gather him." But Mr. Mauro's interpretation would be that a totally different people are going to be gathered to Heaven. What, then, are the detestable things and abominations which that "Israel" is going to remove from Heaven? And if this reductio ad absurdum is not liked, what alternative is there? For assuredly this prophecy was not fulfilled on the return of the Jews from Babylon, for they were not the House of Israel nor were they converted in heart.

But this spiritualizing interpretation not only contradicts Scripture and renders it meaningless, it also seriously challenges the character and faithfulness of God. To be brief we give one example only. Mr. Mauro must be aware that Scripture repeatedly calls Israel God's inheritance. "For the Lord's portion is His people, Jacob is the lot of His inheritance." (Deut. xxxii, 9.) The connection here is with national boundaries, and there is no indication that it is the spiritual part only of the nation that is meant. The prayer of Solomon is the same. (1 Kings viii, 46–53.) After speaking of national defeat in battle and subsequent captivity, he prays that if they repent ". . . then hear Thou their prayer, for they be Thy people and Thine inheritance." Further, God gave it to be a law in Israel that no man could alienate his inheritance. (Lev. xxv, 13–28.) Will God then violate His own law? God forbid. But still further. In 1 Kings xxi we read that Ahab desired the vineyard of Naboth, and offered him a better one in exchange. But Naboth refused to disobey God's law of inheritance. Yet in effect Mr. Mauro is trying to force upon God another vineyard. Surely it should be evident from the careful reading of God's Word that upon His dealings with racial Israel rests the demonstration of His grace, long-suffering, unchanging faithfulness, and almighty power to save (Ezek. xxxvi, 23 and 32–38), and to spiritualize Israel is to surrender the whole case. So Isaiah xliii, 12, says: "Ye are My witnesses, saith the Lord, that I am God."

As a consequence, then, it should be apparent that, not spiritualizing, nor dispensationalism per se, but the right understanding of God's purposes in Israel, past, present and future, is the clue to understanding the Bible. The clue has been missed in the past because Israel could not be seen. The Church thought the Jews were Israel. Mr. Mauro emphatically assumes it still. In this connection it is pertinent to quote Prof. C. A. L. Totten, of Yale University, who said: "I cannot state too strongly that the man who has not yet seen that Israel of the Scripture is totally distinct from the Jewish people is yet in the mere alphabet of Biblical study, and that to this day the meaning of seven-eighths of the Bible is shut to his understanding. The difference between the two Houses" (of Israel and Judah) "is the KEY by which almost the entire Bible becomes intelligible."

We suggest, then, that Mr. Mauro's essay on the Kingdom is not yet complete. As evidence that he has not yet grasped its meaning and scope, he has totally ignored its imperfect and earthly aspect, as in Matthew xiii, and treats of it solely in its ideal and ultimate form, the eternal state of perfection. But though this is the end to which all moves, there remains much prophecy to be fulfilled before that final consummation. The most important chapter in the history of this earth remains still to be written, for there is yet to be seen the perfect working out of the terms of the New Covenant and its precious consequent fruits in every sphere of human affairs. The development of all this in and through the race which God has ordained for His service is a part of the chronicles of the Kingdom to which Scripture devotes immense space, but which Mr. Mauro wholly overlooks.

To conclude, if the author will but follow the unfolding of Scripture, he will see how this "Gospel" age is truly associated with the restoration of Israel, which must necessarily follow upon the death of the Redeemer of Israel. He will see, as the dispensationalist failed to see, that this restoration is a process, not a sudden act, taking place in this age and governed by certain "times and seasons" (Lev. xxvi; Acts i, 7). That it would involve a gathering together in an appointed place called the wilderness (Ezek. xx, 33-38; Hos. ii, 14; Jer. xxxi, 2), with national safety, populousness and expansion, with spiritual activity in spreading the Gospel and the fruits of the Gospel, with the final consummation awaited when, Israel having been cleansed (Ezek. xxxvi) and the rebels removed out of His Kingdom (Matt. xiii, 41; Ezek. xx, 28), Christ willl reign with His saints over a purified earth, and the law shall go forth from Jerusalem. Only blindness can stigmatize this a "carnal dream." It is the time of "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began."

THE LATE MRS. WILLIAM WRIGHT.

WE regret to hear of the death of Mrs. William Wright, late of Wollaton, near Nottingham, and Saxelbye Park, Melton Mowbray, who died in London on January 2nd in her eighty-ninth year. She had been a devout Christian all her life hundred and five and thirty days foretold by Daniel, and when they were completed on December 9th, 1917, in the year 1335 of the Mohammedan Kalendar, she gave thanks to Jehovah, God of Israel, that her time had been prolonged to see that day: "For He that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep; . . ." for it is written, "I have graven thee on the palms of My hands, thy walls are continually before me; . . . declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done. . . ."

Though Mrs. Wright had lived in London since 1900, many old friends at her former home gathered with her sorrowing family to say a last farewell at the graveside. She was laid to rest in the village of Wollaton, where she had lived for thirty-four years, beloved by everyone who knew her.

She was reading, and marking with her pencil, an article by the Rev. Pascoe Goard only a few hours before she passed away. This was laid beside her in the coffin.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

BY THE REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A.

QUESTION.—I should like to ask through THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER, which I take in regularly, why it is said that we are now in Jacob's trouble, when his (Jacob's) name was changed at the Brook Jabbok to Israel?—MISS W.

ANSWER.—There is a very great significance in the meaning and connotation of Bible names, and the more so when on specific occasions the names of individuals were changed, or when in certain instances especially selected names were given at birth. Thus Pharaoh called Joseph "Zaphnath-paaneah," meaning (in Coptic) "revealer of secrets." The name of Moses is of uncertain meaning—at least it may bear some two or three meanings. In Hebrew it means "Drawn out" (Exod. ii, 10), and is thus a type of Israel led or drawn out of the bondage in Egypt. Josephus and Philo Judæus derive the name Moses from the Coptic "mo," meaning "water," and "ushe," meaning "saved," which may serve as a type of Israel crossing the Red Sea (Exod. xiv), and a figure of Baptism. On the other hand, the Hebrew name is closely akin to the Egyptian word for "son," as is apparent in the well-known names Rameses (Ra-mesu), Thothmes and others, whence Moses is a type of the Greater Son who should come ("Out of Egypt have I called my Son," Matt. ii, 15).

In fact, the whole study of Biblical names is of the greatest interest and profit. But the study of the names of the Patriarchs throws much light upon the prophecies of the Bible, and upon the subsequent history of God's Chosen People.

Abram (contracted from Abiram) means "the father (a Divine title) is exalted." The change to Abraham (Gen. xvii, 5) is significant, but Abraham has no meaning in Hebrew, nor in the cognate languages. The name is probably explained in this verse by an assonance, for Abraham is supposed to have been suggested by the Hebrew hamon, meaning multitude, as indicated in the second part of the verse (cf. Rom. iv, 16). The name "Isaac" literally means "he laughs" (Gen. xvii, 17-19)—not in the sense of ridicule, but in that of the laugh of good-natured surprise with which others would greet the news that Sarah had given birth to a child. Hence it is the laughter of "promise" and "prophecy," and bore an honourable and distinctive fulfilment in the Old Covenant.

Now the name "Jacob" (Gen. xxv, 26) means "one who takes by the heel and thus tries to trip up or supplant." It may also be an elliptical form of an original Jakob'el, which means "God follows" (i.e., "rewards"), which has been found both on Babylonian tablets and on the pylons of the Temple of Karnak. Thus the name Jacob showed a supremacy and personal leadership at the outset which paved the way, as it were, for the change of his name to Israel, which means, "he who striveth with God," or "God striveth." Thus the physical strength and the dominant personality exhibited in the name Jacob become exalted to that higher spiritual degree of super-normal strength manifest in his being a "prince of God," Israel, one who was to have power with God and with men, and who should thus strive and persevere.

The alternate use of the names Jacob and Israel in after times is noticeable (cf. Gen. xxxvii, 1-4; xlv, 25-28; xlvi, 2; xlvii, 27-31; xlviii; Psalm xlvi, etc.).

"The time of Jacob's trouble" (Jer. xxx, 7) probably began in 1914, and should continue until 1934, which terminates "the time of the end," a period of twenty-one years inclusive, i.e., of three cycles of seven years each. I think the name Jacob is used here to show that this period of suffering and tribulation is not without its exposure of national sin and neglect of obedience to the Divine laws, nationally and individually. We are living in a very materialistic age; hence the materialism of Jacob through the school of suffering, trouble and tribulation during this present time, i.e., "the time of Jacob's trouble," will have to give way to the spirituality of Israel, for "he shall be saved out of it," since "they (Israel) shall serve the Lord their God, and David their king, whom I will raise up unto them."

Is it too much to work, hope and pray for a great spiritual revival in our land? "All faces are turned into paleness" since August, 1914; the aftermath of war, unemployment, overcrowding, drink, national unrighteousness and materialism and other forms of sin, are withholding the mighty blessing which the Lord of Israel wants to bestow upon His people. May this New Year recently begun remove the human element of Jacob, and allow the spiritual fulness of Israel to take its place, and then "God shall bless us; and all the ends of the earth shall fear Him."

"MY KINGDOM IS NOT OF THIS WORLD."

BY "EYNSFORD."

AFTER listening to an exposition of the British-Israel teaching at a Bible Reading attended by lay and clerical men, a Principal of a large College in the Far East gave his views on the subject in a few words. The whole Scriptural evidence was, he thought, entirely negatived or done away by the above words spoken by our Lord and Master (John xviii, 36); that He, by these words, entirely denied all ideas of an earthly Kingdom or earthly Kingship; that His Kingdom and Kingship was solely a matter of the spiritual sphere.

It is amazing how a single verse is so often used as the all-sufficient argument for rejecting the mass of Scripture that affirms the British-Israel position.

The point raised, however, is not one that merely affects British-Israel teaching, but is a negation of the firm belief and blessed hope of almost all true believers in Christ.

Our Lord spoke these words in that period of time which was represented, in the Vision Image of Nebuchadnezzar, by the "iron" which formed "the legs" (Dan. ii). It was then still the period of the fourth great world Empire; not the age when the Stone Kingdom "became a great mountain and filled the whole earth"; not yet the age when the Messiah was to be the visible reigning King of the Stone Kingdom.

"My Kingdom is not of this world" simply meant "not of this age." The Messiah was to be King in a coming age. The words may also be interpreted in the sense that the great Empires of Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece and Rome were wholly "of this world," but His was not. "Now is My Kingdom not from hence" (John xviii, 36). He was to be King of the Kingdom created by God, a Divinely-formed Kingdom, even as the "Stone was cut out without hands."

The verse in no way denies the future Kingship of the Son of God over a literal Kingdom on earth, for to Him is given "the throne of His father David, and He shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever, and of His Kingdom there shall be no end" (Luke i, 32-33). "The throne of David" was no spiritual throne, and "the house of Jacob" was a literal nation in this world. When Christ is King, the Kingdom will be literal and truly spiritually minded; not merely "meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost" (Rom. xiv, 17).

A good meeting, at which a splendid atmosphere prevailed, was addressed by Mr. J. H. Brenchley, the President of the Branch, in the Spinners' Hall, Bolton, on the 9th inst. "Parables of Jesus" was the subject. A few questions were asked, and all left the meeting with new thoughts and a much better knowledge of British-Israel Truth.

There was a good attendance at Oxford on the 14th inst., when Captain the Rev. T. E. Grout gave an address dealing with "British-Israel—If not true, what then?" Mr. Grout gave a well-reasoned and thoughtful thesis on this subject. The Chairman, the Rev. J. H. Mortimer, M.A., Vicar of Marston, expressed the thanks of those present for the help and inspiration received.

The Rev. Pascoe Goard's new book on THE DOCUMENTS OF DANIEL is now ready, published by the Covenant Publishing Company, Ltd., 6, Buckingham Gate, London, S.W.1. The price is 3s. 6d., by post 4s. This is a very valuable and illuminating work, and should be in the hands of all who wish to understand the wonderful writings of the prophet Daniel. F. writes:—"It is with many grateful thanks for 'benefits received' during the past through the pages of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER that I renew my subscription."

K. P. writes:—"I have never before received such beautiful teaching. It gives me joy, and something to live for and look forward to."

Many of our Branches have sent us resolutions supporting the Protest against the persecution and execution of Christians in Russia, and thanking us for taking a leading part in the campaign throughout the country. There was a fine audience at Kingsway Hall on January 13th, and the Rev. Pascoe Goard was one of the speakers. A Mass Meeting is arranged for the great Colston Hall, Bristol, on February 6th next. The Rev. Prebendary A. W. Gough, M.A., and Mr. Herbert Garrison are announced as the speakers.

This week, the Rev. Pascoe Goard and Mr. Garrison are addressing meetings in St. Peter's Hall, Hinton Road, Bournemouth.

Professor T. J. MacMahon, M.A., lectured for our Southport Branch on January 13th, on "The Five-Pointed Star of B.-I. Truth." Brilliant men of the time were writing and lecturing on this subject, he said. God's plan for Israel-Britain was bound to be fulfilled.

Mr. S. E. Steele followed with an address on "The Early British Church."

Mr. Arthur Exley, J.P., President of our Brisbane (Australia) Branch, and his wife and daughter are presently starting on a European tour, and they are planning to be with us for our next Congress.

We are very grateful for gifts and donations received. A list of anonymous contributions will be published presently in this journal.

New Zealand British-Israelites are very much in earnest about a definite Forward Movement in the Dominion. Our Auckland Branch has issued an important memorandum to the Associations in both Islands, urging vigorous corporate action, with a view to the formation of a B.-I. Federation within the British-Israel-World Federation, and suggesting the appointment of Major W. R. Mackesy—son of the late Colonel Mackesy—as Organizing General Secretary, for whom a speaking tour has been outlined. We look forward with keen interest to news of further developments.

Our New Zealand friends are most anxious that a first-class lecturer shall visit them from Britain. Australia is making a similar call, so is India, so is Japan.

All this, along with the awakening in the United States and in Canada, goes to show the virility of our work, the validity of our claims, the invincibility of our position, and the wide-spread and far-reaching influence of our journal and the whole body of our literature. In the meantime we have also pressing claims upon our resources and energies throughout the British Isles. We need to pray earnestly for more labourers, and for means to maintain them. Is it not a case for each one asking: "What can I do to help?"

PRAYER FOR THE EMPIRE.

IN THE BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER IN THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND IN THE DOMINION OF CANADA.

O Lord God of Hosts, Who dost order all the kingdoms of the world according to Thy good pleasure: we give Thee humble thanks for Thy favour and goodness to our Mother-land, and all the whole Empire; for upholding us with Thy mighty arm in all the ways by which from age to age Thou hast led us; for granting unto us opportunities of service in many lands; and enabling us to extend Thy Kingdom amongst people that have not known Thee, even unto the uttermost part of the earth. And we beseech Thee to continue Thy loving-kindness to us that, united, free, and mindful of our stewardship, we may through Thy grace so fulfil Thy purpose, that our Empire may be a witness to Thee among the kingdoms of the world, to the advancement of Thy glory, and the good of all mankind; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

We have many most interesting letters from the United States, all expressing joy and satisfaction at the announcement that an All-American Anglo-Israel Convention is to be held in May next; the dates, as previously announced, are May 6th, 7th and 8th, and the place will be notified a little later on, when after further correspondence we know fully the mind and wishes of our American friends.

A splendid audience greeted Rev. Pascoe Goard and Mr. Herbert Garrison at the opening meeting of a series at St. Peter's Hall, Bournemouth, on Monday afternoon last.

The following has been received from the Barking Branch:—Our new session opened on Friday, January 10th, and we were honoured in having the Secretary-General as our speaker. Mr. Garrison held the audience enthralled as he developed the wonderful story of "The Greatest Biblical and Racial Discovery of the Age," and the deeply spiritual tone of his address was felt by all. During the preceding week we had distributed nearly three thousand copies of the special number of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE throughout the district, and that interest has been aroused was evidenced by the number of newcomers present at the meeting. We are thankful indeed, and certain that much blessing will follow.

"The Heritage of the Anglo-Saxon Race,"

By M. H. GAYER, O.B.E.

A coloured chart (5 colours), size 40 in. by 28 in., with companion volume, Depicting the thrilling history of the Anglo-Saxon Race all down the ages (i.e., The British Empire and the British-born stock of America). The companion volume (demy 4to.) 96 pages, numbered in sections to correspond with chart.

Price of Chart, including Book, bound limp cloth, 4/6 By post 4/11

PUBLISHER'S NOTICE.

The coloured Chart depicts in clear, simple form, historically and by aid of maps, the amazing story of the Anglo-Saxon Race. It traces the genealogies, by direct succession, of Their Majesties King George V., Queen Mary, and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, back through the Royal House of David to Adam. It shows how the British Coat of Arms is built up from ancient emblems given to our race some 4,000 years ago. The Chart illustrates the contemporary history of the Houses of Judah and Israel. Starting with the genealogy from Adam to Jacob's twelve sons, it shows the beginning of the chosen Race from Hebrew stock; includes the Covenant Promises to Abraham (fulfilled in the Anglo-Saxons, and in no other race); gives the Promises to Judah of the Sceptre; to Ephraim of the Birthright; and to David of the perpetual Throne. Continuing, it carries on the contemporary history of the two Houses of Judah and Israel till each went into captivity—the story of the House of Israel from the reign of David, 1056 B.C. to their deportation to Assyria in 721 B.C., then a consecutive narrative of their migrations (with map) down to their final arrival in the British Isles in A.D. 1066. The contemporary history of the House of Judah, till they also were carried captive, in two sections. Section I. follows the Jewish Race down to A.D. 70; includes our Lord's Life and Death; the final siege of Jerusalem, and the scattering of the Jews all over the world. Section II. traces Princess Tamar Tephi and the prophet Jeremiah into Ireland—her marriage, and the continuation of the Royal Line of David; tells the story of the Coronation Stone and how it was finally deposited in Westminster Abbey.

The history of the Anglo-Saxons in America—the Tribe of Manasseh—is also included in the Chart. The Book (numbered to correspond with the chart) amplifies the history and shows the identity of ten-tribed Israel with the British Empire and the U.S.A.

The DOCUMENTS of DANIEL

By

Rev. W. PASCOE GOARD

. . . Many have gone into the details of prophecies and many more will doubtless do so. Our purpose is to show the order of the prophecies so clearly that it will be easy for the student of the Word to follow up the study of Daniel. By separating the various documents and taking note of their outlines and purposes, this object should be accomplished.

The Book of Daniel relates itself to the great sweep of that history which began with the call of Abraham. It pre-writes the period of that history contained in the "seven times" of prophecy. It will not be hard for the student to make or select a chronological table, and to relate to it the various documents of Daniel, and the events therein portrayed. The predictions have been so fully fulfilled that there can now be no question in the informed mind of the fact that Daniel in his prophecies does indeed deal with very concrete facts, most of which have in due course appeared on the pages of the world's history. So very far has this been the case that we are justified in assuming that all the remaining facts so indicated will appear in due time.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

THE LAW: THE LAW: AND THE LAW.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD, F.R.G.S.

THE above looks like a strange heading. It looks as though one word was repeated three times. In sound and in spelling this is the case; but in meaning it is not so. Qualifying words must be used in order to indicate the difference in meaning between the words "Law; and Law; and Law."

Now let us use the qualifying words and so shew that although in sound and spelling these words are identical, in the meaning they are intended to convey, they are very different.

The Bible uses this word sometimes with qualifying terms, which indicates the meaning intended to be conveyed, but sometimes it uses the word "Law" without any qualifying terms, leaving it to the context to shew which meaning is intended.

First, there is "the Law of the Lord" contained in "the commandments, statutes and judgments of the Lord."

Secondly, there is "the Law of commandments contained in ordinances."

Thirdly, there is the natural Law in its various manifestations, which produces in regular sequence natural phenomena, and which in its highest expression is termed "the Law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus"; "the Law of sin and death," and so on.

The first, which is the Law contained in the "commandments, statutes and judgments of the Lord," constitutes the national Law, which is intended to govern the life, both of the individual and of the nation. It is the duty of the Crown and of the Ministers of the Crown to administer this Law. It is the duty of every citizen to obey this Law, and support the administration thereof.

To put away the commandments, statutes and judgments of the Lord and substitute human legislation therefor, even though it be the expressed will of the majority, constitutes rebellion against the Lord, Who is the King of Israel, and treason towards His Person.

Never in the history of the Israel nation have the people been led wider astray from the principle of Divine authority underlying the Divinely-given constitution than at the present moment, when it has turned away from the Divine authority expressed in the Divine Law contained in the commandments, statutes and judgments, and substituted the authority of the majority of us, the people, especially in view of the fact that that majority now rests in the hands of inexperienced juniors, male and female, of the race.

It is time that we returned whole-heartedly to the Law of the Lord which is perfect, converting the soul; to the testimony of the Lord which is sure, making wise the simple; to the statutes of the Lord which are right, rejoicing the heart; to the commandments of the Lord which are pure, enlightening the eyes; to the judgments of the Lord which are true and righteous altogether.

The second, which is "the Law of commandments contained in ordinances" is an entirely different matter. As we have seen, the first is the national Law administered by the Crown through the Judges and Magistracy of the Court. If one should break that Law, the police would apprehend him; the Magistrates would try him, and, if the offence should be serious, he would be committed for trial, and Judge and Jury would judge him, and if found guilty he would be subjected to fine or imprisonment, and, in extreme cases, death. There the matter would end.

In case of national disobedience to the Divinely-given national Law, the punishment inflicted on the nation is set forth in Leviticus xxvi, and the term of punishment indicated for the nation is for seven times—or 2,520 years.

This is the scope of the Law contained in the commandments, statutes and judgments.

But the Law of commandments contained in ordinances operates in the spiritual field.

The fundamental principles with which it deals are: "Sin, righteousness, judgment." The underlying fact is that all men are adjudged as guilty and condemned under this law; and must of necessity appeal against that sentence. The grounds of appeal are: The death and resurrection of our Lord, and the atonement accomplished thereby. Thus our Lord declared the Holy Ghost should convince the world of sin "BECAUSE THEY BELIEVE NOT ON ME."

The whole question from the spiritual standpoint of the Law of sin and death is reduced to the test of faith or no faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.

The formula of procedure under the Law of commandments contained in ordinances was contained in the rules of worship laid down in connection with the Tabernacle and Temple, and with the Aaronic priesthood and its ministry.

These ordinances will repay careful study, as they set forth the anniversaries which were remembrancers; the offerings for present sin, and expressions of present faith; the typical offerings and services which prefigured the great ordinance to be carried out by the great High Priest, Jesus Christ our Lord, in that critical time of the world's spiritual history, the week which saw His passion, His death, and His resurrection.

This formula of ordinances lasted until Christ came, and then was by Him removed, to give place to the Christian form of faith and the Christian ordinances. Manifestly the Law of commandments contained in ordinances, established for the Mosaic dispensation, ended, and the Christian ordinance of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, which was a remembrance of our Lord's death and resurrection, an expression of present faith, and an act of anticipation of our Lord's return again was established in its stead.

For the Apostle declared that in this ordinance "as oft as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show forth the Lord's death till He come." This is the law of commandments contained in ordinances.

The third, which is the natural Law, has a very wide range of activity, indeed an universal range; and has a very wide range of expression. For the purposes of the present article we shall stay with the New Testament expression set forth in the following quotation: "The law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death."

The Law of sin and death had its first recorded expression in the Garden story. When the Law of the Lord expressed as a command was first given, the result of transgression of that Law in the natural realm was stated to be "in the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." This was a natural sequence in the realm of natural Law consequent upon a moral action.

Thus in the realm of natural Law a set of circumstances, which should be endless, began as a direct result of an action in the moral realm. Physical death resulted from moral transgression.

Perhaps we can illustrate this in a late development in the physical realm. An American scientist has developed a delicate instrument which uses the brain and nerve system of the physical frame as a distributing set, which sets up a vibration manifested by sound in the instrument. The basic thought which led to the development of the machine was the fact that it is natural for mind and tongue to work in unison in the human constitution. That which the mind knows to be true the tongue naturally expresses, as the Book of books declares, "Out of the fulness of the heart the mouth speaketh."

Now to cause the tongue to make statements which are contrary to the knowledge of the mind requires an effort on the part of the brain and the nervous system which is not required when tongue and brain work in unison. The instrument was designed to record and give expression to the effort necessarily made to express an untruth.

A scientific friend of mine journeyed to California to investigate this discovery. A young man took his seat in the chair, and the apparatus was fitted upon his head, and then the learned inventor entered into conversation with him. He knew something of the young man, and in connection with his relationships he knew that there were certain things not at all wrong in themselves of which the young man would hesitate to speak before strangers, and accordingly the doctor put a question to him in regard to that particular matter. Up to this point, while the conversation had gone straight forward, the machine was silent; but the moment the young man, after a minute's hesitation, began to formulate a reply to the question the machine began to sing m-m-m-m-m-m, to the amusement of all present. Blushing and laughing the young man threw the machine from his head and leaped from the chair.

An attempt was made to cause witnesses to wear the machine in court, so that there might be the test of natural laws to the truthfulness of their answering questions. But the court ruled that it would be an unfair test.

The point of the foregoing illustration is, that moral actions set up activities in the realm of natural law, and conversely physical actions set up movements of infinite and eternal importance in the moral realm.

Since that first expression of the law and disobedience thereto, in the realm of nature the man has become what the original Scriptures term him whenever considering him in that realm of his nature which is subject to sin and death, viz.: "enosh," that is to say, the man who sins, who suffers, and dies, and who is involved in the endless combination of life's experiences in this realm.

Generation after generation we have been born subject to that law. It needs neither exposition nor illustration to prove that we are all in the grip of the law of sin and death.

"But once, in the end of the world, Christ appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself." "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." "For the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death."

It is manifest that the Scripture teaches that the primal disobedience of the first parents, which occurred immediately after that statement which should be written in letters of fire, "And the Lord God commanded the man," set up that series of activities in the natural realm which rendered us all subject to the law of sin and death.

It is manifest that whatever it was our Lord accomplished during His life and ministry, and by His death and resurrection, He started a set of circumstances going in the natural realm which, from that time forward, should set everyone who accepts Him as their Saviour free from the law of sin and death.

It is manifest that the foregoing result is obtained by the infusion into the life of man of the life of Christ. It is by the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus that we are made free from the law of sin and death.

This is the glorious doctrine called by the theologians "Regeneration," and by biologists a final "mutation" which, by the infusion of the Christ-life, lifts us up to the biological plane of "the sons of God."

Thus we see that law in one instance refers to national administration; in the second instance refers to Divine worship and moral obligation; and in the third instance to the natural biological law by which the Adamic sinner is transformed into a child of God by the direct and personal infusion of the life of Christ—"for the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

It is further manifest by the direct teaching of the Bible that if we would enjoy the gift of God, which is eternal life, it must be by direct and personal application to Him. Every man must be a practical scientist to this extent that he must try this great experiment for himself; he must, with humility, kneel at the feet of the Lord, His Saviour, and, with penitence and trust, make application for the infusion of that spirit of life in Christ Jesus, which will render him free from the law of sin and death. It is an experiment which should not be postponed for a single hour, and perhaps this is the moment when the eye reads these words when personal application should be made to our Lord for this great gift.

THE JEWS.

THE REV. COMMANDER ROBERTS was the speaker on Saturday at Teignmouth Town Hall at the Week of Prayer.

Our Lord tells us "Behold the fig tree, and all the trees; When they now shoot forth, ye see and know . . . that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand." (Luke xxi, 29-33.)

We may say that the Jews as a nation began its resuscitation in 1897. A generation in the point of time would be thirty or forty years. So that 1927-1937 should bring about very encouraging results. We are told—Summer, and its explanation is the Kingdom of God is at hand.

Everyone knows that the Jews have been coming forward in a most remarkable way; they are together with ourselves the foremost race in the world in intelligence, in professorship, in our universities, banks and legislature. In America the universities seem to return more Jews at the head of science, comparatively, than any other race.

We all know the impetus given to the Jew by the "Balfour Declaration," and though at present it is not of universal application to the Jew, yet the land is being prepared for God's people, "who are at hand for to come." Since 1917 the land of Palestine has been free from Gentile domination, unless you will dare to say we are treading Jerusalem down!

It will certainly take time to make the Jew believe that the British are their friends, in fact the only ones to whom they can look for help. Our nation as yet is not convinced of the meaning of the Mandate, and as long as we believe that Europe is making use of us as a cat's-paw, so long will uncertainty exist in the mind of the Jew.

But the Jew is seeking the Kingdom of God. This I wish to prove to you. About three months ago there appeared an article in Yiddish, translated by the Rev. Leopold Cohn, of Brooklyn, New York.

"News has come from Denver, Colo., that a group of prominent Jews from every State had assembled in the private home of Mr. Solomon Schwayer. Among them were Jewish senators, lawyers and doctors.

The object of the meeting was to review the trial and crucifixion that took place nearly 2,000 years ago.

To choose out 71 of the ablest and learned Rabbis of the whole world to assemble at Jerusalem. These to decide whether their fathers had taken part in this trial and crucifixion. To establish their innocence or to confess their crime. The Holy Book points to a time in Zechariah xii, xiii, xiv, when terrible judgment will come upon the offenders, and only one-third part be delivered by their Messiah.

It is possible this movement will grow, and the outcome that they will receive and acknowledge by repentance their Messiah."

But Europe has also a considerable number of Jews. As, for instance, the Missions to Russia Magazine states this month that there are at least 3,000,000 Jews in Russia. Other statistics give us nearly 8,000,000 in other parts of Europe, chiefly segregated in what used to be called the "Russian Pale." It certainly seems to be the act of God to have brought these to this locality with a purpose, which is described in Jer. xvi, 14-17 and Micah vii, 11 to end. Here is a second Exodus, far transcending that which brought Israel out of Egypt, and, mark you, this Exodus is of Jews from the North country, i.e., north of Palestine.

Let us look at the change which is coming over these Jews in Poland and elsewhere. First let me assert that it is reckoned there are about 400 Jews who have taken Christian Orders; most of these are in the Church of England. There is a general stir amongst the Jews which is gradually changing their attitude of hatred to the Lord Jesus into one of admiration and willingness to learn more about Him. The New Testament, in fact the whole Bible, is now translated into the Yiddish tongue, which nearly every Jew on the Continent can read. The mission rooms of our various Societies working for the salvation of the Jew at Warsaw, Cracow, Bialistok and elsewhere, are crowded with Jews seeking to know the truth, who confess that they have been guilty of crucifying the Lord Jesus. In very many places we hear of Jews forming themselves into sects and forming a Church for study of the Christian Word of God. This at Vilna, another at Miskolez, of Christ-believing Jews, who state that Christianity is Israel.

The Jewish newspapers report 40,000 Jews have accepted the Lord Jesus Christ. Another report is 97,000. In Vienna 17,000, in Poland 35,000, in Russia 60,000.

Now let us look back. Our Lord told the Jews : " The Kingdom of God shall be taken from you and given to a nation bringing forth the fruit thereof." And to them He said : " Verily ye shall not see Me until ye can say, Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord."

To whom can these Jews look for help, for encouragement, for instruction, unless it is to the nation bringing forth the fruits of the Kingdom?

" By their fruits ye shall know them."

We Christians despise ourselves for the little we do in the Christian field. And yet every Mission Sunday in church we hear of the good deeds done by the small section who are led by the Love of God. Looking at statistics it is seen that Britain and the U.S.A. do nearly 90 per cent. of the Christian work in the world, and that all the influential Societies for bringing in the Jews to Christ are supported by the same race. By their fruits ye shall know the Kingdom of God. Before concluding let me warn you against accepting the teaching of any Church or teacher that is not able to give chapter and verse for his doctrine. To call Abraham a Jew, or Israel the Jews, has misled the whole of Christendom, and made more unbelievers than any other error.

How can Abraham be a Jew, since Judah was his great grandson? How can Israel be a Jew, seeing the ancestor of the Jew is Judah and Israel was his father? and had eleven other sons.

Again, not all Judah ever went to Babylon. Most of Judah were taken captive by Sennacherib, King of Assyria, in the days of Hezekiah (2 Kings xviii, 13) ; who took all the fenced cities of Judah, forty-six of them, to Assyria, and they were located in the same region as Israel of the Northern Kingdom 125 years before the Jews went to Babylon. As we find from Ezek. xi, 15-21, these did not return with the Jews from Babylon. Only a miserable remnant of 43,000 to 50,000 at most. The name Jew never occurs in the Bible until 2 Kings xvi, 6. So the Jew is but a small remnant even of Judah.

We are told in Zech. ix, 13 :

" When I have bent Judah for me, filled the bow with Ephraim, and raised up thy sons, O Zion, against thy sons, O Greece, and made thee as the sword of a mighty man. And the Lord shall be seen over them, and his arrow shall go forth as the lightning : and the Lord God shall blow the trumpet " : comp. also Isa. xxvii, 13. Now pass on to Zech. x, 1-3, 6, 7 ; Armageddon xii, 4-8. At this last trumpet, the kingdoms of this world will become the Kingdom of our Lord, and Jesus the Son of David shall reign, sitting on the throne of His Father David as King over the Kingdom of God, subduing all things unto Himself, that at the end He may deliver up the Kingdom to God the Father, Who we shall then know as the Blessed and only Potentate Jehovah (our King) Elohim.

"PEACE: AND THERE IS NO PEACE."—III

By Herbert W. Wadge, B.A., M.D.

Mussolini and Fascist Italy.

In the first place, Mussolini is now an actual and growing menace to the peace of the world. Though Italy is one of the signatories of the Paris Peace Pact, she still is preparing and developing her millitary, naval and aerial forces as she never did before. Mussolini, who has virtually become another Cæsar, now occupies the position that Kaiser William held fifteen to twenty years ago—war-lord of Europe. Apparently he has set out to re-establish the Roman Empire, and to extend the power of Italy spoke-wise from Rome, as did the Cæsars of old. His present policy of extension in the Eastern Mediterranean is not yet quite clear, but it would appear that the Island of Rhodes, over which Italy now has sovereignty, is to be made the eastern outpost for a vigorous development of her power and influence in the Levant. No doubt, in the near future, events will show that Italy will not be bound by its signature to an agreement renouncing war, any more than the Kaiser was bound by an agreement to respect the neutrality of Belgium. To the one as to the other such an agreement will be but as " a scrap of paper."

Italy Preparing for War.

In the meantime it is well to keep in mind the present temper and warlike outlook of the people of Italy. Mr. Henry Somerville, a Canadian correspondent of London, England, has recently written a series of articles on Fascist Italy, in which he describes conditions in Italy as he found them this last summer (1929). We quote some of his statements, as follows :—

> " Fascism is a deliberate and considered rejection of democratic principles of government. . . There is no democracy in Italy to-day, and very little liberty. . . . Italy is submitting to a Dictatorship as a means of increasing her military strength so she will be able to obtain new territories under the Italian flag. Italy is determined to expand her territories peacefully if possible, but by war if necessary. . . . Mussolini told Parliament in words which became celebrated : ' there is this precise duty, a precise and fundamental duty, to perfect to the uttermost all the armed forces of Italy on land, on sea and in the air. We must be able to arm and mobilize five million men, and we must reinforce our navy, and above all our air force, in which I have an ever-growing confidence, and make it so powerful that the sound of its motors shall exceed that of any other sound in the peninsula, and the shadow of its wings obscure the sun in our country. Then to-morrow we shall be able, when the crucial point arrives in the story of Europe, to make our voice heard and our rights finally recognized. To prepare for this we have yet some years. . . .' The preparation for war cannot be denied. Children of school age in Italy are in the ranks of the Balilla, military in spirit and in organization ; the youth are in the Avanguardists ; while the picked men go into the Fascist militia. There are 800,000 Balilla ; 425,000 Avanguardists ; and 356,000 Fascist militia. The militia is in addition to the regular army." (From series of articles in the Manitoba Free Press, September, 1929.)

From the Literary Digest we read :- "On the 20th April, 1929, King Victor Emmanuel, in inaugurating the twenty-eighth Italian Legislature, said that Italy desired peace, but in the meantime must render its armed forces more efficient." (May 4th, 1929.)

One more quotation : "The Rossegna Italiana says that Fascist Italy has the most profound contempt for that hypocritical and false common-place expression, 'friendship among nations,' which never existed, does not exist now, and will never exist in future.'" (From the Review of Reviews, London, quoted by THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER, page 365, June 8th, 1929.)

All signs and reports point to a rapid development of Italy as a military nation, and as one which will not stop for arbitration if it thinks that war is required. Great Britain, with her lines of commerce through the Mediterranean Sea to the Near East, and through the Suez Canal to the Far East, and with her interests in Egypt, Palestine and Irak, cannot ignore this attitude of Italy, and so cannot agree to any further reduction of her Navy.

COMMUNIST RUSSIA AND WORLD PROPAGANDA.

In the next place, Russia alone, in her present attitude towards all other countries, whether democratic or not, and in the rapid development in power of her Soviet rulers, should be sufficient to deter any sane British statesman from proceeding any further in disarmament schemes. In fact, her disarmament has proceeded so far already that if Russia was to make a sudden invasion of our Western Asiatic territories —Palestine and Irak—we have not sufficient forces ready to transport there to make any adequate resistance to any such invasion. So why weaken the Empire further?

Let us quote again from Mr. Henry Somerville, who studied conditions there this last spring, and who has given us a picture of present-day Russia as he personally saw it. In his last article on "The New Russia of To-day," as published in the Manitoba Free Press of 12th July, 1929, he gives his conclusion as follows :—

> "The Soviet Government is not planning or desiring an early aggressive war. It sincerely wishes a prolonged peace to enable its economic programme to develop. But it is preparing for a war that it expects to be precipitated by the logic of events, and its principles and its interests impel it to place its hopes in world revolution as the outcome of world war.
> "Communism in Russia may possibly disintegrate and be discredited by its own failures, but no such process has yet begun. The advances made during the last twelve years have been achieved by Communists for Communism. Encouraged by its practical success, Russian Communism is making itself a dogmatic religion with a world mission of propaganda, ready to spread itself and defend itself, like Islam of old, by the sword."

This carefully-worded statement appears to be the sober judgment of a skilled newspaper observer and correspondent, and without doubt can be accepted at least as near the truth as any one observer can be expected to find. But if so, and if Russia is preparing for another war, then why should anyone expect the Home Government to further disarm or to dismantle any portion of her Navy?

ANCIENT CHINA DISRUPTED.

Then again, China is still in an unsettled condition. Various war-lords are contending for the mastery, while the modern element is striving to form a stable central Government. Nominally the country is a Republic ; but the idea of China turning so suddenly to a democratic form of government is merely a figment of imagination. A population of 400,000,000 in a country that has been in existence for five or six millenniums, that has always been accustomed to autocratic government by its princes and mandarins, and the great mass of whom are too busy securing the bare necessities of life to worry about forms of government, cannot be remodelled to a modern Republican form of government with western ideas and western methods in the course of a year or two. But in the meantime, while this ancient country is so unsettled and divided, the Russian Bolshevist Party is making the best of its opportunity, by means of Communist propaganda, to divert the populace from obedience to government of any kind, planning that in the resulting anarchy it will secure control there and thus be able to exploit the resources and people of the country for its own purposes. So here again is a third huge disturbing problem on the hands of the statesmen of the world, with Bolshevism apparently at present in the saddle.

PEACE, POWER, SALVATION AND JUSTICE.

How can reasonable-minded, clear-thinking people expect responsible statesmen to agree to further disarmament, or to the reduction of naval forces, or to the absolute renouncing of war, when such tremendous problems containing such terrifically disastrous possibilities lie before them for their consideration and solution? With the present world conditions, when the need for peace is as great as it ever was, the strong and powerful Governments of the English-speaking countries should live at peace among themselves, and then be in a position to restrain general war, by being fully armed themselves, so that law and order may be maintained throughout the world, and that the Gospel of Jesus Christ may be abundantly preached to all peoples to transform the lives and characters of men and nations. If the peace parties in our English-speaking nations would aim and insist on the maintenance of peace amongst ourselves, and not interfere with the functions of their Governments in maintaining law and order, both at home and abroad, then peace would be more likely obtained. But until all men or a large majority of all men are sons of God through Jesus Christ, and so are at peace among themselves, peace in general can only be obtained by force. And force requires armies and navies, etc. Thus it would be folly to proceed further with disarmament schemes ; and in the case of the company of nations known as the British Commonwealth it would be suicidal. Wherever the Union Jack flies justice is administered, righteousness is exercised, and peace is maintained in a manner superior to that of any other country. This is the glory of the Empire. Let us retain it so by remaining fully armed for purposes of defence in all parts of the globe.

THE MACDONALD-HOOVER PEACE CONVERSATIONS.

We can all rejoice, and no doubt we do all rejoice, in the successful and happy termination of the recent peace mission of Prime Minister MacDonald to President Hoover, which virtually resulted in an amicable agreement as to the relative strengths of cruisers in the Navies of the two great branches of our race—Great Britain and the United States. Even though this settlement might not be exactly as some would have it, that is, " gun for gun, and ton for ton," still it is a settlement in which approximate parity is based on requirements ; and further, it is a manifestation of sympathetic understanding and general goodwill between these countries which is cementing them in closer bonds of friendship and peace than have ever been known before. On account of the warlike conditions in Europe and Asia, we cannot afford to utterly disband our troops and dismantle our Navies, yet this rapprochement between Great Britain and the United States—between Ephraim and Manasseh—is another one of those great signs of the times, showing that our race is preparing, even though unconsciously, for the time near at hand when Jesus the Messiah shall occupy the throne of His Kingdom on earth, and with His Bride—the Anglo-Celto-Saxon (Israel) race—shall rule the world in justice and in mercy.

" FOOLISH PROPHETS " DEALING FALSELY.

What shall be said then of the public men and the ministers of the Gospel and others who preach peace in the world when it is contrary to the teaching of the Bible? How does the Holy Spirit deal with them? Through Jeremiah He says (vi, 13, 14): " And from the prophet even unto the priest every one dealeth falsely. They have healed also the hurt of the daughter of my people slightly, saying, Peace, peace : when there is no peace." And to the inhabitants of the land of Israel the Lord spoke through Ezekiel (vii, 25): " Destruction cometh ; and they shall seek peace, and there shall be none." And again in the 13th chapter we read (verses 2, 3): " Son of man, prophesy against the prophets of Israel that prophesy, and say thou unto them that prophesy out of their own hearts, Hear ye the word of the Lord ; Thus saith the Lord God ; Woe unto the foolish prophets, that follow their own spirit, and have seen nothing." Verse 7 : " Have ye not seen a vain vision, and have ye not spoken a lying divination, whereas ye say, The Lord saith it ; albeit I have not spoken." Verses 8, 9 : " Therefore thus saith the Lord God : Because ye have spoken vanity, and seen lies, therefore, behold, I am against you, saith the Lord God. And mine hand shall be upon the prophets that see vanity, and that divine lies." Verse 10 : " Because, even because they have seduced my people, saying, Peace ; and there was no peace ; and one built up a wall, and, lo, others daubed it with untempered mortar." Verses 15, 16 : " The wall is no more, neither they that daubed it ; to wit, the prophets of Israel which prophesy concerning Jerusalem, and which see visions of peace for her, and there is no peace, saith the Lord God." Plainly we are here given to understand by the Holy Spirit that when prophets predict peace in this fashion they are false prophets and are not giving the true messages of God to the people. We should all beware of the danger of listening to any teacher or preacher, any lecturer or politician, who continually teaches or preaches " Peace, peace," as being obtained by treaty and disarmament, instead of " Peace, peace," as being obtained by repentance and reconciliation to God. Let us remember the message which the Lord gave us through Jeremiah : " And from the prophet even unto the priest every one dealeth falsely, . . . saying, Peace, peace : when there is no peace."

NO INTERNATIONAL PEACE TILL JESUS REIGNS.

Periods of apparent international peace are but as the calm before the storm, as the smoothly gliding river before the rapids, as the soothing deception of the " Evil One," speaking as an Angel of Light to draw us away from the plain teaching of the Bible. As British-Israelites, it is our duty to teach and spread abroad the Gospel of Grace—the Gospel of Salvation, which is free to all through the sacrifice of the Son of God, and the shedding of His blood for our sakes. But also it is our duty to occupy and defend and develop the inheritance which God gave to us through our fathers Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, an inheritance which He has been extending ever since. And in so defending this inheritance we shall be helped in our efforts, for we have the promise of God to that effect. Isaiah liv, 17 : " No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper ; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord, and their righteousness is of me, saith the Lord." This heritage is to be the nucleus of the Kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ when He returns to earth shortly to claim the praise and honour and glory and dominion which are His just right. But until He returns to reign in person there can be no permanency of international peace except among those nations of our own race.

THE COVENANT AND THE PRINCE OF PEACE.

Then peace in an international sense will be established on the earth, and in and through Him will be re-established a peace which shall never be overcome. For His government, based on righteousness the antecedent of peace, will spread from land to land ; the righteousness and peace and government of the Lord Jesus Christ will last for ever. Isaiah liv, 10 : " For the mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed ; but my kindness shall not depart from thee, neither shall the covenant of my peace be removed, saith the Lord that hath mercy on thee." Isaiah ix, 6, 7 : " For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given ; and the government shall be upon his shoulder : and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever."

THE CORRECT INTERPRETATION OF PROPHECY.

By Geo. McGinnis (Illinois).

ANY Christian scholar who will investigate the British-Israel identity proposition, with open-minded inquiry and without any preconceived notions, praying for God's Spirit to guide him into all truth, will be convinced beyond the shadow of a doubt that the Bible story dovetails with this doctrine.

Some of the prophecies of the Bible seem absolutely absurd when we try to prove their fulfilment by the Jews; but when we substitute the Anglo-Saxon it harmonizes exactly with what the Saxon is doing in the world to-day.

Just before Moses' death, in his blessing of the tribes, he said of Israel, in Deut. xxxiii, 17: "His glory is like the firstling of his bullock and his horns are like the horns of unicorns; with them he shall push the people together to the ends of the earth; and they are the ten thousands of Ephraim (England), and they are the thousands of Manasseh" (America). God foresaw that His chosen people Israel (not the Jews) would have great colonies, and their tremendous increase in population would necessitate their pushing the Aborigines into the ends of the country which they once claimed as their own. This pushing back happened to the Red Indians of the United States. They have been crowded westward until now there are very few east of the Mississippi. This pushing has also happened to the Tasmanian and Australian natives, and the Kaffirs in South Africa.

We read in Jer. xxx, 11: "I am with thee, saith the Lord, to save thee; though I make a full end of all nations whither I have scattered thee: yet will I not make a full end of thee: but I will correct thee in measure and will not leave thee altogether unpunished."

How silly it sounds to try and apply these prophecies to the Jews, but the Anglo-Saxons fit in with this programme exactly.

The Red Indians of the United States have not only been pushed to the ends of the country once their own, but they are dying out before the advancing Anglo-Saxon. It is estimated by historians that there were three million Indians in the territory we now call the United States when the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock in 1620, and the Encyclopedia Britannica reports only 244,437 Indians in the United States to-day. That is a decrease of over two million in three centuries. This "dying out" process has also happened to the Tasmanians in Australia, the Maoris in New Zealand, and the Kaffirs in South Africa.

An old Aborigine of New Zealand made a philosophic remark when he stated: "The Maori grass dies before the European grass. The Maori rat dies before the European rat. So dies the Maori before the European."

It is often charged up to the Anglo-Saxon that the backward people of the earth die out before his advancing civilization; but it cannot be helped, for it was foreseen of old and is in God's plan of the ages and was prophesied by holy men of old. Who knows but what God thus intends to fill the desolate heritages with a finer and better material. This dying out process is happening to many child races, not from any action on the part of Anglo-Saxons, but by the act of God. They are swept off mostly by indulgence in the white man's vices and by the white man's diseases, such as tuberculosis, influenza, etc.

Anglo-Saxons make every effort to help and bless Gentile tribes, and when they respond to Anglo-Saxon law and order and sanitary laws, and adopt Anglo-Saxon principles, they are wonderfully blessed.

In American Samoa the United States Navy is enforcing sanitation, law and order, and is preventing unscrupulous men from exploiting the natives. As a result the natives are becoming well-to-do, and have increased over fifty per cent. in population since the Navy took charge, while near-by islands have been nearly depopulated by epidemics. Two reprehensible and criminal native customs were suppressed with ruthless hand, the public defloration of virgin brides and the killing of pigs and destruction of crops on the way to a funeral. The United States has done more to educate, civilize, Christianize the Philippines in thirty years than Spain did in 400 years. If natives will accept and practise Anglo-Saxon laws and health rules and keep step with Saxon progress they will be blessed and benefited everywhere under the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes.

Admiral Dewey, in an article in the British Realm, wrote: "The mightiest factor in the civilization of the world is the imperial policy of England."

The British have promoted the happiness and well-being of all backward people that have come under their rule. It is true that they have been obliged with strong hand to stop customs that are cruel and inhuman, but the nations have been uplifted and blessed beneath the Union Jack. They stopped the barbaric custom of suttee, which compelled the wife to die on the funeral pyre of her dead husband. No more does the car of Juggernaut roll through the streets of India, cruelly crushing to death the fanatical devotees who threw themselves in front of its ponderous wheels.

Rev. Mr. Norton, former religious editor of the Chicago Tribune, told me he was in a city in India when the bubonic plague broke out. The British authorities tried in a quiet unobtrusive way to kill the rats in the city and thus prevent the spread of the plague which had taken a toll of 60,000 lives, but the attempt created a riot, for the natives think it a crime to take life of any kind. They will not kill a snake, and 20,000 natives die annually from snake bite. After twelve people were killed in the riot the native leaders were called in council and told to urge the Hindoos to leave town and camp in the open and not to visit friends and relatives in near-by towns until the rats were exterminated, for if the plague spread over India millions would die. This was done and the plague was stayed.

When General Allenby captured Jerusalem he found the water supply of the city consisted of rainwater caught upon the roofs of the houses and run into cisterns. There were 6,000 cisterns in the city, and some of them had not been cleaned out for a hundred years. Do you wonder that a large percentage of the people had typhoid, malaria or cholera? On of the first acts of General Allenby was to give them a water system that furnished pure, sparkling water. Thus the Anglo-Saxon goes on his way, doing what he believes is best for the native population. Envious and jealous nations often slam the Saxon, and unreasonable and unthinking people often censure him for harsh treatment of natives ; but silly ideas in religion and inhuman customs require firm and harsh measures to be eradicated. God promised that His people should have the heathen for an inheritance, not that they might exploit them or degrade them ; but lift them up, materially, mentally, morally. This is the white man's burden, this is his God-given duty.

EXPOSITIONS IN THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

By the Rev. Joseph Gay, A.T.S.

No. 7.—The Troas Vision and what came of it.

Part I.

"And they went through the region of Phrygia and Galatia, having been forbidden of the Holy Ghost to speak the word in Asia ; and when they were come over against Mysia, they assayed to go into Bithynia : and the Spirit of Jesus suffered them not ; and passing by Mysia, they came down to Troas. And a vision appeared to Paul in the night ; there was a man of Macedonia standing, beseeching him, and saying, Come over into Macedonia, and help us. And when he had seen the vision, straightway we sought to go forth into Macedonia, concluding that God had called us for to preach the Gospel unto them." (R.V. Acts xvi, 6-10.)

It was during his second missionary tour that St. Paul received the vision which opened for him the door to the West, which he entered, not doubting that it was the will of God that he should do so. The exceeding great importance of this event can only be appreciated as we carefully study previous and subsequent history.

It is a long deviating, but nevertheless interesting, road which leads up to the Troas vision. It is an equally long and deviating road, yet losing none of its interest, which moves onward from this selfsame vision, making its importance more emphatic with the advancing years.

Previous History.

Let us look at the previous history that we may correlate the event with the past. And first of all let us look at the history of the people to whom this man Paul was sent.

(a) The history of the people to whom St. Paul was sent. St. Paul was sent to the Gentiles. (Gal. ii, 9.) He is known as the Apostle of the Gentiles. Well, who were the Gentiles ? and who are the Gentiles to-day ? That is a great question and cannot be answered here for lack of space. The whole matter is set forth in the clearest detail in chapter iv of the Rev. Pascoe Goard's most excellent Commentary on the Epistle to the Romans. The term as it is used to-day means all nations—all peoples—who are not Jews. This is so because men regard, in the face of indisputable facts to the contrary, that the Jews are all Israel. The Gentiles of the Old Testament, the Goyim, were all those who were not of Israel. Ten-tribed Israel of the Northern Kingdom was so completely lost among the Gentiles as to be henceforth regarded as of the Gentiles. Not so Judah of the Southern Kingdom. The point I wish to make here is this, that if Israel of the ten tribes exists at all she must be numbered among those to whom the Apostle Paul was sent.

The point to emphasize here is that Israel and Judah came from the same stock, did they not ? From the same Divinely-created seed. The virility of that seed is abundantly proven in Judah, whose sons and daughters, though they passed through a prolonged persecution sufficient to exterminate a less virile race, persist unto this day. Though the centuries bore down upon them with superlative severity, though they were driven before a blighting and blasting east wind of hatred unparalleled in the history of any people, still they survived, and, as a recent contemporary has truly written : "Wield a power and prestige that is astounding for such a tiny body of people—they make up less than 1 per cent. of the population." Why should it be supposed that Israel was less virile than her sister Judah ? Coming as they do from the same seed it is more than probable, it is certain, that the virility of the one is the virility of the other. If Judah has passed through the fires, and she most certainly has, and continues unto this day ; has her sister Israel succumbed to the devouring flames, the grace of God having failed to protect her ? No ; as St. Paul was Divinely ordained, "a chosen vessel unto Me, to bear My name before the Gentiles and kings, and the children of Israel," he was ordained to bring that great Name before Israel of the ten tribes who were scattered among the Gentiles. To them he went and preached his Gospel. As we have already noted the Southern Kingdom of Judah, and the Northern Kingdom of Israel, came from the same Divinely-created seed. So did the Royal House of David, from whom our Lord Jesus Christ was descended. To make conjunction between the Gospel of Christ and the whole of Israel was surely the Divinely-appointed mission of the Apostles and disciples of the first century, and more especially the Divinely-appointed mission of the Apostle Paul. It would appear then that at that time, through the Gospel of redeeming grace, the so illustrious Son of David, to whom that everlasting throne was given, would have made conjunction there and then with both the House of Israel and the House of Judah if the latter had not continued "a most rebellious house," and the former had not remained undiscovered among the Gentiles. If that be true then it is this self-same Gospel which will bring back the Kingdom of Israel, one as in the days of David I, under the rule of Him who has the right to so reign, Jesus Christ our Lord. When Judah becomes no longer rebellious, and it is the Gospel of Christ, her Messiah, which will convert her, and when Israel's eyes are fully opened by the power of the same Gospel, to behold her King, and know herself in Him, then will come to pass the word of the prophet Ezekiel : "Thus saith the Lord God : Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the nations, whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land : and I will make them one nation in the land . . . neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all : . . . and My servant David shall be king over them ; and they all shall have one shepherd ; . . . And the nations shall know that I am the Lord that sanctify Israel, when My sanctuary shall be in the midst of them for evermore." (Ezek. xxxvii, 21-28.) The Gospel of redeeming grace then brings into conjunction David's so illustrious Son, and the Houses of Israel and Judah. We do not realize as fully as I think we ought that the Gospel of Jesus Christ is the Gospel of the Son of David. These are the reported words of the Angel of the Covenant to Mary: "And behold thou shalt conceive in thy womb and bring forth a son, and thou shalt call His name Jesus." What follows is associated with the Name of Jesus, they must therefore be read in the light of that Name. These are the words spoken of the human Jesus: "He shall be great and shall be called the Son of the Most High: (the incarnation took place at His birth) and the Lord God shall give unto Him the throne of His father David: and He shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of His kingdom there shall be no end." (St. Luke i, 32, 33.) All this is postulated of Jesus the Son of Mary. "Hosanna to the Son of David: Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord; Hosanna in the highest." (Matt. xxi, 9.) Mark it well, the Son of David. If this be true, then the Gospel is the glad news about the risen Son of David, Israel's King. What could be more appropriate, and in keeping with the Divine plan, than that the Gospel of Israel's King should be proclaimed to Israel's posterity scattered among the Gentile nations, viz.: the Northern and Southern Kingdoms of Israel and Judah. That Judah rejected such a Gospel does not, in the slightest degree, alter the fact, or minimize the significance and appropriateness of that Gospel being proclaimed with acceptance to Northern Israel. This will account for the readiness with which tens of thousands in Israel, Yes! and in Judah also, received the truth of the Gospel at the hands of the disciples at Pentecost and subsequently.

(b) The history of the man whom God sent.

The man and his message must ever be regarded as one and indivisible. To ignore the one is to subtract from the importance of the other. This is pre-eminently true here. Saul of Tarsus is a man you cannot ignore. His is a personality which ever arrests attention.

Let his career up to this point of the Troas vision be briefly stated. It will add to the importance of this wonderful Troas event and will throw further light upon God's Divine purpose and intention. It is generally supposed that the Jews, prior to the capture of Jerusalem by Titus, never wandered far from their native Judæa. Such, however, is not the case. One of the outstanding characteristics of the Israel seed has been nomadic. Israelites have always possessed a wandering spirit. It was doubtless given to them by their father Abraham. "The tribes," writes Lewin, "were from the first of a wandering spirit." Writing of the Jews at the time of St. Paul's birth he says: "The tyranny of their domestic princes, and the encouragement given them abroad by Alexander the Great and his successors, and subsequently the severities exercised against them under the oppression of a foreign yoke, conspired to scatter them amongst all the nations of the earth." We find therefore a considerable colony of Israelites and Jews in Tarsus, "no mean city," the metropolis of Cilicia, not very far from Judæa. Among these was a member of the tribe of Benjamin, a Hebrew of the Hebrews, who could trace his descent in a straight line from Abraham, and though speaking Greek, the language of Tarsus, and a Hellenist, he was not ingrafted into the people of God as a proselyte, but was of them by natural descent. When and how he received Roman citizenship we are not told, but that he did possess it is made clear by the Apostle's boast before the chief captain of the Temple: "With a great price obtained I this freedom," said the chief captain; "And Paul said, But I was free born." That fact stamps his father as a man of consequence in Tarsus, and of substance, since he was able to send his son to Jerusalem, there to sit at the feet of Gamaliel. In chapter xxii of the Acts we get just a glimpse into his early life. It is sufficient to warrant the statement of the Lord by the Holy Ghost to Ananias: "Go thy way: for he is a chosen vessel unto Me, to bear My name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel." No man has ever been better prepared from his birth for the work assigned him of God than this man of Tarsus. Then I think it is most significant in this connection to remember that he was not racially a Jew since he came, as he himself affirms, from the tribe of Benjamin. The term Jew was given to the inhabitants of Judæa only, who were descended from the tribe of Judah, and not to the descendants either of the tribe of Levi or the tribe of Benjamin. Having established the fact, or rather noted it, that this man was a "chosen vessel" unto the Lord, we shall have occasion to note again and again, as we peruse these expositions, how in a very special manner, in some respects unique, he is led onward and ever onward by that same Lord Who had chosen him; led so closely and intimately that at one time he exclaimed: "I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me." "It pleased God, Who separated me from my mother's womb, and called me by His grace, to reveal His Son in me, that I might preach Him among the heathen." Men, speaking generally, are very jealous of their freewill. Nothing must at any time interfere with the free action of that freewill. To prove their freedom of action they would, knowing what is the will and mind of God concerning them, like a perverse and foolish child, do that which is contrary. Thus they make a fetish of their freewill and worship at its shrine. Not so this so great "Chosen Vessel" of the Lord. He surrendered his will to God on the Damascus road (Acts ix, 5) and, like His Master before him, his one supreme, Yea! only concern, was "to do the will of Him that sent me, and to finish His work."

We shall now proceed to follow in detail the travels of the Apostle onward from the Troas vision, far beyond the point reached by the Evangelist St. Luke, and show the conjunction of the Church of Christ with Israel in the Islands to the end that salvation by that Name, which is above every other name, might be for salvation unto the uttermost parts of the earth.

THE WITNESS OF ARCHÆOLOGY TO THE BIBLE.—IV.

BY A. M. HODGKIN.

(By kind permission of the Council of the Victoria Institute.)

THE WITNESS OF EDOM.

THE romance of travel and exploration centres around a city the very site of which was lost to the civilized world for centuries. "A rose-red city, half as old as time," a city hidden away in the heart of Mount Seir; a city not built but hewn out of the sides of the many-coloured sandstone rock—such is Petra, or Sela, the strong city of Edom, mentioned under various names more often in the Bible than any other city except Jerusalem.

The refusal of the Edomites, the descendants of Esau, to allow the Israelites to pass through their territory, led to a perpetual feud between the two nations. Their malignity in joining with Nebuchadnezzar in sacking Jerusalem led to the prophecy of Obadiah against their land. "There shall not be any remaining to the house of Esau: for the Lord hath spoken it." At the present day it is impossible to identify any remnant of the Edomites. Mr. Arthur Sutton, after his visit to Petra, wrote as follows:—"It is a very solemn experience to stand, as we stood, amidst such desolation, and witness all around us the accurate fulfilment of the prophecies, foretelling God's righteous judgment upon peoples who have long since passed into eternity."[21]

THE WITNESS OF MOAB.

Among the numerous silent witnesses to the truth of the Bible narrative, none is more remarkable than the famous Moabite Stone. Almost every line of the inscription has some link with the geography or history of the Bible, illustrating many points which had been obscure. It records the wars of Mesha, king of Moab, with Omri, king of Israel, and with the Edomites. It is full of references to the national god Chemosh, which the Bible repeatedly tells us was the god of Moab. The name of Jehovah occurs on the monument.

The stone answers an objection which has been made with respect to the antiquity of certain portions of the Bible written in acrostic form, beginning with the twenty-two letters of the Hebrew alphabet in its old Phœnician characters. It was contended that several of these letters had not been invented at the date assigned to these Scriptures. But the Moabite Stone presents the same twenty-two letters at a period even earlier than those portions of Scripture.

Bishop Walsh concludes his account of this stone in the following words:—

"Mesha's haughty chronicle on the stone of Dibon was written to glorify himself, and to vaunt against the name and the people of the Lord; but it survives to bear witness of Jehovah's power, and it comes forth after the lapse of nearly thirty centuries as an unexpected and unintentional witness to His truth."[22]

THE WITNESS OF ASSYRIA.

The witness of an enemy is sometimes more telling than that of a friend. Such an enemy the countries of Israel and Judah found in the mighty Assyrian Empire, fierce, cruel and relentless.

Dr. Orr says: "It is a striking fact that there is hardly a single point of contact with foreign powers in the period of the kings which does not receive illustration from the monuments."

This is especially the case with regard to Assyria. The black obelisk of Shalmaneser, now in the British Museum, represents Jehu, king of Israel, prostrating himself before Shalmaneser in the act of paying tribute. It records between twenty and thirty campaigns of the great Assyrian king. Three of these were against Benhadad and a fourth against Hazael, kings of Damascus, all of them agreeing with Bible history.

"Considering the countless millions of persons and events in those ancient millenniums, the wonder is that, among the comparatively small number mentioned in the Bible, any of them should have appeared in archæological research."[23]

We notice this again in the inscriptions of Tiglath-pileser III, under whom the Assyrian Empire rose once more into power. He mentions six kings who are named in the Bible. It was he who introduced the new policy of carrying away captive to Assyria the original populations of conquered countries, placing in their stead populations likewise carried from a far distance, over whom he placed Assyrian officials. We have a well-known illustration of this in the case of Samaria.

Writing of Sennacherib and Hezekiah, Prof. Sayce says:—"The Assyrian and the Biblical accounts supplement one another. Sennacherib naturally glosses over the disaster that befell him in Palestine. . . . but he cannot conceal the fact that he never succeeded in taking the revolted city or in punishing Hezekiah as he had punished other rebel kings, nor did he again undertake a campaign in the west."[24]

The excavations at Nineveh have proved its vast extent and confirm Jonah's estimate of it, just as we have already seen the excavations at Jericho confirmed the Bible hint as to the smallness of that city. Prof. Rawlinson has pointed out that at the time of Jonah Nineveh was undergoing what seemed to be a final eclipse. Thus the time was ripe for Jonah's message.

THE WITNESS OF THE FOUR WORLD-EMPIRES.

We must briefly consider the witness of the four great world-empires of Nebuchadnezzar's dream.

The fact that there have been these four world-empires—just four and never another, notwithstanding the efforts of ambitious conquerors—is in itself a witness to the truth of the Bible, and confirms us in the belief that there will never be a fifth universal dominion till the Stone cut out without hands shall smite the image, and He shall come Whose right it is and take unto Him His great power and reign, and the earth shall be full of the glory of the Lord as the waters cover the sea.

THE SECOND BABYLONIAN EMPIRE.

If the critics can be said to have been entirely unanimous about anything, that one thing is their common judgment regarding Daniel. Its supposed late date—about 168 B.C. under Antiochus Epiphanes—and its unhistorical character have been confidently asserted. But Assyriologists have a good deal to say about this matter, and much that has been set down as fable turns out to be fact.

The presence of certain Greek words in this book were held to make it impossible for it to have been written until "after the dissemination of Greek influences in Asia through the conquests of Alexander the Great." The supposed Greek words never numbered more than eleven, and now, through the progress of the study of languages, the words that are actually Greek have been reduced to the names of two, or at the most three, instruments of music. It was held that it was impossible for these instruments to have found their way into

Babylon in 600 B.C. But the widespread intercourse between East and West before that time is now fully admitted, and Prof. Petrie, speaking of the city of Tahpanhes in Egypt, with its Greek colony, says that "probably many a kaithros, psanterin, and sumphonyah, as they called the Greek musical instruments, had been traded over to Jerusalem, and were well known before we find them in Jewish literature."[25] Moreover, the seven-stringed harp, invented by the Greek poet Terpander, is sculptured upon a monument of Assurbanipal's. That monarch died in 625 B.C. Thus we have certain knowledge that it reached the Babylonian court within twenty-five years of its invention![26]

The personality of Nebuchadnezzar has been familiar to us from childhood, but the book of Daniel is the only literature that gives it to us. There we see his regal spirit, his love of display, his pride in his buildings; and the fact that, though an idolator and a polytheist, yet he brings the sacred vessels into "the house of his god," as though he were a monotheist.

The character thus drawn is abundantly confirmed by the monuments. He has one favourite god, Bel-Merodach, and his inscriptions are mostly occupied with praises of this deity. "Merodach, the great lord, has appointed me to the empire of the world." The rest of his inscriptions nearly all relate to his immense building operations. "To astonish mankind, I reconstructed and renewed the wonder of Borsippa, the temple of the seven spheres of the world." The boast is echoed in the book of Daniel. "Is not this great Babylon which I have built for the house of my kingdom, by the might of my power, and for the honour of my majesty?"

The Arabs have been using, and still use the ruins of Babylon as a huge quarry, carrying off the bricks to sell to others for building purposes. Nine out of every ten of these bricks are stamped with the name of Nebuchadnezzar. Specimens may be seen in the British Museum.

The palace school at Babylon, the fact that captive princes were trained there; the court customs of officials, the enumeration of the different classes of the wise men of Babylon; the Babylonian imagery of the dreams and visions; the garments mentioned; the method of punishment for impiety against the gods by burning alive in a furnace, and casting men to the lions as an instrument of royal vengeance—all these details, recorded so vividly in the book of Daniel, reappear in the records of the monuments of the great city of Babylon.

How could a writer of fiction in the second century B.C. possibly have reproduced so faithful a picture of the life of a city in the seventh century B.C. when the civilization of that city had been overthrown for four hundred years?

THE EMPIRE OF MEDO-PERSIA.

The second world-empire was a double one, corresponding to the breast and arms of the image, and to the ram with two horns of Daniel's vision (Dan. viii, 20). "The ram which thou sawest having two horns are the kings of Media and Persia."

Who was "Darius the Median"? He is unknown in secular history. There was a coin in use among the Persians called the Daric. A note to a play by Aristophanes says that the "Darics were named not from Darius the father of Xerxes, but from another more ancient king." A new dynasty no doubt made a new coinage expedient. The Rev. Andrew Craig Robinson, in his interesting paper for the Victoria Institute last December, brings out very clearly his views that Xenophon and the cuneiform inscriptions are agreed in telling us that Darius is Cyaxares, the uncle of Cyrus, and that he shared the double kingdom with his nephew. Prof. Pinches, who was acting as chairman, said that "the Babylonian inscriptions only speak of Gobryas—there is no reference to Cyaxares as either king or even governor of Babylon." But he added that further discoveries in the East may, however, modify his conclusions.

Dr. Kyle hazards the suggestion that "it is not at all impossible that the Cyaxares of Xenophon, Gobryas of Nabonidus, and 'Darius the Mede,' are one and the same person. He would be a hardy critic indeed who would dare to say that 'Darius the Mede' is impossible."[27]

We do well to remember that Belshazzar was at one time considered an impossibility, before the inscriptions confirmed his mention in Daniel.

Ezra gives us the decree of Cyrus permitting the Jews to return to Jerusalem and rebuild the temple. The Annalistic Tablet, discovered by Prof. Pinches, tells how Cyrus collected and restored various peoples to their habitations, and returned the gods, which Nabonidus had brought to Babylon, in peace to their own sanctuaries. These two accounts are in full agreement. In the case of the Israelites, who had no idols, the sacred vessels of the temple are restored.

The cuneiform inscription at Persepolis identifies the Ahasuerus of Esther with Xerxes; and the book of Esther gives us a picture of that monarch in his home which corresponds exactly with his character in history in his life abroad. To have pictured this unique personality on an entirely different field 200 years after the event, as the critics suggest, and with every line of the picture corresponding to the palace at Shushan, which had meanwhile been destroyed, seems indeed beyond the power of fiction.

The French explorer, Dieulafoy, excavated the whole of this palace, and every detail throws light upon the book of Esther, and proves its historic accuracy. The scenes recorded fit the palace at Shushan as they would fit no other known palace of the ancient world, and the customs described fit no other court than that of Persia.

General Smuts, in the course of a speech in Toronto as reported by the Toronto Globe, said: "I take off my hat to the British people. I have seen them in the grimmest times and I can see that once more they are beginning to realize that they are up against it, and that toughness of fibre, that strength of soul, which has seen them through all the crises of their history, will once more be seen in this economic industrial struggle for the maintenance of their position which is going on to-day."

MICAH.

By Chas. H. Corrin.

MICAH'S message in seven short chapters sets forth the primary theme of The Person—Christ, and the second and interwoven theme—The Nation Israel. The recognition of the association of these themes is the first key to interpretation.

The prophet deals with a period of time from Abraham to the end of the age, about 4,000 years, and visualizes the millennium. So that the prophecy is by no means "minor," but is a very great book. The time period is a second key.

Micah lived in time of Isaiah, chapter i, 1 (cf. Isa. i, 1), and evidently commenced his work later and closed earlier than the evangelical prophet. The burden of his prophecy is the same as Isaiah's, though more robust in style. As Micah iv, 1–3, is almost identical with Isa. ii, 2–4, scholars have disputed as to which was the original. But there is no reason why God should not give the same message to two men, ministering to varied groups of people. Isaiah was, according to tradition, of royal blood; he was much occupied about the king's court, dealing with foreign affairs, a scholar and an historian. Probably his message was chiefly delivered to the rulers. Micah was a countryman from an obscure village, Moresheth in Judah. His message was probably delivered in the market-place to the people. This incidence of the several messages is suggested by the fact that, a century later, when the priests and prophets moved to put Jeremiah to death because of his prophecies against Jerusalem, the elders and people in their assembly pleaded that their hero king, Hezekiah, had not interfered with Micah proclaiming the same message (Jer. xxvi). The democratic Micah had evidently made a deeper impression upon the popular mind than the aristocratic Isaiah had done.

Micah bases his message on the history of the past (chapter vi, 4–5). Here is another key. Nearly all the writers of the Bible refer to prior Scripture and they never modify anything written aforetime. It would be good if all our Christian teachers would take the same basis for their thinking and utterance.

The prophecy is addressed to Samaria and Jerusalem (i, 5); i.e., the capital city of Israel and the capital city of Judah. Here lies a distinction providing another key. Solomon ruled over the twelve-tribed Kingdom of Israel; when he died, ten tribes rebelled and formed the House of Israel with capital at Samaria. Two tribes constituted the House of Judah with capital at Jerusalem. These two Houses are distinct throughout the Bible. Therefore we must always distinguish in reading concerning Israel, whether it means Israel of twelve tribes, Israel of ten tribes, or Judah of two tribes. Keeping this distinction in view, let us note the scope of Micah's message.

Principally, this message concerning the immediate time was addressed to Judah, and the prophet gives a terrible description of Church and State. He denounced their idolatry, covetousness, violent robbery, tricks in trade, impurity, drunkenness, bribery and corruption of priests, prophets, princes and judges, love of luxury and vain show, witchcraft, fortune-telling, false teaching. But he also had a denunciation against the House of Israel (i, 6), because the corruption of Judah had come from them (verse 9); and that the origin of the evil was their setting up of the law of Omri, king of Israel, instead of the Law of God (vi, 16).

The prophet was charged with a message of what the result of these things would be. He foretold the punishment of Israel, which came to pass when the ten tribes and outlying portion of Judah were carried away into Assyria. The fact that they never came back is another key to interpretation. He foretold also the destruction of Jerusalem, which came to pass 130 years after the deportation of Israel. The Jews (people of Judah) were taken to Babylon, but returned in part seventy years afterwards, being finally dispersed when Jerusalem was destroyed A.D. 70.

But to Micah was given, as to other prophets, the great promise of the Messiah, the Redeemer of Israel; and to him a more exact detail on one point than to any other prophet. He was commissioned to foretell the place of the Messiah's birth (v, 2). To him was also given the promise of the restoration (v, 7–9).

Now the Jews have never had an experience in accordance with this promise, and the majority of people have failed to find ten-tribed Israel enjoying it. What is the solution of the enigma?

Britain is Israel.

This recognition has been well called by a valued British-Israel teacher "A master-key to the Bible." Try it in every lock, test it out against every prophecy, in this and all the books of the Bible, concerning Israel.

But someone may ask: Is there not a promise of restoration to Judah in chapter iv, 8–10? Is there not hope of Jerusalem being delivered and having a king? Yes! in accordance with chapter v, 3, when they "shall return unto the children of Israel."

That return is proceeding. It commenced when the seven times of punishment of Israel began to lift and Jewry found its liberty in England and America. It took definite shape in the Great War when the Jews asked to be formed into Jewish battalions, and, with the British troops, they only of all the Allies marched into Jerusalem under Allenby in December, 1917; and the Union Jack flew over Jerusalem and the King of England appointed a Jew as his Governor. Does this awaken our national pride so that we boast ourselves above the nations? Then, the message of Micah to our fathers comes into redoubled force to-day, to every individual soul among us: "O man, . . . what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

But Micah sees further, right on to the millennial reign of our Lord (iv, 1–7). How men so seize on verse 3, "Beat swords into plowshares, spears into pruning hooks" and think that they can end war, forgetting a prior experience, "Beat plowshares into swords, pruning hooks into spears" (Joel iii, 10). War is not ended yet. There is at least, whatever preliminary conflict there may be, the gathering of the nations for the battle of the great day of the Lord God Almighty, when the Lord will come in person to deliver His people (ch. i, 3–4).

The prophet apparently summarizes all his prophecy in chapters vi and vii. "Hear ye—the Lord's controversy."

And he sets forth the Sin, the Punishment, the Repentance, the Restoration; all its darkness and all its glory being provided for in the mercy and compassion of God (vii, 18–20).

It will afford a profitable exercise to read this book through at one sitting.

THE LATE MRS. LANDSEER MACKENZIE.

WE regret to have to announce the death of Mrs. Landseer Mackenzie, of St. Bernard, Bournemouth, a gracious lady, wife of Mr. Landseer Mackenzie, the venerable and greatly respected President of the Bournemouth British-Israel Association, and a Vice-President and Life Member of the British-Israel-World Federation, and formerly Vice-President and Member of Council of the Imperial British-Israel Association prior to its incorporation in the B.-I.-W. Federation. Mr. Mackenzie is related to the distinguished painter, the late Sir Edwin Henry Landseer, who was elected a Royal Academician in 1831, and received the honour of Knighthood in 1850, and was offered the Presidentship of the Royal Academy in 1865. He died in 1873 and was buried in St. Paul's Cathedral. His glorious pictures have delighted millions of people.

The late Mrs. Landseer Mackenzie.

Mr. Landseer Mackenzie is a scholarly and distinguished British-Israelite of long standing, a rare gentleman of the old school. He was a Member of the first Council of the B.-I.-W.F., and he has frequently spoken on B.-I. platforms in London, Bournemouth and elsewhere. He is also the author of many articles in B.-I. publications, and of some caustic replies to opponents of B.-I., in which he dealt with their fallacies in a masterly way.

We tender to our good friend and his family our sincere sympathy in their great bereavement.

DAN—EARLY BRITONS.

To find the tribe of Dan is to find all Israel, since God had said that the captives that escaped should have the same meeting-place in the far-off Isles. Dan received only a small lot in the south of the land, and being of the same character then as now, he soon grabbed some more land for himself in the north, near Tyre and Sidon, and he engaged in shipping with the Phœnicians. He soon changed the name of the chief city Laish to Dan, carrying out Moses' instructions to Dan to set up his way-marks wherever he went. This tribe was not slow to write their name, e.g., Danube, Daniester, The Danam, The Danan, The Danim, Dan-tring, Danetz, Dan-aster, Danay, The Dan, The Dacia, The Davi, The Darric Alps, or the Danish Archipelago. In Pholeny's map of Ireland we find Dan's Lough, Dan-sowar and Dangan Castle, D. or W. The old inhabitants of Ireland were called Danarians. It is well known that among the ancient Kings of Ireland were several Davids, three Solomons, with a Daniel in every house and a Jeremiah in every family, with Jeremiah's statue in the old law courts in Dublin.

If we remember that Dan was the eldest son of Rachel's household, the reason and meaning of his name, and the prominent part this tribe took in leading and in governing the nation, that in peace and in war this tribe furnished Israel with their chief officers, their Samsons and chief men, we shall understand why the tribe of Dan is doing the same now, and why it was the forerunner to found the new kingdom in these Isles.

It is well to note that when, in 1 Chron., all Israel were numbered, Dan was not mentioned, the simple fact being that Dan was not in the land; he had gone to the Isles of the West, where others were soon to follow. Eldad, an eminent Jewish writer, says, "In Jeroboam's time, 975 B.C., Dan refused to shed his brother's blood, and rather than fight against Judah he left the country and went in a body to Greece, Javan (the British Isles), and to Danmark." In the Annals of Ireland it is stated, "The Danans were a highly civilized people, well skilled in architecture and other arts" from their being resident in Greece and their intercourse with the Phœnicians. Their first appearance in Ireland was 1200 B.C., or 85 years after Deborah's victory. In Keating's History of Ireland, "The Danans were a people of great learning and wealth, and they left Greece after a battle with the Assyrians and went to Ireland, and also to Denmark, and called it 'Dan-mares,' i.e., Dan's country."

Humboldt considers that the Greeks included in the term Phœnicians the Israelites, and is very clear that the early inhabitants of Ireland were Israelites, and that large numbers of them passed through Greece and Spain on their way.

We might quote from the ancient Irish Histories and the Welsh Triads, but I can only mention a few of the points. They tell us about the large companies of the chosen race which arrived in these Islands at the time of the prophet Jeremiah, 581-3 B.C., who came under the direction of the ship-owners of Dan. There was with the prophet, Baruch, a scribe, also the daughter of Zedekiah. They brought with them the Lia Fail, the Coronation Stone now in Westminster Abbey, on which all British Kings and Queens have been crowned for 2,300 years. They brought the harp and the grand melodies.

They started a school of Classes, Law, Philosophy and Poetry, and it took twelve years to graduate there, but the reward was adequate. "An Allam was allowed a standing income of 20 cows and their keep, with food for himself, wife and family and 20 attendants." Eochaid Heremon married Tea Tephi, the daughter of Zedekiah, and the three conditions Jeremiah insisted on were :—

1. The worship of Baal must be renounced, and the worship of the True God established.

2. The Nation must accept the moral law, as contained the two table

3. He must provide a school for the Ollam or Prophets.

In County Fermanagh, four miles from Enniskillen, is Lough Erin, and in an island called Davenish, in an old cemetery, is an old rock-hewn tomb called from time immemorial Jeremiah's tomb. It is well known to historians that for centuries Ireland was the university of all Europe.

Dr. Johnson said, "Ireland was in early times the School of the West, the great habitation of sanctity and learning." Julius Cæsar says, "The learned Druids were taught in the Irish School, and the youths from Galic were sent over there to finish their education."

Sir James Ware says, "The English Saxons received their education from schools then planted in Ireland."

This brings us down to 580 B.C., which is after the captivity of both Israel and Judah.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

MR. JOHN LEECH, M.A., K.C., had a good audience at Headquarters on January 22nd. He will give another address on Prophecy on Wednesday afternoon next. The Rev. E. A. Couldrey and the Rev. Pascoe Goard gave addresses on January 23rd. The speaker for Thursday evening next is Mrs. A. H. Murray. * * *

A series of eight meetings will be held in the Town Hall, Eastbourne, on February 10th, 11th, 12th and 13th, at 3 and 8 p.m. The Rev. Pascoe Goard, Mr. John Leech, Mr. Herbert Garrison and Mr. J. J. Morey will be the speakers.

A series of ten meetings will be held in the Central Hall, Westminster, February 17th to 21st. Particulars will be given later. * * *

The Rev. J. T. Childs has given two addresses for our Branch at Cheltenham. At both meetings a resolution was adopted supporting the action of Headquarters in joining in the Protest against the persecution of Christians in Russia. Many of our Branches have forwarded us similar resolutions.

A lecture given at Tonypandy on January 15th, entitled "The Sign and Witness of the Great Pyramid," by the Rev. W. T. Medhurst, was well received. Another talk was asked for, and there are strong hopes of the formation of a Branch here and a centre for the sale of our publications. The Chairman at this meeting is the under-manager of the mine, and one of the converts to British-Israel at a previous visit of the lecturer last November.

The Vicar of Burley, Rutland, the Rev. Colonel Seton of Mounie, was the preacher at the "Popular" Service at Peterborough Cathedral on the evening of Sunday, 12th January. The preacher took for his text Jeremiah xxiii, 5, and gave some British-Israel explanations of prophecy concerning our Lord's Second Coming, and the rule of the House of David, which are probably not often put before a Cathedral congregation.

Mr. Robeson, General Secretary, Canadian B.-I. Federation, writes :—"Since the forward move by the Toronto Central Branch in acquiring the beautiful property at Sherbourne Street as Headquarters, great interest is being shown in our teaching. Situated as it is on one of Toronto's main streets, people are constantly calling asking for information. On January 2nd, to a crowded audience, Mr. W. H. Blackaller, President of the Canadian Federation, delivered an inspiring New Year's Message. On January 9th Mr. Fenton Fansher is to speak on 'A New League of Nations.' Enquiries are being received from all parts of Canada and the U.S.A., and we look forward to 1930 as the greatest year yet experienced in the spreading of the Gospel of the Kingdom."

Mr. Chas. Lavender sends the following item :—"'Now the whole structure of Solomon's Temple was made, with great skill, of polished stones, and those laid together so very harmoniously and smoothly that there appeared to the spectators no sign of any hammer, or other instrument of architecture, but as if, without any use of them, the entire materials had naturally united themselves together, that the agreement of one part with another seemed rather to have been natural than to have arisen from the force of tools upon them. . . . . He (Solomon) also overlaid the Temple, both within and without. with boards of cedar, that were kept close together by thick chains, so that this contrivance was in the nature of a support and a strength to the building.'—Josephus, 'Antiquities,' Book viii, Ch. 3, 2. Whiston's Translation, p. 214.

"Is it possible that the 'thick chains' were on the same principle as, and actually the precursors of, the great steel chain which has been used recently to strengthen the Dome of St. Paul's Cathedral?"

For special reasons the "May Meetings" will be held early this year. The dates fixed are April 9th and 10th.

The Annual Meeting of Members and Associates for receiving the Report and Financial Statement for 1929 will be held at Headquarters on Wednesday, April 9th, at 5.30.

THE EARLY GEOGRAPHY OF THE BRITISH ISLES.

THE PREPARATION OF BRITAIN AS THE APPOINTED PLACE FOR GOD'S PEOPLE ISRAEL.

Considerable interest has been aroused by the recent report in the daily Press that a dredger, the largest in the world, being used in Southampton Water, had brought up debris showing evidence of a submerged forest; and we have received enquiries as to this profoundly interesting subject of the cleavage of these Islands from what is now the mainland of Europe, and their establishment by the Great Architect of the Universe as the safe and appointed place for Britain-Israel.

Those of our readers who have travelled, say from Dieppe to Paris, must have been struck by the evident similarity of geological formation between the coasts of France and England, from which it would appear that at some period the two countries formed part of the same continent. There is a map of Britain and Ireland in the Mammoth period which illustrates what appears to have occurred, and this map faces the title-page of Rev. Arthur Pritchard's very useful booklet, "The Bible and the British Race."

Those who already possess a copy will find this map helpful as they read this article, and those who do not yet possess a copy may have one by return post by sending sevenpence to the Covenant Publishing Co., 6, Buckingham Gate, London, S.W.1.

The map shows the union of these Islands with the Continent, and the submerged forest of the old land area is clearly indicated.

SUBMERGED CONTINENTS.

"According to a once popular theory, the ocean basin and continental elevations have been in the main permanent throughout geological times. The balance of evidence, however, is against this view. Some portions of the continents have, it is true, remained above sea level throughout geological time, and it is correspondingly probable that parts of the ocean basins may have been permanently below sea level. Nevertheless, there has been great interchange of ocean and continent. There is evidence, for example, of a great continent, known as Gonwanaland, which once extended from Australia westward across the Indian Ocean, included most of India and Africa, continued across the Atlantic and comprised the Eastern highlands of South America."

Thus writes Professor J. W. Gregory, F.R.S., Professor of Geology in Glasgow University, in his article on "Geology" in the Harmsworth Universal Encyclopedia. (Vol. 4, page 3475.)

LEAMINGTON BRANCH MEETINGS.

The local Secretary writes :—"A large audience assembled at 3 p.m. on January 23rd. After a hymn and prayer offered by Rev. Arthur Pritchard, M.A., he gave a rapid survey of the Book of Isaiah, showing the various nations to which God sent special messages by the Prophet; and clearly demonstrating that chapters xl to lxvi applied to 'Israel in the Isles'—i.e., Great Britain—'in the latter days'—our days—now—and how point after point exactly fits us and no other nation whatsoever.

Those present expressed great appreciation of the speaker's lucid address, and several ordered copies of Rev. W. Pascoe Goard's 'Outline Study of Isaiah,' which was particularly recommended.

Owing to two other important events taking place at the same hour, the attendance at 7.30 was smaller, but quite as appreciative. Rev. Arthur Pritchard occupied the chair, and Alderman Mason, J.P. (President of the local Branch), gave a lecture on 'The Growth of our B.-I. Truth,' and showed how it was influencing men's minds in many unexpected quarters. He spoke of how recent archæological researches were in every case proving the truth and accuracy of the Old Testament records, alluding to the Flood (as proved by the depth of the deposits), and the most interesting finds at Ur (the very existence of which the Modernists had denied and scoffed at), showing an extremely high state of civilization at the time of the call of our forefather, Abraham.

Subsequently the Chairman briefly touched upon the persecution of the Christians in Russia, and read extracts from some of the speeches at the great 'Protest Meeting' at the Royal Albert Hall."

THE STATESMANSHIP OF JESUS

By Rev. W. PASCOE GOARD, F.R.G.S.

This book is an exposition of the Epistle to the Hebrews. The Epistle bears in the signature place the name "GOD."

The double fact that the human authorship is withheld, and in the signature place the name "GOD" appears, indicates the Epistle to be a letter directly inspired from God to us.

The subject of the Epistle is God the Son; His Office and Ministry, as King of Righteousness; King of Peace; King of Salem.

The book is brilliantly written. It brings out new truths and restates well-known truths, so as to make all appear strikingly new.

The place of Israel in the New Covenant is made to appear with great clearness.

THE IMPORTANT PUBLICATION

The DOCUMENTS of DANIEL

By Rev. W. PASCOE GOARD

. . . Many have gone into the details of prophecies and many more will doubtless do so. Our purpose is to show the order of he prophecies so clearly that it will be easy for the student of the Word to follow up the study of Daniel. By separating the various documents and taking note of their outlines and purposes, this object should be accomplished.

The Book of Daniel relates itself to the great sweep of that history which began with the call of Abraham. It pre-writes the period of that history contained in the "seven times" of prophecy. It will not be hard for the student to make or select a chronological table, and to relate to it the various documents of Daniel, and the events therein portrayed. The predictions have been so fully fulfilled that there can now be no question in the informed mind of the fact that Daniel in his prophecies does indeed deal with very concrete facts, most of which have in due course appeared on the pages of the world's history. So very far has this been the case that we are justified in assuming that all the remaining facts so indicated will appear in due time.

IS THE BIBLE CREDIBLE ?

DO you realize that if you accept the Modernist theory of Evolution you deny the Divine inspiration of your Bible ?

Modernism and German-made Higher Criticism combine to destroy faith in the truth and the sacredness of our beliefs. God either created man in His own image or He did not, and if not we are as the beasts that perish.

Dr. McCrossan's book comes as a refreshing draught to a thirsty man, to those who truly believe that God's Word is in the Bible—that God's Word is the Bible. His array of facts and his forceful style chastise the Higher Critic and the Modernist. He takes his stand on God's Word and is unassailable.

Everyone who holds the Christian Faith should read—

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

APPROACHES TO THE FACTS OF BRITISH-ISRAEL TRUTH.—I.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD, F.R.G.S.

BRITISH-ISRAEL Truth consists in the study of a whole realm of historic facts which commenced about as far before Christ in the B.C. years as we are after Christ in the A.D. years, namely, from the call of Abraham to the present day.

Connected with this realm of historic facts is the record of the manifestation of superhuman personages, angelic and Divine, of superhuman activities in the realm of action and in the realm of knowledge, and of the manifestation of a spiritual dynamic born neither of the physical nor psychical, but proceeding from the Father of spirits, the only true and living God.

Drawing a chronological line from the call of Abraham to the present day, and letting the Israel-British history during that long and varied period be the base of the pyramid, we find that the apex of the pyramid above the centre of that chronological base line consists of the manifestation and ministry of our Lord Jesus Christ, culminating in the great offering on Calvary made for the redemption of His people Israel and for the salvation of the world.

The whole of this immense region of history is built compactly together into a great structure composed of material facts, and illuminated with spiritual truth.

There are various lines of approach to this great realm or structure of truth, but we shall confine our thought to two out of the many avenues of approach.

The first line of approach begins at the point where our feet are now treading the chronological highway of the ages. From this point we look backwards, and, ascending against the current of time, retrace the pathway traversed by the generations back to the beginning of things at the call of Abraham.

In so doing we start with the assumption "Britain is the modern development of the Israel of Prophecy."

In starting out upon this line we must first look at the grounds for our assumption. Such grounds are not wanting, and they are ample to establish the assumption.

Biologically.—Israel of the latter days has been indicated in the prophetic Scriptures biologically, proceeding from the general to the particular, thus:—

1. They are Semitic—that is to say, descended from Shem, one of the three sons of Noah, which immediately eliminates the remaining two-thirds of the Noachic descent, i.e., it bars the descendants of Ham and Japheth.

2. They are Hebrew, or descendants from Heber, which debars the remainder of the Semitic descent.

Digitized by Google

3. They are descended from Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, which debars the remainder of the Hebrew descent, and narrows the biological quest.

Ethnologically.—The Israel of modern days is declared to consist, first, of the descendants of a voluntary colony from all the tribes of Israel, occupying "the Isles" north-west from Palestine;—these are the ancient British—and, secondly, of the descendants of the ten-tribed nation of Israel, as distinct from the two-tribed nation of Judah. These are the Anglo-Saxons, Anglo-Danes, and Anglo-Normans, etc.

They are described nationally as an unit occupying "the appointed place" for a specified time, as a kingdom hidden from the eyes of the world.

BRITISH-ISRAEL IN "THE ISLES."

Take, for instance, the great Isaiah message from the 40th chapter to the 66th; it will be found that it is taken up, first, with the progress of the Israel people to "the Isles" north and west, first from Palestine, and later from the captivity in Babylonia.

Then from "the Isles" the progress starts out again as the people go to take possession of "the heritage of the heathen," and to take possession of "the waste heritages" to the uttermost parts of the earth "as a possession."

Finally, the onward flow of the movement in its world-girdling process reaches the land of the Fathers, viz., the Persian Gulf, coming from "the Isles," "from Egypt," and "from Assyria," and anyone who marked the converging lines by which the British armies approached Palestine in the last war will find that they came from Assyria, the Persian Gulf, from Egypt, by the ancient route into Palestine, and from "the Isles" of the north and west by the ships of Britain, thus fulfilling the ancient prophecy contained in Isaiah.

There are many and varied marks to identify Israel in the latter days. Moreover, Israel in the latter days must be manifestly bearing these marks if the Bible is to stand as an inspired foreword to history.

Now what does history record in regard to this matter?

Such historians as Sharon Turner and other modern writers trace our Anglo-Saxon people back by diverse routes, covering sea and land, to Western Asia.

By the sea routes they follow them by Land's End and Finisterre—which also means Land's End—on by Spain and Gibraltar, and thence by the usual Mediterranean route to Greece and Palestine, or, as Waddell puts it, to Phœnicia, the home of the Fathers.

By the land route such historians trace them through the forests of Germany, and by the rivers of Central Europe, to the Crimea; and through the passes between the Black and Caspian Seas to the land of the Israel captivity.

Enough has been said to indicate this line of approach. Libraries of literature have been written on it, and the case has been well made out.

The other line of approach is to begin at the far end of history, with the call of Abraham, and to follow down with the stream of history and prophecy, the main theme of which is the great story of the origin and onward march of Israel through the ages.

In committing itself to such a magnificent and detailed presentation of the narrative of coming history, stretching into the future for ages, involving successions of Empires and of civilizations—passing from one dispensation to another, and on to a yet more distant third dispensation with completeness of outline and wealth of detail—the Bible creates certain great necessities in the way of historic fulfilment, without the attainment of which by a certain family of the Semitic race, at a certain time, and in a certain geographical position, the whole scheme must fall to the ground.

From the standpoint of the ages, which a few years ago would have been called "prehistoric," but which to-day are recognized as fully historic, the prophets pre-wrote the history of a people,—Israel,—and, in a secondary sense, of contemporary peoples for ages to come. They pre-wrote them first as dwelling in the heart of Asiatic civilization, and as playing a leading and varied role therein.

Then they boldly swept across the gulf which separated ancient civilization from the modern civilization, which was to them a far distant civilization not then developed. To us it is the present "Western" civilization in which we live and move and have our being, as they lived and moved and had their being in the ancient civilization.

They swept across from an Oriental civilization to an Occidental civilization, the whole structure of which was as yet hidden from the eyes of their world, as the succeeding civilization which shall replace our own is hidden from the eyes of the world to-day. The succeeding civilization which shall replace our own is only dimly known in outline to those who know the very prophetic writings of which we are speaking, as they sweep forward to depict the coming civilization which is next succeeding ours, but which was twice removed from theirs.

In all this pre-writing of ages-long history they neither hesitated nor faltered; their voices rang clear as trumpets; their message was specific and definite. Thus they created the need of fulfilment which could only come with the rise of new civilizations, by the birth of new nations, by the detailed fulfilment of thousands of years of pre-written history on the part of Israel.

Only thus could history demonstrate that their message was true; and under the circumstances being true, must of necessity emanate from the mind, not of man but of God. For the mind of man could never compass such pre-writing of history.

In thought we stand where chronologically Abraham, his son Isaac, and his grandson Jacob, stood, and, shading our eyes, look down through the long distance of the ages upon which the first blazing outlines of the great history were sketched.

We stand with Moses (circa 1496 B.C.) as in the ears of assembled Israel he filled in more of the outlines of the same amazing story.

We stand with David some four centuries later, as with voice attuned to harp he sang of new details in the onward march of the same great army of Jehovah.

We stand with Isaiah, and later with Jeremiah, Ezekiel and Daniel, as still they carried forward the same majestic theme.

We stand with Jesus and the Evangelists, the Apostles, and the Revelator, as they sweep forward to the triumphant completion of that composite literature which had taken twelve hundred years to produce, to which scores of contributors had added their contribution, and we witness its final consummation in the last two infinitely beautiful chapters of the Bible.

Nothing approaching this great epic of revelation has ever appeared elsewhere in human literature; nothing so majestic has ever been produced from the heart and brain of man.

As a library of literature it must be justified by fulfilment, or it must stand simply as a masterpiece of human effort; but only that!

It created its own demands, its own need, in the field of historic fulfilment, in order to its demonstration to be what it claimed to be, viz., a communication from God through the minds of many men.

In a secondary sense the Bible required that the Continental nations of Asia and Europe should follow each other in certain orderly sequence, during an appointed period, and that then they should come to an end.

The sequence foreshadowed was Assyria, Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece, Rome; the latter first united, then divided, and ultimately appearing in eight or ten final kingdoms.

Needless to say, the need so created for historic fulfilment—of the wonderful picture of the 2nd chapter of Daniel, for instance—had not one chance in a million, humanly speaking, of being satisfied; yet all historians know that the history of the Continental Empires and Kingdoms has taken the one course necessary, among the countless courses open, for the fulfilment of the pre-written prophetic scheme.

The great need created by the literature of the Bible for its own fulfilment was the continued existence of two national Houses, namely, the House of Judah and the House of Israel. Not only must these nations so continue, but they must take a certain indicated course.

The House of David, the reigning House, must also be continued. This House, uprooted from Jerusalem, must be forthwith translated to, and planted in, "a high mountain and eminent, even the mountain of the height of Israel," and that mountain must be found, not in Palestine from which it was then being uprooted, not in Egypt, not in Babylon, but elsewhere "in the secret place of the Most High."

Thus Europe is indicated by elimination. (Ezek. xvii.)

The House of Israel must also pass over a certain clearly-demarked highway of history; first, uprooted from Palestine; secondly, scattered among the nations to the ends of the earth; thirdly, re-gathered and "cast into another land," namely, "the mountain of the height of Israel" (see Ezek. xx); and, finally, they must be restored to the Promised Land.

Again such a fulfilment, humanly speaking, had not a chance in a million, or for that matter in a million million, of accomplishment.

And yet the miracle has happened, for both the House of David and the House of Israel are to-day inhabiting the "high mountain and eminent, the mountain of the height of Israel" which Ezekiel declared was not to be found in Palestine, not in Egypt, not in Babylon, but elsewhere. And the nation of Jews, although still scattered, is in plain view, and is awaiting and expecting its re-gathering in Israel.

It will be seen, then, how much the sacred Scriptures depend upon fulfilment to demonstrate the Divine origin of the prophetic Scriptures.

Ignorant of the whereabouts of Israel, to their shame be it said, those who call themselves "the scholars" to-day declare that the Scriptures have broken down. It is not true that the Scriptures have broken down, but their claim to pre-eminence in scholarship has broken down at this vital point before the eyes of men and angels, and the sooner they recognize the fact the better. For this defect in their scholarship vitiates all their present theological position, and is the cause of wrong conclusions being adopted.

But are we in any better position? Without assumption of any other quality than that of being able to recognize and accept facts as we find them, we say "Yes," we are in a better position. We know that the House of David and the House of Israel are in being; that they have come to the present in time and place by the routes and at the times indicated by the prophetic writers; that they are carrying out the activities, and hastening to achieve the destiny indicated for them of God "by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began."

THE THREE GARDENS.

By the Rev. H. B. Simeon, M.A.

[These papers on the Three Gardens formed the subject of three addresses in a Church in Sussex during a quiet afternoon in Passion Week, 1929, conducted by the writer.]

No. 1.

The First Garden.

In the study of the account of the Passion of our Lord as given in the Gospels we meet with one oft-repeated phrase: "that the Scriptures might be fulfilled." These words seem to show that all history had been leading up to one great climax, namely, the Redemption of mankind upon the Cross, and the restoration to man of what he had forfeited by sin, namely, immortality and everlasting life. It would be indeed a work of enormous labour and time, albeit of the greatest interest, to trace out in detail the fulfilment of Scripture in the greatest tragedy that the world could ever see, but it is proposed to take in these three papers some portion of the subject.

The First Garden is referred to in Genesis ii, 8.

"The Lord God planted a Garden eastward in Eden."

The Second Garden is referred to in Matthew xxvi, 36.

"A place called Gethsemane," to which St. John in xviii, 1, adds: "Where was a Garden."

The Third Garden is referred to in John xix, 41.

"In the place where He was crucified there was a Garden."

The Garden of Eden is the Garden of Happiness, Sin and Death.

The Garden of Gethsemane is the Garden of Sorrow, Conflict and Agony.

The Garden of Calvary is the Garden of Life, Resurrection and Hope.

And as we proceed we shall see how intimately connected one with another they are, and how the analogies and types in the Old Testament are developed and fulfilled in the New Testament. With these introductory words we pass to the consideration of the First Garden, the Garden of Eden.

I.

Almost insensibly as we read of the redemption of man by Him Who is so often referred to as "the Second Adam," our thoughts revert to the First Garden in which was placed the first Adam; that beautiful Garden, surely typical of this beautiful world as it came from the hand of its Creator, that Garden in which man lived in the time of his innocency. The very word itself, Eden, is expressive of delight, enjoyment and happiness, and in the LXX (the Septuagint, the ancient Greek version of the Old Testament) the word is παράδεισος (paradeisos), which means a pleasure ground, and from which comes the word "Paradise."

In Joel ii, 3, where the Garden of Eden is mentioned, the Greek word used for Eden is τουφή (touphé), which means beauty or delicacy. Isaiah (li, 3) speaks of Zion which shall be like Eden, "and her desert like the Garden of the Lord; joy and gladness shall be found therein, thanksgiving, and the voice of melody."

Into this beautiful place God put man, made in His Own image, endowed with Divine gifts, to be God's agent and to have the control of the world.

Rightly, therefore, may we call the First Garden the Garden of Pleasure and Happiness.

Eden is a Garden of type and prophecy. Two types are mentioned at once. Among the trees that were "pleasant to the sight and good for food" we read of "the tree of life in the midst of the Garden," and "the tree of knowledge of good and evil." We also read of a river to water the Garden, which is afterwards divided into four rivers, whose names are given: Pison (freely flowing), Gihon (stream), Hiddeke (rapid)—afterwards called the Tigris, and Euphrates (sweet).

The River of Eden is parted into four rivers to water the Garden, so that the idea presented to us of Eden is a dwelling-place prepared for man, the river flowing through it being the River of Life, which should by means of the channels of the four streams be spread over the world, and this river has been thought to be the type of the four Gospels.

The Tree of Life and the River of Life are two types of which we hear later, for they are the figures of that salvation which the history of the world was to unfold. The prophet Ezekiel refers to both the Trees and the Waters in his vision of the Holy Waters described in chapter xlvii, and they are referred to again by St. John in Rev. xxii, 1, 2. The Cross is referred to as a Tree in Gal. iii, 13, and also in 1 Pet. ii, 24.

Among the trees of the Garden that were pleasant to the sight and good for food are mentioned two mystic trees, the Tree of Life and the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil. The Tree of Life is stated to be in the midst of the Garden. Special notice should be taken of that, as it will be seen later on what is the meaning and significance of this. Adam was told that he might eat of the fruit of all the trees but one, namely, the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil. But he was allowed to eat of the fruit of the Tree of Life, not as a means of conferring immortality, which was his already by Divine gift, but as a symbol or guarantee of that immortality with which he had been endowed, and which would continue to be his so long as he remained obedient to God. The penalty of the transgression of the command not to eat of the fruit of the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil was Death. It was not the tree itself that produced spiritually poisonous fruit, for it was created by God, and He could not have created evil. The penalty was to follow the act of disobedience to God's command. The description of this tree as the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil was a representation of the fundamental difference between right and wrong, duty and sin, which lies at the root of all responsibility.

Moreover, it expresses the fact that evil existed before man, just as undoubtedly physical death did also. The origin of evil no one knows or ever can know in this world. How it entered into the world is shown in the pictorial account of Eden. And this most beautiful picture proves itself to be true, because it presents to us the Father seeking His disobedient child with blended love and tenderness, and yet with necessary sternness, and helping him to bear the consequences of his sin with the promise of ultimate redemption from spiritual death, which is the fruit of sin. If God corrects His child, yet with the punishment of toil and suffering are also blended sympathy and hope.

Upon this beautiful Garden of happiness and delight a great change came. Why evil was allowed to enter we know not, any more than we know the origin of evil itself. But evil, allegorically represented by a serpent endowed with intellect and powers of speech, entered. And this serpent represents the Arch-enemy of God, Satan, or the Devil. In Rev. xii we are told that "there was war in Heaven. Michael and his angels fought against the Dragon, and the Dragon fought and his angels, and prevailed not, neither was their place found any more in Heaven; and the great Dragon was cast out, called the Devil and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world; he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with them."

In these words, which form part of the description of the Vision of Heaven that was vouchsafed to St. John, we seem to have a clue as to the reason why Satan in the guise of a serpent was allowed by God to enter into that beautiful Garden of innocence. We notice that the expulsion of him and his angels from Heaven left no loophole for forgiveness. And further, we gather that the reason for their expulsion was pride that had produced jealousy. Human words must be used in default of better ones, though as applied to events in the other world they may have such subtle meanings as to be above our understanding. Then we notice that Satan and his angels were cast into the earth. It would seem that this was because before the fall, when Satan had been one of the Archangels, after his fall he still claimed dominion over the world. He asserted this to our Lord in one of the Temptations. As he showed Him all the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them he said to Christ, "All these things will I give thee if thou wilt fall down and worship me." And Christ did not dispute the claim. Further, Christ spoke of him as "the Prince of this world," and St. Paul in Eph. vi, 12, in speaking of wrestling with spiritual enemies, mentions "the rulers of the darkness of this world." If this be so, and as God committed to man the control of this world, we see why the subtle tempter was trying to deprive man of it. So man was assailed by the Arch-enemy of mankind, and we gather that the temptation was the sin of pride, a desire to know more than God had intended him to know, and thus place himself on a level with God.

Therefore Satan directly contradicted God's fiat that disobedience to that one command not to eat the fruit of that particular tree would involve death—spiritual death, i.e., separation from God. "Thou shalt not surely die, for God doth know that in the day that ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods knowing good and evil."

The result we know. Man fell at the first assault, and it was Pride that overthrew him. Does not this throw a brilliant light upon St. Paul's statement about Christ? "He humbled Himself even unto the death upon the Cross." As man fell through Pride he could be reinstated only by man's humility of the very deepest kind, being that of the Man, the Human Son of God, Who left His throne in Heaven and emptied Himself of His glory.

So the Garden of happiness was changed into the Garden of sin and death, spiritual death, separation from God. Sentence was passed by God upon the tempter, and then upon the man and woman. The heaviest sentence was the first one. It not only contained no hope for him, but in it bore the germ of hope for his victims. The serpent, who should henceforth be at continuous war with man was given power to inflict upon him terrible suffering, it being the Divine law that sin must always produce suffering of some kind, but in the end man should be the ultimate victor. The wording of the sentence upon the serpent should be noted. "I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it (i.e., the seed of the woman) shall bruise thy head (which means fatal injury, for the head is the seat of the vital powers) and thou shalt bruise his heel" (the heel not being a vital part, but involving suffering, or even crippling of the body). It should be noted that the neuter pronoun "it" and the masculine pronoun "his" are both applied to the seed of the woman, and it is so in the Revised Version. This is not accidental, but has a meaning. Doubtless the whole prophecy applies in its entirety to Christ, Who was the seed of the woman. But the use of the two genders means that the "it" includes the whole human race, which is to be in continuous conflict with the powers of evil, and therefore will share in the final victory wrought by Christ, and that the "his" the masculine pronoun, applies to Christ, because He was to suffer terribly in the final conflict on Calvary, although sinless Himself, thus bearing for the whole race of man the inevitable penalty of sin.

For the present purpose of considering the Three Gardens together, there may be seen in the words of the curse passed upon Adam the forecast of the suffering of the Second Adam: "Cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life. Thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth unto thee, and thou shalt eat the herb of the field. In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread till thou return unto the ground, for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Our Lord Himself as man shared in the curse, and as He knelt on the hard ground of the Second Garden in Gethsemane in His agony, He must have felt to the full the whole meaning of the curse. Indeed, throughout His whole life He must have felt the hardships foretold for man. On one occasion He did mention it, though He seldom spoke of it. His words were: "Foxes have holes and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of Man hath not where to lay His head."

Among other things produced by the land under the curse are mentioned thorns. It is not difficult to see the foreshadowing of the Crown of Thorns, which formed part of the physical suffering borne by Christ. "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread" forecasts the hard ground of the Second Garden that was bedewed with the bloody "sweat," which the bearing of the curse forced from His brow. The only part of the curse which does not seem to find a parallel in the Second Garden, nor even in the Third Garden, is the concluding part of it. "For dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." The dead body of the crucified Lord was not suffered to corrupt; but our bodies do corrupt, and return to the dust. This has often been thought to be one of the greatest difficulties in connection with our declaration of belief, "I believe in the Resurrection of the body." The writer does not feel that this is the right place to consider what is really meant by those words. But the point under consideration now is why, if we are to share in Christ's Resurrection, our bodies must turn to dust, although our Lord's body did not. But the answer is plain. Our Lord had in Gethsemane and on the Cross borne the full weight of the curse for sin. The climax had been reached when He had been actually forsaken by the Father. He Himself said so at the very end. "My God, My God, why didst Thou forsake Me?" (which is the true translation). The climax of the curse had been reached. He had been actually separated from God. That is entirely beyond our understanding. But those awful words were followed instantly by the cry of triumph, rendered in English: "It is finished"; but in reality the one single Greek word means: "It has been perfected." The Redemption of man had been completed. The reunion between man and God had been perfected. The serpent's head was bruised and broken in defeat. The curse had been overcome, and therefore could no longer apply to Him. But when we rightly say that the Atonement was completed upon the Cross, we must be careful to understand rightly what Atonement means. It emphatically does not mean that all the sins of the world, past and future, are washed away in the Precious Blood. If it did mean that, it would mean that we might henceforth sin with impunity. What it does mean is that, provided we will accept and utilize what the Saviour did for us, then and then only we have a right to claim forgiveness and pardon—a right which man had not before. This right to claim forgiveness and pardon involves something for us to do ourselves. Each one must work out his own salvation with fear and trembling. The death of the Saviour upon the Cross does not automatically bring forgiveness and pardon. St. Augustine put this most clearly in the well-known words: "God made you without you. God redeemed you without you. But God will not save you without you." If we confess our sins, that is the point, if we own up, with no attempt to cover them up, then the irrevocable right which the Cross has given us applies. "He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." Cleansing and forgiveness mean the absolute washing away and annihilation of our guilt. But emphatically it does not mean that the consequences of our sin are washed away. The guilt is washed away, but the consequences remain. The curse upon man in the Garden of Eden was indeed destroyed on the Cross, but the consequences of the curse remain—and one of those consequences is the corruption of our bodies. We still must return to the dust, because we have all sinned. Our Lord was not sinful. He took upon Himself our sins and guilt, and paid the extreme penalty, even to the utmost climax, the separation from God. By that He gave us what we had not before, an absolute right to claim pardon, which right nothing can take away; and by this He broke the curse, but not the consequences of it. He Himself being without sin had no consequences to bear. Therefore His body could not corrupt. The prophetic Psalmist could rightly sing: "Thou shalt not suffer thy Holy one, thy sinless one, to see corruption."

In the two following articles the writer will show how closely connected the First Garden is with the Second and Third Gardens.

THE COSMICAL MOTIVE OF THE INCARNATION.

THE word Cosmos is defined as "the world or universe considered as a system, perfect in order and arrangements: opposed to chaos." May we not say therefore that the Cosmos is the Kingdom of God? It is the "Father's House," one House, consisting of many "apartments" for His large and varied family.

As a Rabbi puts it: "The House of God is the whole realm above and the whole realm below." Now, it so happened that in one portion of this House, Cosmos or Kingdom, the subjects committed a wilful breach of a great Law of the Kingdom, with the terrible, natural consequences that their earth habitation became out-lawed, and they themselves the victims of the curse of the broken Law, from which it would be necessary to redeem and save them, not only for the sake of the earth-planet, but on behalf of the whole Cosmos. The unity between the earth and the Divine Kingdom, which had been created a universal solidarity, now became fractured and disorganized.

The forbidden, wrongful partaking of the fruit from the tree "in the midst of the garden" disorganized the relation of the earth with the Cosmos, banishing the Paradisaical conditions, producing cataclysmic disturbances in Nature, and introducing pollution and disease into the organic frames of all organisms. Thus the FALL has a physical and natural significance, being the first cause of all that has sprung from physical pollution and material disease, decay and death.

If only scientists generally could get this scientific explanation of the Problem of the Fall, they might be led on to accept the companion and sequel truth of the huge Scheme of Redemption or Restoration, thus believing in things invisible as well as in "all things visible."

So we may take it that the earth is now under the curse of the broken Law. Its crust is the tomb of a dead Past, the wreckage of a fallen and degraded Mother Planet. What remains is the broken debris, the charred remains of a world that must have been inconceivably glorious, the Geological formations are anything other than a normal phenomenon, tragedy of existence being written, chapter after chapter, in the earth's script of the Past; for surely Nature is not catastrophic in its normal working. Even the monster piece of masonry known as the "Great Pyramid," though never used as a human tomb, is yet a tomb of billions of Nummulites and other animalcules. As a master-hand has written: "Change and decay in all around I see," is the plaint of science, of the heights above, and the depths beneath.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Now, if the questions be asked:—Whence came the first seeds of disease, of decay, of death? And whence came the pains of death, birth pangs, suffering and sorrow? No mere materialist can tell us, but the Bible can and does. "Genesis" is the story of man being put out of adjustment with God. "Revelation" the forecast of his readjustment; and the New Testament, how to recover the readjustment.

Therein we can find a sound, scientific collection of statements, and these must be the foundations whence all our thought adventures proceed. It asserts that "by man came death." If so, then how came death by human instrumentality, except by the Fall of man? But will death itself always continue? And the Bible plainly answers in the negative:—"The last enemy that shall be abolished is death."

And who is the abolisher? The Book variously describes Him as the Logos Who was in the beginning with God; the Lamb that was slain from the foundation of the world as well as the Lamb of the New Jerusalem yet to be. Most suggestively, He Himself tells us that He is the Alpha and the Omega; hence we may add, the everything necessary betwixt and between—the Way that joins them, the Truth that explains them, and the Life that binds them.

For He is indeed the μεσίτης, the One in the middle, the Middle Man, the Mediator, Who not only comes between God and man but between God and the Cosmos, being the ages-long Personal Channel through Whom the "Light of Life" or the Divine Essence is outpoured eternally from the apex to the base of the Pyramid of Creation. This Cosmical system of Mediation became disorganized by the Fall, interfering with the eternal plan of Cosmic Architecture and Masonry, and stopping its normal outworking and progress. And so, either the earth, and all that therein is, must be annihilated, or the work of Redemption (foreknown and foreprovided for, by the Lamb mediating and sacrificing the Divine Essence from the beginning) must be forthwith commenced, and continued until God shall be all in all. This is what may be termed the Scientific, Cosmical Motive of Christ's Incarnation, a motive of Cosmic necessity and not of love or pity only.

Only by the descending from Heaven of the Christ, the Head of the Mediatorial System of Life, the Corner Stone of the Pyramid of Creation, and by being made flesh, and dwelling amongst us, could the breach in the sodality of the Cosmos be rectified and restored. Redemption, in this aspect, is the adaptation of the Cosmic engine of Law to a breakdown in a certain area of its creative operation; a spontaneous energy in Nature which in time, with or without external assistance, sets to work to put things right again. This healing process of Redemption had been going on slowly and surely for thousands of years, from Adam to Zacharias the Priest, and so, under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, he proclaimed, even before Jesus was born, that "the God of Israel hath visited and wrought redemption for His people," meaning here God's people Israel, to whom the word Redemption (which is a translation of λύτρωσις = made a loosing), particularly applies, though here, in this article, it is employed in its usual theological sense. As regards the tenses used in the Benedictus, there need be no misunderstanding. Dr. Cheyne writes: "All has been finished before the foundations of the world, in the Divine Counsels." Thus we are at liberty to consider the tenses as past and completed, or as perfects of prophetic certitude. The Scheme of Redemption began when the humiliation of death came to man instead of translation, and it will go on and on until death has been abolished. But so far as man is concerned, the Scheme wasn't certified until the Lord Jesus sealed it with His Blood or Divine Essence on the Altar of the Cross.

Informed readers now see, or should see, that the great purpose of the Incarnation of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, was to take the initial act on earth that should definitely restore to union with the Creator and the Cosmos, the fallen earth and its abnormal and depraved inhabitants, in fact, to make Propitiation or At-one-ment.

Thus the whole life-course of Jesus was equally involved in the purpose and necessity of the Incarnation.

It remains shortly to indicate the reason of its age-long postponement.

GOD'S PURPOSES SLOWLY RIPENING.

By the wisdom and selection of God, a single man, Abram by name, was chosen and drawn out into the wilderness to settle in the "Land of Promise," and to found a new Dispensation, by "Generation" and "Regeneration."

From him was raised a Family and a long and strictly-guarded line of descent that should eventuate in a suitable procreative instrument for the Conception and Birth of the promised Son of God, Who, in the fulness of time, became the Son of man in order to make the sons of man, sons of God, and particularly Abraham's chosen descendants, whom the Lord actually "visited and redeemed."

From Abraham, too, sprang a Race, a Kingdom, a Royal House, and its inseparable Israel Nation, whose protective bosom should be ready for the Infant Christian Church when required, that both might grow and function together intently as Divine instruments, on the earth, of generation and regeneration to chosen, incarnating spirits sent down for development and service by the Father of spirits. Together the Church and State, under its Davidic dynasty, all adown the centuries, have unknowingly been fulfilling prophecy by being a blessing to the world at large, as Jehovah declared that Abraham and his seed should be, "seed" being, of course, a comprehensive term as Israel-Celto-Saxon or "Brithish" history has effectually demonstrated in every Continent wherever Britain's traders, missionaries and Bibles have gained an entrance.

Soon, maybe, shall the Seed Paramount reappear among us, and the "Israelites indeed" with Him and under Him; and, in a purified and renewed earth—God-possessed, Angel-garrisoned and Spirit-pervaded—shall He restore the Cosmic harmony broken at the Fall. Then, indeed, we may reasonably surmise that the bells of highest Heaven shall sound their loudest peal for a prodigal world at long-last returning from the wild; and who is bold enough to say that earth's inhabitants may not hear it on the wireless! Nothing nowadays seems to be impossible outside the domain of Mathematics, so we must wait and hear, as well as "wait and see," what the Future will yet bring to pass for our fallen, groaning planet.

THE WITNESS OF ARCHÆOLOGY TO THE BIBLE.—V.

BY A. M. HODGKIN.

(By kind permission of the Council of the Victoria Institute.)

THE EMPIRE OF GREECE.

THE witness of the Grecian Empire to the Old Testament is a negative one.

We have already seen that the presence of two or three Greek words in the book of Daniel does not prove it to have been written after the conquests of Alexander the Great. But inversely, the absence of Greek words—except these two—and of Greek thought and influence is a strong argument against the book of Daniel having been written at a time when the eastern world was saturated with Greek thought.

With regard to the New Testament the evidence is positive. The view that New Testament Greek was corrupt and ungrammatical, and that the idioms were the result of over-literal translations of Hebrew, has been greatly modified if not abandoned by the recent discoveries of Greek papyri among the rubbish heaps of Egypt. The unearthing of business letters and documents, private epistles, even love-letters, ill-spent petitions and accounts of Greek-speaking farmers in upper Egypt, have proved that these idioms are those of people who could not by any possibility have been brought under the influence of Hebrew thought.

The papyri have given us the everyday language of the common people of that time, and though it differed from classic Greek, it had a widespread, varied and cultured usage.[28] It was the language by which the Holy Spirit "could make Himself understood everywhere by the masses to whom His revelation came." (Moulton.) We may well believe that the fact of the New Testament being written in Greek implies that the Spirit of God handed the Truth over to Gentile custodians when the Jews as a nation had rejected their Messiah.[29] That language, with its power of conveying delicate shades of thought, its precision, and flexibility and rich fullness has become the channel of Divine revelation to us in the New Testament.

[28] See "The Deciding Voice of the Monuments," p. 123.

"When Greece went forth, under Alexander the Great, to conquer the East, the union of oriental and occidental was attempted in every city in western Asia. None of these cities seem to have been so successful as Tarsus, in establishing a fairly harmonious balance between the two elements." It is from this fact that Sir William Ramsay tells us that "Tarsus was the city which should produce the Apostle to the Gentiles." "Only 'a Hebrew sprung from Hebrews' could be the Apostle of the perfected Judaic faith; but he must be born and brought up in childhood among the Gentiles, a citizen of a Gentile city, and a member of that conquering aristocracy of Romans which rules all the cities of the Mediterranean world. The Apostle to the Gentiles must be a Jew, a Tarsian citizen (i.e., a Greek) and at the same time a Roman."

THE EMPIRE OF ROME.

Luke has been described as, "rather provocative as a historian," "provocative of criticism, and never in error." He is in constant touch with the great Roman Empire, its cities, its institutions, its governors and officers. Are these allusions accurate, or are they full of blunders?

The fascinating writings of Sir William Ramsay have answered this question. He has brought the test of archæology to bear upon it, and unhesitatingly places Luke "among the historians of the first rank."[30] In his latest work, "The Bearing of Recent Discovery on the Trustworthiness of the New Testament,"[31] he has taken us into his confidence and told us the series of events which brought about this complete change in his opinions; for he began as a disciple of the critical school, and was "under the impression that the history [of the book of Acts] was written long after the events, and that it was untrustworthy as a whole."

The candour of such eminent scholars as Prof. Sayce and Sir William Ramsay in confessing their changed attitude towards the criticism of the Old Testament in the one case, and of the New Testament in the other, through the discoveries of archæology, goes far to prove the importance of that science and the value of its testimony.

Sir William Ramsay's life has been devoted to the study of Roman institutions in Asiatic Greece and the influence of Asia on the Græco-Roman administration; and it was there on the spot in the comparatively unexplored wilds of Asia Minor that he found his preformed opinions to be wrong. He found Luke's history to be "unsurpassed for its trustworthiness." No other traveller had left an account of the journeys he made across Asia Minor; the narrative of Paul's travels placed in his hand a document of unique and exceptional value to guide his investigations.

The fact that first opened his eyes was finding that Luke was correct—instead of, as was supposed, grievously mistaken—in stating that Paul and Barnabas fled over a frontier into Lycaonia from the city of Iconium, thereby implying that Iconium was not situated in the province of Lycaonia in the year 50 A.D. but that it was a city of Phrygia. A change of boundary was made early in the second century when Iconium was included in Lycaonia, and there ceased to be a frontier between Iconium and Lystra, thus proving that Acts xiv, 6, could not have been written later.

So small a fact as this changed Sir William Ramsay's whole outlook, and step by step he followed up the clue. "The evidence," he says, "to test all important history, and especially the Old and New Testaments, exists, and can be discovered with patience, knowledge, ingenuity and money."

"Every incident described in the Acts is just what might be expected in ancient surroundings. The officials with whom Paul and his companions were brought in contact are those who would be there. Every person is found just where he ought to be: proconsuls in senatorial provinces, asiarchs in Ephesus, strategoi in Philippi, politarchs in Thessalonica, magicians and soothsayers everywhere. . . . The variety is endless, as real life is infinitely varied. . . . Legal proceedings are taken against Paul and his friends in many places, and accusations have to be made in each case according to the forms of Roman law. The accusation varies in each case; it is nowhere the same as in any other city; yet it is everywhere in accordance with Roman forms."[32] "In Jerusalem and Palestine Luke's language is far more Hebraistic in type, in Athens it has the Attic flavour; in the Greek world generally Luke has the general dialect. . . . The whole account of Paul before the Areopagus is expressed by Luke in the tone and style and language in which the action was transacted. . . . The scene is bathed in the light of Attic suns."

But if Luke is provocative as a historian in the Acts, he is much more so in the opening words of the second chapter of his Gospel. In Luke ii, 1-3, "there are four statements about the action of the Roman Imperial Government which the critics of the New Testament pronounced to be incredible and false."

"The reason," Sir William Ramsay writes, "for the feeling of triumph on the part of many critics lay, of course, in the desire to discredit the superhuman element in history. Their hostility to Luke arose out of their refusal to admit the superhuman element in the government of the world."

It was confidently declared that Augustus never ordered any general "enrolment" or census. That even if he did it would not have extended to Palestine. That even if a census had been held in Palestine it would not have been necessary for Joseph, and still less for Mary, to go up to their own city of Bethlehem to be enrolled; and, further, that Quirinus never governed Syria during the life of Herod.

From archæological discoveries in Egypt and in Asia Minor every one of the statements by Luke has been proved correct. "Discovery confirms the correctness of all the facts that Luke mentions regarding the census and its manner and its dates. . . . He gives us a very striking picture of a splendid piece of governmental work."

Sir William Ramsay brings out the skill of Luke as an historian in contrasting the religion of freedom with the power of Imperial Rome, destined for centuries to contend with each other. "The man who cannot see the splendour of this passage must be blind to the spirit of history. Augustus, the mighty Emperor, and Mary, with her infant child, are set over against one another."

The surrounding facts are matters of history, and can be proved on historical evidence, but the inner truth moves on a higher plane, it proves itself to the soul of man. "No man can make historical investigation take the place of faith. . . . Yet it is not without its value to have the truth of the concomitant circumstances demonstrated. One must remember that Christianity did not originate in a lie, and that we can and ought to demonstrate this, as well as to believe it. . . . The evidence is there if we look for it."

"It is an arresting fact that even in His birth the Founder of that religion is tossed hither and thither at the command of the Emperor. And with what result? Only the triumph of Jesus. His poor Mother must travel far to Bethlehem; and the Child was there born; but all that the Emperor achieved was to stamp the Child as the Fulfiller of prophecy and the promised Messiah. As in the death of Christ the sarcastic statement of His crime which Imperial policy placed over Him was a placard blazoning Him to the world as the King of the Jews; so in His birth the Imperial order which drove the unborn Child to Bethlehem qualified Him to be the Governor, Who should be the Shepherd of Israel."

Thus, in considering the circumstances of the miraculous birth and of the death of our Saviour, we are brought back once more to the Holy Land, to Bethlehem and to Jerusalem. We have already seen that "When the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance. . . . He set the bounds of the people according to the number of the people of Israel." He set the little nation of Israel in the midst of the ancient world. But His Cross is the great central Fact. It was by no mere chance that Pilate was impelled to write the inscription in Hebrew and Greek and Latin—in Hebrew, the language of religion, in Greek, the language of learning, in Latin, the language of power. That Cross is still to the Jews a stumbling-block and to the Greeks foolishness, but unto us who are being saved it is the power of God. Our Lord said, "For I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto Me."

As we look forward to the future, our expectation still centres on the Holy Land. For when "the Desire of all Nations" shall come, His feet shall stand upon the Mount of Olives which is before Jerusalem on the East, and in that Day the Lord shall be King over all the earth, and of His Kingdom there shall be no end.

PHENOMENA DURING 1929.

By Basil Stewart.

(See also articles on "Natural Phenomena" in National Message and Banner for February 23rd and March 9th, 1929.)

Extraordinary activity in natural phenomena, with attendant erratic weather and climatic conditions, has been so pronounced a feature of the last four years in succession, that it is becoming clear to an increasing number of people that, even from the meteorological point of view, we are passing through a time of abnormality.

Thus the Morning Post, a paper not generally associated with sensationalism or exaggeration, was moved to observe in a leading article (July 22nd, 1929), under the heading "Monsoon Weather," that "throughout the past year we have borne all sorts of exceptional vagaries of the British climate, bitter frosts, Arctic blizzards, deluges, Atlantic hurricanes, untimely heat spells, and still more untimely cold spells. Now, in the midst of an African drought, we have tasted the monsoon weather of India itself. We may well ask—What next?"

What prompted this question was a thunderstorm of tropical violence, rivalling in intensity the storms which accompany the monsoons of India, which visited London and South-East England on July 20th, while at the same time a twenty-foot tidal wave swept the coast from Yarmouth to Worthing.

These abnormalities, however, have by no means been confined to the British Isles, but have been experienced almost everywhere. The Arctic conditions of last winter penetrated as far south as Egypt, involving the whole of Europe, followed by a summer drought almost universal in the northern hemisphere, to be itself succeeded by an autumn remarkable for record floods and gales, accompanied by heavy losses in life and property. As an instance of the extraordinary vagaries of climate witnessed last year, we have deaths from an untimely heat wave in New York on April 7th, with the highest recorded temperature known (86° F.) for that date, while at the same time large areas in Central Europe were under two to four feet of snow and a record minimum temperature of 20° F.

Many former meteorological records have been broken during 1929. The first nine months showed a record deficiency in rainfall, while the remaining months were the wettest and stormiest ever known. Climatically, too, it has been a year of extremes; from a winter of exceptional severity emerged, after a late spring, a tropical summer, while its closing weeks were marked by floods and gales of unprecedented violence. As an instance of the extraordinary severity of the winter, Lake Constance, during February, was frozen over for a distance of 45 miles, an event which has only been recorded 30 times in 12 centuries!

Unprecedented floods have also visited New Zealand, Tasmania and Ontario (March and April), while during August the Indus caused the most devastating floods on record in Sind, washing away many villages and their inhabitants. Record floods also caused widespread havoc in Assam during June.

Earthquakes and Volcanic Eruptions have been on a big scale, mostly in the Pacific Islands, Central and South America. Early in January, the north-east coast of Japan was visited by tidal waves, severe earthquake and gales.

Digitized by Google

The most severe series of earthquakes were those which occurred in New Zealand on March 10th, June 17th, and July 14th, that on June 17th being the greatest recorded in the history of the islands. The observed phenomena attendant on these quakes fully bear out the meteoric impact theory described in the writer's articles above referred to. Thus the meteor which caused the disturbance on July 14th was actually seen by a lighthouse keeper at 2.15 in the morning, a huge column of water and black smoke being shot up as it plunged into the sea, accompanied by an explosion more terrifying than any thunder. Again, at the time of the quake on June 17th, a large lake near Greymouth, in the South Island, was seen to be violently agitated, a great column of water being shot sky-ward. As it fell back the centre of the lake seemed to open, and its water vanished as if through a hole in its bed.

The submarine earthquake in the North Atlantic on November 18th was, in the writer's opinion, the result of meteoric impact. The resultant tidal wave nearly engulfed several great liners in the vicinity, caused great damage on the coast of Newfoundland, and left a huge cavity in the sea-bed, soundings taken afterwards failing to touch bottom where before the 100 fathom line was reached. The submarine cables were so wrecked that seven repair ships had, by December 31st, only been able to locate the broken ends of two cables out of a total of twelve. This will give an idea of the extent of the chasm made by the meteor.

Persia was twice visited by devastating earthquakes, on May 5th and again on July 14th, the first one destroying 88 villages and causing a death-roll of over 3,200.

The last month of the year supplied us with another instance of the extraordinary abnormalities with which it has been marked. Twice during the first fortnight of December the London district was visited by that very rare occurrence for these latitudes—a winter thunderstorm. Long ago such a visitation was regarded as a sure sign of evil to follow, portending tumults and other disasters, and gave rise to the saying "Winter's thunder is the sommer's wonder."

It is significant of the days we are living in, and the evidence revealed of Satan's activity as "the prince of the power of the air . . . that now worketh in the children of disobedience" (Ephes. ii, 2), that these very "children of disobedience"—Communists—in their war upon God and religion, are instilling into the minds of their dupes the idea that these disasters—floods, earthquakes, cyclones, famines*, and so forth—prove the existence, not of a God of love, as the Christian believes, but a God of hatred—a demon. Bolshevists are thus adapting the very elements of nature, so active at the present time, into a means of attack upon the Almighty, and in this connection it is significant to refer to the fact (alluded to in our article, "Earthquakes in Divers Places"—NATIONAL MESSAGE of January 7th, 1928) that the Soviet Government has, for several years, been making a special study of natural phenomena, particularly of seismic disturbances. In the above article we quoted a correspondent who supplied us with this information, and who remarks: "This active interest in this subject now being displayed by the capable brains at the head of the Bolshevik Hierarchy is of an importance and significance that can hardly be overlooked."

Students of prophecy, however, are well aware what all these abnormalities—not in one sphere but in every sphere—portend (see particularly 2 Esdras ix, 1-21, noting verses 6 to 11), for our Lord has Himself warned us abnormal events would immediately precede His Second Coming. The cause of the calamities which to-day are being visited upon this earth is to be found in the apostatic condition of its inhabitants, such as Scripture tells us would mark the last days of this dispensation. And it is significant that, as Bolshevism waxes bolder and more defiant, and spreads its tentacles wider, so do the destructive forces of nature appear to have freer play.

* According to the Report of the China International Famine Relief Commission recently issued, as a result of investigations in the Provinces of Shansi and Shensi, the deaths number two millions, while another two millions are doomed as relief cannot be taken to them, while conditions are aggravated by the intense cold prevailing. In parts of Shensi the temperature fell 30 degrees below the lowest temperature recorded in the past 40 years, another instance of climatic abnormalities.

PERFECTION UNCHANGEABLE.

By H. E. TURNER.

PERFECTION is the supremacy of excellence, the highest altitude of virtue attainable; no improvement is possible in perfection, nothing can surpass it in superiority; therefore it is obvious that any change whatever from perfection can only be a declension; in fact, no change however slight can take place in perfection as such, for that would be a proof of imperfection.

Human nature cannot attain to perfection; that man is not perfect is evident in his changeableness; Almighty God is entirely perfect; the perfection of God is exemplified in unchangeableness. To the Most High, change has been imputed by changeable man and thereby the perfection of the Lord God has been impugned. It has been said that the sins of the children of Israel have caused God to change His plans; revoke the word which He commanded to a thousand generations; abrogate His oath to Jacob; and cancel the literal fulfilment of promises made to His friend Abraham and his seed for ever, in favour of a spiritual fulfilment to the Gentiles; this in the face of Gal. iii, 8, 9, which shows that the Gentiles receive the Spirit as was originally ordained by God, under the covenant of Abraham.

"God is not a man, that He should lie; neither the son of man, that He should repent: hath He said, and shall He not do it; or hath He spoken and shall He not make it good?" "The Father of Lights with Whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." (Jas. i, 17.) "For I am the Lord, I change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed." (Mal. iii, 6.) Herein is proclaimed Divinity in perfection which knows no change, the omniscient, omnipotent, omnipresent God, Who, knowing from the beginning the future transgressions of His backsliding people Israel, confirmed His covenant unconditionally as a reward to Abraham: "Because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son." And moreover caused to be recorded the complete performance by Abraham of man's part of the covenant: "Because that Abraham obeyed My voice and kept My charge, My commandments, My statutes and My laws." Scripture provides these three testimonies to the everlasting faithfulness of God to Abraham and the fathers and to the continuance of Israel as His chosen servants and witnesses: first by the immutability of the Most High; secondly, the free gift of the covenant as a reward for obedience; thirdly, the faithful discharge of the covenant by Abraham.

"I do not this for your sakes, O house of Israel, but for Mine holy Name's sake, which ye have profaned among the heathen, whither ye went." (Ezek. xxxvi, 22.) Hence the reason Almighty God is faithful and true is not out of deference to His people Israel, but because the God of Israel is perfection in unchangeableness.

We now turn to God the only begotten Son, Who being in all respects as the Father, Himself also perfection unchangeable, all that relates to the Father applies equally to the Son; Father and Son being One, the will and concerns of the Father are equally those of the Son and are for ever unchangeable either by One or by the Other, which the life of Jesus Christ while on earth denotes: "Wist ye not that I must be about My Father's business?" (Luke ii, 49.) "My meat is to do the will of Him that sent Me, and to finish His work." (John iv, 34.) "Not My will, but Thine, be done." (Luke xxii, 42.) "I honour My Father, and ye do dishonour Me." "I seek not Mine own glory." "If I honour Myself, My honour is nothing: it is My Father that honoureth Me." (John viii.) "If ye keep My commandments, ye shall abide in My love; even as I have kept My Father's commandments, and abide in His love." (John xv, 10.) "I have glorified Thee on the earth: I have finished the work which Thou gavest Me to do." "As Thou hast sent Me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world." (John xvii, 4, 18.)

Father, Son and Holy Spirit are in complete accord, without the possibility of misunderstanding or defection; whatever has been decreed by the Father has the unceasing, everlasting and loyal concurrence of the Son, and the slightest alteration made in any Divine decree is not only odious to, but dishonouring equally to the Father and to the Son, "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, to-day and for ever."

The immense importance to Israel of knowing that the Divine Creator changes not is shown in Hebrews vi: "Wherein God, willing more abundantly to shew unto the heirs of promise the immutability of His counsel, confirmed it by an oath:" lest, in assenting to an alteration in any appointment of the Lord God, an Israelite might be led to oppose the Divine concord and thereby cause an indignity to the Holy Trinity.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor.

THE DAYS OF CREATION.

DEAR SIR,

In the September number of the South African National Message reference is made to a suggestion for throwing light on this vexed question. The theory is that for six consecutive astronomical days the Seer, to whom this revelation was first given, gazed with the eyes of the mind upon the re-enacting of the past pre-human history, and that his view of that work lasted through six days; this Divine revelation being given prior to the days of Moses, who subsequently incorporated it in his narrative.

This theory seems to present many objections. Even supposing that the art of recording was known to primitive man, Moses as an inspired writer would have no authority to embody as part of the sacred record the impressions made upon man by his human reasoning. This denies also the marvellous accuracy even in minute details of Holy Scripture, which science and archæology has established, and which one naturally would associate with God's Word.

That God gave to early man a previous revelation of His creative work there can be little doubt. We know that He communed with man in the Garden. We find in the literature of Babylon, Assyria and other countries confirmation of the creation story of Genesis, recording events before man existed, such as the correct order of creation. These prized results of scientific discovery only laboriously reached in modern times could not have been scientifically known to ancient man, nor could he have so known that the splendour of the Universe originated from a dark, chaotic mass of water. These ancients speak of these things, and their thoughts are so full of them as if they had stood there in that primitive gloom. And they are facts discovered in science! How could they have come into possession of this knowledge unless through someone to whom it had been revealed? Heaven must have spoken to Earth. There is nothing else to account for it. In all these traditions we can further trace the same story and the same events not only of creation, but also of man's early history (which confirm in main details the Genesis record). These were clung to by all sections of humanity; people separated from one another in distant parts of the world by vast stretches of land and sea. This fact proves that their recollections, handed on from father to son, originated in a common ancestor. These traditions, while preserving their identity, not only passed into national legends, but entered their religious worship, wherein is also traced the very Triune nature of God. This early revelation, however, became hopelessly distorted as seen in what is called the "Chaldean Genesis," and to suggest, as some critics have done, that the inspired writer of Genesis in any way made use of them is extravagant hypothesis and dishonouring to Holy Writ. The sober, coherent narrative of Genesis, bearing the stamp of perfect truth, shows not the faintest literary resemblance to, or comparison with, this debased record of the "Chaldean Genesis." At the dawn of the art of writing a further Divine revelation was given to man as seen in the sacred record.

The importance of the Book of Genesis, as the first grade in progressive Revelation, cannot be over-estimated. On the truth of its statements the rest of Holy Scripture depends. If we follow in Genesis, aided by scientific facts, the Divine plan of the Earth's surface as a preparation for the life of man, the first "day" depended upon creative work in the Celestial sphere in an initial stage, which was to give increasing "light" upon the earth. "Light" having the triune property of light, heat and energy, was transmitted to earth not only as illumination, but heat for the germination and growth of vegetable life, and also the motive power for the separation of Day from Night, the earth's rotation. This "day" must have covered a vast period of time, during which "Matter," through Energy, became fused into orbs by a rapid vibratory backward and forward motion, which in course of time converted these bodies into the radiant energy of light and heat. This scientific fact is accurately referred to in Genesis as :— "And the Spirit of God (the origin of scientific 'energy') moved upon the face of the waters . . . and there was light." The Hebrew word rachaph, here rendered "moving," implies rapid vibratory motion. It is only used in two other passages of the Old Testament—namely, Jer. xxiii, 9, "All my bones shake," and in Deut. xxxii, 11, "as an eagle fluttereth." On the face of the water would indicate above the "Deep" or aqueous expansion. After the creation of the "heaven" or "firmament," on the second "day," dividing the "deep" or watery expansion (the higher section of which, "The fountains of the Deep," was poured out upon the Earth in the Deluge), the same continuous Energy on the fourth "day" was transferred to this lower plane nearer the earth, from its former sphere on the (then at that time) face of the water. The sun and moon were created as lights in this "heaven" and made to "rule" or regulate the day and night. How? By the energy of their "light" in causing the Earth's rotation on its axis, and its other movements "for seasons, days (months) and years." These two "lights" played the final part of energy in effecting these changes on the Earth and at the same time giving increased light. One of the greatest discoveries of modern science is that this radiant energy of Light has a humming noise, caused through its vibrations. We look into Scripture, and what do we find? This prized discovery of modern times is referred to in the Book of Joshua— "Sun . . . and thou moon be silent" (Hebrew). This silence was followed by the Earth's motion being checked, and the deduction therefore is that the energy from these two "lights" affected the Earth's rotation, and when at rest, or silent, caused the prolongation of that day. This not only agrees with science but with Gen. i, 15, the Sun and Moon ruling the Day and Night.

There are further proofs that the "days" of creation cannot be accepted as of twenty-four hours' duration. The Seventh day of rest or cessation from all creative work has not yet ended. Also the symbol "Day" is used elsewhere in Scripture with this meaning of extensive time, namely, "the day of Salvation," "the day of the Lord," embracing the whole of the next age during Christ's reign on Earth. We are now faced with the difficulty of explaining the use of "evening and the morning" connected with each "day." In the first place, Scripture in other parts employs the expression "Day and night," and not "evening and morning" when a period of twenty-four hours is intended. We see this in ch. i, 5, and later on in Genesis in "forty days and forty nights." In the efforts of primitive man to express his thoughts the terms "morning" and "evening" quite naturally came into common use for the beginning and the close in relation to all revolutions of time within the scope of his limited experience. What other words had he in which to express this idea? These figures subsequently became embodied in ancient Hebrew phraseology. An almost exact parallel may be seen in Zech. xiv, 7, "At evening time it shall be light," compared with Dan. xii, 9, "the time of the end," interpreted as the close of this present age before the dawn of the "bright and morning star" (Rev. xxii,16), heralding the beginning of the next age, the day of the Lord. Now applying this key to the Genesis record, we read :—And the close of the . . . day was (as a complete part in itself) and the beginning of the following "day" was (after this contact had taken place) the . . . day (as a united part in the whole period of Seven days).

The position of the word "morning" after "evening" shows its reference to the following day. Just as in the making of a chain a link, although a finished article in itself, is not a complete link in that chain until welded into the next link, so the completed day was not a completed part of the whole until connected with the following day. The Sixth day also was completed at the point of contact with the Seventh day. Thus Scripture describes a period of time, as far as concerns man, which is everlasting, eternal, namely, so long as this present Solar system lasts. In Gen. i, 1, it is stated that this period had its beginning when God began His creation of the Heavens and the Earth. Then follows its division into Seven "days," all inter-related in one unbroken line of sequence, having no break or gap between the point where one stage ended and the next began. To describe this point of connection Scripture uses the figure the evening and the morning, just as on the dial of a clock the figures indicate where one hour ends and the next begins. The first six stages represent God's creative work. The Seventh is a period of rest or suspension of all creative action, to last until the commencement of the new creation ; the "new Heavens and the new Earth," to take the place of the old, after Christ's millennial reign is completed.

Yours faithfully,

A. A. LANGSHAW.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

BY THE REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A.

QUESTIONS.—As a reader of your paper, though not a member of the Federation, I should like to know one or two things before I join :—

(1) Is our King a British-Israelite, and, if so, what happened then about the Germans? Is our King a cousin of the ex-Kaiser? If so, does that make the Germans one with Israel?

(2) Are British-Israel the Bride of Christ, or are they the saved of every nation, for God is no respecter of persons?

(3) Are British-Israel better than the saved of any other nation? Please do not think that I hold British-Israel in contempt, for I do not. I like your paper, but I must understand something about it before I become a member.

G. M. P.

ANSWERS.—Thank you very much for your most interesting letter, for your honest enquiries, and for your eagerness to know more about the subject. Personally, I always have the greatest respect for people who have difficulties, and who seek to overcome them, and who want to learn, and who do not mind making such useful enquiries as you have done. We much hope that you will join the British-Israel-World Federation.

(1) Our King is definitely and directly descended from David, and is therefore "of the house and lineage of David." He belongs to the élite of the House of Judah, and as such is a true Israelite by national descent and prophetic fulfilment. He is a first cousin of the ex-Kaiser, since Queen Victoria was grandmother to them both. The ex-Kaiser's mother was the late Empress Frederick, sister of the late King Edward VII. This does not necessarily make the German people one with Israel, though undoubtedly there may be a large amount of Israelitish stock amongst the people of Germany.

You will understand that the question of the birthright (Gen. xxv, 29-34 ; xlviii, 15-22 ; 1 Chron. v, 1 ; Jer. xxxi, 9) has to be considered. Queen Victoria had the birthright, which passed on to King Edward, and through him to King George. The birthright did not go to the late Empress Frederick, and therefore the ex-Kaiser did not inherit it ; had he done so he could not have abdicated or have been dethroned or exiled. Hence, whereas both the ex-Kaiser and King George are descended from David, that line which possesses the birthright can alone be regarded as the " seed royal " for the purposes of holding the Throne (2 Kings xi, 1).

(2) Israel to-day is the " Church-nation of Jehovah." This is the one Church of God continuous throughout the Old and the New Testaments, combined in the Vision of the twenty-four Elders (Rev. iv, 4), twelve of whom represent the twelve Patriarchs of the Old Covenant, and twelve the Apostles in the New Covenant. In the consummation of all things Israel redeemed is " the bride, the Lamb's wife." There is no bigamy in the prophecies of the Kingdom, and so the Lamb could only (in the symbolic language of the Bible prophecies) have one wife, and that is Israel redeemed, recovenanted, reconstituted, and both restored and reunited. All the promises are to Israel, with whom the Old Covenant was made, and the New Covenant through the Blood of Christ (Eph. ii, 13 ; Hebrews viii) formed. Israel thus recovenanted becomes " the bride, the Lamb's wife " (Rev. xxi, 9). It will be noticed that " sheep " in the Bible always refer to Israel, and to no other nation, and thus Christ, Who took the place of Israel's paschal lamb in the historic Passover Feast (1 Cor. v, 7 ; 1 Pet. i, 19) is called the Lamb, " for even Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us " . . . " a lamb without blemish and without spot."

No, it is perfectly true that God is no respecter of persons, but He nevertheless works through His own appointed channels. And it is His will for all the world to be saved by the Blood of Christ through the channels of Israel redeemed (Psalm lxvii, 7). Thus peoples of other nations who become converted to Christ at once become grafted into Israel (see Romans xi).

(3) No, British-Israel are not necessarily better than the saved of other nations. But God has given to us as a wonderful heritage a righteousness, a vision, a responsibility, and a world-wide commission which has not been given to other nations (see Isaiah liv, 17 ; Psalm cxxxv, 4 ; cxlvii, 20).

Nor must confusion be made between redemption and salvation. Redemption refers to Israel nationally, and only to Israel. Salvation refers to individual souls. A nation may be redeemed, but its people still require personal salvation (John iii, 16).

TITHING.

MR. P. W. THOMPSON writes :

"The kindly reference to The Whole Tithe in the Rev. J. Whitehead Clegg's letter on the above subject had led me to write you with the request that the numerous readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE who write me on tithing problems would be so good as to peruse the above work first, as, in a large majority of cases, their difficulties have already been dealt with therein.

If the verbal reports which reach me are correct, a certain amount of teaching on this subject on British-Israel platforms is somewhat in need of revision, which revision the above work will render comparatively simple. I endeavoured to do the indexing with great care and, for instance, the difference between King's Tithe and God's Tithe is clearly pointed out."

KENSINGTON MEETINGS.

THE series of six meetings in the Kensington Town Hall last week were times of spiritual refreshing and enlightenment on Biblical and historical subjects. The Rev. Pascoe Goard spoke at each meeting, and presented great Bible truths in his own effective and inimitable way.

Our President, Major J. Knowles, O.B.E., presided at two of the meetings, including the opening one.

Mr. John Leech, M.A., K.C., presided on the Thursday evening, and at another meeting he gave an interesting Bible study.

Mr. John J. Morey gave two forceful addresses and presided on the Friday afternoon.

Mr. Herbert Garrison presided on Wednesday and Friday evenings.

Addresses were given during the week by the Rev. Gregory Bestall, Rev. J. Lumley Davies, L.D., the Rev. Kenneth Dodds, the Rev. Joseph Gay, and the Rev. T. H. Whitehouse. Devotional exercises were conducted by the Revs. E. A. Couldrey, W. H. Phillips, J. Lumley Davies, Joseph Gay, G. H. Hewitt, T. H. Whitehouse and others.

Mr. T. J. Noble, Vice-President of our Branch at Calgary, Canada, who is visiting England, received a very cordial welcome and gave a short address. He conveyed fraternal greetings from our Calgary Branch and gave a personal testimony, and mentioned some of his experiences in British-Israel and Church work. He referred to the privilege of addressing an English audience, and he spoke of the great benefit to our B.-I. Cause at Calgary derived from the visit, lectures and addresses of Mr. Garrison last summer.

A very pleasing feature was the appearance on our platform of two new clergymen, namely, the Rev. G. H. Hewitt, B.A., and the Rev. A. E. Ingham, B.A., son of the late Bishop Ingham. They both gave effective and very acceptable addresses, and bore striking testimony to the joy and enlightenment they had received from British-Israel teaching. Needless to say they had a very cordial reception. They may always be assured of a warm welcome on our platform.

On January 30th the Quarterly Clerical and Ministerial Conference was held at Headquarters under the presidency of the Rev. Pascoe Goard, assisted by the Rev. J. Lumley Davies, L.D., the Honorary Secretary to the Conference. All present speak in warm terms of the help and encouragement received. Many suggestions were made for carrying on our work in country districts.

A meeting of the Commissioners was held at Headquarters on January 31st, when many matters of organization were discussed.

The meetings held by the Federation in St. Peter's Hall, Bournemouth, last month proved a gratifying success. The Rev. Pascoe Goard gave six addresses, Mr. John Leech gave two, and Mr. Garrison delivered two Lantern Lectures. Many new to our teaching were present on each occasion, and they expressed great interest; several became convinced of the Truth.

We have had a visit from Mr. Burton from South Africa, who has charge of our Book Sales and Journal Department at Cape Town. He had much to tell of the work there, and he emphasized the encouraging results of the very arduous labours of the Rev. Maxwell Carnson. He told of several outstanding men who had accepted B.-I. teaching, and were now supporting it. He mentioned a case of a man whom he had met who became a British-Israelite very many years ago through conversation with the Rev. Dr. James Mountain when he visited South Africa.

Mr. John Leech, K.C., addressed a well-attended meeting at Saxmundham on January 23rd on "Marks of Identity between Britain and Israel." Captain D. G. K. Garnett presided, and was supported by Sir Ronald B. Lane, K.C.B., K.C.V.O., Sir Harry Courthope Munroe, K.C., and others.

On Sunday, 26th January, Mr. Leech preached twice in St. John's Church, Isleworth, at the request of the Vicar, who has become intensely interested in B.-I., and has invited Mr. Leech to preach again.

The Rev. T. Sparshott Johnson, M.A., has lectured at Wealdstone, Ipswich, Southend, Bedford, Hornsey, Lowestoft, Sudbury, Bristol and Bath.

Miss Hamilton Hunter has lectured at High Wycombe, Portsmouth, Gosport, Southampton and Guildford.

The Rev. Joseph Gay has lectured at Herne Bay, Eastbourne, Horsham, Sevenoaks, Portsmouth, Putney, Chatham, Folkestone, Woking and Acton.

Mr. Morey has lectured at Dorking, Rusper, Bexhill, Harrow, Hampton Wick, Salisbury, Fordingbridge, Chichester, Bognor, Fittleworth, Sutton, Southend, Wandsworth and Blackheath.

At Chatham, Mr. Gay had for Chairman Mr. Frank Markham, M.P., who said he wanted to hear more of B.-I. teaching, for he was in search of the Truth. One of the happiest things, he said, was to discover new light on old paths.

The Rev. W. Brown Pollock, M.A., gave a very interesting and instructive address for the Liverpool Branch on January 23rd on "God and Israel in the Epistle to the Romans," pointing out that "Gentiles" mentioned in the Scriptures frequently meant the ten-tribed House of Israel mixed amongst the heathen nations.

Our Bolton Branch held an interesting meeting on January 23rd with an increased attendance. Interest in this new Branch seems to be rapidly growing, and arrangements are in hand to hold two meetings monthly.

Mr. J. W. Haworth was at St. Luke's Sunday School, Nelson, on Sunday afternoon, January 26th, taking the young men's class of about 70. He spoke on "Some remarkable prophecies that have come true in world history." The address was well received, and the speaker was asked to come again, as he had given the class something of new interest to think about.

SHAKESPEARE AND THE PYRAMIDS.

H. Pye-Rayter writes :—" William Shakespeare, in his 123rd Sonnet, says that to him the pyramids ' are nothing novel, nothing strange ; they are but dressings of a former sight.' In other words, he says that they are simply prophetic visions put into permanent stone. Still addressing Time, he continues ' Thy registers and thee I both defy . . .' and as Professor Piazzi Smyth, in the last generation, is usually accepted as one of the first who put forth the theory that the Great Pyramid contained a register of Time on the basis of one inch equal to one solar year, how did the immortal William know that any of the pyramids registered time ?

Perhaps the Swan of Avon's secret is contained in his 121st Sonnet, 9th line, the first six words."

Mr. W. T. Craig, F.R.G.S., writes :—" In the third chapter of 2nd Timothy we are told that ' in the last days perilous times shall come, for men shall be . . . blasphemous ' ; but till I opened my newspaper to-day, I little thought that our House of Commons had fallen so low as to contain 131 members who would vote for the ' Blasphemy Bill,' and thus draw upon themselves the denunciation of Paul, in the 2nd chapter of Romans : ' the name of God is blasphemed among the Gentiles through you . . .'

Do they know that Satan stands at their elbow to encourage and applaud ; that the ' blasphemy ' they would legalize means ' to speak evil of God,' ' to rail against and deny the works of the Holy Spirit out of malice ' ? If they do not, they are culpably ignorant ; and if they do, they must be told that they have no mandate to insult the Deity."

Mr. John Waite writes from Maple Creek, Canada :—" When Mr. Goard and Mr. Garrison (whom I had the pleasure of meeting at the Depot in Maple Creek last summer) were in Canada they said that it would not be long before enquiries were made through the newspapers regarding British-Israel Truth.

" In yesterday's Regina Leader the enclosed appeared, and I thought it would interest the readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE to know that the statements made by our beloved leaders are coming true."

" BRITISH-ISRAEL.

" Will you please explain what is meant by the term : ' British-Israel ' ? How do they come by this theory ? Are they denominational or do they adhere to the Jewish faith ?—A Reader, country.

" British-Israel is the belief that the Bible distinguishes between the tribes of Judah (Jews) and those of Israel ; that Bible prophecies are to be read that the tribes of Israel were to colonize, develop into a company of nations, become a maritime people, to rule over many people, etc., etc., and that, in pursuance of these prophecies, the British people and nations allied in blood are their descendants.

" Considerable propaganda work is done and many books and literature published on this subject by the British-Israel-World Federation, of 6, Buckingham Gate, London, S.W., England. Branches of this organization exist throughout Canada, the official weekly publication being ' The National Message and Banner.' The Secretary of Regina Branch will supply a copy free on receipt of postage to any interested readers. They are non-denominational and obviously not of the Jewish faith."

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

APPROACHES TO THE FACTS OF BRITISH-ISRAEL TRUTH.—II.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD, F.R.G.S.

How shall we demonstrate to others that which we know to be the case ourselves, that the House of David and the House of Israel are controlling factors in the world to-day? The method is simple; we will follow along the well-beaten trail of Israel from the days of the prophets to our own days.

But the pathway of history is confused by many trails; how shall we distinguish between them?

The trails in the plain and in the forest are confusing to the inexperienced hunter, but read like the page of an open book to the eyes of the experienced. The writer has known a man to trail an ox by its footsteps in the snow from morning to evening-tide under the impression that he was following an elk. The experienced hunter would have known at a glance the facts of the case. The experienced hunter can teach the untrained, with patience, to read and distinguish between the main trails. So with the trails that confuse on the highway of history. Let us to the task.

First, we take Israel in history from Jacob to the time when Israel went out into captivity. So far the trail is plain, and no one questions the facts recorded. This brings us to approximately 700 B.C., or about 2,600 or 2,700 years ago. It needs not that we should tell the biologist, nor even the ethnologist, that this is bringing matters into our own historic day. Races have not changed since then, and even the changes in nations are clearly recorded in world history.

The history in which many of these things were recorded was buried for ages under the debris of the Asiatic civilization. Only lately has the spade of the Assyriologist uncovered in broken fragments the history of the Asiatic period of Israel's wanderings. Sufficient fragments have now been recovered to make the trail of Israel plain during that period.

So we first turn to the Bible for the history of Israel down to 721 B.C.

The last thing we read of Israel in the Bible histories is that she was uprooted from Palestine by Assyria and carried to certain named places in Assyria and there planted in captivity.

Now we must turn to secular history. The spade of the excavator has given to us enough of records to establish the fact that after leaving Palestine the name of the Israel people was changed, and that various names were borne by various sections of the people who went different ways and formed separate groupings under separate leaders. What these names are it is essential for us to master. No scholar, however high his attainment in scholarly qualification, can make head or tail of this search until he has mastered this primary lesson. And not many scholars, outside of the British-Israel school, have even thought of recovering this particular line of information. So when we are bombarded with the assertion that outside of our ranks there are scholars superior in attainment to those within our ranks—which after all is a matter open to question, and is a matter which could only be settled by a series of examinations and contests which are never likely to be undertaken—when I say we are so bombarded, we ask a primary and simple question: Have the scholars of the other schools turned their attention to the mastery of this task in this way? Have they discovered under what names Israel travelled and dwelt after leaving Palestine? If they have not, then they are not scholars at all as far as this question is concerned. High attainments in other fields of enquiry will not help in this until such attainments are applied to the data underlying this question.

So we turn to the 7th chapter of Amos and find that the prophet officially changed the name of the House of Israel to the House of Isaac, prior to their leaving Palestine.

We now turn to the monuments and tablets which record the events of that period, and find that the captive Israel people were called synonymously and successively Sacae, with all its variations; Kumri, with all its variations; Scythian, with all its variations; Getae, with all its variations, which the centuries transformed into Goths. Later we find the Sacae name emerging again in the modern form of Saxon, and the Scythian name in the modern form of Scot, etc. These are sufficient indications to illustrate the various names under which the Israel people appear in Assyrian inscriptions and tablets, and in ancient Grecian and Latin histories, and in modern history.

Let no one say it is unlikely that one people should bear so many names until he has asked himself the question, "How many names do Anglo-Saxons bear to-day?" For instance, British, English, Scottish, Welsh, Irish, Canadian, American, Australian, New Zealander, Tasmanian, Anglo-Indian, etc., etc. Let him consider that among the nations and peoples the Anglo-Saxons are unique in this matter.

Having mastered the names under which Israel travelled, we turn now to archæological inscriptions, to ancient history, to mediæval history, and to modern history, and follow the geographical dispositions and movements of the people. We find them travelling to the East, and a remnant remaining there. We find them travelling to the North, and leaving a remnant en route. We find them finally entering these Isles and here resting from 1066 until the time of the commencement of the migrations overseas to the American Continent and the ends of the earth.

Thus we have followed the outline of "the best beaten trail," as the people of the plain and forest would say, which leads from Ur of the Chaldees to Haran; thence to Canaan; thence to Egypt; thence to the wilderness for forty years' wandering; thence to Palestine; thence to Assyria; thence to Europe; thence to the British Isles; and from thence extending to the overseas Dominions, and the U.S.A., and finally, since 1917, back to "the point of commencement" as the surveyor would say, namely, Palestine and Mesopotamia.

In addition to this we take up what may be termed a secondary trail. From the time of Israel's residence in Egypt, bands of migrants went out and formed settlements for themselves.

Zarah, the son of Judah, whose was the hand bound with the scarlet cord, went to the North and founded the Kingdom of Priam and the City of Troy. On the destruction of Troy, Bruté led a detachment of his people to Britain, and there founded the City of London.

Simeon, during the wilderness journey, sent forth a large proportion of the people of that tribe, and they appear in history under variations of their tribal name.

Dan as a tribe marched up the Jordan Valley to Laish, on the northern frontier of Israel; and thence went to Greece, and to the Greek colonies of Asia Minor.

Israel sent forth voluntary traders, miners and so forth to the European countries, for instance, Spain and Gaul; and to the British Isles.

From all of these sources there came a stream of merchants, miners, settlers, refugees and so forth to Britain, and, while all of Israel stock, they came from what in those days would be called separate countries, such as Assyria, Syria, Palestine, Greece, and so on; and they came speaking, severally, Hebrew, Greek, and so on, many of them speaking more than one variety of this family of languages.

Together these formed the ancient British people.

To these the migration of the "Captivity" of the ten tribes came after the withdrawal of Rome from British occupation. They came as Saxons, Danes, Jutes, Normans, and so on, and during some centuries became welded once more into an homogeneous, single-languaged people.

Thus "the best beaten trail" of ten-tribed Israel and the minor but more ancient trails by which the ancient Britons came, meet at the end of that stage of the journey in the British Isles.

Thus, as indicated in the sacred Scriptures, we find the national organization which lies at the heart of the Israel peoples centred in Britain, the Isles north and west of Palestine.

Then they take up their halted march and go to the four points of the compass exactly in accordance with the outline of the prophecies and at the period indicated.

Had Israel not congregated in Britain from the time of William of Normandy to the time of Queen Elizabeth, a pin-point of geography in the process of history; had the prophets not made a bull's-eye upon that infinitesimal target, the position taken by Bradlaugh and by Dr. Driver—who failed to see the weight of these phenomena of history fulfilling prophecy—that the promises and prophecies made to Israel had failed of fulfilment would have been justified. But Israel did so gather at the appointed time in the appointed place. And Israel did from thence explosively scatter its power over oceans and continents to the ends of the earth, and THE BIBLE IS GLORIOUSLY AND TRIUMPHANTLY JUSTIFIED, in spite of millions to one chances against it from every human consideration.

Thus the predictions of prophecy are answered by the phenomena of history, and the scholar who refuses to recognize and take note of this whole series of facts may step aside as a discredited leader, and as a scholar who has been plucked in his final examination in this branch of study.

We use these terms as the fair reply to the epithets that are hurled at us by many who ought to know better, who, on the strength of knowledge in other directions, are assuming the right to contradict our knowledge of facts in this, our special field of study.

Let it be clearly understood that this field of cold fact stretching over 4,000 years of history simply overwhelms the Modernist position, which rules out the literal reading of the Bible, the Divine inspiration thereof in the fullest measure, and the miraculous interference of Jehovah, the God of Israel, with the affairs of men and nations, guiding the processes of history, and leading His people to their appointed destiny. The Modernist denies, but the facts of history abundantly establish these things, and God the Lord is justified in the eyes of all, and the Bible is established as "the Word of God written."

BRITISH HISTORY TRACED FROM EGYPT AND PALESTINE.

BY THE REV. L. G. A. ROBERTS, COMMANDER R.N.

PART I.

ARE THE BRITISH THE TRIBES OF ISRAEL?

IN looking into the original of the settlements of the Ancient British people under whatever name found, Brythons, Llœgrys, Cymry, or Gael, we cannot escape the fact that all these names are traceable to Hebrew roots simply and purely.

There is also a reason from Scripture why each of the names is applied to this race if our hypothesis is correct.

The first two names (Brito-Lagœ) we find combined in the very region whence the Welsh themselves trace "the first Welsh colony," i.e., on the north-western shores of the Black Sea, which sea was also called Cimmerian. In the Crimea Prof. Chwolson of Petrograd has deciphered no fewer than 700 epigraphs in Hebrew and 150 copies in other places of the Northern Kingdom of Israel. Oriental Records, see p. 41 infra. In the very mouth of the Danube we also come across Peuci, akin to the word Pict. Then, again, the Saxones are also found in this region; these latter, however, seemed to have pushed the Cimmerians westward, having themselves come from the east and south of the Caspian Sea. To the north of these Sacœ, when in this eastern locality, we come across the Massagetœ and the Bretti; the Bretti northward and westward moved into Europe first, followed by the Massagetœ and the Sacœ. The Getœ,* which name we find in Sagetœ, Thyssagetœ, Tyri-Getœ, Mœso-Getœ, are all derivatives from a common ancestry, probably Gad; and eventually in Europe, under the name of Goths, became known as Ostro-goths, Visi-goths or Goths. Nothing seems to our mind more natural than that these Getœ, who, according to their locality or circumstances, named themselves with a prefix suitably chosen, should also as Goths do the very same thing centuries after. The name Goth, however, occurs on an inscription as far back as the time of Cyrus, where he is with Dan and Sakai. The original of Goth has been stated by Ortelius to be Gauthei, because "the ten tribes were jealous for the glory of God" (Sailman's Researches in the East).

The inscription referred to is mentioned by George Moore, Saxons East and West, taken from the Preface.

An inscription in Hebrew graven in ancient Pali characters on the wall of a rock temple in Kanari, about twenty miles from Bombay: "The soft flowing of the wine-press from the white gushing fruit is as that which sets me at rest; my drink, the refining of the fruit is the very grace of his mouth. Behold what thou possessest, yea even the gladsomeness in it that is ministered to thee. Lo, the worship of Saka is the fruit of my lip; his garden which Cyrus laid low was glowing red; behold it is blackened. His people being aroused would have their rights, for they were cast down at the cry of the parting of Dan, who being delivered was perfectly free. . . . Everyone grew mighty; your religion has saved even him from uncleanness. And his (Saka's) mouth enkindling them, brought the Serim (? free, or princes) together from the race of Harari (see 2 Sam. xxiii, 11, 33, Ephraimites ?). . . . As to Dan, his unloosing was destruction, oppression and strife; he stoutly turned away, he departed twice. The predetermined thought is a hand prepared. The redeemed of Kasha wandered about like the (flock) overdrawn. The prepared was the ready, yea Gotha, that watched for the presence of Dan, afforded concealment to the exile whose vexations became his triumphs; and Saka also, being reinvigorated by the calamity, purified the East, the vices of which he branded."

It will be seen in this inscription how intimately associated the Danites, the Sacœ, and the Goths are, and that Cyrus, well known as the King of Persia, was the desolator of the Buddhism taught by the Saka. Cyrus met his death at the hand of the Massagetœ, whom our author identifies with the Gittites, or the people of Gath (Heb. גתי Gété).

Dr. Moore goes on to say: "We at least find an ancient Gothland as well as a Saxon race mentioned in the earliest records of Buddhism, and the Buddhism is, I conceive, unmistakably connected with a people using the Hebrew language. The name of Goth, as already surmised, was probably transferred from Palestine to the neighbourhood of the Caspian Sea, where the Getœ and the Sacœ, the Goths and the Saxons, are historically found together" (pp. 260, 261).

He has previously (p. 95) said: "The Sacœ and the Getœ who formerly invaded India sprang from the same source as the Saxons and Goths of the West, and were directly connected with the Israelites, or with a people who employed their language."

He also, in allusion to the Budii, said by Herodotus to be a tribe of the Medes (i, 101), derives this name from בדיי, "the separated people." (For further evidence, see pp. 42-46.)

We have, of necessity by digression, alluded to the Eastern branches of Israel after the captivity because we find the Gimirra, subsequent to the transportation of Israel into Media, alluded to on the tablets: "Teuspa the Kimmerian and his people are called Manda by Esarhaddon; and the Gimirra-Umurgah of the Babylonian text corresponds with the Saka-Humuvarka of the Persian text. The Saka-Humuvarka are the Amyrgion Sakœ of Herodotus (vii, 64), who, he tells us, were the Scythians of the Greeks" (Sayce).

Sennacherib records his expeditions against the Yasubi-galleans (Pinches), these being no doubt Josephites from Galilee.

The Israelites are known to have been called Bit-Kumri, the Kumri and Gimirra being the same as Sakai.

MR. GEORGE MOORE ON HOSEA I AND II.

P. 56: "The prophets testify of the history of Israel. Each prophet personifies God in relation to the peculiar people. Deity humanizing Himself to reason with them, to warn and prognosticate. He puts Himself into all human relationships which can best illustrate His love for man as manifested through His chosen people. Thus Hosea puts Divinity before us as in His own person, and as acting the part of a loving husband to a deceitful and abominable wife. Israel is that wife; but the wife takes the name of the husband, and the true Israel is really represented by the prophet. Her proceedings and names symbolically indicate the history of Israel both at home and abroad, in Palestine and in other lands.

The prophet represents himself as married to Gomer, the daughter of Diblaim (Hos. i, 3). Here we conceive that Israel in its northern or Scythian connection is alluded to. It is the House of Israel as distinct from Judah that is represented as the adulterous wife by Hosea (i, 3). Why does he name her Gomer, the daughter of Diblaim? It is an interesting fact that Gomer, as a country, is identified with that of the Scythians by the ancients. [Gomer signifies that which is fulfilled or thoroughly brought to pass. It is also the name of the son of Japhet, from whom the Scythian nations are descended. Diblaim is a dual word and signifies two (people) brought together by outward pressure; it is a dual word, doubtless adopted by the prophet to express the fact by a verbal symbol.] May not the representative marriage of Hosea with Gomer be prophetic not only of the peculiar apostasy of the House of Israel, but also of their association with the Scythians in that apostasy? If so, we have additional grounds for seeking Israel in Scythian connection. . . . The whole scheme of the prophecy of Hosea is in the first chapter. The result of the nominal marriage with a people of false religions (whoredoms) is first a son called Jezreel (the Seed of God), to signify the cessation of the Kingdom (House) of Israel, but yet the preservation of a godly race (verse 4). Then a daughter, Lo-ruhamah (not having obtained mercy) is said to be born, because as it appears the people of Israel in their exile did not trust to God like Judah (verse 7), but to armed power; therefore, says God, "I will utterly take them away" (verse 6). Afterwards another offshoot arises called Lo-ammi (not my people), no longer recognized as Israel. Yet Israel is in number numberless, and where it was said, "Not my people," there they are called "Sons of the Living God." To find Israel, the descendants of the rebel tribes, the Lo-ammi, in the latter day, we must look for the people which most readily and most willingly received the Gospel, or are most ready to receive it, when properly presented to them. . . .

WHENCE THE NAME CIMMERIA?

The accidental (so to speak) fact of Cimmeria being in the East, and in the time of Esarhaddon in the seventh century B.C., is easily understood if, as is generally accepted, that by the term Gimirra is meant the descendants of Gomer. It is also apparent from Hosea i that God intended that Israel should be swallowed up amongst the nations of Gomer. Therefore the name Beth-Kumri attaching to Israel on the Assyrian tablets, in consequence of their being recognized as of the House of Omri, which Omri has a guttural ain in Hebrew, making it hard H or Kh, would easily cause Khumri to assimilate with Gimirra. The leader being, at the time of contact with the Assyrian, Teuspa the Kimmerian, is termed a Manda, and is very probably a Yasubi-gallean. This is as it should be, even if Gomer, the son of Japhet, were located in Asia Minor and Galatia (as Josephus I, vi, 1), for these Kimmerians invaded Cappadocia and Cilicia (see Marchant's Monumental Facts and Historical Fictions, p. 25). They would thus have coalesced with the Gomerites and Galls (Galatians). But of this see also later on Historians Hist. of the World.

There is no reason to imagine that these Cimmerians had come only into Asia Minor from the East, nor even that they came down through the chain of the Caucasus from the Northern Cimmerian land, where the Crimea now is. Rawlinson gives us what upon the face of it accounts for the numerous body of Kimmerians at that time (App. Book I, Essay 1, p. 369, Herodotus). Who the Cimmerians were, whence they came, with what races they were ethnically connected, will be considered hereafter in the notes to the Fourth Book. With regard to their occupation of Asia Minor at this time (reign of Ardys), it is important to observe that whereas Herodotus, throughout his whole history, regards the invasion in the reign of Ardys as the first, and indeed the only Cimmerian irruption into these countries, other writers speak of repeated attacks, covering a long period of time, in which, moreover, the Cimmerians were accompanied and assisted by Thracian tribes, and came into Asia Minor, apparently, from the West rather than from the East. Strabo expressly states that they made several distinct excursions and seemingly brings them into Asia across the Thracian Bosphorus (Strabo I, p. 90, Oxf. Edit.). To some of these incursions he gives a high antiquity (Strabo I, p. 9, Oxf. Edit.). In this he is followed or exceeded by Eusebius, who places the first Cimmerian invasion of Asia three hundred years before the first Olympiad.

Rawlinson suggests that the Cimmerians on this occasion alluded to by Herodotus might have come through the "Caucasian gates," as this is the direction he brings them from, and doubts the possibility of Herodotus being mistaken.

Now, we assume that there is every reason why these Cimmerians may have come from the immediate south of the Caucasian range—in fact, from Colchia or Iolchis; and if so, being Israelites of the pre-captivity times, it would account for the great number of them. Herodotus allows that the Cimmerians and the Thracians were neighbours on the Western and North-western side of the Euxine. Evidently these Thracians have been looked upon by Strabo (I, p. 9) as Cimmerians. This we will now try and prove they really were. This brings us to ask, Whence the name Cimmeria or Kimmeria?

In Col. Gawler's Dan, the Pioneer of Israel, we have the colonization of Greece from Palestine in very early times, and giving his name, Danai, to all the Argives. They then establish themselves in Thessaly, and from here embark from Iolchis for Colchis, in what is now Iberia. From here they push eastward into Media. To the north of Thessaly we have Thrace and the acknowledged Cimmerians. We have no right to assume from our argument that all the Cimmerians were Israelites any more than that all the Scythians were Sakai.

The Covenant People (Vol. IX, pp. 160, 195, 236, 268, 338, 382, 407) gives articles upon the migration, colonies, and settlements of Dan.

In a pamphlet, Palestine to Britain, written in 1883 by the present writer, occur these words:—

"Tradition brings the first settlers in Britain from Troy, under one Brutus the Trojan; the Triads of the Cymry bring them from Constantinople; and history, such as it is, brings them from the neighbourhood of the Black, or Cimmerian, Sea. Etymology would suggest that the people originated in some State which bordered on darkness, as we trace them back as Cimmerioi (black), Phrygia (black), Pelops (black), Hushim (black); this clue arrives at the son of Dan, one of the Patriarchs of Israel, whom tradition tells us fled out of Egypt and settled in Greece, as Danaus, the son of Bela (Dan was the son of Bilhah, Jacob's concubine).

"Having left the light of Israel, he was driven to darkness, as the name of his sons, Hushim (חשם), signified, by prophetic enunciation. This signification was attached ever after to the race of Israel in some way or another, as each and all were driven to darkness (Peloppidœ, Phrygian, Cimmerians, Kimbri, Cymry, all having a radical meaning, 'darkness'). These Danaites were also known as Pelasgians, Scoloti, Scoti, and Scythians, each one of these names denoting 'Wanderer.'"

ABDASHERAH AND THE ABIRI.

By Professor Edward Odlum, M.A., B.Sc.

While exploring the avenues of olden-time history, I reached a sideline of very considerable importance. This outlook or inlook presents some names and movements which bear upon the past of Israel in a remarkable manner.

The readers of The National Message have some knowledge of the excellent work accomplished by Major Conder in connection with the Tel Amarna Tablets discovered in 1887 by a peasant woman of Egypt, midway between Thebes and Memphis.

These brick "Tablets" were found amid the ruins of the palace of Amenophis IV, 180 miles south from Cairo by the Nile. They date from about 1480 B.C., and later, and mention the names of Japhia, king of Gezer; of Jabin, king of Hazor; of Adonizedek, king of Jerusalem, and many others, including Amorites, Phœnicians, Philistines and Hittites.

The events recorded are numerous, and mention the conquest of Damascus by the Hittites, of Phœnicia by the Amorites, and of Judea by the Hebrews.

My purpose in the following is to specially refer to the latter, viz., to the conquest of Canaan by the Abiri, under Abdasherah and his five sons.

Owing to breaks in the "Tablets," it is at times impossible to read satisfactorily that which was primarily inscribed or engraved thereon. In several instances very little of value or sense can be deciphered, so badly broken are these specimens.

To get a clear notion of the wonderful work and doings of the great Abdasherah and his Abiri (Israelites), we will follow hurriedly the labours of his son Aziru, who undoubtedly was a skilful, capable, successful general and warrior. However, before emphasizing and following the actions of Aziru, it seems wise and necessary to envision the then relationships of Egypt, the Canaanites and the Abiri or Hebrews.

We know that about 1480 B.C. Moses led Israel out of Egypt against the wishes of that people; and that, at the last moment, Pharaoh of that time tried in vain to capture and bring back the fleeing nation into the servitude they had just left. Thus, then, we see Egypt in an attitude of the most unfavourable sort towards Israel.

And, generally speaking, Bible readers have the notion that this was the attitude of Egypt towards Israel during the forty years in the desert, and during the long series of wars waged by Joshua on the cities and lands of Canaan.

The "Tablets" clearly reveal another view of the matter; and it is this: Before and after Israel left Egypt under Moses, the Egyptian power and rule had been extended over all Canaan, Philistia, Phœnicia, Syria, and much of what is now known as Mesopotamia or Iraq.

This fact looks far afield and reaches many ways in a telling manner.

Granting this statement to be true, then when Israel left Egypt and finally got to any of the above-mentioned countries, they would be within the heartless and powerful grip of their Egyptian enemies and former slave-masters.

But, Egypt and Arabia (Ishmael) were in alliance and friendship when Israel left Egypt and crossed into Arabia, the land of their brother Ishmael. In addition, Arabia, at that time, was friendly to the Hebrews under Moses. Hence there was no good or logical ground for Egypt to follow the fleeing nation into the wilderness which would involve invading a friendly nation.

Thus, while in Arabia during forty years of wandering and discipline, they were safe from the Pharaoh of the time. Such a relationship was most favourable to Israel and the process of deliverance and training, Divinely planned and in progress.

During the forty years of training in Arabia and its borders, changes took place in Egypt, and especially among the kings, as they passed from and came into power.

At length Moses, Joshua and Israel were in the mountains of Moab, and around Nebo. While they were there, they had to fight, conquer and displace a goodly portion of the Amorites, in whose lands Gad, Reuben and the Half Tribe of Manasseh were definitely located.

A note at this place is of value, and should be remembered. It is this: In later days, after Moses died, and Joshua crossed the Jordan, the fighting warriors who led the Israel hosts into battle were the soldiers of Gad, Reuben and the Half Tribe of Manasseh. They crossed the Jordan from the land of the Amorites. By some at least these leading warriors were mistaken for Amorites, and were so written about in several of the Tel Amarna Tablets.

The time came when Amenophis IV reigned in Egypt, and he undoubtedly most effectively assisted Joshua and Israel in the conquest of the Promised Land. Whether he did this intentionally or not it matters little just now, but he did this wonderful work of assisting Joshua and Israel in part as follows:—

His garrisons were in the strongholds of the Canaanite lands as well as in several other countries. If Joshua and Israel had been forced to take these cities, garrisoned by well-trained Egyptian soldiers, it would have required a Divine operation in nearly every city of Canaan, as well as in Jericho when the walls fell.

But, as we will show farther on, Amenophis IV, and one or more of the Pharaohs about his time, withdrew and kept withdrawing the Egyptian garrisons from the cities of Canaan, Philistia and Phœnicia.

We now turn back to the line of examination concerning Aziru, the son of Abdasherah, and will gain ample reward for our research.

In Tablet 91*B* we find Rabikhar, the chief or king of Gebal, an Egyptian city on the east coast of the Mediterranean Sea, north of Beirut (it was known to the Greeks as Byblos), writing to the king of Egypt and telling him that Aziru slew Adunu, lord of the land of Ammia, and the king of the land of Ardata,

Digitized by Google

"and had slain the great men, and has taken their cities for himself. The city Simyra is his. Of the cities of the king (of Egypt, then the overlord of all the cities along the East of the Mediterranean Sea), only the city Gebal, Byblos, escapes or holds out for the king. Behold the city Simyra is subjected. He has smitten the city Ullaza. The captains of both have gone into exile. Behold this sin has Aziru wrought."

This is an index of the power and military success of Aziru, son of Abdasherah. It further shows that at an early date the Hebrews invaded and attacked a part of ancient Phœnicia.

AN APPEAL.

BY THE REV. F. L. CROWSON (Florida).

WE concede to none a greater obligation and privilege of receiving, believing and honouring the Scriptures more than we do; yet we desire to be able to give a reason and facts for the hope that is in us. History and the Scriptures dovetail together regardless of how ignorant we be of the one or the other. If we be ignorant of history we may still rest in the Word; yet without the knowledge of history we must be ignorant of much of the Scriptures.

Some writers seem to be indifferent as to the historic grounds in the Berith-Israel discussions, as if it were of small moment; therefore, if the Scriptures point to a thing, it is settled. But, if we cannot see the thing pointed out, the pointing out is valueless. I must be historically satisfied that God in the flesh hung on the Cross before you can effectually point me to Christ. My confidence in my mother, Sunday School teacher or preacher's word might satisfy my historic demand; yet that demand must be satisfied.

Unless we know past and present facts of races, may not the multiplicity of the Mongolian race incline us to believe that they are the dispersed of the House of Israel? Facts become the mirror that largely reflects the meaning of God's Word to us. History is a large part of that mirror. Bring forth that mirror that we may behold the meaning of God's Word. Depreciate not the value of history in the Berith-Israel subject. It is on our side. We have so discovered it. Not necessarily always written, though that is in abundance.

Not appreciating its value, historians have side-tracked it. The devil and the world hating it, have covered it up and destroyed much of it; enough is still left, if we will but uncover it or put it on the main line and give it right of way.

There are facts in abundance if brought forth in full, clear and simple style to easily discover all the Berith-Israel people. We are not undertaking here to produce facts, but simply trying to awaken an appreciation of the need of same.

Unlike some of us, there are many readers who are not primarily gripped by our interpretation of the Scriptures, but they are calling for the historic facts. Besides the emotional, there is an intellectual approach to the soul; and when once by that route the real soul is gripped and swung through truth to God, you will have strength and permanence that will count large for God's Kingdom.

In the light of these facts we appeal for an avoidance of all seeming indifference to the value of the historic side, and for the consecration of time and substance to the unearthing of all needful facts, and the presentation of them in such a clear and authoritative manner as will appeal to all honest enquirers.

A GREAT WORK.

I wish to commend most heartily "British-Israel Truth Defended," by Rev. James Mountain, D.D. His work is so wisely, clearly and admirably wrought that any class could do fine work in it with even a non-professional teacher, providing he or she be of average intelligence, and also diligently interested.

Had Dr. Mountain have given about three more chapters, tracing the two thousand years in which the more ancient Hebrews, and then the House of Israel, were being transplanted into Western Europe, it would have been complete.

His eleventh chapter on "THE STONE KINGDOM" is beautifully great. So is all of the book.

Without a discussion of the Stone Kingdom, I wish to note a few facts in its connection. Christ is our Chief and Head Corner-Stone. He is our Rock. Christ is our supreme King; but not the Kingdom. He is the Head of the Church, but not the Church.

The Church is Christ's body of grace, mercy and truth unto the personal salvation of souls. The Kingdom is Christ's organized state for the execution of justice, righteousness and all civic good for man. Properly functioning, the two are distinct from each other; yet they never conflict. Each becomes a strength to the other without violating its commission.

As a person may be a member of an organized Church that is of Christ, while he is not in the Church spiritual, so may a person be in the organized Kingdom of God while Christ is not accepted as his personal King. As a Church may have its human overseers, with Christ as its Divine Head, so may a State have its human head or king with Christ as its supreme King.

God has had an organized Kingdom on this earth since God's prophet Samuel first crowned and anointed Saul king. Though, as we shall see, there was a brief period of seventeen years when this Kingdom reposed in Tamar Tephi, Zedekiah's daughter, as the unbroken line of the Davidic throne, and in Jeremiah, the Divinely-commissioned one—"set . . . over the nations and over the kingdoms, to root out, and to pull down, and to destroy, and to throw down, to build, and to plant" (Jer. i, 10). From God's Word and history we know that He did the one, and likewise we know that He did the other. That is, build as well as destroy.

THE FOUR KINGDOMS.

God's Kingdom, the Stone Kingdom: "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom" (Dan. ii, 44). "These kings." Those four successive Empires. "In the days of these kings": from Nebuchadnezzar on, that is, it was to be set up in Nebuchadnezzar's day; "shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom," which is "the stone," a kingdom, not Christ, the Messiah, "cut out of the mountain without hands." As God set up Saul and David through His prophet, so was He to "set up" this kingdom. Through Jeremiah it was to be set up in Nebuchadnezzar's day, so it was to continue set up throughout the days of the three succeeding Empires, "a kingdom which shall never be destroyed. It shall stand for ever" (Dan. ii, 44), "nor shall the sovereignty thereof be left to another people"; the same people Israel would continue to have it, as God said to David (2 Sam. vii, 16): "thine house and thy kingdom shall be made sure before thee: thy throne shall be established for ever." Nebuchadnezzar was then in his power. The Medes and Persians were then a definite and great people and would soon possess empirical dominion. The Greeks were even then crystallizing into a great people later to occupy supremacy, while the city of Rome was then over one hundred and fifty years old, and gathering that stamina that would make her the fourth great power in succession.

Thus the four peoples then definitely existed as kingdoms, so that the Stone Kingdom was likewise set up in the days of the first and all, to run through them all, outlive them all, "stand for ever," and "fill the whole earth." In Ezekiel xxix, 19-21, Ezekiel specifies when this Stone Kingdom or "horn of the house of Israel would bud forth." "Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will give the land of Egypt unto Nebuchadrezzar .... In that day will I cause the horn (Davidic throne) of the HOUSE OF ISRAEL to bud forth." Not Judah. "Thus saith the Lord: David shall never want a man (heir) to sit upon the throne of the HOUSE OF ISRAEL." (Jer. xxxiii, 17.)

Nebuchadnezzar took Egypt 570 before Christ. Thus the "tender twig," Tamar Tephi, of the high branch, Zedekiah, of the great Cedar, the House of David, of the mountains of Lebanon, as Ezekiel elsewhere makes clear, was plucked and carried and planted by an eagle with long wings (indicating great distance to be travelled) by great waters, in Tara, Ireland. Jeremiah, according to much and most creditable tradition, with two princesses and Baruch his scribe, passed through Spain and reached Ireland in 581-580 B.C. That gave him ten years in which to create favourable civil and religious conditions for the wedding of Tamar Tephi of the line of David to Eochaid Heremon, a bachelor, and the chief king of Ireland, that being 570 B.C., when God was to "cause the horn of the House of Israel to bud forth." 570 B.C. plus A.D. 1929 gives 2,499 years since the tender twig of the royal House of David and Judah budded forth in the House of Israel. Though there were 17 years of suspended reigning, yet not a generation was annulled. Tamar Tephi was not held a prisoner in Babylon; and David's line was unbroken and his throne preserved to this day.

Ezek. xxix, 21: "I will give thee (Ezekiel) the opening of the mouth in the midst of them (the yet eastern House of Israel), and they shall know that I am the Lord."

Ezekiel's prophecy was primarily to the House of Israel. His abode was on the river Chebar. This prophecy was about 589 B.C., and about the time that captive Israel was dispersing to Ar-Sareth, N.W. of the Black Sea.

Centuries before Dan had colonized in North Ireland, Alba (now Scotland), and in the regions of Denmark. And the Gadhels, troops of Gad, Gaels, Gauls and Gaelics had migrated to Spain, France and Ireland. In the seventh century B.C. many Gadhels had colonized in Ireland, under the leadership of the sons of the Spanish king, Medhlesius (Millesius), with his widow and great queen, Scota, as their sovereign. They triumphed over their already well-planted kinsmen, the Tuatha De Danans (Danites), but with amicable reconciliation they settled among and intermixed with them, and the royal Houses inter-married. "The horn (government) of the House of Israel" was not in 570 B.C. created. It already existed in the west, and the Judah Davidic bud, "tender twig," was planted therein to bud forth. So in 570 B.C. Tamar Tephi, the Davidic royalty of Judah, was grafted into the royal House of Dan-Gadhel. Thus the west, under the Jeremiahan Renaissance, became ready for the larger immigrations from the eastern House of dispersed Israel. God was then giving Ezekiel "the opening of the mouth in the midst of them; and they shall know that I am the Lord."

In the light of this statement, Ezra's statement concerning the dispersed of Israel at that time is significant (II Esdras 13), indicating that Israel was enjoying a measure of reform that inspired them to "go forth into a far country, leave the multitude of the heathen ... that they might there keep their statutes," while the Lord miraculously led them through the river and "showed wonders for them and brought them to Ar-Sareth," north-west of the Black Sea.

Ezekiel was hardly ignorant of what was transpiring in the west and of God's programme therein, for his prophecies abundantly portray Israel's then future history in those regions. His ministries to the eastern dispersion were doubtless more or less effectual in the quickening in them a national and religious renaissance, and stirring them to a westward move.

It was about this time (588 B.C.) that the eastern Danites and Gadites began afresh their migrations to the west, their renewed trekking through the northern plains of Germany to the regions of the Baltic, by the southern route up the Danube valley into central and northern France and western Germany, and by water through the Mediterranean and the Atlantic; while the Gadites passed overland by the Danube river route, and through more southern regions, and poured into southern France and Spain. From those regions fresh hordes of Gadhels poured into Ireland and south Britain, while the Danites poured into north Britain or Alba or New Scoti about 400-350 B.C. The Danites also passed over into Scandinavia.

So "in that day ... the Lord God ... will give the land of Egypt unto Nebuchadnezzar (570 B.C.) and will cause the HORN of the House of Israel to bud forth" and "will give thee (Ezekiel) the opening of the mouth in the midst of them (of the east); and they shall know that I am the Lord."

Thus the House of Israel in the west and in the east simultaneously enjoyed a reviving in civics and spirituality, with Jeremiah in the west and Ezekiel in the east serving the Lord.

THE THREE GARDENS.

BY THE REV. H. B. SIMEON, M.A.

[These papers on the Three Gardens formed the subject of three addresses in a Church in Sussex during a quiet afternoon in Passion Week, 1929, conducted by the writer.]

THE SECOND GARDEN.—No. II.

IN the first of these three papers we were considering the First Garden, the Garden of Eden, the Garden of Happiness, Sin and Death, and we remembered the oft-repeated words: "That the Scriptures might be fulfilled." In that paper we considered briefly some of the main points in the mystical allegorical account of that Garden, noting more especially the points that appear to be types which would be fulfilled later. Now we come to consider the Second Garden mentioned by St. Matthew (xxvi, 36) as "a place called Gethsemane," to which St. John (xviii) adds "where was a Garden." We know where it was, down in the valley, just beyond the Brook Kedron, at the foot of the Mount of Olives. Our Lord seems to have constantly resorted there with the twelve disciples if He wanted to be alone with them. There is an ancient tradition (whether true or not is unknown) that it was the private property of the Blessed Virgin Mary, and if that were so it might account for its being regarded by our Lord as a place where they would not be likely to be disturbed.

It seems natural, as we think of our Lord being called the Second Adam, and when we remember how closely associated this Garden is with Him, that our thoughts should revert to the First Garden and the First Adam, and without any forcing of the imagination it is not difficult to see in the First Garden a type of the Second.

If the First Garden was once a place of happiness and peace, so was the Second Garden a place of rest and refreshment to Christ and His disciples. And as the First Garden became a place of temptation which resulted in sin, and all the suffering entailed by that, so the Second Garden became a place of temptation which resulted in suffering and agony unspeakable. For "temptation" has two meanings; one, an incitement to sin, the other a testing or trial. As the First Garden was a Garden of temptation in the first meaning, so the Second Garden was a Garden of temptation in the second meaning, for there the Son of Man bore the full weight of the agony and suffering wrought by the sin of man.

The First Adam, made as he was in the likeness of God, succumbed to the first assault of the Tempter, and fell into the sin of disobedience to God. The Second Adam, "the express image of His (God's) Person" (Heb. 1, 3) and also man, was also attacked by the full force of the enemy, but overcame him by perfect obedience to the Father's Will—"Not My Will, but Thine, be done."

The very name of the Second Garden seems to bear almost a Divine significance, for Gethsemane means both olive press and wine press. The olive has ever been a symbol of peace. The dove which Noah sent out from the Ark returned with an olive branch in its beak in token of the peace of God and of the abatement of His wrath. And St. Paul, in Rom. xi, takes the olive tree as a symbol of Israel who had been for a time cut off by God but who, "if they abide not still in unbelief shall be grafted in" (verse 23), and throughout the whole chapter the olive tree is taken as a symbol of the Peace of God.

Throughout Scripture the olive is regarded as producing the sacred oil used in the anointing of kings, in the services of the Temple, and for the healing of the sick, in addition to its being also a staple food of the people. And Gethsemane means also a wine press, used in Scripture in two senses, one as the wine press of the wrath of God, and the other as the means of producing from the grape wine that maketh glad the heart of man, wine that was afterwards consecrated by our Lord whereby our spiritual thirst may be satisfied. Gethsemane was consecrated for ever by being bedewed with His Blood, which has been called "The Wine of Angels."

Thus the trees of the First Garden which were pleasant to the eyes and good for food are seen to be the type of the olive trees in the Second Garden, which afforded shade from the hot Eastern sun and produced food for the bodily and spiritual use of man. And as the guilty pair in the First Garden, conscience-stricken when they heard the voice of the Lord God walking in the cool of the evening in the Garden and the awful words "Adam, where art thou?" hid themselves among the trees of the Garden, so did the Second Adam kneel among the trees of the Second Garden in the cold hours of the dawn on that dreadful day, but from a very different motive. It was fear that drove the First Adam there to try to escape from God. It was Love that drew the Second Adam there in order that He, the sinless One, might be in close converse with the Father during those hours of awful agony when He was taking upon Himself the sins of the First Adam and of all his guilty race.

Among the trees of the Garden we are told in Gen. ii, 9, of "the Tree of Life in the midst of the Garden." Why are we specially told that it was in the midst of it? The reason is clear. The Tree of Life is the forecast of the Tree that is the central point of human History and of the Bible itself, the Cross of Jesus, the "Prince of Life"; and that is the Tree of Eternal Life for man through the Atonement made thereon. The words in Gen. iii, 22, will be remembered. "Lest he (Adam) put forth his hand and take also of the Tree of Life and eat and live for ever." We must be careful not to confuse what we mean by life and death with what is meant in Genesis by these words. Man's sin did not introduce into the world physical death. There is abundant evidence that death was in the world before man's creation. Man's sin did indeed involve his coming under the law of physical death. Had he remained innocent there might have been other means by which he could have passed from this world into the next. The "Tree of Life" and "Living for Ever" refer to spiritual life which is being in the eternal presence of God; and death means eternal separation from God. The Tree of Life appears in the beginning, in the middle, and at the end of the Bible; first in the Garden of Eden, secondly on Calvary, and thirdly in the vision of Heaven in Revelation. As we have seen, in Genesis it was the Tree of Life, on Calvary it appears as the Tree of Death, for the great mystery of the Atonement and Redemption had to be veiled from the sight of man by Death, of which veiling the Three Hours' Darkness was the outward sign. But the veiling was for a very short time only. For on Easter morning the veil was withdrawn, and the Tree of Death stood revealed as being the Tree of Life. In the Vision of the Heavenly City in Revelation we read that "in the midst of the street of it was the Tree of Life." The Tree of Life is therefore the central point both in the history of this world and in the next world also. It is the central point in the creation of man, the redemption of man, and the eternal life of man.

Now we are told that after the expulsion of the guilty pair from the First Garden "God placed at the East of the Garden of Eden Cherubims and a flaming sword which turned every way to keep the way of the Tree of Life." In this mystic language the flaming sword, or as it is in the Revised Version "the Flame of the Sword" is the Emblem of the Divine Glory, and the words "to keep the way of the Tree of Life" signify to keep open the way, as well as to keep it shut; that is to say that, until man should be restored to his former relationship with God, as in the days of his innocency, by having the right of obtaining forgiveness and pardon by repentance, the way to the Tree of Life was closed to him. By the Atonement upon the Cross man was redeemed, which means that he was given the power to return to his right relations with God, and by true repentance he was given the right to claim full pardon through the Precious Blood. This is the meaning of the words in Rev. ii, 7. "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the Tree of Life which is in the midst of the Paradise of God."

These words as to keeping the way of the Tree of Life are full of profound meaning. For an immense number of years the Cherubims and the Flame of the Sword kept the way of the Tree of Life. The guard could not be withdrawn until man should have learned what repentance means. By types of sacrifices he was to be educated for the Divine forgiveness, as we are told that without shedding of blood there is no remission of sins. The Lord God laid down the most stringent laws, to be found in Leviticus and Deuteronomy, that under no circumstances whatever was blood to be eaten, the reason being given, "for the blood is the life." The blood of bulls and goats and other sacrificial animals could not take away sin. They were only symbolic and prophetic of the One true, only, and perfect Sacrifice, that of the Lamb of God upon the altar of the Cross.

In due course God began to educate man to understand the meaning of forgiveness and pardon. The first step in this education was a Covenant made by God with Moses on Mount Sinai, and this Covenant was sealed by the blood of sacrificial victims. Half of the blood was offered on God's altar, which signified the sealing of the Covenant by Him. The other half of the blood, after the people had accepted the conditions of the Covenant, was sprinkled on the people, thus signifying the ratification of the Covenant by them. Special notice should be taken that it was sprinkled only, not eaten. This Covenant was the charter under which the people lived during the long process of their spiritual education. In the fulness of time, after many centuries of preparation, the next step was taken towards the restoration of the original relations between man and God. This step was that God Himself, in the Second Person of the Holy Trinity, was born into the world in human form. It is now seen clearly what many must often have been told in church that the Incarnation, the Sacrifice upon the Cross, the Resurrection, and the Ascension (which is the completion of the Resurrection) are not isolated events, but are all integral parts of the one great scheme of man's redemption, and we purpose to show now how they are summed up and sealed by the Holy Sacrament. God works slowly, but very surely. Our Lord at the beginning of His ministry began in cryptic language to draw aside the veil. He said (John vi), "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink His Blood ye have no life in you." These were very startling and mysterious words that none could then understand. But though many were offended, i.e., scandalized, and "walked no more with Him," He not only refused to withdraw His words, but He laid still greater emphasis on them. He did not explain them; and no one could then have understood them. Even now we cannot understand them fully.

These words are the first warning that the Cherubims and the Flame of the Sword were to be withdrawn from keeping the way of the Tree of Life—on the last day of His earthly life our Lord took the next step. He, the Son of God, as Son of Man, made a new Covenant with man. In this connection it should be remembered that the word Testament means Covenant. (In addition, it has two other meanings, a Will, and the collection of writings which form the second part of our Bible, and is called the New Testament.) This was the antecedent step towards the supersession of the old Covenant, which was to be completed on the morrow upon the Cross. It was then that the Cherubims and the Flame of the Sword were finally and for ever withdrawn from keeping the way of the Tree of Life; for by the Atonement and the Pardon through the precious Blood given to every truly repentant sinner the way to the Tree of Life was opened that man might be able to "put forth his hand and take of the Tree of Life and eat and live for ever." This Second Covenant was also sealed in blood, the Blood of the True Victim upon the altar of the Cross, offered by Himself, our great High Priest, and accepted by God the Father. The new Covenant had to be sealed with blood, as the old Covenant was, for the same reason, namely, that without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sin. At the institution of the Holy Sacrament was fulfilled and revealed the meaning of His former cryptic words: "I am the Bread of Heaven," by His giving to His Apostles, the Infant Church, the Consecrated Bread with the words: "Take, eat, this is My Body," St. Luke adding: "which is given for you. Offer this as a memorial before Me" (which is the real translation of the sacrificial words used). The Bread from Heaven is the ripe fruit of the Tree of Life. Then He gave them the Cup of His Blood, with the words: "Drink ye all of this, for this is My Blood of the new Covenant which is shed for many for the remission of sins." (The words given by St. Mark and St. Luke are slightly different, but the meaning is the same.)

We can now see the difference between the old Covenant and the new. It must be remembered that the old Covenant was made before the withdrawal of the Cherubims and the Flame of the Sword, and the way of the Tree of Life was still closed. Therefore the blood, which is the life, could not be eaten. It could only be sprinkled. But when the new Covenant was sealed the Cherubims and the Flame of the Sword were withdrawn, the way was now open, and therefore the Blood of the Divine Victim may be drunk by all, and the Divine Life is now reunited with the human Life, and He Who reunited them was, and is indeed, "The Way, the Truth, and the Life."

The Atonement, the At-one-ment, was completed and man is once more at one with God.

Thus dimly, as in a glass darkly, or as in a mirror mistily, through the cryptic mystery of Sacrifice, we may see something of the Divine purpose shining forth, and how the Light shining forth in the New Testament was veiled in the types and shadows of the Old.

We seem to see something of the meaning of that mysterious figure, Melchizedek, described in Gen. xiv as the King of Salem, and Priest of the most high God, referred to by the writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews vii, 1-3, in these words: "For this Melchisedec, King of Salem, priest of the most high God, who met Abraham returning from the slaughter of the kings, and blessed him, to whom also Abraham gave a tenth part of all; first being by interpretation King of righteousness, and after that also King of Salem, which is, King of peace; without father, without mother, without descent, having neither beginning of days nor end of life, but made like unto the Son of God; abideth a priest continually." It seems an exact description of our Great High Priest, King of Salem, King of Peace, without father (i.e., in the human sense, for He was begotten of the Father before all worlds), without mother (for He had not then been born of Mary), without descent (He was not yet born of the House of David), having neither beginning of days, nor end of life, but made like unto the Son of God. And in Gen. xiv, 18, we are told that "he brought forth bread and wine, and he was the priest of the most high God." We seem to see here, veiled indeed, the Son of God Himself in the form of man coming to Abraham, the man of God, from whom came the covenanted nation of Israel, and prophetically sealing the "New Covenant" of the then dim and distant future, and giving to that old saint his first Communion.

It is all mysterious to us, but the Holy Scriptures are an inexhaustible quarry, and the writer hopes that, in these two papers, and in the next one, he may have been allowed to show just a little of what may be gathered by digging into the great "Quarry of Truth."

AUTHORITY AND INTEGRITY OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

By HENRY PROCTOR, F.R.S.L.

THE external evidence of the genuineness, authority and integrity of the several books of the New Testament may be classed under four heads:—

(1) The testimony of the Christian Fathers,
(2) Early heretics,
(3) Heathen writers, and
(4) Manuscripts and ancient versions.

(1) We could scarcely have any better authority than the testimony of the Apostolic Fathers, who lived in the same age and conversed with the Apostles. Among the first of these we may cite Clement, Bishop of Rome, mentioned by Paul in Phil. iv, 3, as his fellow-labourer, who became Bishop of Antioch about thirty-seven years after Christ's ascension; and Polycarp, Bishop of Smyrna, a disciple and companion of the Apostle John. Of Polycarp, Irenaeus, his disciple, speaks thus:—"I can tell the place, in which the Blessed Polycarp sat and taught, and his going out and coming in, and the manner of his life, and the form of his person, and the discourses he made to the people, and how he related his conversation, with John and others, who had seen the Lord, both concerning His miracles and His doctrines, as he had received them from the eye-witnesses, of the Word of Life, all which Polycarp related, agreeably to the Scriptures." If anyone will carefully study the Epistles of the Apostolic Fathers, of which an English version is easily obtainable, he will find that they abound with incidental references to the various books of the New Testament.

We may rank next the testimony of the sub-Apostolic Fathers, not forgetting Papius, who forms the connecting link between the Apostolic and the sub-Apostolic Fathers. He says that Mark, the interpreter of Peter, wrote down carefully what he remembered, and that Matthew wrote the discourses of the Lord in the Aramaic, or current Hebrew language. The chief of the sub-Apostolic Fathers were Justin Martyr and Irenaeus. Justin sealed his Testimony with his blood in A.D. 166. His apologies and his dialogue with Trypho are admitted on all hands to be genuine. These books contain no less than between thirty and forty unmistakable quotations from the New Testament, besides being saturated with its phraseology. No one can doubt, after reading these works, that the first three Gospels were widely known in his day.

Irenaeus, the disciple of Polycarp, became Bishop of Lyons about A.D. 177. He alludes to and quotes from all the books of the New Testament canon, except the Epistles to Philemon and of Jude, and the Third Epistle of John. His five books contain, according to Dr. Tischendorf, about 400 allusions to the Gospels, of which more than 80 are quotations from the Gospel of John. Tertullion, who lived only a few years after Irenaeus, says:—"Among the Apostles, John and Matthew teach us the faith; among Apostolic men, Luke and Mark refresh it." He emphatically affirms that the four Gospels had been received from the very beginning in all the Churches. About thirty years after comes Origen, of Alexandria. He says, in an extract from his writings, quoted by Eusebius, that the four Gospels are received without dispute by the whole Church of God under Heaven.

Eusebius, who flourished about A.D. 315, was Bishop of Cæsarea.

(2) Of the early heretics we may mention the Ophites (of the sub-Apostolic period), whose writings, as quoted by Hippolytus, contain allusions to the four Gospels and several of the Epistles. The same is true of Basilides, Valentinus, Heraclion, and Marcion. Tation, a contemporary of Marcion, wrote a harmony of the four Gospels, called the Diatessaron.

(3) Of the heathen opponents of Christianity, the acutest and most malignant was Celsus, who lived in the latter half of the second century. In his book against Christianity, called the "True Word," all the principal events of Christ's life are referred to, and ridiculed. The New Testament is referred to no less than eighty times in his books, as proved by Origen's reply to it. Porphrey, born A.D. 239, was a learned opponent of Christianity. He directly refers to the Gospels of Matthew, Mark and John, the Acts and the Epistle to the Galatians. He admits the miracles and, like Celsus, tries to destroy Christianity with weapons drawn from its own armoury, the New Testament.

(4) Of the 700 manuscripts still extant, several can be traced to the fourth century. But the Sinaitic, more recently discovered, by Dr. Tischendorf, is the most complete, and has been traced by its discoverer to the second century.

Of the ancient translations of the New Testament, the Peshito, or Aramaic version, referred to by many of the Fathers, could not have been made later than the middle of the second century; and the old Latin version, made at Carthage, has been traced to the same period.

The external evidence, that the New Testament really is the product of the first century of the Christian era, could scarcely be more complete than it is. When we consider that manuscripts have been preserved from 1,500 to 1,700 years, it is indeed a marvel, and so copious are the quotations from it in the early Fathers that the whole New Testament could if need arose be reconstructed from their writings.

BRITISH-ISRAEL FACTS NOT FANCIES.—V.

By MAJOR-GENERAL C. A. HADFIELD.

LET us look round the world to ascertain what nation fulfils all these characteristics—without doubt the choice can only fall upon the British Empire. And the world's recent history clearly demonstrates that Israel and the English-speaking races are identical! Great Britain is the "chief of nations" and, with her dominions, constitutes "a company of nations"; a "great people"; "multitudinous"; "planted in the isles of the West"; "dwelling alone"; "a great maritime people"; "ruling over many and ruled over by none"; etc., etc.

Does not Isaiah address Israel in "the Islands of the Sea" (xi, 11; xxiv, 15)? "Listen O Isles unto Me, and hearken ye people from far" (xlix, 1). "The Isles shall wait for Me" (li. 5). Great Britain is surely referred to as "the isles afar off."

Great Britain may truly be said to "possess the gate of his enemies"—Great Britain has control of the sea, as the late war has amply proved to the world; Great Britain, as will be shown, possesses a throne descended from David; holds the Sceptre of Judah; and keeps, in Westminster Abbey, Jacob's Stone of Destiny.

That Stone, which now reposes under the Coronation Chair in the Temple of the Lord, is at Westminster. On this, in exact accordance with the customs described in the Chronicles of the Kings of Judah, have Kings and Queens been continually crowned. The banner that floats over the keep of Windsor Castle is the Lion of the Tribe of Judah. The Speaker's Commentary says: "The Standard of Judah was a lion" (see Num. xxiii, 24; xxiv, 8, 9) (Extracted from "British-Israel Truth").

Why, one naturally asks, have the British people in their charge, in Westminster Abbey, this Stone of Destiny? Why did it ever come into the possession of our leading Church? Why was it used for Coronation purposes?

If its history rests only upon outside legends then its use becomes strange, especially with a Nation which prides itself upon being logical in its plans, and fairly level-headed.

The Stone is a powerful "sign" to us Britishers of our ancient origin. The possession of, and the use of that Stone goes far to prove the identity of Ephraim-Israel. It has no immediate connection with "the Jews."

We are told in the Bible that Israel is "to inherit the heathen," and also the "uttermost parts of the earth"; and is to be ruled over by "a King of the line of David"—and to be "a Nation for ever." Also Israel is destined by God to carry out Christ's Missionary work among the heathen, a vast responsibility and heritage which can only be carried out by a great and powerful people, and which is being exactly fulfilled by the English-speaking races, who possess an evangelizing Church for that very purpose; and together they distribute Bibles in all languages by the tens of thousands annually.

PROMISES OF LAND.

We have the repeated promises of Israel possessing vast portions of the earth's surface in "the last days." "And the Lord appeared unto Abram, and said: "Unto thy seed will I give this land" (Gen. xii, 7).

"In the same day the Lord made a Covenant with Abram, saying, unto thy seed have I given this land from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates." Here we have the boundaries specified in a clear manner!

Purely Temporal Blessings of LAND—promised as a BIRTHRIGHT solely to EPHRAIM-ISRAEL—not to Judah—not to any other sons of Jacob. No, because the Birthright descended to Joseph—and thence to his sons solely.

All the promises were repeated on seven separate occasions to Abraham, and again twice to Isaac; and to Jacob. "By Myself have I sworn." (Read Gen. xxii, 16-19.)

And if one reads carefully Gen. xii, 1, and Heb. xi, 8, we see "By Faith" Abraham obeyed the Lord's Command, not himself knowing whither he went. Genesis gives us, fully, details of the areas of LAND falling to Abraham and his seed. All purely Temporal and Material Promises which cannot be changed, at the will of man, into a "Spiritual Promise"! Nothing can do away with, or set aside the unconditional Promises. St. Paul shows this to be impossible. The New Covenant cannot disannul (Gal. iii, 17), for the New Covenant is of "Grace by Jesus Christ" (St. John i, 17). While St. Paul says (Rom. xv, 8), "Jesus Christ was a minister of the circumcision for the truth of God to confirm the promises made unto the fathers."

Therefore the "promises" stand for all time: and consequently Israel must come into actual possession of their heritage on this earth.

Did not St. Paul say that "in the last days there shall be those having a form of Godliness, but denying the power thereof . . . ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth." This is wonderfully fulfilled in the present age, where we find so many ready to overthrow the prophecies which were "given by inspiration of God," and too ready to doubt the ability of Almighty God to fulfil His promises in any literal manner. When we survey the world's history of the past few years, all doubt as to the truth of the "fulfilment" of prophecy is solved: by the simple comparison of prophecy with history.

Dr. Llewellyn Thomas, in "God and My Birthright," very ably demonstrates there are two Hebrew words for river (one Nachal and the other Nahar), the former representing a winter torrent such as the El Arish, the latter Nahar representing a perpetual river, and which is the actual Hebrew word used in connection with the latter passage, given in Gen. xv, 18. Thus we know the boundaries lie between the Nile and the Euphrates. All of which has fallen into the hands of, or under the rule of, Great Britain. Why, unless Great Britain be Israel?

Then there is the promise of Israel being a perpetual nation. In Jer. xxxi, 35-36, we are told, "If those ordinances (the sun, moon and stars) depart from before Me, saith the Lord, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before Me for ever."

So, according to God's Word, an Israelitish nation must exist, and be now existing; and must be such a strong nation as will, and does, exactly fulfil the characteristics foretold Israel were to possess in the "latter days." It will be found on reference to Gen. xlix, 1, that Jacob is relating that which shall come to pass in "the last days."

Then we have the promise of a perpetual line of Kings for Israel—a line unbroken from David until the millennium. This does not fit the Jews.

That Israel shall abandon heathen ways and following after idols, and seek God, and become "Sons of the living God," i.e., Christians. This does not fit the Jews.

We are told that Israel, whose former home was in the Northern provinces of Palestine, was to have "a place appointed"—a "place of their own"—as a safe and permanent home. Read 2 Sam. vii, 10: "Moreover I will appoint a place for My people Israel, and will plant them, that they may dwell in a place of their own, and move no more; neither shall the children of wickedness afflict them any more, as beforetime."

Is not this an assurance of Israel existing for ever? When this promise was given, Israel inhabited the land allotted to their forefathers, so the place cannot be any of the area of the Promised Land. That is to fall to Israel in the "last days." The appointed place must, therefore, be elsewhere. God "will plant them." This prophecy does not fit the Jews. They are still wanderers amongst the various nations. Therefore, it can only refer to a living literal "Israel." In the Book of Isaiah we are told that Israel is finally to be gathered from "the islands of the sea," hence Israel inhabits islands. We have many references to the "isles of the sea." According to the interpretation of Dr. Llewellyn Thomas, whose book, "God and My Birthright," should be read by all persons interested in British-Israel, the words sea and west "are generally the translation of the same word in the Hebrew Bible." Therefore, being North and West of Palestine, we can assume that the "islands" are westward of the Mediterranean; the nearest being the British Isles. Refer to Isaiah xlix, 12: "Behold, these shall come from far, and lo, these from the north and from the west. . . ." The British Isles correspond to such a locality, being north and west of Palestine, and from which islands Israel is to be gathered for the reunion of the two Houses of Israel and Judah in the future.

See Isa. xi, 11, as to the recovery of "His People" "from the islands of the sea"—and remember that the words Sea and West are synonymous (Kitto's Cyclopedia).

ISRAEL TO DWELL ALONE.

"Lo, the people shall dwell alone, and shall not be reckoned among the nations" (Numb. xxiii, 9). This passage does not refer to the Jews—although they live alone, but scattered over the world—because the Jews ceased to be "a nation" when they crucified Christ.

Israel ceased to be reckoned among the nations from the time the Ten Tribes were exiled to captivity. And is not again, as "Israel," reckoned among the nations, because Israel is hidden from the world as fore-ordained. But we must remember, "Israel," on the other hand, is destined to be a nation "as long as sun, moon and stars exist" (Jer. xxxi, 36), to be "a great and mighty nation" (Gen. xviii, 18); "High above all nations" (Deut. xxvi, 19). These passages guide us to the fact that as the ages pass, Israel is to become more mighty; so great, that in her grandeur she takes a place alone; and so above other nations as not to be reckoned with them. Israel, who has been transferred by God to "the appointed place" of safety—the British Isles—is there any nation that can be compared with England? Certainly, England does not reckon herself in comparison with France, Germany, or Russia, or any other dynasty. England "dwells alone" in that respect. We must remember that the words of the text are taken from Balaam's prophecies, and they relate to a people in a condition of blessedness, and not to a people suffering still from the curse—as are the Jews. It refers to the Ten-Tribed House of Israel, and of them it can truly be said "the Lord, his God, is with him, and the shout of a king is among them." The Jews have no king. Then again, "He hath, as it were, the strength of an unicorn: Behold the people shall rise up as a great lion, and lift himself up as a young lion." All this is applicable to Israel, but not so to Judah—a people in dispersion. Much of the confusion in the minds of people is solely because they fail to see the distinction between Israel and Judah. Until they grasp this difference, they cannot intelligibly interpret the prophetical books of the Old Testament. Never lose sight of the fact that by God's Word Israel has to be a nation for ever. Is never "to cease from being a nation before Me for ever." This is definite and clear. No one has any Scriptural authority to alter this plain statement, or to say it means a "spiritual Israel"; or that it means "the Church," for they cannot support such a view. Does not Balaam tell us that "Israel is to eat up the nations—his enemies"? This expression can only refer to a great and conquering nation, not to the few millions of Jews on the earth.

"And who is like Thy people Israel, a nation that is alone in the earth whom God sent to redeem?"

"He hath not dealt so with any nation" (Psa. cxlvii, 20). There is no other nation to compare with Israel which is represented by "the Stone Kingdom," which is destined to overcome all other nations, and fill the whole earth. The British Isles representing the "stone cut out" (of the mountain of Europe) without hands.

HEALING IN HIS WINGS.

By E. M. FOSTER.

OUR human endurance cannot resist fatigue. If, however, we draw on Divine strength, the water of life, we shall never falter or fail. In the words of the Prophet, "They that wait on the Lord shall renew their strength." How urgent is the need when we have the race of life to run and so high a calling to attain!

But this one thing is needful. We must ask. We have the word of God, "Nevertheless I will be enquired of the House of Israel to do it for them." And those who pray earnestly know their reward. Those who doubt the healing grace of prayer can never have tried; or, if so, they have omitted an essential thing.

That is, we must first confess our sins to God. It is the first act of worship. In the ninth chapter of Daniel the Prophet in great anguish of mind prays for Divine mercy on the Holy City, but he begins his prayer with a full and repentant confession of guilt. Wonderful was the answer brought to him by Gabriel with the reassurance of forgiveness and restoration in the Messiah.

And our prayers are no less answered. As a nation it is our duty to go to prayer. First asking forgiveness and then for strength so that we may put away for ever the false gods we have built up for ourselves. The Kingdom is twice mentioned in the Lord's Prayer. Let us pray those words sincerely as never before. It is only by prayer, remember, that the time of tribulation can be shortened and the restitution of all things brought about quickly. If only the unbelievers in our midst would turn and pray!

We pause to wonder at the patience of One Who waits. The eternal Voice, "the same yesterday, to-day and for ever," rings down the long corridors of time, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock."

A PERSONAL WORD TO THE READERS OF "THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER."

GREETINGS TO ALL THE GREAT FELLOWSHIP OF OUR READERS.

LAST year, in answer to a personal appeal from me, you were good enough to send in several hundred pounds for the free distribution of books to be sent to carefully selected people. Your liberality enabled the Covenant Publishing Company to send them to hundreds of Clergymen and Ministers and to other Christian workers.

The results of this Movement have been so wonderful, and have brought to the Cause so many stalwart champions of the Truth, that I feel emboldened to ask if this great privilege may be continued. I think we have never invested money to better advantage, or obtained a more gratifying result.

Every package is sent to a selected person of whom we have heard such report as justifies the sending of the books.

In the name of the whole Federation I thank you for the liberality of the past year. The letters of thanks which have been received from time to time must be considered as condensed in these few words to you.

Please address your contribution to Mr. Herbert Garrison, 6, Buckingham Gate, London, S.W.1, "For Free Distribution of Mr. Goard's Books."

Thanking you in advance—Yours in the great service,

WM. PASCOE GOARD.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

BY THE REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A.

QUESTION.—A believer in Spiritism has just informed me that the story of the Witch of Endor was not in the original Scriptures, but was put into the Authorized Version of the Bible to please King James I.—M. W. P.

ANSWER.—It is difficult to understand how such an impossible statement could ever have been uttered, or that anyone could have believed such a thing. The "believer in Spiritism" who tendered you this information (?) must be lamentably ignorant of the Bible.

It goes without saying that of course the incident of Saul and the Witch of Endor is authentic, since it is contained in the Hebrew Scriptures, and also in all the Versions and translations, including the Greek Septuagint and the Syriac Peshita Versions. It also occurs in the Latin Vulgate of Jerome, all of which Versions were issued long centuries before the reign of James I. The same thing applies to all the English Versions which appeared in quick succession from the time of Wycliffe onwards. I have in front of me the Hebrew Bible, the Greek Septuagint, the Latin Vulgate, and also the "Breeches Bible" (1608), containing the story of the Witch of Endor, whereas King James' Version did not appear until 1611.

This incident (1 Sam. xxviii, 7-20) is full of interest, nor is it considered unhistorical by extreme critics. It is clear that the apparition of Samuel was real, and also that the woman (medium) was utterly unprepared for it. She was probably a cheap sorceress and ventriloquist, such as practised the art of witchcraft and magic in connection with the evil cults of the High Places. It had probably been her intention (as suggested by the Septuagint) to pretend before Saul that Samuel was speaking through her ventriloquial powers in the darkness of the cave and of the night. But God overruled her magic, and allowed Samuel to speak to Saul, although we are not told that Saul actually saw Samuel himself. He "perceived that it was Samuel" from her description. Archbishop Trench very beautifully says, "All human history has failed to record a despair deeper or more tragic than his (Saul's), who, having forsaken God and being of God forsaken, is now seeking to move hell, since Heaven is inexorable to him; and infinitely guilty as he is, assuredly there is something unutterably pathetic in that yearning of the disanointed king, now in his utter desolation, to exchange words once more with the friend and counsellor of his youth, and if he must hear his doom, to hear it from no other lips but his . . . . None was more amazed at the success of her necromancy than the sorceress herself." (Shipwrecks of Faith, p. 47.)

Literally, "a woman that hath a familiar spirit" (verse 7) means a woman mistress, or, owner of ob. The word ob in Hebrew means a skin bottle (Job xxxii, 19), and hence appears to mean the distended belly of the ventriloquist, by which word the Septuagint always renders ob. Thence it is applied both to designate the male or female ventriloquist as in verses 3 and 9, and Deut. xviii, 11; 2 Chron. xxxiii, 6; and also the spirit which was supposed to speak from the belly of the ventriloquist. In this sense it is used in verses 8 and 9, and Isa. xxix, 4. The art of the ventriloquist seems to have been always connected with necromancy. The Greeks had necromancers who were called Psychagogi, and who called up departed spirits. There was a temple at Heraclea, near Olympia, where Pausanias consulted the Manes of Cleonice (see Plutarch, Life of Cimon), and one at Phigalia in Arcadia, also consulted by him. In Deut. xviii, the consulter with familiar spirits, the wizard and the necromancer (one who enquires of the dead) are joined together. But it does not follow that ventriloquism was the only form of necromancy. See further Commentaries on this passage.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

WE would direct attention to the announcement on page 112 in re the meetings next week in the Central Hall, Westminster. The President of the B.-I.-W.F., Major J. Knowles, will preside at the opening meeting on Monday afternoon. Major Richard Rigg will preside on Tuesday afternoon. The Rev. Pascoe Goard and Messrs. Leech and Garrison will preside on other occasions.

By special request, the Secretary-General will give two full lectures and three half-time lectures, illustrated by pictures from his wonderful collection of over 15,000, secured at great cost during many years. All proceeds are for B.-I. funds. We ask our members to invite their friends and help us to fill the Hall for each meeting.

Mr. John Leech, K.C., and Mrs. Murray had greatly interested and keenly appreciative audiences at Headquarters last week. Mr. Leech will give a further lecture on Prophecy on the afternoon of 26th inst. No meetings will be held at Headquarters next week.

We have applications for speakers from many quarters, and to meet this another Forward Movement is being planned, particulars of which will be announced later.

The Rev. Pascoe Goard, Mr. John Leech and Mr. Garrison have a series of meetings in Cheltenham on March 3rd, 4th, 5th and 6th; a series in Leamington on March 11th, 12th and 13th; a series in Norwich on March 24th, 25th, 26th and 27th; and a series in Exeter on April 1st, 2nd and 3rd.

Two crowded meetings have been held in Gloucester, and a great impression was made by the addresses of the Rev. T. H. Whitehouse, of which the local paper gives a good report. Dr. E. F. Waddington, of Cheltenhan, presided. Visitors came from the surrounding districts.

The first public meeting of a newly-formed Branch at Wandsworth took place recently in the Town Hall. The Rev. E. A. Couldrey presided, and the address was given by Mr. J. J. Morey, who spoke with his usual convincing power. To many present the teaching was new, but they were intensely interested. The Chairman told of how he sat up until after 4 a.m. reading his first B.-I. book, and when his wife persuaded him to retire, he kept her awake until it was time to get up, telling her all about it. Small wonder that this greatly stimulated the sale of literature at the Book Stall.

A new Branch has been started at Sevenoaks, Kent, with Mr. E. C. Windsor as Honorary Secretary. Two successful meetings were held on January 31st, when the addresses by the Rev. E. A. Couldrey were keenly appreciated.

Several of our supporters have been gathered Home, mostly at a ripe age: Mr. W. H. Beal, of Halifax, passed away on January 20th, in his 81st year. He was one of the oldest business men of the town, and for many years he seldom missed a B.-I. meeting.

Mrs. C. Baker, of Redland, Bristol, has passed on at the age of 94. She had been well known as a charming lady of high intelligence, and she leaves fragrant memories of a beautiful and holy life. She was reading this journal regularly within a short time of her death. We tender our sympathy to the families of both our friends.

An Anglican clergyman writes:—"Since I fully embraced British-Israel Truth my work for God has been incomparably happier and more blessed than ever before. For one thing the Bible is now a most real and most interesting library. Negative Higher Criticism and disturbing Modernism have had to take a very back seat. For another thing, 'The one increasing purpose that through the ages broadly runs,' is logical and conclusive. My ministry is infinitely more a joy to me now that I see the great promises made to Abraham and his successors being actually and literally fulfilled. All lead to Christ, and He is the Apex, the Saviour from all our ills. I want to do what I can to lead other clergymen towards finding the same beautiful confidence the Lord has so graciously given to me."

J. G. writes from White Rock, B.C., Canada:—"I must say that your journal is the most acceptable reading matter we get, and we greatly appreciate the high tone of the leading articles from week to week. May the Lord bless your labours with abundant success."

"The origin, course, and destiny of the Anglo-Saxon race is the greatest ethnological theme in the Bible. This is not manifest to the ordinary reader, because in the sacred Scriptures the elect race is designated by different terms from those which now distinguish it. Once admit that the Saxons are I-Saacsons, the lineal and natural descendants of Isaac, the child of promise, and you will have the clue that will solve the mystery of races for ages, and reveal to your delighted vision that we, the people of the Saxon race, are the children of promise, God's chosen people, the elect race, the ethnical servant of Jehovah, the God of Bethel, for such is the glorious heritage for our Race."—The Rev. Martin Lyman Streator, M.A., U.S.A.

A clergyman in South Africa writes:—"THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER is doing a great work. The Word of Almighty God is going forth, as He said it would, and the earth shall be filled with His glory. It is blessed."

We are now able to announce that the All-American Anglo-Israel Convention will be held (D.V.) in Detroit, as the majority of our friends and readers favour this city. The dates as already given are May 6th, 7th and 8th next. We are glad to find that our readers are in touch with Mr. Howard Rand, LL.B., who is helping to organize the Convention. We have passed on names and addresses to him, and he will be issuing particulars to all who desire information. We ask all to pray that the Divine blessing and guidance may be given to all who work for and all who attend the Convention. Great things should result therefrom, greater than anyone can foresee. Our American friends will have the prayers of all believers the world over.

The Rev. Joseph Gay has visited Portsmouth, Southsea, Southampton and Guildford, and had large audiences ; he has also visited Herne Bay, Eastbourne, Horsham and Sevenoaks. We always expect good audiences at Herne Bay and Eastbourne, and we are never disappointed. Miss Cook and her workers at Herne Bay, Mrs. Montagu-Kite, Miss Terry and their workers at Eastbourne are to be congratulated on a steady progress by which they have been able to build up really strong Branches. When Mr. Gay visited the Horsham Branch, the room in the Town Hall was comfortably filled both afternoon and evening.

At Sevenoaks we opened for the first time this year on January 17th. Mr. Windsor organized the meetings in the large hall of his hotel, and the attendance was beyond all expectation. Mr. Windsor, with characteristic B.-I. zeal and thoroughness, left no stone unturned to secure success, and he was well rewarded not only by the numbers, but also by the influential personnel of the gatherings. He provided a full literature table and sold well. This is a point which we would stress with all our Branches. Let the books accompany the spoken Word every time.

On Sunday afternoon, January 19th, Mr. Gay visited, by special invitation, the Post-War Brotherhood of Portsmouth. He delivered an address, by request, on the Great Pyramid to 1,700 men. It was an occasion never to be forgotten. Mr. Gay held his audience completely for forty minutes, the usual time allotted for an address is twenty minutes. When he sat down the great audience spontaneously sprang to their feet in token of their appreciation. Mr. Gay answered a number of written questions which were handed up to him.

On January 20th Mr. Gay paid a return visit to the Putney Branch, and after the lecture presided over a members' meeting. On January 21st he was at Chatham. The audience comfortably filled the large hall of the Navy House, and was presided over by Mr. Markham, the Member of Parliament for the Borough, who evinced keen interest in our subject and expressed the wish to hear more about it.

Folkestone, January 23rd ; Woking, January 28th ; and Acton, January 30th, closed a busy month.

Mr. J. Wintersgill, of Wigan, gave a lecture entitled "British-Israel can Help the Churches, and Why" to the Southport Branch on January 27th. He said now the Churches and other religious bodies have to a large extent lost their grip on the man-in-the-street, British-Israel is filling the gap. In the main, British-Israel teaching does not differ from the Church, but is the only teaching that can square the idea of God as a God of love with the conditions of life in the world to-day. If the teaching of Leviticus and Deuteronomy were preached churches would be full, but pious platitudes will never fill a church. God has said "This is the Way, walk ye in it," and we have strayed and landed ourselves in the troubles in which we now are. British-Israel helped the Church insomuch that, if we as a nation were to return to the law given at Sinai, God would make us a nation wealthy, healthy and blessed, a nation fit to receive Him.

The Rev. E. A. Couldrey had good meetings at Cambridge on the 4th inst. The matter of forming village branches was discussed, and future meetings were arranged for Linton, Foxton and Whittlesford. It is hoped also to form Bible Study Groups immediately, and by this method to disseminate the Truth.

THE BIBLE and THE SPADE

You have doubtless read about the wonderful work of excavation being carried on at Abraham's birthplace—Ur of the Chaldees—by Mr. C. Leonard Woolley.

Possibly you have read his book "Ur of the Chaldees" and also seen the exhibits at the British Museum. If not you ought to do so.

In any case you must read Mr. Goard's new book, a most valuable and illuminating work, explaining, as it does, the wonderful writings of the prophet Daniel.

"The Documents of Daniel,"

The book of Daniel, written some 2,500 years ago, tells of changing dynasties customs and religions.

To-day the spade has uncovered the solid irrefutable evidence of the things written by Daniel more than 2,500 years ago. Send for

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

APPROACHES TO THE FACTS OF BRITISH-ISRAEL TRUTH.—III.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD, F.R.G.S.

WE have seen the outworking of the plan of God in history, in the perpetuation of the Israel people in the Anglo-Saxon race.

The question which presents itself is as to what is the purpose connected with that race which would justify such a great plan, carried through for so many ages?

The answer to that question will call for the asking of another. What is that nation TO GOD?

In the nineteenth chapter of Exodus there is the statement made as one which should be spoken to the Children of Israel for all time:—"These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the Children of Israel. . . . Ye shall be unto Me a kingdom of priests and an holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the Children of Israel."

A Kingdom unto God.

This is the purpose of the nation.

Whoever shall say that the British-Israel position is one of national pride shows that he has not carefully studied this subject. There is no question as to what Israel shall be in itself as an end in itself; the question on the contrary is, WHAT THE NATION SHALL BE TO GOD?

It is for His own purpose God created, formed, redeemed and named Israel.

It is for His declared and established purpose that He has preserved Israel to this day, and shall still preserve her. And that purpose is world-wide. Israel should be the agent of God's purpose. The world at large shall be the beneficiaries of that purpose through the agency of Israel.

So for a moment we shall look at the association of God with Israel from the commencement of the race and of the nation to the end of time. First we shall look at the relationship of God with the Hebrew race developed from Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

This great matter is introduced to us in the twelfth chapter of Genesis, wherein God calls Abram from Ur of the Chaldees. (1921 B.C.—Ussher.) He was of the Habiru—Hebrew—of the Assyrian inscriptions and tablets. Thereafter, in the fourteenth century before Christ, the Habiru are found to be active in Syria, and as the Tel-el-Amarna tablets tell us, the Abiri—Hebrew—of the Egyptian tablets were busy carrying on the conquest of Palestine, as the Bible tells us was the case. (See Professor Odlum's articles, "Abdasherah, Aziru and the Abiri," now appearing in this Journal.)

Now at the time of Abraham God revealed Himself to him as EL SHADDAI; that is to say, God the nourisher. By that name He signed the Covenant granted to Abraham. By the new name Abraham, the father of the father of the race, Isaac, signed the Covenant, and by the new name Sarah, the queen-mother of the father of the race, is made a party to it.

Now the name Shaddai is based upon the Hebrew root Shad. This is a root which indicates, for instance, the nursing breast of the mother which gives nourishment to the new-born child. Evidently it is to this function of the Lord that the Apostle alludes when he exhorts the people to whom he wrote: "As new-born babes desire the sincere milk of the word that ye may grow thereby."

Digitized by Google

The name of God, indicating Him as the nourisher of the race so to be born in Isaac as the charter indicates, is used again and again in connection with the people included in that covenant, all through the Scriptures, until the Book of Revelation. There we find it again in the self-declaration of Christ in the following words: "I am Alpha and Omega, the first and the last, which was, and which is, and which is to come, THE ALMIGHTY." The Hebrew equivalent of this expression in the Greek tongue, that is to say the Old Testament equivalent of this New Testament term, would be: "I am he which was, and which is, and which is to come, EL SHADDAI."

It is He Who carrieth Israel in His arms as a shepherd carries the lambs in his bosom.

Thus, as the race Father, He is to us El Shaddai.

Next we see Him revealing Himself to Moses as JEHOVAH. (Ussher—1491 B.C.)

By this name He associates Himself with the Israel nation, and the further nations which should be developed of the Israel seed. For the promise of God to Israel was and is that first she should become a great nation; then a nation and a company of nations; then a multitude of nations; then, finally, that she should adopt and include all nations in the national basis of the Kingdom of God in the earth.

The coming and establishment of God in Israel is told with great dramatic power in Exodus xix. It is a pity that men have turned their minds away from seeing in this great event an historic experience of Israel. The phenomena which accompanied the Coming of our Lord was chiefly natural, magnified into unusual intensity. But there was the unique experience of the thrilling sounding of the trump of God, and this great feature is made to stand out clearly in the prophecies regarding the return of our Lord. It gives to the prophecies an unreal seeming. But it is only seeming, and is seen to be so when we remember that once in the history of Israel that sound has startled the ears of a whole generation of our own race. It is well to call to mind that when the great trumpet shall again be blown, it will be to herald the Coming of our Lord to take the throne of His father David, and to rule over the House of Jacob for ever. When we remember this, and it seems to us to be visionary and unreal, then let us call to mind that it is an historic thing which shall be repeated. Let us further call to mind that when last the trumpet voice aroused all that were in the camp of Israel, it heralded the Coming of Jehovah to establish Himself in Israel as King, and to take Israel to Him as His Kingdom of Priests; and that when again the voice of the trumpet shall be heard it shall be to herald the Jehovah incarnate to take up His reign in Israel on earth.

The one establishes the other, and both tend to become real as we thus compare them together.

Again, we are called to see the presence of the Glory of the Lord at the dedication of Solomon's Temple. (Ussher—1004 B.C.) There had been constant communication between God and Israel, through His prophets, in the interval, as there continues to be after the event we are to touch upon. But we are in this article looking at the great demonstrations of Divine presence and power.

So we find Him manifesting Himself in the Temple at the time of the dedication, as told in the following passage:—

"Now when Solomon had made an end of praying, the fire came down from heaven, and consumed the burnt offering and the sacrifices; and the glory of the Lord filled the house.

And the priests could not enter into the house of the Lord, because the glory of the Lord had filled the Lord's house.

And when all the children of Israel saw how the fire came down, and the glory of the Lord upon the house, they bowed themselves with their faces to the ground upon the pavement, and worshipped, and praised the Lord, saying, For he is good; for his mercy endureth for ever.

Then the king and all the people offered sacrifices before the Lord."—2 Chron. vii, 1-4.

Again we see Him manifesting Himself to Isaiah the prophet at the Temple at Jerusalem. (Ussher—758 B.C.) The occasion was a most important one for that city and for the House of Judah. It was the judgment day for the nation.

What a startling light this throws upon the procedure of the Jehovah rule in His nation!

Now there was a majestic session when Jehovah sat in judgment upon Judah and Jerusalem, and only the prophet Isaiah knew. Judah went heedlessly on its way, which proved to be the way of doom.

The great event is set forth for all Israel to read. It is an amazing thing that this great trial was thus recorded by the prophet, was accepted and adopted as sacred revelation by the priestly order of the day, was incorporated in the Canon of the Holy Scriptures, and has been carefully preserved by Ministers of the Church of Christ, by Governments of Israel, and by the King, right down to the present day. And yet in spite of all these precautions to preserve and make the writing known, the actual practical nature of the text, and of the great message contained in it, has never been apprehended by the people nor by the leaders of the people. May the Lord open our eyes to-day to understand that our nation is also before the judgment-seat of Jehovah our God and King. The text is as follows:—

"In the year that king Uzziah died I saw also the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and his train filled the temple.

Above it stood the seraphims: each one had six wings; with twain he covered his face, and with twain he covered his feet, and with twain he did fly.

And one cried unto another, and said, Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hosts: the whole earth is full of his glory.

And the posts of the door moved at the voice of him that cried, and the house was filled with smoke.

Then said I, Woe is me! for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips: for mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of hosts.

Then flew one of the seraphims unto me, having a live coal in his hand, which he had taken with the tongs from off the altar:

And he laid it upon my mouth, and said, Lo, this hath touched thy lips; and thine iniquity is taken away, and thy sin purged.

Also I heard the voice of the Lord, saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for us? Then said I, Here am I; send me.

And he said, Go, and tell this people, Hear ye indeed, but understand not; and see ye indeed, but perceive not.

Digitized by Google

Make the heart of this people fat, and make their ears heavy, and shut their eyes; lest they see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and convert, and be healed.

Then said I, Lord, how long? And he answered, Until the cities be wasted without inhabitant, and the houses without man, and the land be utterly desolate,

And the Lord have removed men far away, and there be a great forsaking in the midst of the land.

But yet in it shall be a tenth, and it shall return, and shall be eaten: as a tiel tree, and as an oak, whose substance is in them, when they cast their leaves: so the holy seed shall be the substance thereof."—Isaiah vi.

So the people were removed far away, and there was a great forsaking in the midst of the land. From that day to this the House of Judah has never returned to the land of their fathers, and shall not until after the last day of that sentence is passed away. That will be in the decade to which we are hastening, which begins with A.D. 1931.

The Israel punishment went out about the year A.D. 1800, and since that time the Celto-Saxon people, who are the Israel of prophecy, have blossomed out and are in process of filling the face of the earth with fruit according to the promise of God.

As a sequel to the sixth chapter of Isaiah we have the tenth and eleventh chapters of Ezekiel, which show the departure of the Shekinah Glory—the Glory of the Lord—from Jerusalem. From that day it has never settled again in Jerusalem, although we read it shone around the shepherds on the plains of Bethlehem on the night of the nativity of our Lord.

The time is not yet, but is not far distant when the Glory of the Lord shall return again to Jerusalem, there to shine forth during all the reign of our Lord upon the throne of His father David.

The text of this manifestation is as follows:—

"And there appeared in the cherubims the form of a man's hand under their wings.

And when I looked, behold the four wheels by the cherubims, one wheel by one cherub, and another wheel by another cherub: and the appearance of the wheels was as the colour of a beryl stone.

And as for their appearances, they four had one likeness, as if a wheel had been in the midst of a wheel.

When they went, they went upon their four sides; they turned not as they went, but to the place whither the head looked they followed it; they turned not as they went.

And their whole body, and their backs, and their hands, and their wings, and the wheels, were full of eyes round about, even the wheels that they four had.

As for the wheels, it was cried unto them in my hearing, O wheel.

And every one had four faces: the first face was the face of a cherub, and the second face was the face of a man, and the third the face of a lion, and the fourth the face of an eagle.

And the cherubims were lifted up. This is the living creature that I saw by the river of Chebar.

And when the cherubims went, the wheels went by them: and when the cherubims lifted up their wings to mount up from the earth, the same wheels also turned not from beside them.

When they stood, these stood; and when they were lifted up, these lifted up themselves also: for the spirit of the living creature was in them.

Then the glory of the Lord departed from off the threshold of the house, and stood over the cherubims.

And the cherubims lifted up their wings, and mounted up from the earth in my sight: when they went out, the wheels also were beside them, and every one stood at the door of the east gate of the Lord's house; and the glory of the God of Israel was over them above.

This is the living creature that I saw under the God of Israel by the river of Chebar; and I knew that they were the cherubims.

Every one had four faces apiece, and every one four wings; and the likeness of the hands of a man was under their wings.

And the likeness of their faces was the same faces which I saw by the river of Chebar, their appearances and themse ves: they went every one straight forward."—Ezek. x, 8-22.

THE LORD APPEARS TO ISRAEL.

We now turn to Israel in the captivity, and we see that the Glory of the Lord followed them there. (Ussher—595 B.C.) The fact is stated in the first chapter of Ezekiel, and in that chapter, as in others, the prophet attempts to put into ordinary language the extraordinary appearance of the Glory for which the human tongue has no adequate vocabulary. If, therefore, the reading seems to be strange, remember that it is because language is being used to describe an unusual appearance.

It is a truism to say that language is the product of use. We see an object many times, or our fathers have seen such objects, and on doing so we formulate a sound to indicate that object. Thus we have seen horses from childhood. All civilized nations have seen the horse. Every language has been enriched by a term which signifies the horse. But the horse did not come into civilization in the cradle of the human family, that is to say in the Euphrates Valley, until about two thousand years before Christ. Then words were formed to represent the horse in literature. Thus the Greeks in their own tongue at the time of Homer called the horse, as we know him, the single-hoofed hippos or horse. The French called him Cheval. The Anglo-Saxon called him "horse." Now the manifestation of the glory of God was rare; language had not formed itself around the manifestation, so the prophet had to make the best use he could of language formed to represent other objects and actions to describe the unusual manifestation. Perhaps with the language of to-day, which has been enriched by the accumulating experiences of ages, he would have been able to use other terms. This is the vocabulary of the sixth century before Christ. So we shall read and endeavour to get a clear conception of that Glory which the prophet saw, under Divine inspiration, endeavouring to describe in the best way possible through the vocabulary then in use.

The description is of the Glory of the Lord as it appeared to Israel in the land of Israel's captivity in Assyria. (Please read as part of this article the first chapter of Ezekiel, verses 1-25.)

Now comes the most important part of the revelation in which the vocabulary available for the purpose is strained to the breaking-point, in order to give us some conception of that Divine Person Who thus came to visit Israel in her captivity and her sin and sorrow. It was not only a visit. It was rather the Coming of the Lord according to His promise, which we shall see a moment later, to become to Israel "a little sanctuary in the wilderness," and to accompany them in their wanderings until He and they should arrive again to the place of departure, namely, the City of Jerusalem, and the renewed Temple of the Lord.

"And above the firmament that was over their heads was the likeness of a throne, as the appearance of a sapphire stone: and upon the likeness of the throne was the likeness as the appearance of a man above upon it.

And I saw as the colour of amber, as the appearance of fire round about within it, from the appearance of his loins even upward, and from the appearance of his loins even downward, I saw as it were the appearance of fire, and it had brightness round about.

As the appearance of the bow that is in the cloud in the day of rain, so was the appearance of the brightness round about. This was the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the Lord. And when I saw it, I fell upon my face, and I heard a voice of one that spake."—Ezek. i, 26-28.

Please read as a part of this article the second and third chapters of Ezekiel in which the prophet is commissioned to carry the Divine message to Israel. What a message of ultimate salvation and glory it is; but in the interim what a message of sinning and suffering! Is it not a matter for gratitude that the time of suffering and sinning is well nigh past, and the time of the great deliverance and the final restoration is at hand.

Once more we are called to see the Glory of the Lord. Again it is at Jerusalem, and the occasion is the departure of the Glory from that city.

The sadness of the occasion is beyond expression. Judah, and her House, were henceforth left desolate, as the nation of the Jews and their later Temple were also left desolate when our Lord "went out and departed from the Temple."

But the departure of the Glory of God from the Temple at Jerusalem is accompanied with the promise of return. (Ussher—594 B.C.) The sins of Judah sent Him away. The repentance of all the House of Israel wholly, including Judah, shall be the prelude to His returning again.

This is the glorious promise left to comfort Israel when He departed from the Temple and City of Jerusalem.

"Son of man, thy brethren, even thy brethren, the men of thy kindred, and all the house of Israel wholly, are they unto whom the inhabitants of Jerusalem have said, Get you far from the Lord: unto us is this land given in possession.

Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord God; Although I have cast them far off among the heathen, and although I have scattered them among the countries, yet will I be to them as a little sanctuary in the countries where they shall come.

Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord God: I will even gather you from the people, and assemble you out of the countries where ye have been scattered, and I will give you the land of Israel.

And they shall come thither, and they shall take away all the detestable things thereof and all the abominations thereof from thence.

And I will give them one heart, and I will put a new spirit within you; and I will take the stony heart out of their flesh, and will give them an heart of flesh:

That they may walk in my statutes, and keep mine ordinances, and do them: and they shall be my people, and I will be their God.

But as for them whose heart walketh after the heart of their detestable things and their abominations, I will recompense their way upon their own heads, saith the Lord God.

Then did the cherubims lift up their wings, and the wheels beside them; and the glory of the God of Israel was over them above.

And the glory of the Lord went up from the midst of the city, and stood upon the mountain which is on the east side of the city.

Afterwards the spirit took me up, and brought me in a vision by the Spirit of God into Chaldea, to them of the captivity. So the vision that I had seen went up from me.

Then I spake unto them of the captivity all the things that the Lord had shewed me."—Ezek. xi, 15-25.

We may follow this into the New Testament in a later article.

It is sufficient for the present for us to see that the Lord is revealed to us as following the fortunes of Israel, protecting and co-operating with them in the fulfilment of His purposes through them, even during the time that they were dwelling under the shadow of the punishments of the national Covenant made with Israel at Sinai.

It is sufficient that we see the meaning of the chant of Israel:—

"HOLY, HOLY, HOLY IS JEHOVAH, GOD ALMIGHTY," which is, that the Lord in His Jehovah manifestation is entirely devoted to the one purpose of administering His Kingdom of Israel, and of working out His great world purpose through Israel. For by the Jehovah Name He has not revealed Himself in or through any other nation. For other nations He has other names and other manifestations of Himself.

ABDASHERAH, AZIRU AND THE ABIRI. II.

BY PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc.

TABLET 35 B is from Aziru, who professes loyalty to Pharaoh thus: "To the King my Lord, my God, my Sun, Azïru thy servant," etc., etc. He promises he will never rebel, and says he is sincere. He also makes certain claims on Simyra.

In Letter 35 B.M., Aziru calls himself the servant of the "Great King," and explains his actions and movements.

In Letter 128 B, Yapaaddu, chief of Sigata, writes to Yankhamu, and says, "Lo, from the city of Simyra, a destruction by Aziru of all the lands, in length from the city of Gebal to the city Ugariti, and the destruction of this city Sigata, and of the city Ambi."

From this it is plain that Aziru was busy and successful in invading and capturing cities in ancient Phœnicia, and also in Philistia, as elsewhere shown, and in friendly correspondence with the king of Egypt.

Tablet 13 B.M. says in part, in addressing the king of Egypt: "Does the king know? Behold Aziru has fought my chiefs, and has taken twelve of my chiefs and has insisted on receiving at our expense fifty talents; and the chiefs whom I despatched to the city Simyra, he has caused to be seized in the city.

Both the city Beirut and the city Sidon are sending ships to the city Simyra. All who are in the land of the Amorites have gathered themselves. I am to be attacked ; and behold this ; Yapaaddu has fought for me against Aziru, but afterwards he was entangled in the midst of the enemy when my ships were taken . . ."

In this Tablet, Beirut, Sidon, Simyra are mentioned, and are all on the Mediterranean seacoast, south of Asia Minor.

"All who are in the land of the Amorites" above seem to have been the soldiers of Gad, Reuben and the Half Tribe of Manasseh who had conquered the Amorites and invaded Canaan from that land. Hence they were termed, "All who are in the land of the Amorites."

In Tablet 18 B.M., Abdasherah, his sons, and Aziru his son are mentioned. Much real information has been deciphered, even though it is badly broken. It is from Gebal. Some of the statements are as follows, and set forth that Aziru has chosen all the men of blood, and has said to them, "If the city of Gebal is not . . . ." Here the story is broken. But from other Tablets we know that Aziru was determined to capture the city of Gebal, Byblos, though it belonged to Egypt, and was a powerful, wealthy, garrisoned seaport.

Farther on, in this Tablet 18 B.M., we read that "Abdasherah has marched without stopping . . ." The Tablet tells of the movements of father and son as they proceed to conquer the land, taking city after city. And we must remember that Aziru was only one of the five warrior sons of Abdasherah.

Tablet 61 B, p. 52, tells of the capture of Simyra "by the sons of Abdasherah" and none lives to carry a message to the king (of Egypt). Before the city was taken and while the siege was in progress, the Tablet says, "The siege of the usurpers is exceedingly strong," showing the sons of Abdasherah had the needed siege instruments and weapons.

This is more impressive if we use the word Joshua for Abdasherah. The above Tablet was written by the chief of Gebal, the only surviving uncaptured city at the time.

Once granting that Abdasherah was Joshua and that the Abiri were Israel, then the following strikes the mind very forcefully :—Yapaaddu of Gebal in Tablet 61 B, p. 52, says : "Henceforth Aziru is the enemy of Yapaaddu. They have marched, and they have been cruel in their ravages against me. They rest not. They desire the evil of all that are with me. So they have waxed strong, powerful against me who is faithful to the king (of Egypt) . . . But the sons of Abdasherah have destroyed . . . us the throne of thy father's house . . . to take the king's lands for themselves. They have joined the king of the land of Mitana, and the king of the land of Casi, and the king of the land of the Hittites."

This is far-reaching.

1st : Amenophis IV, to whom Yapaaddu was writing, was living up the Nile at Gebal Barkal, at Napata ; and instead of giving attention to the numerous calls from the fortified cities of Canaan and elsewhere, where they were in danger, and called to the "great king" for soldiers to save them from destruction, he, the Egyptian Pharaoh, kept withdrawing his garrisons. This truly looked as if he were in sympathy with Abdasherah, his sons, and the Abiri.

2nd : The above-mentioned king of Mitana, the Casi and the Hittites was Dusratta, the father-in-law of the then ruling Amenophis IV (Amen-Hetep IV. See Budge), with whom he was on most familiar terms, as many letters show.

Now as we read the words of Yapaaddu of Gebal when he tells the king that "They (Abdasherah's sons) had joined the king of the land of Mitana, we see that the invaders under Abdasherah were favoured at that time by Egypt and Egypt's strongest ally and friend, Dusratta, of what we would now call Upper Mesopotamia or Iraq.

If we hold the correct view here, then we see the operations of Divine strategy in a marvellous manner. The Abiri or Hebrews had a friend in Egypt, their former enemy of forty years before, and also in Dusratta, a powerful king, who was an ally, a friend and the father-in-law of the king of Egypt. No wonder then that Yapaaddu of Gebal on the Mediterranean seacoast tells us that the sons of Abdasherah and the king of Mitana, of the Casi and the Hittites, had joined.

It is well to say here that Dusratta claimed to be king of the Hittites. This claim is set out by himself in another Tablet. How far he made good that claim we need not discuss, but one thing we may say is this : He was really king of Mitana, of the Casi, and of the Minyans of a part of what is known as Armenia. In Grecian history and in the history of Barca and Cyrene of North Africa, we read of the Minyans or Minyae as very important peoples. In fact, we can trace them from the Peloponnesus to the Jason Argonauts in search of the Golden Fleece of Colchis.

EXPOSITIONS IN THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

BY THE REV. JOSEPH GAY, A.T.S.

No. 7.—THE TROAS VISION AND WHAT CAME OF IT.

Part II.

HAVING taken a cursory glance into the previous history of the Israel people scattered among the Gentiles, history previous to the Troas Vision, and having briefly stated the career of this Apostle who was sent to preach the Gospel to this very people, let us take up the case subsequent to this Vision that we may the better understand and appreciate the immense importance of the Vision itself. Obedient to what he regarded as the Divine command, St. Paul crossed over into Macedonia, and soon found himself in Athens, where he challenged the heathen scholarship of the world and overthrew it. Thence he journeyed to Corinth. There he established a strong and flourishing Church in the then commercial centre of the world. This is the furthest point he reached on this particular journey. Thence he returned, via Ephesus, to Jerusalem in time for the great feast of the Passover. The door into the West is now opened, and permanently opened for subsequent development. The happenings in Jerusalem at that particular feast period led to an appeal to Cæsar. This was the Apostle's right as a free-born Roman citizen, and having made it no one, not even he himself, could withdraw it. Unto Cæsar he must go. This fixes the direction West through the door which the Troas Vision had opened. In the end of the day (St. Luke records it), St. Paul found himself in Rome. He is held there by the authority of the Cæsar some two years awaiting his Imperial Majesty's pleasure to try him. Has Rome to be his furthest point West? Has he himself to go no further? Must he leave it to others to carry forward the Gospel until it shall have reached these shores of Great Britain? St. Luke has reached his objective when he takes him to Rome and there establishes the Gospel in the capital of the Empire.

Now it would appear from the statement of St. Luke (Acts xxviii, 15) that there was a considerable colony of Christians in Rome at the time when the Apostle, and those who accompanied him, arrived there. "The Christians of Rome were already numerous, being many of them of exalted rank, and having heard from Puteoli of Paul's expected approach, a body of them, in honour of the great Apostle of the Gentiles, and in testimony of their sense of his unparalleled exertions and sacrifices in the sacred cause, now met him at Appii Forum, forty-three miles from the capital." (Lewin.)

It could not have been the Apostle Paul, for he is now entering Rome for the first time. Now who brought Christianity to Rome in the first place? The statement of St. Luke makes it abundantly clear that it was not St. Paul. No one surely will suggest that St. Peter was in Rome prior to this advent of St. Paul. I have not been able personally to find one shred of evidence that St. Peter was ever in Rome. Be that as it may, it is certain that he was not in Rome before St. Paul arrived there.

Well, then, who was responsible for this introduction? If the good news of the Gospel had reached Macedonia, as the Troas Vision suggests, by those who, from that region, were present at Pentecost, being numbered among the three thousand who were added to the first disciples on the preaching of St. Peter and others, it is more than likely, it seems to be pretty certain that there were also in that selfsame assembly many from Rome. Indeed, the tenth verse of the second chapter of the Acts says that it was even so. ". . . . and sojourners from Rome." That would be in itself sufficient to account for the Christian colony which welcomed the Apostle on his arrival in the capital. But there are other facts equally interesting and, indeed, more important. In dealing with this matter one cannot ignore the testimony of ancient Glastonbury. If the witness there be true, and archæologists, who have a right to be heard, tell us that that witness rests on a very good foundation, then Christianity must have come to these Islands of the West at a very early period. It would appear to be the same period, almost the same time, as when Paul and Barnabas went forth by the Holy Ghost from Antioch on their first missionary tour. Caradoc, better known to some by his Latin name Caractacus, ruled in Britain from A.D. 43 to A.D. 51, in which year he was taken captive to Rome. Granted that the Glastonbury testimony be correct, then Christianity had been long enough in the land, some thirty years or more, to be well established, and it is more than likely that Caradoc had not only heard of the Christian faith, but had himself embraced it. His noble bearing and reported speech before the Roman Senate is thoroughly Christian. He made his last stand against the Romans on a lofty hill in Shropshire, which is called to this day Caer-Caradoc, or town of Caradoc. "Signal was this victory," says Tacitus; "the wife and daughters of Caractacus were taken prisoners, and his brothers surrendered to mercy." Caractacus put himself under the protection of his step-mother, Cartismandua, Queen of the Brigantes, by whom he was betrayed, and delivered up to the Romans, A.D. 50 or 51. His daughter Gladys and his son Linus accompanied him to Rome and shared with him his exile. She was, we are given to understand, adopted by the Emperor Claudius, and given the name Claudia. This is more than likely, for Claudius was mightily impressed with the military bearing and courageous spirit of her father, whose oration, according to Tacitus, before Claudius and the Roman Senate, was so bold and fearless, and withal so generous in its thought toward his conquerors, that he received a free pardon. Tradition says that he died in A.D. 54. St. Paul entered Rome in the year A.D. 61. He found Linus and Claudia there, the latter having married a wealthy Roman merchant, Pudens by name. There can be little doubt that this meeting took place, and that these children of the brave British chieftain are those mentioned by name in the Second Epistle to Timothy. St. Paul could not have met these people and not learn from them something of their distant Island home. He must have learned also, to his great joy and satisfaction, of the establishment of the Church of Jesus Christ in Great Britain.

There is much ground for the belief that St. Paul did actually come to England during the period between his first and second trials, a period much longer than most of our writers have supposed. But whether he came or did not come, the point here to remember is that the Church from the East, which St. Paul brought to Rome from Jerusalem, made conjunction with the Church from the West which Caradoc and his family brought from Great Britain, that Church having been firmly established in these Islands from the selfsame East by Joseph of Arimathea.

Henceforth the centre of Christianity is resident in Israel-Britain, and the Church of Jesus Christ finds her permanent home in these Islands of the West, "the appointed place" of 2 Samuel vii, 10, to go forth from these shores to evangelize the whole world.

Now it may be contended that it is not the nation as such which does this, but the Church of Jesus Christ. The Church sends forth her servants into all the world without any reference to the nation, and without any support from the nation. As far as the preaching of the Gospel is concerned that is perfectly true. But I think it can be shown without much difficulty that the British nation, as a nation, in its corporeal entity, has contributed in large measure to the establishment of the righteousness, justice and peace of Jesus Christ in the earth. The Church could not have done that because she lacked that necessary governmental authority for its successful accomplishment. Moreover, she lacked corporeal unity essential to such a task. Righteousness, justice and peace are dependent upon law and order for their establishment, such law and order which the State alone can enforce. There can be allowed no two opinions concerning them. They must be enforced not by the free-will of the individual operative as he pleases; but through the action of the State as a whole. The Church in Britain, it is true, and not the nation as such, has been responsible for the spreading of the Evangel of the Grace of God among the nations; but where did she get her members from if not from the nation into whom she entered at such an early period? She has recruited herself from among all the nations whither she has gone, but in the first instance it was Britain who brought her in among those nations; and is it not a very significant fact that, though many native Churches have arisen to support themselves, yet they have continued unto this day to lean upon the strong arm of the elder brother who first brought to them the glad news, and the British Church has never been able entirely to withdraw?

There are two things put to the credit of the British race by the unanimous testimony of all nations, viz., Civic Colonization and Religious Colonization. And it is remarkable how often both have been manifest in the one personality. The Pilgrim Fathers, who colonized America, went out for civic and religious colonization, the one waiting upon the other. In David Livingstone you have precisely the same thing. You can scarcely name a missionary, or a society of missionaries, that have not embodied both in their life-work. Let not the Church of Britain boast that, as a separate entity, she, and she alone in the nation, is promoting the salvation of the nations in Christ Jesus our Lord without the help of the Nation from which she has recruited her membership through the centuries, and without which she could never have had an existence, much less a world-wide career.

Is it not a blessed thing to remember that the God Who faileth not, neither is He discouraged, Who created His Israel seed for the purposes of the Christ, created also that seed for the purposes of the Church of the Christ, in order that through that seed, as through no other, salvation should come to all the world? Can you imagine a message calculated to drive home upon every man, woman and child in the Anglo-Saxon race as this message, making them realize that of all the peoples of the earth none ought to be more Christian than they?

Is not the Church within the nation to intensify the righteousness, justice and peace which the nation should exhibit? And is not the exhibition of such righteousness, justice and peace by the nation just as much part and parcel of the Evangel as the definite and direct proclamation of the Gospel of personal salvation? Is this not that Gospel of the Kingdom which our Lord made the first burden of His earthly ministry? We have, then, by the subsequent history and development of the nation on the one hand, and the Church within the nation on the other, an appreciation of the immense importance of the Troas Vision which thus opened the door into the West.

THE THREE GARDENS.

By the Rev. H. B. Simeon, M.A.

[These papers on the Three Gardens formed the subject of three addresses in a Church in Sussex during a quiet afternoon in Passion Week, 1929, conducted by the writer.]

The Third Garden.—No. III.

In the two former papers, our thoughts have been centred on the first two Gardens, Eden and Gethsemane. But "in the place where He was crucified there was a Garden" (John xix, 41). In the new tomb in that Garden, which the rich merchant, Joseph of Arimathea, in accordance with the custom of rich Jews at that time, had prepared for himself, was laid by loving hands the torn and tortured body of Him Who had Himself for man borne in full the curse of the law. If the grave under the sentence pronounced on man in the first Garden was to close on all Humanity, it was He Who took Humanity upon Himself; Who was, in the poetical words of the Psalmist, "to break in pieces the gates of brass, and cut in sunder the bars of iron," and in the third Garden to defeat and destroy for ever the powers of everlasting death. In the words of St. Paul (2 Tim. i, 10), "He brought Life and Immortality to light."

In all three Gardens the Angel of God appears. In the first Garden in the wrath of God (though, as we have seen, there was mercy veiled in that wrath) to keep the way of the Tree of Life; in the second Garden, in the Love of God, to minister to the Second Adam in that awful conflict; and in the third Garden, in the Power of God, to make the great announcement, "He is not here, He is risen." If the first Garden was the Garden of pleasure, sin and death, and the second Garden was the Garden of sorrow, conflict and agony, the third Garden was the Garden of resurrection, immortality and hope. How closely indeed are these three Gardens connected together!

And, once more, in the third Garden, the Scripture was to be fulfilled, for Isaiah (liii, 9) had written, "He" (it is more accurately "They") "made His grave with the wicked, and with the rich in His death," foretelling the two malefactors who were crucified with Him, and the tomb of the wealthy merchant, Joseph of Arimathea.

There in that rich man's tomb, just as the Sabbath the day of Rest was about to begin, was laid to rest the Sacred Body, "waiting in a holy stillness wrapped in sleep."

Though the second Garden is in point of time separated from the first Garden by a long period of some thousands of years, no such time had to elapse between the second Garden and the third. A few hours only, in Jewish parlance three days (for each part of a day was reckoned as a whole day), had to pass before the overwhelming grief, sorrow and despair of the disciples were to be turned into joy. The tomb could not hold Him, the grave-clothes could not bind Him, and the Human Body of the Holy One, Who had destroyed the curse, could not see corruption. The angels rolled away the heavy circular stone like a millstone that covered the low doorway into the tomb, not to let the Lord out, but to let the holy women and the disciples in; the Body, alive again, now spiritualized, and subject no longer to material law, had passed out, before the stone was rolled away. It may be well here to point out the wonderful meaning of the words of the Evangelist St. John, which Dr. Latham, late Master of Trinity Hall, Cambridge, has explained in his book, "The Risen Master." St. John in his Gospel describes what he and St. Peter saw when they ran to the tomb, after they had been told by the holy women that the Body of the Lord was not there. St. John, the younger man, outran the older man, and came first to the tomb. In the English rendering, "he stooping down and looking in saw the linen clothes lying, yet went he not in." He had to stoop down to peer in, for the entrance would not have been more than about four feet high. The Greek word rendered "lying" means really "extended at full length," and special stress is laid on this by the verb in the Greek preceding the noun, which is the Greek method of emphasizing. The true translation is, "He saw extended at full length the linen cloths" (not clothes). Then St. Peter arrived, and that more impetuous disciple, always a man of impulsive action, was not content to look in. He went into the tomb itself. He also saw "extended at full length the linen cloths." But he saw, what St. John probably could not have seen in the semi-darkness of the interior, something else, which is rendered in English, "and the napkin which was about His head not lying with the linen clothes, but wrapped together in a place by itself." The word rendered "wrapped together" means in the Greek "twisted or twirled round in the form of a turban." It is a very rare word, and is believed to occur only in three other places in all Greek literature. In oriental countries it was and still is the custom to clothe a body for burial from the feet to the breast entirely, but to leave the neck and face bare, a cloth being twisted turban-wise round the top of the head. In this way the Body of the Lord would have been clothed. The "place by itself" means that the twisted napkin lay on the slab whereon the head had lain, separated from the body cloths by the space from the top of the forehead to the breast. Hence it was "not lying with the linen clothes, but wrapped together in a place by itself." The value of the Evangelist's accuracy is now seen. St. John's words tell us as plainly as can be that the Body had evanesced or exhaled from its wrappings, leaving them undisturbed. The great weight of 100 lbs. of dry powdered spices remained in the linen cloths, flattening them down. No mention is made of any heap of it on the floor. St. John then also entered the tomb, and says in terse but most expressive words, "He saw and believed." The truth flashed instantly into his mind. No outrage had been committed. No body had been carried off. The risen Lord had not stepped off the ledge of stone whereon the body had lain. Those words of the Beloved Master, spoken to the three disciples, Peter, James and John, during the descent from the Mount of Transfiguration, must have flashed into his brain with all their wonderful significance: "The third day He shall rise again."

The human Body of the Lord had passed into the second stage. It had been spiritualized. In that second stage it was to be for forty days, until at the Ascension it passed into the third and final stage and was glorified. It was the identical Body that had hung upon the Cross, as it bore the scars of the nails and of the spear wounds. But it was no longer subject to the laws which control our human bodies. It could appear and vanish at will. It could be recognized or not as He willed it. St. Mary Magdalene failed to recognize Him outside the tomb, although He spoke to her, until He willed it by one word "Mary!" For two hours on that afternoon He walked and talked with two disciples for some two hours. They must have known Him and His voice well, but He would not let them recognize Him until He had prepared their minds. Then He made Himself known to them in the great Sacrament, which He had instituted on the evening before the Crucifixion, when He made Himself known to them in the "breaking" (not "broken") of the bread, and then vanished out of their sight, only to reappear to them shortly afterwards in the Upper Room, whither they had at once gone to tell their news to the other disciples.

In this glimpse of the second stage of the human Body there is much ground for thought. But engrossing as it is we must not be led away from our main subject, only reminding the reader that St. John tells us that we shall be like Him, and therefore we believe that those who live in the Faith and Fear of God will, as they pass out of their material bodies, be clothed with their spiritual bodies, and at the end of all things, when the Church shall be ready to be the pure and spotless Body of Christ, be glorified with Him.

To return from this digression, we must not forget that "in the place where He was crucified there was a Garden," and that this place was Calvary. The words are very significant. It is human nature to turn from subjects of pain to subjects of joy. But if the Garden of Calvary contains the message of Joy, and Life, and Immortality, as indeed it does, it must not be forgotten that it is closely linked up with the other two Gardens, and with their dark sides. For the third Garden contained the tomb, wherein had been laid the Body of Him Who had been tortured by wicked men beyond imagination, and then done to death upon the Cross. It therefore represents to us the place wherein we should lay our own crucified Self-Will. The Garden of Eden was essentially a Garden of Self-Will, for it was there that man began to misuse his Divine, but dangerous, gift of Free-Will. The dangerous side of it was not at first apparent, but the Tempter knew it, and took advantage of his knowledge. That is meant by the term "deceiver" applied to him. Satan is said to "deceive the whole world." And that deception goes on continuously. Doubtless many fail to recognize the danger, for we find ourselves able to do much that is denied to the rest of the Creation. We can decide upon what course to pursue on any given occasion. Indeed, the power entrusted to us is so great that we can actually spoil the intentions of God, which is precisely what man has done, and goes on doing. "The whole Creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together." Can it possibly be that it was God's intention that this should be, when we are expressly told that "God saw the work that He had made, and, behold, it was very good"? Even if we turn from the suffering lower creation to the higher creation ourselves, we cannot but feel the same as we see the awful suffering which has to be borne by many who are the children of God, made for higher things, and so loved by Him that Christ suffered and died for them. Can we possibly believe that it is God's will that they should suffer? Do we realize that the petition in the model Prayer, "May Thy will be done in earth as it is in Heaven," cannot be a real prayer on our lips if we continue to misuse our Divine powers, and by our own self-will and wilfulness cause others to suffer, which cannot possibly be the will of God? It is easy to forget how much evil we may do when we fail to learn to crucify our Self-Will.

The second Garden, Gethsemane, stands out in startling contrast with the Garden of Eden. If that was the Garden of Self-Will, the other was emphatically the opposite. The principle underlying the whole agony was "Not My will but Thine be done." And the depth of that principle can never be gauged. Even the Saviour, the Human Lord, shrank from it. "Father, if it be possible remove this cup from Me." Even to Him it seemed too impossible to drink. Yet He drained it to the dregs.

The more we ponder over the second Garden, the more do we realize the great difficulty it is to say, "Not My will but Thine be done"; but it was the Father's will that the bitter cup should be drained to the uttermost drop, and in the third Garden we see the result. Those wicked men did indeed crucify His Body, but He crucified His own will, and in so doing gave up His life. The tomb in the Garden of Calvary was the tomb of the Saviour's Free-Will. And if we are to be like Him, it must be the tomb of our Self-Will.

Repeatedly St. Paul harps on the crucifixion of Self. Indeed, he said that he "is crucified in Christ," and "I die daily." By that he meant that he was to the utmost of his power crucifying daily his own Self-Will, lest, as he said, while preaching to others he himself might be a castaway. The call of Jesus comes to us even as it did to His beloved disciples, for we are also His Beloved, and He offers us the same privilege as He offered to them. So He says to us, "Tarry ye here and watch and pray against the time that ye yourselves shall be put to the test," which is the true meaning of the words in the Gospel. We know now more than the disciples knew then, for they knew nothing of the tomb in the third Garden. It was not until after the Resurrection and the Coming of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost that they and the whole Church after them could recognize in the tomb in the third Garden the grave of Self-Will. In course of time under the Power of the Holy Spirit they came to realize the whole Drama of Man's Redemption. It is for us now in our day also. To many, alas, who pass by it is nothing. It is everything to us if we grasp what it all means; and these papers have been written in the hope that under God we may be able to grasp more and more clearly how the whole Bible is the Book of the Words of God's great Drama of the Redemption of Israel, and of all those who come in by adoption to become members of the chosen race.

We cannot fully understand it all yet, nor shall we ever in this world in which we must live by Faith. But we may ever bear in mind that as the first Garden leads on to the second Garden, so do both lead on to the third Garden, the Garden of Hope, a sure and certain Hope of a glorious Resurrection with our crucified and risen Lord, when Faith shall be lost in sight, and Hope shall be fulfilled in completion, and all will be merged in the ocean of His Love.

EXPOSITION AND EXCAVATION.—I.

THERE lie before me two most interesting books. These books were going through the Press at the same time. Their authors were evidently writing the books simultaneously. Both books were published in A.D. 1930. I refer to "The Documents of Daniel," by the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard, and to "Ur of the Chaldees," by Professor Leonard C. Woolley.

Each of these books deal with scenes and activities in Babylonia.

The Rev. W. Pascoe Goard writes from the standpoint of a Bible expositor. The Book of Daniel is his theme. He sees, depicted in the Bible, profound changes being brought about in the national institutions of Babylonia, including Law and its adminstration; and religion, its ritual and equipment, commencing in the Nebuchadnezzar reign. As these things lie at the heart of national life, Mr. Goard indicates that profound changes took place in the civilization of the Euphrates Valley in the Babylon and Medo-Persian periods.

THE NEBUCHADNEZZAR PERIOD.

Mr. Goard has written as follows concerning the Divine self-manifestation of God granted to Nebuchadnezzar at the time of the establishment of the Continental Empires. That is to say, at the time of the establishment of that series of Empires which should run its course in the history of Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece and Rome. This self-manifestation of God, granted to Nebuchadnezzar, Mr. Goard points out, was second only to that self-manifestation which was granted to Israel at the time of its organization into God's Kingdom of Priests at Sinai. To the self-manifestation of God, granted to Nebuchadnezzar, the King reacted, and his view of God and His Kingdom was changed radically. The following are extracts from Mr. Pascoe Goard's writing on the subject:—

Page 26.—"So we have an historic demonstration in a heathen court of (a) Divine revelation; (b) Divine interference in world affairs; and (c) Divine answer to prayer." The establishment of these things is of greater importance to the world than the setting up of Empires could ever be.

This matter brought a crisis to the experience of the king of Babylon and he reacted to that crisis, and to the conviction arising therefrom as follows:—

> "Then the king Nebuchadnezzar fell upon his face, and worshipped Daniel, and commanded that they should offer an oblation and sweet odours unto him.
> "The king answered unto Daniel, and said, Of a truth it is, that your God is a God of gods, and a Lord of kings, and a revealer of secrets, seeing thou couldest reveal this secret."

Again was the King brought to realize the presence and power of the living God active in the affairs of Babylon. It was "The God of Daniel" hitherto unknown to the Babylonian system from the beginning, as far as present knowledge goes. To this further manifestation Nebuchadnezzar showed a further reaction. Mr. Goard quotes as follows on page 58:—

"Then Nebuchadnezzar spake, and said, "Blessed be the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, who hath sent his angel, and delivered his servants that trusted in him, and have changed the king's word, and yielded their bodies, that they might not serve nor worship any god, except their own God.

"Therefore I make a decree, That every people, nation, and language, which speak anything amiss against the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, shall be cut in pieces, and their houses shall be made a dunghill; because there is no other God that can deliver after this sort.

"Then the king promoted Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, in the province of Babylon. (Daniel iii, 28, 29, 30.)

"There have been many days of intense dramatic happenings in connection with the history of the Babylonian succession of Empires. But never was there a more tremendous day than this in the jurisprudence of the Empire, when before the court of the Empire the case of disobedience to the king's command was tried. The decision finally arrived at, brought about by Divine interference, was that not only were the three condemned men delivered, but were accorded promotion in the home province of Babylon itself.

"What great movements were there inaugurated. For, although the God of Israel was honoured, the gods of Babylon were not put away; and it seems that the financial system remained to this day as the financial system of the Babylonian succession of Empires."

Again, Mr. Goard presents the vision of the dynastic tree of the House of Nebuchadnezzar, and the conclusion to which the king was brought by bitter experience of the prophetic nature of the vision. He quotes the chapter, which contains the following declaration by Nebuchadnezzar :—

DANIEL IV, VERSES 34-37 :—

34.—"And at the end of the days I Nebuchadnezzar lifted up mine eyes unto heaven, and mine understanding returned unto me, and I blessed the most High, and I praised and honoured him that liveth for ever, whose dominion is an everlasting dominion, and his kingdom is from generation to generation.

35.—"And all the inhabitants of the earth are reputed as nothing: and he doeth according to his will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth: and none can stay his hand, or say unto him, What doest thou?

36.—"At the same time my reason returned unto me; and for the glory of my kingdom, mine honour and brightness returned unto me; and my counsellors and my lords sought unto me; and I was established in my kingdom, and excellent majesty was added unto me.

37.—"Now I Nebuchadnezzar praise and extol and honour the King of heaven, all whose works are truth, and his ways judgment: and those that walk in pride he is able to abase."

In the tabulation of things dealt with, Mr. Goard says on page 73, "Chapter 2 shows the setting-up of the kingdom of Babylon, and of the Kingdom of the God of Heaven. Chapter 3 shows the religio-financial structure based, we believe, on the gold standard."

All of these things imply that at the inception of the Empire of Babylon there was a profound change made in the religious thought and in the administration of the Kingdom.

PROFESSOR WOOLLEY.

Professor Woolley has been for some time past excavating the cities and temples of the Euphrates Valley, which show the period of Nebuchadnezzar, as well as the periods which preceded and followed his reign. At the same time that Mr. Goard was writing his "Documents of Daniel," Mr. Woolley wrote regarding the reign of Nebuchadnezzar and his relationship to the temples of the day in his book, "Ur of the Chaldees," as follows :—

"UR OF THE CHALDEES." Commencing page 194.

"The temple was indefinitely old. Too little was left of the earliest building to show its form, but from the days of Ur-Nammu at least up to and after those of Kuri-Galzu, that is for more than a thousand years, successive builders had respected and repeated its ground-plan. The small five-chambered sanctuary was a thing apart; it lay at the back of the building and was reached only by a passage which ran round three of its sides; on the other side of the passage there were store-rooms and priests' chambers occupying the whole of the rest of the temple area and completely masking the sanctuary—it was hidden away and made as difficult of access as might be. I have said that the sanctuary rooms were very small and would hold but few people at a time; taking this in conjunction with its inaccessibility, we are driven to conclude that E-Nun-Makh was designed for a secret ritual such as might be fitting in what was really a harem temple, the special quarters of the god as married: only the priests would enter here and in privacy wait upon the twin deities.

"This ancient tradition was completely set at naught by Nebuchadnezzar when he restored the temple. The rooms in front of the sanctuary, store-rooms and rooms which, as tablets found in them showed, were for the priestesses specially dedicated as concubines of the god who would naturally be at home in this harem building, were swept away; the whole front of the sanctuary was opened up; where the passage had been there was a raised pavement in the centre of which an altar rose, a statue-base was erected in the antechamber of the sanctuary facing its door, and where had been a maze of chambers the wide lower court afforded accommodation for a crowd of spectators. In the old temple everything had been secret; now a numerous public could watch the priest making his offerings on the open-air altar and behind him could see through the dim sanctuary's open door the image of the god.

"There is no doubt that the remodelling of the building implies such a change of ritual, but how can this itself be explained? The answer is given by the Old Testament story of the Three Children in the Book of Daniel. However miraculous a tale may be, its setting must have a certain verisimilitude, must contain some element of truth. Now, the gist of the story is this, that Nebuchadnezzar made a great image and set it up in a public place and ordered that at a given signal everybody was to fall down and worship it; the Jews, who seem to have lived hitherto undisturbed in the land of their captivity, were by this order given the choice between idolatry and disobedience involving death. What was there new in the king's act? Not the setting up of a statue, because each king in turn had done the same; the novelty was the command for general worship by the public: for a ritual performed by priests the king is substituting a form of congregational worship which all his subjects are obliged to attend. So striking is the correspondence between the written story and the facts of the ruins and so completely do they explain each other that we must needs accept the background of the legend as historical. The alterations in E-Nun-Makh were designed deliberately with a view to the religious reform attributed to its builder by the Old Testament."

So much for the Nebuchadnezzar period. The change of worship indicated in Daniel is shown in the temples of Babylonia.

Professor Woolley has shown that secret worship gave place to open-air worship. This is more than a change in the form of the worship of the ancient gods. It is exactly in line with the declaration of Nebuchadnezzar extolling the King of Heaven. It would be thus that the King of Heaven should be worshipped, not in a hidden shrine, but in the open-air. ADDRESS BY THE REV. A. E. INGHAM, B.A., SON OF THE LATE BISHOP INGHAM, AT KENSINGTON TOWN HALL.

MR. CHAIRMAN AND BRETHREN, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: A week or two since Mr. Garrison and Mr. Goard were polite and kind enough to invite me up to-day for a Clerical and Ministerial Conference at Headquarters, and from the time I accepted that invitation I have been looking forward to it. I arrived early this morning, full of excitement, full of looking forward to this gathering to-day. We had a very instructive time, but rather to my dismay, towards the end, I found myself in the position of an invited speaker to this gathering to-night, and believe me or believe me not, it has caused me a little searching of heart, not because I am not convinced in my heart and soul that this platform is right, and this Cause right, but because to stand upon a platform of this standing, and an audience no doubt better equipped than myself with knowledge, is no light thing.

I have been thinking this afternoon how to put my case to you to-night, and I think I must ask your indulgence and give you a little personal history. I was brought up in a God-fearing and God-honouring home. I was also brought up to believe that the Holy Bible was God's most Holy Word, and I have coursing through my veins what used to be called Colonial blood. Therefore, I was brought up from my earliest years to believe in two things: to believe in Almighty God (which includes His Word) and to believe in the British Empire. I could not help it, and I cannot help it still. But as one grew up, one could not fail to hear on all sides definite criticisms of our Bible, and more years ago than I care to think of at Oxford, the Higher Criticism crept into our Colleges and into our Lecture Rooms, and began that disastrous campaign of undermining people's faith. You can understand that, as an undergraduate in the presence of great scholars with very high degrees, it was not becoming to offer criticism of their remarks. I used to say, and I venture to say still, when people tell me that what I stand for is neither scholarly nor correct, that although I cannot argue with them as far as Hebrew and Sanscrit are concerned, and though I may not know every detail from Genesis to Revelation, I do know that sooner or later, in God's good time, I shall know. And from my undergraduate days to this, I have clung to that belief, that God would make plain my ignorance, and so far that trust and belief have been amply justified.

Later, I found myself wearing the Clerical uniform which I have the honour to wear to-day. I said to myself: Here am I, solemnly entrusted by Almighty God and our Lord Jesus Christ to teach these people committed to my care. I am to teach them the Bible. I was handed a Bible by the Bishop at my ordination, and I was instructed to read it, to study it, and to preach it. Now I was faced with this. Here were large portions of the Bible which one obviously believed, or one would never have ventured to seek and accept Holy Orders, but there were also large portions of the Bible that I had not the remotest idea what they were about. The Book of Ezekiel, parts of the Book of the Prophet Isaiah, the very passage read as a lesson for this gathering from the Prophet Malachi, were closed to me. I said to myself: I am entrusted and I am expected by my people to know this thing, so I must try and find out. In those days I did not know there was such a thing as the B.-I.-W.F. In some ways I am glad I did not, because I had to rely on guidance of God's Holy Spirit to interpret His Word, and He did interpret that Word to a very large extent. Then there came a time when one was inevitably face to face with a brick wall. I could not get on. I adopted a plan that I had adopted much earlier in life. I did not know, but some day I should know. Then one day I received one of those propaganda copies of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER, and I remember with what real joy I read it, and with what care I verified the texts of Scripture and the points those texts explained. I found they tallied, and again I was rewarded by the guidance of God.

Now, ladies and gentlemen, there are other more practised speakers to follow me to-night, speakers who can give you greater information than I can, but I want to make this request. I want you to take your Bibles into your hands and into your hearts in a different way. Take it as the one Book that can guide us aright, in these days of uncertainty and when there are countless voices claiming your attention and saying, "This is the way; walk ye therein"; voices which are continually bringing disillusionment and disappointment. That being so, it is worth while to look for the key, or the keys, because there are keys, and those who are responsible for running this great Federation are in a position to put into your hands, your hearts and your brains the keys which will unlock much that is difficult or impossible for you at the moment to understand. I admit I must have been extraordinarily dull not to have found it out sooner, but you will find that it is perfectly clear that there are at any rate three principal keys to this Book, over and above the covenants of Almighty God to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. There is the key of the House of Israel; there is the key of the House of Judah, and there is the key of the House of David, and if you will examine these keys you will see immediately the part of each right through history.

Men and women who will study and learn from this Holy Book and seek the guidance of the Holy Spirit are wanted now, and the world wants them. In the business world they have a saying, Come in on the ground floor. I very respectfully ask you to come in on the ground floor of this world propaganda for our Lord's sake, Who died and rose again for us; and for our country's sake, because we have a mission in the world to fulfil, and woe be to us if we fail.

THE TRIBE OF LEVI.

BY MR. ARTHUR EXLEY, J.P.

THE founder of the tribe was the second son of Jacob and Leah, and his full brothers were Reuben, Simeon, Judah, Issachar and Zebulun. With Simeon he was concerned in the slaughter of the Hivites as narrated in the 34th chapter of Genesis, an act which greatly troubled his father. The effect of this is seen when Jacob called his sons together to bless them, and to foreshadow what was to befall the descendants of each in the latter days under the Christian dispensation; for it must be remembered that Israel blessed the sons of Joseph, the heirs to the birthright, under the sign of the cross.

Digitized by Google

Of Simeon and Levi he said, "Cursed be their anger, for it was fierce, and their wrath, for it was cruel. I will divide them in Jacob and scatter them in Israel."

Levi appears to have been the originator of the plot against the Hivites, for when the land was divided among the tribes on the entry into Palestine, Simeon had territory assigned to his descendants in the south, bordered by Judah on the east, and by Philistia on the west, but Levi was scattered throughout Israel.

MOSES AND AARON.

The great law-giver, Moses, and the first high priest, Aaron, were of this tribe, and so its members became priests, law-givers, and doctors in Israel. To the Tribe of Levi were entrusted the law, the records, and the ministrations of the Tabernacle, and in after years, when Israel had peace within its borders, and Solomon built the Temple of the Lord, the ritual and ministrations of that great centre of the worship of Jehovah were under the control of the Tribe of Levi.

For the maintenance of the tribe, 48 cities, with their suburbs scattered throughout the length and breadth of the land, were set apart, but it was the law in Israel that the priesthood had no territorial possessions, for their powers were spiritual, not temporal. They became mediators between God and Israel, and daily made atonement for the sins of the people.

IDOLATROUS WORSHIP.

From the eighteenth chapter of the Book of Judges we gather that the Levites were not all faithful to the true worship of Jehovah, for we read there of a Levite who threw in his lot with those members of the Tribe of Dan that seized Laish, and that a graven image was set up in that city, renamed Dan, and that the Levite, who became its priest, and his descendants, served the graven image as priests unto the tribe of Dan until the day of the captivity of the land. When the Houses of Judah and Ephraim-Israel were finally separated at the successful rebellion against the House of David, under Jeroboam, the leader became king of ten-tribed Israel.

Jeroboam turned his people to idolatry by setting up two golden calves as gods in Samaria; for he feared that if his adherents went up to Jerusalem for the religious ceremonies of the Temple, they might again give allegiance to the House of David. Many of the Levites resented Jeroboam's action in taking members of other tribes for the office of priest, and, leaving the ten-tribed kingdom, went to Jerusalem, strengthening the Tribe of Judah for three years. But Rehoboam, king of Judah, soon turned from the pure worship of Jehovah, and the maintenance of the tribe of Levi became a burden, with the result that members of the tribe returned to the cities in Israel and established themselves in the northern kingdom. Here they took part in the idolatrous worship of the golden calves, setting up images and groves in every high hill and under every green tree until the Lord removed Israel out of His sight, and the inhabitants of the ten-tribed kingdom were carried out of their own land into the land of Assyria (2 Kings xvii).

PERIOD OF CAPTIVITY.

Those members of the priestly tribe that remained faithful adherents of the House of David shared the fate of the kingdom of Judah and were carried captive to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar B.C. 584. After the seventy years of captivity they returned to Jerusalem with the tribes of Judah and Benjamin and were serving in the Temple worship during our Lord's ministry on earth. In all Jewish communities at the present day the Cohen, or priests, of the Tribe of Levi take precedence in the synagogues, for they still have tribal privileges, although, since the destruction of the Temple, there has been no sacrificial offering for sin in Judah.

To return to those scattered throughout the northern kingdom, their tribal identity became lost during the vicissitudes of the wandering race. Were it not so, the sentence of Jehovah against Israel, proclaimed by the prophets, that they were to lose their identity and be called by another name would have failed in its effect.

It was foretold of them that they were to be divorced from Jehovah and be "not my people," although they were to be protected and guided and to grow into an immense multitude and, finally redeemed, become "Sons of the Living God."

PROPHECY OF RESTORATION.

Before the Israelites disappeared among the heathen in their long-drawn-out journey to the appointed place, traces of the Tribe of Levi were left as inscriptions on tombstones in the Crimea. The prophet Jeremiah, in foretelling the restoration of Israel under the new covenant, states: "Thus saith the Lord, After those days I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts, and will be their God, and they shall be my people." Again the word of the Lord came unto Jeremiah saying, "If ye can break my covenant of the day and my covenant of the night, and that there should not be day and night in their season, then may also my covenant be broken with David, my servant, that he should not have a son to reign upon his throne, and with the Levites, the priests, my ministers."

The holders of British-Israel Truth know where the House of David reigns over a nation and company of nations, and believe that where Israel is, there some of Levi must be, although, till the nation loses the blindness which has darkened their judgment, the identity will not be apparent.

DRUIDISM.

From the study of the history of the Brythons, the first of the Covenant People to reach the appointed place by way of Spain and the Mediterranean Sea, we find a marked similarity between the religion of Druidism and that of the Hebrews. Druidism taught there was one supreme God, the giver of all good gifts. The Arch-Druid's vestments appear to have been fashioned on those of the high priests of Israel. The Arch-Druid was clad in a white robe, with breastplate and tiara of gold. The sacred symbol was three rays or rods of light, which symbol has survived to the present day in the broad arrow, stamped as a landmark by the Ordnance Survey.

The Druids, like Israel of old, worshipped under groves of oak—the sacred tree. They sacrificed daily unto the Supreme Deity. The accusation brought against the Druids that they offered human sacrifices is not proven, for no human remains have been found at any place where sacrifices are known to have been offered, only the remains of animals have been traced. The accusation is based upon the dictum of a single enemy historian, who put it forth as an excuse for the wholesale massacre of the Druids by the Roman soldiery at Anglesey.

CHRISTIANITY IN BRITAIN.

The Druidical laws have a close resemblance to the Levitical, and their duties as healers, law-givers and priests are identical with those of the Tribe of Levi. Like Israel, the Britons, taught by the Druids, were expecting the advent of an All Healer, and so were ready to receive the teachings of Christian missionaries who arrived in Britain shortly after our Lord's Ascension. Britain became the first of the nations to accept Christianity, and the Druidical priesthood evolved into the bishop or overseers of the religion of Christ. The succession of priests for Christian worship has been constant in the hallowed precincts of Glastonbury since Apostolic times to the present day; and it is remarkable how the professions of law, medicine and religious teaching are hereditary in certain families.

In conclusion, here is the Druid prayer which has been preserved in the annals of the race since the Arch-Druid offered sacrifices at Stonehenge:

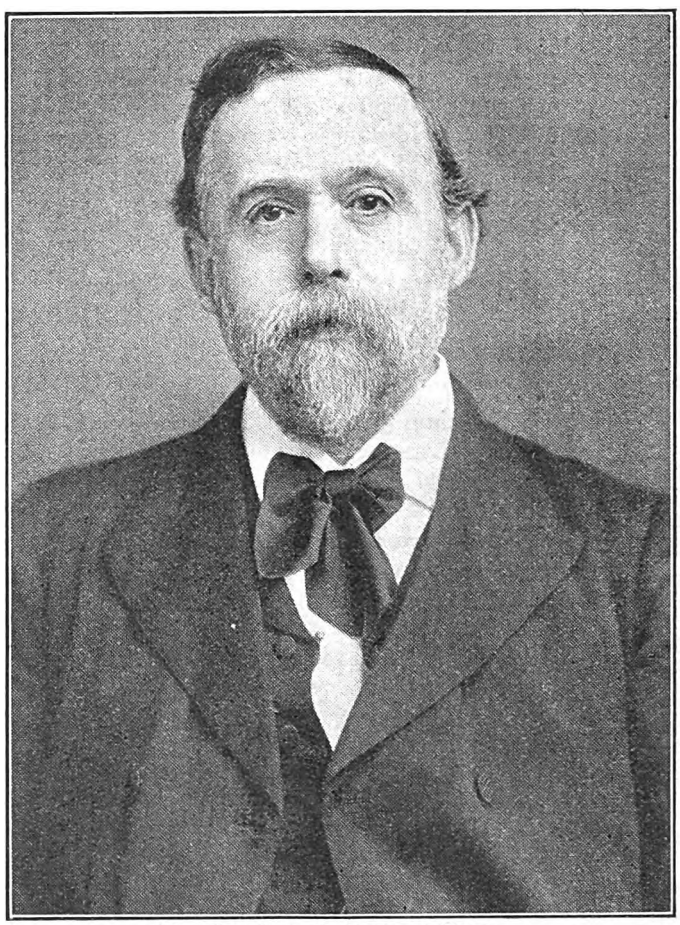
"Grant, O God, Thy Protection;
And in Protection, Strength;
And in Strength, Understanding;
And in Understanding, Knowledge;
And in Knowledge, Justice;
And in Justice, Love;
And in Love, the Love of all Existences;
And in the Love of all Existences, the Love of God and of all Goodness."

VICTORY IN DEFEAT.

By E. M. FOSTER.

THE orders given to all Christians are the words of the Divine Leader—"Watch and Pray." It is Christ's intention that we should be always expecting His Return. It is this state of perpetual alertness that is meant to keep us to the high standard of conduct that He has set for us. We are to look up all the time. For it is only by keeping our eyes and thoughts on our Lord that we are able to tread the steep and narrow way. And this Second Advent that we are told to wait and long for may come at any time. No angel or man knows when. Only the Father. In spite of the signs and warnings preceding it, thousands will sleep until it is too late. Our Lord frequently makes use of parallel instances to drive the point home. Do you remember how He compares His Second Coming to the Flood? It is going to take the ungodly just as unprepared. Who can forget those vivid words—"and the Flood came and carried them away"?

We can make a wonderful collection of these parallel instances. The Bible is full of them. Perhaps the following is one of the most striking.



We can compare the three-and-a-half years' Ministry to the forty-two months in Revelation. The first culminates in Calvary—the seeming defeat—which in three days is swallowed up in the greatest victory—the Resurrection. The forty-two months lead to Armageddon. And again we have the battle between Good and Evil. Evil seems as if it must conquer. But once more defeat is avoided by a miraculous victory. It is the might of God, not the power of man. An Armageddon is the prelude to the glories of the Millennial Age and utter rout of Satan.

What a fountain of strength we have to sustain us, and how we should rejoice daily in the knowledge that the last defeat is victory. As the clouds gather and the mutterings of the storm grow louder many will lose heart. Then it will be our privilege to encourage them; repeating the message to look up and lift up our heads, for the last tribulation, be it Calvary or Armageddon, is the victory of Jehovah.

Mr. Henry Proctor, F.R.S.L., was the speaker at Headquarters on February 13th. The usual meeting will be held on Thursday evening next, February 27th. All are cordially invited.

Eight meetings were held in the Town Hall, Eastbourne, last week. The Rev. Pascoe Goard gave eight addresses; Mr. John Leech gave two, and Mr. John J. Morey gave one. Mr. Herbert Garrison gave four lectures with Lantern Pictures, and one other lecture. The audiences increased and the last was by far the largest. Many persons attended every meeting; several came from long distances by train and motor. Two ministers were won for British-Israel, and all showed keen appreciation. We are greatly indebted to Mrs. Montague-Kite and Miss Terry for their zealous and devoted labours, and to the Misses Simpson and Mrs. Kellond-Knight for generous help. We are thankful to know that the Eastbourne friends consider they have had a great uplift, and reaped substantial benefit in accession to their numbers.

The Rev. T. Sparshott Johnson, M.A., has visited Bristol, Nailsea and Bath, and met with much encouragement. The halls were comfortably filled and keen appreciation was evinced; and members were enrolled. At Bath the chair was taken by Dr. Gale, a Canadian ex-Missionary from Korea. In his opening remarks he said he was glad to preside because the B.-I.-W.F. believed in the Bible, and because Mr. Johnson was like himself—an experienced Missionary. He strongly commended Dr. Llewellyn Thomas's book, "God and My Birthright," which he had just read.

Miss Hamilton Hunter gave two instructive and helpful addresses for the Southampton Branch on February 5th, at the afternoon meeting speaking on our responsibilities as citizens of Israel. Dr. Clayre presided. In the evening the subject was "Russia v. Israel-Britain," a very stirring and enlightening address to all. Many strangers were present, and it was one of the largest meetings held by the Branch. The chair was taken by Councillor S. H. Foy, who was keenly interested.

Mr. J. J. Morey lectured for the Southport Branch on February 6th, giving two of his interesting and instructive addresses, "The Restitution of All Things" and "The Breakdown of Existing Systems and Why." Mr. Morey dealt very ably with both subjects to a good audience. The Branch is looking forward to a return visit from him in the near future.

The Rev. Kenneth Dodds visited this Branch on February 10th and gave two fine addresses, "God's Changeless Purpose" and "National Healing." Good audiences were greatly interested, and questions were answered.

The monthly Bible study class for women will meet at Headquarters on Saturday, March 1st, at 3 o'clock, under the direction of Miss Alexander and Mrs. Bell. A cordial invitation to attend these classes is given.

The Rev. Pascoe Goard is giving an address for the Blackheath Branch on February 28th, at 8 o'clock, in the Wesleyan Church Hall, opposite Blackheath Station, about twenty minutes' run from Charing Cross. Readers in the district are asked to co-operate in making the meeting known, that many strangers may attend and hear the glorious message.

Our Commissioner, the Rev. Sparshott Johnson, M.A., is preaching and giving addresses in Dublin and Belfast next week. On Sunday he is at St. Andrew's Church at 11.30, and St. Mary's Church at 7. On Monday in Kingstown, at the Men's Christian Institute at 3 and 8. Belfast West on Tuesday, and at the H.C.M.S. Hall, Molesworth Street, Dublin, on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

W. H. L. writes from California:—"It is impossible for me to say how much I enjoy THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER each week; the paper seems to get more wonderful as time goes on, and to meet one's need for guidance as to world conditions as no other paper can do. The B.-I. teachers are great. I remember my father saying years ago that God would raise up men as He needed them; truly He is doing that now. My prayers are for you all the time. May God bless you with increased strength and wisdom for the magnitude of the work to which you have given yourselves in the greatest service yet given to man."

A business man in the City writes:—"I receive great help from your journal. The Bible has now to me a different meaning entirely; in fact it is to me what it never was before. The trouble with most of us who are so absorbed in business is that we have little time available for study and examination of what is recorded in the Bible. If only we could reach greater numbers with this B.-I. message and teaching we should see a wonderful change in our country. Your good work is bound to prosper. For my part, I would like to be of any service I can to you."

The Rev. Kenneth Dodds gave an interesting lecture for our Liverpool Branch on February 13th, on "God's Changeless Purpose," and he showed from Scripture that God can never break His covenant with His people Israel.

A certain retired clergyman, a bitter opponent of B.-I. teaching, seems to devote his time and his money to the vain attempt to destroy it. He is particularly active in sending his pamphlets and writing long letters to those whose names and addresses he can obtain as known British-Israelites in any part of the world, and especially clergymen and ministers. A number of these have sent us his letters and his pamphlets, thinking we may not have seen them, and some have sent us copies of their replies. The case of this gentleman is really most pathetic. He does not appear to realize in the least that his donees have sufficient perspicacity to detect his fallacies. One of the latest to whom he has given attention is the Rev. G. H. Hewett, B.A., Hon. C.F., who writes us as follows:—"It can hardly be maintained that the opponents of British-Israel have successfully accounted for the specific promises made to the sons of Joseph: nor that they have accounted for the amazing fulfilment of Prophecy in the present position of the British Empire. Nor must it be overlooked that the philological, ethnological, physiological and historical difficulties in the way of the acceptance of the British-Israel teaching have been sufficiently met to satisfy many scholarly and gifted writers.

"No school of thought has led to so much fresh study of the Old Testament Scriptures, vindicated the historical characters of the Old Testament, and so clearly revealed the prophetic outline in history of the House of Israel, and that of the House of Judah.

"Nor must it be supposed that the adherents of British-Israel are one whit less true to the Gospel of Grace of God. Their insistence on the Covenant character of God's promises, whether to the chosen race, or to the believer in Christ, are not by any means self-contradictory, but rather complementary in the counsels of God. Nor do they detract the one from the other.

"If God's chosen vessel for the distribution of the Gospel throughout the world is alleged in reference to God's choice of a nation, it is equally true of the foundations on which the Church was built, the Apostles and Prophets, of the Chief Corner Stone—our Lord Himself of the House of David, and of the nation supremely commissioned by God to be in its resurrection life in Christ, as 'life from the dead' to the rest of the world."

Mr. Howard Rand writes from Massachusetts: "I tuned in at 6 a.m. on January 21st and heard the King's speech before the Naval Conference. It is an interesting thing to realize that from the Throne of David the voice of the King was heard over the world. Am I right in saying that no other King but of the line of David has done this before? I could hear men coughing in the audience as loud and clear as though I were present at the gathering. Surely from the Throne of David has gone out word to order and establish peace."

THE STATESMANSHIP OF JESUS

By the Rev. W. PASCOE GOARD, F.R.G.S.

This book is an exposition of the Epistle to the Hebrews. The Epistle bears in the signature place the name "GOD."

The double fact that the human authorship is withheld, and in the signature place the name "GOD" appears, indicates the Epistle to be a letter directly inspired from God to us.

The subject of the Epistle is God the Son; His Office and Ministry, as King of Righteousness; King of Peace; King of Salem.

The book is brilliantly written. It brings out new truths and restates well-known truths, so as to make all appear strikingly new.

The place of Israel in the New Covenant is made to appear with great clearness.

THE NAMES OF GOD

OR THE MAJESTIC ORDER OF DIVINE SELF-REVELATION.

By the Rev. W. PASCOE GOARD, F.R.G.S.

The Rev. Prebendary WEBB-PEPLOE wrote:—

"May I express my sincere gratitude to the Rev. Wm. Pascoe Goard for his book on The Names of God, which I have found of the highest value. It may enable others to grasp the progressive nature of God Himself, His Names, and His Personality.

It is a remarkable discovery, and deserves the closest attention. I have published a book on The Titles of Jehovah. I wish I had known half of what Mr. Goard has produced in his book.

I ask him to believe that he has helped a humble servant of Jehovah in his study of the Word."

IS THE BIBLE CREDIBLE?

Do you realize that if you accept the Modernist theory of Evolution you deny the Divine inspiration of your Bible?

Modernism and German-made Higher Criticism combine to destroy faith in the truth and the sacredness of our beliefs. God either created man in His own image or He did not, and if not, we are as the beasts that perish.

Dr. McCrossan's book comes as a refreshing draught to a thirsty man, to those who truly believe that God's Word is in the Bible—that God's Word is the Bible. His array of facts and his forceful style chastise the Higher Critic and the Modernist. He takes his stand on God's Word and is unassailable.

Everyone who holds the Christian faith should read

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

APPROACHES TO THE FACTS OF BRITISH-ISRAEL TRUTH.—IV.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD, F.R.G.S.

THE phase of the question we are considering in the last issue and this is:—"What is the nation Israel to God?" The answer to that question is given in the statement of the Lord Himself: "Ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests and an holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the Children of Israel."—Exodus xix, 6.

In pursuance of this phase of the subject we have seen that the Lord established Himself in Israel as King at Sinai for ever, referring but not reproducing the text also in the nineteenth chapter of Exodus. This took place in the history of the Israel nation about the year 1491 B.C., or immediately after the Exodus from Egypt.

We then saw that the Lord manifested Himself in a special manner as resident in Israel at the time of the dedication of the Temple of Solomon. This was about 1004 B.C.

Again we saw the same manifestation of the Lord in residence in Israel, as set forth in the sixth chapter of Isaiah. The occasion was the judgment day for Judah and Jerusalem —758 B.C.

Then we saw the departure of the Glory of the Lord from Jerusalem, as set forth in the tenth chapter of Ezekiel—594 B.C.

Now we turn to Israel in Captivity, and we find that the Glory of the Lord was present with them, as set forth in the first chapter of Ezekiel—595 B.C.

Ussher Chronology has been used, which is sufficiently accurate to illustrate the point that what is here recorded is a matter of actual historic happening at certain times and places, and forms a part of the history of Israel. We see, further, that these happenings stretch over a period of approximately a thousand years and show that the Lord is a constant indweller of the nation Israel.

We now turn to the Captivity of Judah in Babylon, and there we find that although the Glory of the Lord is never made manifest there, the presence of the Divine Personality with the Captivity of Judah is made manifest in the experiences of Daniel, the prophet of God.

It is to be noted that when the Lord makes Himself manifest to Nebuchadnezzar and other potentates of Babylon and Medo-Persia, it is not as Jehovah, in which manifestation He is "separated" to His Kingdom administration in Israel, but as the MOST HIGH, and as "the God of Heaven."

To Daniel the prophet there is a more intimate revelation of the Divine Person. This is shown in the tenth chapter of Daniel, when He is approached by "One like unto the similitude of the sons of men."

The whole of the description is set forth in the following verses, which the reader will do well to compare with the description of the same August Personality in the first chapter of Ezekiel, and again in the first chapter of Revelation.

"And in the four and twentieth day of the first month, as I was by the side of the great river, which is Hiddekel;

Then I lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and behold a certain man clothed in linen, whose loins were girded with fine gold of Uphaz:

His body also was like the beryl, and his face as the appearance of lightning, and his eyes as lamps of fire, and his arms and his feet like in colour to polished brass, and the voice of his words like the voice of a multitude.

And I Daniel alone saw the vision: for the men that were with me saw not the vision; but a great quaking fell upon them, so that they fled to hide themselves.

Therefore I was left alone, and saw this great vision, and there remained no strength in me: for my comeliness was turned in me into corruption, and I retained no strength.

Yet heard I the voice of his words: and when I heard the voice of his words, then was I in a deep sleep on my face, and my face toward the ground.

Digitized by Google

And, behold, an hand touched me, which set me upon my knees and upon the palms of my hands.

And he said unto me, O Daniel, a man greatly beloved, understand the words that I speak unto thee, and stand upright: for unto thee am I now sent. And when he had spoken this word unto me, I stood trembling."—Daniel x, 4–11.

The Ussher date for this appearance of the Lord is 534 B.C.

We are aware that many will shrink away from the consideration of these visions as non-historic, because such visions deal with a conjunction between the human and the Divine which is unusual. Not all of those who do so will shrink from the thought of a spiritual conjunction between the human and the Divine. Many of them have realized such a conjunction in the experience of the New Birth, and all that follows. But what they shrink from is that a conjunction between God and man should take place through the medium of eye and ear; and in connection with such a material and temporal thing as national and international history. Yet should it not be clear to our minds that as God cares for the individual, and answers the prayer of the individual by rendering assistance and deliverance in connection with personal and family affairs, embracing "mind, body and estate," much more will He care for the whole number of His people grouped together as His Kingdom of Priests and holy nation. If God takes care for the individual of other nationalities, and makes him partaker of individual salvation, encouraging him also to pray to God for help and guidance in connection with "mind, body and estate," manifesting Himself as the God of pardoning love to the penitent's inner consciousness, He will much more take care for the whole flock of the nations, and undertake to turn them to the paths of righteousness, justice and truth.

In connection with the national life of Israel, the Lord has manifested Himself in all the ages of Israel history. This we are endeavouring to allow the Holy Scriptures to show. To this the Bible declares that God, in His Jehovah manifestation, is "HOLY, HOLY, HOLY"—that is to say, "set apart, set apart, set apart," as though this was the one task of the Deity. The Administration of His Israel Kingdom is His one self-appointed task in the Jehovah manifestation of Himself.

So we read this great chapter as an historic thing, and glory in the fact that the Lord has not deserted His people in their captivity, and in their banishment from the land of their Fathers.

Now let us take the Bible in hand and turn to the last solemn and infinitely penetrating message which closes the Canon of the Old Testament Scripture. Let us read with contrition the message of the Lord as to:—(1) The priests, Malachi ii, 1–10; (2) Judah, Israel and Jerusalem, Mal. ii, 11–16; (3) To Levi, Judah and Jerusalem, Mal. ii, 17, and iii, 1–15; (4) To they that feared the Lord, Mal. iii, 16–18, and iv, 1; (5) Unto you that fear My Name, Mal. iv, 2, 3; (6) Remember the law, Mal. iv, 4; (7) The promise of Elijah, Mal. iv, 5, 6.

Thus the Old Testament Canon ends with the most intimate call from the ever-present Jehovah to His people, Judah and Jerusalem, Levi and Israel.

THE PRESENCE OF GOD IN NEW TESTAMENT DAYS.

First we are brought to the knowledge of "the Angel of the Lord"—who in the Old Testament declares Himself to be, "I AM, JEHOVAH"—at the Birth of our Lord Jesus Christ. The fact is set forth in the beautiful record of St. Luke. Here is the statement of historic fact:—

"And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.

And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid.

And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.

And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.

And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host, praising God, and saying,

Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us.

And they came with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger.

And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child.

And all they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds."—St. Luke ii, 8–18.

Let us rejoice in the beauty of form in which these things are expressed. But do not let us be thereby deflected from reading this great statement as a hard matter-of-fact event in the history of the Israel people.

We are also of the opinion that the "star" seen by the wise men who came from the East to find and worship the Lord was the Glory of the Lord shining forth to guide them to the incarnate Redeemer of Israel, and Saviour of the world. See the last Christmas number of this Journal.

THE VOICE AT THE BAPTISM.

Once again we are brought into the consciousness of the presence of the Lord at the baptism of Jesus. The fact is stated in St. Matthew iii, 13–17:—

"Then cometh Jesus from Galilee to Jordan unto John, to be baptized of him.

But John forbad him, saying, I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me?

And Jesus answering said unto him, Suffer it to be so now: for thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness. Then he suffered him.

And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water: and, lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him:

And lo a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased."—St. Matthew iii, 13–17.

This great event, i.e., the hearing of the Voice of God the Father, is also recorded in St. Mark i, 9–11, and St. Luke iii, 21, 22. Thus in the mouth of three witnesses is the fact of the Voice of the Lord being heard established. So the ever-present, ever-watching Jehovah keeps step with the great events which mark the progress of His supreme purpose to work out the redemption of Israel and the salvation of the world through Jesus Christ our Lord. The agency for carrying forward that purpose being still His Kingdom-nation, Israel.

THE VOICE AT THE TRANSFIGURATION.

Again we have the manifestation of the Presence, visually and audibly revealed on the "Holy Mount" of Transfiguration. This historic event is set forth in the following passages:

Digitized by Google

"And after six days Jesus taketh Peter, James, and John his brother, and bringeth them up into an high mountain apart,

And was transfigured before them: and his face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light.

And, behold, there appeared unto them Moses and Elias talking with him.

Then answered Peter, and said unto Jesus, Lord, it is good for us to be here: if thou wilt, let us make here three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias.

While he yet spake, behold, a bright cloud overshadowed them: and behold a voice out of the cloud, which said, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him.

And when the disciples heard it, they fell on their face, and were sore afraid.

And Jesus came and touched them, and said, Arise, and be not afraid.

And when they had lifted up their eyes, they saw no man, save Jesus only.—St. Matthew xvii, 1–8.

This audible manifestation of the Presence of God the Father is also recorded in St. Mark ix, 1–8, and St. Luke ix, 27–35.

Here again was the overshadowing cloud, and the Voice which identified the Lord as the Son of God, and which identified the Father as He Who spoke the words of identification.

THE VOICE ON CONTACT WITH ISRAEL IN EUROPE.

Yet again was the overshadowing Presence heard. This occasion is the arrival of certain Greeks "who came to Philip . . . and desired him saying, Sir, we would see Jesus. Philip cometh and telleth Andrew: and again Andrew and Philip tell Jesus."

That the event of the coming of the Greeks, enquiring to see Jesus, was looked upon as an event of remarkable importance is shown by the evident excitement of Philip and Andrew. It is still more seen by the manifest emotion which swept the Saviour into a very passion of anticipation of suffering and glory. It is supremely manifest by the fact that the Father added His Voice to the wonder of the occasion. Let us note the tremendous climax thus reached in the progress of the Divine purpose.

"And Jesus answered them, saying, The hour is come, that the Son of man should be glorified.

Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone: but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit.

He that loveth his life shall lose it; and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal.

If any man serve me, let him follow me; and where I am, there shall also my servant be: if any man serve me, him will my Father honour.

Now is my soul troubled; and what shall I say? Father, save me from this hour: but for this cause came I unto this hour.

Father, glorify thy name. Then came there a voice from heaven, saying, I have both glorified it, and will glorify it again.

The people therefore, that stood by, and heard it, said that it thundered: others said, An angel spake to him.

Jesus answered and said, This voice came not because of me, but for your sakes.

Now is the judgment of this world: now shall the prince of this world be cast out.

And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me."—St. John xii, 23-32.

What was this occasion which thus produced such an emotion in our Lord, and which called forth the Voice of the Father?

It was the first contact of Israel in Europe with the Lord, and with this phase of the Redemptive plan.

What our Lord Jesus Christ and what the Father foresaw as that which should proceed out of this contact of Israel in Europe with our Lord Jesus Christ let all the history of the Israel Church in Britain and the West bear witness. For the Greeks of that day were a cultured branch of Israel stock. They were the Danois of ancient history.

We shall follow this study in the next article.

WHAT IS OUR POSITION WITH RESPECT TO THE JEW?

BY THE REV. COMMANDER L. G. A. ROBERTS, R.N.

WE are assured from the Word of God that there are many Jews to-day "who call themselves Jews and are not." (Rev. ii, 9 and iii, 9.) As it was in that phase of the Christian Church called Smyrna, so in this phase in which we are now living, the Philadelphian.

As they on the former occasion persecuted the Church of God, so also by inference will they and are they persecuting it to-day.

What then is our duty towards these? Evidently to do our very utmost to preach the Gospel of the Kingdom to them and their dupes. For the devil is making use of these to wrest the Kingdom from the "people of the Saints of the Most High." He turns Scripture into his own purpose, and the temptation to his dupes is evidently what he presented to our Blessed Lord. "All these kingdoms and the glory of them will I give Thee if Thou wilt fall down and worship me."

How many an error has been built upon a little truth!!! There is no doubt that the Kingdom was promised to Israel. It was taken from the Jew "and given to a NATION bringing forth the fruits thereof." (Matt. xxi, 43.)

But the so-called Churches have all erred in their teaching, viz., that the Jew of to-day is ALL ISRAEL, or, what comes out of this, that Israel is the Church. Whereas the Truth as taught by our Blessed Lord, "Upon this Rock I will build My congregation," this "Congregation" or "Assembly" in the Old Testament was Israel. If there is any meaning in these words, they mean nothing less than My congregation, Israel shall be known as the Nation built upon the One Foundation.

The true Israelite is the nation which draws to itself all who believe in Me. (Isaiah lv as a result of liii and liv.) So also Judah must walk (with or) TO the House of Israel which, being known by their fruits, are called "The Children of the Living God." (Hos. i.) "Then shall the children of Judah and the children of Israel be gathered together and appoint themselves ONE HEAD, and they shall come up out of the land, for great shall be the day of Jezreel." The composition of this Nation of Israel is the same as appointed at the very first (Exod. xii, 48, 49; Isaiah lvi, 1-8; 1 Cor. i, 2) "those called Saints (Israel) and all in every place who call upon the name of Jesus Christ our Lord, both theirs and ours." Hence the phraseology of Dan. vii, 27: "the people of the Saints of the Most High." If Israel is the Kingdom of "the Saints of the Most High who take the Kingdom" (Dan. vii, 18), why this distinction; surely Judah is also a portion of this PEOPLE which have not been emphasized hitherto. Look at the order in Ezek. xxxvii, 19, and in v. 19. I will take the stick of Joseph and will put them with him, even the stick of Judah. Again at Armageddon. "The Lord will save the tents of Judah first," also Zech. x, 3, Judah is "His goodly horse in the battle" (v. 6); Judah is mentioned first. Zech. viii, 23, Ten men out of all nations will take hold of the skirt of him who is a Jew.

Unfortunately, after the advocacy of our Truth had been well laid, a devil's error crept in that it was impossible to convert a Jew. This terrible lie to the efficacy of our Lord's finished work, "Father forgive them," has occasionally influenced many. But thank God most of us have combated this fearful conception all along.

What if many "so-called Jews," who are at present of the "synagogue of Satan," are amongst the Jews who are real descendants of those of Judah's remnant? Are we not told in Rom. xi, 11, 12-15? Are we not to diligently work for the salvation of Jews because there happen to be, shall we say, half of them what our Lord called them, "of your father the devil"? Is there not here all the more reason to pull them out of the burning? seeing they are being led captive at his will.

What is the hope set before us? First, even these shall come and fall at our feet and worship Him Whom they will ultimately confess is with us. (Rev. iii, 9.) Having won some of these to confess, "Blessed is He that cometh in the Name of the Lord" (Matt. xxiii, 39), we shall be helping to graft in again the broken-off branches into their own olive tree, which when the world sees it will be to them as "Life from the dead." (Rom. xi, 15.)

What then is our position in respect to the Jew? Certainly now that God has given us the Holy Land to reclaim and to reorganize, seeing Judah's time, seven times of exclusion on account of disobedience, is being fully accomplished, if we have the Love of God in our hearts, it is to bring in the wanderer. We must not "hide ourselves from our own flesh." (Isa. lviii, 7; Matt. xxv, 40.) The number of God's elect must include Judah. He is the first mentioned in Rev. vii and elsewhere, the last to fall away, and in the end "the goodly horse," and the first saved. Had there been any merit in our own salvation; if it is not of Grace? we have somewhat to glory, but this is exactly what Zech. xii, 7, says we are not to do. Therefore, for the Glory of God, the completion of His elect, the Coming of our King, let us by love seek to do all we can, and go out and fetch our brother in. (Luke xv, 28.) Only so will the world learn that Israel has the Love of God in their hearts and we are One in Christ.

DEFINITION.

Most of the tribe of Judah no doubt are with Israel. It was only "a very small remnant" (Isaiah i, 9; iii, 9) who crucified the Lord of Glory. Their eyes had been blinded so that they could not see. If all Israel had been there, they would probably have been partakers in the curse, "His blood be upon us and on our children." But God in His mercy ordered it otherwise and Israel has been dealt with as a dear son, a pleasant child, and given the privilege of being drawn to God through faith. This teaches us that it is of faith and not of the law that we are saved from this great transgression. It is certainly Israel's part now to do our utmost to save the Jew; the time is short, or he will fall into the hands of the Anti-christ. Let the Love of Christ constrain us.

ABDASHERAH, AZIRU AND THE ABIRI. III.

BY PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc.

IN Tablet 45 B, Ribadda, chief or king of Gebal, writes the Egyptian king, and says: "They have fought against me for five years . . . all the fortresses they have ruined."

Here he refers to the work of the Abiri, or of those at times called Amorites who were Abiri, or of a part of the Hittites who were under the sway of Dusratta, a friend of the Abiri.

Tablet 52 B, P. 55, doubtless from Gebal, shows the writer's feelings against his enemies, as he addresses the Egyptian king. He says "that the sons of the dog Abdasherah destroy the cities, and the corn, and attack the governors, and demand fifty talents."

The Bible account tells of Joshua and his Abiri, Aberim, Averim, or children of Israel, capturing and destroying cities on a large scale, and these Tel-el-Amarna Tablets tell a similar tale, and of a similar time, and in the same lands.

57 B, P. 58, shows that the king of Egypt did not help to hold and garrison one of his chief cities on the east of the Mediterranean Sea. The writer says: "By my soul's life; if the king cared at heart for the life of his servant, and of his chief city, he would have sent a garrison, and they would have guarded thy city and thy servant."

Other Tablets make clear the fact that the Egyptian king was actually withdrawing the garrisons at the time Abdasherah and his sons were capturing cities and overrunning the land.

Tablet 77 B, P. 62, gives important information in writing to the king of Egypt; for it says, "If also you grant us no Egyptian soldiers, no city in the plains will be zealous for thee. But the chain of the Egyptian soldiers has quitted all the lands; they have disappeared to the king."

Here we find that instead of Egypt sending soldiers to protect the fortified cities in Canaan and on the coast, the soldiers were "disappearing to the king," which must mean that the soldiers were being withdrawn officially.

Surely this was of great help to Abdasherah, his sons and the Abiri in their invasion of the land.

Tablet 89 B, P. 64, is specially important showing the Abiri active among the Mediterranean coast cities, in and around Gebal, where Ribadda ruled so long and loyally for the Egyptian king.

It shows the vigour and activity of the old commander-in-chief of God's forces, viz., Abdasherah, as he prosecutes his work and carries out his commission most successfully.

Tablet 89 B says: "Abdasherah has fought strongly and has seized cities belonging to Gebal; that news has reached the city (he means Gebal) as to what has befallen the city Ammia from the men of blood" (the Abiri) . . . "Abdasherah is marching on Gebal." This is the city where the writer of the Tablet is ruler.

Tablet 79 B, P. 64, speaks of a great fight "with the men of blood who made an end of men, women and soldiers of his poor country." His men were beaten in the fight. He mentions the king of the Hittites who is making war on a large scale; and at once shows who this "Hittite king" is, by referring to him as "The king of the Mitani." This is Dusratta, father-in-law of Amenophis or Amen-Hetep IV. And Dusratta is co-operating with "the men of blood," viz., the "dog Abdasherah" and his sons. The writer concludes his letter by calling Abdasherah a dog.

In Tablet 72 B, P. 65, Ribadda, king of Gebal, writing to Pharaoh, asks: "Who is Abdasherah? A slave, a dog, and shall the king's land be smitten by him?"

Very remarkable language concerning the commander-in-chief of forces so numerous, powerful and successful that the writer Ribadda is calling for Bitati, or Egyptian soldiers, to save him and his city Gebal from destruction at the hands of this "slave dog."

Tablet 60 B, P. 68, introduces another son of Abdasherah in addition to Aziru, viz., Benmabenat; and says, that "Benmabenat, son of Abdasherah, strives for the city Gatza. They have subdued the city Ardata, the city Yahlia, the city Ambi, the city Sigata; all the cities are theirs." "Now they have taken the city Ullaza."

A wonderful revelation of success of a remarkable people at a very remarkable time!

We should say here that the Thothmes and Amenophis, Pharaohs during the wars of the Abiri, were in conflict with the Nubian kings, tribes and peoples. This would in itself be a good and sufficient reason for calling the Egyptian garrisons from the cities of Canaan, Phœnicia and Philistia.

Hence it would, from this viewpoint, be natural for the petty city kings, or chiefs, to write letters calling for help from the Pharaoh of the day.

From various sources we conclude that the war of conquest by the Abiri extended through nearly a quarter of a century; and the Nubian wars continued over a much longer time. This gives us a groundwork for an explanation of the many Tablets which were written from Western Asia to the kings of Egypt, calling for help that never came.

In 41 B, P. 71, Ribadda, formerly of Gebal, addresses the "Sun King" of Egypt, and says, "Now Aziru, the son of Abdasherah, is marching with his brethren from the city Gebal." This seems to indicate that Gebal had been captured by the Abiri, and that Ribadda had escaped to some other city. Farther on, this Tablet says, "There is no money to buy me horses; all is finished, we have been spoiled."

In Tablet 45 B, P. 73, we read a striking statement: "The sons of Abdasherah, the slave dog, have pretended that the cities of the governments of the king (of Egypt) are given to them."

What can this mean? Who gave these cities to the Abiri? Who were the Abiri? Have we information from any source that tells us anyone gave or promised the cities of Canaan and the sea-coast lands to any people? Scripture tells us that God gave to Israel all that land.

From the days of Abraham to the time of Moses and Joshua, that land was promised and given to the Hebrew-Israelites. Hence, as these people crossed the Jordan, under Joshua, they would assert in many ways, under all circumstances, that they came to possess the land THAT WAS GIVEN TO THEM. Hence, there was no pretence in the matter.

Now, if the Abiri were the Hebrews conquering the Land of Promise, they would naturally make the claim of gift, and the cities attacked by them would readily assume that the Abiri claim of gift was a sham, a lie and a pretence. In this they antedated the modern, materialistic, evolution theologic critics.

EXPOSITION AND EXCAVATION.—II.

IN last week's issue it was my privilege to call attention to two books which are upon my desk. The first is Rev. Pascoe Goard's "DOCUMENTS OF DANIEL"; the second is Professor Woolley's "UR OF THE CHALDEES."

I called attention to the remarkable agreement between Rev. Pascoe Goard's exposition and Professor Woolley's excavation, each showing that in the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, there took place a remarkable change in the religious thought and practice of the king and people.

Now we shall take the same books and compare the statements made by Mr. Goard in further exposition of the Documents of Daniel, and the statements made by Professor Woolley in pursuit of that excavation work he is so well accomplishing at Ur of the Chaldees. The quotations we are to present now deal with the Persian period.

In his book, "THE DOCUMENTS OF DANIEL," commencing at page 148, Mr. Goard quotes and says:

"Chapter xi, 1: 'Also I in the first year of Darius the Mede, even I, stood to confirm and to strengthen him.'

Strangely sounding words are these. What do they mean?

Michael is the Archangel who leads the angelic forces of Heaven against the angelic forces of Satan.

The August Personage here mentioned later took upon Himself the concrete body of the seed of Abraham, carried out the Redemption of Israel and became the Saviour of the world.

Gabriel seems to attend and do the bidding of this Glorious One, and always as far as we have knowledge of his movements, in 'preaching the things which are contained in the Scripture of truth.'

'This my Lord' Who appears to Daniel assumes that knowledge of His mission is possessed by Daniel and by those who read Daniel's message. In order to get this clearly before our minds we enquire: What was transpiring in the Persian Empire at this time? How should the king of Persia, evidently distant from Daniel's residence in Babylon, withstand this August Personage for one and twenty days? Was there war in the Empire at this time? There is no slightest reason to think so. Daniel was resident in Babylon. The king of Persia was not. The Glorious One came from one to the other.

It is necessary, as our friends the modern critics should know, to have the political organization of the Empire before us, and the geography which accords with it, before we can make an intelligent criticism of the literature of Daniel. It is manifest, as we read, that the statement here assumes that the king of Persia was not present in Babylon, and that he was not the monarch directly served by Daniel. This is a beautiful evidence, amounting to proof that the king of Babylon was a different person from the king of Persia at this period of history. The king of Persia, in Daniel's day, like the king of Prussia in pre-war days, was king in his own particular kingdom, and the kingdom of Persia did not include Babylon, nor Media, etc. The Empire of Persia included both.

While the king of Prussia ruled as king in Prussia, he was also Emperor of Germany, including Prussia and all the other German kingdoms. There were many other crowned heads in the German Empire, each ruling over a Sovereign State; as, for instance, the king of Saxony. So it seems to have been in the Persian Empire.

Digitized by Google

So, while the king of Persia was the supreme king of all the 'lands' of the Empire, including the kingdom of Darius, Darius was a subordinate king of Babylon. Daniel was in the service of the king of Babylon.

What was the nature of the conflict in which this unnamed Glorious One, aided by Michael, was engaged in Persia?

This question may be solved by asking first in what was it that He stood to strengthen Darius the king of Babylon in his first year? In what was Darius engaged which would interest this Divine Person and enlist His services?

Darius, as we have seen, had made proclamation that the God of Daniel should be worshipped throughout his part of the Persian Empire. He ruled as sub-king in all probability over Babylon, Chaldea, Media, Syria, perhaps Palestine also. He did not rule Persia, and other Eastern parts of the Empire, and his rule was that of a sub-king, under Cyrus the Emperor, or 'king of lands.' The religious decree set forth by Darius was widespreading, but did not include all the Empire.

Up to the time of Cyrus and Darius there was a litter of idolatry and idolatrous apparatus all over the Middle East. The very last scene in the Babylonian phase of the Empire shows this to be the case. The monuments and tablets of Assyria make this abundantly clear. Now in the first year of Darius we find a new doctrine, and a new worship, being set up by a royal decree, which could not be changed, once made. This would call for the intense opposition of such priesthood as had forced the hand of the king to cast Daniel to the lions. It was the dawn of better things for the East, the beginning of the death of idol worship, and the establishment of true worship of God. All the powers of adverse men and spirits were against the movement. The Lord stood to confirm and strengthen Darius in this great religious reform.

Now the Lord was 'fighting with' the king of Persia. Doubtless Cyrus knew all about the decree of Darius establishing the worship of the God of Daniel in his own part of the Empire. Appeals would be made to the Emperor by the priesthood, against the acting of Darius. Pressure also would be brought to bear upon Cyrus to induce him to take the same course and to establish Divine worship throughout the Empire. The prophecies concerning him by Isaiah, etc., would be shown to him. He also made royal proclamation throughout the Empire as follows:

> 'Now in the first year of Cyrus king of Persia, that the word of the Lord by the mouth of Jeremiah might be fulfilled, the Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus king of Persia, that he made a proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and put it also in writing, saying,
> Thus saith Cyrus king of Persia, The Lord God of heaven hath given me all the kingdoms of the earth; and he hath charged me to build him an house at Jerusalem, which is in Judah.
> Who is there among you of all his people? his God be with him, and let him go up to Jerusalem, which is in Judah, and build the house of the Lord God of Israel (he is the God), which is in Jerusalem.' (Ezra i, 1-3.)

For twenty-one days matters seem to have been in the balance. Probably it was a crisis brought on through ancient orders of idolatrous priests. Then came Michael the Archangel to help the Glorious One, and apparently the spiritual victory was won. Having fulfilled his mission to Daniel, He says: 'Now I will return to fight with the prince of Persia.' 'And there is none that holdeth me in these things but Michael your prince.' Thus would the Glorious One strengthen Cyrus in his course towards establishing the worship and knowledge of the true God throughout the Persian Empire.

The period of which we are reading these wonderful things of angelic activity was rich in prophecy, and in missionary endeavour.

The time of Abraham had laid the foundation of the knowledge of God for the post-Abrahamic times to build upon.

The time of Moses had carried the revelation of God farther, and had reduced the same to systematic writing, as in the Pentateuch.

The time of David had enriched the same stream of revelation with choice music and wonderful prophecy expressed in sacred song.

Now we come to the time of Isaiah; then of Jeremiah, Ezekiel and Daniel, with the minor prophets.

Jeremiah has his centre in Jerusalem; Ezekiel was in Media with the Israel captivity; Daniel was in Babylon with the Jewish captivity. All of these prophets had poured out their richest and their best to Judah, to Israel, to Babylon, and to Medo-Persia.

Responding to these, Cyrus the Emperor had made proclamation establishing the worship of the true God in the Empire. Darius as king of Babylon had issued his proclamation establishing the worship in Babylon and the rest of his kingdom within the Empire. Thus was the worship of God established by the laws of the Medes and Persians, which alter not.

In Greece the philosophers were giving forth their messages, abstractions from the Mosaic teachings, which have rung ceaselessly down the ages to this day, denominated 'Grecian Philosophy.'

In Britain Jeremiah had taken up the story, if well-founded tradition, partly oral and partly written, is to be accepted, and of which the probabilities are in favour.

In Britain, by an accession of migrants from the homeland of Palestine, Druid worship of the Trinity in Unity had been purified and strengthened.

In Persia Zoroaster established his system. In India Buddha gave forth the light which had come to him. His following established the worship of the messenger, Buddha, rather than of the God he preached. But what a step forward from the polytheism, which in this period began to die.

So this age, in which the Lord and Michael were active, saw a stupendous religious reform, which prepared the ground for the Gospel of Christ, and all of this great stream flowed from the Mosaic fountain.

What a glimpse this message gives to us of the 'Spiritualities and powers,' as the Apostle Paul calls them, engaged in the struggle between truth and error; that which 'is noted in the Scripture of Truth,' against that which arises from the minds and hearts of men and of devils. Now the truth is interwoven with the most matter-of-fact things of history as part and parcel of the same, and what a directing and controlling influence in regard thereto it is, is made manifest in the wonderful literature.

What happened as a result of this conflict of spiritualities?

Cyrus was so influenced and instructed that he liberated Judah and Israel.

That is one interesting fact of history. But there is another. Up to this time the Euphratean Valley and all the East had been rife with polytheism. Now there took root this new form of knowledge and of religion. Judaism took on a new form from this time and from these circumstances.

Out of the movement of that time, which included the return of a colony of the Jews to Palestine, and the setting-up of the nation of the Jews (see Ezra i), came the redacting of the sacred Scriptures, with all that followed therefrom.

The examination of the springing up and crystallization of great religious organizations and systems of faith at this time throws light upon this passage of Daniel and makes it luminous."

When Mr. Goard was writing the above, Professor Woolley was writing of the same period as follows:

"It is very likely that the blow fell in the Persian period. After Cyrus no king's name appears on any brick to show that the government was at all interested in the buildings of the city; on the contrary, all the evidence proves that neglect speedily brought them to ruin. In the rubbish heaps which covered the sanctuary of Nannar's great temple we found crooked walls ill built of old bricks collected from ruins of all dates; they were mere huts without symmetry or plan, but under the foundations we discovered a clay jar containing tablets which proved that this was the last degenerate phase of the temple. Here a handful of priests lived on and eked out their existence on the tithes which a faithful few still brought to the dishonoured House of Nannar.

On the other side of the Ziggurat we unearthed, lying above the chambers built by Nabonidus for the service of Nin-Gal's temple, kilns set up by some Persian potter; his ovens ran up almost against the side of the huge tower, and the 'wasters,' the pots damaged in the firing, and the little clay tripods which kept apart the plates piled in the kiln and prevented the glaze sticking them one to another, were mixed in the rubbish with the blue-glazed bricks fallen from the walls of the little shrine which was the Ziggurat's crowning glory. Here and there in the remains of Persian houses dated tablets have been found which carry on the history of the inhabited town to about the middle of the fifth century before Christ, and thereafter there is silence.

About this time the Persian kings definitely adopted the Zoroastrian creed, whose pure monotheism rejected the images and temples of idolatry, and very likely iconoclasm hastened at Ur the slower process of natural decay; but that process of itself was sure. The populous city became a heap, its very name was forgotten; in the holes of the Ziggurat owls made their nests and jackals found a hiding-place, and the Bedouin pitched their camps under the shelter of the 'Mound of Pitch,' little guessing that here had lived Abraham, the founder of the Jewish nation and of their own race. Ibrahim Khalil Abdurrahman, the Friend of God."

It is very comforting to know that the writings of the Book, and the researches carried on by the British Museum and the Philadelphia Museum, under the charge of Mr. Woolley, unite in telling the same wonderful story. The testimony of the Archæologist is all the more encouraging because of the "accidental" nature of the evidence which has been lighted upon.

Who would have thought of looking for the confirmation of the Daniel record in the structure of heathen temples?

So the Bible is emerging more and more into the full light of day, and as it does so, we find that it is right even in the "accidentals" of the narratives, and historical references, contained in its writings. How much more is it right in the great story of God dealing with the world through Israel: dealing with the nations of the earth according to His great plan, made known unto Moses, and to the Children of Israel.

How wonderfully, on the other hand, modern history is verifying all the predictions of prophecy, thus by a double check showing the absolutely dependable nature of the literature of the Bible.

ISRAEL IN THE NEW TESTAMENT.—I.

By F. S. Dobbs.

It is often asserted that British-Israelites when trying to substantiate their claims only cite Old Testament evidence. We turn to the Old Testament, it is true, for what it alone can supply, but nevertheless the essential principles of our belief are those of the New Testament, for they rest on the assumption that the oft-promised Redeemer has come and has accomplished the great work foretold of Him, that the ceremonial law has been abolished, having fulfilled the object for which it was instituted, namely, the bringing of the nation of Israel to Christ. (Gal. iii, 24.) It is the prevailing belief among theologians that the Old Testament is a Jewish book and the New Testament a Gentile one, being as they say addressed to Gentiles and written especially for them; but surely it is only logical to admit that the New Covenant (R.V. rendering) was entered into with the nation that had already received a former one. Six hundred years before Christ, Jeremiah announced that God intended to make this New Covenant with the House of Israel. (Jer. xxxi, 33.) The author of the Epistle to the Hebrews thus understood it, for in the eighth and ninth chapters of the Epistle he contrasts the two Covenants and quotes this very verse to show that the Old Covenant made with the fathers—including the promise of an earthly inheritance which still holds good—was "ready to vanish away" and be replaced by the New Covenant with the House of Israel, of which Christ was to be the Mediator—a Covenant much superior to the earlier one in that it was "the promise of an eternal inheritance." There is one aspect of the first Advent that, in the most unaccountable manner, has escaped the notice of theologians, namely, that Israel and the Messiah are inseparably connected. In the Old Testament He is their Ransom, Redeemer, Shepherd and Saviour, yet He is usually pictured as their Judge and Accuser. We read in Isaiah xlix, 6, that His mission was to raise up and restore the tribes of Israel, and yet it is the popular belief that He blotted them out. If this is really the teaching of the New Testament, Christ's Coming actually repudiated prophecy instead of fulfilling it. But most certainly such is not the case. Let us investigate the matter for ourselves. In Matthew i, 21, R.V. we read: "Thou shalt call His name Jesus, for it is He that shall save His people from their sins." It was "His people" that Christ came to save. In Matt. ii, 6, R.V. we find a quotation from Micah v, 2 addressed to Bethlehem: "Out of thee shall come forth a governor which shall be shepherd of My people Israel," and again Mary sang: "He hath holpen His servant Israel in remembrance of His mercy to Abraham and his seed for ever" (Luke i, 54 and 55), and Zacharias being filled with the Holy Spirit spake thus: "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, for He hath visited and redeemed His people" (v. 68), and the angel said to the shepherds: "Behold I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all the people" (Luke ii, 10, R.V.). Peter and the Apostles declared before the Council at Jerusalem that Christ came "to give repentance to Israel and remission of sins" (Acts v, 31), and Paul—"The Apostle of the Gentiles"—affirmed when preaching to the Church at Antioch: "Of David's seed hath God according to promise brought unto Israel a Saviour, Jesus" (Acts xiii, 23, R.V.). I think I have now quoted sufficient passages to show that no departure from Old Testament doctrine can be found in the New Testament. If the language of Scripture has the faintest meaning, the birth, death, resurrection and ascension of the Saviour had particular reference to Israel—earthly, national Israel. Such it would seem must be the inevitable conclusion, but the spiritualizers get out of it by claiming that the expressions: "His people," "the people" and "Israel" when met with in the New Testament always mean "the Church—spiritual Israel." These blind guides maintain that Israel of the Old Testament is an absolutely different conception from the Israel of the New Testament, but a few quotations will clearly show how mistaken they are. In Rom. xi, 1, Paul asks the question: "Did God cast off His people? God forbid. For I also am an Israelite of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin. God hath not cast away His people which He foreknew." Without doubt "His people" refer to the ancient people of Israel. Again, when Paul was struck to the earth on the road to Damascus, the following guarantee was accorded to him by the Voice from Heaven: "Delivering thee from the people and from the Gentiles unto whom I send thee." (Acts xxvi, 17.) Clearly this expression "the people" refers to the Jews. It is equally clear that the word "Israel" preserves in the New Testament its original significance, for example in Acts ix, 15, the Lord declared to Ananias that He had chosen Paul "to bear My name before the Gentiles and kings and the children of Israel." We are thus shown that Israel and the Church must be kept absolutely distinct. Notwithstanding this, commentators have confused most completely what the Bible is so careful to separate. A moment's thought will, however, disclose the reason for this. It was not so much a matter of choice with them as one of necessity. The Jews had rejected the Gospel and nobody knew where the rest of the tribes were, consequently all the evils foretold of the Jews were presumed to apply to Jews and Israel alike. What then was to become of all the promises of mercy to Israel which abound from one end of the Scriptures to the other? Being God's Own words they must mean something, and so the term "spiritual Israel" was invented—an expression, be it noted, not to be found in the Bible. The fact of Abraham having a spiritual seed in a way justifies its coinage, but the habit of making it take the place of the genuine Israel and usurp all her privileges, in fact everything that belongs to her except the curses, is unwarrantable. When one of our critics is approached on the subject, he not infrequently asserts that "the whole tenor of the New Testament condemns the ridiculous craze." If, however, he is pressed for a more definite statement it turns out that to him apparently the New Testament consists of only some half-dozen verses. Let us run over these passages that are supposed to completely take the wind out of British-Israel sails. The principal one is: "there is neither Jew nor Greek" (Gal. iii, 28). We are told these words imply that the era of national superiority is passed, that there are now no racial distinctions in God's sight, that any advantage to one nation over another would not be in accordance with the spirit of the Gospel. It is astonishing how a claim could be made so absolutely opposed to the testimony of history, the Scriptures and common sense. (1) Take that of history. It is idle to assert that national superiorities have ceased to exist when we see that they have not. If we refer to the fact that the British Empire is the greatest and most blessed of God that exists to day, or ever has existed, they attempt to account for it in various ways. They assert that the Gospel equalizes every race and nation under Heaven and tell us it would be utterly unworthy of God to favour one nation more than the others, but that the Gospel has raised this nation far above all the others! (2) Now take the testimony of the Scriptures. The Bible teems with promises to the Hebrews of national superiority. The declaration "there is neither Jew nor Greek" does not revoke them, it does not even allude to temporary conditions. Paul, when he used these words, was not speaking of secular concerns but of spiritualities. He maintained that the sole requisite for salvation was faith in Christ. All have sinned and all must accept the same way of salvation. Paul does not teach that mundane things have ceased to exist. On the contrary, the statement that in the Gospel all men are equal presupposes that in other matters such is not the case. (3) Lastly, take the evidence of common sense. The words "there is neither Jew nor Greek" are followed in the text by "there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female." Now if all the temporal conditions between Jew and Greek have been removed the same must naturally apply to the case of male and female. Does a man that accepts Christianity become a woman? Surely not. And we deny that under the New Covenant the Israelite forfeits one iota of his special privileges. Notwithstanding conversion a slave remains a slave and endures his chains. A man remains a man and bears his responsibility, and the Hebrew remains a Hebrew and retains his prerogative. Is it not a strange thing, however, that those who are foremost in declaring there is neither Jew nor Greek are the loudest in asserting that these are "the Times of the Gentiles"? In other words, that there is a difference between Jew and Greek, and that the Greek for the time being has decidedly the best of it. When this contradiction is pointed out to these people, they reply "but 'the times of the Gentiles' is a scriptural expression." So it is, but the phrase "Gentile Dispensation," that has been so universally substituted for and made interchangeable with the expression "the Times of the Gentiles," is not. The words "the Times of the Gentiles" occur only once in the Bible and have no relation whatever to "the calling of the Gentiles," nor to their special blessings and privileges. When they were uttered Jesus was speaking of the retribution in store for the Jews. These are His words: "There shall be great distress in the land and wrath upon this people. And they shall fall by the edge of the sword and shall be led away captive into all nations; and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled" (Luke xxi, 23-24). Clearly the purport of this prophecy is that the Gentiles would have possession of the Land for a definite period, at the end of which they would be driven out of it. If, however, many Bible experts are correct and "the Times of the Gentiles" signifies a dispensation of Gentile blessings, their fulfilment must surely indicate the cessation of these Gentile blessings, and this cessation would synchronize with the restoration of Palestine to Israel. The latter event actually took place in A.D. 1917 in so far that Great Britain was then awarded the Mandate by the League of Nations, but when that terminates we may undoubtedly expect to obtain complete possession of the Promised Land. There can be little doubt that since the Turk was driven out of Palestine in 1917, missionary enterprise generally has been increasingly successful. When, however, the Holy Land definitely comes into the hands of National Israel, in accordance with what has always been the teaching of the Church and is certainly that of the Scriptures, a much more mighty impulse will be given to the spread of the Gospel among the Gentiles. The Times of the Gentiles therefore cannot be a Gentile Dispensation; it is merely the ordained period of Gentile possession of Palestine, and when it is terminated by the uncontrolled return of Israel, the conversion of the Gentiles will not be checked, but, on the contrary, will be immensely accelerated.

Now let us turn to Rom. xi, 25-26, R.V., addressed by Paul to Gentile Christians in Rome. "For I would not brethren have you ignorant of this mystery lest ye be wise in your own conceits." What is this mystery? "That a hardening in part hath befallen Israel." What part of Israel? the Jews undoubtedly. Hence the passage might read thus: "For I would not brethren have you ignorant of this mystery," "that a hardening hath befallen the Jews until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in, and so all Israel shall be saved." "The fulness of the Gentiles" is taken by theologians to be the entry of the Gentile element into the Church. And we are told that after this shall be accomplished the veil shall be lifted from Israel. British-Israel teaching produces a very different and at the same time an absolutely consistent view of this passage. Commentators seem to be oblivious of the fact that in alluding to the fulness of the Gentiles, or nations, as the word should be translated (see marginal note to the word "Gentiles" in Matt. iv. 15, R.V., which is "Greek nations and so elsewhere.") Paul is quoting from Gen. xlviii, 19, where it is prophesied that Ephraim should become a multitude (margin fulness) of nations. In Hebrew Bibles the phrase here employed by Paul is identical with that used in Genesis and the expression is found nowhere else in the Bible. What does it teach us? It clearly tells us that "the fulness of the Gentiles" is not to be looked for either among the Jews or the Gentiles, but among Ephraim-Israel, separated from the Mosaic Law and become Gentiles as Hosea tells us, but revealed to-day in the Anglo-Saxon Race. The "fulness of nations" constituting the British Empire is at our very doors, and its completion will be accompanied by the dissipation of Jewish blindness, as foretold by Paul, "and so all Israel shall be saved." In no case does either the "fulness" or "the Times" of the Gentiles countenance the assumption that the present time is a Gentile parenthesis in which Israel is banished from God's favour, being impersonated meanwhile by a spiritual imitation. On the contrary, in Rom. xv, we have Paul's quotation from the Old Testament: "Rejoice ye Gentiles with His people" and again "Praise the Lord all ye Gentiles, and laud Him all ye people." It is not "rejoice ye Gentiles instead of His people," nor is it "rejoice ye people with the Gentiles," but "rejoice ye Gentiles with His people." The rejoicing people are the people of Israel and the Gentiles are invited to rejoice with them. Simeon emphasizes the same point by declaring that Jesus was to be "a light to lighten the Gentiles and the glory of Thy people Israel," thus signifying that the Saviour would hold a higher place in the heart of Israel than among Gentile nations. All through the Bible it is the Hebrew that is appointed to rescue the Gentile, not once is the Gentile commissioned to evangelize Israel.

People who are ignorant of British-Israel Truth, if asked to explain Matt. xxi, 43-44, R.V. ("Therefore say I unto you, the Kingdom of God shall be taken away from you and shall be given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof, and he that falleth on this stone" (the nation just spoken of) "shall be broken to pieces, but on whomsoever it shall fall it will scatter him as dust") almost invariably say that the nation here referred to is the Gentile Church. It, however, takes very little thought to convince one that Christ is speaking of the nation represented in Nebuchadnezzar's dream by the stone which, as we read in Dan. ii, 35, "brake in pieces" all the other kingdoms of the Image so that they became "like the chaff of the summer threshing floor, and the wind carried them away"; the simile in the two cases is identical. We read of "the Church that was with Moses in the wilderness," "the Church of the firstborn" and "the Church of God," but nowhere in the Bible do we find even a suggestion of a Gentile Church. For information about it we must turn to the Commentaries. In them we find it described as the true Israel, to distinguish it from the Israel descended from Abraham! They tell us that God has cut off Ancient Israel because of their wilful unbelief and has adopted the Gentiles instead, and that the former can only participate in the privileges of the Gentiles by being joined to their Church, which is now the true Israel. This theory is derived from Rom. xi, although in reality the teaching of this chapter is diametrically opposed to it both in letter and spirit. Paul refers to the name given to the joint Houses of Israel and Judah in Jer. xi, 16: "The Lord called thy name a green olive tree, fair, and of goodly fruit." He then informs us that some of the branches of this good olive tree were broken off, not all of them nor even many, but "some." These, of course, were the Jews; and the Roman converts to Christianity, spoken of as a cutting from a wild olive tree, were grafted in to fill up the void. As every gardener knows, a tree must be well established in the ground in order that it may be in a condition to take a graft. Therefore the Hebrew tree with its House-of-Israel branches must have been unaffected by the above operation, but the theologians would have us believe that the whole Hebrew tree was plucked up by the roots and a Gentile tree planted in its place. The act of grafting Paul tells us was in this case " contrary to nature," for nobody in his senses would dream of grafting a scion from a wild olive tree on to a good stock, because the graft would flourish and grow profusely on the strength of its foster parent but would continue to produce the evil fruit of the wild olive tree. This chapter was addressed to Rome. The inspired Apostle made no mistake; he could look forward down the centuries and see Romanism spread abroad under the cloak of Christianity continuing to bear meanwhile an increasingly abundant crop of idolatrous fruit. The Israel Church in Britain threw off her yoke at the Reformation and re-established a British Church that returned to the original teaching of the Apostles as drawn directly from the Scriptures.

BRITISH-ISRAEL FACTS NOT FANCIES.—VI.

By MAJOR-GENERAL C. A. HADFIELD.

THE STONE KINGDOM.

IN Daniel ii we are given Daniel's interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar's Dream Image: The King was surprised by the appearance in his dream of a stone, cut out without hands, which smote the image upon his feet that were of iron and clay, and brake them to pieces.

The interpretation is, that Nebuchadnezzar himself represents the head of gold of this image. God had given him a kingdom with power, strength, and glory.

After Nebuchadnezzar was to arise another kingdom, inferior; followed by a third, and a fourth.

Then comes the interpretation: And in the days of these four earthly monarchs, " The God of Heaven shall set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever."

From this we can clearly see that God Himself set up a fifth and final kingdom. It was to have no successor, it is to stand for ever.

The first of the four monarchies was Babylon, under King Nebuchadnezzar; the next was Medo-Persia, followed by Greece and then Rome. All these were, in turn, to be destroyed. The mission of the fifth was to destroy them (the image) and to fill the world.

This mission exactly corresponds with that of Israel, which was to be a nation for ever. So we may take it for granted that Israel, the Stone Kingdom, and Great Britain, are identical. The kingdom holding the perpetual Throne of David until He comes Whose right it is.

Nebuchadnezzar saw no hands cutting out the stone out of the mountain, which is symbolical with Israel's unidentified journey through the world during the past centuries. Israel has, through Divine plan, gone forward from Assyrian exile to the " place appointed," as the nation set up by God Himself to overthrow all other nations, and eventually to fill the whole earth. To fulfil the prophecy that " Abraham is heir to the world." Through such marvellous Divine plan Israel, under the name of Britain, has been able to rise to her greatness, and to " dwell alone," in the safety of the British Isles, unrecognized by her neighbouring nations, and consequently unenvied by them during her progress.

All this concealment has been aided through the eyes of commentators, theologians, and teachers being " blinded," and as they in olden days (the early days of Christianity) could —naturally—see no nation on the earth likely to rival in power the great Roman Empire, they were unable to account for the dream in any other manner than that the Stone Kingdom and Israel (lost to them) were intended to be but symbolical of " the Church." What else, thought they, could it be? The more one looks at this, the more improbable it becomes! It was excusable in the fourth or fifth centuries (A.D.). But now, when one sees the old prophecies being fulfilled to Britain as were " promised " to Israel, there is no excuse for cultivating " out of date " theories such as these.

It cannot refer to " the Church," because the actual words of Holy Scripture say: " In the days of these kings " the kingdom shall be set up. Christianity was not " set up " until the days of the last of the four earthly kingdoms, i.e., in the days of the Roman Empire. What had " the Church " to do with the destruction of Babylon, or Medo-Persia, or Greece? Did the Church either take any part in the fall of the Roman Empire? The whole argument is fallacious. Then again, there is no solidarity with " the Church "; it is broken up into many religious bodies holding diverse views—no uniformity. In these circumstances, we are compelled to realize that the words of Holy Scripture are surely here intended to be taken in their literal sense. The fifth, or Stone Kingdom, is as much an earthly, or material kingdom, as the four which preceded it; Israel was existing when Babylon arose, and also during the existence of each of the four monarchies in succession; and Israel fulfils to the very letter the words of the prophecy. Israel, the Stone Kingdom, and Great Britain are identical. How otherwise is Britain now in occupation of Palestine, and of most—if not all—of the Promised Land? Is Britain a " Gentile nation," still treading down Jerusalem? If so, it stands to reason Israel has yet to be discovered to turn the British out of Palestine, Egypt, Africa, India, the Oversea Dominions, and all other possessions, and to break our sea power in the world! This is certain, because Israel in the " last days " is prophesied to be the holder of all these birthright blessings promised to the descendants of Joseph. Since Britain has (often unwillingly it is true) come into possession of all the promises, we may be certain Britain is Israel under the predicted change of name and language.

Bear in mind that if Britain is not Israel, Britain must be destroyed, for only Israel is to be exempted—" though I make a full end of all Nations whither I have scattered thee (Israel) yet will I not make a full end of thee " (Jer. xxx, 11). Britain, if not Israel, must be one of the " all nations " who are to be gathered against Jerusalem, and who are to be " broken in pieces " by Israel (Joel iii, 2, 12, 14; Zech. xii, 9; Jer. li, 20).

THE KINGDOM.

The dream of King Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon, was in the second year of his reign (Dan. ii, 1). "Thou art this head of gold" (v. 38). That is, Nebuchadnezzar was the ruler of the first of four monarchies. The date would be 604 B.C. If "seven times" punishment was to run, equal to 2,520 solar years, it would mean 2,520 — 603 = 1917 A.D. as being the termination of that "seven times." By this time it would have run its course, and in the very year in which Jerusalem and Palestine were released, by the British, from Turkish control.

We are told by the prophet Zechariah (chaps. xii, xiv) that Israel and Judah shall both be in occupation of Palestine when Christ comes.

If the British be not Israel, is it but a mere coincidence that Britain has been given a Mandate over Palestine, and is repatriating the Jews? They are now both in Palestine! Is it a coincidence that Britain has dislodged the Gentile Turks—or Edom—when Israel was to do it?

When we remember that before this could happen Israel was to change name and language the fact surely becomes more than "a coincidence"!

THE NEW COVENANT.

In regard to the making of the New Covenant, see Jer. xxxi, 31: "Behold the days come saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the House of Israel and with the House of Judah."

Many opponents at once say: "How could a new covenant be made if the two Houses were apart?" God said He would "make" it, and St. Paul says that the Mosaic covenant had been "made" old; thereby, Christ made the New Covenant through the sacrifice of Himself, and to participate in the fruits of that sacrifice (of Himself) it was no more necessary for Israel to be on the spot than for the Chinese to be there.

Even Judah was only represented in Palestine then by a fragment of the people, and there was also (loaned to the Jews) a fragment of Israel present, viz., the tribe of Benjamin which belonged to the House of Joseph (2 Sam. xix, 20), that is, to the "House of Israel," but was "attached" to Judah at the time. [See "Lost and Found," by J. G. Taylor.]

The Jews as yet have not accepted Christ; that they will, ultimately, is certain, after the reunion, and then the Holy Scriptures will be fulfilled as regards the two Houses. How could the new covenant be made with the two Houses if the House of Israel (of the Ten Tribes) ceased to exist, as the House of Judah was not then ready for it? Thus, as Mr. Taylor points out, "to find Israel a Christian nation, i.e., under the new covenant, is to vindicate Heb. viii, 10; while the unbelief and deposition of the Jews is a vindication of Matt. xxi, 43."

It may be well to refer here to the confusion which exists as to the word "Gentiles." It surely refers to those people outside the covenant made with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. The uncovenanted people. To the Jews, in our Lord's day, all who were not Jews were classed Gentiles, and similarly to the Romans all outside of their Empire were Gentiles.

But this fact does not make the Northern Kingdom of Israel a "Gentile nation."

WHY "SPIRITUALIZE" ISRAEL?

Then we have that large body of opponents who will "spiritualize" Israel. The advice given by the Rev. G. H. Lancaster is: "If you spiritualize Israel, you must be fair and spiritualize the Jews also; to say nothing of other empires who were contemporary with Israel, such as Babylon. Matt. xxi, 43, shows that it is no more possible to "spiritualize" the "nation" to whom the Kingdom of God was given than to spiritualize the Jews from whom it was taken. [N.B.—Christ said "nation," not "Church."] There is no justification for changing the word nation to "Church." The word in the original Greek is "nation." British-Israel Truth is a wonderful proof of the inspiration of the Bible, and to the greatest evidence of Christianity.

Therefore British-Israelites, as they can find no word in Holy Scripture to justify any "spiritualizing" cannot possibly accept such teaching. The error has apparently been perpetuated from the days of the third or fourth century A.D., and has, unfortunately, become accepted as "a matter of course," therefore it behoves all of us who desire to read the Bible aright, to unlearn much of our early day teaching—or in the words of Antisthenes: "The most needful piece of learning for the uses of Life is to unlearn what is untrue." Dr. Isaac Watts said: "The greatest part of the Christian world can hardly give any reason why they believe the Bible to be the Word of God, but because they have always believed it, as they were taught so from their infancy."

A WAR-TIME ADDRESS (EXTRACTS).

BY "EYNSFORD."

THE following address was prepared with a view to encouraging and heartening the hearers in the strenuous days of the Great War, and to cause them to look alone to God for deliverance, for there is none other that fighteth for us but only Thou, O God.

In the fight between David and Goliath (1 Sam. xvii) there are lessons to be gleaned, and there are perhaps some points of resemblance to our war with Germany.

David, who was sent by his father to visit his three eldest brothers in the camp of Israel when Saul was at war with the Philistines, was greatly distressed when he learned that there was no one in Israel to accept the insolent challenge of the great giant, Goliath of Gath. So full of righteous indignation was he that he declared that he himself would meet the mighty man who was defying the armies of the God of Israel. So manfully and confidently did he speak that he was reported to the king. He was then brought in before King Saul, and to him he spake, "Let no man's heart fail because of him; Thy servant will go and fight with this Philistine."

Saul was not a little amazed at the daring of this youth, and answered, "Thou are not able to go against this Philistine to fight with him, for thou art but a youth, and he a man of war from his youth." Surely a fitting description of the present antagonists. In military strength and size our nation was insignificant and small; not prepared or armed for a great war. Whereas the enemy is the greatest military power that the world has ever seen; an army of huge proportions, heavily armed and perfectly equipped for war, in fact, "a man of war from his youth"; fully conscious of his strength, confident in his invincibility, and full of boast and defiance.

For years Germany by her growing military strength has overawed Europe. There has been the boast of "the mailed fist" and the "rattling of the sword in the scabbard."

David's reply to Saul showed that he remembered past deliverances. Let the remembrance of past mercies stimulate the people of God. Call to remembrance His mighty works of old. David narrated how that on two previous occasions of dire peril, when the odds were sore against him, God had delivered him. He tells of how on one occasion it was from a lion, and on another from a bear.

We in the present circumstances must recall past national deliverances. We have experienced two such, when the odds were overwhelmingly against us, when, humanly speaking, we should have been destroyed. The first was our great encounter with Spain in the days of Queen Elizabeth, and the second in the perilous days of Napoleon. God saved us on each occasion and gave us the victory.

David said, "Thy servant slew the lion and the bear." "The Lord that delivered me out of the paw of the lion and the bear . . ." Our nation realized that God had saved us out of the paw of the Lion (Spain) and out of the paw of the Bear (France). (Not that it is suggested that these animals are the usual national emblems of either of our former foes.)

The remembrance of past mercies strengthened David for fresh encounter. "O God, we have heard with our ears, and our fathers have declared unto us, the noble works that Thou didst in their days, and in the old time before them. O Lord, arise, help us, and deliver us for Thine honour." David did not trust in his own strength or skill, but relied wholly upon God. "The Lord that delivered me . . . will deliver me out of the hand of this Philistine"—1 Sam. xvii (v. 37). Let ours be the same reliance. "I come to thee in the name of the Lord of hosts, the God of the armies of Israel, whom thou hast defied. This day will the Lord deliver thee into mine hand . . . that all the earth may know that there is a God in Israel." The result of the deliverance was to be the glory of God.

David drew near and "when the Philistine saw David he disdained him" (v. 42–44). Our enemy was full of contempt for our military power. Our Army was disdained and described as "contemptible." "David hastened, and ran toward the army to meet the Philistine" (v. 48). Even so did our small standing Army rush to meet the oncoming mighty foe. With what expedition were our forces moved over sea and land to stem the giant's advance, and so the issue was joined. "So David prevailed over the Philistine . . . and smote the Philistine" (v. 50). Thus did David receive at the hand of God his third wonderful deliverance.

And to-day (1930) what shall we render unto the Lord for this immeasurable great benefit of deliverance? Let us take the cup of salvation, and call upon the Lord. Let us render Praise and Obedience. From hardness of heart and contempt of Thy Word and Commandment: Good Lord deliver us.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor.

DEAR SIR,

Several communications relating to the use of swine's flesh as a food have recently appeared in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, and many important truths have been brought to light thereby.

It is an undeniable fact that the eating of swine's flesh, as well as that of several other species of sentient creatures, is positively forbidden in the Law of God as delivered to Israel through Moses.

It is also an undeniable fact that our Heavenly Father has never prohibited the use of anything that is not inimical to the highest physical and spiritual development of His people.

Our moral and spiritual welfare is more closely connected with, and dependent upon, our physical condition and health than most people realize.

God's promise to His people Israel, as recorded in Leviticus and Deuteronomy, is to the effect that, conditional upon their obedience to His Law, He would remove all plagues and sickness from them.

Unlike man, God never finds it necessary to retract any of His statements, or to retreat from any stand which He has taken.

Like His promises, His Laws are eternal and unchangeable, and no one can violate them without incurring the penalties provided therein.

As concerning punishment for personal violations of the Laws of health, God is no respecter of persons.

It is not necessary for us to obey the Mosaic Law in order to obtain salvation from sin; which salvation is now provided only through the sacrificial atonement of our Lord Jesus; but it is necessary for us to obey the Law if we would obtain salvation from sickness and disease.

Is the physical health of the average Christian of to-day superior in any marked degree to that of the average non-Christian?

It will be a hard matter to prove that it is.

What then is wrong? Why are we not, as Christians, enjoying that condition of superb physical health which God has clearly promised to His obedient children?

It is unquestionably due to the fact that the plane of the believer's physical life is not materially different from that of the unbeliever's. In other words, the one has no more regard for the Law of health than has the other.

We note the alarming prevalence of cancer, tuberculosis and other diseases of a scrofulous nature. Medical men are constantly engaged in seeking remedies to stay the spread of these disorders.

In connection with this statement it may be well to observe that the word scrofula is derived from the Latin scrofa—a sow. The swine is the most scrofulous animal known, and the use of its flesh as food is probably responsible for more cancer than any other single cause.

Physicians also have borne witness to the fact that a case of cancer is seldom met with among the orthodox Jews, who abstain from the use of swine's flesh and other forbidden foods.

That the Lord God created man from the dust of the earth is a fact commonly accepted by all who believe in the Divine inspiration of the Holy Scriptures.

Why then are we not willing to concede that He knows at least as much about running the human machine which He has made as do our prominent physicians and scientists?

Our Heavenly Father has provided for our use such a profusion and variety of wholesome and attractive foods that, under normal conditions, there is absolutely no excuse for the eating of any food which He has, in His wisdom, prohibited.

Personally, for nearly thirty years, I have not eaten the flesh of a swine, rabbit, hare, catfish or eel; and such abstinence has not only entailed no hardship or privation, but has greatly augmented my physical and spiritual welfare.

Surely there are few who will not admit that a strong, healthy, radiant Christian is a far more effective witness to the efficacy of the Gospel of our Saviour than one who is weak, sickly and gloomy.

Christ did not come to destroy, or to nullify the Law, but to fulfil it. "For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled."

Let us therefore, as Israelites, earnestly strive to accomplish the fulfilment of God's Law in ourselves, and see if we do not thereby obtain a blessing, both spiritually and physically, such as we have not yet experienced.

Yours truly,
IRVIN POTTER (U.S.A.).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

BY THE REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A.

QUESTION.—Do all British-Israelites observe the giving of one-tenth, or does that apply to, and does it characterize the Jew only?—C.M.

ANSWER.—The teaching of the tithe system, i.e., of giving one-tenth to God, is a very ancient doctrine, and dates back to the time of Jacob (Gen. xxviii, 22), if not to Abram (Gen. xix, 20), though in the latter case it was to Melchizedek to whom Abram "gave a tenth of all," i.e., of all the booty (cf. Heb. vii, 4).

The custom of paying tithes to a priesthood or sanctuary was widely diffused in antiquity. The later Hebrew law exacted tithe only on the produce of the soil, and on cattle; but among other nations it was exacted on many other sources of revenue; among the Greeks, for instance, we read of tithe being paid on spoil taken in war, on gains made in trade, on confiscated property, etc., not less than on the annual crops. Sayce says that the temples in Babylonia, at least in the time of Nebuchadnezzar and his successors, were largely supported by eshru, or tithe. It may be noted that Abram's payment of the tithe to Melchizedek was in exchange for the blessing which he received from him, which became a pattern to the later Israelites. Robertson Smith (Religion of the Semites, Chap. vii) says: "In most ancient nations the idea of sacrificial tribute is most clearly marked in the institution of the sacred tithe, which was paid to the gods from the produce of the soil, and sometimes also from other sources of revenue. In antiquity tithe and tribute are practically identical, nor is the name of tithe strictly limited to tributes of one-tenth, the term being used to cover any impost paid in kind upon a fixed scale. Such taxes play a great part in the revenues of Eastern sovereigns, and have done so from a very early date. The Babylonian kings drew a tithe from imports, and the tithe of the fruits of the soil had the first place among the revenues of the Persian satraps. The Hebrew kings in like manner took tithes of their subjects, and the tribute in kind which Solomon drew from the provinces for the support of his household may be regarded as an impost of this sort (1 Sam. viii, 15, 17; 1 Kings iv, 7; cf. also Amos vii, 1; 1 Kings xviii, 5). Similarly the Romans in Syria levied a tax on pasture-land in the month Nisan for the food of their horses. Thus the institution of a sacred tithe corresponds to the conception of the national god as a king, and so at Tyre tithes were paid to Melcarth, 'the king of the city.' The oldest Hebrew laws require the payment of first-fruits, but know nothing of a tithe due at the sanctuary."

We learn (Amos iv, 4) that it was customary to pay tithes at Bethel, and proof from the incidents of Abram and Jacob shows that the duty of giving a tenth to God was recognized before the giving of the Law.

It is evident then that the giving of one-tenth to God was an ancient custom long anterior to the religion of the synagogue, and thus was an Israelitish custom long before it ever became a Jewish one (cf. Josephus, Antiq. I. x. 2). See further, P. W. Thompson, Israel in Prophecy and History, also his The Whole Tithe, and Thine Increase, published by the Covenant Publishing Company, Ltd., 6, Buckingham Gate, S.W.1. Mr. Thompson shows that the system of the tithe is still binding upon Christian people to-day, and that much blessing is bestowed of God upon those who give Him their tenth. (Deut. xiv, 29.)

"MY KINGDOM IS NOT OF THIS WORLD."

BY "EYNSFORD."

A CRITIC has drawn attention to the omission of a "still stronger" text in the above-named article (which appeared in the January 25th issue of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER).

It is that which tells of our Lord's refusing to accede to the desire of the multitude to make Him a King. (John vi, 15.)

"When Jesus therefore perceived that they would come and take Him by force, to make Him a king, He departed again into a mountain Himself alone."

This verse bears strongly on the subject, and is most helpful.

In justice to the critic, it is only fair to state that he interprets it as an absolute repudiation by our Lord of any idea of reign or kingship except in the spiritual sphere.

But, rightly interpreted, it absolutely confirms the contention of the article. The incident proves that our Lord repudiated earthly Kingship at that time; even as He later did before Pilate. At His first Advent He did not come as the Reigning Messiah, but as the Suffering Messiah. Hence he refused the role of Kingship. At His second Advent, however, he comes as the Reigning King of Israel and the whole earth.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

BRITISH-ISRAEL-WORLD FEDERATION.

SECRETARIES of Branches, Members, Associates, and all readers of this Journal, are asked to note that forces inimical to the work of the Federation are very active, endeavouring to undermine our work in various parts of the world, both openly and secretly. Venomous personal attacks are being made, as well as most insidious attempts to nullify British-Israel teaching, some so subtle that they deceive.

Communications received regarding B.-I., which do not emanate from Headquarters, should be brought to our notice immediately, in order that steps may be taken to safeguard the interests of the Federation and to counter the attacks.

Our only address is 6, Buckingham Gate, London, S.W.1. Any communication bearing any other address and purporting to come from Headquarters should be regarded as suspect.

Guildford Branch had a most successful meeting on February 6th, when Miss Hamilton Hunter gave an address on "The Redemption of Israel" to a good gathering of people. Several gave in their names as wishing to become members of the Federation.

The Rev. W. T. Medhurst gave a lantern lecture at Ely, Glam., on February 6th, on "The Sign and Witness of the Great Pyramid." The chair was occupied by the Rev. J. Lewis Evans. The lecture was the outcome of a series of sermons which had been given by Mr. Medhurst. The audience greatly appreciated the interesting and instructive character of the knowledge imparted by the speaker.

"Israel in the New Testament and the New Covenant" was the subject of a lecture given by Mr. H. A. Marchant in the Hove Town Hall on February 1st. Mr. Marchant pointed out that the only tribes of Israel in Palestine in the time of Christ were Judah, Benjamin and Levi, and it was important to remember that the word "Jew" was a short name for a portion of the tribe of Judah. The Israelitish race had scattered, and many had reached these Islands at that time. The meeting was presided over by Major E. F. Holland, the Chairman of the Branch. In the evening Mr. Marchant gave a lantern lecture on "The Origin of the Ancient British and Saxons," as revealed by Assyrian, Babylonian and Persian monuments.

The Minister of a Church in Brighton recently preached two British-Israel sermons to large congregations.

Invitations, printed on postcards depicting the Coronation Chair and Stone, drew many new friends to hear Miss Hamilton Hunter's lectures at Salisbury on February 17th, especially the one on "The Stone Symbol of Israel." Much literature was purchased, and THE NATIONAL MESSAGE and BRITISH-ISRAEL CRUSADER eagerly bought. New members joined up with the Branch.

At a meeting of the Durham Branch on February 13th the Rev. R. G. F. Waddington, M.A., gave an intensely interesting address entitled "Life from the Dead," Mr. D. Robertson, of Darlington, presiding. The lecturer stated that the Resurrection of Jesus Christ is a fundamental doctrine of the Christian Church, and he showed that the moral resurrection of Israel demands a physical resurrection first. The lecture, dealing mostly with British-Israel Truth from the historical standpoint, was greatly enjoyed.

Our veteran Commander Roberts went to the aid of the Teignmouth Branch on February 18th, when the announced speaker failed them. Commander Roberts was, as usual, splendid on "The History of Israel from Egypt to Britain," showing the migrations of Israel from before the Exodus, and after. Very sincere thanks are due to the Commander.

* * *

Mr. S. E. Steele visited Harrogate and Ilkley, and delivered lectures on "The Early British Church" to appreciative audiences. He was cordially invited to pay them another visit.

Mr. John Leech, M.A., K.C., will give another of his lectures on Prophecy at Headquarters, 6, Buckingham Gate, S.W.1, on Wednesday afternoon next at 3 o'clock. The usual meeting will take place on Thursday evening at 7.30.

A fine series of meetings was held at Central Hall, Westminster, last week, notwithstanding the cold weather. Many of our members were laid up, but large numbers of new people were in attendance daily. The Rev. Pascoe Goard gave seven addresses with his own convincing power. The President, Major Knowles; Mr. Herbert Garrison, Secretary-General; Major Richard Rigg, the Rev. Pascoe Goard, and the Rev. J. Lumley Davies, acted as Chairmen. Two addresses were given by Mr. John Leech, two by Mr. J. J. Morey, and one each by the Revs. E. A. Couldrey, Joseph Gay, and T. Sparshott Johnson. Mr. Garrison gave five lantern lectures. Many are the expressions of gratitude for the stimulus and uplift experienced, and general regret was felt that the meetings could not continue for another week at least. The final meeting on Friday night reached a climax of spiritual power and influence with Mr. Goard's remarkable closing address.

Next week the Rev. Pascoe Goard, Mr. Garrison and the Rev. T. H. Whitehouse are at the Empire Hall, North Place, Cheltenham, on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons and evenings. The Secretary-General is to give a lantern lecture each evening ; admission is free, but seats may be reserved if desired at 1s. for the evenings at Messrs. Crichton's. The following week they and Mr. Leech are at the Town Hall, Leamington, March 11th, 12th and 13th, twice daily.

The Annual May meetings are to be held at Headquarters on April 9th and 10th, afternoons and evenings. The Annual Meeting of members of the Federation for receiving the Annual Report and Financial Statement for 1929 will be held on Wednesday, April 9th, at 5.30 p.m.

Mr. John Leech visited our Bedford Branch on February 17th on the occasion of their Annual Conversazione and gave an address to a large company.

The Executive Committee of the Federation met on February 17th and transacted important business under the chairmanship of the President, Major Knowles. It was decided that the next Congress be fixed for the week commencing October 6th, 1930. Our friends will be glad to learn that Professor Odlum, and the Revs. Maxwell Carnson and E. J. Springett propose to be present in addition to the Rev. Pascoe Goard, and perhaps some speakers from U.S.A.

The Stoke-on-Trent Branch held one of its monthly lectures on February 19th. The lecturer was the Rev. T. Sparshott Johnson, M.A. The title of the lecture was "The Eleventh Hour" from the point of History, Astronomy and Prophecy. The President, Gresham Copeland, Esq., presided. The lecturer opened the meeting with three short prayers : one for the Royal Family, including "David, Prince of Wales," the next for the High Court of Parliament, and the third for "Thy Kingdom come." The theme of the lecture was that from the beginning there has always been a conflict for world dominion, a conflict both physical and material, as well as spiritual good and evil. The lecturer enumerated some of the powers now contending in this great conflict. He instanced Russia as being anti-God ; Rome the usurper ; the Zionists anti-Christian, and the League of Nations non-Christian. All these great forces the lecturer stated were now in grim conflict, and were approaching if not past the eleventh hour. If we turn, said the lecturer, to History, and particularly Biblical History, and to the portents of Astronomy and to Prophecy as contained in the Bible, and confirmed and expounded by well-known research authorities, both past and present, we find that there is undeniable evidence that such prophecies have been true in the past, and that day by day and year by year the events and happenings as prophesied of old are coming true. The lecturer finished with a warning that the eleventh hour had now arrived, and the end of the conflict was fast approaching.

The lecture was followed with intense attention, and its appreciation was demonstrated when the President, after a short résumé of some of the points made by the lecturer, tendered the thanks of the audience to the lecturer.

MANITOBA NOTES.

A public B.-I. meeting was held on January 9th, in Winnipeg, for intercession, with Scripture reading by Rev. W. R. Johnson, and addresses by Rev. E. J. Springett and Dr. H. W. Wadge.

January 21st was notable for a triple presentation of B.-I. Teaching, carried on simultaneously. Dr. G. F. Bush, L.D.S., gave a most interesting address on "The Metallurgy of the Bible," showing that the many Scripture references were both scientifically correct and very comprehensive, and that the people of old, both in the East and in Britain, possessed a very highly developed knowledge of the art of metallurgy. Dr. Wadge occupied the chair, and referred to the Naval Conference in London. Meanwhile, Rev. E. J. Springett was speaking to the Men's Club, and Miss Mabel Harbour gave a lecture on the Flags under other auspices, the Rector and Cadets being present.

THE EARLY BRITONS AND THE
EARLY BRITISH CHURCH

By

REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A., F.R.A.S., C.F.,
Vicar of St. Stephen's, Bow.

This little work contains the substance of Two Lectures, given at Glastonbury by Mr. Lancaster in 1925.

The former, brief though it is, is a remarkably clear exposition of what has now come to be accepted as the character of the pre-Christian Briton, not a painted Savage, but a well-educated, well-equipped man with a very considerable and justifiable pride of ancestry.

The latter, dealing with the establishment of Christianity in our island in the early years of the faith, cites a formidable list of authorities in support of his contention that St. Paul, Joseph of Arimathæa and many other New Testament Characters were the first bringers of the Gospel.—An arresting and convincing paper.

Israel in Prophecy and History

By P. W. THOMPSON, M.A.

Possibly the finest historical survey in relation to the identity that has yet been written. Mr. Thompson's work is well known to our readers through "The Old Book and the New Age," "The Whole Tithe," &c. This, his first, B.-I. book will enhance his reputation a hundredfold.

He shows clearly the raising up during the third day and his picture of the awakening of England at its close is a masterpiece of historical writing.

The drawing of John Wesley and the part he played is exceptionally fine.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

APPROACHES TO THE FACTS OF BRITISH-ISRAEL TRUTH.—V.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD, F.R.G.S.

THE summary of preceding articles :—

1. The history of the nation Israel in the Bible and outside of the Bible.

2. What the nation is to God. In Exodus xix we have the Lord's Own statement to Israel, "YE SHALL BE UNTO ME A KINGDOM OF PRIESTS, AND AN HOLY NATION. . . ."

From this point we proceeded to see that God has established His throne and Personality in Israel, and that His Presence therein has been continuous through the ages.

We noted His self-manifestation to Abraham—to Israel at Sinai—to Israel at the opening and dedication of the Temple of Solomon—to Isaiah at the judgment of Judah and Jerusalem (Isaiah vi)—to Ezekiel with Israel in captivity (Ezekiel i)—to Ezekiel at Jerusalem—and we noted the last appeal of the Lord to Israel in the last word of the Old Testament Canon.

We noted the Presence of the Lord at the Birth of Jesus at Bethlehem : "The Angel of the Lord came upon them" and "the glory of the Lord shone round about them."

We noted the Voice of the Lord at the Baptism of Jesus—at the Transfiguration of Jesus—and at the first official contact of Jesus with Israel in Europe.

The point of all this is the fact that the Lord is permanently dwelling in Israel. He is hovering over the strategic and capital centres of His Kingdom-nation.

This is not the thought we have had of the Lord in our generation. Especially it is not the thought which present teachers are bringing to the people. Yet it is the statement of historic fact which is brought to us from the Holy Scriptures, and surely the history of our people, and personal experience, bears out the truth of this presentation.

Let us see how this fits in with the thought of present-day leaders.

I have read with more or less care that beautifully-written book, "The Christ of the English Road."

Regarding the book, one could not but read with agreement and admiration as far as the theme itself goes. There were many illustrative allusions and statements which are culled from current and traditional thought, however, which causes one to shiver. They are the statements of one who has not caught the vision of all the facts involved. The presentation of a spot-light of truth has been surrounded by a whole sphere of tradition which is full of error.

The character of the English was not formed out of raw material consisting of heathen people. The character of the English people was not primarily the result of the Christian Missions which came to this country. The Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ came to these Islands within a decade of the Resurrection. That Gospel found a "good soil" for the reception of the seed already prepared by Israel Druidism. The British character approximated more nearly to that of the Gospel of Christ than did that of either of the other great branches of Israel people, namely, the Jewish character which was built on Talmudism ; the Greek character which was built on Philosophy ; the Scythian-Parthian character which was built upon military and colonizing activity.

But all these had received the foundations of their character when they were, as a race, born in their great progenitor, Isaac ; were regenerated as a race in Jacob ; and so became Israel.

Christianity, as the natural flowering of the Israel faith, profoundly developed and modified Israel character. But the character itself has been nearly four thousand years under the direct tuition of Jehovah, the God and King of Israel, to reveal Whom Jesus Christ our Lord came.

Let us look up, not to the immensity of distances such as separate us from the stars of the sidereal heavens, or even from the planets of our own solar system, but to that immediate heaven above us, so close above as to allow of the Voice of the Father to be heard by our human ears in the busy walks of ordinary life: as the Apostle Paul said to the Athenians: "though He be not far from every one of us."

Now that we have seen the manifestation of His Presence in Israel, and of His interest in the concerns in the various nations which constitute Israel throughout the past and present ages, let us go farther and see what the New Testament has to say regarding the Presence of the Lord, after the Resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead.

We come to the Day of Ascension. With the disciples we gather on the Day of Ascension and watch Him as He departs from the earth.

The fact that the chains of gravitation have loosed their hold of Him is of interest to us. For as He is, so shall we be in the life after death. Throughout his post-Resurrection Presence on earth He showed this freedom of movement till He ascended before them. That which interests us in this study is the awaiting cloud, which "received Him out of their sight." Every further reference to Him, which gives information concerning His present position, shows that He is with "the Majesty on High." He is "standing in the right hand of power." He is "seated on the right hand of the Majesty on High." He is the man Child to Whom the Lord said, "Come up hither," and He was "caught up into heaven." So we are assured that the awaiting cloud which received Him was the same cloud which appeared on the Mount of Transfiguration. Of it the Psalmist says, "Thou holdest back the face of thy throne and spreadest thy cloud before it." The hovering Father received the ascending Son into His Own glory.

The text which records this is :—

"When they therefore were come together, they asked of him, saying, Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?

And he said unto them, It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power.

But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judæa, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.

And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight.

And while they looked stedfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel;

Which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." —Acts i, 6-11.

The next historic scene is laid in the Upper Room

AT JERUSALEM.

The occasion is the Pentecost gathering. The important fact is that now the Lord ceases to "hover" only. He descends and clothes every one of the waiting disciples with His Own spirit. This is the manifestation of the Holy Ghost. It is the direct contact of Jehovah, the God and King of Israel, with the members of His Church.

All Israel still lives under the overshadowing Presence of God. But those who are permitted to enter the Pentecost experience, everyone who earnestly seeks the Lord, is brought into personal contact with the Divine and Heavenly Father.

The text is as follows :—

"And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place.

And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting.

And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them.

And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance.

And there were dwelling at Jerusalem Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven.

Now when this was noised abroad, the multitude came together, and were confounded, because that every man heard them speak in his own language.

And they were all amazed and marvelled, saying one to another, Behold, are not all these which speak Galilæans?

And how hear we every man in our own tongue, wherein we were born?

Parthians, and Medes, and Elamites, and the dwellers in Mesopotamia, and in Judæa, and Cappadocia, in Pontus, and Asia,

Phrygia, and Pamphylia, in Egypt, and in the parts of Libya about Cyrene, and strangers of Rome, Jews and proselytes, Cretes and Arabians, we do hear them speak in our tongues the wonderful works of God.

And they were all amazed, and were in doubt, saying one to another, What meaneth this?

Others mocking said, These men are full of new wine.

But Peter, standing up with the eleven, lifted up his voice, and said unto them, Ye men of Judæa, and all ye that dwell at Jerusalem, be this known unto you, and hearken to my words:

For these are not drunken, as ye suppose, seeing it is but the third hour of the day.

But this is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel;

And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams:

And on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out in those days of my Spirit; and they shall prophesy:

And I will show wonders in heaven above, and signs in the earth beneath; blood, and fire, and vapour of smoke:

The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before that great and notable day of the Lord come:

And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved.

Ye men of Israel, hear these words; Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you by miracles and wonders and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know:

Him, being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain:

Whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death: because it was not possible that he should be holden of it.

For David speaketh concerning him, I foresaw the Lord always before my face, for he is on my right hand, that I should not be moved:

Therefore did my heart rejoice, and my tongue was glad; moreover also my flesh shall rest in hope:

Because thou wilt not leave my soul in hell, neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption.

Thou hast made known to me the ways of life; thou shalt make me full of joy with thy countenance.

Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day.

Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne;

He seeing this before spake of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul was not left in hell, neither his flesh did see corruption.

This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses.

Therefore being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, he hath shed forth this, which ye now see and hear.

For David is not ascended into the heavens: but he saith himself, The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand,

Until I make thy foes thy footstool.

Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ.

Now when they heard this, they were pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles, Men and brethren, what shall we do?

Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.

For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call.

And with many other words did he testify and exhort, saying, Save yourselves from this untoward generation.

¶ Then they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls.

And they continued stedfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers.

And fear came upon every soul: and many wonders and signs were done by the apostles.

And all that believed were together, and had all things common;

And sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need.

¶ And they, continuing daily with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread from house to house, did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart, Praising God, and having favour with all the people. And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved."—Acts ii.

This great event, the descent from out of the overshadowing glory of the Holy Spirit, first took place at Jerusalem. There were assembled the Israelites and Judahites of the East.

There the Church of Christ was established in ISRAEL, the Jewish nation having officially, and popularly, dissociated itself and themselves from Christ and His Gospel. There in Jerusalem was the centre from which went out the glorious Gospel which was not a new Gospel. It had been preached from the beginning, and had been administered in a system of types and foreshadowings which had instructed and developed the faith of the former generations. But prophecy had been now turned to history, as far as the Messianic prophecies which deal with the redemptive and atoning work of the Lord are concerned. This gave a new power to the old message, and new historic reality to what had before been only doctrines held by faith.

Not only had history thus far caught up with prophecy: God had now under the new circumstances come nearer to His people. The Holy Ghost which proceedeth from the Father and the Son had DESCENDED, and "rested upon each of them. And they all spake with other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance."

What had been the peculiar privilege of the prophets of God during the generations of the Mosaic dispensation now became the privilege of every devoted disciple of our Lord.

So the Presence of God, which had been throughout the ages an overshadowing, now became "like rain upon the mown grass," as the prophet declared it should, and as God through the prophet declared He would. The overshadowing Glory descended upon the people of God, and still does so descend upon all those who seek Him.

So Israel marched forward in the persons of those illuminated by the Holy Ghost, who were filled with the Spirit, baptized with the Spirit, and directed by the Spirit of God.

The recorded outpourings of the Holy Spirit which follow are:—

Samaria.	Antioch.
Cæsarea Philippi.	Ephesus.

The latter outpouring took place in Europe. It is well to note how the footsteps of the Apostle Paul were directed after he had been "separated" to the Apostleship. They were forbidden to preach the Word in Asia; the Spirit suffered them not to go into Bithynia, but they were directed to go to Macedonia, and in due time came to Ephesus.

At this point the following remarkable experience of the manifestation of the Holy Ghost took place:—

"And it came to pass, that, while Apollos was at Corinth, Paul having passed through the upper coasts came to Ephesus; and finding certain disciples,

He said unto them, Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed? And they said unto him, We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost.

And he said unto them, Unto what then were ye baptized? And they said, Unto John's baptism.

Then said Paul, John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people, that they should believe on him which should come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus.

When they heard this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.

And when Paul had laid his hands upon them, the Holy Ghost came on them; and they spake with tongues, and prophesied.

And all the men were about twelve.

And he went into the synagogue, and spake boldly for the space of three months, disputing and persuading the things concerning the kingdom of God."—Acts xix, 1-8.

Be it noted that he had preached at Athens on Mars Hill, the heart and centre of Grecian culture, but there was no Divine manifestation there. He came to Corinth, but, except for encouragement to the Apostle himself, there was no Divine manifestation there.

He subsequently went to Rome, but there was no Divine manifestation there. Indeed, it is significant that St. Paul spent his time in Rome a prisoner in chains. Is it not a fact that this last significant statement of the Acts of the Apostles illustrates that right down to the present day Rome holds the Word of God in chains, as it held the Apostle Paul, and opposes ever the free course of the truth?

Part II.

The Origin of the Kymry.

The Greek κιμερος means a mist or darkness. The Latin Cimmerius is applied to anything dark or black. For the people who walked in darkness, see Isaiah ix, 2; Matt. iv, 16; Ephesians v, 11.

The name may have something to do with the spiritual state of the people of Israel when cast out of God's sight. The Hebrew word Chemarim occurs 2 Kings xxiii, 5; Hosea x, 5; and Zephaniah i, 4, and is applied to the idolatrous priests of the House of Israel. Not really priests, but the word is derived from a root signifying to be black, "to be heated or scorched like an oven" (see Hebrew and Chaldee Lexicon, Rev. W. Wilson), also to yearn.

Yearn, Genesis xliii, 30; 1 Kings iii, 26; in both cases meaning "were hot."

Blackness, כמדידים, Kimirim (Job iii, 5), "bitterness from," מד.

Chemarims, כמדים, servants or priests (2 Kings xxiii, 5; Hos. x, 5; Zeph. i, 4).

Kindled, כמדו, Kimru (Hos. xi, 8), "made hot."

Ephraim is a cake (or dish) not turned, i.e., scorched, burnt, or blackened (Hos. vii, 8). Therefore כמדי, Kymry.

Thus in Hebrew and Greek and Latin the word has the same meaning. Who so black as God's people who had rebelled against Him? Hence the constant allusion in Scripture to "the people who walked in darkness."

Rabbi David Kimchi, who flourished in the 12th and 13th centuries, one of the most learned Hebrew grammarians and commentators of his time, gives as a reason for the term KYMRY because those priests were robed in black vestments instead of being "arrayed in white linen," as were the priests of the Orthodox Church at Jerusalem.

Dr. Moses Margoliouth, in the Hebrew Christian Witness, October, 1877: "The appellation KYMRY is no more 'true-born English' than is the term GÆL, or Welsh. The nomenclature of both owe their true birth to a parentage and a country far more ancient than those who are called British or English, whatever these terms may mean, whether what we call GÆLIC, KELTIC, KYMRY, or ENGLISH. All those languages known by the nomenclature which I have just enumerated, as we have them now, consist of a 'jumble' and 'mixture of all kinds.' But those two terms, GÆL (which means WÆL and the Welsh) and KYMRY (which by the Greeks became Kimmerioi, amongst the Teutons Kimbri, and Latinized into Cambria) are of purely Hebrew birth. . . . . KYMRO, in the same language, means a priest of an idolatrous system. Analyses of Oriental archæological fragments, now in the British Museum, led me to conclude that the term KYMRO, priest of an idolatrous system, was closely allied to the name OMRI, the notorious King of Israel, who consummated the idolatrous system amongst the Ten Tribes who seceded from the House of Jacob."

Dr. Margoliouth might have said that Brit-ish and Engl-ish are clearly derived from Hebrew also, the former "The Man of the Covenant," the latter "The Man of the Calf." The words Ga-el and Bel-goe are also Goi-el and Bel-goi, both names signifying "The Nation of God."

We have thus given evidence to show that all the ancient names of our first settlers were derived from Hebrew. The Ligure has for its root לצג, laugh,* rendered stammering in Isaiah xxviii, 11, "With stammering (mocking, scornful, barbarous) lips and another tongue will I speak unto this people," Israel. In Brito-Lagœ we have Israel, or the covenant people who scorned God's covenant.

Tracing the Way-paths.

From the north-west of the Cimmerian (Black) Sea we trace the Brito-Lagœ, Briton-Ligure, into Italy, the first kingdom of the Britanni being in the south of Italy (Ritson's Celts), the Ligurian in the north-west. "The great nation of the Ligures,† or Lyges, extended from the Arno to the mouths of the Rhone, and in an earlier age as far west as Iberia; those west of the Maritime Alps were called Gallo-Ligyes" (Ancient Geography). We next hear the name Briton in Iberia (Spain) as Eburo-Britium (the Hebrew-Briton). The Ligure goes north into Gaul (France), and the northern part of France becomes Liguria, the Loire being anciently the Ligur. The Rhone in ancient time was called Rho-Danus. The Pict came along with these and gave his name to Poictiers; close by is Ebur-Danus. As also Paris from Troy; and the Parisini was one of the tribes of Ancient Britain. There were seven nations of Britanni on the north-west coast of Europe, as proved by monumental inscriptions (cir. A.D. 80). Denmark's original name was Brittia, and her people Brittones finally came into Britain. Denmark was also called Jutland, as it was supposed that Jews (sic) of the tribe of Dan settled there.‡ Others say G—tland, from Goth.

From Origines Celtica we cull (p. 49): "The fortunes of the Cimbri, after they had reached the Western Ocean, are not difficult to follow. From Jutland a line of salt marshes run southward to the Somme. As far back as history reaches—that is, as far back as the fourth century B.C., when Ephorus flourished—we find the ocean eating its way into these marshes; and millions of acres must have been swallowed up before its inroads were checked by the industry of man. On these rich but treacherous netherlands the Cimbri appeared to have multiplied, and to have sent forth their teeming multitudes into Britain and southward along the coast to Gaul."

* לצג to mock, to deride, sneer, scorn (Isa. xxviii, 11; xxxiii, 19). Der Gothic Llahagan, Engl. Laugh.

† Consult Latham and Pritchard on the ethnology of this people; it seems they derived their name from Greece (say Thrace) and were Kelt and Iberian; they linked the two anyhow.

‡ See Vetus Chronicon Holsatiæ, "Race Amalgamation," infra 141.

He goes on to show that these were Celtic, and then : " But there was another race of people, which seems to have preceded them in the migration westward, though they found a country to settle in before they reached the Atlantic. The name Iberes does not occur in Greek literature before the times of Herodotus, but the people who bore it were probably settled on the western shores of the Mediterranean more than a thousand years previously."

The name Iberes is found mixed up with that of a people whom the Romans called Ligures, and the Greeks, according to a well-known letter-change, the Ligues. The fortunes of the two races have been strangely blended for more than 3,000 years. (Iberus from Heber.—L. G. A. R.).

Scylax commences his coast survey at the Straits and passes thence eastward along the coast of Spain. He tells us : " After the Iberes follow the Ligues and the mixed Iberes, as far as the River Rhone. . . . If from the basin of the Ebro we pass to the opposite corner of the peninsula, we find traces of Ligurian occupation.

" We must not suppose that the migrations of the Kimmerioi and of the Ligures can be separated from each other. . . . The Ligurian Celts called themselves all through their tribes Ambrones, with which in all probability the name Umbr-i is connected.

" The Ligurian races overspread the plains of the Upper Danube, penetrated over the Julian Alps into Italy, and pushed their way westward to the Pyrenees, and finally into Spain. . . . We have spoken of the Umbri, but these were doubtless other waves of Celtic immigration which poured into Italy from the Euxine, and brought with them disturbing influences. Among the latest of these immigrants were the Veneti.

" The Henetoi, or, as the Latins called them, the Veneti, dwelt, according to Hecatœus, on the Amisene Bay (Strabo xii, 3, 28, p. 553). In a note by Eustathius on Dion Perieg (378) occurs the passage : ' Arrian says the Enetoi, having suffered in war against the Assurioi, and having passed away into Europe, are called up to the present time Benetoi (Veneti) instead of Enetoi,' etc. As Arrian was not only a very eminent writer, but also a native of Bithynia, his statement on this subject is entitled to great weight, and I have little doubt is substantially correct. The story of the Veneti traversing Thrace under the conduct of Agenor on their journey westward from Troy, is the shape we might expect the tale to take.

" When the Henetoi were expelled from Asia we are not told, but I think we may infer from the statement in Arrian that their expulsion was one of the results that followed the campaigns of Esarhaddon in the seventh century B.C.

" The Veneti of the Adriatic were, there is little doubt, the proper representatives of the Henetoi of Asia.

" The Veneti of Gaul were settled at the mouth of the Loire, on the shores of an inland piece of water, now called the Morbihan, a little sea. Both the district and its capital are called Gwened by the modern Bretons, and the French name, Vannes, still shows traces of the classical name Veneti. Gwynedd is also the Welsh name for North Wales, which borders on the Menai, and to have been used with a wider meaning as the princes of the district extended their territory.

" Here, then, are three names which only differ from each other by letter-changes which admit of an easy explanation, and the places they represent all lie beside sheltered waters—the town of the Henetoi in the Amisene Bay, the Breton Gwened on the Morbihan, and the Welsh Gwynedd on the Menai.

" The testimony of Ephorus, based probably on the reports of the Phœnician traders, shows us that two or three centuries before the irruption which drove out the Kimbroi, the ocean had been sweeping away low driftlands on which they dwelt. . . . For more than 2,000 years it has now been eating into the land and obliterating the landmarks of history. Whence originates the altered action that led to these results? A sinking, or it may be repeated sinkings, of the sea-bottom would account for this revolution, and such an hypothesis would be quite consistent with recent observations. If we adopt it, the date may be comparatively recent when Britain was separated from the mainland of Europe."

The same author, in Vol. II, helps us much in our research.

" The Brython.—According to Parthenius (Erotica, c. 30), Herakles, as he was passing through the country of the Keltoi, visited Bretannos, who had a daughter named Keltine. This daughter fell in love with Herakles, and had by him a son named Keltos, from whom the Keltoi received their name.

" The Brython . . . became acquainted with the Tyrian Herakles, or, in other words, with the Phœnician traders, etc.

" I think we may infer that the Bretanni and Cimbri were merely different names for the same people.

" Pretamid . . . . Prydain . . . Pretanik . . . . Brettia. The Brittani and Brittons are the same people.

" One of the most important of the British tribes were the Brigantes.

" Strabo used the word Keltoskuthia (II, vi, 2), Keltoi, or Iberes . . . Keltiberes or Keltoskuthai.

" The Scots were descended from the Scythœ, and they came to Ireland from Spain.

" A Scythian prince had married a daughter of Pharaoh before he was expelled from Egypt. Her name was Scotta, and from her the Scots obtained their name."

Homer . . . . in the word Κασσιτερος (= tin) we have undoubtedly a word of Celtic origin, which appears in the names of many tribes of the Gadhelic branch of the Celtic family (e.g., Cassi-gnato-s, Cassi-marœ, Bodio-casses, Vidu-casses, etc.).

Himilco, a Carthaginian explorer, made a voyage round the west coast of Europe, and explored as far as Britain and Ireland about 500 B.C.

Pytheas, about the time of the death of Aristotle (322 B.C.), Pytheas of Marseilles, sailed round the coast of Spain along the western seaboard of France, reached and explored the island of Britain, visited the north of Scotland, and sailed along the coasts of the Baltic.

Speaking of all Spain save Pyranean Mountain :

" But though it may be sailed round, yet the inhabitants only navigate the Tyrrhone Sea as far as Hercules Pillars, forbearing the west and northern parts unless they are carried to Britain with the tide which sets that way only half a day."

We have culled these extracts in order to prove our contention of the high probability of the colonizing propensity which we know to have been the especial gift of the Hebrew race having free vent, and showing how, led from point to point, they at length arrived in the British Isles, some through the Continent of Europe and others by sea. In the time of Solomon we are assured from monumental evidence that the Hebrews were in Spain. These inscriptions in Hebrew were found at Murviedro (Anc. Segontium), and contained the record of the epitaph to Adoniram, the collector of Solomon's tribute ; and also another to a prince of the House of Judah in the reign of Amaziah (Villalpando, Ezekiel). This name Segontium occurs twice in Britain.

From here, then, they presumably first came into contact with the Assyrians. Preface : " When I considered what Leland writeth of the British or Welsh language, namely, that the main body of it consisteth of Hebrew and Greek words, I began to collect with myself, how it should come to pass that the Ancient Britons should have any commerce with the Jews, who were never known to have sent out colonies, and of all people in the world were most fond of their own country ; certainly, I concluded, this could proceed from no other root but the commerce of the Phœnicians with this nation, who, using the same language with the children of Israel in Canaan, even in this primitive time were great traders and skilful mariners, and sent out their colonies through all the world."

This is a remarkable testimony, and added to Canon Lyson's, who finds 5,000 Hebrew roots in the English tongue (Our British Ancestors), and Poste's Gaulish and British Coins says 6,000, whereas Barber's Suggestions on the Ancient Britons, 1864, is filled with Hebrew, and calls the Cymry " The People of Jehovah," the " Hunted Hebrews," etc., etc.

William Tyndale, who gave us our English translation of the Bible, says : " The English agreeth one thousand times more with the Hebrew than the Latin or the Greek." And anyone can verify for himself the idiomatic structure of the two languages, Hebrew and English, by arranging any Hebrew text and placing under it its equivalent rendering. In no other language than these, cognate with our own, will it read sense right off. The German and the Latin verb is often a long way separated from the noun.

ISRAEL IN THE NEW TESTAMENT.—II.

BY F. S. DOBBS.

As another proof that Israel has been cast off, we are often referred by theologians to the following words in Rom. ix, 30-32, R.V. : " What shall we say then? That the Gentiles which followed not after righteousness have attained to righteousness, even the righteousness that is of faith. But Israel following after the law of righteousness did not arrive at that law. Wherefore? Because they sought it not by faith but as it were by works." In reality there is no passage in the Bible more favourable to our views. The Israel that did not attain unto righteousness was the Israel following after the Law and seeking justification by works, that is Jewish Israel. But there was another Israel which had refused to follow after the Law, and in consequence had been divorced from it and turned into " not God's people " or Gentiles. (Hos. i, 9.) So that God said of Ephraim " he is joined to idols, let him alone." (Hos. iv, 17.) This Ephraim-Israel is not referred to in the words, " but Israel following after a law of righteousness did not arrive at that law." In Eph. ii Paul speaks of them as Gentiles who, though nationally Hebrews, had been alienated or exiled from the Commonwealth of Israel and made strangers from the Covenant of promise, but now were brought back by the Blood of Christ. And Peter says, when addressing " the elect " or chosen race " who are sojourners of the Dispersion," that is, " the twelve tribes scattered abroad " (Jas. i, 1), " For ye were as sheep going astray but are now returned unto the Shepherd and Overseer of your souls " (1 Peter ii, 25). Gentiles could not return to where they had never been before. It was to them without a shadow of doubt that Paul turned when the Jews rejected his teaching, and it was among them that the " remnant " (Rom. xi. 5) was to be found, just as the 7,000 persons that had not bowed the knee to Baal in the time of Elijah belonged to Israel, not Judah.

It is evident that when Paul uses the words " they stumbled at the stone of stumbling," R.V. (Rom. ix, 32), he referred to the Jews, yet this verse in conjunction with Isaiah viii, 14 and I Peter ii, 8-10 (both of which we shall consider presently) is declared by commentators to prove that the Saviour had to become a stone of stumbling to both the Houses of Israel, and that therefore it is not only illogical but unscriptural to maintain that Israel could be a Christian nation when the Jews are not. Let us now examine the passages mentioned. " And He shall be for a sanctuary, but for a stone of stumbling, and for a rock of offence to both the Houses of Israel." R.V. (Isa. viii, 14.) This may mean that God will be both a sanctuary and rock of offence to both Houses of Israel—an incongruous combination. Or it may mean a sanctuary to the one and a stone of stumbling to the other. But the Bible always explains itself, and to help us to decide which of these is correct let us read Ezek. xi, 16, where God, when speaking to the House of Israel, uses the following words : " Although I have cast them far off among the heathen, and although I have scattered them among the countries, yet will I be to them as a little sanctuary in the countries where they shall come." Now let us read I Peter ii, 7-8, addressed as we have seen to the House of Israel scattered abroad. " Unto you therefore which believe He is precious ; but unto them which be disobedient " (the Jews) He is " a stone of stumbling and a rock of offence even to them which stumble at the Word, being disobedient ; whereunto also they were appointed." From these verses it is evident the prophets foresaw that Jewish-Israel would reject Christ, whereas Ephraim-Israel would accept Him, and Josephus relates that actually the Benjamites of Galilee accepted Christ practically to a man, whereas only a very few Jews of Judea believed on Him.

There is another point worth considering. Simeon, we are told, " waited for the consolation of Israel and the Holy Ghost was upon him." (Luke ii, 25.) What consolation could the Advent bring to Israel if it only heralded national degradation for two thousand years? Again Jesus said : " Abraham rejoiced to see My day : and he saw it, and was glad." (John viii, 56.) Why should he thus rejoice if it only meant the usurpation by the Gentiles of all promises that had been made to his posterity? Certainly no consolation accrued to the Jews from Christ's Coming, therefore these passages must refer to Israel.

Now let us read Gal. iii, 7, R.V., another insurmountable British-Israel difficulty according to Bible experts : " Know therefore that they which be of faith the same are sons of Abraham," and again, Rom. ix. 7-8, R.V., " In Isaac shall thy seed be called. That is, it is not the children of the flesh that are children of God, but the children of the promise are reckoned for a seed." From these passages the commentators take it for granted that Abraham's real children are spiritual children, and that his lawful heirs are of a spiritual nature. There is, however, a great difference between " a seed " and " the seed." Gentile Christians may be " a seed," but nowhere in the New Testament are they substituted for " the seed." They are heirs according to promise, but not heirs of the promises. Now what is the special promise referred to by Paul on several occasions to which the Gentiles may claim heirship? It is this : " In thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." (Gen. xxii, 18.) " So then they which be of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham " (Gal. iii, 9) " that upon the Gentiles might come the blessing of Abraham in Christ Jesus ; that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith." (Gal. iii, 14.) So it is evident that the blessings flowing to the Gentile world are of a purely spiritual character, and the birthright blessings bestowed on national Israel can never be taken away from her. The spiritualisers wax disdainful at the latter assertion and exclaim " those are very secondary things, the Church has a vastly superior inheritance to that ! " At the same time, strange to say, the Church has appropriated all these birthright blessings after giving to them a spiritual meaning. Many of them, however, cannot be spiritualised. It was said that Israel should rule over many nations. (Gen. xxvii, 29.) Do Christians as such rule over nations? It was foretold that she should lend money to many nations but not borrow. (Deut. xxviii, 12.) Do Christians never borrow, and are they particularly fond of lending? She was to increase like fishes in the midst of the earth. (Gen. xlviii, 16, margin.) Do people perform that feat when they embrace the Gospel? No ; it is evident that all such predictions must have a literal fulfilment or none. Those respecting the Saviour were literally accomplished. Those relating to Babylon, Greece and Rome were literally fulfilled. The prophecies concerning the Jews have all come true, and why should we be expected to spiritualise all those that refer to Israel? People must be spiritual to a superlative degree who cannot accept an earthly benefit without branding it as sordid. But does even the most spiritual Christian really dislike these worldly blessings? The fat things of this life may be " carnal," but they are eagerly sought after for all that. The only fault we find with them is not that they are carnal, but that they are so scarce, and what we consider so desirable for the individual cannot be injurious for a nation composed of individuals ! We would strongly recommend our critics not to be more spiritual than God Himself, and to abstain from preaching what they do not practise. Without doubt the object of prophecy is to establish the authenticity of the Scriptures by its fulfilment, and thereby counteract infidelity ; and those who would repress or take away from its literal character are doing all that is in their power to thwart the very purpose for which prophecy was instituted. Each of us would do well to see to it that this serious charge be not laid at his door.

There is but one more point I would like to touch on. In the Epistle to the Hebrews the writer gives us the following striking warning : " Looking carefully lest there be any fornicator or profane person as Esau, who for one morsel of meat sold his birthright." (Heb. xii, 15-16.) What was this birthright blessing that Esau lost so irrevocably just because he undervalued it? We find it clearly stated in Isaac's reply to the piteous cry of Esau : " Hast thou not reserved a blessing for me, oh my father? " It is this : " Behold I have made him thy lord, and all his brethren have I given to him for servants ; and with corn and wine have I sustained him, and what shall I do unto thee, my son? " Theologians would have us believe that these words have a purely spiritual significance, but this surely cannot be. Esau's sin consisted in despising this promise of earthly supremacy, and thus insulting the Giver of it, and the gravity of his offence is suggested by its being classed in the inspired Word with the sin of fornication. The result of Esau's act was that the birthright blessing passed from Isaac through Jacob, Joseph and Ephraim to the whole House of Israel, but this passage in Hebrews intimates, I think, that it is in the hands of each individual of that nation to accept it or to reject it even as Esau did. Dr. Bullinger in his famous Lexicon gives the meaning of βέβηλος, the word here translated "profane," as "uninitiated"; but his ignorance did not save Esau from the permanent consequences of his act (Heb. xii, 17), nor will it exonerate those who, being racially Israelites, despise God's promises of special blessing to that nation. If the individual loss incurred by so doing were not considerable, why should we be given such a solemn warning not to follow Esau's example?

Is it not a glorious thought for us British-Israelites that every one of us as such may actually claim as our birthright all the wonderful promises of worldly prosperity to be found in the Old Testament, as well as the gracious announcement, "Who healeth all thy diseases" (Ps. ciii, 3); also unlimited spiritual power inherited with our name so that we may even strive with God and prevail (Gen. xxxii, 28), always provided that we keep God's Commandments (1 John iii, 22) and regard not iniquity in our hearts (Ps. lxvi, 18)?

THE RESTORATION OF ISRAEL.

By J. Llewellyn Thomas, F.R.C.S.

I.

In considering this subject it is important to know in advance what we exactly mean by the terms "Restoration" and "Israel." It is possible to assign to them, quite correctly, more than one meaning. The word "Restoration" is open, as we shall see, to two meanings, and the same remark applies with even greater force to the term "Israel." Whom do we mean by "Israel"? Let us at once state that the name is used here in its usual, particular and limited sense of Israel of the Ten Tribes, the Ten-Tribed northern kingdom of Israel, and does not include the Jewish kingdom of Judah in the south of Palestine.

The two kingdoms of Israel and Judah began their independent existence in 975 B.C., after the death of Solomon, and they continued to exist side by side, generally in deadly antagonism, for two and a half centuries, at the close of which time the kingdom of Israel was destroyed while the southern, the Jewish kingdom, continued as a realm for nearly another century and a half. This is an important fact. The Jewish kingdom existed more than half as long again as the kingdom of Israel.

The kingdom of Israel lasted 254 years.
The kingdom of Judah lasted 387 years.
The kingdom of Judah was destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar—
153 years after Pul and Tiglath-Pileser's invasion of Israel.
133 years after Shalmanezer and Sargon's invasion of Israel.

Both kingdoms declined from the worship of Jehovah. The declension of Israel was immediate and rapid, and without any respite; whereas Judah, after many revivals of the true faith, finally declined and fell after the reign of the good king Josiah.

Israel's decline began when they cut themselves off completely from the Mosaic religion. The Covenant of the Law ceased, once and for all, to be the state religion of Israel at the very beginning of her independent existence, in the reign of her first king Jeroboam, the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin. The Mosaic Covenant and Ordinances, which had been the religion of the chosen race up to that time, thenceforward remained the religion of the southern section only of that race, i.e., of Judah, with the result that it has in later times become customary to speak of the religion of the chosen race as "Judaism."

As a nation Israel never returned to their former worship even for a brief period. The state religion of the northern kingdom was the worship of the Golden Calves. How completely Israel broke away from the Covenant of the Law is perhaps not sufficiently appreciated. The people of Judah, who later were called Jews, in spite of all their backsliding, never in the same way nationally repudiated Mosaicism.

Punishment Foretold.

It was well understood by both Israel and Judah that swift retribution and chastisement would be meted out to them if they forsook their God and served the false gods of the surrounding heathen. They knew full well the awful predictions of judgment connected with the Covenant which Jehovah made with them at Sinai in Horeb.

Foretold by Moses.

Moses, the great lawgiver, and the leader of the Twelve Tribes from Egypt, had pronounced the dread curses that were to fall upon the Covenant-breakers and the disobedient. At Sinai the united nation had entered into a contract with God, a Covenant that was wholly conditional upon obedience. They had undertaken to do certain things and walk in obedience to God's laws; and God on His part was graciously pledged to perform certain things for them. This was the Mosaic Covenant. It was no part of the everlasting Abrahamic Covenant, it was no part of "the Promises made to the Fathers." The Abrahamic Covenant Promises were wholly unconditional. This "Old," Mosaic Covenant had not been made with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, but with their seed centuries later at Horeb.

> The Lord our God made a Covenant with us in Horeb. The Lord made not this Covenant with our Fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day (Deut. v, 2, 3).

It was this temporary Mosaic Covenant that Israel nationally renounced. It was this Covenant that contained the s vere penal clauses for disobedience and the breaking of the terms of the contract.

The great Punishment was known as that of the "Seven Times," and is recorded in Leviticus xxvi, where it is repeated four times, in verses 18, 21, 24 and 28, where God says He will punish or chasten His people "Seven Times."

This "Seven Times" remained for long ages a mysterious and unsolved measure of chastisement. It was undetermined in Old Testament times. Only in quite modern days has it been possible to gauge its precise meaning. Students of Prophecy are now agreed that it denotes a period of 2,520 years, an age-long punishment indeed!

The kingdom of Israel was the recipient of many warnings from God at the mouth of His servants the prophets.

Foretold by Hosea.

The prophet Hosea, one of the earliest of the prophets, was a man of Judah, but his commission was not to the people of Judah, for it was confined to the house of Israel. He stood forth before the guilty kingdom and gave utterance to prophetic words of stupendous import to its people, wholly apart from and independently of the people of Judah. What he foretold was punishment severe indeed, and it indicated the fierce anger of God against His rebellious people. Under the three names of Jezreel, Lo-Ruhamah, Lo-Ammi, the Divine sentence upon this guilty people was declared. Its meaning in plain words was this:

1. God would cause to cease the kingdom of the house of Israel (Hos. i. 4).
2. God would no more have mercy upon the house of Israel (Hos. i, 6).
3. God would not be their God and they should not be His people (Hos. i, 9).

Terrible was this dread sentence that fell upon Israel of the northern kingdom, but it had no reference whatever to Judah.

Hosea, even as Moses had done, made a mysterious utterance concerning this coming punishment. He speaks of it as extending into a "Third Day."

After two days will He revive us: in the third day He will raise us up, and we shall live in His sight (Hos. vi, 2).

These "Three Days," as did the "Seven Times," remained for long ages an unsolved measure of punishment, but in the present day the meaning of it is recognized with precision.

THE PUNISHMENT EXECUTED.

The Empire of Assyria was the destined instrument for the execution of the Divine sentence upon the rebellious house of Israel.

The blow did not fall in one single overwhelming stroke, but at least in two and possibly three stages, of which the second was the death-blow to the kingdom. It did not take place at one single date but extended over a period of years. Isaiah the prophet in the opening days of this epoch, 741 B.C., definitely foretold that within sixty-five years Israel should cease to be a people.

Thus saith the Lord God . . . within three score and five years shall Ephraim be broken, that it be not a people (Isa. vii, 7, 8).

The first phase of the Captivity took place in the days of the emperors Pul and Tiglath-Pileser, in 741 B.C., evidently in two distinct campaigns. But grievous as these were they did not terminate the existence of the kingdom. Yet another twenty years elapsed before the end occurred. Samaria, after a siege of three years by Shalmanezer, fell in 721 B.C. This is the crucial date of the Captivity Era of Israel. Since the beginning of the Captivity was not one single date but was spread over a period of years, known as the "Captivity Era," it is reasonable to conclude that the ending of the Captivity will not be a single date, but a corresponding epoch of years, or the "Terminal Era." Further, in the light of Isaiah's prophecy quoted above, it is certain that the Captivity Era could not be more than sixty-five years.

After these invasions the cities and territories of Israel were emptied of their inhabitants, and were at once filled up and repeopled by foreigners, who themselves were captives of Assyria from other regions. Thus the whole of Israel's land was populated by a foreign element, whose descendants, known as Samaritans, occupied a large portion of it in the time of our Lord.

The captive Israelites on each occasion were taken away to Assyria and placed in the regions of Hala and Habor by the river of Gozan. This country to-day is more or less the region of Armenia, to the south-west of the Caspian Sea. It is in this region that Bible history leaves these Israelites. Bible prophecy, however, does not leave them there, but makes them travel far. Therefore the place where Israel was "lost" is the one place where they should not be found. The Apocrypha traces their history a stage further than the Bible does, for we learn from Esdras (2 Esdras xiii, 40) that the main body of these captives migrated to a distant land called Ar-Sareth, which is in Europe, in the south-west of Russia, and is more or less represented to-day by the Ukraine. This is a notable fact and should not be forgotten. This migration took place while the kingdom of Judah was still in existence. It occurred about 650 B.C., which, it is well to bear in mind, was some sixty or seventy years before the destruction of Jerusalem, nearly 150 years before the Jews returned to Palestine from their captivity in Babylon.

THE RESTORATION FORETOLD.

We have now, very briefly but sufficiently for our purpose considered the foretelling and the execution of Israel's punishment. Most of it is well known. What is not so fully appreciated is the fact that to this captive people, most of whom were then in Europe, were made by the mouth of God's prophets most gracious and magnificent promises of a future Restoration. These promises were to the captive Israelites and not to the Jewish kingdom, nor to the later kingdomless Jews in Palestine after the return from Babylon. Many of these promises are quite wrongly applied to the Jews. The result is confusion, for, not being made to Judah, they very naturally do not fit them, nor do they depict their condition—all this to the great delight of the ungodly and the infidel, and to the surprise, confusion, and distress of the believer, who in consequence must seek for an explanation in various quite needless theories.

Many are the details foretold of this Restoration. If the prophecies concerning the Punishment were explicit, no less so were those dealing with the Restoration.

Restoration Guaranteed.

Restoration was guaranteed on the word of the Living God. The prophets were fully persuaded of its future accomplishment. With one mouth they testify to the coming mercy and favour of God, to the coming Redemption of Israel nationally, and to the splendour of the recovery of this people. They were unanimous that the terrible doom pronounced upon Israel was not everlasting, but that it had a determined end.

THE TWO RESTORATIONS OF ISRAEL.

At the beginning of this chapter it was suggested that the word "Restoration" might have more than one meaning. It might refer to more than one event. It is not commonly known that two distinct Restorations of the Ten-Tribed Israel are spoken of in the Bible. There are to be two distinct gatherings of that nation.

And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall set His hand again the second time to recover the remnant of His people, which shall be left, from Assyria, and from Egypt, and from Pathros, and from Cush, and from Elam, and from Shinar, and from Hamath, and from the islands of the sea. And He shall set up an ensign for the nations, and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth (Isa. xi, 11, 12).

It is evident that there are to be two gatherings or two Restorations. The above passage speaks of a second, the Final and Great Restoration of the two houses of Israel and Judah into the land promised to their fathers. But before this takes place there is to be a first or Prior gathering and Restoration of Israel alone. These are two, and quite distinct, propositions.

The First or Preliminary Restoration is that of Israel apart from Judah (the Jews) into some land, which is not Palestine, into which they are to come after their great dispersion and wanderings from sea to sea.

The Second or Final Restoration is the gathering of Israel of the Ten Tribes together with Judah into the Promised Land, to begin their endless occupation of it. These two Restorations need to be kept distinctly in mind and should not be confused as one single event.

Some authorities assure us that there is nothing in the Scriptures to warrant the view that there is any Restoration of Israel to blessing—

(a) Apart from Judah, or

(b) Apart from the land of Palestine.

Thus, one teacher writes :

"There is so much prophetic Scripture which associates the fulfilment of promised blessing to Israel with the Restoration of the Covenant-granted land, and with the reunion of the separated kingdoms of Israel and Judah, that it is justifiable inference to say that there can be no enjoyment on the part of Israel of the fulness of blessing as defined and guaranteed by Divine Counsel and declaration, except as and when the above conditions are realized."

There is indeed a mass of Scripture describing the (Final) Restoration of Israel to "fulness of blessing" associated with the Jews and with Palestine. But that is no proof that there are no passages emphasizing a Preliminary Restoration of Israel to blessings of great magnitude apart from the Jews and in some land other than Palestine. Therefore "the inference" in the above quotation is not "justifiable." References to a Final Restoration, however numerous, do not disprove or nullify definite references to a Prior Restoration. In future articles we hope to make it clear that such a Preliminary Restoration is foretold for Israel. All are agreed as to the Final Restoration : but not all have recognized the Preliminary (and lesser if you will) Restoration which is of supreme significance in the counsel and purposes of God.

It was stated above that this Restoration of Israel was given by the prophets with a wealth of detail. By a careful study it is possible to discover the following important points—

1. The Time of Israel's Restoration can be definitely dated.
2. The Place of Israel's Restoration can be located.
3. The Religion of Israel's Restoration can be intimated in clear terms.
4. The Population of Israel at her Restoration is mentioned.

The investigation of these points will form the subject of future articles.

A GREAT ADVANCE.

OUR PLANS FOR 1930.

BY J. J. MOREY, Commissioners' Secretary.

WE believe that some knowledge of this Movement has reached every town and district in Great Britain. Our adherents and readers are found in every grade of society, and our correspondence comes from all corners of the Empire, and from many quarters of the world.

The demand for lectures is now so heavy that our staff of lecturers is inadequate to meet the pressing demand.

We have decided, therefore, to inaugurate a scheme whereby we may enlist the valuable help of

AN ARMY OF VOLUNTARY WORKERS.

We propose to establish everywhere British-Israel Study Circles for the systematic study of our subject as found in the Scriptures, and as expounded in our published literature.

We desire to organize these Study Circles on the following plan :—

1. Existing Branches.—We suggest that members of our existing Branches should establish Circles in all the suburbs of their towns and cities, and in all the surrounding villages where suitable homes can be found.

Two members should become Leader and Secretary of a new Circle ; all friends and neighbours should be invited to join, and it will be found that in this way the scope and influence of the Branch will be rapidly extended and increased.

It is not enough that we should attend lectures year after year for our own enjoyment.

Around us are thousands anxious to know the Truth ; the times are chaotic and difficult, and if we stir ourselves we can become centres of enlightenment and help.

When the area served by a Branch is thus organized, the success of central meetings is assured, and the Movement will gather strength by its own momentum. New converts soon become new missionaries.

2. Individual Readers.—In addition to members of Branches there are thousands of individual believers who can establish Circles in their own homes, and who are fully qualified to lead them. If our readers will but follow our suggestions we shall soon have a B.-I. centre in every parish. There is room for 100 Circles in the London area alone, and we are sure many of our devoted friends will gladly seize this opportunity for practical service. Read carefully the suggestions we give, and take the initial step at once.

We appeal for

before the end of 1930, and we believe this to be a real possibility.

Readers Overseas may follow the same plan. The world is small, and they may keep in touch with us by post in exactly the same manner as those in the Motherland. It is not our wish that the proposed Circles should consist mainly of existing believers. This would not answer the purpose of our appeal.

We suggest that two or three believers should gather their friends and neighbours together, and by this means double and treble the number of our adherents. Instead of joining a Circle already planned, endeavour to form a Circle of your own. The groups may be small at first, but they will grow, and the interest will ensure real progress. Who knows what the result may be? Just think. Suppose a Study Circle could be formed in the home of every B.-I. family; in a short time the whole nation would be aroused.

Each Circle must be a centre for the dissemination of our literature. The printed word is already more effective than the spoken word could ever be. Send out our books and pamphlets. Give them as presents to your friends. Avail yourselves of our offers of free literature. Do scatter the good news, and give our publications a chance to tell their story.

The Secretary of the Covenant Publishing Co. has prepared a Circular setting forth various schemes by which Study Circles can be supplied with the necessary text-books and with general B.-I. literature on easy and advantageous terms, so that each member may without difficulty procure the text-book and be enabled to fall in with the method proposed. This Circular will be sent to all readers who decide to form Circles.

Here are

SOME PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS for the formation of Study Circles.

1. Appoint a Leader and Secretary to manage the Circle.

2. Select a suitable text-book for systematic reading and study. Each member to procure a copy. We will recommend suitable text-books. Keep the Bible in the forefront always.

3. Each member is expected to take THE NATIONAL MESSAGE (2d. weekly) and the B.-I. CRUSADER (1d. monthly). Some time should be spent at each meeting in conversation and exposition concerning the articles contained in these publications. This is most important, for we know that these papers are doing untold service in spreading the Truth. Supplies of these can be sent in bulk weekly to the Leader or Secretary, payment being made monthly or quarterly, as arranged. Most Circles will order extra copies for free distribution amongst friends who are invited to join the Circles.

4. Hold the meetings weekly or fortnightly. Monthly meetings are not sufficient.

5. Open and close the meetings with prayer. Pray regularly for the King, the Empire, the restoration of Bible Truth, and for this Movement. Become a Prayer Circle as well as a Study Circle. Forms of prayer will be provided for those who desire them.

6. A Federation Collecting Box will be supplied to each Circle for thankofferings. There should be no fixed subscription. The fund so raised will be devoted to the spread of our Truth by the appointment of additional lecturers, so that the Circles may have proper supervision and help. These thankofferings should be remitted to Headquarters in June and December of each year.

7. Keep in touch with us, and with your Area Commissioner, whose address we will send you. Tell us all your difficulties. Act readily on the information given on this page from week to week. We have not time to answer hundreds of individual letters, so we shall try to meet your requirements in these columns.

8. Be enthusiastic. The end of the age is upon us, and we must act now. We have the great Message for to-day, and we are launching this plan of making it known because our present methods are too restricted. Will you help? You will enjoy it, and will find power. You will also be richly rewarded for any sacrifice you may make. We shall report progress from week to week.

Write to-day telling us that you will adopt this scheme.

This proposal has the full approval of the President and Executive of the Federation.

Any donations towards the cost of this Forward Movement will be gratefully received and acknowledged.

All communications on this matter should be addressed as follows:—

THE JEWS RETURNING TO PALESTINE AS ONE TRIBE ONLY.

BY DANIEL FARMER.

MARTIN LUTHER said "Distinguish between the dispensations and the Scriptures will harmonize." True! Also distinguish between the two sections of the only nation ever chosen by God, and the great scheme of world redemption will be clearly seen.

One of the most distinctly stated historical facts recorded in God's Word is that Israel and Judah, after the division of 1 Kings xii, were used for different ends, and had separate destinies. In the words of Psalm cxiv, 2: "Judah was God's sanctuary, Israel His dominion." The Royal line was of Judah (Gen. xlix, 10), also the Temple services and the custody of the Holy Oracles remained with this tribe. (Rom. iii, 1, 2.) But the "birthright," which included the dominion, was given to Joseph (1 Ch. v, 2), and later to Joseph's two sons, Ephraim and Manasseh. (Gen. xlviii and xlix.) David reigned seven years over Judah before he became King of all Israel. (2 Sam. v, 5.)

After the division in the reign of Rehoboam (1 Kings xii) Samaria became the capital of the northern ten-tribed House of Israel, whilst Jerusalem was the capital of the two-tribed House of Judah. Nineteen kings reigned over the House of Israel before its deportation into Assyria by Shalmaneser, 721 B.C. (2 Kings xvii), not one of these monarchs being of David's line. Nineteen kings and one queen reigned over the House of Judah before Nebuchadnezzar carried it captive to Babylon in 586 B.C. (2 Kings xxiv and xxv), all these sovereigns being of the Davidic dynasty.

At the time of the division Rehoboam was forbidden by God to use force to heal the breach in the words: "For this thing is from Me" (1 Kings xii, 24), nor could Hezekiah, later on, reunite them. Here, then, is evidently some part of the scheme in the Divine mind. It was God's desire that the whole nation in its twelve-tribe entirety should be by its position and conduct His national witness to all the Gentile peoples—but because of wilful disobedience and persistent idolatry, He divided it into two parts. "Known unto God are all His works from the beginning of the world." (Acts xv, 18.) As we follow the history of this people we find that the House of Israel was rooted up out of the land, carried to the neighbourhood of the cities of the Medes, sifted among the nations, almost, if not completely, losing its identity, led Westward in its emigrations, and eventually, in its main part, reaching these Isles, as foretold in 2 Sam. vii, 10; (Jeremiah xxxi) to whom Isaiah addresses his message as "Israel in the Isles." God never leaves Himself without a witness, and when the House of Judah, the Jews, rejected His Son, the Kingdom of God, that is the National witness, was transferred to "another nation," as our Lord warned them in Matthew xxi, 43. Who was that nation? Certainly not Pagan Rome, nor to the Christian Church as many suppose, for the Church is a spiritual cosmopolitan company (Rev. v, 9), without geographical boundary, political status, or governmental authority. Nor was it given to the Church of Rome, as she claims; very far from it, as she will find in the near future; rather, in the words of Dean Pryce: "In this distant corner of the earth, cut off from the rest of the world, a people were being prepared for the Lord."

That nation was the ten-tribed Race,
By God Himself for this prepared (Luke ii, 32),
If Judah should reject His grace (John i, 11),
It should by Israel be declared (Isa. lxv, 15).
Whilst Judah still rejects His Name (Rev. iii, 9),
Britain proclaims Him as the Lord;
And adds to His Almighty fame (Isa. xliii, 10)
By sending everywhere His Word (Psa. lxviii, 11).

WHY NOT?

Does not this Divine foresight commend itself to every thoughtful mind? If the Israel nation in its united form refused to respond to God's desire and purpose, what more likely than that He should break the unity and use the two sections on different lines for the carrying out of His world-wide and age-long designs? Also, what greater honour could we desire or receive than to find ourselves, in this dispensation, the major part of this Divinely-chosen race? (Amos iii, 2). Sir Isaac Newton said: "In all probability at the end of this dispensation God will raise up a body of men to give the Bible a literal interpretation." The British-Israel-World Federation contains many of the most devout and able students of Holy Writ, students who have cleared their minds of what Bishop Hooker rightly described as "the licentious habit of spiritualizing God's Word, which in the end brings all truth to nothing," men who hold and teach that the Bible says what it means and means what it says.

The religious, political, social, national and international signs of to-day undoubtedly indicate the closing in of this age or dispensation. A wider knowledge and outlook is needed. In the Burial Service of the Church of England are the words "That it may please Thee of Thy gracious goodness shortly to accomplish the number of Thine Elect and to hasten Thy Kingdom." The "Church" is the "Inner Circle," but the trains of God's purposes are running on both these systems. The Bible contains the plans of the Almighty set out in spacious and panoramic form. No small number of our religious leaders are like men who examine a hoarding poster by the aid of a microscope. Holy Writ is not a heap of precious stones that each individual may select as he pleases, and dilate upon—it is a mosaic of glorious plan and design, and our real education lies in seeking the Divine guidance in order to piece it together. "Where there is no vision the people perish." Perhaps that is one cause of our depleted congregations. If the Anglo-Saxons are not Israel, then the British Empire has to go down, and the real Israel has to arise, repeat our national history, and return the Jews, as we are doing. Is that at all likely or even possible at this late hour?

The writer often listens to speakers representing the "Prophecy Investigation Society," who hold that Israel is to be restored; but when they begin to handle this subject they go lame on the platform, for all they seem to see are the Jews, and with a very long Jewish leg and a very short Israelitish one they lose the grace of walk, "their legs not being equal." (Prov. xxvi, 7.)

Who are the Jews? Descendants of Judah, the fourth son of Jacob by his wife Leah, for the name "Jew" is Judah shortened, so that it was first a proper name (Gen. xxix, 35); secondly, the name of a tribe (Num. i, 27); thirdly, the name of a kingdom (1 Kings xii, 23); fourthly, that of a religion (Gal. i, 13). Let it be clearly understood that the people generally known as "Jews" are, mainly, the descendants of those who returned from Babylon in the days of Ezra and Nehemiah, and that their Jewish features are not the primitive features of the Jews, but the result of admixture with Edomites and Syrians. The Jews are indeed going back to Palestine, but only as one twelfth of the whole. Also, as the Scripture foretells, they will go back under the direction and protection of Israel (Jer. iii, 18), that is of Britain. Benjamin Disraeli said, "With England, and with England alone, lie the Jewish hopes of Palestine."

In 1920 Max Nordan told a representative of the Evening Standard: "We thought the Messiah would be an individual, but we feel now as if it were a collective entity, and that the name might be the British Nation." The Messiah will indeed be an individual. The Individual, in the final stage of this great drama, but what so many fail to see is that during this interval He is using Israel, not Judah, as the "repairer of the breach, the restorer of paths to dwell in." (Isa. lviii, 12.)

The last king of the Jews was Zedekiah (2 Kings xxiv, 17), and their status as a kingdom will never be restored, as signified by the breaking of the bottle (Jer. xix, 10), whilst the Israel kingdom was marred and re-made (Jer. xviii, 4). Marred by its disobedience and persistent idolatry, it was swept away in 721 B.C. (2 Kings xvii), and re-made in the "appointed place" (2 Sam. vii, 10) under a "new name" (Isa. lxv, 15), for the universal name of all Anglo-Saxons is British—in Hebrew, Brit the Covenant, ish man—a part of the only people God ever entered in covenant with (Amos iii, 2) and brought into this relationship on the ground of the "New Covenant" (Jer. xxxi, 31), which, thus far, Judah, or the Jews, still reject. Another well-known body of Christians think that the Jews are going back as the principal part, and the rest of the tribes are coming from somewhere or everywhere to rejoin them, either just before, or at the beginning of the millennium. But that is contrary to what Scripture indicates, for we read in Deut. xxxiii, 7: "Hear, Lord, the voice of Judah and bring him unto his people." Why hold a belief which not only reverses Holy Writ, but flatly contradicts Euclid, who says: "the lesser is contained in the greater."

On what possible ground do the Jews base their claim—if they really do so—to be the first people in the world? They were severely rebuked in Ezekiel's day for concluding that Israel had lost its claim (xi, 15). Are they the people who for nearly 2,000 years have best promoted the Messiah's "Kingdom," Whom they still generally reject? although, thank God, a spirit of enquiry as to the Person and claims of Christ is moving among them.

It has been forcibly pointed out that as this period of time draws to a close, there are three forces of evil seeking for world dominion. Rome, with its corrupted form of Christianity; Soviet Russia, with its blasphemous derision of Divine revelation; and apostate Judaism, with its abandonment of the Old Testament, and its deadly hatred of the New. They will all three come to grief on this "Stone" Kingdom of Israel-Britain. Papal Rome has been, and will again be, broken on this "Stone" (Matt. xxi, 44). Russia, in its infidel opposition (not the Russian nation) will go down when she meets Israel (Britain) in the great struggle described by Ezekiel in chapters xxxviii and xxxix, whilst apostate and renegade Judaism will yet kneel in confession before the true Israel of God (Rev. iii, 9). Those who fail to see the teaching of Holy Scripture on this subject, and consequently are causing the Jews to entertain false views of the future, are playing into the hands of one of these forces of evil already mentioned. Ezekiel informs us that these two nations shall yet be one (chapter xxxvii, 22), and Hosea how it will come about. "Then shall the children of Judah, and the children of Israel be gathered together, and appoint themselves one head, and they shall come up out of the land (representatively, Jer. iii, 14), for great shall be the day of Jezreel" or "going up" (i, 11).

"O'er Israel's land Thy rainbow, Lord, shall beam
And the sad city lift her crownless head;
Glad songs shall wake and dancing footsteps gleam
On Sharon's plain, now silent as the dead.
The sun shall gild new Salem's marble towers,
In Shechem's vale fair maidens cull sweet flowers,
To deck at blushing eve the festive bowers;
And Angel feet shall glorious Zion tread." (Isa. lxv, 18).

Let us not forget in considering this subject of State and Church that "the holy Seed is the substance thereof."

LECTURE BY MR. G. R. GAIR.

AN interesting lecture on "Archæological evidence that the British are Israelites" was delivered to the Stoke-on-Trent Branch by Mr. G. R. Gair, a research worker in archæology at Edinburgh University. The President of the Branch, Mr. A. Gresham Copeland, presided.

Mr. Gair commenced by discussing the light archæology could throw on early Britain. It was usual for historians to present the ancient Britons as an uncivilized race with brutal and barbaric customs, but archæology showed that they had reached the Iron Age by 750 or 500 B.C. This was definite proof that they were not savages. There were also fine gold and inlaid articles in existence which were made between 200 and 300 B.C.

In the Shetlands there were some towers known as "Brochs," built about A.D. 200, non-Roman but Celtic in construction. After describing these towers, with their elaborate defences, Mr. Gair stated that there was good reason to connect these and other towers with similar buildings in Sardinia, which also showed a possible kinship with forts in Ireland and Cornwall. Thus there was established a definite stream of culture between these Islands and the Mediterranean. The Sardinians could be connected with the overlords of Etruria, the Tyrrheni, who in turn were related to a people of Asia Minor.

STREAM OF CULTURE.

Evidence from Spain and Brittany led one to believe that this stream of culture ran from the Mediterranean to the Shetlands along a trade route; the Picts, many archæologists believed, were one of the greatest commercial nations of their time.

The Hebrews were probably often confused by the ancients with Phœnicians, who spoke a similar tongue. They were traders before the Phœnicians developed their trade. The Picts themselves appeared to have a good knowledge of navigation.

Turning to the question of language, Mr. Gair said that the Celtic tongue had a considerable number of Hebrew roots, and also a substratum of Egyptian and Arabic, and a race had been found in Africa that could understand Gaelic.

Ancient writers spoke well of Britain. Pliny even called the British Isles the "Happy Isles," while others wrote of the commercial enterprise and boldness of the inhabitants.

Folk memory, which always contained a kernel of truth, spoke of an Asiatic origin. Gaelic legend traced an ancestry through Spain and the Eastern Mediterranean, eventually to Palestine. Another tradition pointing in the same direction was the "Chronicles of Eri," which went back to Palestine and an ancestor called Abraham.

Finally Mr. Gair adduced considerable evidence that there were Israelites in Palestine before the Exodus, and said that the "Eri Chronicles" took up the story from this point. It could be proved that the Gothic people, too, were connected with the Israelites, and that there was a Nordic people between the Euphrates and the Nile at one time.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

MEETINGS will be held at Headquarters on March 12th and 13th. Mr. John Leech, K.C., will give another address on "Prophecy" on the Wednesday afternoon, and Mrs. M. Bloxam will give a lecture, illustrated with lantern pictures, entitled "The Journeys of Christ," on Thursday evening, at 8.

The speakers last week were Mr. John Leech and Mr. R. D. Stevens.

The Rev. Pascoe Goard and Mr. Garrison addressed a crowded meeting at Blackheath on February 28th. The Rev. J. Lumley Davies, L.D., presided. Great satisfaction was expressed by those present at what had been put before them, and our local British-Israel friends were greatly encouraged. We are indebted to Mrs. S. Dorsett, the Rev. J. Lumley Davies, Mr. W. A. Jordan, and other friends for their excellent work in organization.

The Rev. Joseph Gay has sailed for America and Canada, and will be attending the All-American Convention at Detroit on May 6th, 7th and 8th, which he will be assisting our Mr. Howard Rand to organize. He will thereafter probably attend the Canadian Conference, which, it is expected, will be held at Winnipeg soon after the Detroit Convention. Great things may be hoped from both the Convention and the Conference, and our readers are asked to pray for the Divine blessing thereon.

The Rev. Pascoe Goard, Mr. John Leech, the Rev. T. H. Whitehouse and Mr. Garrison are at the Town Hall, Leamington, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week; afternoons at 3 and evenings at 8. Mr. Garrison is giving half-time lantern lectures each evening.

The Rev. Pascoe Goard is giving four addresses at the Nether Chapel, Norfolk Street, Sheffield, March 17th and 18th, at 3 and 7.30 p.m.

On Sunday, February 23rd, Mr. J. J. Morey addressed a meeting of seventy young men and women at the London Fields' Fellowship, where deep interest was shown by many who heard of our teaching for the first time.

On the 24th successful meetings were held at Sutton, where steady progress is being made. On the 25th Mr. Morey addressed two meetings of the newly-formed Branch at Deal, and most encouraging signs are evident.

On the 26th the Heene Rooms at Worthing were too small to accommodate the audiences that gathered to hear Mr. Morey's lectures.

On the 27th the Bexhill Branch held two public meetings, which were very successful and largely attended, and on the 28th the newly-formed Branch at Sevenoaks held meetings in the Public Hall at the Lime Tree Hotel. Everywhere in the South of England increasing interest is shown and new movements are springing up in all parts of the Area.

The Rev. G. W. Plasting visited Southport Branch on February 24th, giving a fine address on "The Throne and the People," great appreciation being shown. Mr. Plasting also gave this most instructive and interesting address at Liverpool on the 27th. In this he gives a graphic description of the loyalty of the British Nation to the Throne and of the interest the Throne takes in the Nation. Mr. Plasting has the happy knack of making his lectures very attractive to his listeners.

On February 17th the Rev. Joseph Gay visited the Leamington Spa Branch and addressed two meetings. At the first he showed how scientific is the Bible, taking up point by point the creations of the six days, and proving from geological data, accepted by all competent scientists, how absolutely the Bible stands every scientific test. The evening lecture was devoted to the history and development of the British nation and Empire. At this meeting the President of the Branch, Alderman H. Mason, J.P., was in the chair.

W. T. Craig, Esq., F.R.G.S., writes:—

"May I again revert to the question of Blasphemy, recently the subject of a Bill in the House of Commons.

Persecutions for religious belief are unknown in this country—therefore the Statute of 9 William 3, c. 35 (1698) contains no menace against the widest interpretation of the Christian faith.

In 1889, by a majority of 111, the House of Commons rejected the Religious Prosecutions Bill, and nothing has occurred in the forty years which have since elapsed to indicate that they then arrived at a wrong decision. On the other hand, I venture to say that had the history of these forty years, with its wealth of fulfilled prophecy, been available for Mr. Bradlaugh, his atheism would have been dispelled, and his faith in the Bible established. I question if that Bill would ever have seen the light of day.

When religion is now being made the ground of such cruel and wholesale persecution in Russia, where is the excuse for the gesture implicit in this Bill, that ribaldry, and every form of obscene criticism, verbally or in pictorial form, may be, without let or hindrance, hurled against the most sacred feelings of the community?

The only excuse, if such it be, is ignorance, which British-Israel Truth alone can remove. Till then, the Evil Spirits which haunt these times, and are abroad the world over, will continue their subtle attacks against that Truth in diverse ways and in the most unexpected places.

What our nation most needs, in facing the troubles now looming ahead, is to draw nearer to God. Thus will they enjoy the blessings so freely promised to His People: thus will traps like the Blasphemy Bill be set in vain."

We have sent in hundreds of signatures against the Bill, and we rejoice at the announcement that it has now been dropped.

The Stoke-on-Trent Branch greatly enjoyed a lecture given by the President of the Branch, Mr. A. Gresham Copeland, at Stoke Town Hall, the subject being "Palestine to Britain."

The Chairman was the Rev. J. B. Frith, M.A., Rector of Swynnerton, and he spoke of the value of the new light the British-Israel beliefs brought to Bible reading.

Mr. Gresham Copeland commenced by detailing a few of the promises Jehovah made to the Children of Israel in their early days, and said that he proposed to show that they had been fulfilled. Among those of particular interest was one that the Royal sceptre should always remain in the House of Judah, and the lecturer said that our own Royal line could trace its descent back to David, who was of the House of Judah.

He proceeded to trace the history of the Israelites down past the time of the Exodus from Egypt to the time of the Captivity in 721 B.C. In this connection he referred to the prophecy that Israel would be seven times punished, and explained that according to the way of reckoning prophetic years this would cover a period of 2,520 years. This period ended in A.D. 1799, which was just at the time when Britain's commercial and imperial expansion began. Jerusalem fell in 603 B.C. and the calculation from this date brought us to 1917, the date when General Allenby entered Jerusalem.

TREK FROM ASIA.

The most interesting part of Mr. Copeland's lecture, however, was when he turned to a map of Europe and Asia Minor and expounded the routes along which it is believed the Israelites travelled. Some came along the Mediterranean, through Spain to England and Ireland, reaching the former country by 1300, and Ireland certainly by 950 B.C.

One of the most interesting tribes was that of Dan, whom tradition tells us to have founded Troy (of Dardanus).

The general trend of these migrations was westward, although the people spread out in all directions, some to China and Japan. Other influxes to the British Isles came through Scandinavia and Jutland, and Mr. Copeland contended these people to be members of the same Israelitish stock which had gradually migrated up north and west from their original starting-place in sympathy with the general movement.

With these and other examples Mr. Gresham Copeland demonstrated that if one regarded the British peoples as of Israelitish descent—for which he had been offering evidence—it would be clear that the promises of God to the chosen people had been fulfilled. Thus they had "multiplied exceedingly," and they had been greatly blessed and were a great nation, and had existed as such from the time of Nebuchadnezzar. The Chairman and Mr. E. Patterson expressed their thanks to Mr. Copeland for his informative speech.—THE "SENTINEL."

APPROACHES TO THE FACTS OF BRITISH-ISRAEL TRUTH.—VI.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

POST-NEW TESTAMENT TIMES.

WE pass now to the history of the manifestation of God in post-New Testament times. Prior to the close of the Canon of the New Testament, the Gospel had been brought to Britain by Joseph of Arimathea and his associates; and British people are mentioned in the New Testament, e.g., Linus and Claudia of the British Royal Family. Such was Britain's acceptance of the Gospel that it is difficult to say where Druidism ceased, giving place to the full sweep of the Christian Gospel. Both Druid and Christian worshipped the Trinity in Unity.

From the early Church thus established in Britain the Gospel was sent to Europe, and, in the personnel of the Royal House of Caradoc, was carried to Rome.

The half-brother of St. Paul, Rufus Pudens of the Pauline Epistles, married the daughter of Caradoc, and their home was established in Rome; a home which is shown to the tourist to this day as the birthplace of the infant Church in Rome.

It will be noted that the Christian Church was organized in Jerusalem; was carried from thence directly to Glastonbury in England; and from thence, in the Royal household, to Rome. This may not have been the first contact of the Christian Church with Rome, but the British Royal household was already established there before the Apostle Paul arrived. As far as history shows St. Paul was the first of the Apostles, if not the only one, to visit Rome.

It is quite certain, from the reading of the New Testament, that St. Paul was set apart as the Apostle to the Gentiles —εθνος, nations—of the West, consisting of ten-tribed Israel as we see in the Epistle to the Romans, and was led to that Apostleship by the Holy Ghost. It is also certain that the secondary Pentecost which occurred in Europe was not in Rome, but in Israelitic Greece. This is the Biblical account of the matter, therefore it is the historic account, and the tradition of St. Peter's visit and Apostolic bishopric at Rome should absolutely give way before it. That which is recorded in the Bible must take precedence over non-historic tradition.

TIME OF KING ALFRED.

Another great outpouring of the Holy Spirit on Britain took place in the time of King Alfred the Great.

Again the Lord manifested Himself from the time of Wycliffe on to the great Revival called the Reformation.

Once again the Holy Ghost was manifested to countless numbers of individuals, and to the whole world, at the time of the Wesleyan Revival. During that period Europe was held in the grip of mediæval Church administration, and of Voltaire's atheistic movement. The peoples of Europe swung between these two extremes, except for the work of Luther.

To-day, once again, in the preaching of "the Gospel of the Kingdom AND the things concerning our Lord Jesus Christ," the God of Israel is manifesting His Presence, and it will be because of the blindness of our own eyes, and the hardness of our own hearts, if the personal anointing with the Holy Ghost is not the experience of each individual and of the nation at large.

Looking at the world to-day we see that this manifestation of the Personality of God and the clear vision and preaching of His truth rest chiefly upon the Celto-Saxon people of the

Digitized by Google

Anglo-Saxon world, and upon the Israel remnant in the Continent of Europe and elsewhere.

It is still true that the Holy Ghost directs His Own movements and that of His Apostolic ministry to those lands occupied by the Israel people, and there it is that His Presence is most clearly realized.

It must not be considered that this manifestation of the Spirit of God is by any means the monopoly, or the special privilege, of the Anglo-Saxon peoples. It is theirs primarily because of the fact that from the beginning they were as a race chosen to be God's "Kingdom of Priests" and His "Holy nation." Now the function of the Priest and of the priestly order is to minister to the congregation. Israel-Britain is the hereditary priestly nation set up for the express purpose of ministering the things of God to the nations of the earth; even to all of them.

The Holy Ghost has followed that line from the first. He is following that line still. He will follow that line to the end.

Therefore, let the Anglo-Saxon people awaken to their great task. Let them be alive to their responsibility. In Britain the MOTHERLAND is the centre of the activity of the Kingdom of God. Her King and her ministers are serving on and at the foot of the throne of JEHOVAH as did David and Solomon and their ministers. As we read in 1 Chron. xxix, 23-26:—

"Then Solomon sat on the throne of the Lord as king instead of David his father, and prospered; and all Israel obeyed him.
And all the princes, and the mighty men, and all the sons likewise of king David, submitted themselves unto Solomon the king.
And the Lord magnified Solomon exceedingly in the sight of all Israel, and bestowed upon him such royal majesty as had not been on any king before him in Israel.
Thus David the son of Jesse reigned over all Israel."

Thus it was in the days of the establishment of the Kingdom of David, in Israel, and thus it is in the present day. Every student of prophecy will agree that the prophet Zechariah in chapters twelve and thirteen is dealing with the last days of the dispensation in which we are now living. The time of which he speaks is close at hand, perhaps within months, certainly within a few years of this very day. Now what do we find to be the case as set forth in this prophetic foreview of the present age?

There were in David's day, as the centre of the nation's life, both as to Church and State:

David the King.
Nathan the prophet.
The Levites, the priests.
Shimei representing the people.

In these days when the great revival led by the House of David comes in we find the following:—

"And the land shall mourn, every family apart:

THE FAMILY OF THE HOUSE OF DAVID apart, and their wives apart.

THE FAMILY OF THE HOUSE OF NATHAN apart, and their wives apart.

THE FAMILY OF THE HOUSE OF LEVI apart, and their wives apart.

THE FAMILY OF THE HOUSE OF SHIMEI apart, and their wives apart.

ALL THE FAMILIES THAT REMAIN apart, and their wives apart."

Is it not therefore certain that the centre of the Lord's government in the earth, both as to State and Church, remains unchanged in the Divine plan? His Majesty still sits upon the THRONE OF THE LORD in the room of David his father, as did Solomon before him.

Let the prophetic ministry be recognized to-day as it was in the day when the Lord honoured His people by giving His direct Word through these very prophets. They are represented now as ever in the Nonconformist body. There was, among the prophets, no "prophetic succession." There was no heredity in the prophetic ministry; God called this man and that according to His purpose and will. The only thing of which it was necessary to be assured was that GOD HAD CALLED the individual prophet. This was demonstrated by the truth and prescience of His message. But how highly God and the Church have always honoured the prophets. The Church, after the prophets were dead. Thus they sawed Isaiah asunder, and then gave his writings the highest place in the Old Testament Scriptures.

Let those who hold themselves to be of the priestly order (Levitical) bear in mind that there is also a prophetic order in Israel, and always has been. To the priestly order pertained the ritual worship. To the prophetic order pertained the preaching of the Word.

Let the members of the prophetic ministry remember that the Lord has promised that the "Priests the Levites" shall minister with the House of David to the end of the ages. But also let the priests remember the order to which they belong. It is not the Aaronic order, which was put away at the time of our Lord, but the Levitical order. Let them also remember that the Levitical order OFFERED NO SACRIFICES AT THE ALTAR. The Aaronic order was a sacrificing priesthood, and it was done away when our Lord offered HIMSELF ONCE FOR ALL, "and there remaineth no more sacrifice for sin." But there are sacrifices of praise and thanksgiving to God.

So we see at the heart of God's Kingdom of Priests still:—

THE HOUSE OF DAVID and THEIR WIVES,
THE HOUSE OF NATHAN and THEIR WIVES,
THE HOUSE OF LEVI and THEIR WIVES,
ALL THE FAMILIES THAT REMAIN,

and this is still the heart and centre of the Divine Administration on earth.

As the facts stand, and as we believe they appear to the eye of God and to the "cloud of witnesses" in Heaven, David still sits upon the throne of the Lord in the person of our present Monarch, upon whom may God's richest blessing rest; Nathan, the prophet, still tells forth the Word of Jehovah, or should do so from day to day. And Levi, the priest, still carries on his non-sacrificing ministry, having the care of "all the congregation."

So the Archbishops stand in the place of the ancient High Priests of Jehovah.

All these together have the charge to "Preach the Kingdom of God," AND the things concerning our Lord Jesus Christ, as did the Lord and the Apostles in their day, and as they commissioned their successors to do.

The passage in Zechariah which sets forth these things is as follows:—

"And the land shall mourn, every family apart; the family of the house of David apart, and their wives apart; the family of the house of Nathan apart, and their wives apart;

The family of the house of Levi apart, and their wives apart; the family of Shimei apart, and their wives apart;

All the families that remain, every family apart, and their wives apart."—Zechariah xii, 12-14.

"In that day there shall be a fountain opened to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem for sin and for uncleanness."—Zechariah xiii, 1.

THE RESTORATION OF ISRAEL.

By J. LLEWELLYN THOMAS, F.R.C.S.

II.—THE TIME OF ISRAEL'S RESTORATION.

IN the endeavour to discover the Time of Israel's Restoration and to answer the question as to when her punishment would cease, there are three lines of investigation from which information may be gained, and they are:

1. "The Latter Days."
2. "The Third Day."
3. "The Seven Times."

Through studying these we arrive at a very remarkable period in modern history. The astonishing thing (nay, rather the most natural thing) is that the period indicated did witness the phenomenal rise of a nation and race in might, majesty, and world-dominion, the like of which has never been witnessed on this old earth of ours. This is a significant fact and merits serious consideration by every thinking man. God has verily kept His Promise and fulfilled His Word.

Israel's Restoration was to be in "the Latter Days," on "the Third Day," and after "the Seven Times."

(i.) THE LATTER DAYS.

Two of the prophets speaking of Israel's Restoration mention distinctly that it was to be in "the Latter Days." What period is this? What are its limits? To answer briefly, Time in the Scriptures is divided into two main sections, which are known as "the Former Days" and "the Latter Days." The dividing point between them is the First Coming of Christ. Time before His advent is called the Former Days, and the time since that advent, right on to His Second Coming and the inauguration of the Millennium, is called the Latter Days. The Latter Days terminate with the beginning of the Millennial reign of our Lord.

We live in these Latter Days. They correspond with the Gospel Dispensation and embrace the Dispensation of the Church.

The ages B.C. are the Former Days, while the Latter Days are the A.D. age.

Jeremiah's Statement.

In chapter xxxi of his book Jeremiah foretold the recovery and Restoration of the house of Israel (not of Judah, the Jews of later times). In verses 1 and 2 we read:

"At the same time, saith the Lord, will I be the God of all the families of Israel, and they shall be My people. Thus saith the Lord, The people which were left of the sword found grace in the wilderness; even Israel, when I went to cause him to rest" (Jer. xxxi, 1, 2).

Here we notice that God is about to make them His people again. After their captivity they are to "find grace," and they are "caused to rest." This is the Restoration of Israel, not the second and Final Restoration, because it will be noted that it does not take place in Palestine; it is the Preliminary Restoration of Israel alone. The verse tells us that this is to happen "At the same time." What time is this? The preceding verse tells us, in "the Latter Days": it reads thus:

"The fierce anger of the Lord shall not return, until He have done it, and until He have performed the intents of His heart; in the latter days ye shall consider it" (Jer. xxx, 24).

"At the same time" "they shall be My people," they shall "find grace in the wilderness," and be "caused to rest."

The Restoration of Israel, according to Jeremiah, was to take place in "the Latter Days."

Hosea's Statement.

Hosea, referring to this Restoration, spoke as follows:

"Afterward shall the children of Israel return, and seek the Lord their God, and David their king; and shall fear the Lord and His goodness in the latter days" (Hos. iii, 5).

He tells of the return of the house of Israel to God; they are to seek Him and David their king and God's goodness is to be upon them. This time of favour or Restoration is to be in "the Latter Days."

This information from Jeremiah and Hosea does not carry us far in our quest. It mentions an exceedingly long period, which has already lasted 1,920 years, too extended to be of much value in answering our question.

Concomitant Events.

But the information, such as it is, is not without its value. It teaches us that the Restoration is not to be post-dated, or relegated to the Millennium. It must take place before the Second Coming of our Lord and Saviour. Those who look for His immediate return should be able to point to an accomplished Restoration of the Ten-Tribed kingdom of Israel.

It reminds us, moreover, that the Time of the Restoration is synchronous with the epoch in which so many of the marvellous Covenant Promises and Prophecies meet and culminate. So many wonderful predictions concerning Israel are to materialize and have their fulfilment in the Latter Days, before the Millennium, that it all looks as if it were only one stupendous event or development for Israel. Thus the Time of Israel's Restoration in the Latter Days is in keeping with—

1. The Great Covenant Promises to the Fathers (Gen. xlix, 2).
2. The Predictions of Balaam's Parables (Num. xxiv, 14).
3. The Blessings pronounced by Moses (Deut. xxxi, 28 and xxxiii).
4. The Development of the Fifth, Stone Empire of Nebuchadnezzar's Dream (Dan. ii)—

all of which were for realization in "the Latter Days."

It will of course be anticipated that "the Third Day" will fall in the period of "the Latter Days," and also that "the Seven Times" must of necessity end in "the Latter Days."

(ii.) "THE THIRD DAY."

The prophet Hosea not only informs us that the Restoration of Israel was to take place in "the Latter Days," but also that it was to be on "the Third Day." This is certainly mysterious.

"Come, and let us return unto the Lord: for He hath torn, and He will heal us; He hath smitten, and He will bind us up. After two days will He revive us: in the third day He will raise us up, and we shall live in His sight" (Hos. vi, 1, 2).

Here are three days. In the first two the condition of Israel is represented as "torn" and "smitten," eloquent description of the misery of their captive state. Then, after the two days, on the Third Day comes a great change, the recovery and revival of the nation is depicted. There is the "returning unto the Lord" and the Restoration to favour and blessing, the return of the prodigal son to his Father. On the dawning of the Third Day there is to be evidence of national revival, and as the day advances Israel is to be "raised up" from her grave. The Third Day was to witness the Resurrection of Israel even as the third day witnessed the Resurrection of Israel's Redeemer.

This "Third Day" may be called Israel's "Appointed Day," the long foretold Destined Day of blessing and glory, when the once dead nation should live again, and "live in His sight." What a thing to be alive unto God nationally!

And now comes the question, when is this Third Day? It obviously refers to no ordinary single day of twenty-four hours, but to some far greater period of time. Many a saint has doubtless pored over this subject and striven to discover the time which God's Spirit signified, and thus to solve the riddle. Many did doubtless calculate the period correctly, but either the event had not yet materialized at their time because they were living in an earlier age, or else they were actually living in the very centre of the developments and were too close to them to realize their import and to recognize that what was taking place before their very eyes was even the Restoration of Israel.

The only available clue as to the meaning of a "day" is in 2 Peter iii, 8, where we read that—

"One day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day" (2 Pet. iii, 8).

On this interpretation these Three Days are periods of a thousand years each. After the second thousand years of captivity, and not till then, are we to perceive the first signs of reviving. At the dawn of the third thousand years, signs of life are to appear, and as the day advances the rise of the nation must be manifest.

When do these Three Days of Hosea begin? From what date are we to reckon them? Obviously from the beginning of Israel's punishment, from the "Captivity Era" of the Ten-Tribed kingdom. As already noted, the beginning was not a single date, but as a series of events during an epoch of not more than sixty-five years' duration. It began in 741 B.C., and the crucial date was 721 B.C., the latest possible date being 676 B.C.

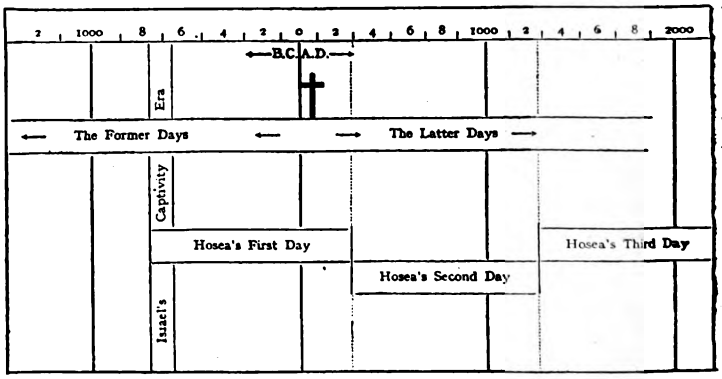
In calculating the period of Hosea's days the reckonings may be made in lunar, prophetic or solar years. Table No. I gives at a glance the times of Hosea's Three Days as reckoned in solar years from the three dates of the Captivity Era.

TABLE No. I.—HOSEA'S THREE DAYS.

First Day	begins ..	741 B.C.	721 B.C.	676 B.C.
	ends ..	A.D. 260	A.D. 280	A.D. 325
Second Day	begins ..	A.D. 260	A.D. 280	A.D. 325
	ends ..	A.D. 1260	A.D. 1280	A.D. 1325
Third Day begins ..		A.D. 1260	A.D. 1280	A.D. 1325

It will be seen that Hosea's Third Day began in the period A.D. 1260–1325, with A.D. 1280 as the most important date of that period.

The statement that the Restoration of Israel was to be on the Third Day gives a far more precise epoch for that event than did the information that it was to occur in the Latter Days.



The Restoration could not take place till the beginning of "the Third Day." The determination of the beginning of this day enables us to strike off at least the first 1,260 years of "the Latter Days." The Restoration must be in "the Latter Days," at least after A.D. 1260.

Although we are narrowing down the time and getting nearer to the goal of our quest, we are still far from any precise dates; for "the Third Day" is a period of a thousand years. The Restoration, however, was not to await the completion of "the Third Day," it was to begin at the close of "the Second Day" and therefore should be well established by the middle of "the Third Day." The middle of the Third Day would be about A.D. 1780. Thus we know now the desired date within a margin of 500 years.

As we contemplate in history the period covered by the first half of Hosea's "Third Day" (A.D. 1280 to 1780), we are faced with the remarkable spectacle of the rise of a nation and race in Europe. Surely this is significant? Exactly what was foretold, exactly what should be expected. All done so quietly, as if it were the most natural thing in the world, as indeed are all the works of God. Truly "the Kingdom of God cometh not with observation."

Table No. II shows "the Latter Days" and Hosea's "Third Day" side by side for easy comparison.

TABLE No. II.—THE LATTER DAYS AND HOSEA'S THREE DAYS

Hosea's Three Days and Ezekiel's Vision of the Dry Bones.

Hosea's Three Days probably have some close connection with Ezekiel's Vision of the Valley of the Dry Bones (Ezekiel xxxvii, 1–14). At least there is close resemblance between them. Each deals with the house of Israel, and in each there are three stages.

Hosea's First Day corresponds exactly with the first stage of the Vision. The valley full of dry bones was eloquent of the sad picture of the scattered, hopeless, and lifeless condition of Israel during the First Day. It depicted dispersion, disorder, and death.

Hosea's Second Day saw the luring and the gathering of the Tribes into the "Appointed Place." This resembled the second stage of the Vision. Where there was a shaking, the bones were sorted and gathered "bone to his bone." Order was evolved out of chaos, but it was not yet orderly life, "there was no life in them."

Hosea's Third Day was one of Resurrection to national life. "In the third day He will raise us up, and we shall live in His sight." So was it in the Vision. The Spirit of God breathed upon "these slain," and "the breath came into them and they lived and stood up upon their feet an exceeding great army." It was a vision of life, order, power, and invincible might.

What was the sequel of the Vision? After this passing of Israel from death unto life, after this glorious preliminary Restoration, the prophet Ezekiel tells of the still greater Restoration that was to follow, namely the Reunion of Israel with the Jews and the occupation once more by them of the Promised Land, and this under one king: "One king shall be king to them all," and "David My servant shall be king over them" (Ezek. xxxvii, 15–28).

What is the history of to-day? Who has possession, not only of Palestine, but of the whole of the land promised to Abraham? The British Empire, and that under one king. His Gracious Majesty George V is to-day the ruler of Palestine. How quietly and without "observation" it all comes about! Is it not at least strange that the heir to the throne is named David, and that in the ordinary course of events David will be the next ruler of Palestine, and of the far wider territory known as the Promised Land?

Jonah's Third Day.

Hosea is not the only prophet who indicates Israel's Resurrection on the Third Day. Is this not also the teaching, in type, of the prophet Jonah?

In one single particular alone was Jonah a type of our Blessed Lord.

"For as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly; so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth." (Matt. xii, 40).

Was not Israel's national Resurrection also foreshadowed by the same type? This prophet, save in the matter of his "burial and resurrection," was no type of our Saviour, whereas he was a very complete type of Israel, though it is not so stated in the Scriptures.

Jonah's deliberate disobedience to God, his rejection of his high calling and commission, and his running away from God was a vivid picture of the rebellious nation.

His punishment, swallowing up, and disappearance were dramatic representations of what was to happen to Israel.

"Israel is swallowed up: now shall they be among the Gentiles as a vessel wherein is no pleasure" (Hos. viii, 8).

Jonah's repentance, his finding grace and pardon, and his resurrection to "life" was the prophetic story of Israel, and occurred on the "Third Day."

His great recommission and subsequent faithful work for God in the service of his fellow-men was in miniature the programme for the restored Israel of the Latter Days.

How could Israel, whom "the king of Assyria hath devoured" (Jer. l, 17) and who was "swallowed up" by the Gentile world, rise again to life on the Third Day? The marvel is all prefigured for us in the prophet Jonah. Apart from Divine interposition it is incomprehensible.

(iii.) THE SEVEN TIMES.

We now approach the study of "the Seven Times" with increasing interest, for it is reasonable to suppose that here we shall gather information much more precise and definite. The information given as "the Latter Days" was very indefinite. Notable advance was made, however, through determining the time of Hosea's "Third Day." But that was a lengthy epoch even after it had been narrowed down within 500 years!

As already stated, Moses had foretold a "Seven Times" punishment for the breaking of the Covenant made at Sinai between God and the Twelve Tribes of Israel. What was the duration of the "Seven Times"? The information gained by students of Prophecy from already fulfilled prophecies have enabled them to determine with great assurance the value of a "time," which they considered represented 360 years. This would make the "Seven Times" the long period of 2,520 years.

We are again faced with the same question that arose in connection with the Third Day, viz., From what date are we to measure this period? Obviously, as in the previous case, the answer is, From the "Captivity Era" of Israel, the dates of which were 741, 721 and 676 B.C. The starting-point of "the Seven Times" is identical with that of the Three Days of Hosea.

The period may also be measured in lunar or solar years from each of the above dates. Table No. III gives the results.

TABLE No. III.

TERMINATION OF THE SEVEN TIMES PUNISHMENT.

Dates of the Captivity Era of Israel	741 B.C.	721 B.C.	676 B.C.
Termination In Lunar Reckoning ..	A.D. 1705	A.D. 1725	A.D. 1770
Termination In Solar Reckoning ..	A.D. 1780	A.D. 1800	A.D. 1845

The sum of the matter is that "the Seven Times" ended in the period between the extreme dates A.D. 1705 and 1845, which is the Terminal Era of Israel's Captivity, equal to the sixty-five years of the Captivity Era plus the difference in the calculations between lunar and solar reckoning, which is seventy-five years = 140 years. It is important to remember that there was no more of the Seven Times Punishment for the house of Israel after A.D. 1845.

Digitized by Google

The study of the termination of "the Seven Times" enables us to narrow down the Restoration period to within 140 years, between A.D. 1705 and 1845. Examined in the light of history, it was precisely the period which saw the phenomenal rise of Britain. It was pre-eminently the time of her becoming "a Great and Mighty Nation" (Gen. ii, 2 and xviii, 18), and blossoming into "a Fulness of the Gentiles" (Gen. xlviii, 19). It was the destined day that saw the spreading abroad "to the west and to the east and to the north and to the south" (Gen. xxviii, 14). Note in passing the unusual order here, "to the west" first. Did not this nation spread first to the west? Was it a mere coincidence? Ought not these things to have been so? Was it not all according to the Divine fore-ordained plan and stated purpose? This was the time of the First gathering or Preliminary Restoration of Israel. It was only after this blessedness of Israel that they could come into the occupation of the Land of Promise. Exactly so has it fallen out, for the nation has recently come into possession of Egypt, Mesopotamia, and Palestine, the exact territory the vast boundaries of which were set by the Covenant as "from the river of Egypt to the great river, the river Euphrates" (Gen. xv. 18), which was promised to Abraham's seed in the Latter Days.

If the Anglo-Saxon race be not Israel of the Ten Tribes, how comes it into this great inheritance just at the time that Israel should do so?

In the period under review were there any rival claimants, or any that had a vestige of title to world-supremacy as was promised to the Seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob? What of Spain in the sixteenth century? What of France in its Napoleonic period? What of Germany and its bid for the hegemony of the world? Every one of these great powers fully acknowledged that Britain alone was the real rival, and the only obstacle in the path of their ambition. To break the power of Britain was the supreme purpose of each one. It is terribly significant, is it not, that the complete undoing of each was due to this race?

Dr. R. G. Usher, Professor of History in the Washington University, St. Louis, U.S.A., in The Story of the Great War, writes:

"One of the reasons why the Germans began the war was the belief that the British Empire was so weak, so disloyal, that it could not resist assault. One of the reasons why the Germans were defeated in the war was the loyalty and strength of the British Empire. The Germans were sure that the war would create a new Empire, surpassing in extent and power any of the old Empires. They were right: the war created a new British Empire, stronger, more unified than ever before, a real State, whose importance in times to come will be incalculable."

We have now investigated the subject of the Time of Israel's Restoration.

Table No. IV gives a summary of this chapter, and shows the relative positions of the Latter Days, Hosea's Three Days, and the Seven Times.

TABLE No. IV.

THE TIME OF ISRAEL'S RESTORATION.

ADDRESS AT CENTRAL HALL, WESTMINSTER.

BY MAJOR RICHARD RIGG, B.A., O.B.E., J.P., as Chairman.

I DESIRE, in the first place, to draw attention to what I believe is an important event in the history of the British-Israel Movement. We have seen during the past few weeks that this Movement has been a veritable pioneer in a great fight against religious persecution in Russia. That Movement is gathering strength from day to day. But let us not forget that your leaders, Major Knowles, Mr. Herbert Garrison, the Rev. Pascoe Goard, Col. Wright and others, from the outset were not ashamed to nail their colours to the mast. The various branches of the Christian Church, to its shame and disgrace be it said, in the early days, hesitated as to what action they should take. But the British-Israel Movement came strongly out into the open, and I venture to say, by its influence and agency, has been the motive power in a Movement which is now strong and powerful, and, I may say, popular in this land, and which will, I am convinced, pass its ultimate goal. We have witnessed in Russia appalling scenes, before which the Spanish Inquisition, the Massacre of St. Bartholomew, and other persecutions in this country pale into insignificance. The stand which the British-Israel Movement has taken is quite clear and logical. We have no intention of interfering with the internal government of any country, but we stand for a great principle, a principle which was vouchsafed to us at the glorious Reformation, and that is the liberty of every man to worship God according to his own light; and we ask for that religious freedom to be exercised in Russia. We are fighting to-day in Russia against what has been rightly termed the negation of God, erected into a system of government. I, myself, have absolutely no doubt as to the ultimate victory of our Cause. God is on our side, and He Who is on our side is greater than all the forces of unrighteousness arrayed against us. I believe that nothing but good can eventually come out of this rousing of the conscience of the nation to the Russian atrocities. I think we should this afternoon express our gratitude to those of our leaders who have so nobly stood by us in this great fight for religious liberty, and for freedom of worship in Russia. I am myself, as you know, a firm believer in British-Israel Truth. It takes its stand on the blessed Word of God, that Word of God which I believe is inspired, and literally true from Genesis to Revelation. All the forces of Higher Criticism, Modernism, or the New Theology, by whatever name these hydro-headed monsters may be called—none of them will avail to shake our faith in the fundamental principles of God's Holy Word.

As we peruse the words of Holy Writ, does it not strike us how clear and how logical is the sequence? We pass through our Bible from Genesis to Revelation, and as we peruse those pages we see substantiated up to the hilt the British-Israel position. First of all, in Genesis we begin with the Divine self-revelation of God. He first reveals Himself to us as the Creator of the universe, Elohim. He next reveals Himself as Jehovah Elohim, Who formed Adam and the Adamic family. He further reveals Himself as the Judge of the Adamic family, and of Satan who deceived them. This is the wonderful story of the Creation told in two sequent stages. Beginning with the fourth chapter of Genesis, and specifically with the fifth chapter is set forth the progress of the appointed seed, descended as follows: God, Adam, Seth. This is the beginning of Biblical history and of a covenant-bearing seed. In His relation to this seed, and His purpose through that seed, Jehovah is revealed. God reveals Himself under the name Jehovah. This seed is then traced from Seth to Noah, and from Noah to Shem, and from Shem to Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Israel. And this is the heart of the narrative, the first eleven chapters of Genesis. It is the logical and necessary prelude to what follows.

Now comes the covenant which has been the mainspring of history from that time to this, I mean, the Abrahamic covenant. The Abrahamic covenant was made approximately at a period as far before Christ as we are after Christ, somewhere round about 1929 B.C. God reveals Himself to mankind generally at this period as El Shaddai, the God-Father of the race. The Abrahamic covenant establishes the covenant seed of Abraham through Isaac as the medium of Divine blessing to all the nations of the earth. The race was called in Abraham, born and dedicated in Isaac, and regenerated and re-named Israel in Jacob.

The family thus covenanted descended to Egypt at the call of Joseph, under Jacob. Then we see them emerging from Egypt, twelve tribes and numerous. The family then was organized into God's Kingdom-nation at Sinai, as is recorded in chapters xix and xx of Exodus. In that Kingdom-nation formed at Sinai Jehovah established Himself as King for ever. To that Kingdom-nation at the same time Jehovah gave that law which still forms the basis of the two great branches of the English-speaking race:

ENGLAND AND THE UNITED STATES.

Thus we find that the Kingdom of God was organized in the earth, consisting, first, of the nation Israel, and, second, The King Jehovah, and, third, the law. That nation we then find established in Palestine under Joshua. In that nation, too, was established a house, a throne, a kingdom of the House of Jacob and of David also for ever, which, of course, obviously means our own day. The nation became two nations by Divine appointment. In the year 975 B.C. those two nations were: the House of Israel, ten tribes, and the House of Judah, two tribes. In the House of Israel thus established into a separate nation there was no tribe of Judah. Therefore it is a fallacy to speak of separated Israel as Jews. The House of David was established over Judah and until the captivity of Judah. Other lines of kings reigned over the House of Israel during the years which remained in the land. But let us not forget that, in the meantime, the migration of the Israel people to Europe and Britain founded ancient Britain.

The nation Israel was carried into captivity by Assyria somewhere between the years 740 and 721 B.C. The nation Judah was carried into captivity by Babylon round about the years 604 to 587 B.C. The House of David was removed by Nebuchadnezzar, who killed all the male heirs to the throne, but allowed the eldest daughter to go free, unconscious of the Israel law. The family heir to the throne of David was set at liberty. A remnant of the Judaites returned from Babylon and re-established the Jewish nation. They rebuilt Jerusalem and the Temple, they re-established the worship of Jehovah, but not the rule of David. To those same Jews Christ came, and made atonement for the sins of all mankind. We preach the Gospel of Salvation thus provided, and for every creature, and we urge all to accept Christ as their Saviour. Meanwhile Israel had colonized in the Isles. Take those glorious chapters from chapter xl to the end of Isaiah, the grandest message of all addressed by Isaiah to Israel in the Isles. To that same colony of Israel in the Isles came the daughter of Zedekiah, bearing the throne right, and there established the house and throne and kingdom of David. To that same colony in the Isles, after years of wandering, the ten-tribed House of Israel came. And to that colony the House of Judah also came, who did not bear the name of Jews. And to that colony the tribe of Benjamin came, having escaped after the destruction of the nation of the Jews in A.D. 70; so the tribe of Benjamin came to this country. This united colony formed the nation Israel, re-gathered from all lands according to Divine prophecy. That nation Israel is, I venture to say, and firmly believe,

BRITAIN OF THE CHRISTIAN DISPENSATION, THE ISRAEL OF PROPHECY.

That nation Israel has expanded into a nation and a company of nations, and the great people of the United States of America. That nation and company of nations and that great people of the United States are God's Kingdom-nation still, and are blindly carrying out to-day the Divine plan. That nation and company of nations at the Imperial Conference in 1926 so declared the constitution of the Empire that any nation can join the British Empire, remaining a free and independent nation.

The time has come for this dear land of ours to awake to a sense of its mighty destiny and glorious responsibilities. We are to-day from this platform preaching the British-Israel doctrines and are endeavouring to infuse into our people a due sense of the high mission and solemn purpose which has been laid to their charge. There is not a kingdom, nor a nation, nor a people, nor a tongue on earth which is not included in the great plan of the ages. But it is only through Britain, as God's Kingdom-nation, that the blessings of the Kingdom can come to the world. We are, therefore, fearlessly proclaiming this great Evangel to-day. Will you not help us to spread this great Gospel, and so prepare this land of ours and the world for the imminent return of Jesus Christ? For "God shall give to Him the throne of His father David, and He shall reign over the House of Jacob for ever."

As we peruse the history of Old Testament times, and as we turn over the pages of the Kings and the Chronicles, we see again and again in the history of Israel how that when the people and their king turned from their sins to God, He delivered them from the oppression of their enemies. And history is surely repeating itself within our own living memories. When, during the Great War, after three and a half years of that War, Germany was winning the War on the Western Front,

OUR KING, A DIRECT DESCENDANT OF KING DAVID,

called this nation to a Day of National Repentance and of Prayer; and the War we were losing was won that year! When the great day of God Almighty dawns, individually and collectively, we would ask that the King, representing the nation, shall summon the whole Empire to national repentance before God, and put into operation the Sermon on the Mount; and by the Sermon on the Mount I mean the Divine Law as given to Israel, as enlarged and illustrated by our Blessed Lord. Let the Sermon on the Mount be put into operation as the Common Law of this kingdom. "But thou hast not called upon Me, O Jacob; but thou hast been weary of Me, O Israel. Thou hast not brought Me the small cattle of thy burnt offerings; neither hast thou honoured Me with thy sacrifices. I have not caused thee to serve with an offering, nor wearied thee with incense. Thou hast brought Me no sweet cane with money, neither hast thou filled Me with the fat of thy sacrifices; but thou hast made Me to serve with thy sins, thou hast wearied Me with thine iniquities. I, even I, am He that blotteth out thy transgressions for Mine own sake, and will not remember thy sins." "I will yet for this be enquired of by the House of Israel to do it for them." Our duty is to call the nation to immediate repentance, and to an instant return to Jehovah our God and to His law and to His administration. Let there be engraved on the table of your hearts those solemn words and warnings. Read the Book of Amos. "Prepare to meet thy God, O Israel . . . For thus saith the Lord unto the House of Israel, seek ye Me, and ye shall live." If that call should pass unheeded, or if it should be regarded with indifference, then I tremble to think of the suffering self-induced and unnecessary that will still be our portion and our experience. The Church in the wilderness was established in the nation Israel. Every citizen of the nation was also a member of the congregation. The Christian Church was established in Jerusalem at the Feast of Pentecost, when there were gathered together Jews, devout men of every nation under Heaven. These testified and said, "Now we hear every man in our own tongue wherein we were born." Let us never forget that it was upon a section of that congregation assembled for the Feast of Pentecost at Jerusalem that the Holy Ghost descended and constituted the Christian Church in Jerusalem, and of Israelites and Jews, as St. Peter indicates in his address. And we would drive home to you this, that surely from these events our contention is a right one, and that is, that Israel, and not the Gentile world, is the centre of the Church of Christ. And within seven or eight years after the Resurrection, during the time mentioned in the fifteenth chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, when St. James presided in the Church, that the Gospel was brought to these shores, and the Church organized here. Therefore are we not right in claiming that Britain is the centre of God's Kingdom, and that His Church is established within that Kingdom? I nail my colours to the British-Israel mast. And in my firm belief in the British-Israel Cause there comes a deepening and strengthening of my faith in God's Holy Word. But I see something more. I see in devotion to the British-Israel Truth the solution of practically every moral and social problem which faces our world to-day—loyalty to our throne and to constitutional government, a deep sympathy with suffering humanity, a realization that the greatness of our Empire rests on the purity of the home life of its people, and I, therefore, fight against gambling, impurity, drunkenness, Sabbath desecration; and I have an earnest desire to foster and cultivate good relations between employer and employed. When our people embrace British-Israel Truth, then you will find that this land will progress, not by revolution, but by evolution, when there will be a well-ordered line of constitutional development, as expressed in the words of our great national poet, who said:

"A land of old and great renown,
A land of settled government.
Where freedom slowly broadens down
From precedent to precedent."

THE KING'S LAWS.*

CHAPTER XIV.

. . . . Coming, then, to his task with this in view, we find Alfred's code, or "Alfred's Dooms," as they are called, starting with an almost literal transcript of the Decalogue. The only variations of any moment are, that the second commandment is omitted in its right place, and stands as the tenth . . . . Immediately after the ten commandments come selections from the Mosaic code, chiefly from the twenty-first, twenty-second and twenty-third chapters of Exodus, very slightly modified.

The most important variations are as follows:—

EXODUS XXI.	ALFRED'S DOOMS.
1. Now these are the judgments which thou shalt set before them.	11. These are the dooms that thou shalt set them:—
2. If thou buy an Hebrew servant, six years he shall serve, and in the seventh he shall go out free for nothing.	If any one buy a Christian bondsman, be he bondsman to him six years, the seventh be he free unbought. With such clothes as he went in, with such go he out. If he himself have a wife, go she out with him. If, however, the lord gave him a wife,
3. If he came in by himself, he shall go out by himself; if he were married, then his wife shall go out with him.

* From "Alfred the Great," by Thomas Hughes. Part II, No. VIII, of "Sunday Library for Household Reading," published by Macmillan & Co., November, 1869.

4. If his master have given him a wife, and she have born him sons or daughters; the wife and her children shall be her master's, and he shall go out by himself.

go she and her bairn the lord's. If then the bondsman say, I will not go from my lord, nor from my wife, nor from my bairn, nor from my goods, let then his lord bring him to the church door, and drill through his ear with an awl, to witness that he be ever thenceforth a bondsman.

5. And if the servant shall plainly say, I love my master, my wife and my children; I will not go out free:

6. Then his master shall bring him unto the judges; he shall also bring him to the door, or unto the doorpost, and his master shall bore his ear through with an awl, and he shall serve him for ever.

The dooms continue an almost literal transcript of the twenty-first chapter of Exodus, with the exception of the seventeenth verse, which is omitted. The slight modifications of the Hebrew Law in the first verses of the twenty-second chapter are again characteristic.

EXODUS XXII.	ALFRED'S DOOMS.
1. If a man shall steal an ox or a sheep and kill it, or sell it, he shall restore five oxen for an ox, and four sheep for a sheep.	24. If any one steal another's ox, and slay or sell him, give he two for it, and four sheep for one. If he have not what he may give, be he himself sold for the fee.
2. If a thief be found breaking up, and be smitten that he die, there shall no blood be shed for him.	25. If a thief break a man's house by night and be there slain, be he not guilty of manslaughter. If he doeth this after sunrise he is guilty of manslaughter, and himself shall die, unless he did it of necessity. If with him be found alive what he before stole, let him pay for it twofold.
3. If the sun be risen upon him, there shall be blood shed for him; for he should make full restitution; if he have nothing then shall he be sold for his theft.	26. If any man harm another man's vineyard, his acres, or any of his lands, let him make boot as men value it.
4. If the theft be certainly found in his hand alive, whether it be ox, or ass, or sheep, he shall restore double.

5. If a man shall cause a field, or a vineyard, to be eaten, and shall put in his beast, and shall feed in another man's field; of the best of his own field, and of the best of his own vineyard, shall he make restitution.

To the eighth verse, treating of property entrusted to another, Alfred's dooms add, "If it were live cattle, and he say that the army took it, or that it died of itself, and he have witness, he need not pay for it. If he have no witness, and they believe him not, let him then swear." We shall see that the obligation of an oath, which had no sanction attached to it apparently by West Saxon law till now, is very carefully enforced in a later part of the code. Alfred's dooms then omit from the seventh to the fifteenth verse of the chapter inclusive, taking all the rest; with the variation, however, as to pledges, that the Saxons are to return a man's pledged garment before sunset only "if he have but one wherewith to cover him."

The third and sixth verses of the twenty-third chapter are a puzzle to the King, so he substitutes dooms in his own language, which are certainly clearer than the Hebrew ones.

EXODUS XXIII, 3, 6.	ALFRED'S DOOMS.
3. Neither shalt thou countenance a poor man in his cause.	43. Doom thou very evenly; doom thou not one doom to the wealthy, another to the poor; nor one doom to the more loved, other to the more loathed doom thou not.
6. Thou shalt not wrest the judgment of thy poor in his cause.

Alfred adopts the next three verses in the following form:—

EXODUS XXIII, 7, 8, 9.	ALFRED'S DOOMS.
7. Keep thee far from a false matter, and the innocent and righteous slay thou not, for I will not justify the wicked.	44. Shun thou aye leasings.
8. And thou shalt take no gift; for the gift blindeth the wise, and perverteth the words of the righteous.	45. A sooth fast man and guiltless, slay thou him never.
9. Also thou shalt not oppress a stranger, for ye know the heart of a stranger, seeing ye were strangers in the land of Egypt.	46. Take thou never meed monies, for they blind full oft wise men's thoughts, and turn aside their words.
	47. To the stranger and comer from abroad, meddle thou not with him, nor oppress thou him with no unright.

Then, omitting all the rest of the Levitical law as given in this part of Exodus, as to cultivation of the land, the sabbatical year, sacrifices and feasts, the dooms end with:—

48. Swear ye never to heathen gods, nor in nothing call ye to them.

Having finished his extracts from Exodus, in all forty-eight dooms, the King proceeds:—

"These are the dooms that the Almighty God Himself spake to Moses, and bade him to hold; and when the Lord's only-begotten Son, our God, that is, Christ the healer, on middle earth came, He said that He came not these dooms to break, nor to gainsay, but with all good to do, and with all mild-heartedness and lowly-mindedness to teach them. Then after his throes, ere that His apostles were gone through all the world to teach, and while yet they were together, many heathen nations turned they to God. While they altogether were, they send errand-doers to Antioch, and to Syria, Christ's law to teach. When they understood that they sped not, then sent they an errand-writing to them." Then follows verbatim James' epistle from the Jerusalem council to the Church at Antioch; after which Alfred again goes on: "That ye will that other men do not to you, do ye not that to other men. From this one doom a man may think that he should doom every one rightly ; he need keep no other doom-book. Let him take heed that he doom to no man that he would not that he doom to him, if he sought doom over him."

So far it would seem that the King has no doubt, or need of consultation with any one. These are, in his view, the dooms which the Almighty God Himself has given to the King and people of England, as well as to the Hebrews of old. The remaining dooms stand on different ground. They are such as have been ordained by his forefathers and their wise men, with such additions and variations as he and his wise men approve. They are introduced thus :—

" Since that time, it happened that many nations took to Christ's faith, and there were many synods through all the middle earth gathered, and eke throughout the English race they took to Christ's faith through holy bishops, and other wise men. They then set forth, for their mild-heartedness, that Christ taught as to almost every misdeed, that the worldly lords might, with their leave, without sin for the first guilt, take their fee boot which they then appointed, except for treason against a lord, to which they durst not declare any mild-heartedness, for that the Almighty God doomed none to them that slighted Him, nor Christ, God's Son, doomed none to him that sold Him to death, and He bade to love a lord as himself."

Nevertheless, Alfred and his witan, by the fourth article of their code, modify this of the synods, and place the king and lords on the same footing as other freemen, by recognizing the king's and lord's were-gild. " They then," the preface goes on, " in many synods set a boot for many misdeeds of men ; and in many books they wrote here one doom, there another."

" I then, Alfred the King, gathered these together, and bade to write many of these that our forefathers held, those that to me seemed good : and many of those that seemed not good I set aside with my witan's council, and in other wise bade to hold them ; for that I durst not venture much of mine own to set in writing, for that it was unknown to me what of this would be acceptable to those that came after us. But those that I met with, either in my kinsman Ina's days, or in Offa's, King of Mercia, or in Ethelbryte's, that first of the English race took baptism, those that seemed to me the rightest I gathered them herein, and let the others alone. I then, Alfred, King of the West Saxons, showed these to all my witan, and they then said that they all seemed good to them to hold."

Then follow the collected dooms, approved by Alfred and his witan, from other sources, and " Ina's dooms " by themselves, at the end of the code.

The whole study of the history of English law is most absorbing. The Common Law begins in England as far back as 1000 B.C. It was then codified by Brute of Troy. It was again codified by Malmutius about 500 B.C. King Alfred the Great again codified it, as we see in the extract before us. From thence to the present time this great inheritance of the Common Law has been peculiarly the privilege of Britain and the other Anglo-Saxon nations. For the full study of this most interesting and important theme the reader is recommended to read " The Law of the Lord, or the Common Law," by the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard, which can be obtained at the Covenant Publishing Company, 6, Buckingham Gate, London, S.W.1. This book has been most highly recommended by men of the law and by Governmental Authorities as well as by the general reader.

The author of "The Law of the Lord" shows the Divine origin of English law, and shows by the history of the law that the British were a God-fearing, law-abiding people before the foundations of Rome were laid. As an important Law Journal says, " This is a book which should be read by every student of the law." And we say it should also be read by every student of the Bible. H. G.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM.

By H. E. Turner.

It is within the knowledge of British-Israel that the gospel of faith and the gospel of works unite in the one gospel of Holy Scriptures, which may thus be represented :—

The gospel of Salvation is inspired with faith, in obedience.
The gospel of the Kingdom embraces obedience in works.
The gospel of obedience is one in the union of faith and works.

As by virtue of obedience Abraham obtained God's sublime promises so, to Abraham's descendants, in obedience, is accorded their fruition and ultimately all mankind will reap the benefit.

Personally, it had been a subject of mystery why, during His early ministry, " Jesus went about . . . preaching the gospel of the Kingdom," and why not the gospel of Salvation; revelation at length came from a lady member of the Dorking Branch with the explanation that, until our Lord had, by conquering death and Satan, " become the Author of Salvation unto all them that obey Him " ; until by the atonement He had enabled mankind to obtain salvation, whereby it was an accomplished fact, the time for preaching the gospel of Salvation had not come ; then, after the crucifixion and resurrection, Jesus said unto the eleven " go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature " ; now, in these last days, as foretold by our Lord, " this gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness to all nations." Preaching to be effectual necessitates the veritable gospel to be displayed, read or recited.

What was this gospel of the Kingdom as preached by Jesus ?

It is recorded in the v, vi, and vii chapters of St. Matthew, comprehending the Law and Commandments. It is very important to observe that it does not reveal the identity of Israel with Britain ; British-Israel Truth is foretold in Old Testament narrative and proclaimed by the apostles.

Although the gospel of the Kingdom is conceived by British-Israelites to be of immense importance to Britain and the world, it still remains but imperfectly understood. Does not the gospel of the Kingdom consist of the elements, formation and completion of the Kingdom and throne with its accomplishments ?

The Kingdom and its gospel are being highly extolled far and wide ; but it is the preaching of the gospel that is required, and there is a vast difference between acclamation and preaching. The gospel of the Kingdom and that of Salvation, and the truth of British-Israel cannot be dissociated one from the other; but they are distinct, and subject to separate preaching and teaching. It has been told how the Kingdom "is administered." Sound gospel, but inadequate. What is wanted is the perfect gospel, unmistakable, brief, compact, and in simple English. The gospel printed and preached will promote blessing and happiness to mankind; and the attainment on earth of righteousness, justice and peace through Jesus Christ, causing the world to be endued with its principles and its teaching to be displayed in the lives of nations and individuals.

The Kingdom of God "prepared from the foundation of the world" was founded by covenant with Abraham, in his "Seed which is Christ."

The King was and is the Lord God and His is the Throne. "I am the Lord your Holy one, the Creator of Israel your King."

The nation is Israel, established at Sinai, "a Kingdom of priests and an holy nation."

The constitution comprised the Ten Commandments, Statutes and Laws, invested with the spiritual standard of Christ's Sermon on the Mount.

The Lord placed David on His throne as vice-King and established David's throne for everlasting.

In Daniel's time the Lord God of heaven set up the Kingdom to stand for ever "to break in pieces and consume" the Babylonian succession of empires, under the monarchy of the House of David.

Jesus Christ the Son of God, Saviour of the world, will, in due time, take over from the line of David the Kingdom, "and the government shall be upon His shoulder, and His Name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace; of the increase of His government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon His Kingdom to order it and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the Lord of Hosts will perform this."

The gospel of the Kingdom in chapter and verse:—

Genesis xvii, 6.—Founded.
Galatians iii, 16.—The Seed Christ.
Isaiah xliii, 15 } The Lord King.
1 Chronicles xxix, 23 }
Exodus xix, 5, 6.—Established.
Exodus xx, xxi, xxii, xxiii } Constitution.
Matthew v }
1 Samuel xvi, 1 and 2.—David King.
2 Samuel vii, 16 } House and Throne established for Jeremiah xxxiii, 17 } ever.
Daniel ii, 44.—Kingdom set up.
Isaiah ix, 7.—The Messiah Christ on the Throne.

Therewith the gospel of the Kingdom incorporates the elements, the establishment, the formation and completion of the Kingdom, its constitution and its future accomplishments, namely, the attainment of righteousness, justice and peace, with blessings to all the families of the earth, the fundamentals of the gospel being the Commandments, Statutes, Judgments and Laws, material and spiritual, "and this gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." (Matthew xxiv, 14.)

BRITISH-ISRAEL FACTS NOT FANCIES.—VII.

By Major-General C. A. Hadfield.

Israel's Wanderings.

The wanderings of Israel after their escape from Assyria can be traced historically from the region of Euphrates to Britain, covering a period of over one thousand years; and the prophetical writings of the Old Testament are the history of the British race from the days when Shem lived. For remember, little or nothing is recorded of the descendants of Noah's other two sons, Ham and Japhet.

Esdras has recorded the migration of the Israelites to Arsareth, and several other ancient writers confirm this. The banishment of the House of Israel was for a Divine purpose, for we read in 1 Chron. v, 26, that "the God of Israel stirred up the spirit of Pul, King of Assyria." But the Bible gives evidence that this removal did not mean extinction. They were to be a "nation for ever." God had appointed a place for them, where they should dwell and move no more (read 2 Sam. vii, 10). God also said: "I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heavens, and as the sand which is upon the sea-shore." This proves Israel was TO LIVE, not to become extinct.

If we follow the history we can trace the wanderings of the Ten Tribes from Media to Britain in three separate divisions, and becoming recognized as the Getae and the Massagetae, the Azar, and the Angles—known also as the Ostrogoths and the Normans. Anyone who desires an interesting history of the wanderings should procure a copy of "The Origin of the English," by Major B. de W. Weldon, M.C., the author also of that valuable work, "The Evolution of Israel."

God's partial rejection, for a time, of Israel was, in effect, a decree of Gentilization, brought about by the tribes being thrown among heathen races and broken up—condemned to be "Wanderers" (Hos. ix, 17).

God's Promises to Israel.

Let us, in considering the question of Israel, always bear in mind that in God's promises to Abraham we have a trinity of blessings:

(1) His seed should become a great nation, and they should inherit the land of Canaan (Gen. xiii, 15).

(2) He should be the progenitor of the Coming of Christ (Gal. iii, 16).

(3) He should be the father of many nations, of multitudes of peoples; they should possess the ends of the earth, and the gate of their enemies (Gen. xxii, 17).

All were, in these promises, transmitted to Isaac and to Jacob, and to Jacob's twelve sons.

The first and second promises were literally made good to the most minute details of His life, death and resurrection.

The third promise must be as truly and literally fulfilled as the first and second.

And now let us ask ourselves upon whose authority are we to take two literally, but to spiritualize the third? Is there one word in Holy Scripture to justify such a course? Why, if we know two were literally fulfilled, should we not logically and reasonably expect the third promise to be also literal?

Digitized by Google

If the curses are literal, surely the blessings will be equally literal? If the past be literal, why not the future predictions? If you spiritualize Israel, why not do the same with Judah?

Do let us remember that upon Joseph's sons descended the birthright (Heb. xi, 21); thus, if this fact be borne in mind, we shall hear less of Palestine belonging to "the Jews."

(1) Jacob first declared that the possessor of the birthright should grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth.

(2) That "the branches should run over the wall"; which is, of truth, applicable first to the United States of America, who broke away and spread abroad; and then, as many of the British have also done, "to people" our great Dominions overseas. They had to expand for lack of room for their great population.

(3) That his hands would be made strong, and that he would shepherd the Stone of Israel.

(4) That God would bless him with the blessings of Heaven above, the blessings of the deep.

(5) The blessings of the breast and womb, so that the multitude might be born and reared as strong, healthy individuals.

All these blessings were bequeathed to Joseph's two sons, and thence to the British race, who, from all the signs which are given to us, can be none other than the Children of Israel under another name.

Joseph, when he was in Egypt, was not recognizable by His brethren; so it is equally possible for "Israel" of to-day to be unidentified, or hidden, but not "lost" to the extent of being extinct.

There is a little coincidence—which many will look upon as a mere coincidence—in the fact, that at the top of the page in the Book of Genesis, where God definitely promises land to the seed of Abraham, the date is there given as being 1918 B.C. Great Britain took Palestine, the very centre of the Promised Land, from the Gentiles (the Turks), A.D. 1918. And from which latter date Jerusalem has "ceased to be trodden down of the Gentiles." This is given as an interesting fact in the study of the prophecies being fulfilled.

AR-SARETH.

BY THE REV. LEONARD J. DUNNE (U.S.A.).

"THERE was a great way to go, namely, of a year and a half, and the same region is called Ar-Sareth. Then dwelt they there until the latter time."—Second Esdras xiii, 40-46. Syriac Version—Translated by Canon Box.

The writer wishes to submit the following suggestions in regard to this matter, not as authoritative, but as provocative of study on the part of those qualified to discuss translations and transliterations of Hebrew and Greek. Scholarship is a somewhat relative term, and it is quite easy for amateurs to get beyond their depth in attempting to handle Oriental languages; but somehow it would seem as if here at least Faith and Scholarship may meet upon a common ground. Perhaps I'm wrong.

The location of the mythical "Azareth" in the place ascribed to it by many writers does not seem reasonable. Those who are acquainted with the terrain lying between the "Gate of Israel" and the spot indicated on the map of Europe, by these writers as "Azareth," are fully aware that, with all due allowance for ancient modes of travel, it is nothing like an eighteen months' journey. Ar-Sareth was a long way to go, and the time-measurement of distance from the crossing of the Euphrates would carry Israel far away and beyond this traditional site. That the distance is given in units of TIME rather than in units of linear measure is in accordance with the hidden things of God concerning Ephraim-Israel.

The Handbook, British-Israel Truth, in dealing with this subject (pages 114-115), states concerning "Azareth":

> "It is to the North-West that traces are found of the name Ar-Sareth, which name some commentators (not realizing its meaning, and wishing for something, to them intelligible) have 'corrected' to Aretseth, which signifies in Hebrew 'Lands' . . . . but there is no need to resort to any such conjectural emendation of the text."

The writer, of this chapter in B.-I. Truth, then proceeds to give his own exposition:

> "The name, as it stands, is not difficult to understand. For Ar is the Greek transliteration of two Hebrew words meaning severally 'hill' or 'city'; and Sareth may well be a local name . . . . . the hill or city of Sareth."

But after all isn't this also conjectural?

The statement has been made that we have here two Hebrew words—then why not translate them? It has always seemed as if this method of carrying over a word bodily from one language to another sometimes has its disadvantages. Take, for instance, the word "Christos"—if only we could have translated and not transliterated it, how much plainer the Bible would be in many instances. Look at that passage in 1 Cor. x, 4: "That Rock was Christ." What meaning does it convey? If instead of saying "Christ" we say "the Anointed One," what a marvellous flood of light suddenly breaks in on us. "AND THAT ROCK WAS THE ANOINTED ONE." When the Sunday School lessons were upon this subject one of our leading American S.S. Weeklies stated that, seeing Moses smote the Rock twice in two entirely different localities, it must have been some rock they carried around with them. And yet that paper is strongly anti-B.-I. So, then, by just translating instead of transliterating we have brought to view, in the New Testament, the plain fact that the Anointed Stone that the Israelites carried around with them in all their journeyings to the Promised Land was the one Moses smote and from which the water gushed forth.

But to get back to "Azareth." Before attempting another rendering of this somewhat elusive word let us gather together the material that we have. The text given at the commencement of this article is from the Syriac Version, but it is to be remembered that there is also the Ethiopian text. In that version there is a difference worth noting:

> "It was a great way to go, a journey of a year and a half; and that region was called ARSAPH (at) the end of the world. And they dwelt there until the last time."

In his notes Canon Box not only gives us this alternative Ethiopian reading, but he also gives us this clause:

> "Latin correctly Arzareth (= 'eres 'ahereth)."

Digitized by Google

Now as regards the word SARETH—a careful search through both Young's Analytical and Strong's Exhaustive Concordances brings to light several Hebrew words that may be of help to us. Let us list these, together with the material we have already acquired :

1. Ethiopian Text.—Asaph.
2. Strong (319).—Achariyth, the last or end (chronologically)—hence remnant.
3. Strong (7611).—Sheêrîyth, a remainder, residual portions (surviving).
4. Young.—Acharith, residue remnant.
5. Latin.—Ahereth.
6. Syriac Text.—Sareth.

The fact becomes at once apparent that the word " Sareth " is pure Hebrew in its origin and its meaning is clear—a residue, a remnant or surviving portion.

The other word " Ar " is a contraction of the Hebrew "Eres " which, in its archaic form (the form which it would have in Esdras' time), means an arched over or canopied bed, literally a shielded or hidden resting place.

The Ethiopian word Asaph (i.e., the word used in the Ethiopian Text) gives us an alternative reading. It is also a transliteration, it occurs quite a number of times in the Hebrew Scriptures. The word is derived from a primitive root 'âcaph, and means to assemble or gather in (Strong 622). In the Psalms of Asaph we have the songs of the Assembly or Congregational Singing, as we would say in our modern Church liturgy.

Let us now rewrite our text in the light of that which we have found. The whole passage may be read in either of two ways :

1. Syriac Text—

It was a great way to go, a journey of a year and a half, and that region was called the hidden resting place of the remnant. Then they dwelt there until the latter time.

2. Ethiopian Text—

It was a great way to go, a journey of a year and a half, and that region was called the hidden resting place of the gathering together (at) the end of the earth. Then they dwelt there until the " end time."

OUR GREAT ADVANCE.

By J. J. MOREY, Commissioners' Secretary.

As we must of necessity go to press early, it is too soon to know what most of our readers think about the plan we announced in our last issue concerning the establishment of B.-I. Study Circles. We find on every hand, however, the greatest approval and encouragement, and feel satisfied the proposal will meet a very great need and receive a very great response.

Our readers everywhere wish to see the B.-I. Movement leap ahead, and we are frequently urged to take some step which would accelerate our rate of progress.

Well, here is the opportunity.

You have friends who are beginning to be interested, and who would attend public lectures if such could be arranged. You have quickened their interest, and you can best lead them further.

Do not wait for our lecturers to come your way. Be one yourself. Do the work in your own way, in your own home, in your own Circle, and you will have the satisfaction of reaping your own harvest.

We are posting full particulars to all who decide to form Circles, setting forth details of our plan, and making the way as plain as possible.

The idea which has seized us is the untold value of

INDIVIDUAL EFFORT

in every district of this Empire.

In rural parishes, in busy cities, in urban districts, in fashionable suburbs, in manufacturing areas, everywhere, we want our readers to hear this call and to catch this spirit.

Britain needs something and knows not what ; we can supply it. Christian people are floundering about in search of a rock upon which to rest ; we can reveal it.

The storms are rapidly gathering over the world ; we can give light and comfort and faith.

We are so sure that we have found the best solution possible for the present situation that we urge our readers to give this proposal their whole-hearted acceptance wthout delay.

Form a beginners' class at once ; a more advanced study will follow in due course, and we will guide you all the way.

Write to us for our first batch of suggestions ; talk about the plan to those whom you have interested, and you will find joy and satisfaction in the effort.

Our aim is A THOUSAND NEW STUDY CIRCLES in 1930, and we shall not rest until this is achieved. We have been studying this great subject together for years ; now is the time for ACTION.

The knowledge is tabulated and published ; the equipment is fully prepared and can be placed in your hands ; the spirit is of God, and we pray, therefore, that He may now send forth labourers into His vineyard. Address your letters as follows :—

Study Circles. THE SECRETARY-GENERAL, B.-I.-W. Federation, 6, Buckingham Gate, London, S.W.1.

OUR GLORIOUS HOPE.

By E. M. FOSTER.

THE generation of Adam covers six thousand years, and yet the Biblical narrative carries us on so rapidly and easily that we are liable to forget that those who lived when the Covenants were made never survived to see their fulfilment. Abraham, the greatest example, lived by faith. The sons of Israel who went down into Egypt never lived to see their descendants led out of the house of bondage. Even Moses was not permitted to enter the Promised Land. Yet none of these ever doubted.

Let us therefore follow the example of " so great a cloud of witnesses." Prophecy is daily becoming history. The final stages move to the great consummation with great swiftness. As it is written, " Behold, I come quickly." It is just because of this that many of us are persuaded to translate current history into Biblical parable before we have certain grounds. In our eagerness there are some who want to run ahead. Let these wait patiently like Abraham, living in the sure hope that not one word of our Bible shall be found wanting and that all must presently be revealed.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

MR. JOHN LEECH, M.A., K.C., lectured on Prophecy at Headquarters on Wednesday of last week, and Mr. W. A. Jordan spoke on "Manasseh" on the Thursday evening. Mr. Leech is to give another of his series of lectures on Wednesday afternoon next. The Thursday evening meeting will be held as usual. By desire the hour has been changed to 8.

The Rev. Pascoe Goard is giving four addresses in the Nether Chapel, Sheffield, on March 17th and 18th, at 3 and 7.30. He and Mr. Garrison, assisted by the Rev. T. H. Whitehouse, held a series of eight meetings in the Empire Hall, Cheltenham, last week. Much good was done, and many attended every meeting. Several came from Gloucester, and other towns in the district. The Revs. C. C. Petch, G. W. Webb, T. H. Whitehouse and Dr. Eric F. Waddington presided. Mr. Garrison gave four lantern lectures. Letters from those who received great benefit are most encouraging; one correspondent says:—"It is impossible for me to say how much I enjoyed the whole series. I thank God with all my heart that I have been privileged to hear His servants pour such a flood of light on His Word."

This week Messrs. Goard, Leech and Garrison are holding six meetings in the Town Hall, Leamington. They begin a series of seven meetings in the Stuart Hall, Norwich, on Monday evening, March 24th, when Mr. Garrison is to open the series with a lantern lecture on "Cameos of our Empire," and when the Lord Mayor is to preside. The subsequent meetings are timed for 3 and 8 p.m. on March 25th, 26th and 27th.

The Rev. G. W. Plasting has lectured for our Liverpool Branch on the British Throne, and given great satisfaction to the members and their friends by his presentation of the subject.

Another of many examples of the devotion and self-sacrifice of B.-I. believers may be quoted:—A reader of this journal had no regular work for three years. Finding employment at last he sent a donation of £2 out of his first payment of wages. He writes: "God has indeed blessed me in my work. I owe you and the writers in the "N.M. and B." a very deep debt of gratitude."

* * *

E. W. writes from Australia:—"We are both extremely interested in and profited by the reading of your journal. May the Editors and writers be spared long to carry on their great work, and may God open all blind eyes to see this great Truth."

* * *

We are very glad to hear of many outstanding men who propose to attend the All-American Anglo-Israel Convention at Detroit on May 6th, 7th and 8th next. They are coming from widely-separated parts of that vast country, and they are looking forward to great times. The Convention should mark an epoch for the Land of Manasseh, and far-reaching results may be expected therefrom.

Our readers will please remember the May Meetings at Headquarters fixed for April 9th and 10th next, and the Annual Meeting for members and associates at 5.30 on April 9th, for receiving the Annual Report and Financial Statements for 1929.

* * *

Mr. J. J. Morey's visit to Bexhill on February 27th was marked by two largely-attended lectures, which were listened to with deep attention Interest in this Branch is growing, and seems to be partly due to advertising in advance a series of lectures, whereby interest is aroused and then maintained from meeting to meeting.

Miss Hamilton Hunter gave two addresses for the Woking Branch on February 28th. Several new members joined the Branch after the meeting, and more are expected. THE NATIONAL MESSAGE also gained new readers.

* * *

There having seemingly been some misunderstanding regarding the Elocution Class, Miss Barber has asked for the announcement to be made that she will be at Headquarters on Tuesday, March 18th, from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m., to give a lesson and to discuss future dates and place of meeting, either at Headquarters or at Miss Barber's own house, monthly or fortnightly. Will those desiring to join come on the 18th or write?

* * *

At Bath, on February 26th, Dr. E. Paget Thurstan spoke for the Branch on Historical Migrations, using a map to illustrate the possible routes taken. His lecture showed a wealth of geographical and historical knowledge. The chair was taken by Dr. Martin.

The Rev. T. H. Whitehouse gave an address on February 18th to a good audience on "The Truth about Palestine." The lecturer took his stand upon a series of prophetical statements in Genesis, relating to the racial ownership of Palestine, which, he contended, was tied in entail to the descendants of Abraham and Sarah, developed into "a nation and a company of nations," otherwise the British Empire as we know it to-day. Mr. G. N. Carleton-Stiff occupied the chair. On the following evening, at the Parish Church, Mr. Whitehouse further developed his theme and showed how the promises made to Abraham and his descendants took material form in the Christian age, and resulted in the world-spread company of British nations and their manifold activities for the betterment of the families of the earth in both material and spiritual blessing.

Mr. H. D. Houghton, of Nottingham, visited the Exeter Branch on February 27th, speaking both afternoon and evening. "The Mystery of England" was the subject, Mr. Houghton saying that to find out the mystery of England it was necessary to discover who the English people were. When King David of All Israel was at the height of his prosperity, the whole Kingdom being at peace, God sent to him the strangest of messages—"Moreover, I will appoint a place for My people Israel and will plant them, that they may dwell in a place of their own, and move no more." Now, asked Mr. Houghton, where is this new home of Israel? We may know where it is when we have found the people answering to Israel. The nation Israel carries its God-given marks, over seventy in number, and they are found in the Bible. God declares Israel shall only recognize herself in the latter days. The marks include the following:—A great and mighty Nation; her name, Great; her home, North-West of Palestine; undefeatable; controller of the seas; a Nation and a Company of Nations; to possess the gate of her enemies; to have a new language, a new name, a new religion; to lose trace of her lineage; to have a heathen Empire; to be custodian of the oracles of God; to be a people glorying in Christ; to be named after Isaac (Saxons); to pray towards Jerusalem; to possess the Stone of Israel; to encompass the earth; to be chief opponent of Antichrist; to spread the Gospel. Where is this wonderful Nation? Is there such a Nation? There is—and only one—Britain. The time of the Lord is not yet to remove fully the blindness from His own people, but it is coming. Slowly, but surely, the unrolling of the curtain of mystery is taking place.

The chair was occupied at the meetings by the Rev. Commander Roberts and Mr. F. Walker.

A prayer meeting is being held at Headquarters at 2.30 on Wednesday afternoon, under the direction of Mr. John Leech, before the usual weekly meeting at 3.

Mr. H. Cox writes:—"During the first two months of this year the efforts of the Toronto East Branch to propagate and advance the Gospel of the Kingdom in Toronto and other towns in Ontario have been singularly blessed. The President of the Canadian Federation, Mr. W. H. Blackaller, has lectured on 'Will the Political Centre of the Future be Geneva or Jerusalem?' Rev. J. D. Paterson gave a most interesting lecture on 'The Roman Wall, Stonehenge and Glastonbury.' Rev. F. W. Ward-Whate's address entitled 'British-Israel Truth and the Solidarity of the British Empire' thrilled an overflowing hall. It has been most encouraging to see the large numbers of new faces at these meetings, some of whom have joined us in membership and many are attending regularly. Toronto is undoubtedly one of the most fertile fields in the Empire for B.-I. Truth, and a whole or part-time Commissioner or H.Q. trained lecturer could undoubtedly be supported here.

"Our Branch has enlarged upon its endeavours through the unstinted zeal of Mr. Thos. Ransom, who has given from two to three addresses each week; and also the ardent and untiring efforts of our President, Mr. Gladstone Brown. They have between them carried the Kingdom Message to Missions, the various B.-I. Branches in this city and Hamilton, Masonic Lodges in Toronto, Peterborough and Weston, and also to many clubs and associations such as bankers, business men, insurance, etc., as well as Bible classes. These meetings have been attended by as many as from 60 to 1,600, so that several thousand people of every walk in life have heard for the first time British-Israel Truth through the efforts of our Branch.

"The results of this work are now being manifested, as this week we have been requested to organize two new Branches in Toronto, and we have already made sufficient progress to be able to announce the subjects for their first meetings, viz., 'The Great Pyramid, its Divine Message' and 'The Why the British Empire?' We ask that your prayers may be added to ours for a continuation of this onward Movement, and that it may sweep across Canada from coast to coast."

A NEW PUBLICATION.

THE SECOND COMING of OUR LORD

By THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD

The threads of the Bible Story are many, each of them reaching one great culmination—namely, in the Second Coming of Christ.

The following threads may be indicated, all of which culminate in the Second Coming :

(1) The teaching regarding the Temple.
(2) The teaching regarding the Nation Israel.
(3) The teaching regarding the House and Throne of David.
(4) The teaching regarding the House of Judah.
(5) The teaching regarding the External Nations.
(6) The teaching regarding the Church.
(7) The teaching regarding our Lord Himself.
(8) The teaching regarding the Apostles and their Position and Office in the Regeneration.

All these, and other threads of the Bible Story, find their culmination in THE SECOND COMING OF OUR LORD.

The last utterance of our Lord, as given in the last sentences of the Book of Revelation, reiterates all preceding prophecy and testimony concerning the Second Coming : these are the solemn words :—
" Even so, come, Lord Jesus. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen."

THREE EMPIRE BOOKS by The Roadbuilder

BOOK 1.

The Destiny of the British Empire and U.S.A.

By
THE ROADBUILDER

Ninth Edition Revised—40th Thousand

The theme of " The Destiny " is that Anglo-Saxondom fulfil, not one or two, but all the prophecies foretold for Israel when in Palestine, when in the Isles and afar.

Great Britain and her offspring nations are in physical possession of each and all of the covenants and promises made by God to the Fathers, to Israel and to the Divinely set up House of David, from whom our Royal Family are descended.

It contains many other facts that age does not wither nor the passage of time render stale.

Lord Byng of Vimy writes : " Thank you and bless you for your wonderful book."

Miss Mary Wilson wrote : " I have just finished The Destiny, and have never before been so thrilled by the perusal of anything on a printed page."

BOOK 2.

GOD'S COMMONWEALTHS

BRITISH AND AMERICAN

With a Chapter on Christ's Visit to Britain
By THE ROADBUILDER

The theme of the book is, that the History of the rise and growth of the British Empire and the United States of America is foretold in the Bible as God's servant Nations ; that these two great Commonwealths fulfil, and are in physical possession of, all the Covenants and Promises that Jehovah made to the Fathers, to Israel of the Isles, and to the House of David, down through the ages.

That Jehovah designedly hid these facts from Anglo-Saxondom until the time of the Gentiles was fulfilled, as it was when General Allenby redeemed Jerusalem from the treading down by Gentile Turkey in 1917.

The author shows how Joseph of Arimathea came to Britain (with Lazarus, Martha his sister, and Maria Magdalene) and lived there thirty-eight years, and was buried in Britain. Quotes twenty authorities showing that St. Paul was in Britain for years, that the Disciple Aristobolus and the Apostle Simon Zelots lived and died in Britain, and in the last chapter writes on the rather startling rediscovery that our Lord was in Britain for many years, and as a carpenter built with His own hands the first Christian Church in the world at Glastonbury, England, as declared by St. Augustine in 596 A.D.

BOOK 3.

THE FREEDOM OF THE SEAS

THE ROADBUILDER

2. Sea Power is Divinely decreed to the House of David.
3. His Britannic Majesty is the direct successor of the House of David.
4. His Majesty rules the sea by Divine decree.
5. It cannot be taken by any other Power.
6. His Majesty holds it so long as the sun is in the heavens.
7. The U.S.A. are Manasseh, His chosen " great people."
8. The British Commonwealth are His chosen " multitude or company of Nations."
9. Both are His servants, elect for world service.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

APPROACHES TO THE FACTS OF BRITISH-ISRAEL TRUTH.—VII.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

In the preceding articles we have considered the historic self-manifestations of God in Israel at various points of history. We have shown that from the 12th chapter of Genesis to the closing of the history of the Acts of the Apostles the Bible records a continual chain of such self-manifestation.

In a few short paragraphs we have shown that in the religious life of Britain there have been undoubted manifestations of God in the spirit of revival, which again and again has visited these shores and the daughter nations Overseas.

Thus we have followed the thought of the relation of the Father to Israel, and of Israel to Him.

Let us now ask the question :—

WHAT IS CHRIST TO ISRAEL?

We must now turn to prophecy, which is pre-written history, and there find pre-written the history of our Israel "Nation and Company of Nations." For this purpose we shall turn to Isaiah, and read that great message to Israel in the Isles contained especially in that portion from chapter 40 to the end of the book.

This portion which has been called the second book of Isaiah, or a book by a second Isaiah, deals with Israel in the Isles.

As we read the message carefully we find that in Israel in the Isles Jerusalem and Zion are still the united Capital. The centre of worship, Jerusalem, has been transported to the Isles, and the centre of government, Zion, has kept pace with it. "Jerusalem" and "Zion" are not now officially in Palestine, but in Britain.

So this message begins :—"Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God.

"Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her that her warfare is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned: For she hath received of the LORD'S hand double for all her sins."

Again the prophet cries in a later verse :—"O Zion, that bringest good tidings, get thee up into the high mountain: O Jerusalem, that bringest good tidings, lift up thy voice with strength; lift it up, be not afraid; say unto the cities of Judah, Behold your God!"

Again, in a still later verse, the Lord cried through the prophet :—"Why sayest thou, O Jacob, and speakest, O Israel, My way is hid from the Lord, and my judgment is passed over from my God?"

The message which in this wonderful chapter 40 is being introduced deals with God's people in another land than Palestine, and chiefly in another age than that in which Judah and Israel occupied that land.

Knowing that they will have reached the Isles and been established there, the Lord commands :—"Keep silence before me, O Islands; and let the people renew their strength: let them come near, then let them speak: let us come near together to judgment."

Proceeding with the wonderful story, the Lord now undertakes to pre-write the history of Israel in the Isles, and to instruct the people therein as to the great theme of the Gospel which should later come to them, and which it should be their task to carry to the ends of the earth.

We must ask the reader to read these wonderful chapters, and suggest that if the outline does not open clearly to his mind, to obtain a little booklet by the author entitled "Isaiah: an Outline Study," obtainable from the Covenant Publishing

We pass now to the Redemption of Israel.

This forms the heart of this great story told by Isaiah. See chapters 49 to 55. It is the story of the Redemption of Israel. Naturally we cannot reproduce these chapters here, and must ask the reader to take particular note of them in the Bible.

At the beginning of chapter 50 we have the following questions in verse one :—" Thus saith the Lord, Where is the bill of your mother's divorcement, whom I have put away? or which of my creditors is it to whom I have sold you? Behold, for your iniquities have ye sold yourselves, and for your transgressions is your mother put away."

There are certain terms here which require definition before we can understand this question. It is the Lord Jehovah Wh asks the question, speaking in the first person singular.

He asks the question of a person, or nation, indicated by the pronoun " you." This is in the second person, and it is necessary that we should know to whom He is addressing Himself.

The context answers the question thus far, that He is addressing a nation or people called Israel, resident in " the Isles " ; that is to say, an Israel colony in the British Isles. We cannot here produce proof of this ; the reader of this Journal knows well that the proof is given in abundance elsewhere.

The Lord speaks to the person indicated by the pronoun " you " of a third person whom He calls " your mother." This the context and other Scriptures show to be the parent nation Israel of Palestine.

Of Israel in the Isles He asks the question :—" Where is the bill of your mother's divorcement, whom I have put away? " The Scripture in the mind of Isaiah the prophet, and of the Holy Spirit Who inspired him, is found in Hosea from the first chapter onwards. It constitutes the bill of divorcement of Israel, " your mother."

The vital clause of the bill of divorcement is in the 9th verse of the 1st chapter :—" Then said God, Call his name Lo-ammi : for ye are not my people, and I will not be your God."

In the bill of divorcement the following clause is found showing that Israel should be redeemed from her divorced condition, and restored again :—" Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered ; and it shall come to pass, that in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not my people, there it shall be said unto them, Ye are the sons of the living God."

These are extracts from the bill of divorcement by which the Lord put the mother nation away.

The word " mother " is also used in the 2nd verse of the 2nd chapter :—" Plead with your mother, plead : for she is not my wife, neither am I her husband : . . ."

This must serve to answer the question, " Where is the bill of your mother's divorcement? "

Now speaking to Israel in the Isles whom He indicates as " you," He says :—" Ye have sold yourselves for nought, and for your iniquities is your mother put away." Thus Israel in Palestine was divorced, and Israel in the Isles self-enslaved, and both together were in need of a Redeemer and Redemption.

In majestic language He asks the question :—" Is my hand shortened at all, that it cannot redeem? or have I no power to deliver? " The text is as follows :—

" Wherefore, when I came, was there no man? when I called, was there none to answer? Is my hand shortened at all, that it cannot redeem? or have I no power to deliver? behold, at my rebuke I dry up the sea, I make the rivers a wilderness : their fish stinketh, because there is no water, and dieth for thirst.

I clothe the heavens with blackness, and I make sackcloth their covering."—Isa. 1, 2, 3.

Thus the Lord Jehovah is in the full sweep of His majestic annunciation of the Redemption.

Now comes one of the most amazing transformations to be found in all sacred literature, and such a transformation is not to be found in secular literature at all. The Lord begins this statement as Jehovah the God of Israel, Who is a Spirit, but now without halt or pause He speaks as the Redeemer Incarnate in Jesus, the Son of God.

Immediately after having declared, " I clothe the heavens with blackness, and I make sackcloth their covering," He speaks with a new Voice, and in a new manifestation as the Redeemer of Israel.

As we read these wonderful words, and listen to this infinitely sweet Voice which suddenly breaks forth in the Song of the Redeemer, we are conscious of a familiar theme in a well-known tone. Connected with this Voice from the Mosaic dispensation there come to us the Gospels with the record of the experiences of Jesus Christ, the Saviour of the world, in Pilate's Hall. Wonder of wonders ! We realize that this Song is caught up and PRE-PRODUCED by Jehovah as He sweeps into the Redemption theme ages before the historic event here foreshown. The following are the words ; let our own hearts catch the music :—

" The Lord God hath given me the tongue of the learned, that I should know how to speak a word in season to him that is weary : he wakeneth morning by morning, he wakeneth mine ear to hear as the learned.

The Lord God hath opened mine ear, and I was not rebellious, neither turned away back.

I gave my back to the smiters, and my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair : I hid not my face from shame and spitting.

For the Lord God will help me ; therefore shall I not be confounded : therefore have I set my face like a flint, and I know that I shall not be ashamed.

He is near that justifieth me ; who will contend with me? let us stand together : who is mine adversary? let him come near to me.

Behold, the Lord God will help me ; who is he that shall condemn me? lo, they all shall wax old as a garment ; the moth shall eat them up.

Who is among you that feareth the Lord, that obeyeth the voice of his servant, that walketh in darkness, and hath no light? let him trust in the name of the Lord, and stay upon his God.

Behold, all ye that kindle a fire, that compass yourselves about with sparks : walk in the light of your fire, and in the sparks that ye have kindled. This shall ye have of mine hand ; ye shall lie down in sorrow."—Isa. 1, 4-11.

What an amazing triumph of Divine inspiration is this Song of the Redeemer, reciting facts which only became experimental some 750 years later. And yet how small is this touch of the miraculous in comparison with the great Redemption which it sets forth, in which and for which the Lord Himself became incarnate in Jesus of Nazareth, and went all the way to Calvary and the grave for the Redemption of Israel and the salvation of mankind.

In chapter 51 the Voice of the Lord resumes the theme of Redemption, identifying the redeemed as the seed of Abraham and Sarah. Here are the inspired words:—

"Hearken to me, ye that follow after righteousness, ye that seek the Lord: look unto the rock whence ye are hewn, and to the hole of the pit whence ye are digged.

Look unto Abraham your father, and unto Sarah that bare you: for I called him alone, and blessed him, and increased him.

For the Lord shall comfort Zion: he will comfort all her waste places; and he will make her wilderness like Eden, and her desert like the garden of the Lord; joy and gladness shall be found therein, thanksgiving, and the voice of melody.

Hearken unto me, my people; and give ear unto me, O my nation: for a law shall proceed from me, and I will make my judgment to rest for a light of the people.

My righteousness is near; my salvation is gone forth, and mine arms shall judge the people; the isles shall wait upon me, and on mine arm shall they trust.

Lift up your eyes to the heavens, and look upon the earth beneath: for the heavens shall vanish away like smoke, and the earth shall wax old like a garment, and they that dwell therein shall die in like manner: but my salvation shall be for ever, and my righteousness shall not be abolished.

Hearken unto me, ye that know righteousness, the people in whose heart is my law; fear ye not the reproach of men, neither be ye afraid of their revilings.

For the moth shall eat them up like a garment, and the worm shall eat them like wool: but my righteousness shall be for ever, and my salvation from generation to generation.

Awake, awake, put on strength, O arm of the Lord; awake, as in the ancient days, in the generations of old. Art thou not it that hath cut Rahab, and wounded the dragon?

Art thou not it which hath dried the sea, the waters of the great deep; that hath made the depths of the sea a way for the ransomed to pass over?

Therefore the redeemed of the Lord shall return, and come with singing unto Zion; and everlasting joy shall be upon their head: they shall obtain gladness and joy; and sorrow and mourning shall flee away.

I, even I, am he that comforteth you: who art thou, that thou shouldest be afraid of a man that shall die, and of the son of man which shall be made as grass;

And forgettest the Lord thy maker, that hath stretched forth the heavens, and laid the foundations of the earth; and hast feared continually every day because of the fury of the oppressor, as if he were ready to destroy? and where is the fury of the oppressor?

The captive exile hasteneth that he may be loosed, and that he should not die in the pit, nor that his bread should fail.

But I am the Lord thy God, that divided the sea, whose waves roared: The Lord of hosts is his name.

And I have put my words in thy mouth, and I have covered thee in the shadow of mine hand, that I may plant the heavens, and lay the foundations of the earth, and say unto Zion, Thou art my people.

Awake, awake, stand up, O Jerusalem, which hast drunk at the hand of the Lord the cup of his fury; thou hast drunken the dregs of the cup of trembling, and wrung them out.

There is none to guide her among all the sons whom she hath brought forth; neither is there any that taketh her by the hand of all the sons that she hath brought up.

These two things are come unto thee; who shall be sorry for thee? desolation, and destruction, and the famine, and the sword: by whom shall I comfort thee?

Thy sons have fainted, they lie at the head of all the streets, as a wild bull in a net: they are full of the fury of the Lord, the rebuke of thy God.

Therefore hear now this, thou afflicted, and drunken, but not with wine:

Thus saith thy Lord the LORD, and thy God that pleadeth the cause of his people, Behold, I have taken out of thine hand the cup of trembling, even the dregs of the cup of my fury; thou shalt no more drink it again:

But I will put it into the hand of them that afflict thee; which have said to thy soul, Bow down, that we may go over: and thou hast laid thy body as the ground, and as the street, to them that went over."—Isa. li.

"Awake, awake; put on thy strength, O Zion; put on thy beautiful garments, O Jerusalem, the holy city: for henceforth there shall no more come into thee the uncircumcised and the unclean.

Shake thyself from the dust; arise, and sit down, O Jerusalem: loose thyself from the bands of thy neck, O captive daughter of Zion.

For thus saith the Lord, Ye have sold yourselves for nought; and ye shall be redeemed without money.

For thus saith the Lord God, My people went down aforetime into Egypt to sojourn there; and the Assyrian oppressed them without cause.

Now therefore, what have I here, saith the Lord, that my people is taken away for nought? they that rule over them make them to howl, saith the Lord; and my name continually every day is blasphemed.

Therefore my people shall know my name: therefore they shall know in that day that I am he that doth speak: behold, it is I.

How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace; that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation; that saith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth!

Thy watchmen shall lift up the voice; with the voice together shall they sing: for they shall see eye to eye, when the Lord shall bring again Zion.

Break forth into joy, sing together, ye waste places of Jerusalem: for the Lord hath comforted his people, he hath redeemed Jerusalem.

The Lord hath made bare his holy arm in the eyes of all the nations; and all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of our God."—Isa. lii, 1-10.

And now again we are brought to the personal element in the great theme of the Redemption. It is now the Father Who speaks, and His theme is of that manifestation of Himself which is incarnate in Jesus Christ the Redeemer. Remember how the Voice of Jehovah merged into the Voice of the Redeemer as we saw in Chapter 50, earlier in this article. Remember that we are now to read of the manner of the accomplishment of the Redemption of "Your mother" and "you," spoken of in chapter 50. The Redemption is by Him Who said to Philip, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father."

As we read the manner of the Redemption, is it any wonder that the passage begins with the question, "Who hath believed our report?" Who indeed would believe, unless aided with the gift of faith, that the Eternal God would become incarnate and take upon Himself the seed of Abraham, and become obedient unto death, even the death of the Cross.

Again the question is asked, "To whom is the arm of the Lord revealed?" That is to say, Who among us would have recognized the Son of Mary of Nazareth and of Bethlehem as Immanuel, that is to say, "God with us"? To whom, in the anointed Jesus of Nazareth, is the "arm of the Lord revealed"? But such is the fact. He is the "arm of the Lord" stretched forth for the Redemption of Israel and the Saviourship of the world. And so with wonder we read the familiar words of the 53rd chapter of Isaiah. Having read the words, we recognize that the Redemption of Israel, "Your mother" and "you," is complete.

The following is the passage which records beforehand the great Redemption accomplished on Calvary:—

"Who hath believed our report? and to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed?

For he shall grow up before him as a tender plant, and as a root out of a dry ground: he hath no form nor comeliness; and when we shall see him, there is no beauty that we should desire him.

He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief: and we hid as it were our faces from him; he was despised, and we esteemed him not.

Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows: yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted.

But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed.

All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all. He was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth: he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth.

He was taken from prison and from judgment: and who shall declare his generation? for he was cut off out of the land of the living: for the transgression of my people was he stricken.

And he made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death; because he had done no violence, neither was any deceit in his mouth.

Yet it pleased the Lord to bruise him; he hath put him to grief: when thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin, he shall see his seed, he shall prolong his days, and the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand.

He shall see of the travail of his soul, and shall be satisfied: by his knowledge shall my righteous servant justify many; for he shall bear their iniquities.

Therefore will I divide him a portion with the great, and he shall divide the spoil with the strong; because he hath poured out his soul unto death: and he was numbered with the transgressors; and he bare the sin of many, and made intercession for the transgressors."—Isa. liii.

THE REDEMPTION OF THE MATERIAL.

By the Rev. H. A. Edwards (Canada).

"When ye pray, say . . . Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done upon earth as it is in heaven."

There is an universal tendency to-day to discriminate between that which is spiritual and that which is material, to the prejudice of the latter; and so much is this the case, that to describe an idea or conception as material rather than spiritual is, in effect, to condemn it.

This attitude of mind is especially noticeable in the criticisms which are often levelled at those who are endeavouring to preach the coming of Christ's visible kingdom upon earth.

The present article is an attempt to examine honestly, in the light of the Bible, the true relation between the material and spiritual realms.

The first thing we notice is that both material and spiritual realms were created by God, and, so far as human life is concerned, the material came first; it was after man had been created that God breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and he "became a living soul."

We read that the created things were "very good," and since they were almost all of the material realm, we are led to the conclusion that God's plans and purposes have definite use and value for material beings and things.

One might, I think, go even further, and say that the material seems necessary to God's purpose, for if it is true that the Spirit brooded upon the waters in order that the creative processes might be accomplished, it is apparently not less a fact that the waters had to be there for the Spirit to brood upon. Here we see both material and spiritual realms jointly requisite for the furtherance of the Divine plan.

A change soon comes over the scene. No longer, alas, is everything "very good" Evil has come into the world, the temporary degradation of the material realm has taken place, man has fallen, and the ground is "cursed" for his fallen sake. We read very thankfully, however, that this shall not always remain so.

From this point the condition of the material realm is abnormal; that is to say, it is no longer "very good," it has become depraved. And, since our only experience of the material realm (ourselves included) is during its depraved condition, the tendency has been, through force of habit, to regard that depraved state as indigenous to the material realm; instead of being, as the Bible always insists, a foreign importation which is to be eventually exorcised. So, we have come to use the word material in a depreciatory sense, as, for instance, when we say "What a material conception," we do not, as a rule, intend to bestow praise.

Now this is simply to give away the very position which the Bible tells us God is fighting for. It is flinging away the hope and promise continually held out of a restored and redeemed material realm.

Nor are we even consistent in this error; we err in exactly the same way, though in the opposite direction, in regard to the spiritual realm; reserving the word spiritual to connote something good, noble, and lofty. We say a person is spiritually-minded, and we certainly do not mean that he has the mind of a devil; yet, the Devil is spirit, and only spirit.

The truth is that neither material nor spiritual entities are, ipso facto, either good or bad. They may be either the one or the other, or partly both; according to whether they are functioning in obedience to the will of God, or not. There is depravity in both realms. The same Bible which tells us of the ground being cursed, and of the whole creation waiting for the adoption, also tells us of mutiny in Heaven and spiritual wickedness in high places, and we are given a glimpse of the Devil and his angels being cast out of Heaven, and taking up their abode upon earth for a time. All spirits, these.

To dwell exclusively upon the ultimate redemption of the spiritual realm, and to ignore the equally certainly promised redemption of the material realm, is to blind ourselves to a great part of the Scriptures, and to detract from the power and glory of Christ's achievement.

I submit that the supposed antipathy between the spiritual and material realms is dishonouring to Christ—of Whom we read that "all things were made by Him, and without Him was not anything made that was made." It is impossible to exclude the material realm from the things that were made by Him, and it is unthinkable to conceive of His resting short of a complete redemption and restoration of all His works.

We are continually pointed to this consummation; there is to be a new heaven, and also a new earth. The time is to come when the lion shall eat straw like the ox, carnage and bloodshed shall cease, and a little child shall lead the friendly beasts of God.

Our Blessed Lord combines in His own Person the two realms in one sublime and reciprocating harmony. He is God—that is perfect spirit; He is also Man, and as such possesses a perfect material body. He took particular care to disabuse our minds of the idea that after the resurrection He had left the material behind: "Handle Me and see, a spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see Me have."

The conception of the Kingdom of Heaven has swung violently to and fro as a pendulum from the material to the spiritual and back again. The plumb-line of truth is not to be found at either end of the arc, but midway between.

The Jews of our Lord's day visualized a purely material kingdom, and one, moreover, under the present depraved condition of the material realm. In correcting their impression, our Lord never denied that He would rule over a kingdom upon this earth, he merely told them it was not for them to know the time when this would occur. Christian thought, revolting at the materialistic conception of the Jews, swung to the opposite end of the arc and envisaged a purely spiritual Kingdom in Heaven, far removed from the grossness of earth. This conception reached its height in the "other worldly" orientation of the mediæval Church. In modern times we have become familiar with the other extreme of opinion which tells us that every day in every way things are getting better and better; that human nature is working out its own redemption; that there is neither hell nor judgment; and that Christ will certainly not come again in Person to this earth.

Let us reverently, and with minds purged of preconceived ideas, see what the Bible has to say about this golden age, which it calls the Kingdom of God, and for the establishment of which on earth our Lord bids us pray.

We find that it is both material and spiritual, as He its King is both material and spiritual. We find that it will be set up on earth (wherever it may eventually be transferred to), and that its Throne will be at Jerusalem; from which central point its laws and ordinances will be gradually extended to the whole earth, and to which central point the duties, loyalties and worship of all the dwellers upon the earth will flow. In its completed state it will comprise a restored and redeemed human race, and a restored and redeemed material realm. The one cannot take place without the other; the last enemy to be destroyed we are told is death, and, since death is the wages of sin, its destruction must imply the end of sin, which was the cause of the depravity of both realms. In the redemption of the material realm our physical bodies will participate, being found like unto His glorious body. Thus increasingly, as the decades of the millennial reign of Christ on earth roll by, will those privileged to be living on the earth have the joy and wonder of seeing and taking their appointed share in the re-creating activities of Him by Whom all things were made, as He gradually cleanses the material creation from the depravity into which it has fallen during the Devil's temporary and illegal rule; till finally, the great work being completed (and we are told it will take a thousand years), they will behold both spiritual and material realms, perfect in every detail, ready to be delivered up to the Father, that God may be all in all.

This is the vision splendid held out to us in the Bible, a vision so overwhelming in its beauty and glory that the mind falters in trying to grasp it. The writer of this article is one of those who are known as British-Israelites, and we rejoice to believe in the sure promise of this vision becoming realized.

We believe also in the steps towards this happy consummation which God has revealed to us as being ordained by Him in order to assist in bringing it about.

These steps constitute the story of an immense and patient preparation through a long tale of years; beginning with a single man Abraham, and ending with a specially trained and equipped race—trained and equipped to prepare for the setting up of this Kingdom of God. It is not a case of favouritism; it is a case of making and tempering a special tool, to do a particular work for the benefit of all. Since a great deal of the preparatory work is in the material realm and has to do with material things, tremendous material abilities are to be given to this tool race. Some of these material abilities are geographical, some are naval, some are metallurgical, some financial, some biological. Spiritual abilities are also promised to enable the tool race to utilize the material abilities to the achievement of the Great Purpose.

This tool race (frequently called the servant race) is not to suppose that these abilities are given to it because of any special worthiness or goodness on its part. Not at all; it is entirely for God's oath's sake, and for the achievement of His purpose, which includes the entire human race, that these abilities are entrusted.

We are told that the race will work out God's will by virtue of the abilities granted to it, largely in complete ignorance as to what they are really doing; though at the time of the end they will know, and the knowledge will abash them. This race is not only to make material preparation for the setting up of the Kingdom, it is also to be the chief agent in spreading the knowledge of salvation throughout the world.

We believe that the Celto-Saxon peoples of to-day are this tool or servant race. We find that they possess all the equipment in the shape of material abilities that God promised to the people who were to do this work for Him and their fellowmen, including the geographical, naval, and other abilities. We do not believe that these abilities have been given to these peoples on account of their own worthiness, but that they have been entrusted to them in order that they may perform this part of God's work in the material realm, as a kind of servant people who shall prepare the way of Him Who, when He cometh, shall "restore all things"— material as well as spiritual.

The Bible indicates a sequence as to these realms. It may be that eventually there will be no further need of the material, and that after all things have been delivered up to the Father, existence will be maintained in terms of pure spirit. But, even if that is to be (and I do not personally think it is), it can only be through a gradual usage and functioning in the restored material realm. We cannot run before we have learned to walk; and so cannot hope to function perfectly as unalloyed spirit until we have absorbed the lessons, which are to be learned in the restored material realm—"That is not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural."

Human life has never yet, since Eden, functioned in a perfect material realm, but always in a depraved one. Even our Lord had to live His sinless life in a depraved material environment. The very fact that in the Divine economy it was necessary for Him to assume a material form is proof of the value of the material realm. The Incarnation is God's Own witness to the immense importance in His eyes of material things. It is conceivable that pure spirit could vanquish and destroy depraved spirit. I presume that God could destroy the Devil by His purely spiritual might, without having recourse to any Incarnation. This would leave the material realm unredeemed. Such a partial redemption need not of necessity debar man from a future spiritual life; it is conceivable that a purely spiritual victory might have been achieved and the Devil destroyed. With his destruction his power over the spirit of man must cease, but, as stated above, the material realm, including the material side of man's being, would not have been redeemed; the body would pay the inevitable penalty of depravity, and would die; there would be no resurrection, and any future life would of necessity be merely as disembodied spirit.

This is not the picture presented to us in the Bible. It would be but an incomplete victory at best. The material realm was created by Christ, it is His work which once was "very good." It has become depraved through the Devil's malice; and, unless it can be redeemed and completely restored, the Devil has, to that extent, scored a partial triumph.

The honour of God's majesty, and the sovereignty of Christ's complete Kingship, alike demand that this shall not be. There can be no partial victories, it must be entire, absolute. Therefore, this material world has to be restored and made a fit place for the wondrous activities of the Kingdom of God.

When our Lord said "My kingdom is not of this world," He was not saying it would not be upon this earth; indeed, He bids us pray continually for the time when it shall be established upon earth. This single sentence is frequently quoted by those who contend that Christ's Kingdom is purely spiritual, as though it meant "My kingdom does not belong to, or has nothing to do with, this world." Those who so translate it not only ignore the many passages in the Bible where it is expressly stated that it has very much to do with this world, but they are guilty of either a complete ignorance of the Greek text, or else of a wilful mistranslation of it. There are several passages where the expression kingdom (or kingdoms) of this world occur, as, for instance, the account of the temptation when the Devil offered to give our Lord the kingdoms of this world, and again in the Revelation where the statement occurs "the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdom of our Lord," etc. In all of these passages EXCEPT this one statement of our Lord (John xviii, 36), the Greek is "tou kosmou autou," the ordinary possessive genitive meaning of or belonging to this world; in this one passage only, where it is our Lord speaking, the Greek is different, being "ek tou kosmou autou." The preposition "ek" (which takes the genitive case also by the way) alters the whole sense. It means out of, or from, and therefore denotes origin, not location. Our Lord uses the same construction when He says that He came "ek tou Theou" forth from God. He was not the product of the ordinary biological process; He was a special importation from above into the world sphere. In the same way, in describing His Kingdom, He says it is not out of or originating in this world, i.e., it is not the product of purely world political forces, it is placed in the world, as He Himself was placed in the world, as the result of a special act of God (cf. in the Greek, Matt. iv, 8; Rev. xi, 15; and John xviii, 36).

Daniel refers to this special Kingdom that the God of Heaven would set up as of unearthly origin in comparison with the four great world Empires when he likens it to a stone "cut out without hands" and definitely attributes its initiation to God. It is to this unearthly origin, though it is to be upon the earth, that our Lord refers when he says that it is not out of or does not originate in this world. Neither did it; we learn of it first in the promise to Abraham, confirmed by God's tremendous oath by Himself, that from his seed should spring the appointed tool or servant race. Abraham had a natural son, Ishmael, and hoped that the promise might be through him. God ordained otherwise, however; a special and miraculous origin for the servant people was determined; Abraham and Sarah were allowed to age beyond the time of possible childbirth till they became, so far as producing an heir was concerned, "as dead" (Rom. iv, 19). Then, and not before, God intervened, Isaac was born, and the long process of rearing, training, tempering and equipping the chosen race began.

Dark indeed was the plunge when the material realm became the abode (albeit but temporarily) of the Devil and his angels. Sad and terrible is the tale of sin, suffering, and misery, that they have wrought there. At present he is still the Prince of this world—in virtue of which Princedom, be it noted, he was able to offer the kingdoms of this world as a temptation to our Lord.

His time is running short however, the period of disastrous mutiny is drawing to a close, the night is far spent, the day is at hand. Soon, He "Whose right it is" will take the throne of this world, and "the government shall be upon His shoulder . . . of the increase of His government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, to order it and to establish it with judgment and with justice, henceforth, even for ever."

PREDESTINATION.—I.

A SHORT ACCOUNT OF THE HISTORY OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

BY THE REV. R. G. F. WADDINGTON, M.A.

["Mr. Waddington claims no originality for this series of articles on Predestination. They are a frank plagiarism of a book published many years ago by a firm which is now out of business, and written by a man, Mr. A. K. Robinson, of whom Mr. Waddington has been able to find no trace. But the book is one of the best elementary expositions of British-Israel teaching which, in Mr. Waddington's humble opinion, has yet been written.

Mr. Waddington has therefore thought it worth while to give to THE NATIONAL MESSAGE readers the substance, and, in some parts, the actual words of Mr. Robinson's capital little book."]

THOUGH it may seem to some almost childish to begin in such a way, yet inasmuch as I must speak to both learned and unlearned, and the learned must remember that there are many thousands of people in the world who have not had their particular advantages of education, nor their opportunities of reading, I must begin by defining the terms Israel and Judah.

Most Commentaries and authors speak and write as if Israel and Judah were interchangeable terms, and, when wishing to write about "The Lost Tribes of Israel," entitle their articles "The History of the Jews," which is a most misleading and incorrect thing to do, as the greater portion of the Hebrew Race, the Kingdom of Israel, never were Jews and are never referred to in the Bible as Jews. If students of the history of the Hebrews would but take the trouble to read what the Bible says, instead of taking their information from a Commentary, the confusion would speedily cease from the mind of every intelligent reader.

The history of the Hebrew Race, a term which includes both Israel and Judah, properly commences with the Divine call of Abram, who is called the Rock from which they were hewn, the hole of the pit from which they were digged. (Isaiah li, 1.)

God appeared to Abram and directed him to leave his country and to go into another land, as yet unknown to Abram, a land which God would give to him and his children after him for an everlasting possession.

I am not concerned at the moment to prove the fact of either the call or the promise, the only fact that we need notice at present is that this call and promise is stated clearly in the Bible, and it is made the foundation of teaching both by our Lord and by His Apostles Paul and Peter.

There were other gracious promises made to Abram, which are detailed for us in several chapters of Genesis, particularly chapters xv, xvii and xxii.

From Abram, afterwards called Abraham, descended Isaac, who is the son of promise.

From Isaac came Jacob; from Jacob came twelve sons and two specially noted grandsons, who became in due course the heads of the THIRTEEN Tribes of Israel. For Joseph being displaced by his two sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, increased the number from twelve to thirteen, and Jacob definitely places these two sons of Joseph on a level with his own eleven other sons. (Genesis xlviii, 5.)

In later years the Tribe of Levi was chosen out for the Ministry of Israel and ceased to be reckoned as a Tribe along with the others. Consequently the expression Twelve Tribes includes Ephraim and Manasseh, but excludes Levi.

These thirteen families became settled for many years in the land of Egypt, which became for them the House of Bondage.

The next historical item of interest is that the whole of Israel now designated the Hebrew Race were delivered from their slavery, and migrated to the land of Canaan, which was a definite part of the vast land promised to Abraham.

Under the rule of Moses and Joshua they were a united people, but on the death of Joshua they became rather a confederation of tribes without much cohesion, and often with open disunion which led to civil war. At the end of this time Saul became king of Israel, but his authority was never acknowledged by Judah, and he failed to unite the Twelve Tribes in one kingdom, which was the real reason of Israel's demand for a king.

After Saul's tragic death, Judah made David king, whilst Israel followed Ishbosheth, a son of Saul.

Here we see the first absolute Scriptural demarcation of the Twelve Tribes as two kingdoms, with separate kings, armies and governments. Nevertheless the distinction had been defined before, for we read in Psalm cxiv, 1, 2: "When Israel went forth out of Egypt, the House of Jacob from a people of strange language, Judah became His sanctuary, Israel His dominion,"* a distinction, to those who use their intelligence, equally clear and well-defined.

After some six years of this twofold organization, David succeeded in obtaining hold over the whole Twelve Tribes, and in his days, and in the days of his son, Solomon, this United Kingdom attained to great glory.

The later years of Solomon were, however, so marked by sin that God declared His intention of bringing the former division into two kingdoms into operation again. (1 Kings xi, 11-13.)

The story of this division is plainly told in 1 Kings xii, and it is important to remember that this division was final, that NEVER, in the record of the Bible, is there the slightest justification for the common idea that Israel and Judah came together as one people.

It has been argued from 2 Chron. xi, 16, that the breach occasioned by the folly of Rehoboam was soon healed, and that Israel returned to the allegiance of their king and their worship at Jerusalem. But this Scripture makes two things clear. First, that only those of Israel who "set their hearts to seek the Lord" strengthened the kingdom of Judah. Second, that even these "walked in the way of David" for but three years, leaving it to be inferred quite clearly and legitimately that at the end of the three years the strengthening ceased to function.

Further, when we read of the return from captivity, we read of the return of a part of the kingdom of Judah only. Ezra and Nehemiah who record the return speak quite definitely of Judah, Benjamin and Levi, and they never say a word about the return of any other of the Tribes.

It is of the utmost importance, then, that the reader should fix in his mind this clear division of the Twelve Tribes into two distinct kingdoms, with absolutely different courses to their separate history.

It is also of vital importance to note that the first act of Jeroboam, as king of Israel, was to abandon the worship of Jehovah, an act that was confirmed by every single one of the men who succeeded to the throne of Israel, for it is written of every one that he followed in the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat who made Israel to sin. There is neither exception nor relief to that order of apostasy.

After the death of Jeroboam, the nation of Israel, the TEN Tribes, was governed for a period of 250 years by a succession of profane and unprincipled kings. Their entire reigns scarcely exceeded an average of twelve years each, and among the whole nineteen princes there were not less than eleven dynasties, each one hurling down its predecessor by violence and bloodshed.

Prophet after prophet, warning after warning of God's threatened judgments, were sent to them. Invasion followed invasion, until at last the whole kingdom of Israel was ravaged from one end to the other, and the people were taken captive and removed nearly a thousand miles away to Media.

There were some very small remnants of the Ten Tribes left behind, stragglers who escaped the general debacle, as some of the later chapters of 2 Chronicles suggest, but so small and insignificant were these remnants that the Bible expression that Israel was removed out of God's sight is substantially correct, for the very vast majority of Israel was taken away.

To prevent any possibility of their return, God allowed their land to become populated by peoples of other and heathen nationalities, who afterward became known as Samaritans.

Now will the reader try to fix this first portion of history and of Bible record in his mind, and note that this nation of Israel has completely vanished from the knowledge of mankind as the smoke up a chimney. Except for two references in the books of Esdras and Josephus, there is no further mention of Israel of the Ten Tribes, as Israel, in all history. There is frequent confusion made in modern histories through referring to the Jews as "all Israel," but from the day that Ten-Tribed Israel went to Media, there is no historic record of them other than that of Esdras and Josephus. Let us turn our attention now to the other portion of the Hebrew Race, the nation of Judah.

Of them it is recorded that their conduct was much worse than that of Israel, because they had seen the consequences of the sin and folly of Israel, and failed to profit by her example.

After repeated warnings, the judgments of God fell upon Judah also, and about 120 years after the captivity of Israel, Judah was taken captive to Babylon.

Let us carefully note that this captivity was nothing like so complete as the captivity of Israel, and that it ceased after seventy years.

Some will conclude that as Judah was allowed to return, and Israel was not, that therefore Judah's punishment was lighter than that of Israel, and that the Bible word that Judah had behaved worse than Israel is not correct.

In spite of the surface appearance, we shall understand that the Bible is correct in its statements and just in its judgments. Judah's punishment was far more severe than that of Israel. Israel disappears and is forgotten by the nations, and so escaped the attentions of her enemies. Further, as I shall hope to show, she was placed in such a position in the land of her captivity that, on escaping from that land, she found herself on the very high road of the march of civilization. For it is an historic fact that none can deny, that about the fifth century B.C. the line of progress left the east and took a westerly course, and that while the east has been standing still, the west has been moving ahead. But Judah returned to Palestine, which up to then had been on the cross-roads of all trade routes, and now became a mere siding. They fell under the dominion of one Empire after another, and under the Romans lost their national home again, and have been a scattered and persecuted people almost ever since. Their descendants are found throughout the world to-day, always as a subject race, known as Jews, despised as such, carrying with them the marks of their condemnation. And however much one may deplore the treatment they have received, the fact of it remains.

Let the reader emphatically note that the People of Israel were never Jews and were never known as Jews. They were absolutely distinct, as a kingdom, in the place of their captivity, and in their subsequent history. They were a thousand miles away from Palestine when the Jews caused the Crucifixion of our Lord, and had no part whatever in that deed which brought such terrible consequences to the Jews.

These facts, which the Bible makes clear enough, supply the key to what has long caused confusion in the interpretation of God's Word, and to what has often led to disbelief.

It is obvious, from these historical facts and Bible statements, that the prophecies which have often been declared contradictory were given and applied to two distinct and separate nationalities, namely, Israel and Judah.

TO EX-SERVICE MEN.

BY "FUSILIER."

WILL you, the ex-Service men, ask yourselves a few straightforward questions?

1. Did the war, when you were "out there," give you such a shake-up as to make you think as you had never thought before?

2. Do you admit that you were so near the "Great Crossing" that you could not help thinking deeply on what was on the "other side"?

3. Did you, after demobilization, come home still puzzling on these things?

4. Did you look to the Churches to solve or help to solve these problems for you?

Digitized by Google

5. Did you find that the Churches solved these problems for you as you had hoped?

6. Did you wonder what was wrong with the message of the Churches, and why they failed to solve your problems?

The present writer is strongly of the opinion that the majority of ex-Service men did think along such lines, and that they are still wondering why the Churches failed so badly to take advantage of one of the greatest chances that had ever come to them.

If you have had these thoughts, it is worth while to look into a teaching that, I believe, has solved the doubts of thousands and will solve the doubts of thousands more, if they will take the trouble to go into the matter.

Now first to put the matter as it came to me.

I had been wondering why it was that the Churches, with such a wonderful opportunity before them, had failed to such an obvious extent.

Now some parsons will tell you that the majority of people don't want the Churches' teaching, that the Churches cannot get hold of people because the people will not listen to what the Churches have to offer.

I wonder. Why is it, then, that the Churches are full on Armistice Day?

Is it, perhaps, that the ex-Service men and the nation want a message, plain and simple, that they can understand, such as they do not find in the Churches' teaching as ordinarily presented to them?

Armistice Day Services present a message that is simple and easily understood, and the Churches are full; at other times they are nearly empty.

I think that "Sapper" in his book "Mufti" voices the thoughts of ex-Service men when he says: "They are beginning to think for themselves. . . . And yet it is only simplicity they want; the simple creeds of helping on the other fellow and playing the game is what they understand . . . ." After all, the doctrine of helping one another is one of the fundamental doctrines of Christianity.

How is it, then, that so many of the Churches have failed to present their message in a way that would be understood and welcomed?

I think that the answer lies in this.

1. That too many of the Churches have, very largely, ceased to believe in their Book, the Bible.

2. That the Churches have spiritualized the promises, which means that they have claimed, for the Church, promises made to a nation.

In ceasing to believe large parts of the Bible some of the Churches have cut away their very foundation, and buildings with shaky foundations are apt to be unsound.

Some parsons tell us that we can believe the New Testament, but not the Old.

Others tell us that prophecy is quite unreliable.

While others want to make the Bible fit with their ideas of science. All this is very puzzling to the layman, who cannot help seeing that the Old and New Testaments are so dependent on one another that they cannot be divided.

He can see for himself that the Old Testament, over and over again, foretold things that did come to pass, while the New Testament, over and over again, refers to the Old for confirmation of its teaching.

He sees, too, that the parsons cannot even agree as to what should be believed and what should not.

The ex-Service man knows that no one can teach a job unless he has first learnt that job from the beginning, unless he believes in what he teaches and unless he starts his teaching from the beginning. An instructor would make a poor job of teaching musketry if he cut out all the preliminary part and took his recruits straight out on the range.

The layman wants a straight deal, he wants a straightforward teaching that does not contradict itself, and the Churches do not give him such a teaching. The time has gone by and education has advanced too far for the layman to take everything he is told without question, whether it is contradictory or not. You all know that a very large part of the Bible deals with the past, the future and the greatness of a special race. We have come to call this race "the chosen race."

At once many will say, "Oh, the chosen race, that is the Jews." Is it? It's up to us to get this point cleared up.

Who are the Jews? Who were Israel?

To answer these questions we must go back a long way and start with Abraham.

Abraham had a son, Isaac. Isaac had a son, Jacob.

Jacob was given the name "Israel" by God and this meant "Ruling with God." This is the very first appearance of the name "Israel." All those descended from Jacob were Israelites, but no ancestor of Jacob's could possibly have been an Israelite.

Abraham and Isaac were not Israelites, but they were Hebrews through their ancestor, Heber. Jacob's descendants were Hebrews and Israelites.

Jacob had 12 sons, the fathers of the 12 Tribes of Israel. Of these 12 sons one was named Judah, and it is Judah's descendants, and Judah's descendants only, who are Judahites or Jews.

The descendants of the other eleven sons were Reubenites, Danites, Gadites, etc., but they were certainly not Jews because they were not descended from Judah.

All the descendants of Jacob's 12 sons were Israelites by descent, but the name "Israel" seems to have had a special application to the Birthright Tribe.

How the Birthright descended to Ephraim.

One of Jacob's 12 sons was Joseph, and it was Joseph that Jacob chose as his heir, or, as the Bible puts it, Joseph was given the Birthright.

Joseph had two sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, who were heirs to the Birthright after their father.

Jacob, before his death, adopted Ephraim and Manasseh as though they were his own sons. In consequence of this their descendants took their place as two of the 12 Tribes of Israel. This did not make 13 tribes, because the tribe of Levi was early set apart as the priestly tribe and was not counted as one of the 12 Tribes.

When Jacob adopted Ephraim and Manasseh he chose the younger, Ephraim, and gave the Birthright to him.

This gift of the Birthright made Ephraim the leading Tribe of the Nation; it also seems to have carried with it a special claim to the name Israel.

When the Israelites had been in the land of Palestine about 400 years, David became King over the whole Nation in the year 1048 B.C. For seven years before this he had been King over Judah only, his own tribe.

David and, after him, his son Solomon, reigned over the whole Nation. But in the time of Solomon's son, Rehoboam, the Nation split. Ten tribes, under Jeroboam, rebelled, and formed the Northern Kingdom with Samaria as capital, leaving two tribes, Judah and Benjamin, with most of the Levites, to form the Southern Kingdom with Jerusalem as capital.

Never again were the 12 Tribes reunited under one King; they remained separate Kingdoms.

Judah was the leading tribe of the Southern Kingdom, and from that fact the Southern Kingdom was called the House of Judah, and later the Jews. But they were never called Israel. It was the Northern Kingdom who were named the House of Israel or Israel. It was also called the House of Ephraim or Ephraim from its leading tribe, Ephraim. The Bible never confuses these names. About the year 721 B.C. the Northern Kingdom of Israel was conquered by the Assyrians and carried away captive. They never returned to Palestine, they are the lost so-called 10 Tribes of Israel, and they are "the lost Sheep of the House of Israel" of the New Testament. The Southern Kingdom of Judah was conquered by the Babylonians and taken captive to Babylon about 130 years after the captivity of Northern Israel. Judah returned from Babylon after 70 years, and it was not till then that she began to call herself Israel. After the captivity of Northern Israel, all historical and direct mention of them in the Bible ceases, but they continue to be spoken of prophetically and indirectly as Israel.

Enough has been said to show that, wherever Israel is mentioned in the Bible, great care is necessary to make sure who is meant. Nine times out of ten Northern Israel is meant.

Having now got it clear that the Jews were never more than a portion of the Chosen Race, it becomes necessary to see what happened to the rest of the Race. First, let it be made quite clear that the Jews of New Testament times knew perfectly well that their "lost brethren" of Israel still existed as a nation. Josephus, their great historian, who wrote about A.D. 80, left it on record that lost Israel were still beyond the sources of Euphrates, an immense multitude. Wherever lost Israel was, it was still far the largest portion of the "Chosen Race."

About 1,500 years ago the Church claimed the Promises made to the Chosen Race for herself. Ever since, all Churches have persisted in that claim, quite regardless of the fact that the Promises were made to a Nation and do not fit the Church.

When the Church first claimed the Promises, the Jews were the only visible portion of the Chosen Race. At that time the Jews were scattered, were no longer a nation, and showed no signs of ever becoming a nation again. Therefore the Church claimed the Promises. But this did not alter the fact that the Lost 10 Tribes of Israel might one day reappear and fulfil their destiny as the Chosen Race. This the Bible said would be the case.

If it can be proved that there is a Race in the world to-day that is fulfilling the Promises and carrying out the Mission laid down for Israel, then it is up to us to find that Race and recognize it. When we come to examine these Promises, we find they fit the British-Anglo-Saxon Race like a glove, and that this Chosen Race has not disappeared from history, but is here in the world for anyone to recognize, if they will take the trouble.

In this ordinary workaday world, what do you do if you find that you are the heir to property or money, in fact, to an inheritance? Don't you at once take steps to prove yourself heir and to enter on the enjoyment of your inheritance?

Much more, then, is it up to a Race or Nation to prove its heirship to a great inheritance and to take full possession.

It is interesting to notice that many prominent men, Statesmen, Divines, and the like, state in their public utterances that our Race is a Race with a Mission. Some of them enlarge on the kind of Mission they conceive it to be, such as: Carrying Christianity all over the world, helping other races to a better form of government and to a happier state, setting free the slaves, settling the undeveloped parts of the world, bringing order out of disorder, and carrying, wherever we go, the fairest and most just code of Laws known to the world. All of these are true of our Race. All of these are part of the Mission laid down for Israel in the Bible. The dictionary says that mission means "a sending, or being sent, by authority, to perform some service or function." This clearly shows that every mission is sent by some authority, but it is just here that our public speakers generally leave us in the dark. They tell us that we are a Race, with a Mission, but they do not tell us who gave us this Mission.

One supposes that the only authority that could give a mission to a race is the Divine Authority, and lately one of our public speakers has hinted at this. Mr. Baldwin, in his Empire Day Message of May, 1929, when speaking of the Empire, said: ". . . . and as we study its destiny we are bound to think of it less as a human achievement than as an instrument of Divine Providence for the promotion of the progress of mankind."

So far, so good, a public speaker, a Prime Minister, as he was then, acknowledges the Divine Authority, but he omits to tell us that the Bible is largely about just such a Mission entrusted to a Race by Divine Authority. Why not draw the obvious conclusion that the Race of to-day, carrying out a Mission by Divine Authority, must be no other than Israel, the Chosen Race of the Bible?

The Churches, by spiritualizing the Promises, have cut out the whole of the National aspect of Israel's Mission.

They fail to see that a proper understanding of the National Mission of Israel must surely lead to a closer, clearer understanding of Israel's Spiritual Mission.

Well, there's our National Inheritance; it's up to us to recognize ourselves and the job we have been given to do.

BRITISH-ISRAEL FACTS NOT FANCIES.—VIII.

By MAJOR-GENERAL C. A. HADFIELD.

ISRAEL AND "BLINDNESS" OF IDENTITY.

OUR nation, by the decree of God, is made "blind" to their origin. St. Paul sets before the Gentile Christians "that blindness in part is happened to Israel until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in." This part of Israel, before mentioned as broken off, is blind, and will remain so until Ephraim's promised fulness, referred to in Gen. xlviii, 19, be accomplished.

Do we not read in Isa. xxix, 11-12: "Read this, I pray thee, and he saith, I cannot, for it is sealed"? Then again, in Dan. xii, 8-9: "Go thy way, Daniel, for the words are closed up and sealed." There is a reason, of course, for all this concealment, but the time is at hand for the eyes to be opened. Read Isa. xlii, 18-19: "Hear, ye deaf; and look, ye blind, that ye may see. Who is blind, but my servant? or deaf as my messenger that I sent? Who is blind as he that is perfect; and blind as the Lord's servant? Seeing many things, but thou observest not; opening the ears, but he heareth not." Then turn to Rom. xi, 25: ". . . . that blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in." And then, in the following verse comes the message of hope: "And so all Israel shall be saved, as it is written, There shall come out of Zion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob."

"His watchmen are blind" (Isa. lvi, 10). "For the Lord hath poured out upon you the spirit of deep sleep and hath closed your eyes" (Isa. xxix, 10).

In a desire amongst so many to read St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans, especially chapters ix, x, xi, as relating to "the Jews," Bible students fail to realize that the Jews are mentioned but thrice, while Israel is referred to some fourteen times. Paul by inspiration wrote cautiously, in order not to disclose that which God designed to be concealed until the fulness of time.

THE APOSTLES' JOURNEYS.

It is possible that some of the Apostles found their way to localities north and west of the Black Sea, to Arsareth, whither, according to Esdras and other historians, the Ten Tribes had migrated. They would endeavour to do so in order to preach the Gospel, as commanded, "to the dispersed tribes of Israel." "Go not into the way of the Gentiles (i.e., to others than of Israel), and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not" (Matt. x, 5-6). "Then said the Jews among themselves, Whither will He go, that we shall not find Him?" "Will He go unto the dispersed among the Gentiles?" "And teach the Gentiles?" The Samaritans were, by origin, a mixed heathen people, whom the King of Assyria had sent to inhabit Samaria after he had carried the Israelites captive (2 Kings xvii, 24-41). Christ's many references to the "lost sheep of the House of Israel" no doubt referred to the hidden exiled Ten Tribes whom God had destined should rise to such immense power in the world. Is it not more than likely, therefore, that the Apostles made their way to the Israelites, who by that time were living and known as the Getae and who, later, were known as the Goths? If you refer to Isa. ix, 1-7, it will be found that Israel, a heathen and a Gentile people, are to see a great light in their darkness. The Getae lapsed into heathenism. A deliverer was promised; they—the Israelites, under a changed name—would, we read, be led to "a glorious land."

When we refer to Acts ii it is found that St. Peter's distinction between "Jew" and "men of Israel" is as distinct as in the Old Testament. It would be about A.D. 28 that our Lord despatched His Apostles upon their mission to "the lost sheep of the House of Israel"; and a few years later, about A.D. 61, we find St. Peter writing to the strangers "scattered" in the Black Sea district (1 Peter i, 1). He addresses them as "elect," i.e., "Chosen of God." Israel now passes from the "Lo-ammi" (forsaken) stage and is henceforward called by the name of God once more. "Sheep" is an expression frequently made use of as representative of Israel—as "New Wine" is expressive of "The Gospel."

"The Jews" were not Christ's sheep, for our Lord said: "Ye believe not because ye are not My Sheep." From the Bible we learn that the lost sheep of the House of Israel are the elect who are sojourners of the Dispersion. This seems to be clear from Isaiah ix, 2; Hos. ii, 23; Matt. iv, 13-16; Luke i, 79; 1 Peter ii, 10. Those who had not obtained mercy but now have obtained mercy. The Elect, being Israel, are the very people to whom Christ sent forth His Disciples (see Matt. x, 6; xv, 24).

Then if we refer to Zech. x there can be no doubt or mistake, for we read: "I will strengthen the House of Judah, and I will save the House of Joseph . . . and they (of Joseph) shall be as though I had not cast them off."

REVERSING THE SENTENCE ON ISRAEL.

In 1 Peter ii we find a reversal of the sentence which had centuries before been imposed, through the Prophet Hosea, upon Israel. Ephraim, through turning to God, was at last becoming fitted to be "a corner stone," "a chosen generation . . . which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy."

This was written about A.D. 61, and almost immediately after this we find mention in Pliny and Tacitus of the Goths. For years the Israelites had been "outcasts," rejected by God, yet it was witnessed of these people that they were to be called by the Name of God, as it had also been written: "Ye shall not be called by My Name." Here God's mercy intervenes. The syllable "Got" in Goth is the name of God; as is the syllable "El" in Israel.

"In the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not My People there it shall be said unto them, Ye are the Sons of the Living God" (Hos. i, 10, 785 B.C.).

This is a definite promise of God's forgiveness. It is His merciful reversal of His former sentence that Israel should cease from being "His people." It is the saving them from the Lo-ammi stage. "Hath God cast away His people?" refers to Israel, and not to the Jews. So this answer of "God forbid" is our assurance of the Everliving Nation of Israel. It is not, it cannot, in the face of these words, be "Cast away" or "lost"! The prophet Zechariah in the words quoted above tells us so "for our learning."

" For a small moment have I forsaken thee ; but with great mercies will I gather thee. In a little wrath I hid My face from thee for a moment ; but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the Lord thy Redeemer " (Isa. liv, 7, 8). This proves there was no final casting off of the Northern Kingdom.

LECTURE BY THE REV. J. J. WHITEHOUSE, M.A.

THERE was a large gathering at Clarence Hall, Southend, on Thursday, when the Southend Branch of the British-Israel-World Federation met to hear a lecture by the Rev. J. J. Whitehouse, M.A., who spoke on " The Present Faith and Future Outlook of British-Israel." Mr. J. A. Jubb, a member of the Branch, presided.

Mr. Whitehouse, who was frequently applauded during his long and impressive address, said he chose to speak on that subject because he believed the British-Israel Truth offered a solution to the problems of the present very perplexing period. Nobody could deny that the present age was one providing the most difficult situations that the world, in modern times, had ever had to face. Whatever phase of life they looked at seemed like wandering in a maze. The statesmanship of that day did not progress to show the way out. There was the problem of the establishing of peace on earth, about which the civilized world had met in conferences ; it was, indeed, an age of conferences. Then there was the economic problem, not only in this country with its 1,500,000 unemployed, but in the United States with their 5,000,000, and in Germany, where about 1,000,000 were unemployed. The position in that respect was perfectly appalling. Those who saw farthest troubled most for the future. There was also religious perplexity, especially in England. Behind all this, again, was the great nightmare of the anti-God war, emerging from Russia, of which there were signs of propaganda in other countries as well. It was apparently the intention to carry that war all over the world. There had never been anything like it before, even in the days of the Roman persecution of the Church. Further, there was the moral avalanche that seemed to have come over the present generation ; old moral restrictions were being easily laid aside. We were living in an age when the " nots " were taken out of the Commandments and put into the Creed.

Two things, said Mr. Whitehouse, came out of all this. In the first place, these problems were closely interwoven. One could not deal with one separately ; each perplexity seemed to interlock. The second feature was that if one could get a master-key for one of those problems, one would have it for the lot. It was because he believed that the British-Israel Truth presented such a master-key that he was there that night. Many people were ignorant of what that Truth was. Those holding that Truth believed that the knowledge of God was mediated to the world by a nation, set apart for that purpose. This meant that one nation had been appointed to be the missionary of God's Truth to all races. There was no question of favour, just as there was no favour in his being a clergyman and his brother something else ; it merely meant that the work and destiny of that nation was to proclaim the Truth of God to other nations. Yet this pre-supposed certain qualifications in the race selected to carry out the design. Although the British stock had in some respects nothing much to boast about, they did compare very favourably with other nations when it came to the practice of the higher virtues. The Greek gave the world art ; the Roman gave it law. In the Bible it was very clear that a chosen race was to teach the world religion, and this was why that race was placed on the high road between East and West when Joshua brought them into the land of Israel.

Further, the speaker held that the Anglo-Saxon-Celtic race were the lineal descendants of those two tribes who formed one of the two sections of the chosen people. Their destiny was, therefore, a very high one, and on this ground every true Christian priest was proud of his office. As a nation they should know they were not merely politically great or economically rich, but were to be spiritually high and good. This, in fact, was the very foundation-stone of British-Israel Truth. There was a distinction between the salvation of the individual and the nation's destiny. They believed that the soul came to God through Jesus Christ, but some people thought of British-Israel Truth as if it took the place of that other truth. This was not so ; they started with salvation through Jesus Christ ; whether a man was Chinese, a negro, or any other—all had to go to God the same way. British-Israel Truth did not supplant the old faith in Christ. In the Bible they found this plan of a nation which the British-Israel Truth was working out, because the King Who was coming to reign over a regenerated Kingdom was none other than Christ.

The proof of this case was threefold. It came from Scripture, from history and from coincidence. As to the first, some people had to be told that when you spoke of Judah you were talking about the ancestry of the Jew ; when you talked about Israel you were talking about the descendants of the Ten Tribes who broke away from Judah in the time of Jeroboam and Rehoboam. Before the disruption there was clear distinction between those two peoples ; right from the beginning. There was never any coalescence, but distinct kings and distinct forms of government. Those peoples were also distinct in their captivity, and there was a period of 120 years between the captivity of the one and that of the other. The question arose, " What happened to Northern Israel after their captivity ? " This was more debatable ground. In Bible history Northern Israel was left in captivity—nothing else was said about them. For further information they had to go to the prophets, who clearly outlined what was happening. The prophets said those people were to be wanderers in a wilderness after their captivity. They were to occupy the " Isles of the Sea " ; they were to forget their covenant name of Israel and were to be called " The House of Isaac." When they lost this covenant name, they got other names associated with what they were doing. Then, in the latter days, they were to re-discover themselves and who they were. This was what the Bible stated. Further, some of the Parables appeared in a new light by this British-Israel Truth—the vineyard given to others that it might bear more fruit, the Parable of the Ten Talents, and Christ's words to the woman of Canaan about His being sent to the lost sheep of the House of Israel.

As to history, continued Mr. Whitehouse, there were way-marks from the time of Israel up to the present age. Before the captivity of either Israel or Judah there were Hebrew colonies along the Mediterranean. One reads of the tribe called Dan, which would not settle down. Dan was in a portion of land in the South, and Joshua gave them a piece in the North-west of Palestine, next door to Phœnicia—the land of great sailors. These people colonized right along the Mediterranean and came to Cornwall to barter their Eastern goods for Cornish tin; hence there were Eastern names in Cornwall. Naturally, some of those voyagers settled down in the new country. They had colonies not only on the Mediterranean seaboard but in the isles of the Greeks, in Spain and in our own Islands. This showed that when the Israelites gravitated to these Islands after their captivity, it was not in ignorance. Dan colonized centuries before the captivity.

After referring to further evidence found in the Book of Esdras, in the Apocrypha, the speaker recalled how Herodotus, the early Greek historian (484 B.C.) wrote of a people called the Scutes—a name meaning booth or tent men. He told how they moved from the Caspian Sea to the Black Sea and went to dwell among the Kimmerians. In the Crimea—the land in question—tombstones had been found bearing such names as "Son of Isaac" and "Ben Isaacs." Josephus, the Jewish historian, taught that these people never went back to Palestine, but were "far away" and were a huge multitude. Later in history there appeared the Saxon, who might be connected with Isaac, for the Hebrew word was "Zaac," not I-saac. So one got "Saxon"—not a fanciful idea. Then came the Danes—the Dans; then the Kelts, who had existed all along from the very beginning; they were divided into Gauls and Kimri. Thus there was a connection all along the Mediterranean to Britain. Further, there came the Normans, who could be traced from the Benjaminites, who completed the history of that journey into the land which God had prepared for His people.

As to coincidences, the speaker claimed that these showed that their belief was well founded. Britain fulfilled some of the predictions made to Abraham and others, such as that their seed should cover the whole earth and become a company of nations. What better phrase could to-day describe the British Empire? There was nothing binding the Colonies—excepting the flag, or, as some said, sentiment. Palestine was promised to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, who were to possess the land on which they stood. Palestine was never in the keeping of Britain until 1917, when General Allenby took it and the Turk was given his quietus and was turned out, bag and baggage. Lord Balfour then offered that it should become the home of the Jew, but General Wilson said bloodshed would follow. But to-day no political party in England—Socialist, Liberal or Conservative—would venture to say we should give up Palestine. We had now had it some years and meant to keep it. Further, there was the prediction about possessing the "gates of the enemy." All the gates or strategic ports, excepting Constantinople, were in the hands of Britain. It should be also remembered that the word "Briton" really meant one of a covenant people.

Concluding, Mr. Whitehouse said he had shown that the adherents to British-Israel Truth could give a reason for their faith, that faith and truth explained many difficult things in the Bible and in British history. The present age was abnormal; for one thing, time seemed to pass quicker than formerly. Perhaps we were developing a new sense of speed in our age of motor cars. From their study of prophecy, however, they knew this nation had to be scourged into obedience. God would not allow us to destroy our destiny and hope—the things we were destined to be and do. We were still too keen about material prosperity, and the sooner our eyes were opened to see the Power behind, all the better for us. Let them look at what was happening in Russia. They were looking at the very personification of the Devil. People would soon see what would happen in this anti-God war. As to Britain, her scourging would be averted if she turned to God. The task of those who believed in the great British-Israel Truth was to live up to it, and to be faithful and humble in the face of it.—Southend Telegraph.

THE EARTH FILLED WITH HIS MAJESTY.

By E. M. Foster.

WHO WILL ROUSE THE GREAT ISRAEL NATION OUT OF HER SLEEP? Already the blindness is passing away from the eyes of many, but the great masses of British people are as yet indifferent to and ignorant of the most stupendous event in all history. Do they realize that the British Empire, the greatest the world has ever known, will soon fill the whole earth? Do they understand that in that Day their Lord and Saviour will come to claim the throne of David, and reign over the House of Jacob for ever? How many recognize that throne to be the throne of Britain? The descent of our present Royal House from that of King David is proved beyond dispute.

The outcome of the Bible covenants and prophecies is the reign of Christ on earth. It is the grandest message the world is ever to hear. It is the central theme of the Bible. But because the Testing Age has seemed endless, men have despaired. Israel has remained hidden for so long that the Church has usurped the national rights and the Kingdom of Heaven has melted away into the clouds. Modern thinkers have become like the unprofitable servant in the parable, who grew impatient because his Lord delayed His Coming. His impatience gave way to indifference and loose living. And what was the result? Why, the Lord returned at an hour he never expected, and at a time when he was ashamed to meet Him.

The date for the Return of Christ was never given; but the times of the events preceding were. And as we go about our business to-day those very events are taking place. Do people know that there is not a great deal more of Biblical prophecy to be fulfilled? We are in the very Eve—the Eve of the Second Christmas Day—and the Hour of Midnight draws upon us.

Let Israel bestir herself and "prepare to meet her God," for "the Holy One of Israel is our King." The voices of Prophet and Apostle are like the sound of a trumpet heralding that glorious Return—"God is King of all the earth"—"He must reign and put all His enemies under His feet."

Oh, let us hasten by prayer and watching the coming of that Day, when the kingdoms of the world become our Lord's and He shall reign for ever and ever.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

A GREAT FORWARD MOVEMENT.

The Executive of the Federation is planning great things this year.

There is a difference between present and past planning. In the past the Executive planned

TO START THE WHEELS OF THE MOVEMENT GOING.

There was so little momentum to the Cause in those days that the work was hard indeed.

New fields were not then holding out hands, and pleading for help. There was the deep sleep of death, as far as enquiry after the Truth was concerned. Gradually this deadness passed away. It is not as yet fully gone, of course, but there is now what the Prophet Ezekiel saw, in the progress of Israel's awakening: a movement among the dry bones. There is a shaking, bone is coming to bone, and sinew to sinew. There is somewhat of the confusion of awakening moments, and gruff voices are protesting against being aroused from sleep. But there is an undoubted awakening.

There is now enough of knowledge, and of interest, to warrant advertising a campaign with the expectation that the result will be worth while. Such campaigns begin at half strength or less, and grow from day to day. This is now the general experience in new fields.

IN EVERY CITY

Now, on every side there are hands held out, and voices crying for help. This is true at home. It is also true abroad. And the volume of crying for aid is increasing from day to day.

Well, we must answer the call, and move forward as fast as we may,

TO OVERTAKE THE WORK.

That is a very cheering way to have to put the matter. We repeat, we must move forward to OVERTAKE the work.

So we are calling on our forces, and co-ordinating them, for the campaign which is before us.

There are NATIONAL CONVENTIONS this year of great importance. Our own Congress will be held as usual in Central Hall, Westminster, of course. Like the "Mother of Parliaments" which meets on the other side of Parliament Square, this is the parent gathering from which the whole incentive goes forth.

Next to that is THE SECOND CANADIAN CONFERENCE, which will meet again this year in the City of Winnipeg, midway between the Atlantic and the Pacific coasts.

Then for the first time there will meet AN ALL-AMERICAN CONVENTION in Detroit, Michigan, on May 6th, 7th and 8th.

Then there will be many STATE CONFERENCES, or Conventions, in America, each of which will form part of the All-American organization.

There will also be PROVINCIAL CONFERENCES in Canada, all of which will be part of the Canadian organization.

South Africa, Australia, New Zealand are also in line.

At home we are planning to add strong men to the workers' list.

We are also planning to add auxiliary aid of Clergymen and Ministers as they can spare the time for the lecture platform.

As a matter of fact we are planning great things. But this means that we must have the support of our loyal people in even wider and more intensive measure.

WE DARE NOT HOLD BACK BECAUSE OF FEAR of want of means. We have learned to make little means go a long way; indeed, a long, long way. But still we must trust God and you His people to strengthen the resources of the Federation in the way of money to meet the need.

We are praying "Give us this day our daily bread," and we are going forward believing that God and you will answer the prayer.

The work we are undertaking will add many hundreds of pounds to the necessary expenditure in order to man the field. Will you bear an added share of this and so come "to the help of the Lord against the mighty"?

 One of our ardent supporters and a Life Member of the Federation has generously promised £250 if we will raise another £3,000 within a few weeks. We have undertaken to fulfil this condition, and we earnestly appeal to our readers to stand by us. Please cross Cheques or Money Orders:—"Midland Bank."*

Six meetings were held in the Town Hall, Leamington, on March 11th, 12th and 13th, and great stimulus was given to the local Branch. Addresses were given by the Rev. Pascoe Goard, the Rev. Gilbert Davies, Mr. John Leech and Mr. Garrison, Secretary-General, who also gave three lantern lectures. Alderman Dr. Mason, Mr. Leech, the Rev. T. H. Whitehouse and Mr. Garrison presided.

This week Mr. Goard is in Sheffield; next week he and the Rev. Sparshott Johnson, M.A., Mr. John Leech, K.C., and the Secretary-General are at the Stuart Hall, Norwich. Mr. Garrison is to give his lecture on "Cameos of Empire" on Monday evening, when the Lord Mayor is to preside. Six meetings are to follow on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons at 3 and evenings at 8.

Mr. Goard will give two special addresses at Headquarters on Monday, March 31st, at 3 and 8. On April 1st, 2nd and 3rd Mr. Goard and Mr. Garrison have six meetings in the Barnfield Hall, Exeter—afternoons and evenings.

It is with great regret we have to record the death of the Rev. Arthur C. Chambers. We offer his widow and family our most sincere sympathy in their great bereavement; an obituary notice with, we hope, a portrait shall appear in a future issue. * * *

Two very successful meetings were held in Southampton on March 5th. At both meetings there was an increased attendance, many new people being present, and great interest was shown in both meetings.

Mr. Morey gave two splendid addresses, in the afternoon the subject being "The Return of Our Lord according to St. Matthew." The chair was taken by the President, Mr. W. J. Ferguson.

In the evening the subject was "The Restitution of All Things," when Mr. Morey gave a vivid account of things to come, illustrating the wonderful way things will be all changed and done after the Second Coming has taken place. The chair was taken in the evening by Dr. Clayre, who greatly urged the need of prayer by all British-Israelites for the guidance of the Holy Spirit in all things in the present day, for God "will be enquired of by the House of Israel to do it for them."

OUR GREAT ADVANCE.

We are encouraged by the immediate response to our request. The little county of Rutland was the first to be heard from, followed quickly by responses from Lancashire, Devonshire, Shropshire, Sussex, Surrey, Middlesex, Gloucestershire, Hants and Kent . . . and still they come!

As quickly as possible these requests for detailed information on how to commence a Study Circle are being replied to with the necessary forms.

Some have been very practical and have sent contributions towards the cost of establishing these Study Circles.

May we ask you to study carefully the forms you will receive and to follow the instructions regarding the ordering of literature, copies of "The National Message" and "The B.-I. Crusader," and regarding the names and addresses of Leaders and Secretaries. Careful attention to details in following the plan as arranged will facilitate the work at Headquarters, and help very materially in the smooth working of the plan.

The welcome with which our first announcement on March 8th has been received confirms our conviction that the time had arrived for this step to be taken.

The need is great. Thousands, nay, millions need our Message, and our appeal is to you to help us in supplying the need.

You believe that God is faithful and that His promises and Covenants have been and are being fulfilled to the very letter. That being the case, your responsibility is a real personal one. It is up to you to do something to spread this "good news." You can help by organizing a "Study Circle" in your own neighbourhood.

Write to us for particulars to-day. Do it now. The plan is simple and costs you nothing but the effort to write and a three-halfpenny stamp.

Do not shrink from your responsibility. We are anxious and ready to help you.

If you have difficulties as you go . . . we are HERE TO HELP YOU.

Seize this opportunity to spread the glad tidings. You know that the Bible gives a clear, definite and straightforward programme for ensuring national and individual welfare. PASS ON THAT KNOWLEDGE.

You know that this information is needed to-day as never before. PASS IT ON.

You know that the storms are gathering and that there is only one sure and certain method of obtaining safety and protection. PASS IT ON.

As already stated in our previous announcement, our aim is to establish A THOUSAND NEW STUDY CIRCLES DURING 1930. And we need the assistance of every convinced British-Israelite to accomplish this.

This is a great opportunity for those living in the rural areas to establish centres of light and knowledge.

It is an even greater opportunity for our readers in the thickly-populated industrial areas where communism is rampant.

Now for a matter of prime importance, which should have come first but we have purposely left it until the last, so that, if possible, the impression may remain and as a result, if you are still hesitating, be translated into action.

Do not forget to pray for the success of this work. Get the spirit of prayer. Then put your imagination to work. Try and imagine the results to be obtained from one thousand new Study Circles, bringing light to dark places, comfort to weary, tired, anxious souls by proving to them from God's Word that He is still active in national and international affairs and is INTERESTED in YOUR LIFE TOO. Think what a restoration of faith would mean to thousands to-day. Let your prayers be transformed into action. Prayer in action. . . . .

The Masonic Hall, St. Leonards-on-Sea, was packed on Tuesday, March 11th, when the Rev. Chas. W. Cooper, F.G.S., gave a very interesting address on the "Precious Stones of the Bible" and "A Defence of St. John against the Critics." There was an unique collection of precious stones on view, and many of those present personally thanked Mr. Cooper for a most instructive and inspiring lecture. In the evening Mr. Cooper replied to recent criticisms made by one of the local clergy. The address was given in a kindly and dignified spirit, which nevertheless proved the position of British-Israel to be infallible.

Two students of a College in Oxford write:—"As regular readers of your absorbing Journal, we would like to add our praise to the volume of appreciation which reaches you weekly.

"We await its arrival with impatience, and not only ourselves but many others thoroughly enjoy it. Your interesting interpretations of the Bible make the Scriptures so easy to understand, whereas the ordinary 'spiritual' interpretations merely produce confusion and doubt, and you are to be thanked for presenting to the world historical facts which, but for you, would be unheard of. Further, we feel convinced that the British-Israel Movement is the dam that stands firmest in the defence of Protestantism from the flood of Catholicism which threatens to overwhelm the Church of England, and to subject us once more to the tyranny of priest-craft and the Confessional.

"May your efforts be redoubled that the British race may cling to the simple faith of our ancestors and realize that our race is, in very truth, 'a peculiar people.'"

Miss Hamilton Hunter's first visit to the Isle of Wight during the week commencing March 4th met with great appreciation. The series started at Totland Bay, in the Drawing-room of Mrs. Bremridge, 53 attending. Over tea afterwards there was discussion. Then came a meeting in a private hotel, with discussion following. At Cowes a meeting under the auspices of the Federation was held, the Rev. Chas. Paterson. M.A., Vicar of Holy Trinity and Hon. Chaplain of the Royal Yacht Squadron, presiding. It is hoped that a flourishing Branch will be established in Cowes. Four lectures were given in the Town Hall, Ryde, His Worship the Mayor presiding over a good audience in the evening. All the lectures were of a high order and great enthusiasm was aroused, with many additions to the membership roll. A special prayer meeting was held prior to the arrival of the speaker for the meetings.

On March 11th Miss Hunter was at the Sydenham Branch. A gain in membership of the Branch resulted. More than half of her audience knew little or nothing of the British-Israel Movement.

* * *

Oxford report a splendid meeting on March 11th, at which the Rev. E. A. Couldrey gave the address, and Lt.-Gen. Sir Arthur Phayre, K.C.B., presided. Mr. Couldrey has also addressed good audiences at Abingdon and Plumstead.

* * *

Mr. John Leech, K.C., will give a further lecture at Headquarters on Prophecy on Wednesday afternoon next, March 26th, at 3, and Mr. W. A. Jordan will give another lecture on Thursday evening at 8. Mrs. Bloxam gave an interesting address on Thursday, March 13th, on "The Journeys of Christ" with lantern illustrations.

In Passing.

One of the most interesting things in connection with our work on a weekly newspaper like this is to note the reaction of our readers to the matter in our advertising columns. For instance, if we advertise certain books or pamphlets singly or in combination, there is an instant and remarkable response in increased orders for those particular items. It is, of course, necessary to change the matter in our columns frequently, in order that during a given period all our books are brought to the notice of our thousands of readers.

This week, on page two of cover, we announce the publication of Mr. Goard's new book, entitled "The Second Coming of Our Lord." Orders have been coming in for this work for some time, and these, of course, take priority in despatch. Immediately the advertisement is seen there will be a rush of orders. Fifty-eight pages in Art paper covers for one shilling. It is a new and greatly enlarged edition.

Following up our thought in the preceding paragraph, why should certain things sell more readily than others? Everyone agrees that our books cannot be equalled for value, so it cannot always be a matter of price. A penny a day saved and spent in B.-I. literature goes a very long way. It would surprise you to see how much can be purchased for thirty shillings—which is not a large sum reckoned at the rate of a penny a day. Try it and see for yourself.

Someone once asked, "What's in a name . . .?" Well, a good deal at times. A good title will help a very great deal to sell a book, provided, of course, that the contents equal the title. It won't help much if the matter between the covers does not come up to the reader's expectations. On the other hand, a poor title is enough to kill a book from the very first. The human mind is a complex thing and cannot always be explained.

An instance of a happy combination is Dr. J. Llewellyn Thomas's book, "God and my Birthright." Title and subject harmonize and the reader is immediately united up with the subject of the book. He reads, and then it dawns on him that he, the reader, has a direct personal interest in the whole matter, and is glad and thankful he is a citizen of the Empire "on which the sun never sets." The fact that the demand has required a second edition is enough to set anybody thinking.

Thinking about the Empire reminds me that another combination which has been more than successful, and rightly so, is the case of "happy title" and a correspondingly happy "nom de plume." When this happens, as it does sometimes, it nearly always spells success. Take the "Roadbuilder" and his book, "The Destiny of the British Empire and the U.S.A.," which has run into many editions, and which was followed by "God's Commonwealths, Britain and America," and now a new one has come to hand, "The Freedom of the Seas," dealing with Naval matters as the title indicates. Most appropriate at this time when the newspapers give daily reports of the Naval Conference. Perhaps our statesmen have read this book, and that may be the reason why agreement between Great Britain, America and Japan seems probable. There's another reason, of course, but I think that's enough for this week.

THE WONDER RACE

By G. E. ALTREE COLEY

The expansion of Britain is not the outcome of a chain of fortuitous accidents. Behind it, through the centuries, a Supreme Will and Purpose has worked, unsuspected, yet never wearying. Even as night follows day, the destiny of our race is sure. Would that our leaders, both religious and civil, would recognize this one vital fact, that in that Divinely-ordained destiny lies the solution of to-day's baffling problems. Mrs. Coley proves that the Anglo-Saxon genius for self-government is, and always has been, directed and inspired. She has built her foundations on the rock of the Sacred Word, and on those foundations she has reared an unassailable superstructure. Her book is restrained, yet powerful. Her logic is unanswerable. If it be read by every earnest citizen, its conclusions accepted with humble faith, and its principles personally applied, this nation MUST go on from strength to strength until the Divine purpose reaches its triumphant fulfilment.

Here, then, is a book which we offer to readers in full confidence that they will find every page full of interest and informed with ripe scholarship. It is a book that should be read and passed on. Even the most hardened sceptic cannot reject the ruthless logic of its proven facts.

GOD AND MY BIRTHRIGHT

By

J. LLEWELLYN THOMAS, F.R.C.S.,

Author of "The Restoration of Israel."

(Second Edition Revised.)

The Church Family Newspaper says:

The presentation of the subject is good, being on a Scriptural basis. . . . We recommend this work and wish it a wide circulation.

The Methodist Times says:

The book leaves us with altogether a fuller and firmer faith in God as the Ruler of the World—the Over-Ruler—working out through all the ages the great promises made to our fathers.

A book which strengthens faith, in these days of spiritual unrest, deserves a wide public. It is a book which every B.-I. should possess and constantly read. "God and My Birthright" is a striking work which is enhanced in value as the "end of the age" draws nearer. To those who can read between the lines of a book which treats only of Scriptural matters, the real meaning of world happenings becomes clearer. Buy it to-day, read it to-morrow, and keep it always on your shelf for re-perusal.

THE CURATE'S EGG

Have you ever thought of the likeness between 'the curate's egg" and some books? They are quite good—in parts!

One book may have an arresting title and an equally arresting theme, but be badly written—proving itself like the curate's egg! However, let us talk of really good eggs. Turn to page 4 of the cover of this issue, where are advertised two of our publications which give the British-Israel message from different angles.

Prehistoric London! What a title! Conjuring up thoughts of this mighty city as it is to-day, side by side with thoughts of what it was in prehistoric days, with its mounds, which were used for religious rites and ceremonies in just the same way as the circles of stone erected by Moses and Joshua. To anybody in the least interested in the history of the capital of our Empire, this book is indispensable and will be found of enthralling interest, in other words—a good egg!

How often does a public speaker or writer deliver to his hearers or readers a truism of greater import than they imagine? The late Rt. Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, for instance, in a public address, once said—"I humbly believe we are destined to be a governing race. For that great qualities are required. Thank God, hitherto they have never been wanting in our history."

Many such statements have been made by public men, and Professor Odlum, in his book, "God's Covenant Man," has gathered together many of them in support of the truth that Great Britain and her Dominions and Colonies are fulfilling God's purpose to-day.

This book could never have been written but for the brilliant research work of the Author, and all British-Israelites are under a deep obligation to Professor Odlum for bringing to light these utterances of famous men.

To many people a history book makes dry reading. Historians, as a rule, are not given to clothing the dry bones of their subject in a manner that makes them readable, yet we have a notable exception in one of our publications entitled "The Origin of the English," by Major B. de W. Weldon. In his book the author traces back our history for 3,000 years; moreover he does it in a manner that makes his book one that will be read not once, but many times.

Let this book be the pioneer of a movement for the "suppression of dull history books"—it is eminently worthy of the honour and the fact that it has run into a second edition is indicative of this.

Last week we spoke of Mr. Goard's latest book, "The Second Coming of Our Lord." We refer to it again this week because it is a book that should on no account be missed—its price is no drawback to its purchase as it costs only 1s. 2d. post free. We are expecting a perfect avalanche of orders for this book—let yours be among them.

One final thought. There are quite a number of people who look upon book buying as a luxury to be indulged in only at infrequent intervals. This may be true of a certain class of book, but cannot be true where B.-I. literature is concerned. The old saying that one cannot make bricks without straw is most applicable here. Earnest B.-I. believers are the builders of the future, and must have the bricks with which to build. These bricks are our publications. Build up now with them, build surely and well and you will very soon realise that book buying is a necessity and not a luxury.

THE ORIGIN OF THE ENGLISH

SECOND EDITION (REVISED)

By MAJOR B. de W. WELDON

Here is a book which once read will be read again and again.

Our history traced for three thousand years. Of necessity, many details must be left out, for the whole of our history could not be compressed into the two hundred and eighty pages this book contains. The fact that a second edition has been called for is evidence of the value of this work for students of the history of the English People.

"The present writer does not claim that the story to be told in the following pages is anything of a new discovery. All the essential facts were in the possession of a man who lived many centuries ago, in the reign of the Emperor Justinian. And one German at least, the philologist Grimm, early in the last century, knew a good deal more about the identity of Israel than he cared to disclose in books which were intended to glorify the great German race.

The chapters that will now be written have to contain many Biblical quotations. But they are no more designed as a theological disquisition than a Government Blue Book or a standard history would be.

They are merely the missing pages of the history of Israel, the pages that centuries ago were blotted out until the time came when they might safely be restored to their proper place in the world's historical libraries. All histories are dull reading; and condensed history is perhaps the worst of all, where no time can be given up to the 'drum and trumpet' details, interesting though these might be made.

This book is no exception; having to be condensed, many interesting points must be omitted. Before our case can be established, many witnesses will have to be called; men who lived in different ages and in countries far apart—prophets and saints, as well as dignitaries of the Church; Greeks and Romans and Jews; pagans from the North; modern scholars of the most profound learning; and writers of gossip who would be exceedingly astonished to find fragments of their work still in existence after so many centuries have elapsed. All these diverse sources of information will be placed on a friendly footing of equal credibility before the reader."

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation : the inheritors of her Charters ; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction ; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

APPROACHES TO THE FACTS OF BRITISH-ISRAEL TRUTH.—VIII.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

WE have seen the greatest wonder of all the ages. The Lord, incarnate in the Son, has carried through the Redemption on Calvary as set forth in the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah.

It is well that we should here mark the beginning of a long line of prophetic-historic truth.

The prophet Isaiah has been called the evangelical prophet. This is a well-chosen name for the author of the Isaiah literature. There is, however, a marked difference in the prophetic road travelled by the prophet Isaiah and the evangelical road traversed by the Evangelists and Apostles.

The evangelical prophets of the Old Testament set forth the NATIONAL GOSPEL. They did so at the time that what may be termed the NATIONAL dispensation was about to begin. The word dispensation in connection with NATIONAL life is unusual in systematic theology. But it is a word which conveys the meaning desired when so used.

There was to be a profound change in the National life, and in the National history of the Israel peoples.

Hitherto they had been walking more or less under the blessings of the National Covenant set forth in the twenty-sixth chapter of Leviticus.

Now they were to be put under the definite punitive clauses of the Covenant for the long, long period of 2,520 years. The whole world would be affected thereby.

This punishment could only be ended by Israel's repentance as a nation, or by the lapse of that long period of time. The period of Israel's and Judah's punishment is what we mean by the NATIONAL dispensation, and this was about to begin when Isaiah wrote, and had begun in the days of Jeremiah, Ezekiel and Daniel, etc.

Accordingly the prophets—Isaiah especially—came forth with their messages, pre-writing the history of Israel and the civilized world during that great period, and of the restoration of Israel which should come at the end of it. To this end the prophets—Isaiah especially—showed the REDEMPTION of Israel, and the consequences which should follow from the NATIONAL standpoint.

The Apostles, whom one might call the prophets of the New Testament, took up the related theme of the ATONEMENT, and showed what should be the result to the individual, and through the individual to the world from the standpoint of Salvation, and of the Church. They furnished Israel with the Gospel which it should be Israel's duty and glory to preach to the ends of the earth.

While the New Testament prophets took up the theme of Salvation and taught "the things concerning our Lord Jesus Christ," they nevertheless preached "The KINGDOM of God" at the same time.

It is our purpose in this study to follow the National Redemption and the results and consequences which should follow, as taught by the prophets. For this purpose we shall continue our study in the fifty-fourth chapter of Isaiah.

We have seen the fact of the Redemption by the Lord incarnate, as set forth in the fifty-third chapter. Let us now turn to the immediate consequences of the Redemption. We see that the vision of the prophet overleaps the period during which the life of Israel would be cramped and burdened still by punishment under the law. For the Redemption did not set the sentence of punishment aside. The prophetic vision is projected to the time when the sentence would have expired, and Israel would be free from the punishment of the law.

That time in the life and history of the nation came in about A.D. 1800. This was the time that Israel, "your mother" and "you"—as the Lord calls them in the fiftieth chapter of Isaiah—should step out into freedom from the curse of the broken law, should be restored from her divorced condition, and should once again become "Israel," which means "ruling with God."

To Israel at that time, i.e., A.D. 1800 and after, the prophet Isaiah says in the fifty-fourth chapter:—

"Sing, O barren, thou that didst not bear; break forth into singing, and cry aloud, thou that didst not travail with child: for more are the children of the desolate than the children of the married wife, saith the Lord.

Enlarge the place of thy tent, and let them stretch forth the curtains of thine habitations: spare not, lengthen thy cords, and strengthen thy stakes;

For thou shalt break forth on the right hand and on the left; and thy seed shall inherit the Gentiles, and make the desolate cities to be inhabited.

Fear not; for thou shalt not be ashamed: neither be thou confounded; for thou shalt not be put to shame: for thou shalt forget the shame of thy youth, and shalt not remember the reproach of thy widowhood any more.

For thy Maker is thine husband; the Lord of hosts is his name; and thy Redeemer the Holy One of Israel; The God of the whole earth shall he be called.

For the Lord hath called thee as a woman forsaken and grieved in spirit, and a wife of youth, when thou wast refused, saith thy God.

For a small moment have I forsaken thee; but with great mercies will I gather thee.

In a little wrath I hid my face from thee for a moment; but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the Lord thy Redeemer."—Isa. liv, 1-8.

Thus the very first thing which should result from the Redemption was such a national expansion as came to Britain at that period. This connoted the beginning of the colonial expansion of the British Empire on the largest scale; and also the enlargement of the United States of America.

The second thing which should come is the restoration of the "woman forsaken and grieved in spirit" to the estate of marriage with Jehovah, her Redeemer and Lord. This indicates the restoration of the Anglo-Saxon world to Israel's special relationship to God, viz., that of His "Bride of youth."

The next clause is a very important one to Israel, that is to say to us, at the present time. It is the granting of a new Covenant with Israel similar to the Covenant granted to Noah subsequent to the Flood.

"For as I have sworn that the waters of Noah should no more go over the earth; so have I sworn that I would not be wroth with thee, nor rebuke thee."

Thus we may rest assured, that whatever suffering the Anglo-Saxon world may bring upon their own heads by their own wilful ways, never again will they suffer by the appointment of God. Israel has already received at the Lord's hands double for all her sins, and, above all, she has been Redeemed by the precious Blood of Jesus. It is true, indeed, that "He hath visited and redeemed His people Israel."

The whole of this passage is as follows:—

"For this is as the waters of Noah unto me: for as I have sworn that the waters of Noah should no more go over the earth; so have I sworn that I would not be wroth with thee, nor rebuke thee.

For the mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed; but my kindness shall not depart from thee, neither shall the covenant of my peace be removed, saith the Lord that hath mercy on thee."—Isa. liv, 9, 10.

The next clause concerns the household the Lord will establish for His redeemed and restored bride. The practical application of this is national, and the promise is to modern Israel—therefore to us:—

"O thou afflicted, tossed with tempest, and not comforted, behold, I will lay thy stones with fair colours, and lay thy foundations with sapphires.

And I will make thy windows of agates, and thy gates of carbuncles, and all thy borders of pleasant stones.

And all thy children shall be taught of the Lord; and great shall be the peace of thy children.

In righteousness shalt thou be established: thou shalt be far from oppression; for thou shalt not fear: and from terror; for it shall not come near thee."—Isa. liv, 11-14.

The prophet now takes note of the fact that nations and alliances will gather to make war with Israel-Britain still, but that she shall be defended by the Lord against them.

"Behold, they shall surely gather together, but not by me: whosoever shall gather together against thee shall fall for thy sake.

Behold, I have created the smith that bloweth the coals in the fire, and that bringeth forth an instrument for his work; and I have created the waster to destroy.

No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord, and their righteousness is of me, saith the Lord."—Isa. liv, 15-17.

What a wonderful chapter is this which sets forth the national result of the Redemption to the Lord's people. When we remember that the nation and company of nations of the Anglo-Saxon people are the nations so redeemed and preserved, we may see what a comfort there is for us in this guarantee. The skies may be as threatening as they will, the earth may be moved to its foundations, the seas of the nations may roar and be troubled, but no essential harm can come to those whom the Lord has redeemed and whom He has guaranteed against destruction either at the hand of the Lord, or by the processes of nature, or by the gathering strength of human powers and enemies.

BRITISH-ISRAEL FACTS NOT FANCIES.—IX.

By Major-General C. A. Hadfield.

Change of Name.

About A.D. 106 the name of Goth is much heard of in Roman history; while Greek and Roman historians regard the Getae and the Goths as the same people.

Dr. Bradley, in his "Story of the Nations," relates how the locality north of the Danube mouth was inhabited by a people called the Getae. In the third century A.D. the Goths came, and the Romans looked upon the Goths and Getae as one people.

Digitized by Google

The word Goth is derived from Guta Thead, a people of God. Dr. Bradley's book tells us these two peoples were similar in appearance. They were a people in, but not of Scythia. The Goths were, doubtless, the tribes of Israel (of "Joseph's House"). The words Israel, Goth, Asar, Angle, all contain the root word "God"; all mean the same, and were adopted on the cessation of the "Lo-ammi" (or forsaken) period; on the return (as was promised) of Israel, from God's disfavour. During that period of disfavour the Israelites abandoned the name of "El" (or God); so we see Hosea's prophecy: "I will no more have mercy upon the House of Israel" fulfilled for a period during which time the Israelites were not "God's People"; "Ye are not My people," said the Lord, through Hosea, "and I will not be your God" (i, 9).

This sentence, however, was not to be permanent; Ezek. iv, implies that the term of Israel's punishment will last for 390 years, from the fall of Samaria until 330 B.C., which was two centuries later than the return from Babylon. No renewal of Divine favour could possibly be expected until long after the days of Cyrus. There is no reason to suppose that the intention of Cyrus, who overthrew the Babylonian monarchy (as related by Ezra i, 1-3) went beyond the Jews. Cyrus could hardly have in his mind or have any knowledge of the northern Israelites deported to Assyria.

As regards the preordained change of name, as pointed out above, we see the Scriptures fulfilled in the changed name, as we also see it fulfilled in "the scattering," for Israel was to be "scattered among the Nations," and "sifted" through them "like as corn is sifted in a sieve, yet shall not the least grain (margin 'Stone') fall upon the earth."

The Rev. J. H. Allen, of America, says: "The reason that 'Stone' is used in the margin is because it is the true rendering, but 'grain' is used in the text so as not to mix the metaphor. National Israel is the Stone Kingdom in the natural—in the flesh—but the Kingdom of Heaven preached by our Lord, by John the Baptist, and the Apostles, is the Spiritual Stone Kingdom. Jacob's pillow-pillar Stone is the type of the earthly Stone Kingdom, but the Stone which the Jewish Builders rejected is the Spiritual Corner, or Foundation Stone of the Spiritual Stone Kingdom of Daniel ii, 34-44."

DID ISRAEL RETURN TO PALESTINE?—NO!

The question is, were the Israelites invited to return? Did they return? In Ezra i, 5, we have a brief description of the returning captives: (1) Judah, (2) Benjamin, (3) the Priests, (4) the Levites, (5) "all those whose spirit God stirred up." Judah and Benjamin, as "tribes," are not mentioned in verse 1, it is "heads of father's houses of Judah and Benjamin." There is no evidence that these included a single Israelite of the "Northern Kingdom." The next chapter of Ezra affords more details (see ii, 1), which is convincing proof that those who went back were limited to Jews, Levites and Benjamites, for it shows they belonged to "the province." Their ancestors, who had been removed to Babylon, were Jews only. The Ten Tribes had been exiled to Assyria, to Gozan and Media. "They returned (or came again R.V.) unto Jerusalem and Judea"; importing that they, or their fathers, previously dwelt there, which would not have been true of the Israelites. "They returned everyone unto his city"; the Northern Tribes had no cities in Judah. Their cities were in the land of Israel [see "Lost and Found," by J. G. Taylor].

Those who returned (says Ezra) were they "Whom Nebuchadnezzar had carried away to Babylon"—only the House of Judah, with the Benjamites, were taken to Babylon.

Not a word is said about the return of Israel, who, over a century earlier, had been exiled to Assyria, and where the Old Testament leaves their history.

We have ample proof of the non-return of the tribes of the Northern Kingdom to Palestine with the Jews, besides Ezra ii; for the Books of the Chronicles were compiled after the Jews, with the Benjamites, returned from their Babylonish Captivity. In 1 Chron. v, 26, we are told that the "Northern Kingdom" were then, at the time of writing, in captivity; so the author knew of no return! The Book of II Esdras states definitely that they did not return to Palestine, but that they moved to Arsareth. This is good historical proof. The Book of Nehemiah records the genealogies of those who returned, but makes no mention of the Ten Tribes from Assyria. The Prophet Zechariah, writing 18 years after the Jews returned from Babylon, would certainly not have written as he did (x, 6-9) had the twelve tribes been reunited. Had they returned, would not the tribes have claimed their ancient possessions (2 Kings xvii, 24; St. John iv, 9), which were then in possession of others? Therefore, what became of these tribes? Zechariah states that God will have mercy upon the House of Joseph, "they shall be as though I had not cast them off" (x, 6). This is also remarked upon in Rom. ix, 26. The "House of Joseph" must not be confused with the "House of Judah," a mistake so many make.

What does the Historian say? Josephus, the Jewish Historian, is clear and decisive in writing A.D. 70, for he says: "The Ten Tribes did not return to Palestine; only Two Tribes served the Romans after Palestine became a Roman Province." No historical evidence can be more conclusive. So we may be quite satisfied that the Northern Kingdom did not return to their former Cities with the Jews "as tribes." There is no record of the Northern Kingdom amalgamating with Judah in captivity, and the Bible does not support such an idea. Rather the contrary, because the Bible gives quite a separate historical "future" for "Ephraim-Israel" to that for "Judah." God's Word gives us plainly those people who did return to Palestine. This being so, what became of Israel? As God said, and repeated, that Israel would be an "Everlasting" Nation,—Israel, we know, must exist upon the earth.

The theory which some teach that the Israelites are merged into the Jews is knocked to pieces by Zech. xi, 10: "And I took My Staff Even Beauty, and cut it asunder, that I might break My Covenant which I had made with all the people."

The Brotherhood between Israel and Judah was broken when Christ was betrayed and crucified. They are separate to this day—on the authority of God's Word.

Dean Farrar writes, that with the exception of Judas Iscariot the twelve Apostles were Benjamites, and therefore not "Jews" by race. This view is confirmed in Acts i, 11; ii, 7, which show them to be Galileans.

The Rev. Merton Smith asked the Chief Rabbi (from the "Covenant People"):

(1) Are the people known as the Jews throughout the world the descendants of Judah and Levi, or is there a known admixture of other tribes?

Digitized by Google

(2) If so, in what proportion, and what authority is there for saying so?

(3) If not, what has become of the other Tribes, and where, according to your knowledge, are they?

(4) If that is unknown, where were they when Judah last knew of them? Does the orthodox Judaism still look for the recovery of the twelve tribes at some future date?

The following is the reply:

"Office of the Chief Rabbi,
"November 18th, 1918.

"In reply to your letter of 15th inst. I am desired by the Chief Rabbi to state:

"(1) The people known at present as Jews are descendants of the tribes of Judah and Benjamin, with a certain number of descendants of the tribe of Levi.

"(2) As far as is known there is not any further admixture of other tribes.

"(3) The ten tribes have been absorbed among the Nations of the world (see 2 Kings, chap. xvii, more especially verses 22-23).

"(4) We look forward to the gathering of all the tribes at some future day (see Isaiah xxvii, 12-13, and Ezekiel xxxvii, 15-18)."

Signed by the Chief Rabbi's Secretary.

This is a complete answer to those who still vainly imagine and constantly so preach—that the ten tribes became intermingled with the Jews at the time the latter returned to Palestine from their seventy years of Captivity. This is the pronouncement of one who is at the head of the Kingdom of Judah and cannot lightly be ignored.

GOD'S MERCY ON ISRAEL IS FORETOLD.

Severed from the Old Covenant, they were to be replaced in Divine favour by the New (Jer. xxxi, 33; Heb. viii, 10-13; Hosea ii, 23; 1 Peter ii, 10). Strewn about though they were for a while God would afterwards reunite them, and gather them into "a land of their own" (2 Sam. vii, 10; Jer. xxxi, 10), so they are settled somewhere under a Gentile guise. [See "Lost and Found," by J. G. Taylor.]

Having been scattered, and afterwards gathered "into a place of their own," prophecy is again fulfilled. God shows His mercy (see Hos. i, 10): ". . . it shall come to pass that in the place where it was said unto them ye are not My people, there it shall be said unto them, 'Ye are the sons of the living God,'" i.e., believers in Christ; see also Hos. xiv, 4-6: "I will heal their backsliding, I will love them freely, for My anger is turned away from him. . . ." (See also Rom. ix, 26.)

Then turn to Jer. xxx, 3, 10, 11; Jer. xxxi, 36-37; xxxiii, 7 (and there are many other references of God showing mercy where He had previously threatened expulsion), but probably enough has been quoted to make it clear that the Ten Tribes left their worship of idols, and turned to God, accepted Christ, and were restored to favour as God's "Chosen People" in place of the Jews, from whom Christ took the kingdom and bestowed it upon Israel. And now Israel and Judah can look forward to their coming reunion, and all serving as one nation, under one head, and shall not be two nations any more, as prophecy predicts.

THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

In that most excellent work, the "Evolution of Israel," by Major B. de W. Weldon, M.C., we have an ably argued statement that the Church is the "Established Church," and its Prayer Book, officially a Schedule of an Act of Parliament, expressing by law the religious opinion of the nation.

The Anglican Church being the Church of the People of Israel—and the whole ritual reads as such,—the congregations repeat that God's promises and curses to Israel have been fulfilled to our nation, and to our forefathers. Look at the many references; in the "Benedictus," for example, we repeat: "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, Who hath visited and redeemed His People." The Jews are not yet redeemed! They have rejected the Trinity in Unity. Then, in the Athanasian Creed we repeat: "And the Catholic Faith is this, that we worship one God in Trinity, and Trinity in Unity."

If we examine the Venite, Te Deum, Magnificat, Cantate, we find them replete with Israelitish references. It is only to be understood if the worshipping congregations are the descendants of Ephraim-Israel! The references cannot be any coincidence; they must be given as "a sign" for guidance of our undoubted connection with Israel. If not, the whole service is meaningless! All this was arranged in the days of the Reformation. It is the people who attend the Church services who are "blind" as to their origin. Open their eyes, and the meaning of our form of service is intelligible to them.

It will become clear to the minds of all those who study this question—and it is well worthy of study by even the greatest opponents—that the words used in our Church Services have designedly a great lesson for us regarding our Nation's ancestry and of our direct descent from Israel. Take the versicles following the Creed: "O Lord, save Thy people, and bless Thine inheritance. And make Thy Chosen people joyful." If they do not refer to a race descended from Israel, "God's Chosen People," why do we nationally so address Almighty God in our Church Service?

When one carefully considers such passages as Hos. ii, 23; 1 Peter ii, 10; Isa. ix, 2; Luke i, 70; Matt. iv, 13-16, it seems to be clearly evident that Israel are the "Elect" referred to. Those "which in times past were not a people, but are now the people of God, which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy."

Those people to whom Jesus Christ referred to as "the lost sheep of the House of Israel" (Matt. x, 6), the people to whom, in their wanderings, our Lord sent His Disciples. The people destined to preach the Gospel throughout the ages in all lands to try and gather souls to Christ.

Then what a lesson the "Benedictus" teaches us—Jesus coming to His "heritage," His "Sheep," His "Witnesses," His "people Israel" (nothing here of the "Jews") speaking through the prophets to a future "Israel," promising them "Safety" and fulfilment of all God's promises to the Fathers.

Why should the English people pray for deliverance from their enemies when the promise was only given to Israel?

Why is it that the laws of Britain and the United States are framed upon the Hebrew laws of Moses? Surely it can only be explained because we are the descendants of the Nation Israel. We cannot argue away such potent facts; much as we nationally are, in the main, quite willing to transfer Israel to being now "the Church."

Digitized by Google

No—rather is it, that "the Church" is but the means employed by the Nation Israel for evangelizing the heathen—and converting the Jews. Why do we use Hebrew weights and measures? Why use so many Hebrew roots in our language? There is but one answer. Because Israel and the English-speaking Races are identical.

"MY KINGDOM IS NOT OF THIS WORLD."

By ANDREW B. BUCHANAN.

THE critic referred to by "Eynsford" in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER of March 1st draws attention to the passage in St. John vi, 15, and "interprets it as an absolute repudiation by our Lord of any idea of reign or kingship except in the spiritual sphere."

St. John vi, 15: "When Jesus therefore perceived that they would come and take him by force, to make him a king, he departed again into a mountain himself alone."

This short study is given, in the hope that it may be helpful to the general reader. Referring to Isaiah ix, we are directed to two outstanding passages:—

6:—"For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace.

7:—Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this."

The structure of these two passages is very remarkable. Looking closely at them, we observe that the Child merges into the Son, and upon this Son is the government, which suggests the Heir and a kingdom. Then follow the names of the Son, upon Whom the government falls and the duration of the government which includes peace.

The government is next observed to be upon the throne of David, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and justice for ever.

It should be particularly noted that, whilst the Son is prominent all through these two passages, no mention is made as to how the Son receives the government. This is a vital point, the full significance of which will be seen later.

To get the construction of "the throne of David," it will be necessary to go to the earlier Books of the Bible—to Kings and Chronicles.

1 Kings ii, 12:—"Then sat Solomon upon the throne of David his father: and his kingdom was established greatly."

1 Chron. xxix, 22:—". . . . And they made Solomon the son of David king the second time, and anointed him unto the Lord to be the chief governor, and Zadok to be the priest.

23:—"Then Solomon sat on the throne of the Lord as king instead of David his father, and prospered, and all Israel obeyed him."

The throne of David therefore is quite clearly shown to be the throne of the Lord in its earthly aspect, and Solomon, whilst nominally king, was in reality Chief-Governor or Governor-General.

To get further enlightenment upon the subject we must turn to the New Testament.

St. Luke i, 31:—"And, behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name JESUS.

32:—"He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David:

33:—"And he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end."

The same striking facts are revealed here as in the Isaiah passages, i.e.:—

The Child merging into the Son, the giving of a kingdom which suggests the Heir, the duration of the kingdom, and the throne of David—the earthly aspect of the throne of the Lord.

Three other aspects are given here, however, to elaborate the Isaiah passages:—

(1) The name of the Father is given—the Highest.
(2) The name of the Giver of the kingdom to the Son is given—the Lord God.
(3) The Son is to reign over the House of Jacob.

If the full sense of the study is to be observed, then particular attention must be directed to the facts stated:—The kingdom is to be given by the Lord God—and the Lord God shall give; also that the Son had not at that time received the kingdom—and the Lord God shall give.

This is exactly what we would expect from Scriptural analogy. It must be remembered that Jesus came into the world for a specific purpose and to do a specific work, and until that work was accomplished—even to the bitter end of the Cross—the giving of the kingdom must necessarily remain in the promise stage—"shall give." Looking upon this aspect of Christ's work, we see the tremendous significance and subtlety of Satan in offering Jesus the kingdoms of this world.

Coming back to the passage in St. John vi, 15, we begin to get at the meaning as to why Jesus would not allow the people to make Him a king. They had not the power to offer Him a kingdom, they had not a kingdom to offer Him, He could not accept a kingdom through an earthly source, His time had not yet come for receiving the kingdom, and the giving of the kingdom was the prerogative of the Father, ". . . . and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David." Hence the reason why Jesus departed from the people.

In the light of this study we would seem to have the interpretation of the parable of the nobleman.

St. Luke xix, 12:—"He said therefore, a certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return."

15:—"And it came to pass that when he was returned, having received the kingdom . . . ."

These two passages would seem to indicate clearly that Jesus was speaking of Himself, that He was going, in order to receive the kingdom, and that He would be the possessor of the kingdom before He returned to earth.

PREDESTINATION.—II.

THE EVERLASTING NATION.

By the Rev. R. G. F. Waddington, M.A.

["Mr. Waddington claims no originality for this series of articles on Predestination. They are a frank plagiarism of a book published many years ago by a firm which is now out of business, and written by a man, Mr. A. K. Robinson, of whom Mr. Waddington has been able to find no trace. But the book is one of the best elementary expositions of British-Israel teaching which, in Mr. Waddington's humble opinion, has yet been written.

Mr. Waddington has therefore thought it worth while to give to The National Message readers the substance, and, in some parts, the actual words of Mr. Robinson's capital little book."]

The question now naturally arises: What has become of the Nation of Israel, the Ten Tribes? Some people say that God, for her many grievous sins, has cast her out of His Divine programme altogether, and that she is now extinct as a separate nationality, or has been completely absorbed by the nations amongst whom she wandered. Dr. Burroughs, in a book entitled "The Way of Peace," writes, after following the history of Israel and Judah as separate entities, "For the now rejected Chosen People, God substituted His Chosen Church." And I do not think I should be far wrong if I said that this is the generally accepted idea to-day. Israel has faded out of the picture, and the Church has taken her place, and God has transferred all His promised blessings to the Church.

A few have tried to argue that the Afghans are the remnant of the Ten Tribes. A few have tried to identify them with some other small and utterly insignificant peoples.

Now the Anglo-Israel theory suggests to you first of all that, if you want to find out anything about Israel, you must go to the only Book that can give you any reliable information, or make any indications that are worth following up. It is no use just starting a theory from blind fancy; we must get at the facts upon which to formulate some theory that is worth examining.

Now when we examine the pages of the Bible, we find many specific promises concerning Israel, and therefore, unless God's promises have utterly failed, or unless those promises were never meant in the ordinary meaning of words, we must look for a people that are in existence as a multitudinous nation, a nation and a company of nations having certain marks, inheriting certain blessings, and doing certain work which was appointed for them to do by God. And the destiny declared for Israel in the pages of the Old Testament is of such a nature that it would be impossible for two different nations to fulfil that destiny or occupy the foretold position.

Now because we find that the British race is bearing all the marks, inheriting already many of the blessings, and progressing towards others, is doing to a great extent the work and fulfilling the mission of Israel, we British-Israelites contend that Britain is Israel. The British race responds to every Bible point of identity, and no other race does. Therefore, if God's Word is true, if His promises have not failed, or been transferred, Britain and Israel are identical. It is not upon one single point of identity that we argue, but upon the grand cumulative foundation of Scripture evidence that we stand and challenge disproof. If we are to accept such a statement as that quoted from Dr. Burroughs, we really impugn the very honour and power of God, for if God has rejected His Chosen People, two facts follow. First, that Paul made a profound mistake when he wrote to the Romans that God had not rejected His Chosen People. Second, and much more important, that God changed His mind after confirming His promise with an oath. "By Myself have I sworn."

Surely it is impossible to think of God going back upon His word to Abraham and David and Israel in the matter of the Covenant Blessings, unless we also consider that it is possible for God to go back upon His promise to us of life through Jesus Christ. For the only source that we possess whereby we may know of the promises is the same both for us and for the nation Israel, that is to say, the same Scriptures.

If you will turn to the prophet Jeremiah and read his 31st chapter, you will find that the existence of Israel as a nation, separate and distinct, is declared to be as sure as the existence of the sun, moon and stars. Whilst Isaiah xli, 8, 9, writes, in days after the removal of Israel from her land, "Thou art My servant, I have chosen thee and not cast thee away."

I do not want to multiply texts, for it is easy enough for the reader to search them out for himself with a little trouble, and it will be quite worthy of the trouble; but there are scores of texts similar to the two quoted which should be quite sufficient to assure the unbiassed mind that as the sun and moon and stars still shine, so Israel must be in existence as a nation.

Now the Jews are certainly a known and recognizable people, and their very existence, in spite of the frightful persecutions by which their enemies have sought to exterminate them, is one of the strongest proofs that we can have of the truth and inspiration of the Scriptures. Indeed, one may defy all the arguments of Atheism by the fact that we have the living witness of the Jews before us, and no amount of criticism and quibbling can get away from their existence. Is it not therefore certain that Israel must also be in existence? If Judah has survived, and even increased in numbers, through the long centuries of travail; if this bush, though burned with fire, has not been consumed, how much less can Israel, protected by God by the very fact of becoming "lost," and therefore beyond the ken of her enemies, have become extinct? Surely Israel must have become increased in greater proportion?

And when we read what God's Word has to say about Israel, the fact of her continued existence and prosperity becomes undeniably certain. The next step in the study that we must take is to distinguish between the Covenant God made with Abraham and the Mosaic Covenant.

The former Covenant was made without any qualification requiring the obedience of Israel, the offspring of Abraham. The Covenant was made because of the obedience of Abraham. It followed obedience, and was made dependent upon the Oath of God. Upon that Oath, and upon that alone. Paul, writing to the Galatians, seeks to make this fact absolutely clear, and he refers to the same Oath in his Letter to the Hebrews. Further, it is upon this fact, that there was no condition in the Covenant, that Paul bases his argument concerning the Gospel of Christ. But the Mosaic Covenant, which came 430 years afterwards, and which did not and could not make the former Covenant of none effect, was conditional upon Israel's obedience. So long as Israel sought to obey the tenets of the Law, they were safe and prosperous in the land, but their failure to keep the Law in later years was the cause of all their disasters.

Digitized by Google

So far as the Jews are concerned, on their return from Babylon, they restored, under Ezra, the Law, and they have been under the ægis of this Law ever since, practising the rite of circumcision which makes them debtors to fulfil the whole Law.

But Israel, under Jeroboam, broke away from the religious side of this Law, and, under Omri, abandoned the civil side also. They thus became an uncircumcised race. When Paul is writing to the Galatians, who were, as the context clearly shows, members of Israel, and not Jews nor ordinary Gentiles, he warns them against their evident desire to RETURN to the weak and beggarly elements of the Law. They could not return to that which they had never before experienced, but as they had abandoned the Law under Omri, Paul wishes them to know that they must come under the New Covenant in Christ, without any reference to the Law of Circumcision.

There are those who have tried to overthrow the British-Israel theory on the ground that the British are an uncircumcised people, but what I have just said shows how contrary to Scripture is their contention.

The plan of God, concerning the Nation of Ten-Tribed Israel, may be gathered from the Bible, and, stated briefly, is as follows :—

God divorces Israel from Him, because of her idolatry, and drives her out of her land into a wretched and debasing captivity in far-off countries. He hedges up their way with thorns so that they should not be able to find their way back to their own land, and so that they might forget their origin. He promises, along with the very words of judgment, that He will redeem them from bondage, will raise up for them a Saviour of the House and Lineage of David, that He will sift them among all the nations, without allowing any to fall, that He would allure them into a place He had prepared for them, where He would speak comfortably to them and let them renew their strength.

May I pause here to observe two things. First, that the sieve used in sifting corn in Palestine is not, like our sieve, full of holes, but a tray on which the mingled corn and chaff is thrown into the air, so that the chaff may be blown away, and the corn fall back on the tray. The sifting of Israel was therefore for the purpose of preservation. Second, that to speak comfortably surely means to do for Israel what Jesus has done for us. The " comfortable words " of Jesus are words which speak to us of salvation.

To continue the plan of God.

In the sanctuary He had appointed for Israel He destined that they should increase in number until the place should become too small for their habitation, and they should break out on the right hand and on the left, that they should blossom and bud and fill the face of the earth with fruit, that they should inherit the waste places of the earth, and that in them should be seen the mercy and love of God, even as in the Jews had been seen His judgment and wrath.

When the Messiah came the redemption of Israel was accomplished. Judah, His Own Tribe—for Jesus was of the House of David, who was of Judah—rejected Him, and compassed that Crucifixion which was at once the means of the redemption of Israel and the salvation of mankind. It was to the Jews therefore that He spoke when He said, " The Kingdom of God shall be taken from you," and we contend that, to be consistent with other Scriptures, the Nation to which He referred as taking the place of the Jews in the Kingdom was the Nation of Ten-Tribed Israel. From amongst the Galileans, who were of the Tribe of Benjamin—Paul also was of Benjamin —He chose out His disciples and sent them to their dispersed brethren among the nations. Peter and James definitely address their letters to the whole of Israel's Tribes, and not to the Jews.

By different routes, and at different periods, the Ten Tribes moved across Europe and settled in Britain to enter under the New Covenant and carry out their mission as the witnesses of God. This brief statement is only intended as an outline. The arguments and the Scriptures that support it will be dealt with in later chapters. What I want the reader to realize at the moment is that Israel, redeemed from both the bondage of the Law and the penalties of sin, is now under the New and better Covenant, and in existence as a Christian Nation.

And in case anyone wishes to put forward the argument that Britain is not a Christian Nation, I would remind him that I did not say that Britain is a Nation of Christians.

Britain is a Christian Nation, with an Established Church, and many sister Churches ; with a King who acknowledges his title to reign as from God ; with a Parliament whose proceedings are opened with prayer ; with cities whose chief citizens have an appointed Chaplain ; with an Army and Navy that also have appointed Chaplains ; in short, with a definite public acknowledgment of national dependence upon God. And in truth, no amount of quibbling about " conversion " and such like can ever get away from the fact that in Britain, and in Britain alone amongst the nations, there is this recognition of the place of God and the honour due to Him. Neither will any plea of insincerity or hypocrisy supply an answer.

There are too many, I am sadly afraid, who, with Pharisaic pride, consider their own " conversion," and look with lofty superiority and scorn upon the profession of the people at large.

I believe, and I think the recent debates in the House of Commons upon the Revised Prayer Book confirms my belief, that at heart this people is deeply religious, and moved with Protestant fervour. I will therefore hold fast to my contention that Britain is under the New Covenant, and a Christian Nation.

ABDASHERAH, AZIRU AND THE ABIRI.—IV.

By Professor Edward Odlum, M.A., B.Sc.

Tablet 51 B, P. 75, makes it clear that the Abiri, in their wars, had secured a fleet, or at least some ships of war which they used effectively.

We quote from 51 B ; referring to the enemies of the Great King's cities and fleet, the letter says :—" Abdasherah is with them. Has he not marched? And their ships are set against the reinforcements from the Land of Egypt. SO NOW THERE IS NO NAVIGATION."

Digitized by Google

This means that the ships of Abdasherah and the Abiri were able to prevent ships coming from Egypt with soldiers (bitati) to help Gebal, Sigata, Simyra, etc., etc.

This is a sidelight of importance. A comment here is necessary. From the Tablets we learn that the Abiri under Abdasherah came from the desert and Edom or Seir, the very course taken by Israel under Moses and Joshua. The Tablets speak of the Abiri at times as if they were Amorites, or Hittites, or both. However, there is little confusion here if we remember that Israel entered Canaan from the land of the Amorites.

In addition, we read on the Tablets that Dusratta, king of Mitana, was an ally of the Abiri. He claimed to be king of the Hittites, and undoubtedly had Hittites in his army when co-operating with the Abiri.

Thus it would be most natural for different Tablet writers tc speak of Amorites, Abiri and Hittites in a collected way, and also at times in a segregated manner.

In Tablet 16 B, P. 76, we read that " the son of Abdasherah has carried away men of Gebal, and my family, and a wife whom I loved."

This letter was written by Ribadda the chief, governor or king of Gebal, after this city had been captured, and when he was a refugee in another city. He was steadily loyal to Egypt.

Tablet 20 B.M., P. 79, mentions three sons of Abdasherah, without naming Aziru, his most prominent son.

The three sons mentioned herein are Abdirama, Iddinaddu, and Abdmelec.

The fourth was Benmabenat and the fifth the famous Aziru.

In 19 B.M., P. 80, we read :—" But now, behold Aziru is destroying me and I repeat there are no oxen . . . for me ; and there is no corn to eat."

That the war reached to the waters of the Mediterranean Sea and the seaports we may know from a statement made by Ribadda the chief of Gebal in Tablet 63 B, P. 87 :—" They (the enemy) have cut off two of my ships, with my sons and all that was mine."

To show how the bitati, or Egyptian garrisons, were wanting in the time of need, we read in 80 B, P. 88, a letter from Ribadda of Gebal :—" The battle was urged very mightily against us, and the king is not defended by his fortress."

The following quotation shows how we may gather botanic data from general or specific national history.

In Tablet 76 B, P. 90, Ribadda writes to the king of Egypt, and says :—" But now, behold the soldiers of the land of the Hittites have trampled down our papyrus."

This papyrus grew in the river Adonis at whose mouth Gebal, Byblos, was situated on the east coast of the Mediterranean Sea.

It was an Egyptian fortified city, one of many in Phœnicia, Philistia and Canaan. At the time of this letter to the king of Egypt, from Riibiddi, the governor, the city must have been besieged as he states they were without food.

It is quite likely that Riibiddi is the same as Ribadda, whose name appears on many tablets.

In 71 B, P. 91, Ribadda complains bitterly and says :—" Lo ! it is not granted to my sons to take root for me, as the prophets have perceived of old ; and the race of the foes will remain . . . There was good fortune for the sons of Abdasherah, as to the subjugation of the capital city."

When we bear in mind that there was a prophecy hundreds of years old at the time of Ribadda's letter, saying all these cities and lands would be conquered and taken over by another race under divine direction, we can understand why Ribadda should bewail the loss of Gebal, and its cities, and the extinction of his own family from the possession of what he would naturally think of as their genealogical birthright.

An interesting sidelight is given in this Tablet, where we read that Ribadda vainly called upon Babylon for help ; a natural thing to do, as Egypt and Babylonia were allied at that time. There was a strong material cause of the refusal to help, for the good reason that a powerful kingdom existed between Babylonia and Phœnicia where Gebal was located.

This was the kingdom of the Cassi, Mitani and the Minyans under king Dusratta, who materially aided Abdasherah and the Abiri.

When Gebal was about captured, Ribadda begged the Egyptian king to let him have the city of Buruzizi where he might dwell. This city is north-east of Gebal, and inland east of the Mediterranean seacoast. Whether Amenophis gave him Buruzizi or not we do not know at present.

By Tablet 27 B.M., P. 98, written by Ammunira from Beirut to the king of Egypt, we learn that he was a friend of Ribadda of the city Gebal, that the two cities co-operated against the Abiri who are called Amorites by Ammunira.

The Abiri were called Amorites because they invaded Canaan and the adjoining countries from the lately captured land of the Amorites.

THE RELATION OF LEBANON TO ISRAEL'S POSSESSIONS.

BY MRS. GHOSN-EL-HOWIE.

A CORRESPONDENT in Australia writes : " My attention has lately been much drawn to the relation of Lebanon to Israel's possessions, and I was much interested to see your remarks in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER for November 30th last.

" Could you spare the time to answer a few questions about your district ? "

Then follow questions as to the division of land into small or large holdings, or both ; cultivated " intensively " or otherwise. " Are there native peasantry with small blocks of land ? What are the crops ? " What methods of cultivation, ancient or modern ? With regard to size of holdings she says : " I should call anything under 200 acres producing an all-round living as being intensively cultivated ; 200 to 400 would be small holdings (unless the country is very rich, no soil deficiencies), and 400 and upward would be big farms and estates. Any information on productiveness would be welcomed. What are your seasons and climate ? "

Now, what are " Israel's possessions " ? I presume my correspondent has reference to the land promised to Abraham,

Digitized by Google

"from the wilderness and Lebanon, from the river, the river Euphrates, even unto the uttermost sea." (Deut. xi, 24.)

As a matter of fact, Mount Lebanon has never been possessed by Israel, but there are many signs of fast fulfilling prophecy which lead one to believe that the Lord will shortly gather His people out of the foreign lands to which they have emigrated, notably in recent years as to U.S.A., South America, South Africa and Australia, etc., and "will bring them into the land of Gilead and Lebanon; and place shall not be found for them." (Zech. x, 10.)

Scarcity of population is the main reason for the impoverished state of the country.

The land is not divided by any agrarian system into large or small holdings. Most of the land proprietors have inherited their holdings, large or small, from remote ancestors, or they have been acquired by purchase in recent years.

The littoral, maritime plain, from Tripoli to Sidon, is largely cultivated, perhaps "intensively." Orange and lemon groves, fruit and vegetables in great variety, supply the markets of coastal towns and adjacent mountain villages.

Damascus is an island in a sea of prolific fruit and vegetables. The Buka-'a, Coele Syria, the valley of Lebanon is only partly cultivated by the poor peasants of the small scattered villages, but a new scheme is being launched by the Government (French) whereby through draining the swamps of the Litâny river and the cultivation of the mulberry tree, for a proposed revival of the silk industry, more land will be available for cultivation. The terraced slopes of the mountain are more or less cultivated according to the circumstances of the owners. Lands in the vicinity of the many convents or monasteries are worked in the interest of these institutions by a poor, illiterate peasantry, who receive a certain share of the produce.

Land in the neighbourhood of small villages is cultivated as far as means will allow in the old primitive way; much land is allowed to lie waste because of absence of owners and want of men and means to cultivate it.

From time immemorial, the beauty, the sublimity, the matchless fertility, the salubrious climate and the grand scenery of this "goodly mountain" have been celebrated in story and song. (R. L. Stewart, "Land of Israel.")

Dr. J. L. Porter wrote: "Along its base eternal summer smiles, and along its summit, 10,000 feet overhead, rests eternal snow. Between the two extremes flourish the vegetation, fruit and flowers of all climes."

With regard to the seasons, winter may be said to last four months, from the middle of November to the middle of March; the various spells of heavy rain are interspersed by periods of fine sunshiny weather. Sometimes the winters are quite mild and open, at others heavy falls of snow occur. Spring and summer are each of three months' duration, while autumn consists usually of two months, from September 15th to November 15th.

The air of the mountain is very salubrious. Its abundant springs are fresh and pure; some are being directed into fresh channels for irrigation and electrification purposes. A fresh impetus in the building of hotels, etc., installation of water supply and electric systems into the various summer resorts, promises to make Mount Lebanon more attractive to summer visitors who come from Egypt, Palestine and the maritime plain. In time the goodly mountain may rival Switzerland or the Riviera, but this desideratum is hardly likely to take place before the return of Israel to her long-lost inheritance.

Every day brings us nearer to the time of her restoration. "Is it not yet a very little while and Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field?"

It might easily happen that a threatening gesture in the political world would drive many thousands back to the defence of their now forsaken lands. The Lebanese, forced from his own country through persecution of the Turk and lack of enterprise and encouragement by succeeding Governments, is by no means rooted in the lands of his present sojourn. It is force of circumstances alone that keeps him there. His heart is in the highlands of his native land, and as there is a movement among Zionists to colonize Palestine, so a movement is being initiated in the northern part of the Promised Land which may develop into a Restoration Movement preparatory to the return of the Lord when in His millennial reign on earth (Isa. xxiv, 23; Rev. v, 10; xx, 6); "The glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it." (Isa. xxxv, 2.)

The time is now approaching that the Lord shall bring His own
From "utmost parts of Heaven," or of earth, where they be gone.
It is His will to pardon, He will graciously "restore"
The scattered "flock" of Is-ra-el unto His Land once more.
(Deut. xxx, 4, 5; Isa. xlix, 6; Mic. ii, 12.)
The Lord shall dwell in Zion, and He out of it "shall roar,"
Against the heathen in the vale He shall make deadly war;
For there will He in judgment sit on "heathen round about,"
"The Hope" and "Strength" of Is-ra-el shall put their foes to rout.
(Joel iii, 16, 9, 12: Isa. xxviii, 6.)

"THY WILL BE DONE ON EARTH, AS IT IS IN HEAVEN."

BY "DUNELM" (U.S.A.).

OUR God, Who is capable of creating, sustaining, and ruling this infinitely wondrous universe, is, and obviously ought to be, therefore, equally capable of causing to be written for our instruction, salvation and edification, the Holy Scriptures, which right down the ages have not only perfectly withstood all the manifold alien and diabolic assaults hurled against them, but have still more positively and progressively proven themselves to be indeed His Own Eternal, Infallible Word. As such, frail, fallible, short-sighted man is no more competent, or justified in presuming, to challenge, or deny, the glories, perfections, or infallibility of Holy Scripture than he would be to doubt, or criticize, the majesty, power, or completeness, of the sun, and the other heavenly bodies.

Digitized by Google

If one truly, experimentally and fully, accepts Jesus Christ as Lord, Saviour, King of kings, and Lord of lords—even God's Only Begotten, Eternal Son, manifested within the limits and conditions of our common, earthly human life as Very God of Very God, it reasonably follows that such a King, Lord and Saviour would most surely cause His Holy, Elect, Universal Church (being as it now is many Members in ONE BODY) to put into writing, as inspired by the Holy Spirit, those Truths setting forth God's Eternal Plan of Salvation for Humanity. This He (Our Lord) has done, and hence the fact of our Bible, comprising the Old and New Testaments (Covenants). This He has done, and every one of His true disciples know that, in the final analysis, the integrity and trustworthiness of Holy Scripture stands or falls by the Absolute Integrity and Trustworthiness of Our Blessed, All-sufficient Saviour and Lord Himself. In modern business phraseology, His Signature, being attached to THE DOCUMENT perfectly, and for all time, authenticates and establishes the same.

Such, then, being the actual import of the Words, "Thus saith the Lord," we then read in Holy Writ as follows: "I will make of thee (Abraham) a great nation." Also—"Heaven and earth shall pass away but MY Word shall not pass away." Now either this Promise and Covenant has been, and is still being, fulfilled in this our own day and generation, or—failing that—the Word of Scripture is hereby proven unreliable, misleading and erroneous. In the latter event it must needs be seen that the Divine Author Himself—the Triune God—stands equally convicted of fallibility, ignorance, instability and unfaithfulness in His relations to His creature, man. Morally, scripturally, philosophically, and as matter of mere cold, abstract logic, this last-named argument simply cannot be sustained, and absolutely cancels itself. In short, God to be GOD cannot, in any sense, shape, or degree, partake of any sort or condition of imperfection, or moral deficiency. In like manner, Jesus Christ, God's Well-beloved Son, and the Co-equal of the Father, shares the same Moral Perfections and Spiritual Attributes of the Triune Godhead as such.

Therefore, when one considers the racial and religious record of Great Britain and America in these latter days, we are simply compelled, upon the evidence before us, to conclude that the Divine Covenants of the Old Testament have been, and are being, fulfilled to the letter in the case of these two of the world's Greatest Powers. In this matter (as in all others), Our Lord's Words hold good: "Think not that I am come to destroy the Law, or the Prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil. For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the Law, till all be fulfilled."

Individually, every true child of God knows within himself—through the unfailing Witness within of the Holy Spirit—that these Words of Our Lord have been, and are still being, fulfilled absolutely to the last jot and tittle. In particular, the certainty, infallibility and inevitability of God's Covenant with our Father Abraham for the Final Blessing and Redemption of all Mankind through God's Elect People—Anglo-Saxon Israel—is daily affirmed and renewed by us personally every time we prayerfully and faithfully say the God-given Petition of the LORD'S PRAYER: "Thy Will be done on earth, as it is in Heaven."

THE RESTORATION OF ISRAEL.

BY J. LLEWELLYN THOMAS, F.R.C.S.

III.—THE PLACE OF ISRAEL'S RESTORATION.

IN the last article we found that there were data in the prophetic Scriptures regarding the Time of Israel's Restoration which enabled us to fix it with considerable precision. Are there data which would assist us to locate with any assurance the Place where it was to occur? Are there any indications of a place where the Ten-Tribed captives were to be gathered; where they were to rest from their long wanderings and be secure from oppression; where they were to renew their strength and be restored to God's favour and blessing; after which they, together with the Jews, were to become the possessors of the land promised to their fathers? If this place could be located with certainty we should be justified in holding that the people who were found in the Appointed Place at the Appointed Time must be Israel.

In this search we shall proceed along three definite lines. There are allocated for Israel's Restoration three regions. These, it might be expected, all refer to one and the same place or country. Thus there is reference to—

1. An Appointed Place for Israel.
2. Some Wilderness for Israel.
3. Certain Islands for Israel.

This land or country was one that was definitely appointed for them by God. God Himself was to draw them thither. It was a place of Isolation and Safety, a Strong Defensive Position, a Place of great Fertility and Abundance, of Temporal and Spiritual Blessings. In fact, it was a goodly heritage.

(i.) THE APPOINTED PLACE.

When God made His great Covenant with David His servant relating to the perpetuity of His dynasty, He at the same time coupled it with the somewhat mysterious promise of a Place for Israel—a prophecy that has attracted but little attention. This Dual Promise is found in 2 Samuel vii. There is doubtless a close and intimate connection between the two sections of it, and they are mutually interdependent. What exactly was the promise of this Place?

> Moreover I will appoint a place for My people Israel, > and will plant them,
> that they may dwell in a place of their own,
> and move no more;
> neither shall the children of wickedness afflict them any more, as beforetime. (2 Sam. vii, 10.)

Note well the terms of the promise. Here we have the "Appointed Place." God Himself would select this place, and He Himself would plant Israel there. It would be a place prepared for them, and set apart for the nation of the Ten Tribes. "Israel" here does not mean the whole of the Twelve Tribes, for the following two reasons:—

1. Though, at the time when this striking promise was given, the Twelve Tribes were united and formed a single people and kingdom under the rule of David, yet it was a time when the distinction between Israel and Judah was very marked. In the reigns of Saul and David the difference is constantly emphasized. The division of the Twelve Tribes into the two nations of Israel and Judah after the death of Solomon was only the confirmation of a very real cleavage that had already existed at least for more than a century and a quarter. Hence, when the verse says "Israel," we take it to mean Israel in contradistinction to Judah.

2. The second reason is that the blessing here promised has never fallen to the lot of the Jews. They have never had any place of their own other than Palestine. They have never had a settled abode or permanent home. Their experience has never been a "planting," but on the contrary a constantly recurring uprooting. Instead of freedom from oppression, affliction and persecution have been the sad lot of their inheritance; whereas it can be shown that to Israel the items of this promise have been fulfilled to the very letter.

The Appointed Place not Palestine.

This Appointed Place is not Palestine. It is some other good land, an additional territory for Israel.

1. It could hardly be Palestine because that land had already been appointed by Oath and Covenant to all the Twelve Tribes many centuries before David's time. This promise is no reiteration of the old one. At this very period the people were in the secure occupation of the land promised to their Fathers. It would be strange to promise it now when it had already been promised long ago, and when it was wholly in their possession.

2. It could hardly be Palestine because once they were in possession of this Appointed Place they were never to be ousted. They were to "move no more," according to the words of the promise. Whereas the Jews were certainly evicted from Palestine in A.D. 70.

3. It could hardly be Palestine because that country was never the isolated and strongly defensive position which the Appointed Place was to be, for Palestine was peculiarly open and liable to attack from north and south. If it were not actually the cockpit of the old heathen Empires, it was the pathway of their armies. The Appointed Place is clearly not Palestine.

It may come as a surprise to many to learn from Scripture that Israel was to have any home other than the Land promised to their Fathers. Yet such is the promise; for it is no temporary shelter, but a permanent home given to them in addition to the Promised Land.

The promise implied impending affliction at the hand of their enemies, but definitely states the appointment of a Place of ultimate rest and safety. Here is a Place of Recovery, a Place for the Restoration of the Ten Tribes. There is no hint, however, in the promise of the whereabouts of this goodly heritage. The Appointed Place is not every place to which Israel eventually was to spread abroad, but was a very definite single country from which expansion was to take place.

In concluding this section on the "Appointed Place" attention should be given to the mention in the book of The Revelation of a similar place that is spoken of as a "Prepared Place."

The Prepared Place.

In chapter xii of the Revelation the Apostle had seen "a great wonder," "a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars." She was delivered of a man child, and there appeared another wonder, "a great red dragon" ready to devour the new-born. But the child was caught up to God in heaven, and the woman fled from the dragon.

And the woman fled into the wilderness, where she hath a Place Prepared of God, that they should feed her there a thousand two hundred and three score days. (Rev. xii, 6.)

Who is this woman? Does she represent Israel? Many think she does, and so it may be. It would then seem more than likely that the "Appointed Place" was this "Prepared Place."

It is clear that the Prepared Place is to be a place of safety and protection for the afflicted, just as was the Appointed Place. In this place the woman was to be defended from the face of "the serpent," and be free from affliction and persecution (v. 13), and there she was to be nourished. It reads very like the Appointed Place save that it is not stated to be a perpetual home, but one for only a period equivalent to half a "Seven Times," 1,260 years.

In the 14th verse of that chapter it states:

And to the woman were given two wings of a great eagle, that she might fly into the wilderness, into her place, where she is nourished for a time, and times, and half a time, from the face of the serpent. (Rev. xii, 14.)

Here we have the Place mentioned again. In both the verses it is stated that the woman fled to the "Wilderness." The "Prepared Place" is some "Wilderness." This is an important clue. The "Wilderness" will merit careful examination.

(ii.) "THE WILDERNESS."

The Restoration of Israel in some certain place, prior to the great Final Restoration, together with the Jews, to the possession of the Promised Land, is described by at least four of the leading prophets. They all describe it as a resting place or a sanctuary, where the tribes were to renew their strength. A place of complete safety. A very rich and fertile land. A land in which there was to be abundant spiritual blessing.

The singular point is that these four prophets, who are enthusiastic over this region, speak of it as a "Wilderness," exactly as the "Prepared Place" is described by St. John as "the Wilderness." These prophets are Hosea, Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel.

Since the word "wilderness" in the Scriptures is sometimes used to denote a place of desolation and woe and a region of punishment, we are very apt to think that it must always be a place more or less dreadful and an arid desert. This is far from being the case. From the descriptions given by these prophets it is evident that it is no desert or arid land, but on the contrary one of exceeding fertility and fruitfulness, so that by the term "wilderness" must be understood a country uninhabited and unknown, of virgin forests and undulating plains, of hills and valleys, of streams and rivers, such as these islands of ours were in the days of the early settlers.

(a) Hosea on "the Wilderness."

Hosea's mission was entirely to the house of Israel and the whole of his book deals with the people of the northern kingdom and not with the people of Judah, except in those verses in which Judah is either named or clearly indicated. He prophesied fifty years before the captivity of Israel began (two full centuries before the destruction of Judah). In Hosea's time Judah was more or less walking with God, whereas Israel had hopelessly lapsed from His worship. He stated that whereas God would not have mercy on Israel He would have mercy upon Judah (Hos. i, 7).

Digitized by Google

It has already been noticed that the judgments pronounced on Israel by Hosea were very terrible. Yet no prophet foretells a Restoration with such confidence or describes it so enthusiastically. In his second chapter he describes first the punishment and then what God will do in the way of mercy and forgiveness to His rebellious people.

Therefore, behold, I will allure her, and bring her into the wilderness, and speak comfortably unto her. (Hos. ii, 14.)

The place of assembly of the wanderers is "the Wilderness." It is clearly a region predetermined of God. He draws the Tribes to that trysting-place. Beautiful is the description of the gathering: "I will allure her, and bring her into the wilderness." It is a place of isolation suitable for safety and recuperation, a land of joy and abundance. In this Wilderness, and not in Palestine, God was to "betroth" Israel unto Himself. There can be no doubt that this region is not Palestine. It is surely "the Appointed Place." It is surely the same "Wilderness" which was "the Prepared Place." Thus we learn from Hosea that there is to be a Restoration of Israel, apart from Judah, and in some "Wilderness," prior to their reunion and Final Restoration to the possession of the Promised Land (see Hos. 1, 10 and 11).

(b) Jeremiah on "the Wilderness."

Jeremiah the prophet lived in the period that followed the downfall of the kingdom of Israel and the deportation of that nation to Assyria and after their migration thence into Europe. He lived in the days of the decadence and fall of the kingdom of Judah. Some of his prophecies solely concern and refer to the already captive Israel, while others refer and are addressed only to the Jews. He not only foretold but also witnessed the downfall of Judah.

Speaking of Israel in captivity, he made the following declaration, in which he told of their Restoration as taking place in "the Wilderness" even as Hosea did.

At the same time, saith the Lord, will I be the God of all the families of Israel, and they shall be My people. Thus saith the Lord, the people which were left of the sword found grace in the wilderness; even Israel, when I went to cause him to rest. (Jer. xxxi, 1, 2.)

Here is this "Wilderness" mentioned again by a second prophet in connection with the Restoration of Israel. The Time of this occurrence has already been discussed. They that were left of the sword, even Israel, after their Assyrian captivity were to foregather in "the Wilderness" for the purpose of resting. God Himself "went" to do this. He was the Director of the great movement into this prearranged place. There was some mysterious lure in this "Wilderness" for the Tribes of Israel. Behind all the apparent aimlessness of their wanderings was the Divine purpose. God was drawing them with the cords of love.

Jeremiah's description of "the Wilderness" entirely corroborates that of Hosea. Both prophets describe the same place and the same event. This Restoration is not the Final Restoration of the Twelve Tribes, it has no connection with Palestine or with the Jews. The first half of Jeremiah xxxi refers only to Israel of the Ten Tribes.

So far there has been no indication as to where this land lies, though it is obviously the same "Wilderness" that is mentioned in The Revelation.

(c) Ezekiel on "the Wilderness."

Ezekiel prophesied some 130 years after the kingdom of Israel had ceased to exist. He was carried captive to Babylon in the second deportation of the Jews, which was in the reign of Jehoiachin, some seven years after Daniel had been taken away, and some twelve years before the destruction of Jerusalem. When speaking of Israel's Restoration, Ezekiel mentions "the Wilderness" as the place where God would deal graciously with them and bless them. Thus we have a third prophet who speaks of Israel's place of Restoration as "the Wilderness." He calls it "the Wilderness of the people":

As I live, saith the Lord God, surely with a mighty hand, and with a stretched out arm, and with fury poured out, will I rule over you: And I will bring you out from the people, and will gather you out of the countries wherein ye are scattered, with a mighty hand, and with a stretched out arm, and with fury poured out. And I will bring you into the Wilderness of the people, and there will I plead with you face to face . . . . And I will cause you to pass under the rod, and will bring you into the Bond of the Covenant. (Ezek. xx, 33-37.)

Israel does not come into this region by chance or accident. It is the God-prearranged rallying-point for the race—"I will bring you . . . and will gather you," very like the "planting" in the Appointed Place, and like the "luring" into the Wilderness. They were gathered and brought into it after the fury of God had been poured out upon them in chastisement, after their scattering, and after their long wanderings. It is a place of rest and quietness, where God is able to plead with them. It was a place apart and separate from other peoples. It was to be a place of great spiritual blessing even as "the Wilderness" was in the descriptions of Hosea and Jeremiah.

This gathering of the Tribes to the God-appointed rendezvous is shown by the context of the above quotation to be prior to the return to the land promised to their Fathers. It was the Preliminary Restoration of the House of Israel and not the great and Final Restoration. The gathering into "the Wilderness of the people" was to take place before entering into the occupation of "the land of Israel, into the country for which I lifted up Mine hand to give it to your fathers" (Ezek. xx, 42).

Of the whereabouts of this "Wilderness" Ezekiel gives us no information. It is clear that it is the same Wilderness spoken of by Hosea and Jeremiah. It is impossible to prove that it is not "the Appointed Place" and "the Prepared Place." The teaching of Scripture that there is to be a Preliminary Restoration of Israel is very manifest.

(d) Isaiah on "the Wilderness."

Isaiah is yet another, the fourth, prophet who describes the Restoration of Israel as taking place in "the Wilderness." He lived and prophesied before the time of Jeremiah or of Ezekiel. The kingdom of Israel in his day was at the worst and last stage of its existence. But it was otherwise with Judah. Judah continued as a realm for a century after the time of Isaiah.

Digitized by Google

Sing unto the Lord a new song, and His praise from the end of the earth, ye that go down to the sea, and all that is therein: the isles, and the inhabitants thereof. Let the wilderness and the cities thereof lift up their voice, the villages that Kedar doth inhabit: let the inhabitants of the rock sing, let them shout from the top of the mountains. Let them give glory unto the Lord, and declare His praise in the islands. (Isa. xlii, 10-12.)

This "Wilderness" is to be a place of joy and gladness, of rich spiritual blessing. It is in marked contrast with captivity, oppression, and wanderings. Moreover, it is a place to which God has brought His people (see verse 16).

I will bring the blind by a way that they knew not; and I will lead them in paths that they have not known: I will make darkness light before them, and crooked things straight. These things will I do unto them, and not forsake them. (Isa. xlii, 16.)

The "Wilderness" is the destined rendezvous of the nation. Its description entirely precludes it from the possibility of being Palestine. Isaiah's words were addressed here to the captives of the House of Israel. Isaiah's "Wilderness" is surely "the Appointed" and "the Prepared Place."

In our investigation up to this point there has been no hint as to where this Wilderness is located, but in the verses above we have the first clue, the association of "the Wilderness" with "Isles" and "Islands." This is most important, and brings us to the third and last stage of our search for the Place of the Restoration.

THE ONE TALENT.

By E. M. Foster.

We are all familiar with the parable of the Talents. We know too that the great majority of us fall under the "One Talent" heading, and so it behoves us to make greater efforts and realize our shortcomings and responsibilities as individuals.

As we view, mentally, modern Israel, many of us must long to convert the multitudes, the whole nation. This great task need in no way appal us, for we can each go ahead and convert our relatives and friends. In their turn we can make them keen British-Israel missionaries of the Gospel of the Kingdom of God. The good news will in this way spread like fire. One house converts another. The street converts the town. And one town carries the glad message to the greater towns and cities. Then in Britain's darkest hour each one of us will be prepared.

As in the days of the Spanish Armada, so now, we may light the first warning beacon, and that beacon will light up the countryside for miles, until a chain of beacons shines from hill to hill, and the whole nation stands in the light of British-Israel Truth.

OUR GREAT ADVANCE.

Last week we were able to announce that the response to our appeal for a thousand new Study Circles this year was immediate and gratifying. Since our last announcement was penned the requests for information have come in daily.

One enthusiast writes that we shall get thousands of new Circles formed. We hope he is a true prophet.

What is to the point he (the optimist) is doing his part by helping to start one in his own town. We hope you who read this will "warm up" and be filled with a similar desire to pass on the good news.

What better work can we do than to pass on the "good news" of the Gospel of the Kingdom together with the Gospel of Salvation. These are two phases of the same Gospel—one national and the other personal.

We shall not get far in the propagation of the Truth of the Gospel of the Kingdom until our vision is enlarged by personal experimental knowledge of spiritual things.

Prayer, Faith, Hope, Work. This is an unbeatable combination. Study your Bible prayerfully. Read The National Message week by week together with the text-book you select for study. Check up the Bible references. "Prove all things, Hold fast that which is good."

* * *

Our work is to sow the seed.

"Sow in the morn thy seed,
At eve hold not thine hand,
To doubt and fear give thou no heed,
Broadcast it o'er the land."

Keep sowing all the year round. Don't worry about the harvest. God will take care of that. Our task is seed-sowing. Unless the seed is first sown there can be no harvest.

Let us see that good seed only is sown. Read our Lord's Parable of the Sower. Only twenty-five per cent. of the seed fell upon good ground. So prepare your ground and keep on sowing. God will give the increase.

It is intended to form a British-Israel Study Circle at Headquarters for the systematic study of our subject, and we shall be glad if any of our readers in London who desire to join such a Circle will communicate at once with the Secretary-General. It is proposed at first to take up the presentation given by Dr. Llewellyn Thomas in his book, "God and My Birthright." Details as to date of commencement, etc., will be announced later.

WHAT WE HEAR.

"This week those people who like fervent religion served with ingredients startling and almost awe-inspiring have had their fill, for on three days the Town Hall has at 3 and 8 p.m. been the venue of most interesting, instructive, and remarkable lectures in connection with the comparatively new religious organization called 'The British-Israel-World Federation.' Its leading exponents—men like Mr. Herbert Garrison, F.R.G.S. (the Secretary-General), and the Rev. Pascoe Goard, F.R.G.S.—the latter is a minister from Canada—possess considerable eloquence, and appear absolutely steeped in their subject. One of the tenets of their faith, apparently, is that English people are descended from some of the Lost Tribes of Israel, and that we are, as a nation, pre-ordained to occupy a leading position. That, of course, incidentally appeals to our vanity, and many will sincerely hope it is true. but a far more remarkable belief of many British-Israel followers is that the chronology of world history has been built into the structure of the Great Pyramid, and that such chronology has kept pace with the mighty things of history for over four thousand years."—Leamington Chronicle.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

WE hope for full audiences at Headquarters on Monday next, March 31st, at 3 and 8, when the Rev. Pascoe Goard will give two addresses.

* * *

The series of Prophetical lectures being given by Mr. John Leech at Headquarters will be continued on WEDNESDAYS. The next of these lectures is on April 2nd, then the 16th and 23rd.

At Headquarters, on Thursday evening, April 3rd, Miss Hamilton Hunter is giving an address, "The Vicegerency of Israel: Its Privileges and Responsibilities."

* * *

Last week Mr. John Leech lectured on the Wednesday afternoon, and on Thursday evening Mr. Harrison Hill was the speaker. He was supported by short addresses by the Rev. Pascoe Goard, Alderman Dearden (ex-Mayor of Rochdale) and Mr. Garrison.

Our readers will please remember the May Meetings at Headquarters on April 9th and 10th, afternoons at 3, and evenings at 8; our President, Major Knowles, the Rev. Pascoe Goard, Mr. John Leech, Mr. Garrison, Mr. Morey and others will give addresses. The Annual Meeting of members and associates will be held on April 9th, at 5.30, to consider the Annual Report and Financial Statement for 1929.

It is with regret that we have to record the death of Captain Joseph Straker, of Andover, who has been for years a staunch British-Israelite and a supporter of the great Truth for which we stand. His death will be a very real loss to the locality in which he resided.

We tender to his widow our sincere sympathy in her great loss.

Erratum.—Professor Odlum writes: "In my letter which appeared in your issue of January 18th, 1930, the words "Ain Nagid" are used twice. This is an error. The words intended are "Am Nagid."

We regret the loss of Mr. Bannell, of Liverpool, who has passed away and was buried on the 14th inst. He had been a British-Israelite for fifty years, and he was one of the founders of the B.-I. Association in Liverpool, of which he was a Vice-President. We tender our sympathy to his family. Mr. C. H. Banks represented the B.-I.-W.F. at the funeral.

H.A. writes from Rhodesia: "THE NATIONAL MESSAGE is a great pleasure to me, and I always send it on a further journey when I have read it, hoping others will find equal pleasure and instruction from it and so be led to British-Israel Truth."

The Rev. Viscount Mountmorres, speaking at an S.P.C.K. meeting at the Royal United Service Institution, Whitehall, said:

"What was God's purpose in raising up a little Island to be the centre of the greatest Empire the world has ever seen? If we believe in God and in His Providence, if we try to trace that Providence, we must believe He has some very definite purpose in so extraordinary a phenomenon. I can see no possible answer to the question except that He has called us in a very special sense to be His agents, His fellow-workers, in the regeneration of all mankind. He has entrusted us with the immense and wonderful privilege of carrying a knowledge of the Gospel into the very uttermost parts of the earth."

The monthly Bible Study Class for Women meets at Headquarters on Saturday, April 5th, at 3 o'clock, under the direction of Miss Alexander and Mrs. Zoe Bell. A cordial invitation is given to attend these classes.

On April 8th the Rev. Pascoe Goard and Mr. Herbert Garrison are giving addresses in the Town Hall, Woolwich, at 8 o'clock in the evening. Mr. John Leech, M.A., K.C., is to preside. Will all the friends in the district please help to bring along good numbers of people who know little or nothing of British-Israel teaching.

Putney Branch report that Miss Hamilton Hunter gave a lecture for them on March 19th, entitled "Citizenship and the Law of the Lord," this proving intensely interesting. There were new-comers present, and literature was sold from the Book Stall recently established and managed by Miss Laidlaw and Miss Dunn. The Branch members are very encouraged by the results from the work done.

Two lectures given by the Rev. E. A. Couldrey on March 17th, at Salisbury, were greatly appreciated, and the Branch will be glad to hear him again (D.V.) in June.

On March 6th, through the kind hospitality of Mrs. Elsom, two drawing-room meetings were held at Congleton, to hear Mr. Wm. Whitton, who spoke to an interested audience both in the afternoon and evening. A water-coloured painting representing the Throne of David, with the Coronation Stone or "Stone of Destiny," was the subject of one address, explaining the history of the Stone from the time of its travels with the Children of Israel in the desert to its present home in Westminster Abbey. The main argument of the British-Israel teaching is based upon the assumption that, in fulfilment of the Covenant which God made with Abraham, there must be in existence to-day a great nation and company of nations answering to the description of God's chosen people Israel, and that the Anglo-Saxon race is clearly proved to be that people. There is ample proof that the British and American nations are the descendants of Ephraim and Manasseh, the two sons of Joseph, and are inheriting the promises made to them. * * *

The Rev. T. Sparshott Johnson, M.A., at the invitation of the Vicar, preached on the British-Israel subject at St. Oswald's, Thornton Heath, on Sunday evening, March 16th, to a full congregation. Keen interest was manifested, and after the service the congregation were recommended to obtain more information on this interesting subject from one of the members living close to the Church. Some of our Croydon Branch members were present and distributed literature after the service. * * *

A most interesting afternoon was spent at Sir Charles Craufurd's house on the 13th inst., when Miss Hamilton Hunter gave a lecture to an overflowing drawing-room, the chair being taken by Sir Charles himself. Both chairman and lecturer gave evidence to convince even the cynics among the audience that the British people are the descendants of the Ten Tribes of Israel, and inheritors of the promised blessings.

Mr. Daniel Farmer paid the Liverpool Branch a visit on March 13th, and gave a most interesting and instructive address on the Bible. His subject was "Seven Reasons why I believe the Bible to be true." There was a good attendance and the lecturer was well received.

Regarding the Eleventh Annual Congress, opening (D.V.) on October 6th, we should be glad to be notified by those who had tickets for seats at the last Congress whether they desire to have seats in the same position held for them this year if possible. Applications are coming in, and we do not wish to have anyone disappointed.

On March 19th the Rev. W. T. Medhurst addressed a meeting of the Mid-Rhondda Branch on the subject, "The Book of the Prophet Isaiah and the British Race." Arrangements were made to hold the first Bible Class meeting on March 26th. * * *

The organizers of the meeting at Sheen on the 21st inst. are delighted with the results, and especially with the address given by Mr. J. J. Morey, which is reported as being the exact address needed. The greater part of the audience had never heard of the subject before, and they listened most attentively.

Mr. S. E. Steele, of Liverpool, recently addressed a meeting of the Ilkley and Ben Rhydding Branch on the subject of "The Early British Church," his address being a continuation of one given some weeks ago, He showed how mistaken was the belief so often held that Augustine was the first missionary to these Islands at the end of the sixth century, and showed the close resemblance between the old Hebrew worship and that of the Druids. He quoted a number of authorities in support of the claim that Britain was the first country to receive Christianity nationally, a claim which was confirmed by the Council of Pisa, Basle and Sienna. In the story of the Acts of the Apostles there were five years of Paul's life unaccounted for, and in the archives of Constantinople a document had been found, the authenticity of which was not proven, giving a further chapter, showing that Paul preached in London on the spot where St. Paul's Cathedral stands. Caradoc, the British Prince, made a remarkable speech before the Emperor Claudius, and whose daughter Gladys, afterwards known as Claudia, and Linus, his son, were amongst the earliest converts, converted before Paul visited Rome.

Mr. J. J. Morey addressed a meeting of Toc H in Streatham on Monday evening, March 17th, when the deepest interest was shown by a band of twenty-five young men. They promised to read our literature and want to know more of our subject. Other Toc H Branches are following suit.

On Tuesday Mr. Morey addressed a large meeting at Leigh-on-Sea, his subject being "The Book of Genesis."

At Canterbury on the 19th a large audience assembled in the County Hall, when Mr. Morey spoke on "The Breakdown of Existing Systems, and Why."

On the 20th he visited Rye, when His Worship the Mayor presided over a good meeting in the Old Monastery Hall.

In the Southern Area there is certainly a great awakening and our Commissioner has more calls than he is able to meet.

A public meeting for discussion on "Modern Italy in relation to Prophecy" was held in Winnipeg, when Rev. E. J. Springett delivered a striking opening address, referring to present conditions in that country, and the policy of Mussolini. Major J. H. Edgar, B.Sc., A.M.I.C.E., followed with the reading of Scripture. Dr. H. W. Wadge, M.C., B.A., M.D., presided. Several questions were put and replied to, much interest being evinced by a full gathering.

Rev. E. J. Springett addressed a capacity audience on "The Present World Unrest: Its Cause and Cure," Dr. G. F. Bush, L.D.S., being in the chair.

Mr. J. W. Oldroyd writes from Halifax:—"An address given here by Mrs. J. Walshaw on 'The Self-Revelation of God,' was highly appreciated. The Bible, she said, had become more wonderfully revealed since she came in contact with B.-I. teaching and interpretation. She saw as never before God's unconditional and conditional Covenants to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and handed on to their children throughout the ages. Her public confession, with her husband—a local solicitor—will no doubt greatly help our Halifax Branch, as they are the founders of an Evangelical Missionary organization, from which missions are helped and even missionaries sent into distant lands. Several of their friends have joined our B.-I.-W.F., and they are also good supporters of our Movement here.

"I note our young friend, Mr. G. R. Gair, has been lecturing—God bless his efforts. I well remember him making his early attempts when 16 years of age in our local Mechanics' Hall.

"My own son gave his first paper on B.-I. Truth at the age of 16 years in a classroom Bible Y.M. class, of which he was a member, since which time he has given addresses and lectured in Ashton-under-Lyne, Southport, Manchester, Halifax and various parts of London, in church and open parks, with such veterans as Messrs. Hesketh, Marchant and the late Mr. Locke, and has founded two Branches (B.-I.-W.F.) in Pretoria, South Africa, where he has worked and resided for seven years. Before that he was two years in Cairo, Egypt, having visited Palestine, and has since given lectures upon the 'Holy Land.' He is now in Sydney, Australia, working in the B.-I. Cause. He is the author of 'British Ancestors—Were they Hebrews?' and 'The Case for British-Israel,' issued by the Covenant Publishing Co., Ltd.

"Since my association with our Halifax B.-I. Cause, some twenty years ago, we have lost by death veteran stalwarts in the persons of Mr. J. Heaton, Mr. J. Barnes, Mrs. Bolton, Mr. William Hill, and recently Mr. W. H. Beal, aged 81 years.

"We are still carrying on—had twelve meetings for this Session with an average attendance of over 116 persons. We are being greatly helped by the Rev. R. G. F. Waddington, M.A., and speakers trained by him.

"Blackpool has a Secretary who went from our B.-I. Association, Mr. Tom Sutcliffe, who was Assistant Secretary with the writer.

"We wish all B.-I.-W.F. Christian workers God's blessing."

A GEOGRAPHICAL INEXACTITUDE.

In writing of the progress of the Apostle Paul in his missionary journey, the Rev. Pascoe Goard wrote, in the issue of March 8th, as follows :—

"The recorded outpourings of the Holy Spirit which follow are :—

Samaria, Cæsarea Philippi, Antioch, Ephesus.

The latter outpouring took place in Europe."

The above is inaccurate geographically. The thought he was following was ethnological. He was thinking of Greeks, not Greece. Ephesus together with twelve other Greek cities were on the Asia Minor side of the Straits. They were Ionian cities.

Ionia consisted of a narrow strip of land near the coast, which, together with the adjacent islands, was occupied by Greeks of the Ionic race, and it was thus distinguished from the interior district inhabited by Lydians.

The point we desire to make in the reference above quoted is that the Apostle Paul was sent to the ethnological division of the people which we know as "European," as contrasted with the peoples we know as "Asiatics"—and that the Ephesus revival and outpouring of the Spirit was upon the Greeks.

Rev. Merton Smith writes to ask when Ephesus moved over into Europe? Ephesus did not move over into Europe, but Europe, in the personnel of the Greek migrants who took possession of Ionia, moved over into Ionia in Asia Minor, of which territory Ephesus was one of twelve cities. The Ionian (Greek) cities were—counting from south to north—Miletus, Myus, Priene, Ephesus, Colophon, Lebedus, Teos, Erythræ, Clazomenæ, Phocæa, Samos, Chios. Smyrna was also occupied by Ionians at a later date, and also became an Ionian city.

Having reached Ionia, and Ephesus in Ionia, St. Paul was virtually in the ethnological territory of Greece, and among Grecian people, although he was still on the Asia Minor side. From thence he crossed to Macedonia.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation: the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

APPROACHES TO THE FACTS OF BRITISH-ISRAEL TRUTH.—IX.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

INVITATION INTO THE KINGDOM.

IN the last article we considered the direct national results of the Redemption. We now consider the call of the Lord to the nations to enter in.

In this chapter (lv) the invitation of the national Gospel rings out in the trumpet-like call to the nations to come into the Kingdom, and to enjoy therein the blessings of the rule and leadership of the House of David.

"Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy, and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price.

Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? and your labour for that which satisfieth not? hearken diligently unto me, and eat ye that which is good, and let your soul delight itself in fatness.

Incline your ear, and come unto me: hear, and your soul shall live; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David.

Behold, I have given him for a witness to the people, a leader and commander to the people."—Isa. lv, 1-4.

Mark well what we are now reading. This is no call to kneel at the Cross, but it is a call to kneel at the throne of the Lord and to do homage to His Kingship, as loyal subjects of His Kingdom. There is a similar call of the same Gospel voiced in the second Psalm, which reads as follows: "Be wise now therefore, O ye kings; be instructed ye judges of the earth.

Serve the LORD with fear, and rejoice with trembling.

KISS THE SON, lest He be angry, and ye perish from the way, when His wrath is kindled but a little. Blessed are all they that put their trust in Him."

But it is objected, "This refers to the Lord Jesus Christ."

It does indeed refer to the Lord Jesus Christ the Son. It refers to Him IN HIS KINGLY OFFICE, seated upon the throne of the Kingdom.

Again it is objected, "He is not here, nor is He yet seated upon the throne of His Kingdom." That is true. He said of Himself, "A certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for Himself a kingdom and to return.

AND HE CALLED HIS TEN SERVANTS, and delivered them ten pounds, and said unto them, OCCUPY TILL I COME."

It is manifest therefore that the Kingdom is delegated to the ten-tribed House of Israel, which as we learn, for instance, in the thirty-third chapter of Jeremiah, is still ruled over by the House of David during the absence of the Lord, which includes the present time, "till I come."

The House of David, ruling over the House of Israel, forms the national basis of the Kingdom of God at this time. It is into this Kingdom that the peoples of the world are being invited in this stirring chapter.

The spiritualizer will lift his eyebrows at this, perchance. But lifted eyebrows are not always the sign of wisdom. There can be no more spiritual teachings than those given by our Lord as recorded in the thirteenth chapter of St. Matthew. Among them are the two parables, "The sower and the seed" and "The tares and the wheat."

Our Lord's Own interpretations are given to those important parables, and they cannot be mistaken.

In the first, "The sower and the seed," the field is the human heart, the seed is the Word of God.

Digitized by Google

In the second, "The tares and the wheat," the field is the world and the seed is men and women.

The first is a missionary parable. The second is a colonization parable.

Isaiah is dealing with the colonization march of Israel, the Kingdom phase of the Gospel. The Apostles deal chiefly with the Missionary phase of the Gospel, but still they include the preaching of THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

So in this great invitation, above quoted, there is the invitation to the peoples and nations to come into the Kingdom under the blessings of the leadership and rule of the House of David.

How wonderfully have the nations listened to this call. Far more have come into the Kingdom than have come into the Church. Nearly six hundred millions are under Anglo-Saxon flags and administration, or nearly one-third of the human race, and the end is not yet.

"BEHOLD, I HAVE GIVEN HIM FOR A WITNESS TO THE PEOPLE, A LEADER AND COMMANDER TO THE PEOPLE."

A WITNESS.—Thus we have our Lord's words and testimony clearly given in the Gospels. He witnesses to God's faithfulness to the racial and national Covenants made with Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and with Israel.

A LEADER.—This evidently refers to the political situation. We hear to-day so much about taking the Sermon on the Mount as the guide for us in our political and social life. If this were sincere we should be glad indeed, and should re-echo the call. But, alas, the present call to the Sermon on the Mount is not to the spoken Word of Christ, but to the very, very human interpretation of the same. Let us take a sample of this. Christ in the Sermon on the Mount, in adopting every jot and tittle of the Law and the Prophets, adopted the Law for universal military defensive service, as set forth in the first chapters of the Book of Numbers.

Most certainly the Book of Numbers forms an important part of the Law. Not only is the Book of Numbers itself not to be laid aside by Christians, but not one jot or tittle contained in it. The whole Book is caused to bear the signature of our Lord: "Verily, I say unto you . . ." Our Lord, by adopting every jot and tittle of the Law, made this Book an essential part of the Sermon on the Mount. Yet many of those who are calling for a return to the Sermon on the Mount are striving with might and main to abolish all military service. We do not stress this point. There is a middle ground. We do not believe the Book demands or envisages a large standing army. But it does stand for the nation being thoroughly organized for defence. Let it stand at that. We believe that such a militarism as Germany established is abhorrent to the Lord. But we are of the firm opinion that had the manhood of Britain been enrolled in 1913, ready to answer any legitimate call, THERE WOULD HAVE BEEN NO WAR IN 1914. Those tremendous years of suffering was the result of our trying to improve on the Sermon on the Mount in this regard.

As a political Leader we know the policy of our Lord. It is the policy set forth for Israel administration in the Old Testament, confirmed by Him in the New Testament. We may none of us be very sure of all the implications. But we may fully trust Him to lead us aright.

The glorious fact that He is given us to be our Leader in the political life of the "nation and company of nations" and of "the great People" is sufficient. We may all say in our hearts, "Lead, Lord, and we will follow."

A COMMANDER.—This most certainly refers to the military establishment of Israel. Under the Lord's direct command we shall not do wrong to any. This is the function of the Lord under His title "The Lord of Hosts," for at all times the Lord of Hosts is the Commander of the hosts of Israel.

The blessed results of His administration is seen in the eagerness of individuals and nations to come under the administration, to share in the peace and blessedness of the Davidic rule. It is set forth graphically thus :—

"Behold, thou shalt call a nation that thou knowest not, and nations that knew not thee shall run unto thee because of the Lord thy God, and for the Holy One of Israel; for he hath glorified thee." —Isa. lv, 5.

Thus not only shall the nations which have been born of the mother-nation be found under the ensign of Israel; other nations shall "run unto thee because of the LORD thy God," that is to say, Jehovah the God and King of Israel, "and for the HOLY ONE of Israel," Who is Jesus Christ our Lord, Who is King of the Kingdom of David.

Soon there will be the manifestation of Western nations seeking entrance to the Empire as indeed nations have so sought in the Eastern world, who shall apply for Dominion status among the Commonwealth of Israel. Especially will those nations of kindred blood and ideals on the Continent of Europe come, and the sooner the better.

And now comes the intensely spiritual call of the Gospel of the Kingdom. It is a call which is of the same nature as that which is made in the message of Salvation, and is often quoted by Evangelists who are endeavouring to establish the faith of seekers after God. Here is the spiritual call of the Kingdom :—

"Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near:

Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon.

For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord.

For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts.

For as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater:

So shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it."—Isa. lv, 6-11.

And now we have the promise of the progress of the colonizing enterprise of the Kingdom both materially and spiritually. How wonderfully has the promise been fulfilled to the letter so far in the history of the U.S.A. and of the Overseas Dominions :—

"For ye shall go out with joy, and be led forth with peace: the mountains and the hills shall break forth before you into singing, and all the trees of the field shall clap their hands.

Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the

Digitized by Google

brier shall come up the myrtle tree: and it shall be to the Lord for a name, for an everlasting sign that shall not be cut off."—Isa. lv, 12-13.

The nation becomes "MY REDEEMED."

Let us consider this striking passage in this regard. It is the majestic moving forward of the Lord, the King of Israel, to the repossession of the land granted to the Fathers. They are to take possession of it after the time of punishment is gone.

"Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah? this that is glorious in his apparel, travelling in the greatness of his strength? I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save. Wherefore art thou red in thine apparel, and thy garments like him that treadeth in the winefat?

I have trodden the winepress alone; and of the people there was none with me: for I will tread them in mine anger, and trample them in my fury; and their blood shall be sprinkled upon my garments, and I will stain all my raiment.

For the day of vengeance is in mine heart, AND THE YEAR OF MY REDEEMED IS COME.

And I looked, and there was none to help; and I wondered that there was none to uphold: therefore mine own arm brought salvation unto me; and my fury, it upheld me.

And I will tread down the people in mine anger, and make them drunk in my fury, and I will bring down their strength to the earth."—Isa. lxiii, 1-6.

If the reader will remember that the so-called second part of Isaiah is a message to Britain and to all her daughter and kindred nations in the West, and will read Isaiah's great message with that in view verse by verse and chapter by chapter, from Isaiah xl to the end, he will have before him that great prophecy which is telling the inner story of the development of our race in temporal and spiritual matters. The Celto-Saxon world, usually called the Anglo-Saxon world, is emerging from the pages of this wonderful Book, rejoicing in the Gospel of the Kingdom and of Grace.

What, then, is this people to Jehovah our God and King? It still is His "kingdom of priests, and an holy nation," as He declared at the beginning it should be.

What is this people to our Lord Jesus Christ but "MY REDEEMED," who should first partake of His redeeming grace, and should then make known His saving health to all the nations?

Let us close with the beautiful prayer, prayed in every Church in Anglo-Saxondom over and over again, and as we do so realize how startlingly it is our prayer:—

"O come, let us sing unto the Lord: let us make a joyful noise to the rock of our salvation.

Let us come before his presence with thanksgiving, and make a joyful noise unto him with psalms.

For the Lord is a great God, and a great King above all gods.

In his hand are the deep places of the earth: the strength of the hills is his also.

The sea is his, and he made it: and his hands formed the dry land.

O come, let us worship and bow down: let us kneel before the Lord our maker.

FOR HE IS OUR GOD; AND WE ARE THE PEOPLE OF HIS PASTURE, AND THE SHEEP OF HIS HAND. To-day if ye will hear his voice,

Harden not your heart, as in the provocation, and as in the day of temptation in the wilderness:

When your fathers tempted me, proved me, and saw my work.

Forty years long was I grieved with this generation, and said, It is a people that do err in their heart, and they have not known my ways:

Unto whom I sware in my wrath that they should not enter into my rest."—Psalm xcv.

THE EVER-INCREASING INTEREST IN B.-I. TEACHING.

BY W. B.

IN the first place, may I make it perfectly clear that I am penning these few words, not as an official of the British-Israel Movement, nor in any sense as a leader. Our leaders from time to time express themselves in these columns, sometimes giving us new and sparkling gems from their storehouse of wisdom—the inspired Word of God—and at other times refreshing our memories by repeating the fundamental and basic Truths of British-Israel teaching. Our acknowledged leaders, both clerical and lay, have a great work to do in teaching us the numerous Truths contained in the Volume of the Sacred Law; and right worthily have they acquitted themselves; as each year draws to its close one or more is gathered home, to receive the "Well Done" which must assuredly be their exceeding great reward. As a member of the rank and file, however, it is my privilege to address a few words to those who, like myself, have managed to make themselves acquainted, in their spare time, with the teachings of the Movement, and who, when the opportunity presents itself, do honestly and sincerely try to "Put a word in" on behalf of the Bible to their fellow-men who have perhaps not been enlightened as to its wonders. It is, unfortunately, a regrettable fact that Modernism and atheism are prevalent among many scholars to-day. Generally speaking, the clergy are missing their opportunity of expounding the Scriptures to the masses outside the Churches, and yet—I speak with the knowledge that is bred of having to mix in all grades of society everywhere in this land—I am prepared to state that there never was a time when the man-in-the-street has been more eager to listen to a conversation about the Bible. And that is where you and I, the rank and file, come in. It is obviously our duty, first and foremost, to learn as much as possible. The Book Room at Headquarters has hundreds of volumes which are at our disposal wherewith to do this; and there must be thousands of men and women who, like my humble self have managed to acquire a fair amount of learning in this way. Assuming this, I would like to point out one or two practical methods of making use of it. After all, bearing in mind the parable of the talents, is it too much to expect that we shall make use of our talents—whether one or ten—in trying to interest other people in our work? Let me point out one or two general lines on which to work. In the train, for example, it is usually easy to start a conversation with one's fellow travellers; the subjects of the weather; taxation; the Royal Family; the Empire, are always being discussed in our hearing. Are we content to make the usual remarks on these subjects, and thus be losing a glorious opportunity—denied in the nature of things to many of our leaders—of bringing the conversation round to British-Israel? Take, for instance: (1) Taxation; isn't it wonderful how the nation "muddles through" in spite of heavy taxes? There's one opportunity for you; ram the point home that the only reason old England does "muddle through" is that we are a specially favoured nation. Mention the numerous occasions in British history when it has seemed certain we should be wiped out and a Higher Power has stepped in and saved us. (2) The weather. Does the average man realize that the weather has been playing most extraordinary tricks in the last few years? What is more to the point, are we taking the opportunity of pointing out that Christ Himself stated nearly 2,000 years ago that this would be the case? (3) The Royal Family; the Prince of Wales, etc. How many know that our Royal House traces its descent from King David? (4) The Empire. A really topical subject in these days. Can we not manage to interest others in the fact that the British Empire really does fulfil the role outlined for it in the Bible? It should be possible for every one of us to at least suggest lines of thought on these subjects—and there are many others which will prove equally opportune. Are we going to be content to let these potential opportunities slip by without taking any part? If so, I do not think we shall be really satisfied with ourselves. Objections there may be; some may not be brilliant conversationalists; well, what's wrong with always having a copy of the Special Number of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER wherewith to push arguments home; and for that matter to give away to any fellow traveller who seems interested? I suppose in the last eighteen months I have got rid of some 500 odd copies of the Special Number in this way; and it has been a revelation to me to find how eager one's fellow passengers are to learn our Truths. You will find scoffers who will pooh-pooh, and possibly scholars who will dismiss the whole thing as absurd, and leave you feeling that you have come off second best. But will that discourage you? Not if you are worth your salt as a soldier of Christ. In my earlier efforts to spread the Gospel of the Kingdom in this manner I had many losing battles, each of which convinced me that there was some loophole in my armour. But the loophole was not in the British-Israel teaching; it lay in the fact that I was not sufficiently strong on that part of the subject where the enemy had assailed me; and I made sure that I would not be beaten on the same point twice, by steadily concentrating my studies in that one direction until I was sure of my ground. I felt myself being forced either to give up the fight or else strengthen my armour; and as a man of Kent, with the county motto of "Invicta," I decided I would still keep in the fight. As I have said, you will find scoffers; but from personal experience I can say you will find a dozen who are willing to listen for every one who is definitely antagonistic. After all, the Church leaders are missing their opportunity, and it is up to you and me—the privates and lance-corporals—to carry to the man-in-the-street this great and glorious Gospel. And finally, an army is remembered by the deeds of the Tommies, and not only by its generalship or brilliant strategy; by the way in which its privates behave. Keep your armour spotless and your acts above-board, and folk will at least respect your opinions, and more often than not want to learn more about your beliefs.

THE VOICE OF A KING.

By G. E. ALTREE COLEY.

THE car stopped before the house slumbering in peaceful darkness. "This is the place," we whispered, like three conspirators. We tumbled out and the motor went on, the driver home to bed in view of the day's work, while we tapped softly at the shadowed door, huddling close together in the frosty night. Through the glass a light blurred. The door opened, and laughing under our breath, remembering the sleeping children, we entered and were led down the hall to the kitchen. Our hostess in dressing-gown and with friendly zeal raked the still warm embers of the range and piled on kindling and coal. In the cold snap it was the warmest room, and we needed to be warm while we waited. On a shelf was the loud-speaker and, our comfort assured, our hostess disappeared to turn on the radio in an adjoining room. For at the farthest West of the Empire, where time lags eight hours behind that of London, we had come at two o'clock in the morning to listen to the King's speech at the opening of the Naval Disarmament Conference.

Jazz burst upon us as our little operator tuned in to our neighbouring American city of Seattle. Then the announcer informed us: "The selection you have just heard is from ——, where the boys are having a party while they wait for the King's speech." It was just like that—"the King's speech"—just as we, his loyal subjects, would have said it, yet from an American station. We got another station. There too they were broad awake, filling in the time with songs, waiting for the King. We turned to our own CNRV at Vancouver, and "Land of Hope and Glory" was the theme. We were within the Empire and national songs were in order. Then we were told the names of all the stations across Canada that were standing ready for the great broadcast, and turning back to the American station we heard a similar roll-call. Conceive it. The great continent all awake in the darkness of the morn of January 21st, the American people as keenly interested as their Canadian neighbours. From huge, cosmopolitan New York out to uncounted little home towns, to solitary farmhouses muffled in snow on the wind-swept prairies, all silent under the star-lit vault, people were rising in the chill darkness, people were gathering in little parties, as we had, at some neighbouring radio to hear the King. The thought stung the eyelids.

"For the first time in history a King's voice will be heard in America," sonorously proclaimed our Seattle announcer. And America cared enough to want to hear it. Of course we all knew that next day we could read in the newspaper the verbatim report of what he said. But we all wanted more. We wanted to hear his very tones, to get for ourselves a glimpse of his personality as only it could be revealed by the living voice . . .

Somehow we found ourselves connected with Montreal, three thousand miles away, near the close of an organ recital.

"The King's speech will come through at six o'clock," said Montreal. We looked our dismay. Six! A delay? Then we breathed again. That was by eastern time. "The King is due to speak in a few minutes," came our neighbouring announcer comfortingly, and continued to fill in the time with old, national airs.

The hands of the little kitchen clock quivered on the verge of three. The jazz and the songs ceased. Tensely we could almost feel the connections being linked up across the world. . . . From far across the continent, ghostly white in the darkness, far, far across the wintry waves of the Atlantic, the room was filled with a rushing noise, with eerie, whistling shrieks as of phantoms disturbed. . . . We could never hear him through all that, was our fear. Through it there came another sound, different, but still to us just noise. "What you hear is real noise in the House of Lords," explained the announcer paternally. Was it that? The muted diapason of a great assemblage? Then, before we quite knew it, amid the persistent cosmic noise came tones, full, mellow, and, as we all noted, free from that conspicuous accent that excite such lively curiosity and debate on this continent—a kindly voice, the voice of a gentleman cultured and humane . . . and we knew that we were hearing the King.

We waited for some time after that. We heard Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, and Mr. Stimson's reply, interpolated by the interpretations, and we knew that the Conference was launched. What would be the outcome? We were not wise enough to guess. But one thing in those early winter hours had become more apparent than ever before. Deeply, and beneath all surface differences, the American people are one with us, responsive to the same loves, the same ideals, brothers in all but name. We felt that, when we all waited together to hear the King.

ABDASHERAH, AZIRU AND THE ABIRI.—V.

By Professor Edward Odlum, M.A., B.Sc.

Tablet 90 B, p. 99, gives some information concerning the "men of blood," the enemies of Sidon. The writer is Zimridi, the governor or chief of the city of Sidon on the east coast of the Mediterranean, north of Tyre and south of Beirut. He says, "The greatest of the fortresses deserts to the enemies; which has gone well for the 'men of blood.'"

There were traitors within the city and fortress that helped the "men of blood" to capture the great city Sidon, older, wealthier and more powerful than Tyre at one time.

Tablet 99 B, p. 100, gives a glimpse at the unfriendly relations between Tyre and Sidon.

King Abimelec of Tyre writes his overlord, the king of Egypt, and says, "So the king of the city of Sidon is taking the people who are my subjects."

It would seem that the king of the city of Khazena (Hazor) was unfriendly to Tyre and Gebal; for Abimelec says that the "king of Hazor is leaving his city and going out with the 'men of blood.'"

In 30 B.M., pp. 105–106, we find that Edagama, chief of Kadesh on the Orontes, and Aziru, united to fight against Neboyapiza, king of Cumidi: "They have come to the regions of Zimridi." This must mean that Aziru and Edagama succeeded against Neboyapiza, and then undertook an attack in the direction of Sidon where Zimridi was king or chief. This Tablet says further: "Lo! he gathers ships of soldiers against me from the fortresses of Aziru."

From Tablet 28 B.M., p. 108, we gather that Aziru had just captured the city of Simyra on the Mediterranean coast; that Sidon was taken, and its king had fled to Irib.

Abimelec, king of Tyre, says in this letter, "Zimridi (king of Sidon) is gone to the city Irib. He has escaped from slavery: There is no water or wood for us."

From this we see that the strong city of Tyre is faced with capture and destruction by the "men of blood." Of Aziru, Abimelec says, "Aziru is a man sinful against the king (of Egypt), and the chiefs of the city Arada (Arvad) destroy me."

Doubtless, Arada fought against Tyre under the orders of Aziru, the leader of the "men of blood."

Abimelec goes on to say:—"They will gather their ships, their chariots, their foot soldiers to seize the city of Tyre, the king's handmaid." He must have little hope of resisting the besiegers at the time of this letter.

On p. 113, Major Conder informs us that the Hebrew conquest took place in the lifetime of Yankhamu and Suta: and we know from the Tablets that Yankhamu, Ribadda, Zimridi, Abimelec, the Abiri, Abdasherah and Aziru were contemporaries. This seems to confirm the belief that the Abiri and Hebrews were one and the same people.

In 74 B.M., p. 118, Dagantacala, the chief of Ascalon, a Philistine city, writes to the great king of Egypt, and says: "Redeem me from the strong foes, from the hands of 'men of blood.' . . . The chiefs are hiding and the chiefs are flying. . . . . and the son of a dog . . . ." This is an urgent Philistine cry to the king of Egypt for help against the "men of blood," doubtless the Abiri.

In Tablet 51 B.M., p. 138, we have as a note by Conder the following facts:—

"From these letters we gather that there had been a withdrawal of the Egyptian troops about the time when the desert people attacked Yapa'a. That these desert people were the Hebrews under Joshua, who was the contemporary of Japhia, we learn more clearly from the Jerusalem letters. That Gezer submitted to them is also shown by the same."

Tablet 105 B, p. 139, shows the state of mind in which Adonizedek, king of Jerusalem, finds himself, when writing the great Egyptian king. He says among other things, "So now, failing those who were chiefs of the garrison of the king, let me fly to the king."

His garrison officers had fled from Jerusalem because they were terrified by the advancing irresistible Abiri.

This Adonizedek also says, "all the king's land is rebellious. Yagu Balaam is sent . . . . ."

Several Tablets tell that as the Abiri successfully advanced, the garrison chiefs fled, and the people rebelled and submitted to the Abiri. In the above, the king of Jerusalem says all the king's land is rebellious. Of course he naturally referred to the districts around his own city. Gilgal, Jericho, Hai, Luz, and other cities had been captured by the Abiri.

He says, "Yagu Balaam is sent," perhaps as an ambassador!

It is odd to see that Balaam is mentioned by Adonizedek of Jerusalem in connection with the Abiri, when we know that the king of Moab sent for Balaam to curse the Abiri, or Hebrews, on the east side of the River Jordan.

PREDESTINATION.—III.

THE EVERLASTING NATION.

By the Rev. R. G. F. Waddington, M.A.

After Israel was divorced from God, and had been driven out of her land, thereby becoming Lo-ammi, and Gentiles, Jeremiah is inspired to write some remarkable words contrasting the conduct of Israel with that of Judah. He writes of Israel's adultery which was copied by Judah, and then says (Jer. iii, 11, R.V., as in all my Scripture references), "Backsliding Israel hath shewn herself more righteous than treacherous Judah."

Now what can this phrase mean? I venture to suggest that it has no meaning whatever for the ordinary reader and teacher of the Bible. The New Commentary shares the silence of the older and larger Commentaries on these words.

Now are they God's words, or the vapourings of a Jewish dreamer? Jeremiah is deemed to be the very pattern of a dismal pessimist, especially by those who never take the trouble to read his works, but judge by what thoughtless critics have said. What should he mean, then, by declaring Israel better than his own people, the Jews? Was it just a piece of his abject pessimism?

Surely common-sense will accord to his words the same Divine origin that is accorded to other writers in the Scriptures?

If you wish to argue that the Bible only "Contains the word of God," will you please tell me who is to decide what is and what is not God's Word? Will you kindly pick out for me, in the writings of Jeremiah, the particular texts and chapters that are inspired? And will you also inform me why your choice should have greater weight and authority than any other person's choice?

The scoffer and unbeliever reads verse 8 of this chapter, and he says: "And that's the end of them." The careless Bible reader says: "This was God's final and righteous judgment upon an apostate people." The self-satisfied Christian of many denominations says: "God has cast off Israel and chosen us instead."

But the Bible, which the Christian professes to rate so highly, even though he foolishly says that it only contains God's Word, is brimming over with God's promises of protecting care and love for Israel. Will you just take the trouble to read these "samples," and assure yourself that I have quoted them quite correctly?

"Remember these things O Jacob; and Israel, for thou art My servant: I have formed thee; thou art My servant: O Israel, thou shalt not be forgotten of Me" (Isa. xliv, 21, R.V.).

"Thou art My servant, Israel, in whom I will be glorified" (Isa. xlix, 3). "For a small moment have I forsaken thee; but with great mercies will I gather thee. In overflowing wrath I hid My face from thee for a moment; but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the Lord thy Redeemer" (Isa. liv, 7, 8).

"Hear the word of the Lord, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off; and say, He that scattered Israel will gather him, and keep him, as a shepherd doth his flock" (Jer. xxxi, 10).

"Behold, I will gather them out of all the countries, whither I have driven them in Mine anger, and in My fury, and in great wrath; and I will bring them again unto this place, and I will cause them to dwell safely: And they shall be My people, and I will be their God: And I will give them one heart, and one way, that they may fear Me for ever, for the good of them, and of their children after them: And I will make an everlasting Covenant with them, that I will not turn away from them, to do them good; and I will put My fear in their hearts, that they shall not depart from Me" (Jer. xxxii, 37 ff.). Yes, in the writings of the prize pessimist! Or in Hosea, the prophet who speaks of the scattering of Israel, of her becoming Lo-ammi, Lo-Ruhamah, making it quite distinct that by Israel he means the Ten Tribes and NOT Judah, we may read, "And I will betroth thee unto Me for ever; yea, I will betroth thee unto Me in righteousness, and in judgment, and in loving-kindness and in mercies. I will even betroth thee unto Me in faithfulness; and thou shalt know the Lord" (Hosea ii, 19, 20).

Such are some of the samples of prophesied persistent care by which God speaks comfortably to Ten-Tribed Israel. And who can dare to say that by Israel, God meant any other than Israel? Who will dare to say that God is here speaking comfortably to His Church, and no longer has apostate Israel in His design?

God's goodness and loving-kindness to Israel after her sin and banishment is the theme of all the prophets. Hosea declares that though not actually known as His people Israel, they shall be known as the sons of the Living God (Hos. i, 10).

Let us pause to note here, that a common objection to our teaching from Hosea is that this last promise is to be fulfilled in the same land as the land of their sin, namely, Palestine.

Not so, they became Lo-ammi in the land of their captivity, not in Palestine. They were stripped of their conscious identity in Media. Further, the R.V. margin makes it clear that the words "in the place" mean "instead of," and so reads, "instead of that which was said." The objection of our opponents therefore falls to the ground.

When Christ was born, nearly seven hundred years had elapsed since Ten-Tribed Israel had disappeared from the knowledge of the majority of the pagan world, and the Jews, in the providence of God, whereby He watched over Israel, had become considered the only representatives of Israel. For, as previously noted, Israel, having proved herself more righteous than Judah, was protected by God by the very loss of her identity.

That the pagan world was wrong in thinking Judah the only part of Israel left is shown by the statement of Paul in Romans ix, 6: "They are not all Israel, which are of Israel." Judah was "of Israel," but most decidedly was not "all Israel."

I would next invite your attention to certain clear statements in the Gospel story.

When Herod enquired concerning the birth-place of Messiah, he was referred to the prophecy which declared that in Bethlehem He should be born: "Out of thee shall come forth a Governor, which shall be Shepherd of My people Israel." (Here the Twelve Tribes.)

When the angel appeared to Joseph, to set his mind at ease about Mary, he was told that the Name of the Child, which was conceived of the Holy Ghost, was to be Jesus: "For it is He that shall save His People from their sins," and this expression "His People" includes all the Tribes of Israel, and not Judah only.

And before the Child was born, His mother Mary was informed of the fact that her Son was to possess the Throne of David, which was particularly the Throne of the Twelve-Tribed Kingdom, for David was he who first united the Twelve Tribes under the one Crown; and was also to rule over the House of Jacob, which was again the House of Twelve Tribes, not of Judah only.

We may read the songs of Zachariah, Mary and Simeon, and we find just the same thought and fact emphasized, that the Redemption to be wrought for Israel was for Israel of the Twelve Tribes.

It is as well here to pause and make clear that, if language is to be used correctly, the Redemptive work of Jesus Christ is concerned with Israel only. We are inclined to be careless in our use of words, and so there has grown up a misuse of the word Redemption, as if it had the same connotation as the word Salvation. But the Scripture speaks of our Lord as the Saviour of the world, and the Redeemer of Israel. It was Israel who had sold herself for nought, and who was to be redeemed without price. The rest of mankind needed saving from sin, but Israel needed not only saving from sin, but needed also buying back from the condition into which she had gone, to the condition of safety which she had formerly enjoyed through the grace of God.

It may be suggested that as the ministry of Jesus was confined to Palestine, that therefore the rejection by the Jews finished the matter so far as Israel was concerned, and that from henceforth attention was turned to the Gentiles, as Paul, in Acts xiii, 46, seems to declare. But the Jewish rejection certainly could not affect the rest of Israel any more than a rejection of British rule by the Free State in Ireland affects the status of the British Crown. Further, we should take notice of clear statements in the Gospel story, such as that of John vii, 35: "Will He go to the Dispersion among the Greeks, and teach the Greeks?"—a statement which shows not only that the Jews were not ALL Israel, but that the Jews knew where some at least of Israel's Ten Tribes were at that time settled. And again, "The Kingdom of God shall be taken away from you, and shall be given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." The "you" obviously refers to the Jews who were being addressed by our Lord; whilst the "nation" obviously is not the Church, nor any gathering of Gentiles from among the various nations.

It is interesting to consider how frequently those in authority in our Church to-day will speak of Britain as this Nation singled out by our Lord, and yet will fail to connect up to the obvious link. The Bishop of Bradford, in a recent speech on the Mission work of the Church, said: "No one could doubt that God did choose out nations as well as individuals for His work, and it was quite clear that Britain was God's Elect." And he went on to say how the British impinge upon the various peoples of the world, not only in matters of religion and business, but sport also, being instructors, both in sports of several kinds, and in the very idea of sport. The Bishop of Salisbury, calling the Church to awake to its solemn responsibility in the work of declaring the Gospel of Salvation to a needy world, began his exhortation with the words, "Speak to the Children of Israel that they go forward."

But there is a further and most important question that we must ask you to consider.

When you read your Bible, what impression is conveyed to your mind by the word Gentile, so frequently used in the New Testament? Am I not right when I say that for most readers the word means any or every race on earth except Israel?

We have fallen into the very common error of allowing other people to make decisions for us, without investigation on our part. The Greek word that is translated in the A.V. "Gentiles" on 94 occasions is Ethnos. But that same word is translated 64 times in the A.V. as "Nation."

Look at such a passage as I Peter ii, 9, where Peter is not only writing, on his own statement, to Israelites of the Twelve Tribes, but is quoting a text that applies to Israel only. It is the word Ethnos that we find in the Greek, and both A.V. and R.V. render it "Nation." Then read Luke xxi, 24, and you will find the same word Ethnos, but it is here rendered "Gentiles" by both A.V. and R.V. Then turn to Acts xvii, 26, and you will find exactly the same Greek word here rendered "Nation."

The first text speaks of Israel only, the second text excludes Israel, while the third includes Israel amongst the races of the world. Or you can read Luke xxi, 24, 25 again, and see that the word is used four times in the two verses, twice as Gentiles and twice as Nations. Now suppose we accept the common error, and say that Gentiles mean the non-Israelite races, and we put Gentiles instead of the word Nation, shall we not make nonsense of many of the Scripture texts? Here is one, Luke vii, 5: "He loveth our Gentiles, and hath built us a synagogue." Here is another, Acts ii, 5: "Jews, devout men, from every Gentile under heaven."

Is it not clear, then, that we have got quite a wrong idea of the meaning of the word Gentile, and that we ought to revise our idea? Again, let us turn our attention to Romans xi, 25, 26. What is meant by the expression "Fulness of the Gentiles"? Most people imagine that it means the non-Israel peoples. Will that opinion bear examination? I don't think so.

First, let us note that there is no full stop at the end of the 25th verse, but a semi-colon. That is a point continually overlooked. The correct sense of the whole sentence is given by noting the direct connection of "the fulness of the Gentiles" with "all Israel." For it is when the fulness of the Gentiles is come in that all Israel is saved. Grammatically, then, the two phrases mean one and the same thing.

But further, the Greek "Pleroma ton ethnon" which is rendered "Fulness of the Gentiles" is the exact equivalent of the Hebrew "Melo ha goyim," as is evidenced by the fact that in the Hebrew New Testament, made for Hebrew converts to Christianity, the Greek phrase is turned into the Hebrew phrase just mentioned.

What does this convey to your minds? Very little, till you learn that the Covenant blessings to Abraham declare that his seed should become a company of Goyim, that is to say, a company of Gentiles. Now it is surely absurd to suggest that, as a reward of his faith and obedience, Abraham's seed should become a company of heathen, or a company of non-Israelite people, isn't it?

Then let us admit that the expression Fulness of Nations, or Fulness of Gentiles, is an expression that can only properly apply to Israel. And even further than this. If we trace down the Covenant blessings, we shall find that the "Fulness" promise devolves upon Ephraim, and consequently we are justified in contending that here in Romans the Israel that is "hardened in part" is Judah, the "Fulness of the Gentiles is Ephraim-Israel," and "All Israel shall be saved" tells us that first Ephraim-Israel shall be converted, and then Judah, so that all the Twelve Tribes come under the grace of the Gospel.

THE RESTORATION OF ISRAEL.

By J. Llewellyn Thomas, F.R.C.S.

IV.—THE PLACE OF ISRAEL'S RESTORATION.

(Contd.)

Thus far in the search for this good land we arrived at certain conclusions:

1. That God had appointed some special place for Israel outside Palestine, whither the nation was to come after great affliction and wandering.

2. That there was also a "Prepared Place" for the protection and sustenance of the persecuted Woman, who is supposed to represent Israel.

3. That this "Prepared Place" was some "Wilderness."

4. That four prophets spoke of the Restoration of Israel as occurring in "the Wilderness."

5. That a clue was given that "the Wilderness" was certain "Isles" or "Islands."

In the present chapter this clue will be followed up. It will be found that not only do the prophets describe the Restoration of Israel to God's blessing and favour in "the Wilderness," but that two of them describe it as taking place in "Islands." Are they identical places? It is exceedingly improbable that there are to be two separate places for this resurrection of the race. They are surely the same region. They cannot be Palestine, since "Islands" cannot be taken to describe that land.

To quote once again those verses from Isaiah which associate "the Wilderness" with "Islands":

> Sing unto the Lord a new song, and His praise from the end of the earth, ye that go down to the sea, and all that is therein: the isles, and the inhabitants thereof. Let the wilderness and the cities thereof lift up their voice, the villages that Kedar doth inhabit: let the inhabitants of the rock sing, let them shout from the top of the mountains. Let them give glory unto the Lord, and declare His praise in the Islands. (Isa. xlii, 10-12.)

Isaiah thus associates "the Wilderness" with "Islands," not with any single island, but with a group of Isles. "The Wilderness" and "the islands" here seem to be interchangeable terms and to refer to the same country. It has been already mentioned that "the Wilderness" was a place of spiritual blessing, and here the same is the case with "the Isles."

Isaiah is not the only prophet who associates "the Wilderness" with "Islands." Jeremiah also emphasizes the same connection. In the beautiful thirty-first chapter, which is mainly devoted to Israel (vv. 5, 6, 9, 18 and 20), and in which the distinction between Israel and Judah is very marked, there is the mention of "the Wilderness" in the second verse and "the Isles" in the tenth. Both verses refer to the same gracious Restoration of Israel. For convenience of comparison both verses are subjoined:

> Thus saith the Lord, The people which were left of the sword found grace in the wilderness; even Israel, when I went to cause him to rest. (Jer. xxxi, 2.) . . .
> Hear the word of the Lord, O ye nations, and declare it in the Isles afar off, and say, He that scattered Israel will gather him, and keep him, as a shepherd doth his flock. For the Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and ransomed him from the hand of him that was stronger than he. (Jer. xxxi, 10-11.)

Just as "the Wilderness," so were "the Isles" to be a place of sanctuary whither the Lord was to "gather" the Tribes, a place of safety and protection from affliction, and a land of rest and recovery after wanderings. The great national regeneration was to be effected in "the Wilderness," otherwise in "the Isles."

That this message by Jeremiah referred to the Ten-Tribed people is shown by the preceding verse, 9:

> They shall come with weeping, and with supplications will I lead them: I will cause them to walk by the rivers of waters in a straight way, wherein they shall not stumble: for I am a father to Israel and Ephraim is My firstborn. (Jer. xxxi, 9.)

There is no reference here to the Jews.

It is not a little surprising to most people to learn that Israel was to be restored in Islands, but such indeed is the teaching of Jeremiah and more especially of Isaiah. References to Israel in the Islands by this latter prophet are truly striking.

In all its long history the Jewish section of God's chosen race was never associated with "Islands." The Jews have never lived in "the Islands." They have never been "gathered" into them and been "kept" there by God "as a shepherd doth his flock." They have never been a maritime people. But such has been the experience of Israel. The cessation of the Seven Times punishment for the House of Judah must take place years after that of the House of Israel; because their punishment began years after that of Israel. As we have endeavoured to show, Israel's punishment ceased many years ago, whereas that of the Jews is only now drawing to a close. Though near the end, they are still in the terminal era of their captivity.

Isaiah and Jeremiah certainly give us to understand that there is a Restoration of Israel in "the Islands." It is abundantly clear, therefore, that there is such a thing as a Preliminary Restoration of the Ten Tribes to the favour of God, not associated with Palestine and not associated with the Jews.

Do Isaiah and Jeremiah give any indications as to where these Islands are? Are they the Ægean Islands, or Cyprus, Crete, Sicily, Sardinia, or Corsica in the Mediterranean Sea? Or are they the still further off British Islands, on the outermost part of Europe? These latter were the furthest off of all from Palestine, lying in a due north-westerly direction. They were on the outermost edge of the European continent, the veritable end of the then known earth. Nothing further west was known, all beyond being a blank.

Digitized by Google

In the first place more than one island is indicated, the plural being always used in the prophecies. This fact alone would rule out all single islands, such as we have mentioned. Now the word "islands" may be read as "coast-lands" or sea-coasts. But if the prophet did really wish to indicate "islands," how else could he possibly express the idea? This was his only way of doing so. Even should the meaning be confined to "coast-lands," yet it would still refer to the outermost coast-lands of Europe including, if not coinciding with, the outermost islands.

The Suitability of these Various Islands.

The consideration of the suitability of the British Isles to meet the requirements of the prophecies descriptive of Israel's Restoration will emphatically demonstrate that they are the only one possible group that could do so. Thus, are any of these islands, except the British Isles, of a size capable of sustaining a teeming population or of providing a suitable home for a world power, and for a great and mighty nation? Do any of them, save the British Isles, afford a suitable base for vast colonial expansion? Could any of them provide a sanctuary from affliction at the hand of foes? Do any of them, save the British Isles, constitute a strong, defensive position where the people might "dwell in safety alone"? (Deut. xxxiii, 28). Have any of them, save the British Isles, ever experienced the mighty spiritual blessings that were to fall upon Israel in "the Wilderness" and "the Islands"?

The History of the Various Islands.

As one thinks over the histories of these various islands, were there ever any gatherings of immigrant peoples on those shores that might be construed as the assembling of the Tribes of Israel, with a subsequent development into a great and mighty nation and the very fullness of the nations? Has anything ever occurred in any of them resembling the Restoration or Resurrection of a race? To be more precise, bearing in mind the exact epoch of Israel's Restoration, did any event occur in any of them during that epoch which could approximately be considered as Israel's Restoration? History answers that only in the British Isles has such an event been witnessed. History corroborates Reason, and both confirm Prophecy.

To return again to the verses already quoted from Isaiah (xlii, 10-12), and Jeremiah (xxxi, 2 and 10). Is there any indication as to where these "islands" are?

To take Isaiah xlii, 10-12: the praises of God are to arise from Israel, a maritime people, who live in "the isles," and it is said that these praises arise from "the end of the earth," not from the ends of the earth, not from the four quarters of the globe, but from the end of the earth, the end of the then known land. This is decidedly suggestive. What islands were at the end of the then known world? This description excludes all the islands in the Mediterranean Sea.

Or again in Jeremiah xxxi, 10: the word of the Lord is to be declared "in the islands afar off." Which are the islands "afar off" from Palestine? Surely not those in the Mediterranean? The British Isles were the only really far-off isles. Thus do Isaiah and Jeremiah point unmistakably to the same quarter and to the same group.

It has already been said that the references by Isaiah to islands were remarkable in character and not few in number.

Isaiah xli, 1 shows that "the islands" were to be a place of much blessing and of Restoration.

> Keep silence before Me, O islands; and let the people renew their strength. (Isa. xli, 1.)

The same thing is predicted to take place in the "islands" as was foretold should occur in "the wilderness." Israel was to rest and recover her strength. This verse cannot refer to the Jews, since the Jews have never been restored in islands. Their Restoration can only take place in Palestine through the instrumentality of Israel.

Once again Isaiah (in chapter xxiv) prophesied that the praises of God are to be heard from the sea and from "the isles of the sea," and that those in "the isles" are to glorify the name of the Lord God of Israel.

> They shall lift up their voice, they shall sing for the majesty of the Lord, they shall cry aloud from the sea. Wherefore glorify ye the Lord in the fires, even the name of the Lord God of Israel in the isles of the sea. From the uttermost part of the earth have we heard songs, even glory to the righteous. (Isa. xxiv, 14.)

These songs and praises from the sea and from the isles of the sea are "from the utmost part of the earth," not the utmost parts of the earth, but, as we have noticed before, from the end of the earth. What islands were at the "utmost part of the earth"? Not those in the Mediterranean, but the British Isles alone.

Before leaving this expression, "uttermost part of the earth," it may be mentioned that it occurs in a remarkable passage referring to the kingdom of Israel in the New Testament.

Before our Blessed Lord's Ascension the disciples asked Him if He would at that time restore the kingdom to Israel.

> When they therefore were come together, they asked of Him, saying, Lord, wilt Thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel? (Acts i, 6.)

Our Lord replied that it was not for them to know the times and seasons, which God kept in His own power.

> And He said unto them, It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in His own power. But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto Me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.

Our Lord did not tell them that they were wrong or that they had mistaken ideas of the Kingdom of Israel. On the contrary, He implies that they were right, but that the time for the revelation had not yet come. Having told them that it was not to be made known to them, He gave them this great consolation, namely, that they should be fitted to be His witnesses in Jerusalem, Judea, Samaria, and the uttermost part of the earth. This is invariably interpreted as the uttermost parts of the earth, and the same thing as preaching His name among the nations (Luke xxiv, 47), or as "Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature" (Mark xvi, 15). The fact, however, remains that on this particular occasion, when speaking of the Kingdom of Israel, our Lord referred specially to the uttermost part of the earth.

To revert to Isaiah xxiv, 14 quoted above, the verse speaks of "the islands of the sea." Now there are no islands save those of the seas. The expression is a redundancy. One single word in the Hebrew language stands for both "sea" and for "west." It would therefore be correct to render the phrase, "the islands of the west," which helps to confirm all the previous indications of their identification. The islands of the west, those at "the end of the earth," and those at "the utmost part of the earth" are all one and the same group.

These "islands of the west" are again mentioned as "the islands of the sea" in Isaiah xi, 11:

> And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall set His hand again the second time to recover the remnant of His people, which shall be left, from Assyria, and from Egypt, and from Pathros, and from Cush, and from Elam, and from Shinar, and from Hamath and from the islands of the sea. And He shall set up an ensign for the nations, and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth. (Isa. xi, 11.)

Here we have reference to the second or Final Restoration of the two nations of Israel and the Jews to the possession of Palestine, and amongst the various places from whence they gather are "the islands of the west."

There is another passage which refers also to the Final Restoration of Israel, in which the direction is given as from the north-west:

> Behold, these shall come from far: and, lo, these from the north and from the west: and from the land of Sinim. (Isa. xlix, 12.)

These people of God are to come "from far," which, as already seen, was a description of the position of "the islands" where Israel was to dwell. In this verse we are told that this far place is the north and the west, which is the Hebrew expression for "north-west." What place might this be? It will be noticed that the chapter begins with an instruction to Israel in "the isles":

> Listen, O isles, unto Me; and ye people from far. (Isa. xlix, 1.)

These "isles" and these people are described as "from far." These are the people who return, as stated above in v. 12, "from far," and from "the north-west." Is it not clear that these "isles" are those of the far north-west and that the British Isles alone answer to the description of far north-west from Palestine?

Is it not remarkable that the people living in the British Isles did rise to might and power as the premier nation of the world in the very epoch in which Israel's Restoration was due?

Further, is it not remarkable that, after this Resurrection of the nation in the isles, she has now entered into the possession of the Land promised to the fathers?—that they should have gone there from what used to be "the end of the earth" or "the utmost part of the earth," even from "the islands of the west," even from the far "north-west"? Everything is exactly as foretold, and coming to pass as if it were the most natural thing in the world. Yea, so easily and quietly is God's Word being fulfilled that men do not perceive it.

Isaiah refers once again to "isles" with reference to the Final Restoration:

> Surely the isles shall wait for Me, and the ships of Tarshish first, to bring thy sons from far, their silver and their gold with them, unto the name of the Lord thy God, and to the Holy One of Israel, because He hath glorified thee. (Isa. lx, 9.)

Here again we have "the islands"; the isles and the ships of Tarshish; it is they who, under God, effect the Final Restoration of Israel and Judah. The isles cannot be other than those previously described and located by the prophet, which, even as these are, were said to be "from far." The ships of Tarshish belong to the "isles of Tarshish," the British Isles. It is clear that before the Final Restoration of Israel and the Jews to the Land of Promise there must be this Prior or Preliminary Restoration of Israel in the islands. The evidence for this seems overwhelming.

This concludes our study of Isaiah on "the isles." Jeremiah has at least one other reference to the British Isles which may be noticed, though its bearing on the Restoration may be nil. The prophet was commissioned by God to warn certain nations and kingdoms that they should drink of the cup of His fury, and amongst the number are found the kings of "the isles, which are beyond the sea" (Jer. xxv, 22). The sea here mentioned is the Mediterranean, so the islands were those beyond the Mediterranean Sea. These could only be the British Isles. It is interesting to note that these islands of ours were definitely within the scope of the prophet's great commission—Irish tradition assures us that he did actually come to these isles.

All the evidence that exists as to the whereabouts of these islands points solely to the British Isles, and there is none to the contrary.

Our investigations concerning the Place of the Restoration have led, then, to the following conclusions:

The Appointed Place	=	The Prepared Place.
The Prepared Place	=	The Wilderness.
The Wilderness ..	=	The Islands.
The Islands ..	=	The British Isles.

The only logical conclusion is that the Anglo-Saxon race can be none other than the House of Israel. The study of the Time of the Restoration led to the same conclusion.

It may be asked; When and how did the Tribes arrive in this Appointed Place? Obviously they should be there before Hosea's Third Day began. Reference to Table No. I gives A.D. 1260 to 1325 as the epoch of the beginning of the Third Day. Instead of the epoch, for convenience let us take a fixed date, say A.D. 1280, as the end of the Second and the beginning of the Third Day. What do we find in the history of our Island? During Hosea's Second Day, i.e., from A.D. 280 to 1280, "this Wilderness," on being absolutely vacated by the Romans (A.D. 410), became the scene of continuous raids, invasions, and settlements by fierce tribes from across the North Sea. From the middle of the fifth century onwards until 1066 the luring into the "Wilderness" went on and was complete before the dawn of the Third Day (see Table No. V). One race, all descended from one stock, under the various names of Jutes, Angles, Saxons, Danes, and Normans, had invaded these shores and settled in these islands to form the English nation. They united with the Britons, Kymri, Celts, Scots, and Picts, who were here before them, and formed the British race. It was from this "Appointed Place" and from this consolidated people that there sprang the great Anglo-Saxon nations of to-day, viz., the United States of America, the Dominion of Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, the Dominion of New Zealand, and the Union of South Africa.

Thus history finds this people in "the Appointed Place" at "the Appointed Time" fulfilling "the Appointed Destiny" of Israel.

BRITAIN IN HOSEA'S SECOND DAY.

DID CHRIST SANCTION PAGANISM?

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

OUR attention has been called to two pamphlets raising the question: "Did Christ sanction paganism?"

The Bible is clear enough on this matter and furnishes the necessary information. One scarcely understands why such a question should be raised in view of this fact. The question is apropos of a statement of fact made by myself in a former article.

The answer is of course:—

Christ did sanction pagan rule.
Christ did not sanction pagan worship.

In the Sermon on the Mount our Lord adopted every jot and tittle of the law and the prophets. Therefore He adopted every jot and tittle of the prophecies of Daniel. There we read as an historic fact God's message to Nebuchadnezzar, which message records God's gift to Nebuchadnezzar and to his successors in world-wide rule, excepting the contemporary kingdom. Due notice of the setting up of that kingdom which the God of Heaven would set up in the days of these kings of Heaven is incorporated in the Nebuchadnezzar Charter.

The following is the Charter:—

"Thou O king art a king of kings; for the God of Heaven hath given thee a kingdom, power, and strength, and glory.

"And wheresoever the children of men dwell, the beasts of the field and the fowls of the heaven hath he given into thine hand, and hath made thee ruler over them all. Thou art this head of gold." The succeeding verses carry forward the terms of the Charter to the succeeding three Empires. (See Daniel ii, 37-45.)

Thus we see that God appointed a pagan to be a world ruler, except for the contemporary kingdom which God would set up.

In sanctioning every jot and tittle of the prophets in the Sermon on the Mount, our Lord ratified this among the prophecies.

Our Lord, in answering a stated case—it does not matter in the least that the stated case was brought in the hope of entangling our Lord in His talk, that did not affect the judgment of our Lord in the slightest degree; He did not think one thing and speak another for fear of a charge of treasonable teaching—our Lord, we say, in answer to the question, "Is it lawful to give tribute unto Cæsar or not?" answered: "Render therefore unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's; and unto God the things that are God's."

What are the things which are Cæsar's? They are contained in the above quoted Charter with which our Lord was perfectly familiar, and which He had ratified as to every jot and tittle. No question could be more direct, no matter why it was presented, and no answer could be more direct and final. It was required of the Jews to render unto Cæsar the things which were Cæsar's. The currency of the country showed that that country was under the rule of the Cæsar, and the possession and production of the tribute money was a confession to that rule on the part of those who questioned our Lord. Being under Roman rule, they must pay tribute to Cæsar.

The author quotes a statement of mine in the same article in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER, "IN ROME THE GOSPEL OF SALVATION IS JOINED TO OBEDIENCE TO CÆSAR." He exclaims "OBEDIENCE TO CÆSAR! If that is so, as the Christian martyrs defied Cæsar, they must have FORFEITED THEIR SALVATION."

Let us turn to the Book and see if the Bible enjoins on the Christians of the Roman world obedience to Cæsar. Not in matters of faith, for I carefully said in the article in question that in matters of faith the Church is one throughout the world. We declared then and now that for all the world in matters of faith the same foundation is required, namely: "repentance towards God, and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ." But in matters of obedience, we have seen what the Lord adjudged, and this is one of the most important of the "Judgments of Jesus" as a barrister of high standing named it in an article on "The Judgments of Jesus."

Now let us go to the Apostle Paul.

This is what the Apostle wrote to the Church in Pagan Rome:—

"Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God.

Whosoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God: and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation.

For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil. Wilt thou then not be afraid of the power? do that which is good, and thou shalt have praise of the same:

For he is the minister of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, be afraid; for he beareth not the sword in vain: for he is the minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil.

Digitized by Google

Wherefore ye must needs be subject, not only for wrath, but also for conscience sake.

For for this cause pay ye tribute also: for they are God's ministers, attending continually upon this very thing.

Render therefore to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honour to whom honour."—Rom. xiii, 1-7.

It cannot be overlooked that tribute and custom were paid to the Government. Here then obedience is enjoined to a pagan administration. It was the administration of Cæsar.

Again to Titus the Apostle Paul writes, as to instructions to be given to the Church in Crete. Titus iii, 1: "Put them in mind to be subject to principalities and powers, to obey magistrates, to be ready to every good work."

Now these same principalities and powers and magistrates were the administrative authorities of a pagan administration. Again it was the administration of Cæsar.

These are the statements (1) of the God of Heaven through His prophet Daniel; (2) of our Lord; and (3) of the Apostle Paul. We are content with these and say that the Lord sanctions pagan administration; or did so when these instructions were written.

While they sanction pagan administration, God does not permit that administration to interfere with matters of faith. Thus, at the fiery furnace into which Nebuchadnezzar caused the three Hebrew children to be thrown, God interfered and reversed the king's act. Also at the lions' den into which Daniel was cast, God interfered and reversed the plot of the enemies of Daniel.

In matters of faith the Church is exhorted by this same Apostle Paul, who enjoins obedience to pagan administration in matters of service: "Ye have not yet resisted unto blood striving against sin."

Resistance, and obedience, inculcated by the same person. How? The Apostle refers to resistance in matters of faith. The Apostle enjoins obedience in matters of service. This covered the duty of the Christian in the Roman world.

VARIED REQUIREMENTS IN RELIGIOUS OBSERVANCE.

Was the Church the same to the "circumcision" and to the "uncircumcision"? In matters of faith, yes. Was it the same in matters of religious observance? Let us see.

"But there rose up certain of the sect of the Pharisees which believed, saying, That it was needful to circumcise them, and to command them to keep the law of Moses.

And the Apostles and elders came together for to consider of this matter.

And when there had been much disputing, Peter rose up, and said unto them, Men and brethren, ye know now that a good while ago God made choice among us, that the Gentiles by my mouth should hear the word of the gospel, and believe.

And God, which knoweth the hearts, bare them witness, giving them the Holy Ghost, even as he did unto us;

And put no difference between us and them, purifying their hearts by faith.

Now therefore why tempt ye God, to put a yoke upon the neck of the disciples, which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear?

But we believe that through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ we shall be saved, even as they.

Then all the multitude kept silence, and gave audience to Barnabas and Paul, declaring what miracles and wonders God had wrought among the Gentiles by them.

And after they had held their peace, James answered, saying, Men and brethren, hearken unto me:

Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name.

And to this agree the words of the prophets; as it is written,

After this I will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up:

That the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles, upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord, who doeth all these things.

Known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world.

Wherefore my sentence is, that we trouble not them, which from among the Gentiles are turned to God:

But that we write unto them, that they abstain from pollutions of idols, and from fornication, and from things strangled, and from blood.

For Moses of old time hath in every city them that preach him, being read in the synagogues every sabbath day.

Then pleased it the apostles and elders, with the whole church, to send chosen men of their own company to Antioch with Paul and Barnabas; namely, Judas surnamed Barnabas, and Silas, chief men among the brethren:

And they wrote letters by them after this manner; The apostles and elders and brethren send greeting unto the brethren which are of the Gentiles in Antioch and Syria and Cilicia:

Forasmuch as we have heard, that certain which went out from us have troubled you with words, subverting your souls, saying, Ye must be circumcised, and keep the law: to whom we gave no such commandment:

It seemed good unto us, being assembled with one accord, to send chosen men unto you with our beloved Barnabas and Paul,

Men that have hazarded their lives for the name of our Lord Jesus Christ.

We have sent therefore Judas and Silas, who shall also tell you the same things by mouth.

For it seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things;

That ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication: from which if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well. Fare ye well."—Acts xv, 5-29.

Thus we see that the Church continued one in faith, but was divided in religious observance. This difference was even marked in the conduct of the Apostles. St. Peter at one time ate with Gentile Christians who were not circumcised. Then because certain brethren had come from Jerusalem, he withdrew from eating with them and separated himself. For this St. Paul "withstood him to his face."

Digitized by Google

Thereafter St. Paul declared the while St. Peter was the minister of the circumcision, St. Paul was the minister to the Gentiles, or uncircumcision.

So the Church was one in faith but separate in religious observance!

Again the Church is one in faith but separate in service. In Israel, as I have pointed out, it was enjoined to the Israelite to be loyal in service to the administration of the Kingdom of God in the hands of the House of David, and to keep the Common Law, that is to say, the Law of the Lord.

As we have seen, in Rome the injunction was to be obedient to the administration of Cæsar.

These things, during all the time of their continuance, divide the Church in matters of service, notwithstanding that the Church remains one in matters of faith. It must of necessity so divide the Church until all nations shall be united under the single administration of the House of David, being obedient to the Law of the Lord.

OUR GREAT ADVANCE.

By J. J. Morey.

We are encouraged by the number of responses which have already come to hand asking for the particulars we promise to send to those of our readers anxious to form British-Israel Study Circles.

We are sure, however, that many more are hesitating from some cause, and we desire to remove all difficulties and to give all necessary explanations so that the way may be made quite clear and plain.

Many of our experienced readers have already a circle of friends to whom they have introduced our subject, and who are already interested in it. Our aim is to bring these friends into Circles formed for a definite study of one of our leading Text-Books, and for general conversation.

We desire also that our weekly and monthly periodicals should be read by all such Circle students, and the articles contained therein discussed and explained.

There are hundreds of capable, voluntary workers in all parts of our Empire whom we are anxious to organize and employ in definite work for our great Cause.

Is not this exactly what the Movement needs? Is not this precisely the work many of our readers can efficiently render?

Do not hesitate, but make the venture in faith, leaning upon us for advice at every step.

We are determined to make 1930 a notable year, one of great effort and real progress.

Discuss this matter with your friends. There is time for a beginners' course before the holiday season, and this will be but a preparation for a larger and more comprehensive study during the winter of 1930–31.

The whole purpose of this proposal is to kindle interest in the Bible and its history and prophecy concerning Israel. If we can induce our friends to read a reliable interpretation of Biblical teaching, they will read the Scriptures themselves, and see for the first time the meaning of the Great Book which contains the oldest truths given to men.

Modernism must be counteracted and refuted; the religious apathy of our day must be attacked in good earnest, and the nation must be prepared for the return of our Lord.

The work we urge upon you is really important, and we know very many of you are burning to do something in this direction.

You long to see our Truth become the common belief of all. You hope to be of some use in achieving this great result, and you are already wondering if you could make a Study Circle succeed.

By the help of God you can, and we are convinced that from this plan many of our readers will find great cause for thankfulness and rejoicing.

But do not delay. Time is most precious, and the demand is urgent. Send for our details at once and let us help you. Please address all letters—

SILENT WITNESSES.

By E. M. Foster.

Science started on a religious basis. In our own land the priests of the nation, the Druids, were men of learning, and their religion was manifested in their science. An examination of Stonehenge, for instance, will make this plain.

Passing on to a much later time, the Middle Ages, we find science worshipping false gods. Superstition took the place of faith.

Centuries later learning was re-established on a material basis, and theories such as the Darwinian Theory led men to doubt the old and everlasting truths.

And then the dawn came with modern science as we know it. Now the thinker is at a loss to know where matter ends and spirit begins. He deals with the Unseen. Space—time. Wireless waves. Atomic energy. He seeks to correlate the known and unknown. Of a sudden we find ourselves having the same attitude of mind as the ancient Druids and builders in Egypt. The Great Pyramid, "a sign and a witness in Egypt," with its mathematical and astronomical secrets revealed, seems to answer and encourage the modern scientist. And best of all: it stands as a witness to the Bible. The time is surely coming when this great stone monument will bring science in line with the Bible. It has already shown the accuracy of Biblical science. Its very stones cry out that "the Stone which the builders rejected is become the head of the corner." What a grand message that is to those who will hear and understand!

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

WILL readers please note the announcement overleaf of the meetings to be held at Headquarters on Wednesday and Thursday, April 9th and 10th, at 3 and 8 each day? We hope for good attendances at each meeting.

* * *

The Annual Meeting for members and associates will be held on Wednesday afternoon, April 9th, at 5.30.

* * *

Miss Hamilton Hunter lectured for the Bristol Branch on the subject "The Bride and the Church," in which it was shown that Israel had been covenanted to God on Sinai by a covenant which He had called the Covenant of Marriage. The Northern Kingdom of the Ten Tribes was divorced from that covenant for her sins, but it was promised her that she would be re-converted under a new covenant, and be re-betrothed. This nation, Israel, was the Bride. Two other lectures were given.

* * *

At the Watford Branch meeting of the Study Circle, on March 24th, an address was given by Rev. A. E. Couldrey, which was intensely interesting and inspiring, and much appreciated.

* * *

Lieut.-Col. Smythe gave two interesting lectures for the Tunbridge Wells Branch on March 18th. This Branch reports increasing membership every month, which is very encouraging, and an evidence that God is blessing the efforts being made.

* * *

The speakers at Headquarters last week were Mr. John Leech on Wednesday and Mr. W. A. Jordan on Thursday.

"The Challenge of British-Israel Truth" was the title of an address given by the Rev. T. H. Whitehouse in Gloucester on March 20th. Dr. E. F. Waddington presided. Opening his lecture, Mr. Whitehouse declared that all truth was challenged. All had heard of the expression, "Truth against the world." That was an old Cymric motto. The British-Israel teaching is Truth, and could be pitted against the world, which at the present time was astonishingly full of different teachings that were so conflicting and contradictory that they could not all be true. British-Israel offered something that was not in itself salvation; it was God's call to the nation to rise to the majesty of its destiny and serve Him; and, serving Him, serve their fellow-men and lift them by the glory of an inspiring ideal and a Divine commission. God had His British race in the world to be His witnesses, to be His servant nation, to be His messenger to go out to the ends of the world to help, teach, comfort and inspire. Ours is a call to service—a national service of every man, woman and child in the whole nation. The wonder of salvation had to be realized, and the equal wonder of redemption had to be grasped. We are teaching something which is being seized upon by the masses of the people. Mr. Whitehouse urged his hearers above all to get back to their Bible, their God, and their Saviour and Redeemer Jesus Christ.

The speaker delivered another lecture in the evening, when the chair was taken by Mr. E. C. Warwick, supported by Mr. A. E. Smith. In the course of this lecture the speaker said that the Federation were anxious to get a Branch formed in every town and village of any size, for meetings to study the Word of God—not to separate themselves from their own Churches in any way, but to meet together for study in relation to the Kingdom of God on earth.

We look forward to full and interesting meetings at Headquarters on April 9th and 10th, as announced overleaf. Leaflets are available for all who can use them to advantage.

* * *

Wide-spread interest is manifested in U.S.A. over the forthcoming All-American Convention to be held in Detroit on May 6th, 7th and 8th, in the Big Nazarene Tabernacle, kindly lent by the Rev. Howard W. Jerrett. A splendid programme is being prepared by our Mr. Howard Rand, of 110, Merrimac Street, Haverhill, Mass., who is working day and night to perfect the arrangements. The Revs. Dr. Lincoln McConnell, Dr. Fowler Ham, Bishop J. H. Allen, Dr. George McGinnis, Dr. John W. Stephens, and others have already promised to take part. It is expected that Colonel Evan A. Watkins and the Rev. J. H. Kelly, of New York, will take part. The Rev. Pascoe Goard will represent Headquarters, and he will be supported by the Rev. Joseph Gay.

On February 27th Mr. F. K. Crosby-Chopin addressed the Toronto Central Branch, his subject being "Who and What is Germany in the Light of Present Day Research?" His address was unusual, and very much appreciated by all who heard him, and they found much food for thought therein.

The Musicale which was arranged by one of our members, Mrs. Learmonth, took place in our Lecture Hall in British-Israel House on March 1st. It was a magnificent success. The programme was ideal, and was splendidly rendered by the artistes.

It is with great regret we have to announce the death of Mrs. Gair, mother of Mr. George R. Gair, who passed away very suddenly at St. Helens, Lancashire, on March 13th. Mrs. Gair had been a strong British-Israelite for many years, and was partly responsible for her son, George, taking up the study so whole-heartedly. Mr. George R. Gair is well known by many of our readers as a clever lecturer on Heraldry and kindred subjects.

* * *

A representative audience welcomed Mr. Herbert Garrison in the Stuart Hall, Norwich, on March 24th, when he lectured on "Cameos of our World-Wide Empire," with lantern pictures, and when the Lord Mayor of Norwich presided.

Digitized by Google

Six British-Israel meetings were held on the following three days, and addresses were given by the Revs. Pascoe Goard, T. Sparshott Johnson, M.A., G. H. Hewitt, B.A., and Messrs. John Leech, K.C., W. T. F. Jarrold, and H. Garrison.

The Rev. F. W. Bennett-Symons, M.A., Dr. G. S. Pope, J.P., W. T. F. Jarrold, Esq., J.P. (Ex-Sheriff), and John Shaw Tompkins, Esq., were the Chairmen. We are deeply indebted to Mr. Jarrold, Mrs. Brett and others for their excellent work preparatory to the Mission. Several friends came from Yarmouth, King's Lynn, and other districts around, and the addresses were listened to with marked attention.

A remarkable book has just been published under the title "The Crucifixion of Russia," by Mr. F. A. Mackenzie, the well-known journalist. The author has visited Russia a number of times, and has spent altogether several years there. His descriptions and conclusions are based on personal knowledge and close observation. They make a terrible indictment of the horrible Soviet system. The book is free from exaggeration. Lovers of liberty and religious freedom should read it. We understand that thousands of copies were ordered in advance; the price is only 2s., postage 3d. The book may be had from the Covenant Publishing Company, 6, Buckingham Gate, S.W.1.

On Thursday, March 13th, the Toronto Central Branch was addressed by Mr. D. M. Duncan, the Financial Secretary of the Canadian Federation and Vice-President of the Ontario Provincial Executive. His address was a reply to the question "Where shall the Government be?" and was one of the most inspiring addresses given before this Branch this season. The attendance at our meetings is gradually increasing, and is most encouraging.

Mr. Thomas Ransom, of Toronto, visited Hamilton on Thursday, March 13th, and addressed a public meeting of the Branch there, dealing with the history of some of the migrations of our people in days of old—under the caption, "Egypt and Palestine into Britain."

On Saturday, March 15th, a Sale of Home-Cooking, held under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary at British-Israel House, resulted in the realization of a profit of $50.00. This is an example of the splendid work being done by our women here.

The Garrett Branch, located in the west end of Toronto, is holding its regular meetings twice monthly. Mr. Geo. Garrett, the President and Leader, is a well-known Bible Class teacher in Toronto, having a large class of young men at St. Alban's Cathedral.

The Annual Conference of the British-Israel Federation of Canada will be held in Winnipeg on May 14th, 15th and 16th. The Canadian and many of the American leaders will be present. A strong platform is being arranged, including the Rev. Wm. Pascoe Goard. Those who intend to be present, or who wish information, should communicate with the Secretary, Winnipeg Branch, P.O. Box 2004, Winnipeg, Man.

With profound sorrow we record the passing away of Mrs. Vincent Wright, the wife of our Financial Secretary—Colonel C. Vincent R. Wright—after a brief but painful illness. She had endeared herself to all who knew her, and she was a devoted worker in our sacred Cause, ever cheerful, bright and helpful. Her activities included special work in connection with the Annual Sale of gifts, and the Women's Auxiliary. We shall miss her sorely. To our good friend Colonel Wright we offer our deepest and most sincere sympathy, and we pray that God will graciously comfort and sustain him in his bereavement as He only can.

The Fellowship of the Kingdom or, The Triune Kingdom of the Triune God

By J. G. MODIN

This book is chiefly addressed to clergy, ministers and theological students. It should especially be read by all Christians who, through misconception, are fundamentally at variance with B.-I. teaching. Send it to your clergyman.

By an entirely new way of approach it opens up an essential aspect of the Divine revelation which no reverent mind can lightly put aside, nor any logical mind gainsay, viz., the revelation of a Triune God working out His purpose in and for the world, in and through His Triune Kingdom.

A Scottish Minister writes: "The threefold aspect of the Kingdom and indeed of all the manifestations of God is a matter of which I was aware, though dimly . . . Your book has developed the theme in directions I did not dream of. I have, and can have, nothing but praise for it."

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

APPROACHES TO THE FACTS OF BRITISH-ISRAEL TRUTH.—X.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

A LAST question must be asked before this series is closed.

We have already asked the questions :—

What is the British-Israel nation to God?

What is the nation to our Lord Jesus Christ?

What is the nation to the world?

We now proceed to ask :—

What is the world to the British-Israel nation?

The answer to this is obvious to those who have followed the logic of the position as set forth in the Bible. The nations of the world, "all the nations of the earth" (Gen. xxii, 18), are to the British-Israel nation God's Great Congregation, to which the Israel nation has been dedicated to minister as God's Kingdom of Priests and as "an Holy Nation."

The question, "What is the world to the British-Israel nation?" and the obvious answer which arises out of the Bible teaching, is of prime importance to the British nation, and to the Anglo-Saxon family of nations, and to the world.

Now, as to the Priesthood of the nation. We must go to the organization books of the Bible to see what exactly is meant by this great doctrine of the Bible. When God said to Israel, "Ye shall be unto me a Kingdom of Priests and an Holy Nation," just what was it that He meant Israel ancient and modern to understand?

What the Priestly tribe of Levi was in ancient Israel, that the Kingdom-nation is to the nations of the world to-day.

What, then, was the Priestly tribe of Levi in both its Houses to the nation Israel?

There was first selected from among the families of the tribe of Levi one single family: the family of Aaron. This family was erected into "a House." They of that single family became the House of Aaron. This family was ordained in hereditary succession to minister at the Altar of the Lord of Hosts, on behalf of the people. They alone could offer sacrifices to God in the Temple. These constituted the Priestly ministry of the Church in the wilderness.

The remaining families of the tribe of Levi were also constituted into a House. They were dedicated to a Priesthood, having a secular service. All their activities were to be devoted to this ministry to "all the congregation." They were to have no other service nor occupation. They were not to be the holders of lands among the tribes. They were to receive a tenth of all the product of the lands and labours of the remaining ten tribes.

To the Levites was committed the care of the material things of the Tabernacle and Temple. To them also was committed the care of all the congregation "before the tabernacle of the congregation."

Their position in the nation is illustrated by their camping-ground when the tribes were at rest, and by the cities in which they were domiciled throughout the nation when they became settled in Palestine. In the wilderness they camped in hollow square about the Tabernacle. The other tribes could not approach the Tabernacle without going through the lines of the Levites. The Aaronic House went into the Tabernacle to minister. The Levites ministered " before the tabernacle " and scattered among the tribes to carry forward their duties.

When the people came to rest in the land of Palestine, the Levites were assigned cities in the land which scattered them at convenient centres throughout the tribes. They were therefore always at hand to minister to the people.

These things may be read clearly in the Books of Leviticus and Numbers.

Now let us look at the tribes as they are encamped around the tribe of Levi, which tribe in turn is encamped around the Tabernacle of the Lord. As we think of the tribes of Israel thus encamped around the tribe of Levi, let us through this illustration see the nations of the world encamped about the Kingdom of Priests, the nation Israel (Ex. 19).

The tribes of Israel were always encamped in the place appointed for them by the Lord Himself. The order of their encampment is set forth so that we have no trouble in reproducing the plan. Indeed, it is produced for us in the Bible.

There were twelve tribes in the nation. These for convenience sake were organized into four brigades of tribes, each consisting of three tribes. Each of the brigades occupied a face of the square. The four leaders were Ephraim, Reuben, Judah, Dan. Their emblems were—

Ephraim—the Ox, which in modern form is the Unicorn.

Reuben—the Man.

Judah—the Lion.

Dan—the flying Eagle.

Every family had its own pennon. Every male of the family from twenty years old and upward was enrolled for military defence, under the pennon or standard of his father's House, in the hosts of Israel.

Every man was equally aware of his religious duties, and of the duties of national citizenship.

Thus was the Kingdom-nation organized for service to the last man, and everywhere it hummed with that life which is lived and enacted under the consciousness of being engaged in a task appointed and organized by God.

In and out among the tribes the members of the House of Levi went ministering in all things to the congregation, and in the midst of them the " Priests the sons of Aaron " ministered in the Tabernacle, offering sacrifices to God and leading the worship of the nation.

Outside of the tribes of Israel were the surrounding nations of the world as they came into contact with the Kingdom-nation.

There were the kindred nations: Edom, Moab, Ammon. The Lord laid an embargo on Israel so that they might not, even when the national interest seemed to demand it, come into adverse collision with these nations.

There were the friendly nations, with whom they were directed to live in amity and good will. For instance, the later alliance between David and Hiram of Tyre. In the earlier period there was the sister nation of Syria, founded by the brother of Abraham, from which nation came the female stock of the House of Israel.

There were the competitive nations, such as Assyria and Egypt, with whom the nations should carry on commerce, and to whom they should ultimately bring the blessings of the Covenant.

There were the enemy nations, whose very contact meant corruption. These nations of Palestine were venereal degenerates whose touch meant pollution and death. To scatter the diseased classes of these among the nations would be to scatter infection and hereditary evil. The earth must be purged of their fatal presence, and they themselves must be given the sad but beneficial boon of death. To continue the life of such people might be the duty of men under the ordinary conditions of life. Even so it would have to be in perpetual quarantine if the health of the world were to be preserved. But Divine wisdom decreed that such plague spots in the Canaan nations, as were of those whose " iniquities were full," should be removed by sudden and painless death, namely, death by the sword.

All the remaining uncovenanted people were " driven out " from the land.

There remained the Covenanted people. These were the Gibeonites. Being Covenanted, although the Covenant had been obtained by fraud, they must be maintained and cared for to the end of the world's history.

There were envisaged in prophecy all the people beyond the then horizon of Israel knowledge, all of whom were potential beneficiaries of the Kingdom of Priests. To all the families of the earth in due time the Kingdom of Priests should minister.

Now let us take the illustration from the ancient application of this principle, and apply it to these modern days.

The Aaronic ministry was removed from among Israel when the Lord had taken upon Himself the new Priestly office and Order as a Priest for ever after the order of Melchizedek. In their place came Christ the Great High Priest, and the Apostles and Ministers by Him established. These are offering in the sanctuary sacrifices of praise to God, and are leading the worship of the people. These constitute the centre of the Church in modern days as the Sons of Aaron constituted the centre of the Church in the wilderness.

The Levitical ministry is still carrying on.

These have the care of " all the congregation." Now as in ancient times the congregation of the Lord consists of all the nations of the earth, the magnitude of their task is manifest.

The Levitical ministry is still concerned among the nations with public education—the public education in the widest sense of the families of the earth. We must not think of this at the present stage in parochial terms, but in the widest international terms. What we should be doing, as the Kingdom-nation, is illustrated by the activities of the Jesuit order, who are concerning themselves with the general education of the public in matters which it is their desire the public of the world should believe.

It is also illustrated by the methods of the Communist organization centring in Russia. These are busily engaged with world dissemination of their negations of all good and their positive proclamations of all that is evil, with sufficient smattering of things which are good in themselves to carry them along.

It is the duty of the Kingdom of Priests to instruct the nations of the earth as to the facts of the Kingdom of God in the earth as a going concern. In other words, it is theirs to preach the Gospel of the Kingdom.

It is theirs to make clear to the world the wonderful works of God in those realms of nature which furnish the basis of the natural sciences. Thus to make clear that "The heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth His handiwork," as well as the fact that "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul. The testimonies of the Lord are sure, making wise the simple."

It is theirs to make clear the very clear-cut basis and order of sociological organization. This organization is founded first upon the family which constitutes the Household of God in the earth. The Israel tribes are born into this circle. It is their birthright. The other individuals and nations which accept of the Bible truth and of Jesus Christ as Saviour and King are brought into this Household by adoption. Thus the whole of the human family are united in the Lord our God and the Holy One of Israel. From this basis the Law of the Lord is designed to so arrange the great family circle in the earth "to the end that there shall be no poor among you."

These indications may illustrate the educational task of the Kingdom-nation.

It is the Priestly function of the Kingdom-nation to take care of the health of the people of the world. Blindly the nation is concerning itself with this great task. The work that the Kingdom-nation is doing in the world in the way of sanitation, irrigation, preventive and curative medicine, etc., is beyond praise. But when we see that she has been charged by Almighty God with the care of the public health, the wonder ceases.

Now the health of the people may be preserved to a degree by the means indicated, and other means. It may be that we trace diseases to their source and kill them there, as in the case of yellow fever in South America. It may be that the nature of diseases are discovered and thus prevented, as in the case of beriberi and polagra, which have both been removed from the list of unavoidable human ills.

But the greatest thing to do is to show that right relationship to God is a sure way to banish all the evils of disease; reach what conclusion as to the how, or method of reaching the result we will, the matter stands that it is the teaching of the Bible that if right relationship to God is re-established in the Kingdom-nation, Israel-Britain, and in the nations associated or to be associated with her in the Kingdom, the Lord Himself undertakes to remove all sickness from among the people of the nation and company of nations. This is a fact that we have lost sight of largely, and the Kingdom of Priests have to a great degree failed to benefit by the provision and to preach it. But it is nevertheless one of the great practical truths, that the Lord God of Israel holds Himself ready to make good the people's health.

That the Lord is taking every opportunity to make this clear by practical Divine leadings among various branches of the people is evidence that He is waiting to be gracious in this regard. When the Kingdom-nation again with the faith of a little child returns to the Lord whole-heartedly, the health of the people will be as widely established as the boundaries of the Kingdom-nation.

Preservation of Order and Administration of Justice.

This Priestly function of the Kingdom-nation among many races and in many lands is becoming more and more an object-lesson which is attracting the attention of the world. It is needless to specify in this great field—India, Africa, the South Sea Islands, Burmah, and so on, and so on, tell the marvellous story. The Kingdom-nation Israel-Britain has entered upon the task and made considerable progress therein. But it shall yet be the task of the nation called by Isaiah "The Ministers of the Lord" to restore order and administer justice in all the earth. To this end all the nations which are being, and shall be, joined to her in the Kingdom will lend their assistance, and they will all share alike in the peace and prosperity which will prevail.

Publication.

The first great item of the task is to publish to the ends of the earth the tidings of Salvation. This is primarily achieved by sending out the written Word of God. To this end the British and Foreign Bible Society is labouring as an agency significantly honoured by God.

Then, as a second item of the task, comes the publication of the Law of the Lord, or the Common Law.

This is now promulgated among a third of the families of the earth, and the time is not far distant when all nations will adopt the Law of the Lord as the basis of national administration. Above all is the preaching of the Gospel to every creature.

So the Kingdom of Priests is set among the nations. The Temple of God is still in the midst of her. She is but dimly aware of the task, and of the exceeding honour. But she is awakening more and more each day.

Seeing, then, that such is our calling as a nation and company of nations, what manner of men ought we to be? Let us humbly kneel at the feet of our Saviour and King and re-consecrate our lives to the task of serving the great congregation of the Lord, which embraces all the families of the earth.

Is it not a marvellous thing to begin to realize that the doctrine of the Second Coming of our Lord is beginning to take historic shape in preliminary events which are great in themselves but which are greater in that they indicate the near approach of the return of our Lord to take the throne of His Father David, and to reign over the House of Jacob for ever? This Kingdom shall embrace all the nations found worthy by Him to enter with Him into the Kingdom. This He majesti cally describes in the 25th chapter of St. Matthew.

"When the Son of man shall come in His glory, and all the holy angels with Him, then shall He sit upon the throne of His glory . . . .

Then shall the King say to those on His right hand, Come, ye blessed of My Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

It is needless to point out that the House of David has been ruling in the Kingdom for the last three thousand years.

CROSSING THE RIVER.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

"Speak unto the Children of Israel that they go forward."

LET us think a little about the march forward along the path of time; the path which is marked by birthdays, and by anniversary days, set along the roadside to remind us of our progress on the journey.

"The days of a man's years are three score years and ten."

It is but a short march, a very short march indeed—it is a march in which there is no halting. We travel partly on our feet, partly on a conveyance which travels forward just the same whether we sleep or wake.

It has been the writer's experience to travel for an aggregate of many months on fast-moving trains. We have awakened; and travelled. We have eaten; and travelled. Many a meal has been marked by twenty or more mile posts by the side of the road. We have travelled equally fast when we have retired to our berth or stateroom, and slept. So with our life journey. In all the three score years and ten there is not one single halt, even for an hour. Tick-tock, tick-tock, the moments click off unceasingly as we travel over the rails of the journey of life.

What a trip we are having! What a happiness to look back over much of it! What scenes we have lingered in, and then passed over! What cities have flashed upon our sight, and been left behind! What countries we have traversed, and halted not! What seas and continents and oceans we have crossed! What people we have met! What dear ones we have loved! What institutions we have known, and some of them enjoyed! As a veteran of over ninety years said to me the other day, "I have had a good life; I have had a good life." "Friend," I said, "why put that statement in the past tense? At the best your life is only beginning. What is a century, more or less, in an everlasting life?"

Before us glistens the river: the deep river: the bridgeless river: the river whose farther shore is beyond our seeing, and will be till we cross to the other side. The mysterious river, to which sooner or later each must come, and which each must pass—until the Lord shall come and save the trouble of the process.

Many of our friends have come to, and have crossed the river. We saw their feet step into the flood. They passed to the middle distance, and then from sight and sound, and we had sadly to turn away from following them. We shall also come to, and shall cross the river. But it will be at the time appointed by the Father. We might not go with those who have gone; we may not stay for those who shall follow after.

Many of us are at the margin of the flood. So was Israel. Before them was the sea: on each side of them were mountains: behind them was the pursuing enemy. It seemed that Israel was trapped indeed. But no! The Voice of the Lord rang in the ears of Moses: "Speak unto the Children of Israel that they go forward." And they went.

But what of the waters of the sea? Why—the waters fled. The land became dry under their feet. The waters were a wall unto them—that is to say, a defence unto them—on the right hand and on the left. The enemy essaying to cross after them were drowned.

Here is an historic fact. But the historic fact is also a parable of the way we go.

Before us lies the mysterious river. We are on the incline. We would fain halt and delay the crossing. But the tick-tock, tick-tock, tick-tock of the chronometer goes on without halting, and we go with it.

What shall we find on the other side?

Now the body we have always inhabited cannot cross such a river and live; therefore, from habit, we shrink, and sometimes fear. But don't let us worry, because we are not going to take the body across the river. It has served us more or less well, as a dwelling-place in this earth life. It is not suitable for the life on the other shore. So we shall put it off, much as we have learned to love it. We love it even with its aches and pains; much more with its pleasures and delights. Yes, this body will not be needed any more where we are going. So we shall leave it behind. So the river will not harm it.

God has provided a process for it which will take it back to its primal dust, that it may later be reconstructed and enter into and bear a part in life and beauty again. In the process the body will be purged of the seeds of dissolution and of mortality for ever.

The river cannot hurt the Spirit of the child of God.

The soul will not sink into nor wade through the waters of the river. With more than the freedom of a bird in our earth's atmosphere, the Spirit released from the body will spurn the river, and soar to the heavens above it, with vigour and health which will be immortal.

So we will not fear the river, nor wonder why the dear Lord neither bridged it, nor provided a ferry.

I had crossed the Atlantic, and we were coming to dock at Liverpool. Standing alone, I was watching the bustle and activity of the river, the city, and the air, as we drew near. Suddenly I found myself laughing aloud, and curious eyes turned in my direction. But I did not tell my thoughts just then to anyone.

I saw the ships and ferries on the river. I saw the autos of all kinds on shore. I saw the trams and the trains. I saw the aeroplanes hovering over. I saw every kind of contrivance to give freedom of action to man, and then I remembered that when I put off this mortality, and put on the immortal body which the Lord has prepared for me, I shall want none of these things to give me mobility of action. To wish and to will, will be to go.

So that is why there is no bridge to the river, there is no body to cross, although all persons will cross until the Lord shall come.

So that is why there is no ferry provided. No spirit would think of using such a cumbrous mode of going forward. Free as the air, swift as the light, we shall take the path which opens to our wondering and gladdened vision.

But is it not in the body that we greet our friends? Could we so greet any without the body?

Out of the body should we not be both inaudible and invisible? Is it not with the body that we reach out a hand in greeting, or to help, or save the endangered? Could we do these things out of the body?

Because we are going away from the earth for a time to a world unsuited to the present body, we shall need another body to enable us to enter into another kind of life, which requires another kind of manifestation. Therefore, we "have a building of God, a house not made with hands, ETERNAL IN THE HEAVENS." In that body there are no seeds of dissolution at all, but life everlasting. Here is the statement of Holy Writ:—

"For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

For in this we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven:

If so be that being clothed we shall not be found naked."—2 Cor. v, 1-3.

What will that body be like? What will be its powers? It will appear like the present body or not, just as we desire it to be.

How shall we know that this is the case? We have an example before us, in Jesus Christ our Lord. After His Resurrection He manifested the powers of the new body to His disciples again and again.

He was known by them at times, He was not known by them at times. Therefore we may know that He changed His appearance at will. The Bible says of one occasion, "their eyes were holden that they should not know Him." To them He appeared to be a stranger.

On another occasion they were in an upper room, and "the doors were shut for fear of the Jews." Shut; locked; bolted; and yet suddenly He was standing in the midst of them. Walls and doors were no barrier to Him. He needed no porter to open the doors, nor any to bid Him enter.

He was not present! He was present! and there was no intermediate approach. Suddenly He stood in the midst of them. And yet He was what a Spirit unclothed is not. He was clothed in an immortal body.

He said, "Handle Me and see; for a Spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see Me have." Moreover He ate a two-course meal before them; fish, with honeycomb for dessert.

Appearance and disappearance; this was the order of His stay with them after the Resurrection. "And as He is, so shall we be in this world," said the Apostle. True our Lord was then clothed with His resurrected body. Yet in Spirit "He went and preached to the Spirits imprisoned," the Scripture says; and performed mighty things, the full history of which we shall know in due time, and this while His material body lay in the tomb.

The day came when He must be taken from them. He had said, "It is expedient for you that I go away." Now the time had come for Him to go. There was no chariot, no horses of fire. He simply ascended from among them. They watched Him go until "a cloud received Him out of their sight." It was the natural gravity of Heaven drawing the new body of the Saviour to the presence of the Father. He might have simply disappeared as He had done before, but He became visible and audible to them that they might hear His last words, and that they might witness and attest His Ascension. And so they saw Him go up into Heaven.

This is the kind of body we shall be blessed with if we are saved by His Grace. This we shall be, if we trust in Him as our Saviour. He will literally "draw all men unto" Him, even as the earth now holds all men to her breast by the power of gravitation.

We shall not need autos, nor trains, steamboats, nor aeroplanes. To desire and to will, will be to be there. There need be no intermediate coming and going. To will, and with the speed of light to be there.

Think of what we shall not need when we have not the body to cater for. We shall need no house to live in, for the open heaven will be our natural dwelling-place. We shall be infinitely more at home in the sky than the eagle or the albatross. We shall have a cloud for a couch, the light for a dwelling, the spectrum rays for decorations.

There will be no cold to counteract, no heat to require shelter; no clothes but the light for garments, no hunger to satisfy with hardly-won food, no cooking, no raising of cattle nor growing of crops, no grinding at the mill, nor pumping of waters. The body will have ceased to have all these needs, and the Spirit never needed them. There will be no eating of bread with the sweat of the face; but mental and spiritual delight and activity.

What powers of accomplishment! Accomplishment without labour, for there will be no effort put forth at the cost of weariness. There will be abounding activity and delightful service for evermore. All that is desirable, all that is profitable, all that is blessed in activity will be ours. We shall enter upon that activity as eagerly as we entered upon the games of childhood, or the chosen task of buoyant life.

"They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat.

For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters: and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes."—Rev. vii, 16, 17.

"And he shewed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb.

In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations.

And there shall be no more curse: but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it; and his servants shall serve him:

And they shall see his face; and his name shall be in their foreheads.

And there shall be no night there; and they need no candle, neither light of the sun; for the Lord God giveth them light: and they shall reign for ever and ever.

And he said unto me, These sayings are faithful and true: and the Lord God of the holy prophets sent his angel to shew unto his servants the things which must shortly be done.

Behold, I come quickly: blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book."—Rev. xxii, 1-7.

"Hallelujah, for the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth."

But someone says, "Away with such stuff. There is no time for such idle dreaming. Let us rather think of housing the poor, of feeding the hungry, of engaging the unemployed in profitable labour, of lessening toil, and of generally ameliorating conditions for the people."

Well now, there is a seeming of sense in all that. Our Lord would say to such a one, "These things ought ye to have done." Let us put in all the effort, all the time, and use all the wisdom we have for such tasks as these, for they are dear to the Master's heart. But—yes, there is a but—let us take care, my friend, that in doing all these, and in DOING NOTHING ELSE, we do not turn our own souls into slums. Unfortunately that is very possible. Unfortunately it is horribly true that among those who have devoted their whole life and powers to what they believe tends to raise the standard of living for the people, and have excluded from their lives the joys and hopes and meditations of heavenly things, have turned their own hearts into the worst slums to be found outside of hell.

There is only one way to do these things. But there is a way to do these things. That is, the way of love. Many unfortunately have taken the way of hatred ; they have deepened the darkness instead of letting in the light.

Now God's way of doing these things is THE SHEPHERD'S WAY. What is that way? It is a very simple and direct one.

The Shepherd leads His flock to the place where their food grows.

It would be insane of a shepherd to keep the sheep penned in folds all day and night. They could not find food there. He could not feed them there. They could not drink there. He could not supply them with living water there. But that is what is being done to-day. The people are being huddled into "sheep folds" which have become overcrowded and foul from constant use. Nearly ten millions are in Greater London. Nearly as many are in Greater New York. There are dense populations in the mill regions of England. Result? Unemployment, slum conditions, dole, misery, disease, crime, premature death.

How would the Lord handle this? Easily ; by LEADING the people out to the great Overseas Dominions, where their food grows, and where fountains of living waters are awaiting them. This is the Shepherd way, the way of love.

But what is this to the many who are past all that, and who are facing the valley where the river gleams coldly in the shadows? They cannot stay. They cannot return to the questions which are being hotly debated and wrongly handled by all parties. Their interest is now centred on the crossing, and on the other shore. They see with clear vision that here no real improvement is possible except along the lines God has ordained. They see that the sheep must be led out to the green pastures, and to the fountains of living waters. But they cannot stay to impart their clearer vision of things. The Pointsman at the end of the way is saying with infinite kindness, and with helpful hands, "Go forward, the crossing for you lies just ahead."

Thank God the "dreams" are the verities. The glory clouds, so fleeting in the earthly sky, are the eternal things. The "land that 'was' very far off" lies just ahead, and it is bright with the sunlight of His Presence. So with steadfast mind and joyful heart we move on to the crossing of the river.

EXPOSITIONS IN THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

BY THE REV. JOSEPH GAY, A.T.S.

No. 8.—STEPHEN THE DEACON.

STEPHEN was elected one of the seven deacons to serve tables. A murmuring had arisen among the disciples because the Hellenists' widows had been neglected, quite unintentionally as I believe, in the daily administration of the [illegible] und which had been subscribed by the voluntary sacrifices of the whole Christian community. It was quite impossible for the Apostles to superintend such work and also to give attention to the preaching of the Word and to prayer. Still this very important work needed superintendence. It must be directed and controlled by some one. Though it is a question of tables, very materialistic and mundane, the qualifications, nevertheless, were of the highest order. "Look ye out therefore, brethren, from among you, seven men of good report, full of the Spirit and of wisdom." It is once more borne in upon our mind that you cannot divorce the material from the spiritual. It requires a spiritual mind to deal adequately and fully with things material. But there can be no reservations. When you have finished serving tables, what then? Stephen and Philip are your answer. There are no limitations or reservations to the man who is of "good report, full of the Spirit and of wisdom." Stephen came rapidly to the front. You cannot keep a man like Stephen in the background. Stephen was, like Philip, a born preacher. You cannot close the mouths of such men. They will be heard ; they must be heard. You may banish them ; you may forbid them by this ecclesiastical law or that ; they may never be able to claim episcopal ordination ; but you cannot, by any means whatever, close their mouths. When the truth grips a man's mind, and settles down upon his heart as a rock conviction, like the Psalmist, if he keeps silence, his bones will wax old through his roaring all the day long. It cannot be otherwise. No one can know that better than he to whom British-Israel Truth has been revealed. There is a divine tongue in their mouths that you cannot silence. The more you persecute them and cast them out, and the more tribulation you pass them through, they will only preach the better.

Stephen's success, as we poor mortals view it, was his undoing. "And Stephen full of grace and power, wrought great wonders and signs among the people." That was too much for the Libertines, and Cyrenians, and Alexandrians, and those of Cilicia and Asia. They could not endure to look on and see the success of this Spirit-filled man. They cared nothing for the truth, but they cared everything for the success which meant failure to them. We are not far removed from that position to-day. Many a good Cause has been all but ruined by devilish jealousy. But the action of Stephen's enemies made for Stephen's triumphant success and ultimate glory. Far beyond this it made for the extension of the Kingdom of God for which Stephen stood as a mighty rock in a weary land.

THE TRIUMPHANT SUCCESS OF STEPHEN.

Stephen was a man who could never fail with anything he undertook. Whatever might happen to himself, the Cause for which he stood was bound to succeed. The enthusiasm of his mind, and the settled conviction of his heart, could brook no failure anywhere or at any time. His time upon the earth was short, all too short; but his life was reaching down, in its effects, unto this our day and generation. He drew the fire of his enemies full upon him, and they swung him into a circle which he could never have penetrated without their aid. They secured for him an introduction to the high priest, and the high priest's court. Nothing could have happened better. Such an introduction was to the liking of a man like Stephen. And Stephen was just the man to make good under such circumstances. The charge they brought against him was the same as the one they brought against his Lord and Master, "BLASPHEMY."

This word has played a truly wonderful part in religious world history. It has been upon the lip of the persecutor through all the Christian centuries. It has been responsible for more bloodshed than any other word in the calendar. Hundreds of God's saints have met their death through that word. And yet few know its real meaning. I came across the use of the word only a little while ago under somewhat interesting circumstances. A Christian minister, yes! he was a Christian minister, commenting on the interpretation of the stone cut out of the mountain side without hands, recorded in Daniel ii, said, in the course of his address, that all those who denied that stone, so cut out, was our Lord Jesus Christ, but a temporal kingdom, as some assert, were guilty of blasphemy. Such a statement proves one thing, that the speaker did not begin to know the meaning of the term he uses.

The Decalogue defines this term "Blasphemy" for us. "Thou shalt not take the name of thy God in vain, for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh His name in vain." There you have the scope of blasphemy; and within that scope Stephen never came. "Are these things so?" asked the high priest. Then came the supreme moment, and the supreme opportunity for Stephen. Read carefully his apology, and you will come to know what a perfect use Stephen made that day of that opportunity. Taking occasion by the hand he began with our father Abraham, and rehearsed in much detail the history of the chosen people of God. He took nothing for granted. It mattered not to him that all he was saying must have been well known by all his hearers, especially the high priest, and the members of the Council. In his recital he came to the time when King Solomon built his Temple unto the Lord. Then he broke off abruptly. Why? Because he could endure no longer the sneer upon the face of his audience. This is as I read it. If he had been speaking to a believing and sympathetic audience he would doubtless have continued; but under the circumstances, No! What was the use of continuing. They did not believe him, though they could not gainsay his words. But it is given unto us to continue where Stephen breaks off so abruptly; and with a wealth of detail such as he employed. Solomon built his Temple unto the Lord, and around that Temple centred all Israel's hopes and expectations. But alas! Israel's sin and transgression blighted those hopes, and dashed to the ground those expectations. After the days of Solomon, in the life of his son Rehoboam (1 Kings xii), the kingdom was divided and ten tribes broke away from the union to form an independent kingdom under one of Solomon's captains, Jeroboam by name. Henceforth the name of Israel must remain with that northern kingdom; Judah being the name given to the southern kingdom. Jerusalem and the Temple at Jerusalem remained in touch with both kingdoms. But here again Israel suffered loss far greater than Judah, since the kings of Israel, for their own selfish purposes, weaned the northern kingdom from the worship of the Temple. (1 Kings xii, 26.) In this the real sorrows of Israel began, and continued through all the dark days of her captivity and subsequent travels.

Stephen would no doubt have broken off here to take up his theme along the line of the Royal House of David, since his objective was Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory, Whom the Jews had crucified. He would have travelled along the line of St. Matthew's and St. Luke's genealogies to show how this same Jesus came of the Royal seed of David. He might in this connection have quoted St. Luke i, 32-33: "He shall be great, and shall be called the son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto Him the throne of His father David; and He shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever."

If Stephen could have reached that point he would have so driven home upon the high priest and all the members of the Council that day as to make them without excuse before Almighty God.

They must have felt the force of what was coming that they steeled their hearts against the truth. Burning with indignation at such wilful blindness Stephen spoke with all the force at his command, and this without regard to the inevitable result to himself. "Ye stiffnecked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost: as your fathers did, so do ye."

The end was not long in coming. "Now when they heard these things, they were cut to the heart, and they gnashed on him with their teeth." As the storm raged around him this man of God was lifted up, and becoming superior to every earthly circumstance, filled with the Holy Ghost, his translation came even before his spirit was separated from its earthly tabernacle. "He saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God." Standing! We are given to understand from another Scripture that Jesus sitteth at the right hand of God, there to remain until His enemies be made the footstool of His feet. But Stephen beheld Him standing. Rising up, as it were, to receive His servant as he witnesses boldly and fearlessly for Him. Stephen voices his vision, but it falls on deaf ears. Blinded by their unreasoning rage they "cast him out of the city," and, taking the law into their own hands, they stoned him to death, the Jewish method of crucifixion. Breathing the spirit of his Master he cried: "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge. And when he had said this, he fell asleep." And that was the end of Stephen. Yes! that was the end as man reckons the end. But not as God reckons. I said that Stephen saw his Lord standing in his defence at the right hand of God. His enemies reckoned without that "standing" Jesus. Note how this seventh chapter of the Acts closes and the eighth begins. "And Saul was consenting unto his death." Saul of Tarsus, a young Jewish Rabbi. At his feet, those who ministered the capital punishment on Stephen laid their garments. That was an act which gave them legal sanction for what they did. He was at that time a member of the Jewish Sanhedrin, and as such he took full responsibility for the death of Stephen. Stephen's earthly career was over, Paul's was just beginning, and the same event determined both. This was the revenge which the "standing" Jesus took for the wicked act of man that day. He said in effect, the very man who made himself responsible for the death of My servant Stephen shall take up, not the clothes of those murderers, thrown at his feet, but the mantle of the martyred, and carry forward his witness unto the uttermost part of the earth. "He is a chosen vessel unto Me, to bear My name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel." That choice was sealed home upon Saul of Tarsus on the day and at the hour when Stephen fell asleep. What a success was that! What a triumph! In after life Paul often deplored the fact that he had persecuted the Church of Christ and wasted it. He would often, methinks, dwell in painful memory upon his consent to the death of Stephen. But one comfort was his at such an hour, that Stephen flung wide open the door of opportunity for him, and the "standing" Jesus, at the right hand of God, came down and met him on the Damascus road, causing him to enter in through that open door for the enrichment of God's children throughout all time.

PREDESTINATION.—IV.

THE EVERLASTING NATION.

By the Rev. R. G. F. Waddington, M.A.

There is another Greek word to which we ought to give careful attention if we are to get at the exact meaning of certain passages of Scripture. It is the word "Ex," which has been translated in some places "of," and in other places "from."

Now all Greek scholars are agreed that the word conveys the idea of "out of," or "away from." That is to say, something that is taken away from, but is in no sense part of that from which it is taken. An example will show clearly what is meant, for the word is in common use in commerce. "So many bales of wool ex s.s. 'Baltic,'" an expression which means that the bales were taken from the ship, but certainly formed no part of the ship.

If we have these two words then, "Gentile," explained in my last chapter, and "Ex," now explained, with their meaning made clearer, we can study together to much better purpose the chapters of Hosea which Paul and Peter quote so definitely.

Hosea in his first chapter tells us that Israel of the Ten Tribes is to be punished for her sins by becoming "Scattered," "Not My people," "Not having mercy." Judah is definitely excluded, and an exactly opposite statement made at the time concerning her, for God says at that time, "But I will have mercy upon the House of Judah."

Then to exactly the same Ten Tribes comes the promise that after punishment will come forgiveness, and Israel shall once again be called "My People," "Obtaining mercy."

I would invite you to read for yourselves the words of Hosea ii, 14-23. It is perfectly clear, beyond all excuse of misunderstanding, that God meant to purge Israel, Ten-Tribed Israel, of all her sinfulness, and to restore her to her former place in the determinate counsel of Jehovah.

If either the fact or the possibility of this be denied, then it must, logically, also be denied that our salvation can be accomplished through the grace of God. If the grace of God is sufficient to change me or you, it is sufficient to change Israel. If the grace of God is insufficient to change Israel, then it must also be insufficient to change me or you.

If the purpose of God towards Israel, declared by the prophets, can fail of its completion, then can God's purpose towards us, declared by the Evangelists, fail equally of its completion.

No man, then, has any right to expect, or reason to believe in, his own safety through the mercy and love of God unless he is willing to extend that same expectation and belief to Israel, Ten-Tribed Israel.

Now we ought to keep in mind the fact of the difference, in fate and circumstances, of Israel and Judah.

At the time of our Saviour's incarnation, the Ten Tribes had been separated from their brethren of Judah for 975 years.

In spite of all the statements that have been made to the effect that all Israel's Twelve Tribes returned to Palestine after the Babylonish captivity of seventy years, there is no evidence in either Scripture or history which will bear out this statement. We are definitely told again and again in Ezra and Nehemiah that Judah, Benjamin and Levi were the returned Tribes, and not one of the others is so much as mentioned.

In a pamphlet recently sent to me* there are quoted the words of Paul to Agrippa, "Unto which promise our Twelve Tribes earnestly serving God night and day, hope to attain." And the question is asked, "Was the Apostle mistaken? Were Ten out of the Twelve lost, and ignorant of the fact that they ever belonged to Israel and quite unaware of the promise, the fulfilment of which Paul said they were expecting?"

The purpose of this and other questions asked in the same pamphlet is to contend that the Jews are all Israel, the Twelve Tribes. But surely one must never allow one's interpretation of one isolated text to drive one away from the plain facts of Scripture and history? What did Paul mean? Was he not speaking with the thought in his mind that the Twelve Tribes formed the essential conception of the Israel of God? He surely did not, and could not mean that the Twelve Tribes, as Tribes composed of thousands of individuals, were all definite and faithful in their service of God, and in their hope of the Coming of Messiah? Neither could he mean that the Twelve Tribes were all together, known to themselves and to each other. Suppose I say that "All the Churches, earnestly serving God, night and day, look for the Second Coming of Jesus"? would our questioner agree with me? Would he not say that many of the Churches, and thousands of those who belong to the Churches, have no thought or belief at all about the Second Coming?

Yet it is none the less true that the Churches do look for the Second Coming, for it is part and parcel of the very idea and doctrine of Christianity, and no one can repeat the Lord's Prayer without making definite reference to it, though most folk may be quite blind to the fact, and to the essential meaning of the words they repeat.

* "Plain Questions Addressed to British-Israelites." Mr. E. J. Burnett. Worthing.

Then did not Paul mean to argue that the Temple services, with their prayers and sacrifices and worship, rendered in the name of Israel's Twelve Tribes, all clearly pointed to the fact that Jesus of Nazareth was the Messiah? It was the ideal, not the actual, that Paul had in mind, and his complaint, like the complaint of his Master before him, was that those who took part in the services failed to see the drift of them, failed to understand the hope. Again, our questioner tells us that James addresses his Epistle to the Twelve Tribes scattered abroad, and asks "What was the use of this Apostle writing to the Twelve Tribes, if Ten of them did not know they were Tribes at all? How can a postman deliver letters to people who are lost, and who, being lost, are ignorant of their real names?"

Now, when I hear a question like that, I am sorely tempted to be rude. Yes, I will admit it. I want to ask something about the mentality of the questioner. Did he really stop to think before he spent so much money in printing his pamphlet and sending it out to believers in British-Israel identity? For I do not suppose that I am the only one so honoured by him.

Is there any possibility of comparing the Epistles of the Apostles with a letter such as you and I may write to an acquaintance? Can one legitimately use a comparison with ordinary postal requirements? Certainly not, the very idea is absurd.

Those Apostolic letters were written, under inspiration, for no particular generation of either Israelites or so-called Gentiles. Surely our questioner must admit that they were written for our edification to-day, quite as much as for the edification of the Christians, and those who might be persuaded to become Christians, of James' own day?

James' addressing of the letter proves clearly that the Twelve Tribes were in existence in his day, scattered abroad, and that he hoped to reach them. It was a hope of reaching, not a confident assurance such as you and I may have when we post a letter to a friend. He was anxious to show to them something of the practical implication of their faith in Christ Jesus, a point which shows that he had not in mind the idea of Twelve Tribes as a definite entity, actually united and in known unity, for he knew, as well as you and I know, that the vast bulk of the Jews, to say nothing of all Israel, were unbelievers in Christ.

James, like Paul, was speaking as an Israelite, thinking of Israel in the ideal, and at the same time dealing with a certain number of Israelites who had accepted Jesus as the Christ, and who needed teaching something about practical Christianity.

The plain limitation of the phrase as James uses it is shown by merely reading the first verse of the second chapter.

No one can possibly argue, then, from these two texts from Paul and James, that the Twelve Tribes were all definitely united then, and that the expression "lost" therefore does not apply.

No, good reader, we must compare Scripture with Scripture, and we really must use our common-sense.

The Bible makes it clear enough that Israel and Judah are separate entities, and no text dealing with Israel in the IDEAL can be used to deny the condition of Israel in the ACTUAL.

We may sing with our hearts, "We are not divided, all one body we," but we are bound to admit that we are only all one in ideal, and not as a fact.

Then turn with me to the ninth chapter of Romans.

At the beginning of the chapter, Paul is expressing his grief because of the obstinate unbelief of the Jews. How does that unbelief affect the promise of God to the Chosen People? Has it caused the Covenant to become of none effect? Not at all. Why not? Well, because "They are not ALL Israel, who are of Israel."

That can only mean that the Jews, who rejected Jesus, and remained in unbelief, were not that part of the Hebrew race denoted by the Scriptural term "All Israel."

The Jews are "ex," "out of" Israel, but the term "All Israel" is the designation that properly belongs to Ephraim-Israel, the Ten Tribes, as a reference to the Old Testament usage of the term will determine for any reader.

Then as a further proof that God had chosen Israel, Paul goes on to refer to Abraham's children, and remind his readers that the seed to whom the promise is made is Isaac, the son of promise, and not Ishmael, the son of the flesh.

This verse, 8, is constantly misunderstood. People will take it that Paul is setting aside Israel and bringing in the Church, the "spiritual" seed. He is doing no such thing. He is setting aside Ishmael, and emphasizing the fact that the promise is to Israel. Ishmael was the child of the flesh, the child born out of faith, through a lapse on Abraham's part. But Isaac was born through the special working of the power of God according to promise. Not only so, but in his turn Esau was set aside, and Jacob was chosen. The spiritual seed, in the true sense of the word, comes through Jacob. To him was the Covenant renewed, and Esau is rejected. This was done, Paul tells us, so that God's election might stand, and so that no so-called human "right" can be allowed. Just as the promise was of God, so the working out of the promise must be of God. No man can step in and say, "It is mine by right": he can only say, "It is mine by the grace of God." And then Paul goes on, "Hath not the potter a right over the clay, from the same lump to make one vessel unto honour, and another unto dishonour?" Who can help going back to the 18th and 19th chapters of Jeremiah, and see therefrom just what Paul meant? Was not Israel the vessel to honour, and Judah the vessel to dishonour?

Most Commentators are agreed that the vessel through which God hath shown His wrath and made His power known is Judah, and to this day they are a living monument of the power and judgment of God. Who, then, is the vessel unto honour?

Paul says, "Even us, whom He called, not from the Jews only, but also from the Nations." (I have deliberately changed the R.V. here, in order to remind you that the word translated "Gentiles" is just the same word as is elsewhere translated "Nations.") Whom does he mean? He must mean Israel of the Ten Tribes, for he at once quotes Hosea in a prophecy that was written concerning Ten-Tribed Israel, and Ten-Tribed Israel only.

Is it possible, by any kind of honest interpretation, to take this promise of Hosea and apply it to the Church, or to any people other than Ten Tribed Israel?

The sin was THEIRS, the idolatry was THEIRS, the divorce was

Digitized by Google

THEIRS, the names, Jezreel, Lo-ammi, Lo-Ruhamah were THEIRS, and therefore, in common-sense and honesty, the pardon, the mercy, the foretold blessing were theirs also.

And to anticipate any criticism on the part of teachers who are keen to point out all Israel's delinquencies, and speak of all her atrocious sins, Paul frankly admits the wickedness, and says, "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's Elect? It is God that justifieth." And if you and I are willing to acknowledge, as in honesty we must, that we are sinners, and that we can only obtain mercy and justification through the grace of God, then we must also be willing to extend the power of the same grace to Israel.

Now a step further.

If you will examine the Epistle to the Galatians carefully, can you not see quite clearly that Paul was writing, not to Gentiles in the generally accepted sense of "non-Israelites," but to people who were actually of the House of Israel?

Paul says that to him was committed the Gospel to the UN-circumcised, and to Peter the Gospel of the circumcised, and I think it is quite impossible to get away from the fact that by these two expressions were meant the Two Houses of Israel, Israel of the Ten Tribes, and Israel of the Two Tribes.

Many opponents of British-Israel Identity argue that, as we are an uncircumcised race, we cannot be Israel. But this argument completely overlooks the fact that ten-twelfths of the Hebrew race came under the title of uncircumcised.

For Israel of the Ten Tribes abandoned the Law at the very commencement of their existence as a Kingdom separate from Judah. It ought to be quite clear to every intelligent reader that Paul is writing, in "Galatians," to people who had once been under the Law, and who had abandoned it. He is preaching to them the Gospel of redemption from the law of circumcision, telling them that they were never again to become entangled in that yoke.

They had evidently been told by some unwise preachers that, now they had become Christians, they ought to act as true Israelites and submit to circumcision. Paul tells them that they must not on any account turn again (again, notice) to the weak and beggarly elements of the Law.

Now surely we must all admit that the only nation that was ever under the Law, or that required redeeming from the Law, was Israel, Israel of the Twelve Tribes.

We know full well that the Jews were circumcised, and still are to-day a circumcised people, therefore the UN-circumcision to whom Paul preached in Galatia must have been of Ten-Tribed Israel, for he could never have said what he did say unless the Galatians had once been under the Law.

At the same time there are references in Paul's various letters to barbarians, as distinguished from both Israel and Judah, who were joined to Israel through faith in Jesus Christ, and made partakers of the salvation wrought by Him.

An admirable instance of this is given to us in Romans xi. There, Paul compares the whole House of Israel, Israel and Judah, to an olive tree, the Jews being broken off, as branches, and the heathen converts being grafted in.

The whole point of this comparison is completely missed if it be not recognized that the root of the Good Olive Tree is Israel.

The Jews are natural branches of this tree, but they were cut off because of unbelief, and un-natural branches from a wild olive tree were grafted in.

Words like these could never be used of one and the same people throughout? Surely any reader can see the difference between the Root, the people whom God foreknew and predestinated, the Branches that were broken off, and the Branches that were grafted in?

Surely every reader must admit that the Root is the Hebrew Race? So what Paul tells us is that though the Jews, through unbelief, had been cut off from the Tree, and the heathen through conversion had been grafted in on to the Tree, yet these heathen were not to boast against the broken-off Branches, for if God had not spared the Jews, He was not likely to spare the heathen.

Moreover, Paul emphasizes the fact that the Tree remains, whole and strong, for God hath not cast away His people whom He foreknew. So Paul is witness against the religious guides of to-day, who tell us, and expect us to believe, that God has set aside Israel and substituted His Church.

So, too, is Paul in harmony with Isaiah, who writes in such sounding words. (xli, 8-10.)

"But thou, Israel, art My servant, Jacob whom I have chosen, the seed of Abraham My friend; thou whom I have taken from the ends of the earth, and called thee from the corners thereof, and said unto thee, Thou art My servant, I have chosen thee and not cast thee away; fear thou not, for I am with thee; be not dismayed, for I am thy God; I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of My righteousness."

BRITISH-ISRAEL FACTS NOT FANCIES.—X.

By MAJOR-GENERAL C. A. HADFIELD.

THE TEACHINGS OF THE COMMENTATORS.

Is the teaching of our clergy and theologians sound? If we refer to Revelation xvii, we find the word "mystery" referred to; mystery means, in the Greek, "to shut the eyes," and so the Church, by their teaching, have shut the eyes of the people. Babylon means "confusion." How great is the "confusion" in the Christian religion. It is time for Israel to awake, for the "seven times" of the Gentile rule is expiring; Jerusalem has already been redeemed from the Turk; and Judah is going back to her own land to become, once more, a nation under the protectorate of Great Britain (Israel). Judah and Israel (the two sticks of Ezek. xxxvii) are to be rejoined, to become one nation with one king. The Apostle to the Romans warned all that "blindness in part had happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in." Now the blindness is falling off Israel, and the "lost sheep" (the Ten Tribes) are being found. At this time there is a "shaking" among the "dry bones," trying to find God and His plans. There are many "signs" given to us whereby we may find the Ten Tribes. Chiefly in England and America—Joseph's seed—and they are "the ten thousands of Ephraim and the thousands of Manasseh."

The ancient Commentators when they first laid the basis of what is our present-day teaching could see no living nation comparable with the greatness foreshadowed for a Nation Israel. Here is the point where our early teaching went astray. To try and make God's promises to Israel intelligible, "the Church" was looked upon as having replaced the literal Israel, thought to be extinct.

The time has come for the world to awaken from such a fancy. The curriculum of our Universities and Theological Colleges needs revision so as to get out of a wrong groove of thought and teaching, for what was excusable in the fourth century A.D. is inexcusable now.

The masses need a lead, but it will be a matter of—"For precept upon precept, precept upon precept, line upon line, line upon line, here a little and there a little. . . ." To keep on impressing the need of a change of interpretation in the reading of the prophecies, before the eyes of the blind will be opened. There is "a time for everything," and the time for this change of thought is rapidly approaching.

Keeping the Sabbath.

One of the "signs" for our guidance is the fact that the keeping of the Sabbath was to be a sign between the Lord and Israel: "Wherefore the children of Israel shall keep the Sabbath, to observe the Sabbath throughout their generations, for a perpetual Covenant. It is a sign between Me and the children of Israel for ever" (Ex. xxxi, 16-17). See also Ezek. xx, 20.

Only the British race acknowledge the Sabbath by law.

Is it not the special privilege of the Anglo-Saxon race—alone among the Nations—to observe Sunday as God's Day? They, unless wilfully blind, can surely see that such "a sign" was a special gift to our race for a purpose. Therefore, why go out of one's way, as some do, to argue that so long as one attends an early Communion it is immaterial how the rest of the Sabbath day be kept. Or, again, why depart from the custom of the past by only reading the Commandments to the Communicants, or those who may attend that Special Service?

Such acts contribute towards carelessness in the keeping of the Sabbath.

Israel is to be "heir of the world," and is to subdue all other nations, and to keep in perpetuity the Throne of David until Christ comes to reign on earth during the millennium.

Thus we have Israel to endure for ever, and we have the "Stone Kingdom" to destroy all other nations, and "to break in pieces and consume all those kingdoms." "And it shall be for ever!" To perform the same thing. BOTH to be everlasting! Thus both identical with Great Britain.

Truly "we see not our signs" (Ps. lxxiv, 9). "Ye shall keep My Sabbaths" (Levit. xxvi, 2).

"The Throne of David."

Israel the Strong Nation with David's Throne.

The continuity of the direct line of David's Throne has never been broken, it never can be broken, for it is "everlasting." Holy Scripture is clear and emphatic upon this, and "The Scriptures cannot be broken" (John x, 35).

We know from Micah iv, 7, Israel was never to be ultimately lost, for do we not read: "I will make her that was cast far off a strong nation"? When this message was delivered by Micah, Israel was in captivity, whereas the Jews were in Palestine. Therefore, while Judah was destined to become "a remnant," "cast off" Israel was to become a "strong nation." This promise is definite, and so must be fulfilled. Then, if more proof be needed, are we not told: "I will bring again the captivity of My people Israel . . . I will plant them upon their land"? (Amos ix, 14-15).

The Prophet Jeremiah, in chapter xxxi, 18-20, teaches us that Ephraim-Israel would repent of their evil ways, and would be reinstated in God's favour; and, in verses 7 and 9 of the same chapter, Judah is subordinate to Israel; while in chapter iii, 18, it is clear that Israel and Judah are in separation prior to their return to Palestine. Thus we can see how necessary it is to interpret the prophetical books of the Old Testament in the simple literal meaning of its words. We have no Scriptural authority to do otherwise.

As regards the perpetuity of David's Throne, the Rev. F. R. A. Glover, in his work published some sixty years ago, "England, the Remnant of Judah and Israel of Ephraim," remarks therein, "England is, in her Royal Family, of the stem of Jesse, and, therefore, is, as the hereditary holder of the perpetual sceptre and inheritor of the standard of Judah, the fostered remnant of Judah" (Jer. xxv, 11; Gen. xlix, 10). When Israel and Judah return to their own land, viz., Judah "as a tribe," but Israel only representatively (Ezek. xxxiv, 28; Jer. iii, 14), they are to return together to that place from which they together came, many centuries since, under the care and leading of the Prophet Jeremiah.

The whole history of the Royal line of descent is ably described by Mr. Glover, who shows how Jeremiah, under Divine guidance, took charge of King Zedekiah's daughter, and safeguarded her to Ireland, where she wedded King Heremon of Tara, and thus preserved the direct line from David through the Kings of Ireland, and thence through the Kings of Scotland and England down to George V. Thus the Princess was enabled to reach the "isles of the west," the place ordained of God for "the planting" of His people Israel, and so the throne which was to be an everlasting throne was continued, and ready for Israel to serve under in the fulfilment of prophecy.

The Rev. Mr. Glover points out that in this manner is England's monarch descended from King Zedekiah's daughter, and by virtue thereof is the legal representative of the House of David, bearing the perpetual sceptre of Judah. Hence it is that the sons of England have therefore a right to assume that they in her are, not only the representatives of Ephraim, but in truth the grand reality of that power of Israel. The author adds: "It is nothing to us that other nations shall deny this; there stands the fact!"

CHALLENGE TO THE CLERGY.

ON Tuesday the Rev. C. W. Cooper gave two addresses at the Masonic Hall for the Hastings and St. Leonards Branch of the British-Israel-World Federation.

The subject taken in the afternoon was "Precious Stones of the Bible," and the lecturer, in the course of his address, exhibited a beautiful home-made picture on which was depicted "pearl oyster spectrum" to prove the scientific accuracy of the statement of St. John in Rev. iv, 3.

Digitized by Google

The lecturer went on to demonstrate how nearly all Commentators had made one common error in assuming that the words "clear as crystal" in St. John's vision of our Lord on the throne must have reference to a "diamond"; whereas, the expression meant "shining-glittering-bright." Jasper, when highly polished, is exceedingly beautiful and of a most lovely green hue, forming, with sardine red, the two predominant colours in the sevenfold spectrum of every rainbow.

In addition to the Bible stones exhibited were some very fine and rare specimens of mocha stones, wonderful agates, as well as a number of cases each giving an extraordinary display of colours, such as zircons, topazes, sapphires, etc. A large copy of the Hebrew high priest's breast-plate was shown, and a few of the stones thereon were dealt with seriatim, with an explanation as to how the names of the probable true stones are arrived at.

In the evening Mr. Cooper dealt with recent criticisms of the British-Israel position, and gave a remarkable instance of setting before a leading Oxford theologian the British-Israel teaching of a national as well as a spiritual aspect of the Kingdom of God. After a patient hearing the theologian stated he could take no exception to the truths that had been put before him, and admitted he had never before seen this aspect of the truth, adding that his study of history led him to believe that the various migrations of people into Britain were undoubtedly of Hebrew descent. The lecturer spoke on the ethnological side, and referred his critical friends to the learned work of Bruce Hannay, whose bibliography contained over 100 works of learned men on the subject. He also spoke of Dr. Mountain's masterful answer to Samuel Wilkinson, declaring that from an exegetical point of view he considered Dr. Mountain simply pulverised the statements of Wilkinson.

In conclusion, the lecturer stated he would humbly throw down the challenge that he and a few other clerical friends would be glad to meet a body of clergy of the town at a round-table discussion of these matters. What British-Israel believers welcomed was honest enquiry.—Hastings Observer.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

BY THE REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A.

QUESTION.—I have been informed by a Hebrew scholar who is an opponent of B.-I. Truth that the Hebrew word for "isles" does not convey the same meaning as its English equivalent. He maintains that the word translated "isles" in Isaiah xlix, 1, and in other places, means any coastline, and not necessarily a piece of land entirely surrounded by water. Is that so?—C. B. (Oxford).

ANSWER.—The Hebrew word translated "islands," "isles," occurs at least 35 times from Genesis x, 5, to Zephaniah ii, 11, inclusive. The word is 'iy (pronounced ee), and means literally, "a habitable spot (as desirable); dry land, a coast, an island:—country, isle, island."

It will be observed that the Revised Version translates it by "isles" or "islands," and rarely suggests the word "coastland" as a marginal alternative (cf. Isaiah xxiv, 15: Jer. xxv, 22).

From this it will be concluded that the Revisers did not object to the words "isles" or "islands," as the Hebrew plainly allows it and probably means it. The word "coastline" or "coastlands" may be used if preferred, but even then islands have coastlands, as any traveller by sea knows, nor is there much in it either way.

It cannot be said that the Hebrews (in occupation of Canaan or Palestine) were a maritime people. Palestine only has one sea-border on the West, which is an inhospitable coast, as all who have ever landed at Jaffa know. It is doubtful if any "coastline" or "island" can be seen from Palestine, although it is said that on a clear day the coast of Cyprus (Kittim) can be seen from the summit of Mount Carmel. Certainly when I was on the top of Carmel I looked to see if Cyprus were visible or not, but I failed to observe its coastline.

There were many islands and groups of islands known to the early Palestinian settlers and emigrants, including the Phœnicians, the Philistines, as well as the Hebrews. Cyprus and Crete were known to them, as were Corsica and Sardinia—to say nothing of the islands and coastlands of the Greek Archipelago. The term "Britannicæ Insulæ" was employed by Greek writers to describe the whole group of the British Isles, but more especially the two largest, i.e., Great Britain and Ireland. The term "Albion" was first used by Aristotle (De Mundo, sec. 3) about 1100 B.C. And since we know that there was a big trade (chiefly in tin) between Britain and the Middle East in the earliest times, we cannot be wrong in believing that the British Isles were well known to the Hebrew Prophets, as to all the classical writers, thinkers and explorers throughout the wide range of Old Testament days. Later on, as is well known, Britain was greatly coveted by the Romans, although Julius Cæsar made two unsuccessful attempts to conquer it. This led Tibullus (Lib. IV, Carm. 1), the Roman poet, to say:—

"Te manet invictus Romano Marte Britannus," which may be translated:—

"Behold! The Briton awaits thee, unconquered by Roman arms."

Tibullus died in A.D. 18, so that in our Lord's time the Briton walked the streets of Rome, practically the only freeman of Europe.

It seems therefore not improbable that when Jeremiah spoke of "the kings of the isles which are beyond the sea," and "the isles which are afar off" (Jer. xxv, 22; xxxi, 10), he and other prophets, including Isaiah, had a vision of the British Isles which lay "beyond the (Mediterranean) sea," and "beyond the Pillars of Hercules," by which latter term the Straits of Gibraltar were known to the ancients.

OBITUARY.

THE LATE REV. ARTHUR CLARENCE CHAMBERS.

The late Rev. Arthur Clarence Chambers, who died on March 17th, was 68 years of age. Since 1918 he had been minister of Wealdstone Baptist Church. Mr. Chambers was educated in Aberdeen, and trained for the ministry under the late Mr. C. H. Spurgeon. His active minis ry began near Maidstone, but before his ministerial career he was a master at a school of art, and he continued exercising his gift of painting throughout his life. Under his leadership the Wealdstone Church has developed greatly, both the membership of the Church and of the Sunday School having substantially increased. He was an earnest and able preacher and a keen student of God's Word. His ministry, a ministry of faith, was carried on with tireless energy.

Mr. Chambers had been for a considerable time a member of the Council of the B.-I.-W. Federation, and he was also a Vice-President. He has from time to time charmed us with his addresses both at Congress and other gatherings, though owing to failing health he had not been able to be with us for several months. He had a delightful personality, and he was a true and loyal friend. He bravely stood up for B.-I. Truth amongst his brethren in the ministry, and met their objections or difficulties with sound logic and strong argument. He was always popular with our audiences. We feel his loss keenly, but our loss is his Heavenly gain.

Our deep sympathy is with his widow, his daughter and two sons, in their great bereavement.

FAITHFUL TO HIS WORD.

By E. M. Foster.

Right through the Bible story we read that sin alone was responsible for the sufferings of the Children of Israel. It was through their own fault that the door of the Promised Land was shut fast upon them for forty years. And later, when they were settled in that land, it was their continual disobedience that brought on the Seven Times' Punishment of which Moses had warned them.

Now many people will tell you that it was this that caused them to be utterly cast away. That is a false statement! How could it be true when God had promised to Abraham and Isaac and Jacob that their seed should endure for ever and become a mighty nation and company of nations; should be His own Chosen People? Nothing can ever revoke a Divine Promise. And from the Prophets we know that a faithful remnant of Israel was rescued and brought to God's Appointed Place in the Isles of the West.

So through many afflictions Israel was led there, and when the great Seven Times expired she budded forth "restored, redeemed, forgiven," the mightiest nation the world has ever known. Need we enquire which modern nation that can be, when the Bible tells us what are the marks of recognition? It is Great Britain. Her heraldry is that of Israel. Her throne, the throne of David. And what about the Promised Land which God had said should be restored to Israel in the latter days? Great Britain is in possession of Palestine, and these days are the latter days, for Biblical chronology tells us so!

Surely this is the time for all the sons of God to shout for joy, and marvel at the Divine care and love shown to us. All our tribulations, though self-inflicted, have been a means of strengthening us. In this way God turns defeat into victory, and triumphs over Satan.

We have the Bible's statements that in the last days Israel is to be revealed. People are coming rapidly into the ranks of British-Israel. The whole world is soon to know.

Let us believe now by faith, and not wait for the great overwhelming proof. "Blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed." When the doubters come to see that Britain is really Israel, they will perceive the Divine Plan in the world's history. They will be able to understand how it was that sin and disaster overtook mankind. They will see, too, that in spite of men's mistakes and disobedience the promises and Covenants God has made never change. Israel may have delayed her final and tremendous destiny, but she can never alter it.

Surely and quickly the Millennial Age is coming. On the horizon a sea of glory steadily advances towards us. And no man can stop that mighty tide. Its waves of Light and Truth come to overwhelm the Prince of this world and his powers. And then "the earth will be filled with the glory of God as the waters cover the sea."

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

MISS HAMILTON HUNTER visited the Harrow Branch on March 28th, when a drawing-room meeting was held at Mrs. Ford's. There was a crowded attendance. In the evening a large audience assembled, when Miss Hamilton Hunter gave another inspiring address.

* * *

A correspondent in Michigan, U.S.A., writes joyfully that, after he has for seven years prayed and worked that British-Israel teaching should be preached in Detroit, this has now been done. The next evening, Monday, the Bible Class was held, and more British-Israel was called for.

* * *

On Monday of last week the Rev. Pascoe Goard gave two addresses at Headquarters to rooms crowded to capacity. Mr. John Leech gave one of his series of lectures to a large audience on Wednesday, and on Thursday evening Miss Hamilton Hunter stirred her hearers by her subject and her enthusiasm.

* * *

Mr. John Leech resumes his lectures on Prophecy on Wednesday afternoon, April 16th, the meeting commencing at 3 o'clock, preceded at 2.30 by a short time of prayer. No meeting will be held on Thursday evening, the 17th, but on the 24th, at 8 o'clock, the Rev. T. Sparshott Johnson, M.A., will give the address.

* * *

There were large and appreciative audiences at the Masonic Hall, St. Leonards, on April 1st, to hear Miss Hamilton Hunter. In the afternoon the subject was a deep and a spiritual one—"The Resurrection." The evening lecture was on Divine Healing in Israel, in which it was shown that there were some kinds of healing being taught which were not of the Lord. The following afternoon Miss Hunter gave a clear and interesting address in a drawing-room at the kind invitation of Mrs. Stanley Jackson. Those present were hearing the good news for the first time, and all expressed their wish to know more about it. Arrangements are being made to carry on the work by Study Circles.

* * *

The Liverpool Branch had a very interesting and instructive lecture on "Strange Things in the Abrahamic Covenant," given by Mr. H. D. Houghton, of Nottingham, at their fortnightly meeting at Hackins Hey on March 27th.

* * *

Our Commissioner, the Rev. T. Sparshott Johnson, recently paid a visit to Ireland, preaching at two Churches in Dublin and giving eight lectures in Dublin and Belfast. In Dublin the meetings were fairly attended, many new members were enrolled and a good supply of literature was disposed of. On two occasions the chair was occupied by Clergy of the Church of Ireland, while others attended some of the meetings. In Belfast two halls were well filled, one in the afternoon and one in the evening, by most enthusiastic audiences. The evening meeting, which was packed to the doors, was presided over by Canon Walker, and the local Press published an excellent report. While in Ireland Mr. Johnson had the privilege of visiting the famous hill of Tara. Since his return he has addressed meetings at Ealing, Hornsey, Ipswich, Norwich, Lowestoft and Saxmundham, and has had a very cordial reception in each place.

On March 25th Woking had two very good meetings, with much larger audiences, to hear Mr. J. J. Morey. New members were added to the Branch.

* * *

On the Secretary-General's News and Notes pages of March 29th issue, in the letter from Mr. Oldroyd, of Halifax, the average attendance at the meetings noted should have been 46.

* * *

The series of local lectures arranged in connection with the Blackburn Branch was continued recently in the Y.M.C.A. Lecture Hall, Limbrick, on March 24th, with Mr. J. V. Horrocks in the chair, the speaker being the Rev. G. W. Plasting.

A Silver Tea has been given under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Winnipeg Branch at the home of Mrs. John Trowell, the attendance being notably large, and resulting in a most satisfactory accession to the funds. Mrs. J. Wilson, President of the Auxiliary, and Mrs. Trowell, Vice-President, received the guests. The decorations of arum lilies, daffodils and spirea were very effective, and stalls for the sale of fancy goods and home cooking were most successful. A vocal duet was rendered by Miss Christine Hurcheson and Miss Margaret Montgomery. Dr. H. W. Wadge, M.C., B.A., M.D., has addressed a public meeting on "The British Commonwealth of Nations and the Times of the Gentiles." Rev. E. J. Springett has spoken on British-Israel Truth at a Lodge Meeting. Arrangements for the Dominion Convention to be held at Winnipeg in May are fully under way. Intending delegates and visitors should notify the Secretary, Box 2004, Winnipeg, if hospitality is desired. Donations for the Convention Fund should be sent to the Treasurer, Mr. John Trowell, 519, Sprague Street, Winnipeg.

Many members and friends of our Federation were present at Brompton Cemetery on Thursday, April 3rd, to pay their last tribute of affection to the memory of Mrs. Vincent Wright, and of deep sympathy with Colonel Wright in his bereavement.

Representing the British-Israel-World Federation, the Ladies' Executive, and the members and helpers of our Staff were: Major Knowles, President, B.-I.-W.F.; Mrs. Knowles; Miss Hornibrook; Mrs. Craven-Jones; Miss Jones; Mrs. Fletcher-Stevenson; Mrs. Garrison; Mrs. Cameron: Mr. John Leech, K.C.; Colonel Brazier-Creagh; Captain Young; Dr. Sworder; Rev. Sparshott Johnson; Rev. J. Lumley Davies and Miss Davies; Mr. Barnes; and Mr. Harrison Hill. The Ladies of No. 9 Kensington Nursing Division, St. John's Ambulance Brigade, of which Mrs. Wright was a member, were present, with Miss Twiss, District Officer, as a Guard of Honour.

To their great regret, through absence on duty with meetings in Exeter, the Secretary-General and Rev. Pascoe Goard were unable to be present.

The bright colours of spring flowers, loving tributes from those whom she had made happier by the brightness of her presence, caught us away from the sadness of farewell to the vision of Him Who is the Resurrection and the Life, in Whose Presence is fulness of joy.

Six successful meetings were held at Exeter in the Barnfield Hall on April 1st, 2nd and 3rd. The Rev. Pascoe Goard and Mr. Herbert Garrison were the speakers, the Rev. Commander Roberts, R.N., presided and gave an address at the opening of the series. As usual, the audiences increased day by day, and the last meeting was by far the largest of all. People came from Exmouth, Teignmouth, Chudleigh, Paignton, Barnstaple and beyond. Many attended every meeting. Mr. Garrison gave a lantern lecture each evening. On Friday he went to Plymouth and addressed two capital audiences in the Abbey Hall, the Rev. Commander Roberts going from Teignmouth to support him and speaking at each meeting as Chairman. The large proportion of men at these two gatherings was noticeable. Very great interest was manifested and a largely-signed petition was presented asking for a series of meetings to be arranged as early as possible.

S. A. writes from Kenya Colony:—"We are very grateful indeed that your office has continued to send us THE NATIONAL MESSAGE. Our condition would be very 'lean' as regards current events in the light of prophecy if it were not for the fat things' we obtain from the 'N.M.' Our elder boy while at home is very interested in the 'N.M.' After his return to school (Rift Valley Academy, Kijabe) this term, he wrote home asking that we immediately send a subscription to The B.-I. Crusader. When we were at Lake Naivasha (sixty miles north of Nairobi) in January this year, a friend took him for a ride in his car to Naivasha Station. While there he was taken into the 'Bell Inn' for an ice cream. On his return home he was hearing 'bursting' with the news that at the Inn the proprietor had placed at the disposal of his guests nearly fifty books on British-Israel Teaching. Here, out in the Nyika (wilderness); in the haunt of the lion, ostrich, zebra, hyæna and kongoni, here is a well-equipped information bureau on British-Israel for the benefit of the big-game hunter, traveller and settler."

OUR GREAT ADVANCE.

By J. J. Morey.

THERE are signs of a great awakening, and our army of voluntary workers is beginning to mobilize. From north, south, east and west there come willing responses to our appeal for the formation of Study Circles in the homes of our British-Israel friends. We have received our first reply from the United States, and we are sure that letters from our Dominion readers are already on the way.

In some cases the enquiries will be preparatory to the work of the next winter season, but in other cases the Study Circles have already commenced. There is ample time for a first course before the holiday season if you begin now or immediately after Easter.

Some Branches are taking the matter up as a special means of spreading our Truth in their towns and increasing their present organizations, while in many country districts new centres will be established.

In more than one case the Vicar of the parish is becoming interested, and the Study Circle will be an untold blessing to the whole district.

May I again urge readers to let no difficulty prevent the success of this plan. Send for the printed details, and proceed at once to make your preparations.

It is hoped to form a Circle at Headquarters, and it is suggested that it should meet each Wednesday evening at 6 o'clock, commencing on Wednesday, April 23rd.

Will those who desire to join this Circle please give in their names without delay. Address all letters:—Study Circles, The Secretary-General, B.-I.-W.F., 6, Buckingham Gate, London, S.W.1.

THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD'S LATEST BOOK

THE SECOND COMING of OUR LORD

The threads of the Bible Story are many, each of them reaching one great culmination—namely, in the Second Coming of Christ.

The following threads may be indicated, all of which culminate in the Second Coming :

(1) The teaching regarding the Temple.
(2) The teaching regarding the Nation Israel.
(3) The teaching regarding the House and Throne of David.
(4) The teaching regarding the House of Judah.
(5) The teaching regarding the External Nations.
(6) The teaching regarding the Church.
(7) The teaching regarding our Lord Himself.
(8) The teaching regarding the Apostles and their Position and Office in the Regeneration.

All these, and other threads of the Bible Story, find their culmination in THE SECOND COMING OF OUR LORD.

The last utterance of our Lord, as given in the last sentences of the Book of Revelation, reiterates all preceding prophecy and testimony concerning the Second Coming : these are the solemn words :—

" Even so, come, Lord Jesus. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen."

THE BRITISH-ISRAEL IDEAL.

By W. G. DUNCAN THOMPSON.

" The ladder up which the British-Israel Movement has climbed to a perception of a new aspect of the great Christian and British ideal is that of the historical identity of Britain with ancient Israel. This method—whatever may be the individual opinion of it—is gaining force steadily from research into history and other kindred subjects, and from its extraordinary relationship to Scripture, especially prophetical Scripture : this relationship being entirely complementary and harmonious. It has, moreover, the advantage of being able to provide a platform from which the present state of affairs can be surveyed in an historical, logical and comprehensive way, and its answer to modern criticism of the Bible is deadly. This method, therefore, beside possessing the credit for revealing the new aspect of the ideal, is invaluable for the work done in clearing the ground of the present out-of-date confusion and presenting the fresh conception in a perspective easily grasped and retained by the general intelligence."

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation, the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

THE MOUNTAIN PEAKS OF THE PENTATEUCH RANGE.—I.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

WHAT we may later develop into a series of articles we now present in outline form.

For some years the writer lived in the city of Lethbridge in Southern Alberta. It is situated on the great plain which stretches ocean-like eastward from the Rocky Mountains. That great plain, approximating one thousand miles square—that is to say, one thousand miles from east to west, and one thousand miles from south-east to north-west—stretches away eastward from the foot of the Rocky Mountains.

The city of Lethbridge lies about 70 miles eastward from the foot of the Rockies. Looking westward the mighty Rocky Mountain Range lies as a barrier sharply ending the outlook in that direction. Shooting up from that barrier, which, generally speaking, appears as a low-lying cloud-bank, there are the sharp peaks of notable mountains, such as Chief Mountain, the Livingstone Range, and so on. At times the mirage-like atmosphere, exercising a telescopic effect, brings the mountains so close that it would appear to be an easy task to ride to them before breakfast; at other times they seem to be very distant.

Thinking of these things with the Bible in hand, I was struck with the mighty pyramid-like peaks which tower above the generality of Biblical truth—over-topped only by Calvary—which appear in the five Books of Moses.

To these we shall give brief attention in an endeavour to sketch the outline of this serrated range of truth.

The opening verses of the first chapter of Genesis give to us a very Mount Everest of a sublime truth. The statement is contained in a telegram of ten words issued as one of what the Psalmist calls "The testimonies of the Lord," and which he declares "are sure, making wise the simple."

This telegram is signed with the name Elohim.

"IN THE BEGINNING GOD CREATED THE HEAVEN AND THE EARTH."

This mountain peak holds up before the eyes of all men and of all ages God in His relationship to the Universe.

From this source, and permeated with this truth, flows all the succeeding Scriptures. In accordance with this truth has developed all human history. Dependent upon this truth is the Gospel of human salvation.

No foot of man has ever climbed to the summit of this mountain, for the Creation period had its beginning countless and countless ages before the human race was born. The facts lie in such an immeasurably distant realm that a human lifetime would scarcely take one a day's journey in that direction; faith only, through the telescope of Divine revelation, can see the mighty and uplifted mass of this primeval truth.

A second mountain peak is shown in the second chapter of Genesis. It is infinitely nearer to our day; in fact, it stands at the very point of commencement of the family from which we are descended. At the point marked by this second mountain peak is the commencement of our genealogical chain.

The fact which thus rises mountain-like is God's relationship to the Adamic family, commencing in the second chapter of Genesis.

Again we have a telegram signed by God, this time with the name Jehovah Elohim, and the words it contains are as follows :—"AND THE LORD GOD FORMED MAN FROM THE DUST OF THE GROUND, AND BREATHED INTO HIS NOSTRILS THE BREATH OF LIFE, AND MAN BECAME A LIVING SOUL."

Other mountain peaks arise in succession, but we come to another outstanding one in the sixteenth chapter of Genesis. There are approaches to this mountain peak which begin in chapter xii ; there is a cairn or altar on this mountain peak, upon which Isaac, the son of Abraham—and in him all his descendants, even down to the present day and our own generation—was offered a living sacrifice to God.

The peak itself is presented to us in a somewhat longer communication from the Lord, Who this time signs Himself El Shaddai. It holds up before all ages that should succeed, the fact that God had set up in the earth.

Three persons were brought together for the purposes of this Household. The first of these was the Lord, the Creator Himself, Who now took and revealed Himself by the new name of El Shaddai. He called to Himself Abram of Ur of the Chaldees and Sarai, his wife, re-naming them respectively, as the united head of the newly-formed Household of God, and under His Almighty Fatherhood, Abraham and Sarah. Into this Household should be born a son, and of that son a seed in whom all the families of the earth should be blessed ; that seed should become as numerous as the dust of the earth, as the sand which is on the sea shore, as the stars in the heaven. That family should continue to the end of time, and to all eternity, the Household of God.

It is a wonderful mountain peak, and stands at the head of all the course of the historic period of the earth.

We pass now to another outstanding peak in this mighty range of fact and truth. This time we find the mountain broad-based and high, covering the Book of Exodus. This mountain of historical fact marks the organization of the in the earth. We have now reached the period of what may be termed contemporary history. Such is the knowledge we now possess of the literary qualifications of the period of the Exodus, and such the detailed knowledge of the educational qualifications of Moses himself, that the assumption that no historic records were kept of this tremendous period becomes impossible.

The Tel-el-Amarna Tablets are of that age ; the books of Egypt, with which Moses was undoubtedly acquainted, were of that age and earlier ; the writings of Ur of the Chaldees, the birthplace of Abraham, both ante-dated and post-dated that era ; the direct statement of the Scriptures themselves is that Moses wrote the data referred to as "these things" in a book, and there is no evidence to the contrary. Neither is there any sufficient reason for assuming that the great transactions noted in the second, third, fourth and fifth books of the Pentateuch were not written at the time.

These facts are manifest to-day ; they were not so clearly manifest at the time certain schools were undertaking "the higher criticism" of the Bible. It is, therefore, a matter of sober fact that the truly modern scholar accepts a written basis for the books of the Pentateuch, and to hold to the late origin of the literature of the Pentateuch is to be behind the movement of ascertained fact and knowledge of truth in these rapidly moving days.

We may, therefore, say that the literature we are now to consider is inspired history, whereas the literature of the Book of Genesis is Divine testimony.

The book begins with the miracle delivery, through the agency of an expedition of two aged men armed only with a rod cut in the wilderness, of Israel from under the hand of the military organization of Egypt. The story is dramatic in the extreme.

The approach to the great mountain peak is by way of the Red Sea, the bitter waters of Marah, and the encampment at Rephidim.

The culminating event is the organization of the Kingdom of God in the earth, and the establishment of God Himself in the Kingdom so organized, as King, Who should administer the constitution in His Kingdom for ever.

We note in passing that this is the opening chapter of BRITISH history. The time is not far distant when the logic of rediscovered facts will compel the teaching of this as the opening chapter of our Kingdom history in our schools, as the twelfth chapter of Genesis will be taught as the beginning of our racial history.

For the establishment of this Kingdom three necessary elements, without each of which there could be no Kingdom, were brought together, namely :—The Nation, the King, and the Law.

The passages which supply us with this information are contained in the nineteenth and twentieth chapters of Exodus, from which we quote the following :—

"And Moses went up unto God, and the Lord called unto him out of the mountain, saying, Thus shalt thou say to the house of Jacob, and tell the children of Israel ;

Ye have seen what I did unto the Egyptians, and how I bare you on eagles' wings, and brought you unto myself.

Now therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people : for all the earth is mine :

And ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel.

And Moses came and called for the elders of the people, and laid before their faces all these words which the Lord commanded him.

And all the people answered together, and said, All that the Lord hath spoken we will do. And Moses returned the words of the people unto the Lord."—Exod. xix, 3-8.

Thus we read that the people were brought to God, and were by Him constituted "a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation." Hitherto the people have been a family only, subdivided into tribes ; now they were promoted to be "a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation."

For the purposes of His Kingdom God revealed Himself to Israel by the name Jehovah.

Thus we read in chapter vi, verses 2, 3 and 4 :—

"And God spake unto Moses, and said unto him, I am the Lord :

Digitized by Google

And I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, by the name of God Almighty, but by my name JEHOVAH was I not known to them.

And I have also established my covenant with them, to give them the land of Canaan, the land of their pilgrimage, wherein they were strangers."

The name translated God Almighty is, in the original, El Shaddai; that name belongs to the family, and continues to the Book of Revelation; but the name Jehovah belongs to the Kingdom henceforth, and is, as a rule, not used otherwise in the succeeding Scriptures.

We now see the majestic approach of Jehovah to establish Himself as King in Israel for ever.

The whole dramatic passage is contained in Exodus xix, 9–25, from which we quote as follows:—

"And the Lord said unto Moses, Lo, I come unto thee in a thick cloud, that the people may hear when I speak with thee, and believe thee for ever. And Moses told the words of the people unto the Lord."

"And it came to pass on the third day in the morning, that there were thunders and lightnings, and a thick cloud upon the mount, and the voice of the trumpet exceeding loud; so that all the people that was in the camp trembled.

And Moses brought forth the people out of the camp to meet with God; and they stood at the nether part of the mount.

And mount Sinai was altogether on a smoke, because the Lord descended upon it in fire: and the smoke thereof ascended as the smoke of a furnace, and the whole mount quaked greatly.

And when the voice of the trumpet sounded long, and waxed louder and louder, Moses spake, and God answered him by a voice.

And the Lord came down upon mount Sinai, on the top of the mount: and the Lord called Moses up to the top of the mount; and Moses went up.

And the Lord said unto Moses, Go down, charge the people, lest they break through unto the Lord to gaze, and many of them perish.

And let the priests also, which come near to the Lord, sanctify themselves, lest the Lord break forth upon them.

And Moses said unto the Lord, The people cannot come up to mount Sinai: for thou chargedst us, saying, Set bounds about the mount, and sanctify it.

And the Lord said unto him, Away, get thee down, and thou shalt come up, thou, and Aaron with thee: but let not the priests and the people break through to come up unto the Lord, lest he break forth upon them.

So Moses went down unto the people, and spake unto them."

Let our thought dwell for a moment upon the great event here set forth. We speak of the Advent of our Lord when He came to earth and took the body, which He declared through the prophet Isaiah centuries before in the following terms, that God had prepared for Him: "A body hast Thou prepared Me."

We speak of His Second Advent, when He shall come again: "And God shall give unto Him the throne of His Father David, and He shall rule over the house of Jacob for ever; and of His kingdom there shall be no end."

What we have now been reading in the nineteenth chapter of Exodus was the Advent of Jehovah to establish Himself as King in Israel for ever.

As we read through the succeeding Scriptures in the Old Testament and in the New Testament, again and again it is made manifest that Jehovah still dwells and reigns with and in His Kingdom Israel.

The writer of the one-hundred-and-third Psalm, in offering blessing and praise to God, enumerates the blessings received at His hand, and enjoyed under His rule. He begins with personal blessings, such as these:—"Who forgiveth all thine iniquity; Who healeth all thy diseases," and so on. He finishes the triumphant enumeration of blessings with the triumphant declaration "Jehovah hath set His throne in the heaven, and His kingdom ruleth over all. Bless the Lord ye His angels, that excel in strength, that do His commandments, hearkening unto the voice of His word.

"Bless ye the Lord, all ye His hosts; ye ministers of His that do His pleasure.

"Bless the Lord, all His works in all places of His dominion. Bless the Lord, O my soul."

It will be a glad day for the Anglo-Saxon world, and for all the world, when we recognize that Jehovah is still our King, His throne is still established in the heavens, and His Kingdom ruleth over all.

Thus there were brought together two elements of the Kingdom, namely, Israel, henceforth set apart for the purposes of the Kingdom alone; and Jehovah, henceforth the sole King in Israel.

It is to be noted with the utmost care that in the manifestation of Himself as Jehovah He is "Holy, Holy, Holy," that is to say, Holy and only devoted to the task of accomplishing in the earth His regenerative and administrative work solely through His "Holy" (that is to say, devoted or set apart) nation Israel.

His Name so given is not otherwise used, as a rule, in the Scriptures, and the onward march of His progress in the earth is in the midst of, and surrounded by His nation Israel, as His throne in the heavens is surrounded by the angel hosts.

It is in line with this that our Lord Jesus Christ declared: "I AM NOT SENT SAVE TO THE LOST SHEEP OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL," but to His disciples, representing the House of Israel, He said:—"As the Father hath sent Me"—to the lost sheep of the House of Israel—"so send I you"—"Go ye therefore and preach the gospel unto every creature." "Go ye, and make disciples of all nations."

It is further in line with this that our Lord said to His disciples: "It is expedient for you that I go away; for if I go not away the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send Him unto you." "And when He is come, He will reprove the world. . . . ."

Let us note that the Holy Ghost is to be sent UNTO YOU; that is to say, unto those to whom the Saviour came, namely, the lost sheep of the House of Israel. Let us note the further fact that when He is come, He shall "reprove THE WORLD." Now how could He reprove the world if He were sent, as our Lord declared, "unto you"? The answer, of course, is, through the agency of those referred to by the Saviour as "unto you."

Digitized by Google

So we see that from the beginning God's purposes in the earth, as set forth in the Old Testament and in the New Testament, are to be worked out through the agency of His "holy nation," whom the Saviour called in His day "the lost sheep of the House of Israel."

We now come to the third element of the Kingdom, namely, the Law. This was given in the ears of Israel by the voice of Jehovah, the King of Israel, as the promulgation by Himself of the Law of the Kingdom which should remain and be administered by Him, and obeyed by Israel for ever. Here are the majestic sentences :—

"And God spake all these words, saying,

I am the Lord thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage.

Thou shalt have no other gods before me.

Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of any thing that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth :

Thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them : for I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me ;

And shewing mercy unto thousands of them that love me, and keep my commandments.

Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain ; for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain.

Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy.

Six days shalt thou labour, and do all thy work :

But the seventh day is the sabbath of the Lord thy God : in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates :

For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day : wherefore the Lord blessed the sabbath day, and hallowed it.

Honour thy father and thy mother : that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.

Thou shalt not kill.

Thou shalt not commit adultery.

Thou shalt not steal.

Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour.

Thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's wife, nor his manservant, nor his maidservant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor anything that is thy neighbour's.

And all the people saw the thunderings, and the lightnings, and the noise of the trumpet, and the mountain smoking : and when the people saw it, they removed, and stood afar off.

And they said unto Moses, Speak thou with us, and we will hear : but let not God speak with us, lest we die.

And Moses said unto the people, Fear not : for God is come to prove you, and that his fear may be before your faces, that ye sin not.

And the people stood afar off, and Moses drew near unto the thick darkness where God was.

And the Lord said unto Moses, Thus thou shalt say unto the children of Israel, Ye have seen that I have talked with you from heaven.

Ye shall not make with me gods of silver, neither shall ye make unto you gods of gold.

An altar of earth thou shalt make unto me, and shalt sacrifice thereon thy burnt offerings, and thy peace offerings, thy sheep, and thine oxen : in all places where I record my name I will come unto thee, and I will bless thee.

And if thou wilt make me an altar of stone, thou shalt not build it of hewn stone : for if thou lift up thy tool upon it, thou hast polluted it.

Neither shalt thou go up by steps unto mine altar, that thy nakedness be not discovered thereon."—Exod. xx.

"ONE OF THE MOUNTAINS WHICH I WILL TELL THEE OF."

By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard.

The quotation above is from the Lord's instructions to Abraham concerning the journey to a mountain in the land of Moriah, there to offer his only Isaac to God.

The twenty-second chapter of Genesis tells the story of the offering of Isaac and of all the Isaac seed potentially on that sacred mountain described by the Lord as "one of the mountains which I will tell thee of."

What a wonderful mountain is here !

In three days' journey, on foot, at the pace set by the plodding ass, the little party approached and ascended the mountain. It was hard by the city of the Jebusites. The particular place was what later became the threshing-floor bought by David and used for the building of an altar, and the offering of the sacrifice which stayed the plague which was devastating Israel.

This is the first time the mountain is specially brought to our attention in Holy Writ, and in the history of the family and nation of the Lord.

Shall we approach the mountain with the four plodding travellers, Abraham, Isaac, and the two young men ? Shall we listen to the conversation which took place between Abraham, the father, and Isaac his son ? Shall we note the fire and the wood for the sacrifice, and listen to the question : "Behold, the fire and the wood : but where is the lamb for a burnt offering ?" Shall we note the pause which must have followed the question before the answer was given in a voice which anguish rendered uncertain : "My son, God will provide himself a lamb for a burnt offering."

Shall we watch the building of the Altar ? Shall we stand by as the anguished father laid his hand upon the son and bound him ? Shall we note with what tenderness the father took the helpless son in his aged arms and laid him upon the Altar ?

Shall we with clear sight look on while the father Abraham stretched forth his hand, and took the knife to slay his son ?

Who was it, who is it, that was and is still laid upon the Altar as yet a living sacrifice to God ?

It is the son of Abraham, then his only Isaac. But in him is all that seed which should be to God a Kingdom of Priests and an holy nation in the days which were to come, and which should through all the ages then to come and yet to come be God's Priestly Ministers to carry blessing to all the nations of the earth.

Digitized by Google

With hand outstretched the father of Isaac stands, when suddenly THE ANGEL OF THE LORD called unto him out of heaven, and said "Abraham, Abraham," and he said "Here am I."

"And he said, Lay not thine hand upon the lad, neither do thou any thing unto him: for now I know that thou fearest God, seeing thou hast not withheld thy son, thine only son from me."—Gen. xxii, 12.

"And the angel of the Lord called unto Abraham out of heaven the second time,

And said, By myself have I sworn, saith the Lord, for because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son:

That in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore; and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies;

And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obeyed my voice."—Gen. xxii, 15-18.

Once again the scene opens upon the same mountain. This time it is in the reign of David the King.

"And David's heart smote him after that he had numbered the people. And David said unto the Lord, I have sinned greatly in that I have done: and now, I beseech thee, O Lord, take away the iniquity of thy servant; for I have done very foolishly.

For when David was up in the morning, the word of the Lord came unto the prophet Gad, David's seer, saying,

Go and say unto David, Thus saith the Lord, I offer thee three things; choose thee one of them, that I may do it unto thee.

So Gad came to David, and told him, and said unto him, Shall seven years of famine come unto thee in thy land? or wilt thou flee three months before thine enemies, while they pursue thee? or that there be three days' pestilence in thy [illegible] now advise, and see what answer I shall return to him that sent me.

And David said unto Gad, I am in a great strait: let us fall now into the hand of the Lord; for his mercies are great: and let me not fall into the hand of man.

So the Lord sent a pestilence upon Israel from the morning even to the time appointed: and there died of the people from Dan even to Beer-sheba seventy thousand men.

And when the angel stretched out his hand upon Jerusalem to destroy it, the Lord repented him of the evil, and said to the angel that destroyed the people, It is enough: stay now thine hand. And the angel of the Lord was by the threshingplace of Araunah the Jebusite.

And David spake unto the Lord when he saw the angel that smote the people, and said, Lo, I have sinned, and I have done wickedly: but these sheep, what have they done? let thine hand, I pray thee, be against me, and against my father's house.

And Gad came that day to David, and said unto him, Go up, rear an altar unto the Lord in the threshingfloor of Araunah the Jebusite.

And David, according to the saying of Gad, went up as the Lord commanded.

And Araunah looked, and saw the king and his servants coming on toward him: and Araunah went out, and bowed himself before the king on his face upon the ground.

And Araunah said, Wherefore is my lord the king come to his servant? And David said, To buy the threshingfloor of thee, to build an altar unto the Lord, that the plague may be stayed from the people.

And Araunah said unto David, Let my lord the king take and offer up what seemeth good unto him: behold, here be oxen for burnt sacrifice, and threshing instruments and other instruments of the oxen for wood.

All these things did Araunah, as a king, give unto the king. And Araunah said unto the king, The Lord thy God accept thee.

And the king said unto Araunah, Nay; but I will surely buy it of thee at a price: neither will I offer burnt offerings unto the Lord my God of that which doth cost me nothing. So David bought the threshingfloor and the oxen for fifty shekels of silver.

And David built there an altar unto the Lord, and offered burnt offerings and peace offerings. So the Lord was intreated for the land, and the plague was stayed from Israel."—2 Sam. xxiv, 10-25.

And now the greater Father leads the greater Son to the "Mountain which I will tell thee of." This is set forth in the four Gospels.

From these wonderful accounts of the most wonderful accomplishment of all the ages, namely, "the death which He should accomplish at Jerusalem," we take the following quotation:—

"After this, Jesus knowing that all things were now accomplished, that the scripture might be fulfilled, saith, I thirst.

Now there was set a vessel full of vinegar: and they filled a spunge with vinegar, and put it upon hyssop, and put it to his mouth.

When Jesus therefore had received the vinegar, he said, It is finished: and he bowed his head, and gave up the ghost."—St. John xix, 28-30.

Here there was no ram caught in a thicket to take the place of the Son of man. He went to the place called Calvary, hard by the City of Jerusalem. And there He died, the Just for the unjust, that He might become the Redeemer of Israel and the Saviour of the world.

Now as in Isaac there was dedicated to the service of God and of humanity all the seed which should be born of him, so in Christ was lifted up all who believe on Him. To such He said, "If any man would be my disciple, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me."

How great has been that following! How the Cross of our Lord has been multiplied in the self-denying life of His followers; and yet how few proportionately have been the numbers who have thus offered up their bodies "a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is our reasonable service." May God grant that we may be among the number.

What a wonderful spot in the world's geography is this mountain. There we meet at the dedication of Isaac.

THE ANGEL OF THE LORD

There we meet

THE ANGEL OF THE LORD

at the sacrifice of King David.

The Angel of the Lord appeared at the birth of Jesus in Bethlehem and made the glad announcements to the shepherds.

But the Angel of the Lord did not appear at the sacrifice of the Son of man. Was it the consciousness of this which caused the Son of man to cry out of the bitterness of death, "My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

But tragedy is turned to triumph on the first Easter morning. The shadows were still upon the mountain. They were yet deep in the seclusion of the garden where was the rock-hewn tomb which had held the body of our Lord while He lay in death. But now there is a stirring in the garden. Great things and great personalities are astir in and about the tomb. The following tells the story:—

"Now upon the first day of the week, very early in the morning, they came unto the sepulchre, bringing the spices which they had prepared, and certain others with them.

And they found the stone rolled away from the sepulchre.

And they entered in, and found not the body of the Lord Jesus.

And it came to pass, as they were much perplexed thereabout, behold, two men stood by them in shining garments:

And as they were afraid, and bowed down their faces to the earth, they said unto them, Why seek ye the living among the dead?

He is not here, but is risen: remember how he spake unto you when he was yet in Galilee, Saying, The Son of man must be delivered into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again.

And they remembered his words,

And returned from the sepulchre, and told all these things unto the eleven, and to all the rest.

It was Mary Magdalene, and Joanna, and Mary the mother of James, and other women that were with them, which told these things unto the apostles.

And their words seemed to them as idle tales, and they believed them not.

Then arose Peter, and ran unto the sepulchre; and stooping down, he beheld the linen clothes laid by themselves, and departed, wondering in himself at that which was come to pass.

And, behold, two of them went that same day to a village called Emmaus, which was from Jerusalem about threescore furlongs.

And they talked together of all these things which had happened.

And it came to pass, that, while they communed together and reasoned, Jesus himself drew near, and went with them.

But their eyes were holden that they should not know him.

And he said unto them, What manner of communications are these that ye have one to another, as ye walk, and are sad?

And the one of them, whose name was Cleopas, answering said unto him, Art thou only a stranger in Jerusalem, and hast not known the things which are come to pass there in these days?

And he said unto them, What things? And they said unto him, Concerning Jesus of Nazareth, which was a prophet mighty in deed and word before God and all the people:

And how the chief priests and our rulers delivered him to be condemned to death, and have crucified him.

But we trusted that it had been he which should have redeemed Israel: and beside all this, to day is the third day since these things were done.

Yea, and certain women also of our company made us astonished, which were early at the sepulchre;

And when they found not his body, they came, saying, that they had also seen a vision of angels, which said that he was alive.

And certain of them which were with us went to the sepulchre, and found it even so as the women had said: but him they saw not.

Then he said unto them, O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken:

Ought not Christ to have suffered these things and to enter into his glory?

And beginning at Moses and all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning himself.

And they drew nigh unto the village, whither they went: and he made as though he would have gone further.

But they constrained him, saying, Abide with us: for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent. And he went in to tarry with them.

And it came to pass, as he sat at meat with them, he took bread, and blessed it, and brake, and gave to them.

And their eyes were opened, and they knew him; and he vanished out of their sight.

And they said one to another, Did not our heart burn within us, while he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the scriptures?

And they rose up the same hour, and returned to Jerusalem, and found the eleven gathered together, and them that were with them, Saying, The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon.

And they told what things were done in the way, and how he was known of them in breaking of bread.

And as they thus spake, Jesus himself stood in the midst of them, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you.

But they were terrified and affrighted, and supposed that they had seen a spirit.

And he said unto them, Why are ye troubled? and why do thoughts arise in your hearts?

Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself: handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have.

And when he had thus spoken, he shewed them his hands and his feet.

And while they yet believed not for joy, and wondered, he said unto them, Have ye here any meat?

And they gave him a piece of a broiled fish, and of an honeycomb.

And he took it, and did eat before them.

And he said unto them, These are the words which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you, that all things must be fulfilled, which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the psalms, concerning me.

Then opened he their understanding, that they might understand the scriptures,

And said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behoved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day:

And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem.

And ye are witnesses of these things.

And, behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you: but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high.

And he led them out as far as to Bethany, and he lifted up his hands, and blessed them.

And it came to pass, while he blessed them, he was parted from them, and carried up into heaven.

And they worshipped him, and returned to Jerusalem with great joy:

And were continually in the temple, praising and blessing God. Amen."—St. Luke xxiv.

BRITISH HISTORY TRACED FROM EGYPT AND PALESTINE.

By the Rev. L. G. A. Roberts, Commander R.N.

Part III.

Origin of the Danai.

According to Petavius, History of the World, Danaus was the son of Bela, a sojourner in Egypt. His brother was Egyptus. Danaus was informed by an oracle that his brother would slay him; he fled, taking with him his daughters (colonists), and came to Greece three years after the death of Joseph.

This was about 148 years before the Exodus.

Dardanus is said to have built Troy about thirty-four years before the Exodus. Mr. W. E. Gladstone says the Siege of Troy was undertaken by Danai against Dardanai, and these were originally one.

Extracted from Clinton's Fasti Hellenici: "Danaus and his descendants were engrafted on the Pelasgi."

Danaus is placed by the genealogies in the ninth or tenth generation, and by the chronologers 300 years before the Trojan War. Eratosthenes and Apollodorus placed the fall of Troy at B.C. 1183. This date was adopted by Dionysius, Diodorus, Tatian, Clemens, and Eusebius, as well as by the Roman writers generally. The return of the Heraclidæ B.C. 1104. Eratosthenes gives the landing of Danaus in Greece as B.C. 1466. Callimachus gives B.C. 1410. Clinton also gives the following dates: Dardanus, 1383; Pelops, 1283; birth of Hercules 1261, his death 1209; Troy taken 1183; Thessaly occupied 1124; Æolic migration, 1124; migration of Theras, 1074; Ionic, 1044. The Dorians did not come on the scene until about 1103, and their conquests continued to 1044, by which time the Peloponnesus was finally subdued.

Extracted from Bible and Science, pp. 22 and 23 (T. Lauder Brunton): "After the death of Joseph a quarrel arose between the King of Lower Egypt, who demanded from the King of Upper Egypt—a descendant of the regal race of which before the foreign invasion had ruled the country—a valuable spring, which the latter refused to give up. In consequence of this a war broke out, which, after lasting for nearly eighty years, ended in the expulsion of the foreign race and the union of the whole of Egypt under one king. Naturally enough, the new rulers were suspicious of the Hebrews, a people more numerous than themselves, allied in race to the foreign conquerors, and bound to them by ties of gratitude and affection for numerous favours received at their hands.

"To expel them in a body, by open violence, was impossible, and, besides, it would have been ruinous, for they were skilful herdsmen and agriculturists. They had been dwelling a long time in the Delta; they knew what embankments were needed to protect the towns and what canals were necessary to fertilize the country. The people belonging to the conquering race, hitherto penned up within the narrow regions of Upper Egypt, would barely have sufficed to carry on the work, even if they had been so inclined, which apparently they were not. It was, therefore, to some extent necessary to retain the great body of the Israelites in the country, although part of them, it would seem, had left their land along with the remnant of the Hyksos, whom probably they had aided in their struggle with the Egyptians." (The italics are ours.—L.G.A.R.)

This suits admirably with the Scripture references we have given elsewhere, and also the confirmations above enumerated. It opens to our view the means whereby God was preparing the way for His people's future migrations.

Even at the time of Jacob's death the Holy Spirit put into Jacob's mouth the following: "Dan shall judge his people, as one of the tribes of Israel. Dan shall be a serpent by the way, an adder in the path, that biteth the horse's heels, so that his rider shall fall backward. I have waited for thy salvation, O Lord" (Gen. xlix, 16-18). Is there not here a suggestion of Dan's vagaries, his strange wanderings, his sly and careful watching of an opportunity for supplanting the race amongst which he se tles, his assumption of the prerogative power, and his finally awaiting for a salvation such as should be the portion of the whole of Israel. Again, that he should at one time wield the sceptre over Israel. Moses is also given a marvellous insight into the future of this wonderful tribe. "Dan is a lion's whelp; he shall leap from Bashan" (Heb. Shame). Now, this expands the prophecy of Jacob by telling us that Dan should have a royal scion attached to his tribe, and also that he should escape from captivity (to Assyria). In the story we have of the early migrants who arrived in Ireland we are told that these colonists came from Greece, fearing the conquest of Assyria.

Colonel Gawler says: "It is worthy of note that Danaus, who is recorded as landing in Greece from Egypt, was said to be the son of Belus, sometimes spelt Bela, which strongly resembles Bilhah, the name of Jacob's concubine, the mother of Dan" (Gen. xxx, 4-6).

"The Heraclidæ descended from Hercules and a female slave, Jardanus" (Herodotus, Clio, p. 4, Sec. VII). In contradiction to both Herodotus and Diodorus Siculus, Palæphetus de Incredibilitus writes Jordanus. Dan's adventure to the source of the Jordan is the subject of Judges xviii, and these Danites came from the home of Samson, Zorah, and Eshtaol (verse 2 and xiii, 1-25).

The account given in Beloe's edition of Herodotus (1833) as to the probable story of Hercules is most interesting. He shows clearly the reason why the Hercules supposed to be of Tyre was none other than the Samson of Dan. "It has been conjectured by many learned men that Hercules could have been no other than the Israelitish Samson. That this is very probable the reader may be very inclined to think from these, among other reasons (p. 396, Urania, note to ch. lxvii): With the story of Samson the Tyrians might easily become acquainted at Joppa, a seaport belonging to the tribe of Dan; but more especially from those Danites who removed to Laish, in the neighbourhood of Tyre, and who, as Ezekiel tells us, had great commerce with the Tyrians. These Danites came from Zorah and Eshtaol, where Samson was born and lived, and would not fail of promulgating and magnifying the exploits of their own hero. I am aware how rash it is to pronounce a sameness of person from a likeness of certain corresponding circumstances in the action of men, but there are certain particulars so striking, first in the account given of this Tyrian Hercules by Herodotus, and secondly in the ritual prescribed for his worship, that where we can prove nothing by more solid argument conjecture so founded may be permitted to have some weight. The story of Samson will account for the two pillars set up in the Temple of Hercules if we consider them as placed there in commemoration of the greatest of Samson's exploits. The various circumstances which Herodotus makes peculiar to the Tyrian Hercules, however disguised, are all reducible and relative to this last action of Samson. 1. Hercules, being apprehended by the Egyptians, was led in procession as a sacrifice to Jupiter; and the Philistines proclaimed a feast to offer a great sacrifice to Dagon, their god, and to rejoice because Samson was delivered into their hands. 2. Whilst Hercules stood at the altar he remained quiet for a season, and so did Samson when his strength was departed from him. 3. But in a short time Hercules returned to his strength and slew all the Egyptians. Concerning the ritual used in the worship of the Tyrian Hercules, Bochart remarks, there were many things in it not practised elsewhere. Let the reader judge from what follows whether they do not seem borrowed from the Levitical law or grounded upon what the Scriptures relate of Samson. The total disuse of images, the prohibition of swine in sacrifice, the habit of the priest, the embroidered stole, etc., and the naked feet, the strict chastity exacted from him, the fire ever burning on the altar, are all of them precepts which Moses delivered. Why may we not infer that the exclusion of women from the Temple and the shaven head of the priests were intended to brand the treachery of Delilah and to commemorate the loss of Samson's locks? Appian, Arrian and Diodorus Siculus acknowledge these to have been Phœnician rites, and different from any observed among the Greeks; and it is well known that this singularity was a principal point intended by the ritual of Moses."

The last of the Danai came into Greece about the very time of the oppression of Jabin, King of Canaan, when we are told (Judges v, 17) that Dan remained in his ships and Asher in his seaports. This was about B.C. 1285, and Dan's trading with Greece is recorded in Ezekiel xxvii, 19. Euripides and Strabo tell us that "Danaus, having arrived in [Greece] Argos, made a law that those who had borne the name of Pelasgiotæ [throughout Greece] should be called Danai" (Strabo, V, ii, 4). Compare this with Dan's asserting disposition as recorded in Judges xviii, 25, 27-29; also Jacob's prophecy.

"Homer calls the whole of Greece Argos, for he calls all Argives, as he calls them Danai and Achæi" (Strabo, VIII, vi, 5). To revert to Argos, this head of all Greece, the first city of the Danai, it stood with two others, Mycene and Tiryns, the latter of which, standing as it does close to the city of the Danai, might derive its name from Tyre. There is another instance of the kind: the Danaster (Dneister) is sometimes called the Tyras (Herod iv, 51; Strabo, VII, i, 1), and the people there are called Tyritæ, and it is reasonable to infer that from the intimate home relations of the people of Tyre with the Danites of Israel the names of Tyre and Dan were used indiscriminately.

Those who went forth from Argos and subdued other parts of Greece are spoke of as Heraclidæ, or the descendants of Hercules. For a while, during the confusion of the Trojan War, they were driven northward out of the Peloponnesus, of which some years after they made a reconquest, which was called "the return of the descendants of Hercules" (see Muller's History of the Dorians). Argoz also, from ragoz, to move, is Hebrew for a portable chest, "a name which might well symbolize trade or commerce (so Argosy, a merchant ship)" (Gawler).

Our readers should not forget that the Siege of Troy was about 100 years after Samson's time.

From these are the Lacedæmonians whose capital was Sparta. Thus Agamemnon, who was the chosen commander-in-chief of all the Greeks proceeding to the Siege of Troy, was King of Argos and Mycene, and his brother Melenaus was King of Sparta, the capital of Lacedæmon.

Herodotus (iv, 147) calls Theras, regent of Lacedæmon, a Cadmæan and Phœnician. But with this confused assignment of Egyptians, and Phœnician origin, which admirably suits the Israelites, we have this prominent fact, that a people called Danai arrived in Argos and extended their rule to all Greece, and the Lacedæmonians, whether Argives or Heraclidæ, were the most notable branch from this place.

ABDASHERAH, AZIRU AND THE ABIRI.—VI.

By Professor Edward Odlum, M.A., B.Sc.

In Tablet 102 B, p. 140, Adonizedek writes, "To the king my lord," and says, "They (the Abiri) have prevailed, they have taken (the fortress of Jericho), they who have gathered against the king of kings (of Egypt), which Adonizedek has explained to the king his lord. Behold, as to me, my father is not, and my army is not. The tribe that has ground me in this place is very rebellious to the king; the same is struggling with me for the house of my father . . . Why should you tremble before the chief of the Abiri (Hebrews), and the rulers fear the end?"

Reading this, one envisions Adonizedek and any of his chiefs in Jerusalem looking most anxiously towards besieged Jericho. He has learned of the daily circuitous march of the Israelites around the walls of Jericho, and finally of the fall of these walls to the blowing of trumpets. All so new, so strange, so unexpected, and so irresistible! Adonizedek is terrified at the coming danger.

In the above letter Adonizedek says, "They have destroyed all the rulers. There is no ruler now, O king my lord . . . The Abiri (Hebrew) chiefs plunder all the king's lands. Since the chiefs of the Egyptian soldiers (pitati) have gone away, quitting the lands this year, O king my lord, and since there is no chief of the Egyptian soldiers, there is ruin to the lands of the king my lord."

A remarkable series of statements! It is suggestive, this act of running away on the part of the Egyptian chiefs from the garrisoned cities of Canaan as the Abiri approach.

We must bear in mind that the cities of Canaan in the time of Joshua's invasion of the Promised Land belonged to Egypt and were garrisoned by Egyptian officers and soldiers. Why should the chiefs or officers flee these cities on the approach of the Abiri, or Habiri? Some deep-seated cause for this cowardice! These Egyptian officers had full knowledge of Moses, the Red Sea passage, the Sinai wonder, the defeat of the Amalekites, the Pillar of cloud and fire, the destruction of the Amorites, the miraculous passage over the Jordan, and the mysterious fall of the walls of Jericho. No wonder, then, that these well-informed officers feared and fled.

Furthermore, they knew well that these Abiri and their leaders claimed that this land had been given to the forefathers of these conquering Abiri, viz., to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and to their seed for ever; and that the God of Heaven had promised to be with His people as they undertook the conquest and possession of the land.

Yes, yes! The Egyptian officers knew, believed, feared and fled. This is a most informing and thrilling series of letters which amply substantiate and multiply the details of the Bible story.

The discovery of these Tablets in 1887 by a peasant woman was a world event, one of the most important in the enterprises of archæology.

In Tablet 104 B, p. 145, Adonizedek shows that the Abiri have approached Canaan from the way of Edom. He says, "They have fought against me as far as the lands of Seir (Seeri), as far as the city Givti Kermil (Gibeah of Carmel).

He then calls upon the king of Egypt "to collect a fleet in the midst of the sea and advance against the chieftains of the Hebrews."

Tablet 103 B, p. 147, tells that the Abiri had attacked Gezer, Ascalon and Lachish, and taken these cities as their inheritance and homes.

"Corn and oil and all things this race has altogether gathered."

Adonizedek complains that he has no followers:—"Behold the land of the city of Uru-sa-lim (Jerusalem) no man is my subject. No people is subject to me."

He goes on to say, "The chiefs are sorcerers."

He also refers to the invaders and their leaders as from the land of Cush or (Casi), which would indicate Upper Egypt as their primary home and starting-place.

In Letter 199 B, p. 151, we read from Adonizedek these words, "And truly we are leaving the city of Jerusalem. The chiefs of the garrison have left."

In 101 B, p. 155, Suyardata, chief of Keilah, says of his great enemy, "Thirty temples of the gods he has put to shame. I am left alone. Mightily he has fought . . . Mighty is he who has fought against Suyardata."

Dusratta, Yankhamu, Adonizedek, Suyardata, Aziru, Abdasherah, Zimridi, Ribadda, Abimelec, Dagantacala, Biridia, Labaya, etc., etc., were all contemporaries.

Aziru was active 20 years after the death of Thothmes IV, i.e., in the time of Amenophis III and Amenophis IV.

It is important to recall the fact that King Solomon received the city of Gezer from the king of Egypt as a dower when he married an Egyptian princess, this showing that Egypt held on to a part of Philistia, and perhaps Canaan, for hundreds of years from the time of Joshua to Solomon.

Of course we must remember that a good part of Canaan and Philistia was conquered by Rameses II.

Before closing, we should say that while the Israelites were waging war in Canaan for many years, there were other wars carried on in the north by Hittites, Amorites, Phœnicians and others. But between the two areas of these irregular struggles there was a region where enemies of one pair of contestants fought one of the other two belligerents. This will make clear some of the Tablets which seem to be contrary to fact.

We find Aziru, the son of Abdasherah, operating in the north as well as in the south. He seems to have fought and conquered Phœnician cities, as well as others farther south on or near the seacoast, and also other cities in Canaan. This line of action can be explained by considering that this noted warrior, co-operating with his father, had a band of valiant soldiers who could be used in any place where quick and strategic action was needed to help forward the great invading movement looking toward the conquest of the Promised Land.

PROFESSOR ODLUM'S ARTICLES ON "ABDASHERAH, AZIRU AND THE ABIRI."

Professor Odlum explains his reading of these transcripts of Tel-el-Amarna Tablets furnished by him in the seven articles—the last of which will appear in the next issue.

It is Professor Odlum's judgment that the name Abdasherah is the Biblical Joshua; that the Abiri are the Hebrews under

Digitized by Google

Joshua, and that Aziru and the other brothers were sons of Joshua.

Professor Odlum reads the languages in the original, and is well qualified to give judgment in this matter.

The interest of these articles is that we are enabled to read letters concerning the Joshua campaign in Palestine, written by kings and ministers of State, whose cities were being attacked and whose governments were being swept away by the Hebrews.

The Tablets from which translations were made, which were written first-hand by the men who were being overcome by Joshua, are now in the Museums, listed and numbered for everyone to see, and for all to read who take the trouble to master the language.

These Tablets are contemporaneous with the date covered by the Book of Joshua and, provided the fact be established that they refer to Joshua and his Hebrews, they give a wonderful historic parallel and confirmation to the Bible account of the entrance of the Hebrews into Palestine.

We owe to Colonel Condor and to Professor Odlum a debt of gratitude for having provided for us such an interesting and valuable presentation. Such work as this is done only after years of arduous preparation in the mastery of the language, and of hours of literary application in preparing such valuable documents as the above articles which Professor Odlum has provided for us. THE EDITOR.

ADDRESS GIVEN BY E. HAYNES AT HEADQUARTERS.

ISRAEL versus EDOM.

IT is essential we should keep clearly in our minds the modern names of these two nations, viz., Britain and Turkey, or the Ottoman Empire, known by that name from the end of the thirteenth century, when Osman extended his dominions over a portion of Eastern Europe and Western Asia, and thus formed one mighty Empire.

Some of the characteristics of their progenitor, Esau, still linger with the Turks.

Esau was so called because he was red. Red is the national colour of the Turk. They carry a red flag, and until the last few years the men always wore the red tarboosh.

It was said to Esau, "By thy sword shalt thou live." The sword is still the Turks' national weapon, and when they chose a new Sultan he was always acclaimed by the waving of swords over his head, he was never crowned as other monarchs are.

The feud between Israel and Edom dates from the days of Isaac, when the Patriarch bestowed the birthright blessing upon his younger son Jacob, and thus set aside the claim of Esau the elder. This choice has often puzzled students of the Bible, but no mistake was made. The birthright blessing, being essentially spiritual, and carrying with it, as it did, the responsibility of Covenant relationship with the Almighty Himself, was a matter far beyond the limits of Esau's character. He could not receive, far less profit by, a blessing so wholly spiritual in its nature. We are told he was a "profane person," or, more literally translated, a worldly-minded man (we cannot blame him over much, there are many such with us to-day), a man satisfied with the things of time and sense, with the pleasures of the chase and of the table.

The Great Covenant-keeping God could not enter into Covenant relationship with one so incapable of appreciating or living up to the responsibility such a position entailed. Some then ask, "But was Jacob any more hopeful as a candidate for such a high honour?" Yes, he was, because the Divine Searcher of all hearts knew that, deep down in the inmost recesses of Jacob's soul, there existed the Divine faculty, which, once the dross had been purged away in the fires of fierce affliction, would enable him to develop into "Israel the Prince with God." It is a mistake to imagine Jacob received the benefits of future inheritance immediately. As a matter of fact, his self-seeking and unworthy attempt to forestall the designs of the Almighty postponed the realization of his hopes for at least twenty years. Jacob did not enter into the enjoyment of his heritage until he had fully qualified for it, not until after that mysterious conflict with the Divine, when Jacob found his soul, and a broken and crippled man emerged from the contest, physically crippled, but a "Power with and through God."

We remember how for a time the breach between the brothers was healed, but, as generations passed away, we find the strife again breaks out between the descendants of each.

In Moses' time Edom refused the Children of Israel permission to cross their territory on their march towards the Promised Land. The answer to a peaceful embassage was that "the king of Edom came out against them with much people."

King David, being a strong and warlike king, subdued Edom, and placed garrisons in their cities, thus fulfilling Isaac's words, "Thou shalt serve thy brother," but the conclusion of the prophecy, "Thou shalt break his yoke from off thy neck," was also fulfilled; for in the time of Jehoram, king of Judah, Edom rebelled and freed themselves, and chose a king of their own to rule over them.

The prophet Obadiah also relates how in the time of the invasion of Judah by Nebuchadnezzar's army certain of the Jewish fugitives who endeavoured to save their lives by flight into the rocky and desert districts of Edom were waylaid and betrayed again into the hands of the Babylonian invaders by the Edomites, who sided with Judah's foes. (Obadiah 10-14.)

In the time of their exile Judah was again plotted against by Haman, the Agagite (a descendant of Esau). It was owing to the courage of Queen Esther, who, having begged the prayers of her people, risked the wrath of the king by entering his presence uninvited, that Haman became the victim of his own plot. Another instance, that of Herod (the Greek form of Edom) and his cruel massacre of the Innocents of Bethlehem, in the vain hope he would thus end the life of the Infant King of Israel.

As centuries passed both Israel and Edom sank their differences, Israel was unconscious of her identity, the Ottoman Empire possessed the Holy Land, and old traditions were lost sight of. The Crusades were started by certain of the European Princes with the idea of delivering Jerusalem from the Mohammedans, but for two reasons these Crusades were unsuccessful. First, the time was not yet when Jerusalem should be delivered. Secondly, the nations engaged were not only Israel, and the prophecy had long been recorded that Edom should meet her doom by the hand of Israel. (Obadiah 17-21 ; Ezekiel xxv, 14.)

In 1915 both Britain and France were anxious to keep Turkey out of the war, there seemed no reason why she should take part at all. But Israel's old enemy Assyria, the Prussian head and mainspring of the whole German army, had other designs.

The pressure on her Western Front was growing too heavy to be pleasant ; " the contemptible little Army " had proved they were not so easily beaten as their foes had hoped. Reinforcements were arriving from overseas, there was even talk of the possibility of America joining in. Germany, therefore, looked round for a neutral Power likely to listen to a proposal to come in on her side, open to a bribe to that end. What nation more likely than Turkey ? The suggestion was that, in order to relieve the pressure on the Western Front, Turkey should attack the Suez Canal, and thus split up Britain's forces and seize the important channel of communication between Britain and her two most important Mohammedan Dependencies. " Would it not indeed be a glorious Holy War, and deliver their co-religionists from the power of the Infidel ? " Now we know the Turks are great fatalists ; death cannot touch them until their hour is come, no matter what danger they may rush into, and death in a Holy War is a sure passport to the " Realms of bliss."

It was not wonderful, therefore, that the younger section of the Turkish Council were filled with enthusiasm and burning zeal at such a prospect, and when the older Councillors voted against declaring war upon Britain, they were driven out of the Council chamber and refused any further say in the matter by the younger men, headed by Talaat Bey. It is interesting to note that, in foretelling the doom of Edom, the prophet foresees the destruction of wisdom. (Obadiah 8.) " Shall I not destroy the wise men out of Edom ? " Thus in an evil hour for herself, Turkey, unconscious of what prophecy against herself she was fulfilling, declared war upon Britain. She was soon to experience the futility of putting her trust in German promises ; Obadiah had also foretold she would be deceived (verse 7) by her confederates.

No sooner was Turkey fairly embroiled in war with Britain than Germany left her very much to her own devices ; her assistance was negligible ; she had attained her purpose ; her business on the Western Front was too pressing to allow her to give much consideration to her dupe. We still remember that the first plan of campaign on Britain's part was not successful. Ships were ordered to pass up the narrow Straits of the Dardanelles to attack Constantinople, but it was soon discovered this attempt would prove too costly. As landing parties disembarked at Suvla Bay they were shot down by well-hidden foes, and General Sir Charles Monro therefore ordered the evacuation of Gallipoli. Again we refer to the writings of the old prophet, and we read how he describes the customs of those of Edom, the Horites, who were a people so agile and hardy they could climb the steepest cliffs and hide themselves in the caves that were dotted all over the sheer face of the rocks and steep hillsides, and had no fear of any enemy discovering them. (Obadiah 3, 4.) This was what happened at Suvla Bay.

But the God of Israel overrules the blunders and the mistakes His people make in order to carry out in the end His Divine purposes. This attack and attempt on Turkey's part to prevent Britain reaching Constantinople occupied Turkey's full attention, and she was not able to carry out the first part of her proposed programme—to seize the Suez Canal. By the time she contemplated this step it was already too late. Constantinople had been taken. British warships were in the port of the Golden Horn, the Ottoman Empire had crashed. Then revolution broke out, the people rebelled against and dethroned the Sultan, who, in fear of his life, fled for protection to one of the British warships in the Bay. Had not the Almighty God of Jacob Himself brought them down ? (Obadiah 4.)

We know what an important part the aeroplanes played in the Great War. To the Turk they were a new and very terrifying danger.

The campaign had spread to the Holy Land itself, and Israel and Edom had come to grips in old scenes of conflict, and no foreign ally on either side took any part in this final settlement between Israel and Edom. Ishmael, the descendant of Abraham, now known as the Arab, certainly rendered signal service in Arabia under the leadership of Colonel Lawrence, but neither French nor Italian forces entered into this campaign. We are told that when the Turks saw the British forces advancing over the heights of Mount Gerizoni, they fled down the opposite slopes of Mount Ebal, but they could not effectually hide themselves owing to the aeroplanes hovering above, which could discover and afterwards report their haunts to the General, and thus give warning that, although apparently safe, such and such ravines, or mountain passes, were in reality alive with Turks in hidden ambush. Did not Obadiah remark in his 6th verse that the secret things of Edom would be discovered ?

The time came in due course when Lord Allenby and his Generals must decide upon the best method of delivering Jerusalem.

Without a single shot or shell having been fired upon the Holy City, the British forces entered Jerusalem, Lord Allenby walking at their head as the deliverer and not the conqueror. They found the city unharmed and the inhabitants safe from molestation.

The Turk retreated and the flag of the Union of Jacob was soon floating over the Mount of Olives.

At Easter time Jerusalem is very full of visitors, British and American, and everyone is asked to bring flowers which, after the service, are laid out so that every grave in that cemetery has its own quota of loving remembrance. The paths are all hedged in with rosemary (" Rosemary for remembrance "), and the whole garden of sleep is kept in beautiful order. As soon as the last notes of " The Last Post " and " The Réveillé " have died away at the conclusion of the service, baskets and trays full of beautiful spring flowers are distributed to willing helpers, and a floral tribute is placed upon every grave. Thus on Easter morning that hill slope is ablaze with the beauty and glow of the wonderfully rich and beauteous flowers of the Holy Land, a fitting symbol surely of the re-entrance into life, after the sleep of death, on that great day, when the feet of the Returning King will stand upon Mount Olivet, and the sleepers will awake and will join in the welcome given to their Victorious Lord.

" Even so, come, Lord Jesus, come quickly."

BRITISH-ISRAEL FACTS NOT FANCIES.—XI.

By Major-General C. A. Hadfield.

The Escape of Zedekiah's Daughters and the Throne of David.

Although King Zedekiah was the last King of Judah, the Bible records the escape of the king's daughters, under the care of the Prophet Jeremiah accompanied by the Scribe Baruch. In the Book of Jeremiah we are given a lesson for our guidance. First of all foretelling the move to a strange land : " a land which thou knowest not " (Jer. xv, 14). Then we are given the account of Ishmael carrying away captive all the residue who were in Mizpah, " even king's daughters," and then, in chapter xliii, 6-7 : " even men and women and children, and the king's daughters . . . and Jeremiah the prophet, and Baruch the son of Neriah, so they came into the land of Egypt." There the Bible leaves the history, but there is nothing recorded of Jeremiah's death. As the prophet had a mission to fulfil God's appointed mission would not fail to be accomplished in some manner.

It was (we are told) by an act of disobedience that the royal household was taken away to Egypt. " So they came into the land of Egypt, for they obeyed not the voice of the Lord " (Jer. xliii, 7). They were commanded to leave : " For I will punish them that dwell in the land of Egypt " ! They were commanded to go to the North and West to Tarshish : " And I will set a sign among them, and I will send those that escape of them, unto the Nations, to Tarshish, Pul and Lud, that draw the bow, to Tubal and Javan, to the isles afar off, they have not heard My fame, neither have seen My glory : and they shall declare My glory among the Gentiles " (Isa. lxvi, 19). " To Tarshish and to the Isles afar off ! "

If we turn now to secular history, we read that in 585 B.C. —which would be just after Jeremiah's journey from Palestine to Egypt—an account of the arrival in Ireland of a great prophet, accompanied by a princess, and a man, Simon Brug (Baruch), is recorded in the ancient Irish MSS., still preserved in Dublin.

Thus, taking up the ancient Irish history—or legends—in conjunction with Biblical history, which leaves Jeremiah as shown, it becomes a very significant story ; because, with the assistance of the seafaring tribe of Dan, it was feasible for the royal party to have journeyed to Ireland. Then we have the story of the marriage of King Eochaid-Heremon to a royal princess from Egypt, and preserving the line of royal descent from Zedekiah to our present King. Zedekiah himself had been—with his sons—slain, leaving no male heirs, so the throne could be perpetuated through the female line, as no doubt it has been.

This possibly may be the interpretation of Ezekiel xvii of the riddle, in parable form, to Israel of a great eagle cropping off the highest branch of the cedar of Lebanon, " he cropped off the top of his young twigs." " Thus saith the Lord God, I will also take of the highest branch of the high cedar and will set it, I will crop off from the top of his young twigs a tender one, and will plant it upon an high mountain and eminent. . . ."

Zedekiah's daughter would here represent the " tender one " cropped off from the royal house, and safeguarded, by Divine will, to a place of safety (Ireland), to there preserve the throne of David, which was ordained to be an " everlasting throne," never to be destroyed.

It was the mission of Jeremiah to rehabilitate the royal house : " See I have this day set thee over the nations, and over the kingdoms, to root out, and to pull down, to build, and to plant " (Jer. i, 10). This was not to be done in Jerusalem, for Jeremiah was removed from Judea to Egypt, so his mission was elsewhere. We learn from chapter xliv that a small number " shall escape." It was open to Jeremiah to take ship with the Danites—the ships of Dan traded in tin and other things. Thus in Ireland it was possible the seed of David could " take root," and " Ezekiel's riddle can be thus solved." The " tender twigs " were Zedekiah's daughters, one of the twigs was planted by the great waters in a land of traffic. [See " The Lost Ten Tribes," by Rev. Dr. J. Wild, of America.]

The escaping may very likely be of Jeremiah and the king's daughters to Ireland. Dr. Wild goes on to relate how Jeremiah did plant and build a throne, a college, and a religion—Ezekiel prophesied there would be three overturnings of the throne : " I will overturn, overturn, overturn it, and it shall be no more until He comes Whose right it is, and I will give it to Him." Turn to history, the throne was turned over three times, from Jerusalem to Ireland, from Ireland to Scotland, from—or through—Scotland to England. This throne can never be " turned over " again, for Jerusalem is now incorporated into the British Empire, as Dr. Wild, writing in 1880, predicted that, in fulfilment of Scripture, it must be !

The throne, religion, and education, established by the prophet have ever kept together. It is a pity more men will not interpret the Bible by the rules of common sense. It is written literally—why not read it so ?

Remember God never promised to find the Jews another country ; Palestine is specially reserved for them, under the protection of Israel, when they shall dwell together and appoint one head over them ; for the Israelites, according to Jer. iii, 14, are only to return to Palestine representatively. There should be no mistake on this point.

God declares Israel to be " His inheritance," and " the people that He formed for Himself." And to be the most powerful and prolific people on the face of the earth, to be " as the sand of the sea," " as the stars of Heaven." " I have sworn unto David, thy seed will I establish for ever, and build up thy throne to all generations." (Psa. lxxxix, 3-4.)

It is specially significant that the Old Testament does not record the death of Jeremiah, nor anything further after his escape from Judea to Egypt in charge of the king's daughters ! " Oxonian," in his work " Israel's Wanderings," remarks : " One thing is certain, that the line of sovereigns descended from Eochaid and Tephi has continued to the present day, i.e., through the early Scots Kings to the present Royal House of Britain. In this way God's promise to perpetuate the sceptre of David's family would be fulfilled: 'Thus saith the Lord, David shall never want a man to sit upon the throne of the House of Israel.' Between Zedekiah and Christ was an interval of 580 years. Where was the fulfilment of this prophecy during all that time if the Davidic succession over Israel did not go on consecutively from Zedekiah?"

It would be difficult to believe that it is merely a "coincidence" that we have the Lion of Judah emblazoned with the young lions on our Royal Standard together with the Harp of David; or that our land should be designated "Great" Britain, or be nicknamed "John Bull."

Again, it is not at all likely that after God had guaranteed the safety of Jeremiah with his "Remnant" (Jer. xv, 11, 14), that a sudden end should befall the party. But it points rather to God guiding the prophet to a new land. It is another case of the sudden closing of God's history of Jeremiah—just as God closed Israel's history.

Therefore where they disappear from Sacred History we may well follow them by secular History, and by such means we trace both to the British Isles. Probably the Tomb of Tara if investigated will clear up much of what is now obscure. We may rest assured that Israel never became extinct, nor Jeremiah left to die in Egypt; for both had their missions to fulfil.

OUR GREAT ADVANCE.

STUDY CIRCLES.

By J. J. Morey.

We are now able to announce definitely that the Rev. W. Andrew Sinden will conduct a Study Circle at Headquarters, commencing on Wednesday, April 23rd, at 6 p.m.

The course will consist of eleven lectures or studies dealing with Dr. Llewellyn Thomas' fine book, "God and My Birthright."

Students will provide themselves with copies of the book, special terms for the purchase of which are offered by the Covenant Publishing Co., Ltd., by easy payments if desired.

Mr. Sinden has prepared a series of study notes by which students will be able to follow the lectures, and use for private study afterwards.

All intending students are requested to give in their names at the Bookroom without delay, or by letter to the Secretary-General.

It is quite possible that Mr. Sinden's notes may be printed, and thus be made available for use by other Study Circles in the country.

Some Circle leaders have prepared a series of studies of their own, dealing with our subject in their own way. Smaller pamphlets may be used for this purpose, with the Bible itself as the principal text-book.

We shall be pleased to advise as to any suggested plan submitted to us.

We are anxious that all difficulties may be met, and trust that any interested readers will feel themselves free to suggest any method they feel most suited to their circumstances.

We are grateful for the growing enthusiasm in this Movement, and trust that all Branches will give the proposal their special consideration. We are hoping to gain valuable experience from the Headquarters' Study Circle which will in due course be utilized for the benefit of all.

CHILDREN OF LIGHT.

By E. M. Foster.

Except we be converted and become as little children we cannot hope to enter the Kingdom of Heaven. We must read the Word of God as a child would, and indeed the Bible is written in just such a way as to appeal to children. The Call to the nation in Abraham and Isaac; the thrilling experiences of the Israelites in Egypt, the Wilderness, and Canaan; and the accounts of such "mighty men of valour" as Moses, Joshua, Gideon and David awaken boys' and girls' keen interest. Are not some of the Truths propounded in riddles? Take, for instance, the "Tender Twig" of Ezekiel. And the parables too are about the very things children love—the birds, the lambs, the flowers. In the Bible the child will find all his soul needs and craves.

Once more the Serpent has entered the child's Paradise. He makes his evil ways known through the Press and mostly even through the voice from the pulpit. He calls himself the Higher Critic. Satan has accumulated the experience of thousands of years' dealing with frail mankind, and this last offensive of Antichrist is the most devilishly clever of all. As we know, he was a liar from the beginning, and this falsehood is about the blackest. It is this, that we Christians are told we can actually keep our faith and hold on God while at the same time disbelieving the Bible and the doctrines of the Creeds. The faith of man is often weak, and this concession to so-called scientific thought is a tremendous temptation. It has the appearance of making Christianity so simple. What really happens if he does take up Modernism, as it is styled, is that he is led into the very abyss of despair and disillusion. In vain he tries to compensate his soul with art or science. Profane learning can never dethrone religious truth. And he knows it. Yet in spite of this, while he is still under the thrall of Antichrist, he cannot get back to the old beliefs, much as he longs for them. He is about as near to the state of perdition as we care to imagine.

Unless we bring forward our great counter-offensive to Satan's attack many thousands will be numbered among the goats. We must show up the falsity of the Modernist position, and nothing serves our purpose so well as British-Israel teaching. Now is the time to resist these onslaughts and prove we are indeed children of Light. So many seem half afraid to declare what they believe. Therefore, no longer concealing our candle under a bushel, let us as a nation march out on to open ground and proclaim the literal truth of the Inspired Word.

NOTICE.

By special request there will be a Secretary-General's Round Table Conference at H.Q. on Tuesday, April 22nd. The proceedings will begin with tea at 4 p.m., after which addresses will be given and written questions answered. The occasion will also be one of leave-taking of the Rev. Pascoe Goard, who sails on the following day for the U.S.A. and Canada. for the Convention at Detroit and the Conference at Winnipeg.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

WE wish all our readers a Happy Easter with all the blessing the Holy Season can bring. May we suggest that our friends may like to send us an Easter thanksgiving offering in relation to the appeal for help which appeared in our issue of March 22nd ?

Last week was a very busy time at Headquarters ; the Executive Committee met on Monday, and the Council on Tuesday, and both transacted much business. The Annual Meeting of members and associates was held on Wednesday, when the Annual Report and Financial Statements for 1929 were presented and adopted, our President, Major J. Knowles, presiding each day. Four public meetings were held on Wednesday and Thursday with large audiences. Impressive and convincing addresses were given by the Revs. Pascoe Goard, Chas. Cooper, J. J. Whitehouse, Messrs. John Leech, J. J. Morey and George R. Gair. The President and the Secretary-General presided.

At Headquarters, on Wednesday afternoon next, at 3 o'clock, Mr. John Leech will continue his addresses on " Prophecy." On Thursday evening, at 8, the Rev. T. Sparshott Johnson, M.A., will be the speaker, on " The Faith of Our Fathers."

* * *

On April 28th, 29th and 30th, Mr. John Leech and Mr. Herbert Garrison will give addresses in the Hove Town Hall, each afternoon at 3 o'clock. In the evenings of the same dates Mr. Garrison will give three Lantern Lectures in the Robertson Hall, Brighton. Fuller particulars will be given in the next issue.

* * *

Mr. John Leech recently addressed a meeting at Midhurst on " The British Empire Foretold in Prophecy." The Rev. F. G. Copeland presided.

North Vancouver, British Columbia, is in the forefront in the matter of broadcasting British-Israel teaching. Nearly fifty lectures of thirty minutes each have been given by Mr. Percy King, resulting in the receipt of many letters weekly, the writers of which are sent a copy of the Special Number of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE and other literature. Letters arrive from such distances as Alberta, Saskatchewan and Southern California. So spreads the glorious news. Unfortunately, here in England we are unable to broadcast owing to the attitude of the B.B.C.

Two interesting lectures were given for the Southport Branch on April 7th by Mr. J. H. Brenchley, taking for his subjects " The Coronation of the King " and " The Potter, the Clay, and the Earthen Vessel." Those presiding were Mrs. Illingworth and Mr. W. H. Webb.

We are often greatly cheered by the tokens of love and sacrifice we receive from devoted friends of the Cause. Quite recently a poor woman living in the almshouses of her Surrey town handed in her Pyramid Collecting Box, and when opened it was found to contain the handsome sum of £2 2s. 9d. And this was after six months' effort only. She had acquired most of this sum by making and selling sweets, and is glad to show her gratitude in this manner for the help and comfort she has received from our teaching.

We are sure that He Who long ago appreciated the sacrificial act of a woman disciple would say again, " She hath done what she could."

Have you read " Favouritism," a little pamphlet published by the Covenant Publishing Company, price 3d. ?

Critics of the British-Israel position often charge us with claiming that Britain is a specially favoured nation. Great Britain is a favoured nation in a sense, but not in the way our critics mean.

God is no respecter of persons. There is a difference between being " favoured " and " favourite."

The pamphlet " Favouritism " is the clearest and most comprehensive statement yet brought forward marking this important distinction. The wonderful doctrine of National Redemption is set forth in a new light and shown to be the basis for defence against hostile criticism along these lines. No British-Israel student should fail to read this pamphlet. It should find a place in every library and every Study Circle.

W. T. F. Jarrold, Esq., J.P., formerly Sheriff of Norwich, writes :—

" You are to be congratulated on the seven meetings held in Norwich last month. You had gatherings of very thoughtful people who, I am sure, will spread British-Israel Truth among their friends, and I feel certain that the way has been paved for still greater success on a return visit. I know quite a number have been greatly helped and convinced by the most earnest addresses delivered."

Miss Mabel Harbour addressed the " Happy Hour Club " at Winnipeg on March 11th, on " The Royal Standard," and request was made for a second talk dealing with " The Union Jack."

Mr. Lawrence Muir delivered a powerful address at a public meeting at Winnipeg on March 18th, on " The Seven Feasts of Jehovah," dealing with the Second Coming of Christ.

Arrangements for the Dominion Convention, to be held in Winnipeg on May 14th, 15th and 16th, are proceeding apace. Donations are desired and should be sent to the Treasurer, Mr. John Trowell, 519, Sprague Street, Winnipeg. Intending visitors from out-of-town are asked to notify the Secretary at Box 2004, Winnipeg.

W. S. G. writes: "I have been intensely interested in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER. The Old Testament is now appearing to me in a newer light. I intend to seriously follow your teaching. I have often pondered over the wonderful Empire we possess. . . . The light is dawning, and I am beginning to see that there is a wonderful purpose behind it all—and that is God's purpose."

A meeting has been arranged for Edgware, in the St. Lawrence Hall, Whitchurch Lane, Edgware, on April 30th, when the Rev. T. Sparshott Johnson, M.A., will speak on "The Crisis in Church and State, and the only Way Out." Will all adherents and readers in Edgware and District please give their support in all ways possible, and write to Headquarters, that their names and addresses may be handed to the local workers.

Word has been received of the death in Vancouver of a former clergyman of the diocese, the Rev. Gilbert Cook. After taking a course in St. John's College, he was ordained by the late Archbishop Machray in 1868. Mr. Cook was placed in charge of one of the C.M.S. stations. He served subsequently at various points—St. Peter's, Dynevor, and on Lake Manitoba, and last of all at Touchwood Hills, which is now in the Diocese of Qu'Appelle. Mr. Cook had reached the ripe age of eighty-nine years, and when a telegram came requesting the Archbishop to inform some of his former friends of his demise the two friends whom he informed were Hon. Collin Inkster, who is making for his eighty-seventh birthday, and the other the Rev. George Bruce, a brother-in-law, who is in his ninety-second year. That speaks well for the longevity of the men of those days. Mr. Cook, since retiring from active work, has resided on the Pacific Coast, where he and his wife did a great deal of useful work among the Chinese population of both Victoria and Vancouver. For the last years of his life he rejoiced in being a firm believer in British-Israel Truth.

Mr. P. W. Thompson, M.A., writes:—

"In the last chapter of 'Israel in Prophecy and History,' I have endeavoured to say something about the resurgence of agriculture in Great Britain in the 18th century, with its consequent effect in increasing the health and lowering the death-rate in the country, thus bringing about the vast increase in the population which was foretold for Joseph in the latter days.

In support of my thesis I brought forward quotations from Wesley and other sources. And now, on re-reading, after many years, that charming old classic, White's 'Selborne,' I have come across a passage which is so apposite that I am going to ask you to reproduce it in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE. It bears date, 8th January, 1778, and it may be noted that my quotation from Wesley was written ten years later. White writes:—

'As to the produce of a garden, every middle-aged person of observation may perceive, within his own memory, both in town and country, how vastly the consumption of vegetables is increased. Green stalls in cities now support multitudes in a comfortable state, while gardeners get fortunes. Every decent labourer also has his garden, which is half his support, as well as his delight, and common farmers provide plenty of beans, peas and greens for their hinds to eat with their bacon; and those few that do not are despised for their sordid parsimony and looked upon as regardless of the welfare of their dependents. Potatoes have prevailed in this little district by means of premiums within these twenty years only; and are much esteemed here now by the poor, who would scarce have ventured to taste them in the last reign.'"

THE MOUNTAIN PEAKS OF THE PENTATEUCH RANGE.—II.

By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard.

We have seen the mountain peaks of the Pentateuch range which mark :—

(a) God's relationship to the material Universe.
(b) God's relationship to the Adamic family.
(c) God's established household in the earth, and His relationship to it.
(d) God's Kingdom established in the earth with Himself as the King thereof.

We now proceed to consider the mountain peak which marks the organization of the worship of God in the Kingdom.

In the Book of Exodus, which we last considered, the Tabernacle of God was erected. It is what the Psalmist called synonymously the Pavilion of the Lord and the Tabernacle of the Lord. "He shall hide me in His pavilion, in the secret of His tabernacle shall He hide me."

The mountain peak of the Book of Leviticus is the consecration of the Sons of Aaron to be the sacred Order of Priests to minister IN HOLY THINGS before the Lord.

The great service of consecration is portrayed in the eighth chapter of Leviticus, from which we quote the following :—

"And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

Take Aaron and his sons with him, and the garments, and the anointing oil, and a bullock for the sin offering, and two rams, and a basket of unleavened bread ;

And gather thou all the congregation together unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

And Moses did as the Lord commanded him ; and the assembly was gathered together unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

And Moses said unto the congregation, This is the thing which the Lord commanded to be done.

And Moses brought Aaron and his sons, and washed them with water.

And he put upon him the coat, and girded him with the girdle, and clothed him with the robe, and put the ephod upon him, and he girded him with the curious girdle of the ephod, and bound it unto him therewith.

And he put the breastplate upon him : also he put in the breastplate the Urim and the Thummim.

And he put the mitre upon his head ; also upon the mitre, even upon his forefront, did he put the golden plate, the holy crown ; as the Lord commanded Moses.

And Moses took the anointing oil, and anointed the tabernacle and all that was therein, and sanctified them.

And he sprinkled thereof upon the altar seven times, and anointed the altar and all his vessels, both the laver and his foot, to sanctify them.

And he poured of the anointing oil upon Aaron's head, and anointed him, to sanctify him.

And Moses brought Aaron's sons, and put coats upon them, and girded them with girdles, and put bonnets upon them ; as the Lord commanded Moses.

And he brought the bullock for the sin offering : and Aaron and his sons laid their hands upon the head of the bullock for the sin offering.

And he slew it ; and Moses took the blood, and put it upon the horns of the altar round about with his finger, and purified the altar, and poured the blood at the bottom of the altar, and sanctified it, to make reconciliation upon it."—Lev. viii, 1-15.

Digitized by Google

"And he brought the other ram, the ram of consecration: and Aaron and his sons laid their hands upon the head of the ram.

And he slew it; and Moses took of the blood of it, and put it upon the tip of Aaron's right ear, and upon the thumb of his right hand, and upon the great toe of his right foot.

And he brought Aaron's sons, and Moses put of the blood upon the tip of their right ear, and upon the thumbs of their right hands, and upon the great toes of their right feet: and Moses sprinkled the blood upon the altar round about."—Lev. viii, 22-24.

"And Moses took of the anointing oil, and of the blood which was upon the altar, and sprinkled it upon Aaron, and upon his garments, and upon his sons, and upon his sons' garments with him; and sanctified Aaron, and his garments, and his sons, and his sons' garments with him.

And Moses said unto Aaron and to his sons, Boil the flesh at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: and there eat it with the bread that is in the basket of consecrations, as I commanded, saying, Aaron and his sons shall eat it."—Lev. viii, 30, 31.

The Order of Priests here established was the greatest of the Priestly Orders which has ever been established on the earth. It was an Order whose duty it was to minister in the very Presence of Jehovah, the God and King of Israel.

That Order of Priests continued to serve the Lord up to the time of David and of his son and successor, Solomon. Then the Temple took the place of the Tabernacle, and the service was enriched with Holy Songs and with added sacred writings. The beauty of the service was much increased and the dignity of the Priestly Order was greatly exalted.

With short inerregma, for instance, during the seventy years of Judah's captivity in Babylon, the service was kept up to the time of the coming of our Lord and after to A.D. 70, a generation after His death and resurrection. Then the Order of the House of Aaron ceased to function. "He took away the first that He might establish the second," that is to say, He took away the Aaronic Priesthood in order to establish the Ministry of Jesus Christ, "Who was made a Priest for ever after the Order of Melchizedek." (See Hebrews.)

The next great mountain peak of the Pentateuch range is found in the Book of Numbers. This is the handbook of the organization of the service of the nation which had just been made God's Kingdom of Priests, and an holy nation.

The mountain peak of this Book is the dedication of the Levites to their secular Priesthood.

Let us take note of the fact that the record regarding the Priestly ministry of the House of Levi is in the Book of Numbers. The Book which deals with the organization of the nation's worship is given up to the treatment of the duties of the consecrated Priests, Aaron and his sons (i.e., Leviticus).

It is only when the Order of the hosts of Israel by their tribes comes in that the Levites have their duties assigned to them.

So in the ordering of the hosts of Israel, tribe by tribe and family by family, we have the introduction of the tribe of Levi. Here is the preliminary direction:—

"But the Levites after the tribe of their fathers were not numbered among them.

For the Lord had spoken unto Moses, saying,

Only thou shalt not number the tribe of Levi, neither take the sum of them among the children of Israel:

But thou shalt appoint the Levites over the tabernacle of testimony, and over all the vessels thereof, and over all things that belong to it: they shall bear the tabernacle, and all the vessels thereof; and they shall minister unto it, and shall encamp round about the tabernacle.

And when the tabernacle setteth forward, the Levites shall take it down: and when the tabernacle is to be pitched, the Levites shall set it up: and the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

And the children of Israel shall pitch their tents, every man by his own camp, and every man by his own standard, throughout their hosts.

But the Levites shall pitch round about the tabernacle of testimony, that there be no wrath upon the congregation of the children of Israel: and the Levites shall keep the charge of the tabernacle of testimony.

And the children of Israel did according to all that the Lord commanded Moses, so did they."—Num. i, 47-54.

The families and the duties regarding the Tabernacle of each of the families is set forth very clearly in chapter iii of Numbers.

There were three families of the Levites. They camped each on one face of the Levitical square, south, west and north; Moses and the sons of Aaron occupying the east face of the square before the Tabernacle.

The charge of the family of Gershon was as follows:—

"And the charge of the sons of Gershon in the tabernacle of the congregation shall be the tabernacle, and the tent, the covering thereof, and the hanging for the door of the tabernacle of the congregation."—Num. iii, 25.

The charge of the family of Kohath was as follows:—

And their charge shall be the ark, and the table, and the candlestick, and the altars, and the vessels of the sanctuary wherewith they minister, and the hanging, and all the service thereof."—Num. iii, 31.

The charge of the family of Merari was as follows:—

"And under the custody and charge of the sons of Merari shall be the boards of the tabernacle, and the bars thereof, and the pillars thereof, and the sockets thereof, and all the vessels thereof, and all that serveth thereto,

And the pillars of the court round about, and their sockets, and their pins, and their cords."—Num. iii, 36, 37.

Read also in this connection chapter iv of Numbers, which indicates how these families shall transport the various portions of the Tabernacle on the march.

THE SEPARATION OF THE LEVITES AND THE OFFERING OF THEM UNTO THE LORD.

It will be noted that in the dedication of the Levites there was no clothing with holy garments and no anointing with holy oil and no anointing with blood. They washed their own clothes. They shaved all their bodies. They were washed with water, and presented before the Lord, and thereafter in all their generations were holy unto the Lord.

Digitized by Google

To them was committed the charge of the whole congregation, as we see in the following quotation :—

"AND THEY SHALL KEEP HIS CHARGE, AND THE CHARGE OF THE WHOLE CONGREGATION BEFORE THE TABERNACLE OF THE CONGREGATION, TO DO THE SERVICE OF THE TABERNACLE.

AND THEY SHALL KEEP ALL THE INSTRUMENTS OF THE TABERNACLE OF THE CONGREGATION, AND THE CHARGE OF THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL, TO DO THE SERVICE OF THE TABERNACLE."—Num. iii, 7, 8.

Now, what was it that was carried on on behalf of the congregation BEFORE the Tabernacle of the congregation? We make answer briefly by way of illustration. That which is carried on in the Guild Hall or City Hall of a City or County. This was the administrative office of the nation Israel. The following quotations will show in part these duties :—

"If there arise a matter too hard for thee in judgment, between blood and blood, between plea and plea, and between stroke and stroke, being matters of controversy within thy gates : then shalt thou arise, and get thee up into the place which the Lord thy God shall choose ;

And thou shalt come unto the priests the Levites, and unto the judge that shall be in those days, and enquire ; and they shall shew thee the sentence of judgment :

And thou shalt do according to the sentence, which they of that place which the Lord shall choose shall shew thee ; and thou shalt observe to do according to all that they inform thee :

According to the sentence of the law which they shall teach thee, and according to the judgment which they shall tell thee, thou shalt do : thou shalt not decline from the sentence which they shall shew thee, to the right hand, nor to the left.

And the man that will do presumptuously, and will not hearken unto the priest that standeth to minister there before the Lord thy God, or unto the judge, even that man shall die : and thou shalt put away the evil from Israel.

And all the people shall hear, and fear, and do no more presumptuously."—Deut. xvii, 8-13.

"And the priests the sons of Levi shall come near ; for them the Lord thy God hath chosen to minister unto him, and to bless in the name of the Lord ; and by their word shall every controversy and every stroke be tried."—Deut. xxi, 5.

In chapter xvi we have an effort of the Levites supported by princes of the tribes to make themselves equal in rank and service to the House of Aaron. Moses said to them as follows :—

"And Moses said unto Korah, Hear, I pray you, ye sons of Levi :

Seemeth it but a small thing unto you, that the God of Israel hath separated you from the congregation of Israel, to bring you near to himself to do the service of the tabernacle of the Lord, and to stand before the congregation to minister unto them ?

And he hath brought thee near to him, and all thy brethren the sons of Levi with thee : AND SEEK YE THE PRIESTHOOD ALSO ?

For which cause both thou and all thy company are gathered together against the Lord : and what is Aaron, that ye murmur against him ?"—Num. xvi, 8-11.

The terrible judgment which settled this matter for ever was the opening of the earth in a sudden earthquake, and the swallowing of these rebels.

Another test as to God's choice of the family which should constitute His Priests is given in chapter xvii. Therein Aaron's rod budded, and brought forth buds, and bloomed blossoms, and yielded almonds in a night.

In chapter xviii again there is stated the difference between the holy Priesthood of Aaron and the secular Priesthood of Levi.

"And the Lord said unto Aaron, Thou and thy sons and thy father's house with thee shall bear the iniquity of the sanctuary : and thou and thy sons with thee shall bear the iniquity of your priesthood.

And thy brethren also of the tribe of Levi, the tribe of thy father, bring thou with thee, that they may be joined unto thee, and minister unto thee : but thou and thy sons with thee shall minister before the tabernacle of witness.

And they shall keep thy charge, and the charge of all the tabernacle : only they shall not come nigh the vessels of the sanctuary and the altar, that neither they, nor ye also, die.

And they shall be joined unto thee, and keep the charge of the tabernacle of the congregation, for all the service of the tabernacle : and a stranger shall not come nigh unto you.

And ye shall keep the charge of the sanctuary, and the charge of the altar : that there be no wrath any more upon the children of Israel.

And I, behold, I have taken your brethren the Levites from among the children of Israel : to you they are given as a gift for the Lord, to do the service of the tabernacle of the congregation.

Therefore thou and thy sons with thee shall keep your priest's office for everything of the altar, and within the vail ; and ye shall serve : I have given your priest's office unto you as a service of gift : and the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death."—Num. xviii, 1-7.

So we see that in the Tabernacle the Levites were what the churchwardens are to-day. They had the charge of the Tabernacle itself and of the apparatus belonging to it, except the most holy things. These latter they might not touch, and they had no right whatsoever to offer sacrifices on the altar.

Their dedication is part of the national secular service. They are appointed as part of the national machinery.

While the Order of Aaron was removed, as we read in the wonderful Epistle to the Hebrews, the Priests the Levites continue with the House of David for ever—as we read, for instance, in Jeremiah xxxiii.

Digitized by Google

It should be carefully noted that with the removal of the Priestly Order of the House of Aaron the sacrificing Priesthood ceased. The continuance of the Levitical Priesthood was the continuance of an Order debarred from approaching the altar on pain of death.

We cannot leave the contemplation of this great mountain peak without a reference to the spectacular survey of Israel and the prophecies concerning her future contained in chapters xxiii and xxiv of the Book of Numbers, where Balaam, the prophet, spoke what the ancient Greek scholars would have called "winged words." The present appearance of Israel as they then lay encamped in the wilderness is graphically shown. The future of Israel is foreshadowed to the Coming of the Lord. We cannot transcribe these inexpressibly beautiful chapters, but must ask the reader to turn to them and read them as a part of this article.

There remains to be considered the mountain peak contained in the Book of Deuteronomy; this is Mount Torah or Tarah, the Mountain of the Law.

There is here a restatement in narrative form of the Law of the Lord. The difference of the style of this Book and the Books of Leviticus and Numbers, where statements of law are concerned, is that the former contains the results of cases which actually came before the courts of the nation and the judgments were registered as laws in Israel.

Very few of the cases are reported in full. To illustrate, however, what we refer to we may take the appeal case of the daughters of Zelophehad. This is a case of prime importance, and is therefore reported in full. There was no male heir among the children of Zelophehad and there was danger of the inheritance passing from the family. The daughters, therefore, appealed to be allowed to inherit their father's estate. The case was heard and judgment was reserved while Moses laid the cause before the Lord.

Then came the judgment of the Lord, which is as follows:—

"And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

The daughters of Zelophehad speak right: thou shalt surely give them a possession of an inheritance among their father's brethren; and thou shalt cause the inheritance of their father to pass unto them.

And thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If a man die, and have no son, then ye shall cause his inheritance to pass unto his daughter.

And if he have no daughter, then ye shall give his inheritance unto his brethren.

And if he have no brethren, then ye shall give his inheritance unto his father's brethren.

And if his father have no brethren, then ye shall give his inheritance unto his kinsman that is next to him of his family, and he shall possess it: and it shall be unto the children of Israel a statute of judgment, as the Lord commanded Moses."—Num. xxvii, 6-11.

This judgment is important, as it settles the law of inheritance in such wise that under it Tea Tephi, the daughter of Zedekiah, became his heir to the throne when Nebuchadnezzar slew all the male heirs. It was, moreover, under this law that the British Queens ascended the throne of England, and later of the United Kingdom. It was under this judgment that Queen Victoria was called to the throne.

Other judgments are stated which resulted from cases tried. So the judgments recorded have not in Leviticus and Numbers such order and sequence as is seen in the Book of Deuteronomy.

The Book of Deuteronomy states the outline principles of the law and shows the benefits of prompt obedience thereto. It is a Book beautifully and sequently written, and has not the sudden transitions from one judgment to another which are to be found in the two preceding Books.

We are brought again into the atmosphere of Sinai when herein the Lord solemnly restates the Decalogue for the purposes of a change of the law therein. It is in the Sabbath command.

In Exodus the Sabbath was the seventh day of each week. That seventh day followed without break or change. If their days had been named as are ours, then the day would have been perhaps called Saturday. The Sabbath so given commemorated the rest of God from creative activity.

But now after forty years the Sabbath command was changed. Henceforth it no more commemorated the rest of God from creative activity, but commemorated the delivery of Israel from Egypt. The statutes which are given concerning the Sabbath follow the Deuteronomy Decalogue. They make the fifteenth of Abib in each year the first Sabbath of the year. Thus they tie the Sabbath to one particular day of the calendar year. This of necessity sets it free from any one day of the week and, like our Christmas Day, causes it to move through the days of the week in succession. Write the two commands side by side and note the difference.

Why was this change made? The Psalmist takes note of it when he cries, "Forty years long was I grieved with this generation and said: It is a people that do err in their heart and they have not known my ways. THEREFORE I sware in my wrath that they should not enter into my Sabbath"; and so the Sabbath was changed, as we see in the Book of Deuteronomy.

Carefully read the chapters of this wonderful Book as a digest of the Law of the Lord. It is that Law which shall go out from Zion, as it is doing, and shall fill the earth with righteousness and truth. Next to the Gospel of Salvation in importance is the Law of the Lord as stated in this delightful Book.

The climax is reached with chapters xxxii and xxxiii. We would that we could afford the space to reproduce them fully; but the reader will be abundantly repaid for turning to these chapters and reading them once again. They sweep up in the very perfection of utterance to the height of the Throne of God, and they sweep on over the ages with the flight of the light of Divine Truth. What a triumph of utterance and of prophetic foresight!

And now we descend from the last of the peaks of the Pentateuch range, and pause for a moment at the burial-place of Moses in a valley in the land of Moab over against Beth-peor, but no man knoweth of his sepulchre unto this day.

How well do these stately Books fill the place of the foreword of all that follows in the sacred Scriptures.

THE FULNESS OF THE GENTILES IN THE BRITISH COMMONWEALTH OF NATIONS.

By Dr. Wadge (Winnipeg).

"For I would not, brethren, have you ignorant of this mystery, lest ye be wise in your own conceits, that a hardening (A. Ver.—blindness) in part hath befallen Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in ; and so all Israel shall be saved."—Rom. xi, 25, 26.

Part I.—Word Study—Mystery, Fulness, Gentiles.

Before searching for the meaning of the expression "the fulness of the Gentiles," let us briefly consider the word mystery in this passage. In common usage, a mystery is some unexplained phenomenon, something unknown or incomprehensible in its nature. For example, we might speak of Electricity, or of Life, or of the Triune Being of God, or of God Himself as mysteries, for the real nature of these phenomena or of this Divine Being has never been explained or revealed. But the ordinary meaning of the term mystery in the New Testament writings is not that the phenomenon is something which is absolutely unknown, but rather that it is something which before had been concealed from human knowledge, but had now been brought to light. The Greek word for which our word mystery is used does not denote something inexplicable or incomprehensible, but something that is known only to the initiated. In this sense it occurs 27 times in the New Testament.

Now, our Lord Jesus Christ, speaking to His disciples, said to them, "Unto to you it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given."—Matt. xiii, 11 (Cf. Mark iv, 11 ; Luke viii, 10). So, we understand by this, that these matters that are called mysteries in the New Testament are only mysteries to those who have not, by the grace of the Holy Spirit, accepted the salvation of Jesus. We who follow Christ are the initiated. If we follow the leadings of the Holy Spirit, He will guide us into all truth, and He will give us understanding of His teachings that they should be no mystery to us.

Paul writes : "But we speak God's wisdom in a mystery, even the wisdom which hath been hidden, which was foreordained before the world unto our glory : which none of the rulers of this world knoweth."—1 Cor. ii, 7, 8. And so, in a similar manner, the rulers and people of this world cannot understand our British-Israel teaching, for to them, being a mystery, it is but foolishness. The Apostle warns us, in our text, of the danger of not understanding these matters that are thus called mysteries. If we do not take the trouble to find the Bible explanation for them, we are liable to interpret them according to our own ideas or our own views. Paul says, "I would not, brethren, have you ignorant of this mystery, lest ye be wise in your own conceits," inferring that if we follow our own vain thoughts or conceits, we shall not be able to see or understand the real explanation.

Let us then study this passage in the full belief that God intends us, "brethren," to understand this matter clearly. To do this, we must first thoroughly understand the meaning and import of the fulness of the Gentiles, for the hardening of Israel will not be relieved, and so all Israel be saved, until the time arrives when the fulness of the Gentiles be come in.

The expression "fulness of the Gentiles" has been explained in some writings as referring to the completion of "the times of the Gentiles." There does not, however, appear to be sufficient evidence to warrant such a conclusion. But if not, then to what period of time, or to what people, or to what condition of those people, does this expression apply ? To obtain an answer to this question we must, of course, as we should always do, turn to the Scriptures for a light to guide us in our quest.

The two conditions attached to this mystery of the hardening of Israel are those of time and measure. The condition of measure is indicated by the word "fulness" and that of time by the adverb "until." Thus we learn that the hardness or blindness in part of Israel will be relieved or removed when a certain measure of fulness is completed or accomplished.

In studying the condition of measure, we must first make a study of certain words in this text, and also of certain closely related words ; for the whole argument, in the elucidation of this mystery, can only be based on a thorough knowledge of the Scriptural use of these words. The words to be studied are—fulness and multitude, heathen, pagan, people, nations and Gentiles.

Let us first consider the words fulness and multitude. "Fulness is the state or quality of being full, in any sense, i.e., of containing or having all that should be admitted." This English word in the Old Testament represents the ideas of five different Hebrew words. It stands once in each instance for the words mala and maleah, referring to the fulness of a vessel, and also once each for soba and sibah, meaning satiety. But as a translation of the word melo it carries the everyday ordinary meaning of fulness, i.e., completeness, wholeness, allness, totality. It is so used eight times. Examples of this use are :—Deut. xxxiii, 16 : "And for the precious things of the earth and the fulness thereof." 1 Chron. xvi, 32 : "Let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof." Psalm xxiv, 1 : "The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof." But though melo is translated eight times by fulness it is also translated twice by the word multitude.

This word multitude is used 150 times in the A. Ver. of the Old Testament to represent thirteen different Hebrew words. It is used 61 times to represent hamon, a multitude. For example, Gen. xvii, 5 (R. Ver.) : "Neither shall thy name any more be called Abram, but thy name shall be Abraham ; for the father of a multitude of nations have I made thee." It is also used 68 times to represent the Hebrew word rob, meaning abundance. For example, Gen. xvi, 10 : "And the angel of the Lord said unto her, I will greatly multiply thy seed, that it shall not be numbered for multitude" (Hagar). In only two instances is multitude used for melo. These are : Gen. xlviii, 19 : "Howbeit his younger brother shall be greater than he, and his seed shall become a multitude of nations" ; and Isaiah xxxi, 4 : "Like as when a lion growleth and the young lion over his prey, if a multitude of shepherds be called forth against him . . . ." According to this showing it would appear that the word melo might better have been translated in these two instances also by fulness as elsewhere.

In Gen. xlviii, 8-20, we have the account of Jacob adopting and blessing Manasseh and Ephraim, the sons of Joseph, in which he prophesies that Manasseh is to become a great nation and that Ephraim is to become a multitude of nations. In both the A. and R. Vers. the marginal reading for multitude is fulness. Now as multitude is only used twice out of 150 times in the Old Testament to represent melo, and as melo is translated eight times by fulness and only twice by multitude, and as in this pasage fulness is given as a marginal reading for multitude in both the A. and R. Vers., then this passage in reference to Ephraim might well be read as follows: "and his seed shall become a fulness of nations."

This meaning of the word multitude to convey the idea of allness in its use as representing the word melo is confirmed by Moffat, for though he uses the word multitude in the phrase "multitude of nations" in Gen. xlviii, 19, he does not so use the word in Isaiah xxxi, 4. Here he replaces the expression "if a multitude of shepherds be called forth against him" by the expression "when the shepherds are all summoned to attack him." That is, he uses the word all, indicating completion or fulness, instead of the word multitude. By thus translating melo by all he shows that its meaning is allness or fulness rather than multiplicity.

Summing up the study of the use of the words fulness and multitude as representing the word melo, we suggest that we are forced to the conclusion that the Hebrew phrase referring to the descendants of Ephraim as "a multitude of nations" would be more accurately translated by the phrase "a fulness of nations." Further, we find that the word fulness refers to the wholeness or completeness of some condition of those nations, and not to the number of them.

Turning to the New Testament, we find the word fulness used 12 times to represent the Greek word pleroma. Take for example:—Romans xi, 25: ". . . that a hardening in part hath befallen Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in." 1 Cor. x, 26: "For the earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof." Gal. iv, 4: "But when the fulness of the time came, God sent forth his Son." Ephes. i, 10: ". . . unto a dispensation of the fulness of times, to sum up all things in Christ." In all cases this word has the meaning of totality, allness, completeness. In Gal. iv, 4, "the fulness of the time" is the appointed time, indicating that the interval preceding had been completed. The fulness of the Gentiles then indicates that the blindness of Israel shall be relieved at some time or period when a certain condition of fulness or completion of the Gentiles shall have been established. Thus we see that this use of the word fulness in the New Testament confirms its use in the Old Testament in referring to some condition that shall be complete or whole, rather than to a numerical completeness.

But now we must find out the meaning of the word Gentiles. Here again we must continue our preliminary study of words, and now we shall study the Scriptural use of the words heathen, pagan, people, nations and Gentiles.

In the Old Testament we find various Hebrew words translated by various English words. For example, the word people partially represents 11 different Hebrew words, and the word nation partially represents four Hebrew words, though the words heathen and Gentile are used to partially represent one Hebrew word only.

On the other hand the Hebrew word goi (pl. goyim) is translated 11 times by the word people, 141 times by the word heathen, 348 times by the word nation, and 30 times by the word Gentile. There seems to have been no standard rule as to when or which of these words should be used. Examples of these translations are as follows:—

Goi—People.—Daniel xi, 23—speaking of the king of the north: "And after the league made with him he shall work deceitfully; for he shall come up, and shall become strong, with a small people."

Goi—Heathen.—Deut. iv, 27: "And the Lord shall scatter you among the nations, and ye shall be left few in number among the heathen, whither the Lord shall lead you." In this verse the word goi is translated in the A. Ver. by nations and heathen, and in the R. Ver. it is translated respectively by peoples and nations. See also Lev. xxvi, 33; Psalm ii, 1, 2; xlvii, 8; cvi, 30; Ezek. xi, 16; xxii, 15; xxxvi, 19, 23, 24; Zech. viii, 13.

Goi—Nation.—Gen. xii, 2—speaking of Abram: "And I will make of thee a great nation." See also Gen. xvii, 6; xviii, 18; xxxv, 11; xlviii, 19; Exod. ix, 24; xxxii, 24; Deut. iv, 27; ix, 14; xi, 23; xv, 6; xxxii, 8.

Goi—Gentile.—Gen. x, 5: "By these were the isles of the Gentiles divided in their lands." See also Isaiah xlii, 6; lxi, 6; Jer. xlvi, 1.

Turning again to the New Testament we find that four or five Greek words are used to represent the same ideas as do the Hebrew and English words already considered. The word people is used for one Greek word laos 141 times, for another word ochlos 82 times, and for a third word ethnos twice; i.e., though occurring in the New Testament 225 times it represents ethnos in only two instances. But on the other hand this Greek word ethnos, when translated into English, is represented in the New Testament by four words as follows—by people twice, by heathen five times, by nations 64 times, and by Gentiles 92 times.

Examples of these translations are as follows:—

Ethnos—People.—Romans x, 19: "I will provoke you to jealousy by them which are no people." (R. Ver.—Nation.)

Ethnos—Heathen.—Acts iv, 25: "Why did the heathen rage, and the people imagine a vain thing?" In the R. Ver. Gentiles replaces the word heathen of the A. Ver.; though in Psalm ii, 1, of which this is a quotation, the R. Ver. uses the word nations instead of heathen.

Ethnos—Nations.—Acts xvii, 26: "And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth." See also 1 Pet. ii, 9: "But ye are an elect race, a royal priesthood, a holy nation."

Ethnos—Gentile.—Acts xi, 1: "Now the apostles and the brethren that were in Judea heard that the Gentiles also had received the word of God."

Thus we see that the Hebrew word goi and the Greek word ethnos are represented in English by four different words—people, nation, heathen and Gentile. The word people is a collective term, usually used in an ethnological sense, and denoting smaller or larger groups of persons who have some characteristic in common, such as habitation, race, descent, language. In the Old Testament, while this word is used

1,800 times as a translation for the word am, it is only so used 11 times for the word goi. The word nation indicates in general an organized or corporate body of people, sometimes of one district or of one race, but generally irrespective of common characteristics of race, language, etc.; that is, its chief characteristic is an organized form of government. This is the word used chiefly to translate the word goi. Heathen is used to denote that the people thus referred to had no knowledge of or did not worship Jehovah. The word Gentile comes from the Latin word gens, and is practically synonymous with our word clan. It formerly denoted a group of people composed of blood relatives. In this sense then it is quite easy to understand how the word might have come into use among the Jews in the later Jewish period as a translation of their word goi in referring to the gens or clans or tribes of Israelites separated from them. In the Old Testament the word Gentile is used 30 times to represent goi. In the R. Ver. it is replaced 14 times by the word nation, and in 14 other instances the word nation is given as a marginal reading.

These vagaries of translation are hard to understand. It would appear, however, that the choice of the English word used to represent the word goi depends to a large extent on the point of view of the individual translator. If he considered that the word referred to idolatrous, non-Israelite nations, he, according to his own view of the passage, probably used at times either the word heathen or the word Gentile instead of the word nation.

On their return from the captivity, the Jews considered that they were the organized representatives of the Israel nation; and in interpreting the prophecies to the House of Israel as applying to themselves only, they developed a national consciousness of superiority over other nations, as being the chosen race of God. Thus they spoke of all other nations as inferiors in terms of contempt—goyim, heathen, idolaters, Gentiles. During the struggle under the Maccabees for independence, this national superiority complex became stronger than ever as the Jews became embittered by their failure to gain independence and by their continued subjugation to the Romans. As a result of this, all non-Jewish nations became to them goyim—Gentiles, a term now expressive of the utmost contempt.

This contempt for other nations was so strongly implanted in the national consciousness that in the days of the early Church the Apostles were amazed to find that salvation by the grace of God was given to the Gentiles also. So we find that in New Testament times the word Gentile was in common use for all nations who were not Jews, i.e., who were not people of the organized nation developed from the remnant of the House of Judah which returned from the captivity, and also for all nations or peoples who were not worshippers of the God of the Jews. Judging by New Testament usage, the word Gentile was used at that time as a description of nations and peoples who were not Jews, rather than of peoples who were not worshippers of God; that is, the distinction then was not religious, nor even racial, but sectional, and the word Gentile included all the House of Israel as well as other non-Jewish people.

In the early Christian Church the word pagan was used to denote idolaters, though it was apparently not in general use when the New Testament Scriptures were written. Although we have so many translations of the word ethnos, one of our modern translators has unfortunately introduced this word pagan also as a translation for ethnos. Moffat has used this word, apparently, without any specific reason, as in most instances in which the A. Ver. and the R. Ver. use the word Gentile, he does also. However, he translates the word ethnos by pagan seven times (Matt. vi, 32; 1 Cor. v, 1; xii, 2; Eph. iv, 17; 1 Peter ii, 12; iv, 3; 3 John vii). By thus introducing another word in translating ethnos he distinctly adds to the confusion already existing by the use of so many words, though by so doing he affords a good demonstration of the vagaries of translation resulting from the differing points of view of various individuals.

In a careful consideration of all these words we see that the Hebrew word goi and the Greek word ethnos are properly translated by the word nation, and that the words heathen and Gentile are used to modify that translation by indicating that such nations thus referred to are non-worshippers of God, and non-Israelite, and later non-Jewish.

So in returning to our subject we see, by getting back to the original meaning of the word ethnos, the phrase "the fulness of the Gentiles" might better have been expressed by the phrase "the fulness of the nations."

Now it is remarkable that this expression occurs once each in the Old Testament and in the New Testament. In Gen. xlviii, 19, it occurs as a fulness (multitude) of nations; and in Romans xi, 25, it occurs as the fulness of the nations (Gentiles). In the first instance the condition of fulness is applied to the nations descending from Ephraim; but in the second instance the people to whom it applies is not so immediately clear. In Genesis the emphasis is on nations, the prophecy being that nations would descend from Ephraim, whereas only one nation would descend from Manasseh. In Romans the emphasis is on fulness, the nations were not of the future but were then in existence. So Paul refers to this condition as the fulness. Further, Paul refers to them as the nations, indicating that he knew that they were then in existence. Again, they were not Jews, as they were at that time known as Gentiles. Let us then search the Scriptures further to discover, if possible, what this fulness of the nations is, when it shall be established, and to what people it will apply.

PREDESTINATION.—V.

ISRAEL'S BIRTHRIGHT.

BY THE REV. R. G. F. WADDINGTON, M.A.

IT is generally admitted by conservative scholars that the Bible has predicted the rise and fall of some of the most important Empires of the world's history. And certainly the Bible has many messages for several of the nations which were neighbours of Israel. We may read in the 13th and following chapters of Isaiah the "burden," or oracle concerning Babylon, and other nations. Jeremiah, with chapter xlvi, begins a similar review of the nations upon whom Jehovah is to bring punishment. Daniel, in giving the Divinely-inspired interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar's dream, speaks of four world Empires, each symbolized by a different part of the

Digitized by Google

Dream Image, and it is an historical fact that the order of these Empires is Babylon (Thou art the head of Gold), Medo-Persia, Greece, and Rome.

I would ask the reader, therefore, to consider carefully this question. Is it likely, or even possible, that the Nation which God chose for Himself, and which His Son came to redeem, should have been completely wiped out, or have sunk to the condition of the Jews; and at the same time, the British Empire, the greatest, the wealthiest, and the most widespread, should find no place whatever in the foretold plan of the prophets?

There are many who will tell me that the Jews, being "All Israel," the "Chosen People," the "Remnant," will yet rise from their lowly estate, and occupy, in God's providence, the prophesied place of Israel.

But this provides no real answer to my question, and it does great violence to both history and Scripture.

I have already shown from the Scriptures that Israel and Judah are quite distinct in much of what the Bible prophesies, and I have quoted passages which foretell blessing to Israel, whilst still distinct from Judah, so there will be no need for me to add any more emphasis to that point.

What I would add, for the sake of those who hold fast to the "Jew" theory, is this. They are fundamentalists, they do believe that God's promises were meant to be kept, and, therefore, seeing no difference between Israel and Judah, they look forward to the day when the Lord shall come again, the Jews shall acknowledge Him, and the Jewish Empire be set up.

If their theory be true, then the British Empire must pass away, the Throne of David must be set up again amongst the Jews, and the Jews thus formed into a Kingdom prepared for the Lord.

The paths must be made straight by the Jews, and "this" Gospel of the Kingdom must be preached by the Jews.

I deliberately put the word "this" in inverted commas, because "this" Gospel of the Kingdom, necessitated by the theory that the Jews are all Israel, is so vastly different from "The" Gospel of the Kingdom propounded in the Scriptures.

Did not the Lord Jesus declare to the Jews, "The Kingdom of God shall be taken away from you, and shall be given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof"?

But suppose that our opponents are right, and that the Kingdom of God is still vested with the Jews, and that all the promises concerning the greatness of Israel are yet to be fulfilled upon the Jews. Will not this postpone the Coming of the Lord to a date so far distant in the future as to cause it to lose its practical application and warning for the present generation?

And even if this has to be admitted, even if thus we must allow our dearest hopes of peace and righteousness on earth to be dashed, there still remains the vital part of my question unanswered. Why does the Scripture omit all reference to this great Empire which must be removed to make way for Judah?

Am I not right when I protest that the "spiritualizers" have a far better case for the Church as the "Stone Kingdom" and as the "Israel of the New Testament" than those "literalists" who make Judah into Israel?

If the Church really is Israel, then my question is answered, for in that case the British Empire can be ignored. With the Church fulfilling the place and destiny of Israel, Scripture would naturally find no place for Israel-Britain.

But if the Church be not Israel, then the growth and position of the British Empire cannot be ignored by the student of prophecy. There are, I know, those who argue that the British Empire is one or more of the "Ten-Toe" kingdoms, and that it will be destroyed by the Stone Kingdom. But this theory also does violence to both Scripture and History. For Daniel ii prefigures FOUR Empires in the Image, not FIVE. The Toes are part of the fourth Empire, not the successor to the fourth.

I am sure that the only intelligent interpretation that we can have of the Stone Kingdom, the Fifth Monarchy, is that it is the British Empire. That makes Scripture plain, history correct, and it brings the Coming of the Lord within view of a practical accomplishment in our own day. Further, it shows that Israel's Birthright is not a chance or careless phrase, dropped by the wayside, but a vital detail in the everlasting purposes of God. Now in the preceding chapters I have tried to show from the Scriptures what are the reasons we have for believing that Israel is in existence as a Nation to-day, separate from the Jews, and taking a leading part in the affairs of the world.

I now want to draw the attention of the reader to some of the passages which contain the distinct and I believe unmistakable assertions of God, by the mouth of His prophets, as to what are the marks, signs and characteristics by which Israel may be known.

And at this point I want to answer a question often asked by those who listen, somewhat impatiently, to our case.

"Suppose you prove your case, suppose that you can show all the Israel marks in Britain, what good will it be? Is not the work of the Church to preach salvation in Christ Jesus? And is not the message of Christ one to the individual soul?"

There are many answers that I can give to these questions. I could ask, in return, what possible hope any man could have in Christ, if the Bible be proved, through the failure of the promises to Israel, to be wrong? If God has failed Israel, what guarantee have you or I that He will not fail us?

It is really useless to advance the plea of a "spiritual experience" of Christ. The Moslem can advance with equal reason a plea of a spiritual experience. I may believe with all my heart, in utter sincerity, that I have seen the Lord, and my life, in consequence, may be completely changed for the better. That does not make Christ a FACT, nor does it make His claims and teaching true. No matter how the modern scholar may argue, no matter how much he may cavil at the Scriptures, the fact remains that the proof adduced both by Christ and His Apostles for the truth of His claims and teaching was proof from the Old Testament Scriptures. Apart from the basis of Scripture, the doctrine of Christ is reduced to the level of a sentimentality, a beautiful and pious hope by which the Church seeks to make the world a little better. Men may talk glibly about "bringing in the Kingdom," but that Kingdom has no meaning at all apart from the declared statements of both Old and New Testaments.

Further, the whole case of the atheist and agnostic rests upon the supposed failure of the promises to Israel. A "spiritual fulfilment" they will not have. And rightly so, for a "spiritual fulfilment" of the prophecies concerning Israel would logically imply a "spiritual fulfilment" of the prophecies concerning Judah. But we are faced with the hard historic fact that the prophecies concerning Judah have been literally fulfilled. The failure of the promises to Israel, or their transfer to some other body like the Church, would mean the failure of God.

One answer, then, and by no means the least important, to the question, "What good?" is that the truth and honour of God are vitally involved.

I would also add, briefly, leaving the reader to consider the implications for himself, that Truth is always of great good; that the Gospel of Jesus is concerned, not only with the individual soul, but with Israel also; that the indifference manifested towards the Church's teaching nowadays is due, in the main, to the lack of definiteness and harmony in the teaching. Far too frequently the preacher has no "gospel," and where he has, as often as not, his gospel differs widely from the Gospel of Jesus.

So I invite your attention to the word of Scripture about Israel's marks. And in doing so, I shall speak also of the known facts of history, the testimony of public opinion, and the views of opponents of our teaching.

The reader should keep this carefully in mind, that there is in existence somewhere to-day the people of Israel.

Very well, then, what we contend is that when we look into the Bible and read there what God declared Israel should be, we shall find that the mantle of Israel has fallen upon the British, and therefore that Britain must be Israel.

Many of the scholars of our country, the clergy and men of science, vehemently deny that we are Israel, but at the same time the expressions which they use, and the evidence they give, as to the leading features and marks of British political, social and religious life, are identical with the expression and evidence of the Bible as to the leading features and marks of Israel. Then if Britain be not Israel, the purposes of God for Israel must have failed, and Britain must have been substituted for Israel, either by God or by fate.

In the first place, then, there are certain promises made to Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and David, to which the Scripture affixes no condition. They are promises made upon the oath of God, and they were renewed very emphatically to the nation Israel, AFTER her sin and her banishment from the land of Palestine.

When Abraham was troubled in mind because he had no children, and because he could see no prospect of the fulfilment of God's promise to him, on leaving Chaldea, we read: "Look now toward heaven, and tell the stars, if thou be able to tell them: and He said unto him, So shall thy seed be."

When Ishmael had been born, Abraham is told that the promise is not to have its issue through him, but through another son, to be born of Sarah. "I am God Almighty" (I am the One Who nourishes.) "Thou shalt be the father of a multitude of nations."

And again, when Abraham had dedicated Isaac to God upon the altar, there comes the most wonderful promise of all: "By Myself have I sworn, saith the Lord, because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son, that in blessing, I will bless thee, and in multiplying, I will multiply thy seed as the stars of heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore; and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies."

(In a short aside here, I would ask why the translators of our Bible have rendered the Hebrew as "thine only son"? The word "son" is not in the Hebrew, and Isaac was not the only son. But he was the only Isaac, the only "son of promise." Would it not therefore render "thine only Isaac"?)

Now everyone can grasp the meaning of these promises to Abraham. They are written in plain language, and there is no "if" about them. And we are told that the "Law which came 430 years after" did not cause the annulling of these promises, nor adversely affect them. Now we shall find in Hosea that the promises were repeated and even had additions made to them, in the very day of God's divorce of Ten-Tribed Israel for her sins. Isaiah also adds his inspired word to that of Hosea, emphasizing the same promises.

Now when Israel was taken away into captivity by the Assyrians, they remained some time in Media, and then Esdras tells us that he had a vision to declare to him the fate of Israel.

Esdras asks how it was that this people, called God's Firstborn, should be under the heel of heathen oppressors. It was certainly true that Israel had been wicked, yet the heathen who had them in subjection were still more wicked. His question is answered by a statement to the effect that Israel, the Ten Tribes, are about to pass out of the land of their captivity, under the protection of God, and migrate to a land prepared for them, where they would serve God.

It is easy, of course, to argue that as this word is found in the Apocrypha, it is unworthy of our notice. It is just as easy to deny the worth of the statement of Josephus to the effect that the Jews of his day were but two tribes, and that Israel was beyond Euphrates, an immense multitude, but the fact remains that these two statements fit in exactly with what God had promised to Israel through Hosea and Isaiah. If then Esdras and Josephus invented their statements, they must have done so with the knowledge of what God had foretold, and with a desire to make their history conform to prophecy. These two statements are actually the only two outside the Bible which refer to Israel as Israel, and it will need very convincing arguments to cause them to be set aside as useless. And even if they are proved to be inventions, they still strengthen our argument that Israel did not return to Palestine, for, as I have said, they testify to what the prophets foretold for Israel.

The word of Josephus is the last word we hear of them by the name of Israel. So it is clear that this vast multitude has vanished from the knowledge of mankind as Israel, but wherever they are, they must be heirs to the birthright promise of the multiplicity of seed. It will not be disputed by anyone that the English-speaking peoples are not only the most widespread, but the most numerous of all the races of the world. It must be apparent, however, to all thinking people that this multiplicity of seed necessitates a corresponding blessing of room in which to live, or it would be a curse in itself. Consequently we read in Deut. xxxii, 8: "When the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance, when He separated the sons of Adam, He set the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel." Again, in Isaiah xlix, 8: "I will preserve thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, to establish the earth, to cause to inherit the desolate heritages"; and in Isaiah xxvii, 6: In days to come shall "Jacob take root; Israel shall blossom and bud: and fill the face of the world with fruit."

Let the Christian critics and opponents of our teaching show to us how faithful God has been to these promises. Let them show us how the bounds of other nations have been limited by the requirements of Israel. Let them show us how and where Israel has taken root and filled the face of the world with her offspring.

The position of the Jews, even to-day, in the day of their emancipation, does not correspond in the least degree with these promises. They are still strangers and sojourners, oft-times unwelcome, in lands that are not their own, and even in the land they are now claiming as their national home they must needs live side by side with Arabs. Let, then, our opponents show us the literal fulfilment of these promises to Israel even as we can show them the literal fulfilment of the prophecies concerning the Jews.

And where will they find anything that corresponds to the fulfilment save in the position of the British Race?

BEHEMOTH AND LEVIATHAN.—I.

"The secret things belong unto the Lord our God; but those revealed belong unto us and to our children for ever, that we may do all the words of this law." Deut. xxix, 29.

"Thou hast a mighty arm, strong is Thy hand, and high is Thy right hand. Justice and judgment are the habitation of Thy throne; mercy and truth shall go before Thy face. Blessed is the people that know the joyful sound; they shall walk, O Lord, in the light of Thy countenance. In Thy name shall they rejoice all the day; and in Thy righteousness shall they be exalted. For Thou art the glory of their strength; and in Thy favour our horn shall be exalted. For the Lord is our defence: and the Holy One of Israel is our King."—Psa. lxxxix, 13-18.

IN no part of the Bible does Jehovah's triumph over the powers of darkness shine forth with more fulness of glory than in the Book of Job. In this divine allegory we have presented to us a complete view of the theology of the Bible, and, therefore, a full outline of the destiny of Israel, and of the function which that race and nation perform in God's plan of salvation.

The dramatis personæ are:

GOD THE CREATOR, SATAN THE DESTROYER.

The faithful among Israel—God's true Church and devout followers represented by Ecclesiasticism, with its divine truths, wrong applications, false conclusions, and various denominations.	JOB.
OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST, THE MEDIATOR.	Eliphaz the Temanite, Bildad the Shuhite, Zophar the Naamathite.
The Ten Tribes of Israel.	Elihu the son of Barachel, the kindred of Ram.*
	Job's seven sons and three daughters.
That portion of Israel—alas! always too numerous—who live in antagonism to God.	Job's wife.

The seven sons were the tribes of the Assyrian captivity; the three daughters represent Dan, Zebulun, and Asher, some of whom had emigrated from Palestine before the Assyrians carried the others into Chaldea.†

The opening scene (chap. i) presents to us Israel in the height of prosperity, "The greatest of all the men of the East" (Job i, 3), under the Mosaic Christianity. "Job offered burnt offerings according to the number of them all" (Job. i, 5). Israel, a people separated, consecrated, and supremely blest. "Hast not Thou made an hedge about him, and about his house, and about all that he hath on every side? Thou hast blessed the work of his hands, and his substance is increased in the land" (Job i, 10).

God announces that Job was "perfect and upright, one that feared God, and eschewed evil" (Job i, 1-8; ii, 3); or as the Lord further expresses it by Jeremiah: "Yet I had planted thee a noble vine, wholly a right seed" (Jer. ii, 21). This reference of course is to the heart, the leaven, the kernel of the nation. Job substantiates the philosophy of individual and national creation elsewhere propounded in this volume.‡ "Thou hast clothed me with skin and flesh, and hast fenced me with bones and sinews. Thou hast granted me life and favour, and Thy visitation hath preserved my spirit" (Job x, 11, 12). "The Spirit of God is in my nostrils" (Job xxvii, 3). We have seen from appeal to Scripture that the spirit of divine perfection has existed in the life of the race from time immemorial. There have been many times when the enemy's tares have grown up rank and luxuriant, but the good plants have never been choked. And this explains the divine principle of judgment, both of individuals and of nations: "The Lord seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance"—of seeming virtue or seeming sinfulness—"but the Lord looketh on the heart" (1 Sam. xvi, 7).

Satanic power, with its blasts of misery and sources of temptation and corruption are ineffectual to shake the fidelity of the man—to eradicate the divine Spirit implanted in Israel. They come with calamitous force upon his condition and circumstances in vain; they smite his body with the plagues of idolatry till he lies in the dust, as he has lain better or worse ever since; "the whole head sick and the whole heart faint"—national judgment and affections full of corruption—"from the sole of the foot to the crown of the head, wounds, bruises, and putrifying sores" (Isa. i, 5, 6). A sad picture this of Israel's case even at the present day. She who should have "bound up and mollified with ointment" (probably ecclesiastical Judah may be meant) has but one miserable advice, "Curse God and die" (Job ii, 9); "Get you far from the Lord" (Ezek. xi, 15). Job complains, "He hath put my brethren far from me" (Job. xix, 13).

In the calamity that falls upon his family let it be observed that the house fell upon the young men, and they are dead—seven Tribes carried to the burial of Assyrian captivity and subsequent oblivion. The fate of the three daughters is passed over in silence, yet they are not said to have been killed. Dan, Zebulun, and Asher, the three Tribes omitted from the genealogies, escape the national catastrophe, and pursue throughout the world their way and destiny unobserved by mankind, and here as elsewhere carefully veiled by inspiration.

The expressions cropping up throughout the book disclose unmistakably this representative character of the allegory, and correspond exactly with the experience of Israel as it has been traced throughout the prophetic history: "For now I shall sleep in the dust," says Job (Job. vii, 21). Again: "Before I go whence I shall not return, even to the land of darkness, and the shadow of death; a land of darkness as darkness itself, and of the shadow of death without any order, and where the light is as darkness" (Job x, 21, 22; xii, 24). "He taketh away the heart of the chief of the people of the earth, and causeth them to wander in a wilderness where there is no way" (Job xiii, 24). "Wherefore hidest Thou Thy face?" "I will hide My face from them" (Deut. xxxii, 20). "And makest me to possess the iniquities of my youth" (Job xiii, 26). Jeremiah says of Ephraim:—"I did bear the reproach of my youth" (Jer. xxxi, 19). Job further exclaims:—"O that Thou wouldest hide me in the grave, that Thou wouldest keep me secret, until Thy wrath be past, that Thou wouldest appoint me a set time, and remember me!" (Job xiv, 13). The position of Israel among the Gentiles is thus described:—"God hath delivered me to the ungodly, and turned me over into the hands of the wicked." (Job xvi, 11). Job, like the prophets who have been quoted, declares the unalterable purposes of God: "But He is in one mind; and who can turn Him; and what His soul desireth, that He doeth. For He performeth the thing that is appointed for me" (Job xxiii, 13, 14). Bildad suggests regarding Job's children: "If He have cast them away for their transgressions" (Job viii, 4).

The representative and national character of Job comes out in such expressions as the following:—"Changes and war are against me." (Job x, 17). "His archers compass me round about" (Job xvi, 13). "He breaketh me with breach upon breach" (Job xvi, 14). Describing Gentile barbarians, in chap. xxx, 1-14, Job says: "They came upon me as a wide breaking in of waters: in the desolation they rolled themselves upon me." He complains: "My days are passed, my purposes are broken off." So Ezekiel says of Israel, "Our bones are dried, and our hope is lost: we are cut off for our parts" (Ezek. xxxvii, 11). Again Job exclaims: "As God liveth, who hath taken away my judgment" (Job xxvii, 2). And Isaiah correspondingly exclaims: "Why sayest thou, O Jacob, and speakest, O Israel, My way is hid from the Lord, and my judgment is passed over from my God?" (Isa. xl, 27). Again, in the language of national and Israelitish affliction, Job mourns, "He hath fenced up my way that I cannot pass, and He hath set darkness in my paths. He hath stripped me of my glory" ("Thou shalt be no priest to me") (Hos. iv, 6), "and taken the crown from my head. His troops come together, and raise up their way against me, and encamp round about my tabernacle" (Job. xix, 8, 9, 12). Job, in his darkness, complains: "He is not a man, as I am, that I should answer Him, and we should come together in judgment" (Job ix, 32). Isaiah, in the light, proclaims: "Let them come near, then let them speak: let us come near together to judgment" (Isa. xli, 1).

Job's hope does not become extinct even amid the deep darkness of his affliction: "If a man die, shall he live again? all the days of my appointed time will I wait till my change come. Thou shalt call, and I will answer Thee: Thou wilt have a desire to the work of Thine hands" (Job xiv, 14, 15). This is not final death, and resurrection, although it may be typical of it, for he says further: "But He knoweth the way that I take: when He hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold" (Job xxiii, 10). Job out of his trouble breathes forth Israel's repentance and aspirations: "Oh, that I were as in months past, as in the days when God preserved me. As I was in the days of my youth, when the secret of God was upon my tabernacle" (Job xxix, 2, 4). "I have surely heard Ephraim bemoaning himself," etc. (Jer. xxxi, 18).

Job's three "friends," though "miserable comforters," are nevertheless employed to prophesy some great truths in connection with his future history, although they themselves did not seem to expect he would ever experience them. Bildad says: "They that hate thee shall be clothed with shame; and the dwelling-place of the wicked shall come to nought" (Job viii, 22). So Isaiah declares:—"Your brethren that hated you, that cast you out for My name's sake, said, Let the Lord be glorified; but He shall appear to your joy, and they shall be ashamed" (Isa. xvi, 5). "They that hate thee shall come to nought" verifies the decree so terribly fulfilled, and yet more terribly to be fulfilled upon the enemies of Israel. "Cursed is he that curseth thee" (Gen. xxvii, 29; Num. xxiv, 9).

The prophecy of Eliphaz, in its portraiture of the future blessedness that might overtake Job, reads like a paraphrase of Moses' word in Deut. xxviii: "He shall deliver thee in six troubles: yea, in seven there shall no evil touch thee. In famine he shall redeem thee from death, and in war from the power of the sword. Thou shalt be hid from the scourge of the tongue, neither shalt thou be afraid of destruction when it cometh. At destruction and famine thou shalt laugh; neither shalt thou be afraid of the beasts of the earth. For thou shalt be in league with the stones of the field: and the beasts of the field shall be at peace with thee. And thou shalt know that thy tabernacle shall be in peace: and thou shalt visit thy habitation and shalt not sin. Thou shalt know also that thy seed shall be great, and thine offspring as the grass of the earth. Thou shalt come to thy grave in a full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in his season" (Job v, 19, 26). To this same Eliphaz, who seems to be the better counsellor of the three, it is given to portray the Christianized and therefore highly prosperous character of Israel. "If thou return to the Almighty, thou shalt be built up, thou shalt put iniquity far from thy tabernacles; thou shalt lay up gold as dust, and the gold of Ophir as the stones of the brooks. Yea, the Almighty shall be thy defence, and thou shalt have plenty of silver. For then shalt thou have thy delight in the Almighty, and shalt lift up thy face unto God. Thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him, and He shall hear thee, and thou shalt pay thy vows.§ Thou shalt also decree a thing, and it shall be established unto thee: and the light shall shine upon thy ways. When men are cast down, then thou shalt say, There is (must be) lifting up; and He (for thy sake) shall save the humble person. He shall deliver THE ISLAND of the innocent; and it is delivered by the pureness of thine hands" (Job xxii, 23-27).

§ "There" (in the mountain of the height of Israel) "will I require your offerings, and the first fruits of your oblations with all your holy things" (Ezek. xx, 40).

Job has lamented. "Neither is there any daysman betwixt us, that might lay his hand upon us both" (Job ix, 33). And behold, there appears upon the scene a man who, hitherto unmentioned, speaks with the authority of God Himself. "Behold, I am according to thy wish in God's stead. I also am formed out of the clay. Behold, my terror shall not make thee afraid, neither shall my hand be heavy upon thee." (Job xxxiii, 6, 7). "Now he hath not directed his words against me, neither will I answer him with your speeches" (Job xxxii, 14). "My words shall be of the uprightness of my heart" (Job xxxiii, 3). "HE THAT IS PERFECT IN KNOWLEDGE IS WITH THEE" (Job xxxvi, 4). And so the Lord EMMANUEL proceeds firmly, yet gently, to reprove the complainings of Job with words of wisdom and of light, justifying the ways of God to men. His exit, like His entrance, is solitary, and unnoticed; but God immediately confirms the words He has left behind (compare John xii, 28-32), and replies to Job "out of the whirlwind" (Job xxxviii, xxxix). He points circumstantially to the wonders and mysteries of His creation. He proves His great power and majesty from the celestial forces and from the wondrous instincts of animal life. Job is ashamed and confounded. "Behold, I am vile, what shall I answer thee?" (Job xl, 4). Yet again the great Creator speaks to him "out of the whirlwind."

"Behold, the whirlwind of the Lord goeth forth with fury, a continuing whirlwind; it shall fall with pain upon the head of the wicked. The fierce anger of the Lord shall not return until He have done, and until He hath performed the intents of His heart; in the latter days ye shall consider it" (Jer. xxx, 23, 24). "For, behold, the Lord will come with fire and with His chariots like a whirlwind, to render His anger with fury, and His rebuke with flames of fire. For by fire, and by His sword, will the Lord plead with all flesh, and the slain of the Lord shall be many" (Isa. lxvi, 15, 16). ABDASHERAH, AZIRU AND THE ABIRI.—VII.

By PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc.

DUSRATTA AND NEB-MAT-RA. ROYAL CORRESPONDENCE.

FROM various Tel-el-Amarna Tablets we learn that Abdasherah, his son Aziru and the Abiri, or Habiri, co-operated as allies in certain wars in which they were mutually interested.

In the preceding letters to THE NATIONAL MESSAGE we showed some things of great importance bearing upon the invasion of the land of Canaan by Israel under Joshua. Let us summarize:

First.—Egypt was the overlord of Canaan, Philistia, Phœnicia, and other regions at the time of the Israelite invasion of Palestine.

Second.—Several of the fortified cities of these countries were garrisoned by Egyptian soldiers, which fact is amply proved by many of the Tel-el-Amarna Tablets.

Third.—While the Hebrews, under Joshua, were capturing city after city, many of the garrison soldiers were being called back to Egypt, or were, in terror, fleeing from their fortifications. This is especially true of the garrison officers.

Fourth.—Neb-Mat-Ra, who was Amenophis III, had important wars in the Sudan, or Nubia, with the "Blacks" of the Upper Nile, and therefore required soldiers from Canaan.

Fifth.—Dusratta, king of the Mitani, Casi and Minyans, was in co-operating alliance with the Hebrews to some extent. This is made plain in several Tablets.

Sixth.—Dusratta and Neb-Mat-Ra were brothers-in-law and on most intimate terms of friendship.

Seventh.—It would naturally follow from the above that both Neb-Mat-Ra and his brother-in-law, Dusratta, would be favourable to the invading enterprise of Israel, or at least in an attitude of non-interference. This would be of the highest value to Joshua and his Israel nation fighting their way into their home, their God-given habitat.

Having set out these important facts, we will now deal at some length with Tablet letters between king Dusratta and his brother-in-law, Amenophis IV, addressed as Neb Mat Ra.

We would say that this Pharaoh's name means Ra, the God of Truth.

Neb means Lord or Master, similar to the Hebrew Adon or Adoni. Mat means Truth, and Ra the Great Sun God of Egypt.

In Tablet 9 B.M., p. 164, Dusratta writes to the "King of Egypt, my brother," and says, "I am at peace; peace be to thee; to Gilukhipa my sister be peace."

He continues thus: ". . . The chiefs who supported Artasumara my brother, with all that were theirs I slew. . . . I say to you, as my brother hears and will rejoice, my father loved thee and thou therefore didst love my father, and my father, as he saw this, gave thee my sister," etc.

This shows the exact relationship existing between these two kings.

In my former letters I set forth, on Tel-el-Amarna Tablet authority, that some of the Hittites helped Joshua and Israel in their wars; and gave the explanation that these Hittites were subject to Dusratta, king of the Mitani, whom he claimed to rule. With this in view, we will now quote further from Tablet 9 B.M., p. 164:

We may say that when Dusratta's father the king died, Dusratta took the throne, and his brother Artasumara made war on him, and brought his army against Dusratta. We now quote: "When my brother saw these things, he brought all those in the land of the Hittites as foes to my land; and Rimmon (his god) my Lord gave them to my hand; and I slew him among them, so that not one returned to his land. Now I have sent thee a chariot with two horses, a young man and a young woman of the spoil of the land of the Hittites," etc.

Thus we see he defeated, in his own land, the Hittites most completely, and then conquered their land whence he took great spoil, some samples of which he sent to his brother-in-law, Neb-Mat-Ra, Amenophis III.

In this way we see why Aziru, the son of Abdasherah, and his Abiri, or Hebrews, were for a time, and to some extent, naturally fighting as allies of certain Hittites in the army of Dusratta, a friend of Aziru and Abdasherah his father.

In Tablet 9 B.M., p. 165, Dusratta addresses his brother-in-law, the king of Egypt, as Neb-Mat-Ra; and in Tablets 22 B and 21*B*, he addresses him as Amenophis III. These letters show a real friendship existing between the two great kings.

In Tablet 27 B, p. 172, Dusratta seems to ask the co-operation of Amenophis III concerning some extra territory he was wishing to include in his kingdom : He says : " Proclaim thou for me that whatever people of Khalci, west of the Minyan country, whatever people of Khalci I have conquered are made subject (to me). I being the great chief of the power of the land of the Hittites, taking to me, my brother, all the people that are conquered. Let it extend to the city of Haran, and let the land possessed by no king be taxed."

This letter shows that the two great kings had lands bordering on each other's territory. And it further shows that Dusratta holds the Hittites as subject peoples.

In a friendly manner he is writing so as to have their national bounds properly adjusted.

A remarkable illustration of the close friendship existing between these two great kings, and marriage ceremonies, can be seen in this Tablet 27 B, p. 175. Dusratta is writing his brother-in-law Amenophis III, and says, " My son-in-law being married in the city of Thebes in the presence of the image of the deity."

" Is it not thus that Dusratta dwelling afar arranges the marriage of Tadukhipa ; Dusratta the favoured friend from the Minyan land, consenting to the wish of Amenophis III, the Egyptian friend, that the son of Amenophis III be so married to her in the presence of the image of the deity."

This Tadukhipa was the daughter of Dusratta the royal writer, and she was to, and did marry Amenophis IV, the son of Amenophis III who contracted the marriage.

The " Minyan land " referred to was a part of Armenia and under the rule of Dusratta.

King Dusratta writes Amenophis III in the thirty-sixth year of his reign as shown in Tablet 10 B.M., p. 175, and expresses mutual love existing between the two great kings. He sends greetings to his daughter Tadukhipa, the wife of young Amenophis IV, and praises Istar, his goddess, who has blessed them all. He speaks of her as the " Lady of Heaven," and asks, " Is not Istar my God ? "

From the various statements above we can safely conclude that the influence of Dusratta, king of the Mitani, Casi and the Minyans, upon the two Egyptian kings, one his brother-in-law and the other his son-in-law, was helpful to the Abiri or Hebrews, the allies of Dusratta.

Thus the natural enemies of the Hebrew nation were so wisely and strategically handled as to aid the Israelites in their work of conquering Canaan.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Dear Friends and Correspondents,—Just a personal line as it is mine once more to take flight for the distant West.

Is it coincidence or Providence which has ordered it so that it is necessary for me to take the long trail annually? It will take the sun eight hours to cover the distance between Greenwich and Victoria Observatories, which are hard by the cities of London and Vancouver respectively.

Now, as it takes the sun twenty-four hours to go around the world and to arrive at Greenwich again for a new day's start, it will be seen that there is just a third of the world on the forty-ninth parallel, say, between Greenwich and the west longitude of Victoria.

This has been my route for ten years past, forward and back again.

En route it has been my pleasure and duty to make calls and to hold missions at various centres. Each of these centres has become a Provincial centre for B.-I.

My programme will be about as follows on this trip Westward :—

May 2.	Montreal, Quebec.	May 11.	Chicago, Illinois.
,, 3.	Toronto, Provincial Conference.	,, 12.
,, 4.		,, 14.	Winnipeg, Manitoba, All-Canadian Congress.
,, 5.		,, 15.
,, 6.	Detroit, Michigan, All-American Convention.	,, 16.
,, 7.		,, 17.	Regina, Saskatchewan.
,, 8.		,, 18.	Calgary, Alberta.
,, 9.		,, 20.	Vancouver, B.C.
,, 10.	Lancing, Michigan.

This programme will carry me over some three thousand miles of territory, and will bring me into contact with many of our earnest and enthusiastic friends. All of these belong to the great B.-I. brotherhood.

In going I shall be compelled to leave much undone work on my desk. As usual, it is certain there must be a heavy list of letters to which I have been unable to reply. I have done the best I could to the danger-limit even. You will take this as a sufficient acknowledgment and answer to your very kind and helpful letters.

I leave the organization stronger here, but also the demands of the work are greater. I solicit from you your prayers and help during my absence. Mr. Garrison is surrounded by an earnest band of workers, and there is relief in some directions for him. But this is made up by greater responsibility in other directions, for the work multiplies faster than the staff of workers. Think of him and of Headquarters, and remember that a timely cheque for this which is his work and your work and the Lord's work will be greatly appreciated, and at times will lift a burden of anxiety as to the demands of the work. This can be said :—No organization is doing more with the means at its disposal than is the Federation. No other organization is doing so much with such inadequate means ; so stand by the ship and lend a hand.

Keep the literature speeding on its mission. God is working miracles through the literature every week, for which we thank God and take courage. You can start the agency on its way, and God will look after the result.

I shall speak to you, God willing, in every number of the Message. May it be that our God will speak to us in every page of every number. Help to send it on to others.

And so may the good Lord have us all in His keeping and give us the greatest year of all.

Sincerely yours in the great task,

W. Pascoe Goard.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

MR. LEECH and Mr. Garrison are to address three meetings in the Town Hall, Hove, on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday next, April 28th, 29th and 30th, at 3 in the afternoon. In the evening of each day, at 8, Mr. Garrison will give lantern lectures in the Robertson Hall, Brighton, adjoining Trinity Church :—Monday, "Cameos of Empire"; Tuesday, "Palestine"; Wednesday, "Wonders of Egypt." Reserved seats, 2s. Unreserved, 1s., may be obtained at Messrs. Lyon and Halls, and at Coombridge's Library.

By special request of the Rector, Canon E. Sidney Savage, Mr. Basil Stewart is giving two addresses, at 11 and 6.30, at the Church of St. Bartholomew-the-Great, Smithfield, E.C.1, on Sunday, May 4th. Mr. Stewart addressed a crowded and deeply interested meeting of our Worthing Branch on the afternoon of April 9th, under the Chairmanship of Rev. Canon Hollis, M.A., The subject was "Current Events." By special request, the address was repeated at a drawing-room meeting, kindly arranged by Mrs. Rowlett. Questions were freely asked at both meetings.

The Rev. W. T. Medhurst has given a lantern lecture on "The Great Pyramid and the British Empire" to an audience of over 600 people for our Branch at Rhymney, South Wales. The Rev. R. V. Swift, B.A., presided. Much interest was manifested, and further information asked for. Another address is being arranged.

* * *

Mr. Arthur Exley, J.P., the President of our Brisbane—Queensland—Branch, is on his way to England. We shall hope for one or two addresses from him at Headquarters.

At Headquarters, on Wednesday afternoon, April 30th, at 3 o'clock, the Rev. J. Lumley Davies, L.D., will give an address, and on Thursday evening, May 1st, the usual meeting will be held at 8 o'clock. Mr. John Leech will not resume his lectures until May 7th.

* * *

The monthly Bible Study Class for women, under the direction of Miss Alexander and Mrs. Zoe Bell, meets at Headquarters on Saturday, May 3rd, at 3 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to attend these classes.

The Rev. E. A. Couldrey reports a most encouraging and successful week of lectures, commencing at Portsmouth on the Monday of April 7th and ending at Oxford. The meetings at Southampton were particularly impressive, where the largest audiences, since the inception of the Branch, gathered to hear the addresses. At the close of the evening meeting there, a clergyman of the Church of England asserted that he was perfectly satisfied as to the verity of the Message as proclaimed by the lecturer, and would do all he possibly could in the future to disseminate the Truth. TO GOD BE THE GLORY.

Folkestone Branch reports how delighted they were with the two lectures given by Mr. G. R. Gair on April 9th, saying how his contribution to British-Israel Truth will do much solid and constructive work in the town. His subjects were "Israel of the Dispersion" and "Druidism." Folkestone certainly enjoyed his visit.

An encouraging meeting of the Oxford Branch was held on 3rd April, when the Rev. Gilbert Davies, M.A., L.Th., gave a most interesting address on "How British-Israel Truth clarifies the Bible." Several were present for the first time at one of our meetings. Mr. Davies skilfully presented British-Israel Truth in its elementary phases, his treatment of the Old Testament prophecies in an able and closely-reasoned address creating an immense amount of interest and considerable enthusiasm. Mr. Duncan Thompson, the Honorary Secretary of the Branch, presided, and Mr. A. J. Lancaster took an active part in making the arrangements. A hope was expressed on all hands that Mr. Davies would give another address. The Rev. J. H. Mortimer, Vicar of Marston, was unable to be present. The Cause is very much alive in Oxford.

Colonel Smythe gave two lectures for the Dover Branch on 10th April, good audiences attending to hear him deal with "The Two Kingdoms." During the addresses it was shown that the Jews were divided into two bodies—one following the Law of Moses, and the other the Talmud. All present enjoyed the excellent lectures and a good many questions were asked. Mr. S. Tarrant and Mr. J. R. Sutton, O.B.E., presided.

Two very successful meetings were held at Croydon on 11th April with large audiences, many of whom had come from long distances. Miss Hamilton Hunter was the speaker, and in response to her appeal that listeners should not only be interested, but add their support to the work, sixteen new members joined. The chair was taken by Mr. G. N. Nicholson.

"One great want of the times is a commanding ministry—a ministry of a piety at once sober and earnest, and of mightiest moral power. Give us these men, 'full of faith and of the Holy Ghost,' who will proclaim old truths with new energy, not cumbering them with massive drapery nor hiding them beneath piles of rubbish. Give us these men! men of sound speech, who will preach the truth as it is in Jesus, not with faltering tongue and averted eye, as if the mind blushed at its own credulity—not distilling into it an essence so subtle and so speedily decomposed that a chemical analysis alone can detect the faint odour which tells it has been there—but who will preach it apostlewise, that is first of all, at once a principle enshrined in the heart and a motive mighty in the life—the source of all morals and the inspiration of all charity—the sanctifier of every relationship, and the sweetener of every toil. Give us these men! men of zeal untiring—whose hearts of constancy quail not although dull men sneer, and proud men scorn, and timid men blush, and cautious men deprecate, and wicked men revile."—THE REV. DR. W. MORLEY PUNSHON.

The following note on the origin of the word "Tartan" appeared in the Weekly Scotsman dated April 12th, by J. R. Stevenson (South Australia):—

"The word 'tartan' is possibly derived from Dara or Darda (I Chronicles ii, 6) of the Dardanelles. I have already pointed out that the Æolians, who were Dardanai, or Trojans, and were present at the siege, according to the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, were the first who wore variegated garments, or pattern clothes. A tartan is defined also as 'a small Mediterranean coasting vessel.' While the Thistle stated that the French 'tiretaine' is derived from a Spanish word. Compare 'darn'—stitches or strands at right angles—also Tartan, Commander-in-Chief of the Army of Sennacherib; also proper names, Durdin, Deardon, Dryden, etc. Also someone has stated or surmised that 'dara' means 'warrior.'"

Mr. Basil Stewart writes:—

"In view of the predominating elements—finance and industry—marking the trials which beset us to-day, and particularly affecting Britain and America, the statements appearing in the Press are illuminating, and confirm the Great Pyramid's forecast absolutely. People are, I think, beginning to realize the serious nature of the condition in which we find ourselves, including the usually irresponsible section of the Press. Evidence has recently come to me that the Press is beginning to see that it made a fool of itself over the Great Pyramid and May 29th, 1928.

The following are some of the corroborative statements appearing in responsible quarters concerning the manner in which we are being assailed to-day (compare pp. 19-22 of my pamphlet, Great Pyramid and Current Events):—

Referring to the orgy of speculation on Wall Street last October and November, the Financial Review of Reviews for January says: 'A disaster more widespread than anything ever seen before in the world's financial history . . . The crash has been complete.' Arising out of this we have, on the authority of the President of the Council of the American Federation of Labour, the statement that there are now three million unemployed in the U.S.A. Seeing that the U.S. enjoy a huge market highly protected, this is (allowing also for population) relatively a more serious state of conditions than in (virtually) unprotected Britain with its 1,510,200 unemployed on December 30th last. This figure is almost the record reached 12 months ago, as I stated would probably happen. (See p. 21.)

It is frequently stated by sceptics that unemployment is no new ill, but is always with us, overlooking the fact that it is the extent of it which is the serious factor. On this point the above Review correctly emphasizes that 'unemployment on an unprecedented scale has now afflicted this country for nine years' (compare p. 20 of pamphlet); while the Morning Post (28-12-29) notes the additional fact that the weekly rate of increase is larger than formerly.

These problems are acute also in Germany, the number of registered unemployed in Berlin alone being nearly 300,000.

Finance and industry, the two main pillars of civilization, are to-day in a parlous state, because civilization has disregarded the two injunctions, 'Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things (i.e., material prosperity) shall be added to you' (Matt. vi, 33); and 'Ye cannot serve God and mammon' (Matt. vi, 24). Civilization has reversed these commands and has, in effect, attempted to poise a pyramid on its apex, and is consequently threatened by its fall.

Britain, as the 'shock-absorbing' nation and the mainstay of civilization, has to bear the brunt of this onslaught. We know, however, provision has been made for this crisis, and that, though it is the time of Jacob's trouble, yet he will be saved out of it. (Jer. xxx, 7.)"

OUR LATEST PUBLICATION.

JOEL'S PROPHETIC MESSAGE AND WARNING

By HOWARD B. RAND, LL.B.

"The reason for writing this book on THE MESSAGE OF JOEL is to make the Anglo-Saxon world realise that God is calling them to make restoration of the Law and its administration. His call is to execute justice and equity, and acknowledge the complete Kingship of Jehovah in Israel. . . . Because our leaders have failed to preach the Gospel of the Kingdom they have been brought into condemnation. Joel clearly shows Israel's punishment is the result of her national rebellion in failing to make complete restoration. The period depicted by the prophet coincides with the time indicated in Jeremiah's statement of Israel's difficulties:

'Alas! for that day is great, so that none is like it; it is even the time of Jacob's trouble.' (Jer. xxx, 7.)

Chronologically, this era began with the opening of the world war in 1914. The length of its duration corresponds in time with the period from the day Jacob stole his brother Esau's blessing to the day when he returned to Bethel and there consecrated his household.

May this book be the means of awakening ecclesiastical leaders and statesmen of Israel to the realisation that salvation for the individual and redemption for the nation—in the trying days ahead—is true repentance and a complete restoration of the Divine Constitution."

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

THE BUSY CROSSING AT THE RIVER.—II.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

THE shadows have fallen as the sun has departed to lighten the other side of the world and to bring awakening and the diurnal activity to the peoples who dwell over there.

The fire burns brightly in the grate, filling the room with lights and shadows which skip and play, now here, now there, among the hangings and furnishings of the room.

The curtains are drawn, and there is a cosy sense of snugness and homeliness which is heightened by the subdued murmur, and now and again the vibrant roar of the traffic on the street outside several stories below the level of our room.

Fragments of what we had written as to "The Crossing of the River" come to mind like the notes of a half-remembered refrain, and they start our mind off again in the same direction.

Several of our beloved friends have lately gone down to the crossing and have passed into the realms beyond the river. The mist lies in the valley and we cannot follow, with our earth-born sight, to the other shore. But we think of the little companies who went, some with this one and others with that one, to the crossing place. Little by little the material barriers which shut in our room shrank away, and we saw all these little groups merging into a steady stream of attendants constantly going to and coming from the margin of the river. As we looked on we saw this as a process going on day and night, without ceasing. We began to realize what a populous place the margin of the river is.

The centre of attention on the part of these groups was of course the ones who were called to cross the river.

We remembered that some score or more of times we have gone to the seaside, and there have walked up the gang-plank and gone on board a liner outward or homeward bound. Generally there has been a group of friends who have come to see us off and to say farewell and bon voyage! But we have been but one or two of all those who have gone on board. Our group has been but one of many such groups, and all the groups together have made up a crowd of more or less excited and sorrowing friends. What a populous place is the dock when a great liner is about to sail!

So it is at the river side. Your group has been there attendant on some dear one about to make the crossing. We have been of such a group on many an occasion when relative or friend has been about to pass. We know the sensations and the surroundings.

Our attention has been on the one about to make the crossing.

The one who has been about to make the crossing has been intent as well as consciousness and physical conditions would allow on those who were accompanying him, or was it her, to the water side.

Then the eyes have turned to the other shore, and in many cases they have brightened by recognition of the fact that the other shore is not deserted, but that friends are waiting there. Daniel saw something very much like this on one occasion, and the vision which he saw may, without reference to the historic things there spoken of, illustrate the thing we are now trying to say. Indeed this seems to be one aspect of the very thing itself.

There was the river. There was Daniel on the margin of the river. There were other personalities, mortal and immortal, on Daniel's side of the river.

But see, on the other side also there was a Glorious One

Digitized by Google

Who was intent upon the things going on on this side at the margin of the river. There was even a conversation going on between them concerning the things going on on the hither side of the river.

Now this is an illustrative vision. But we think we may say that the illustrations of the Bible as used by our Lord are always taken from matters of fact. They may be matters of science. They may be matters of experience. They may be matters political or national. But there is a basis of fact underneath the illustration.

The fact on which Daniel's illustration was based is that there are radiant personalities on each side of the river intent on the things which are going on on this side, on our side of the river, and that they know and are in sympathy with the Daniels who are busy and anxious here. They are God's ministering spirits sent forth to minister for them, or shall we say for us.

"Then I Daniel looked, and, behold, there stood other two, the one on this side of the bank of the river, and the other on that side of the bank of the river.

And one said to the man clothed in linen, which was upon the waters of the river, How long shall it be to the end of these wonders?

And I heard the man clothed in linen, which was upon the waters of the river, when he held up his right hand and his left hand unto heaven, and sware by him that liveth for ever that it shall be for a time, times, and an half; and when he shall have accomplished to scatter the power of the holy people, all these things shall be finished.

And I heard, but I understood not: then said I, O my Lord, what shall be the end of these things?

And he said, Go thy way, Daniel: for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end."—Dan. xii, 5-9.

Now look, as Daniel looked, and see that Glorious One Who is standing midway between the hither and the farther shore, upon the waters of the river. Should you like to approach and see this radiant Personality more closely? Then come, for He has given us lively manifestations of Himself once and again in the Holy Scriptures which are in themselves living and powerful.

"In the third year of Cyrus king of Persia a thing was revealed unto Daniel, whose name was called Belteshazzar; and the thing was true, but the time appointed was long: and he understood the thing, and had understanding of the vision.

In those days I Daniel was mourning three full weeks.

I ate no pleasant bread, neither came flesh nor wine in my mouth, neither did I anoint myself at all, till three whole weeks were fulfilled.

And in the four and twentieth day of the first month, as I was by the side of the great river, which is Hiddekel;

Then I lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and behold a certain man clothed in linen, whose loins were girded with fine gold of Uphaz:

His body also was like the beryl, and his face as the appearance of lightning, and his eyes as lamps of fire, and his arms and his feet like in colour to polished brass, and the voice of his words like the voice of a multitude.

And I Daniel alone saw the vision: for the men that were with me saw not the vision; but a great quaking fell upon them, so that they fled to hide themselves.

Therefore I was left alone, and saw this great vision, and there remained no strength in me: for my comeliness was turned in me into corruption, and I retained no strength.

Yet heard I the voice of his words: and when I heard the voice of his words, then was I in a deep sleep on my face, and my face toward the ground.

And, behold, an hand touched me, which set me upon my knees and upon the palms of my hands.

And he said unto me, O Daniel, a man greatly beloved, understand the words that I speak unto thee, and stand upright: for unto thee am I now sent. And when he had spoken this word unto me, I stood trembling."—Dan. x, 1-11.

It is the fashion of this wonderful Book, the Bible, that when the Lord would confirm a matter to us as certain beyond question, He gives it to us by the repeated testimony of one man, or by two or more witnesses. So here we have the double witness by two inspired men. One was a writer in the Old Testament, and the other a writer in the New Testament. So we take the second living presentation of this glorious Personality whom Daniel saw first by his side, and afterwards on the waters of the river.

"And I turned to see the voice that spake with me. And being turned, I saw seven golden candlesticks;

And in the midst of the seven candlesticks one like unto the Son of man, clothed with a garment down to the foot, and girt about the paps with a golden girdle.

His head and his hairs were white like wool, as white as snow; and his eyes were as a flame of fire;

And his feet like unto fine brass, as if they burned in a furnace; and his voice as the sound of many waters.

And he had in his right hand seven stars: and out of his mouth went a sharp two-edged sword: and his countenance was as the sun shineth in his strength.

And when I saw him, I fell at his feet as dead. And he laid his right hand upon me, saying unto me, Fear not; I am the first and the last:

I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death."—Rev. i, 12-18.

Once more we will look at this One Who appeared upon the waters of the river. He is on the hither side of the river, among His then living disciples. They are closeted together in the City of Jerusalem. Wonder of wonders, He is Himself to test the crossing of the river for us. "For we have not an high Priest who cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin." In the Garden of Gethsemane He drank the bitter cup of apprehension at the approach to the cold waters of the river, as the shadow of the Cross fell more darkly upon Him than did even the shadows of night deepened by the darker shadows of the tree under which He prayed.

Yet deeper still came the shadows to Him. Yes, deeper than they will ever come to us, for when He crossed the river it was deserted. None stood midway upon the waters to give Him cheer. In agony of soul He cried as His feet felt the cold, cold waters, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" That loneliness on the river will not be for you nor for me unless we have deliberately turned away from Him Who will meet us and cheer us and save us there.

Yes, He was about to taste this bitter cup for us.

In due time He made the crossing, and came up on the other side.

From that other shore He calls to us cheerily, triumphantly, "Fear not; I am the first and the last: I AM HE THAT LIVETH, AND WAS DEAD; AND, BEHOLD, I AM ALIVE FOR EVERMORE, AMEN; AND HAVE THE KEYS OF HELL AND OF DEATH."

And so He made the crossing for us.

And now He Who is midway on the waters of the river is speaking to us in a tone of wonderful sweetness, which penetrates every listening ear and carries comfort to every receptive heart.

"Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God believe also in me.

In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you.

And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also.

And whither I go ye know, and the way ye know."—St. John xiv, 1-4.

And so He is pledged to come and receive us at the crossing of the river. He never fails His own who trust in Him.

Frequently He reveals His Presence to those who are about to cross while yet they are in the midst of their friends on the hither shore. As the veil of the flesh grows thin they are given to see His face and to note the outstretching of His arms to receive them. They talk to the friends at the bedside of His sweet and comforting Presence. And so they pass with Him. Sometimes the vision is not seen while the earth friends are consciously present. But never does He fail to grasp the hand and comfort the heart of those who pass to Him. For such is His promise. They may see Him, or simply feel His comforting Presence. It may be that many, perhaps the many, are not far enough advanced in their spiritual powers to bear the sight of His Presence. But the kindly arms of the Shepherd may carry even the most youthful lamb to the bosom of the Father.

Yes, the river crossing is a busy place, where we meet the friends of those who are called to pass. And He Who assured us, "I will come again, and receive you unto Myself; that where I am, there ye may be also," is also at the crossing.

During our earth life the centre of the earth has been the centre of gravity for us, and we have been held firmly to the breast of mother earth. But the earth can hold only the body. It has no attractive power for the Spirit. The Spirit is therefore released as soon as the body is discarded. But the Spirit must not be left "wandering through dry places seeking rest." Therefore there has been provided a new Centre of Gravity. This time it will be the Personality of our Lord Himself, "That where I am, there ye may be also."

No matter how high we may soar into the clouds by aerial transport, the earth still holds us in her embrace. Should we fall we would be pulled violently to her breast, perhaps to be dashed to pieces by her strong embrace, which men call gravitation. But we could not miss our return to her bosom.

So does the Lord hold the Spirit of those whom He has received as His own. As soon as the Spirit is released from the body it must of necessity fly to the shelter of His breast and the embrace of His arms. His is an intelligent embrace, tender and sure; but never, never harmful to even the infant of days. His assurance is with us to cheer us as we go to the river. "I will come again, and receive you unto Myself; that where I am, there ye may be also."

So we go on our way singing—

"Shall we gather at the river,
Where bright angel feet have trod;
With its crystal tide for ever
Flowing by the throne of God."

It is characteristic of the hither side that we call the river the river of death, but on the farther side it is called the river of the waters of life, clear as crystal, which flows from the Throne of God and of the Lamb.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE BRITISH-ISRAEL-WORLD FEDERATION FOR 1929.

THE year 1929 was arduous when considered from the standpoint of the tasks faced and the work done.

It was a year of advancement: from the standpoint of the Divine message; by the written Word; by platform work; by social endeavour and by individual conversation we have been sending out the letter, and, we trust, the spirit of the Gospel of the Kingdom.

A clergyman of experience and standing said of our Movement a little while ago:—"I knew the British-Israel Movement a quarter of a century ago, but it appeared to me to be an unclothed skeleton of dry dones. It had a literary and historic interest, but little of living power. I have now lived to see it become one of the greatest spiritual forces in the land."

There always have been those who have stressed the Divine message, but it is with gratitude during the year that we have noted from every quarter the deep spiritual undertone which has pervaded every department of our work.

It is with encouragement and gratitude that we recognize a steadily rising tide of revival spirit which is sending people more and more to their Bibles, to their God, and to association with the Church.

The tone and character of the writings in the articles in our journals, in the pamphlets and books which are being issued; in the lectures which are given; in the conversation which is becoming so general, and in the praying power of the people, all make manifest this deepening spiritual undertone.

From the standpoint of scholarship we are glad to note the increasing efficiency of our students as a whole. Many workers in every field are uncovering facts and treasures of written knowledge, all of which make the demonstration of the B.-I. position more and more irresistible. The exposition of the Bible has increased in clearness and power in the hands of hundreds of our writers, and a still larger number of our speakers during the year.

Digitized by Google

It is the testimony of many theologians and scholars who are not entirely with us as yet in apprehension of the Truth that our workers are taking a leading place in research and exposition of the treasures of Holy Writ. Passages which have been obscure from the time they were written in past ages have come to light by the process of fulfilment of prophecy, and it has been the privilege and glory of our scholars and teachers to bring prophecy and fulfilment together, thus making manifest at once the logical sequence in the unfolding of Bible truth and the obvious demonstration of the miracle element in Bible inspiration.

The application to the sacred Scriptures of the working plan, now no more a hypothesis but a fully established law, which forms the basis of B.-I. interpretation, has unified the Scriptures and made them plain from the first verse of Genesis to the last word of Revelation.

The highest triumph of the former periods of Biblical exposition which was the product of ripe scholarship, aided by high spiritual illumination, necessarily fell far short of the triumph being achieved at the present time, because of the marvellous progress of prophetic fulfilment in Anglo-Saxon and other history during the last few decades.

It is with the greatest gratitude to Almighty God, "Who through the Holy Spirit takes of the things of God and reveals them unto us," that we are able to give this testimony.

The British-Israel scholar finds himself in a most favoured position in this regard, because of the fact that he recognizes the Anglo-Saxon world as Israel, in whose history Israel prophecy is being fulfilled, and is therefore able to put his finger upon such fulfilment from year to year, and latterly from day to day, saying, "This is that which was spoken of God by the mouth of His holy prophets."

Failing to see or deny that the Anglo-Saxon is Israel, therefore failing to see that Anglo-Saxon history is dramatically fulfilling Israel prophecy, other scholars are in a less favoured position necessarily. But the obstacles to their present knowledge lies in the prejudice or failure to realize in their own minds.

While history has thus been fulfilling prophecy, and it has been the mission of our Movement to point this out, archæologists have been uncovering rich treasures of knowledge of the hitherto buried past, and have been furnishing secular lines of history which parallel the sacred histories of the Bible, and which, in overwhelming measure, prove the histories of the Bible to be accurate, dependable and sure.

Thus the day and the birthplace of Abraham have been made clear by Mr. Woolley's researches at Ur of the Chaldees. Thus the Joshua campaign and period have been verified by excavation in Palestine. But most important to our particular position has been the recovery of the secular history of Assyria during the period of Israel's captivity there. We are now furnished with synonymous names through which Israel travelled after she left Palestine, such as Scythæ, Getæ, Saccæ, Kumri, etc. Taking these four names so furnished to us archæologically, we can take in hand ancient history, mediæval history and modern history, and follow the movements of Israel from Palestine to Assyria, from Assyria across Northern Europe, from thence to the borders of the North Atlantic and the Baltic, and so into Britain.

We have reason for thanksgiving that every archæological advance both as to recovery of written historic materials and in their translation have gone steadily to the demonstration that our position is fully established, not only by the history and prophecy of the Bible, but also by secular history. The effect of all this in the theological world is nothing short of revolutionary, but it is a counter-revolution. There was a revolution, as all know, in the theological world a generation or so ago, which has developed into the Modernist position of the present day. That revolution was based upon the fallacy that the early Books of the Bible were not historic, that the legal portions of the Bible which included covenants, promises and prophecies made with, to, and concerning Israel had failed. The ground that the assumption that such covenants, promises and prophecies had failed was that the nation Israel to whom they were made, and upon whose national continuance they were made to rest, had either disappeared or been transmuted into an entirely different organization, viz., the Christian Church. The nation having disappeared, the covenants made with the nation lapsed, the promises made to the nation broke down, the prophecies concerning the nation failed of fulfilment, and the result of all this was assumed to be a most serious breakdown of the sacred Scriptures. Upon this fallacy the whole of the Modernist position rested. It is true that other lines of research, such as higher criticism, etc., were brought in to buttress and explain the fact of such tremendous failure in the written Word, but the whole thing would have been impossible but for the assumption that the nation Israel had failed, and therefore the legal part of the sacred Scriptures had wholly broken down.

In pointing out that Israel has not failed, but is a going concern among the nations, occupying the territory and the position, wielding the influence and carrying out the mission fully indicated in the prophecies, we necessarily reverse the whole of the Modernist revolution against the historicity and literal dependability of the sacred Scriptures.

Once it is demonstrated to Christian scholars as a body that Israel continues, and in her these legal fulfilments are taking place, Modernism will seem to be unscholarly, untrustworthy, and wholly resting upon a fallacy which has now been exposed.

No such contribution as this has been made to the theological world for many generations, and it is the glory and privilege of the B.-I. Organization to make that contribution.

In pursuit of this work, we have been able to maintain and increase the circulation of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE. We have maintained the output of the Covenant Publishing Company, enjoying a turnover of many thousands of pounds in literature distributed without impairment of capital invested, and without cost to the Federation.

For all these things we heartily give thanks to Almighty God. In the matter of organization we have been perfecting our work at home, and establishing the work abroad.

A feature of particular interest has been the hundreds of books by the Rev. Pascoe Goard and other writers sent out to Clergy and Ministers through the kindness of generous donors, and the letters of thanks and keen appreciation from the donees. There is very good reason to know that these books have accomplished much for our Cause. We have had some remarkable testimonies regarding the new light these books have brought to those who have read them, in some cases saving the readers from despair.

Digitized by Google

* * *

A very fine series of ten meetings in the Central Hall, Westminster, in February proved of great value to our Movement, by the high standard and spiritual tone of the addresses. The Rev. Pascoe Goard spoke at each meeting, and he made a profound impression upon all who heard him. He was supported by several speakers, whose names were given in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE of March 2nd, and the efforts of all were highly valued. The testimony of one Minister is worth recording. He said: "The first impression must surely have been the deep spirituality which permeated the addresses. It was an atmosphere which pervaded the whole and took possession of speakers and hearers alike. During the whole of my ministerial life it has never been my privilege to attend any meetings more fully charged with deep spirituality. The presence of the Holy Spirit of God was very manifest. The second impression, equally clear, was the sound exposition of the Holy Word of God. One could have wished that many of our Clergy and Ministers could have been with us to have heard the Gospel of the Redemption of Israel set forth by the Rev. G. H. Lancaster. And then a masterly presentation of the Gospel of the Atonement delivered with so much spiritual earnestness and fervour by the Rev. Pascoe Goard."

Four meetings were held in the Kensington Town Hall in April, when impressive and enlightening addresses were delivered by the Rev. Pascoe Goard, Mr. John Leech, the Rev. Joseph Gay, and the Rev. J. Lumley Davies. The audiences were excellent, both in numbers and quality, and it was very gratifying to notice the presence and interest of many young people.

* * *

Among many missions held during the year, there was one at Cambridge, in the Guildhall. There were ten meetings, addressed by the Rev. Pascoe Goard, Mr. John Leech, the Rev. Lumley Davies, the Rev. Joseph Gay, and the Secretary-General. As a result a Branch was formed in this University centre.

* * *

The first Convention of the B.-I. Federation of Canada was held in Winnipeg on May 1st, 2nd and 3rd. It proved a time of great encouragement and profit to the Canadian leaders and workers. Professor Edward Odlum, the Rev. E. J. Springett, the Rev. H. A. Edwards, and Messrs. Blackaller and Robeson gave excellent addresses. The Rev. Pascoe Goard was unfortunately ill, and was only able to speak very briefly at the last meeting.

* * *

The May Meetings at Headquarters proved a time of spiritual, educational and social enjoyment to the large audiences which gathered here. A surprise feature was the rendering of a gramophone record of an address by the Rev. Pascoe Goard, which had been recorded just before he sailed for Canada. The record was considered to be eminently satisfactory, and it may be mentioned that we still have records for sale. Those of our members and friends who would like to have them can be supplied at our Headquarters.

A successful Bible Convention was held at Llandrindod Wells in August—26th to 31st—conducted by the Rev. Joseph Gay, the Rev. T. Sparshott Johnson, M.A., Mr. John Leech, M.A., K.C., and Mr. John J. Morey. The gatherings each day were very encouraging, and a time of spiritual refreshing was experienced.

* * *

A Junior Department of the Federation, under the name of the British-Israel Crusaders, was inaugurated at Headquarters on September 14th, under the leadership of Mr. John Leech. This Movement should prove of great value to our Cause. It has been taken up with enthusiasm. A large number of members have been enrolled, and keen interest has been manifested in the Overseas Dominions.

A monthly journal, the B.-I. CRUSADER, has been started for juniors, and this is having an increasingly wide circulation.

Our Tenth Annual Congress was held in October last in the Central Hall, Westminster. It was marked by intense zeal and devotion and by complete harmony. The attendance was up to standard and even beyond. A large number of new faces were noticed day by day. Representatives were present from many parts of the United Kingdom, Ireland, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Africa, the United States, India, Palestine, and elsewhere. The addresses reached a high level, and several times evoked remarkable outbursts of applause. There was a fine array of twenty-five speakers. The Rev. Pascoe Goard gave several remarkable Biblical expositions. The Rev. Maxwell Carnson, who had come from South Africa, also made valuable contributions in some telling and effective addresses. Our thanks are due to all the speakers, who rendered excellent service to our great Cause. The last meeting of the series was held in the great Hall of the Church House, when there was again a very large audience. An inspiring meeting closed a remarkable week.

A feature of the Congress week was the Clerical and Ministerial Conference Sessions. These were held on four forenoons at Headquarters, presided over by the Rev. Pascoe Goard, whose addresses made a most profound impression.

Many new Branches of the Federation have been established during the year, and several Study Circles have been started.

* * *

An ever-increasing number of meetings throughout Britain, America and the Overseas Dominions is another evidence of the steady advance of our Cause, and this includes some useful open-air work.

* * *

It is especially pleasing to record that the Annual Sale promoted at Headquarters in December by the Women's

Digitized by Google

Auxiliary in aid of the Federation Funds was a great success, and yielded a sum far in excess of any previous year.

* * *

Meetings in celebration of the Anniversary of the Deliverance of Jerusalem were held in the Central Hall, Westminster, and in the Town Hall, Chiswick, when addresses were delivered by the Rev. Pascoe Goard and Mr. Herbert Garrison.

* * *

Mr. Howard Rand, LL.B., who has been acting as our Representative in the United States of America, has been doing excellent work. He is now organizing an All-American Convention to be held in Detroit, from which great things are expected.

* * *

The Clerical and Ministerial Association, under the presidency of the Rev. Pascoe Goard, is doing excellent work, and is attracting several new members. The Clergy and Ministers on our list number five times those of a few years ago.

* * *

Israel's Scripture and Prayer Union, under the Secretaryship of the Rev. Commander Roberts, has had a great increase in its membership, and it is extending its influence and proving a blessing to large numbers.

* * *

We are greatly indebted to our noble army of speakers, writers and workers in all parts. The value of the services of the Rev. Pascoe Goard are beyond the possibility of tabulation, whether through the spoken or the written word. Our veterans—the Rev. Commander Roberts and the Rev. Dr. Mountain—are still active we rejoice to say; the former is rendering yeoman's service to our Branches in Devonshire, and the latter is at work on another important book.

There has been a steady output of our general literature, and an increasing number of new subscribers to our weekly journal, THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER.

The Secretary-General has had, as usual, a strenuous year with correspondence with practically all parts of the world, except Russia, besides a great amount of organizing work in addition to the Congress. He has addressed also nearly two hundred meetings, and has had an enormous amount of interviewing. He wishes to express his appreciation of the continued assistance of his Staff and of all the help rendered by the many voluntary workers.

The B.-I.-W.F. was the first organization to hold a meeting in Britain against the persecution and execution of Christians in Russia. This took place in the large Central Hall, Westminster, on December 13th, when there was a very large audience. Our President was in the chair. Powerful and impressive addresses were given by the Rev. Pascoe Goard, Prebendary A. W. Gough, M.A., F.R.S.L., the Rev. W. Fetler, a missionary just returned from Riga, and others. The Resolution of Protest was carried with only two or three Communist dissentients. This meeting was followed by a Mass Meeting and Demonstration in the Royal Albert Hall on December 19th, under the auspices of the Christian Protest Council, for which date our Secretary-General had fortunately secured the Hall. There was a great assembly and a fine array of speakers. Our Executive officers, members and workers played an important part in the organization and secured a large proportion of the attendance. Mr. Garrison had charge of the 150 volunteers who were responsible for the comfort of the audience. Here again the Resolution of Protest was carried with very few dissentients. Several members of our Council are on the Council of the Christian Protest Movement. Our President, Major Knowles, Deputy President, the Rev. Pascoe Goard, Secretary-General Garrison, and Financial Secretary, Colonel Wright, were among the first elected members of the original Committee, and they are all members of the Executive and Finance Committee of the Movement, Major Knowles being Chairman, and Mr. Garrison Deputy Chairman.

By invitations from Canada and the United States, and by wish of the Council of our Federation, the Secretary-General and Mrs. Garrison visited those countries during the summer months. They had a very wonderful time with the British-Israel members and supporters, as well as with the general public in the great Dominion, and in the land of Manasseh, from the Atlantic to the Pacific coasts, covering over 20,000 miles in their journeys, and receiving everywhere the utmost cordiality and kindness. Mr. Garrison gave forty lectures and addresses, some of which were broadcast. Several of these addresses were given at Canadian and other Club luncheons to the professional and business men of the cities. In addition, many public lectures were given to excellent audiences of the leading people, and also several addresses to British-Israel gatherings, conferences and drawing-room meetings.

Our friend of the 1920 Conference, Rev. R. H. Sawyer, travelled 1,000 miles to greet the travellers at Toronto and take part in the meetings there.

We wish to record with deep gratitude the splendid hospitality and enormous help received, especially from Mr. S. J. Frame, of Toronto, Dr. and Mrs. Thompson, the Rev. E. J. Springett, Mr. W. R. Mulock, K.C., and Mrs. Mulock, of Winnipeg, Mr. and Mrs. Gee, and Mr. and Mrs. Painter, of Regina, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Noble, and Mr. and Mrs. Jackson, of Calgary, the Rev. H. A. and Mrs. Edwards, of Jasper Park, Professor and Mrs. Odlum and General Odlum, the Rev. Pascoe and Mrs. Goard, Mr. and Mrs. Parker, Mr. and Mrs. Petter, of Vancouver, Mr. and Mrs. Blackaller, and Mr. and Mrs. Richards, of Victoria, and Dr. J. W. Stevens and Colonel Evan Watkins, of New York.

Remarkable success was achieved in Vancouver, where Mr. Garrison addressed two crowded audiences of the leading people on hot summer nights, the first of which was presided over by the Lt.-Governor of British Columbia, supported by the Prime Ministers of Manitoba and New South Wales, Professor Odlum, General Odlum, and the Rev. Pascoe Goard. The second was presided over by Professor E. Odlum.

Club luncheon addresses and public lectures were also given in Victoria, where Mr. Garrison had the platform assistance of the Rev. Pascoe Goard.

An interesting British-Israel Conference was addressed in New York, arranged by Dr. Stevens and Colonel Watkins. Here also Mr. Garrison addressed an important luncheon Club of leading business men and another large gathering, at each of which the utmost enthusiasm prevailed. He was earnestly requested to give his message all across America.

Our friends both in Canada and the United States have been kind enough to say that much good was done by these visits and addresses, and they are earnestly asking for return visits.

Our Branches in the Overseas Dominions are keeping the flag flying and making a steady advance. In Brisbane—Queensland—our friends held as usual a demonstration coinciding with the London Congress. Mr. Arthur Exley, J.P., the President of the Branch, Mr. Victor Rigby, and others are live wires in the Cause, so also are the Rev. W. Floyd Shannon and Mr. Howard, of our Adelaide Branch.

Australasia is calling for a travelling organizer and lecturer, and urging us to send one. Both Australia and New Zealand are prepared to help with funds in this direction.

Canada has achieved the inauguration of a distinct Forward Movement by the acquisition of a fine house as Headquarters in the beautiful city of Toronto, officially opened on December 14th by Mr. W. H. Blackaller. We congratulate our premier Dominion and wish all concerned every blessing and success. Montreal, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, Vancouver and Victoria are making progress. Professor Odlum, the Rev. E. J. Springett, Messrs. Frame, Parker and Petter, and many others, are rendering good and constant service. It would require a long list to name them all. Good progress has been made in South Africa, in spite of many difficulties. We are indebted to our Missioner, the Rev. Maxwell Carnson, for constant effort and devoted service, and we thank all who have supported him.

British-Israel is the coming great Power; the possibilities inherent in it are immense and greater than we can foresee. United effort will give it concentrated force and impetus. It is worthy of our whole-souled devotion: all that we can give of all which is best in us. We must regard ourselves as cogs in a driving wheel, moving in unison to a common end. All truly religious people are longing for a Revival. There is at present a terrible lack of faith in this our land. We are here and ready with the reason of the faith that is in us. May God enable us to flow in and fill the vacuum, so that through the great potentialities of our Federation the longed-for and vitally essential Revival may come. The Bible is the fulcrum and British-Israel Truth the lever to move the world.

ST. GEORGE for ENGLAND! Another St. George's Day has come and gone. How few Englishmen appreciate its significance.

What do you see when you look upon the emblem of ST. GEORGE? Do you see the white horse reared as the rider strikes the dragon writhing at his feet? Or do you see more?

Do you see ST. GEORGE as typical of the followers of that greater Rider on

A WHITE HORSE*

Who goes forth conquering and to conquer?

ST. GEORGE and the dragon is symbolic of the Son of GOD bruising the serpent's head. And it is more. It is symbolic of the sons of GOD, who, led by the SON of GOD, are destined eventually to beat down Satan under their feet.

Wonderful that ST. GEORGE should be the patron saint of ENGLAND. Wonderful that this symbolism should be the chosen heraldry of ENGLAND. Wonderful but only natural.

For hidden in this symbol lies the story of the Brith-ish race—a race in covenant relationship with GOD. And they are followers of Him Whose Name is "Wonderful." WONDERFUL† is the name of CHRIST, the MIGHTY GOD, and Everlasting KING; KING of a wonder race and everlasting KINGDOM.

"In righteousness he doth judge and make war."‡ A startling doctrine this in days of universal national disarmament!

And the armies that follow Him in heaven follow Him upon white horses.[1] These are the sons of GOD, invisible hosts; unseen allies of the armies of ISRAEL-BRITAIN fulfilling the Divine purposes in the earth.

Have not the armies of ISRAEL from ancient time been justly called the armies of the living GOD?[2]

Would that we could regain this conscious knowledge in these modern days.

For we live in the very time when the

KINGS OF THE EARTH[3]

and their armies are being gathered together to make war[4] against the Rider on the White Horse and His army.

For there is a spiritual world interpenetrating our material world. And this war is psychical as well as physical.

Except we have the eyes of an Elisha we cannot see the unseen conflict. But the fact remains that we fight not only against flesh and blood but also against the rulers[5] of the darkness of this world.

Only at times of crisis such as MAHANAIM,[6] DOTHAN,[7] and MONS, is the conflict temporarily revealed to common mortal eyes.

"I will put enmity between thee and the Woman and between thy seed and her seed."[8]

Thus is the declaration of war, between the two contestants and their respective seed, recorded.

Enmity between the seed of the Woman and the children of the Wicked One is to last until finally evil is overcome of good, as it is written:—"It shall bruise thy head; thou shalt bruise His heel."

Two phases of final victory are indicated here. The power of Evil reached its apogee when the children of the Wicked One crucified the KING of the KINGDOM of HEAVEN.

But this was the type of victory that spells defeat. By His sacrifice He overcame iniquity.

What if His heel was bruised in stamping out the power of evil. Through the Cross He has endowed the sons of GOD (the multitudinous seed) with power to consolidate His victory and finally beat down Satan under their feet.

But what has this to do with ENGLAND? Surely the age-long conflict of good with evil is a universal conflict.

So it is. But the plan for world redemption has a national[9] as well as an international plane of action. And EPHRAIM-ENGLAND, centre and head of the far-flung Brith-ains, or overseas, is the spearhead of the national phase in the prosecution of this struggle.

On the wider scale the final victory will be a victory for Humanity itself. CHRIST died for every man. And the sons of men[10] led by the SON of MAN will ultimately triumph.

On the narrower scale the victory will be a triumph for the redeemed race, the race in covenant relationship with GOD—Israel.

This is the descent of the sons of GOD. GOD—ADAM—SETH — NOAH — SHEM — ABRAHAM — ISAAC — ISRAEL. A thin red line from which should spring the physical descent of the multitudinous seed. For there is an election of RACE as well as of grace. And there is a material KINGDOM in the earth based upon a biological foundation.

The headship of the Saxon sons of ISAAC was to devolve upon the head of EPHRAIM-ISRAEL.[11] From thence should come an organized forming a political nucleus which any and every nation under Heaven can freely join.

NATION AND COMPANY OF NATIONS[12]

A national re-birth is the destiny of this redeemed Race formed into one great ISRAEL KINGDOM of many nations. This elect Race form the body of people called the BRIDE.

Regenerated nationally they will become joined to CHRIST and HIS BODY which is the CHURCH.

This is the union of CHURCH and STATE[13] that will herald the manifestation of that race of super-men—the sons of GOD—for whom the whole creation waiteth.[14]

The redemption of the whole creation[15] through a redeemed RACE is the wonder story esoterically concealed in the symbolism of ST. GEORGE and the dragon.

THE NAVAL PACT.

THE politicians and newspapers are jubilant that the wisdom of man in the Naval Conference has achieved something; that an agreement between three Powers foreshadows an agreement between five Powers.

A religious weekly says:—"Longing and praying as we do for the great day when the kingdoms of this world shall become the Kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ, we welcome every step that takes us a little further along the way and sweetens the relationships that bind together the whole family of mankind." Acceptable as such a pronouncement will be to the whole of the Churches, it fails utterly to grasp the momentous import of this agreement, which is the direct working of God and has been thrust by the force of circumstances upon the Conference.

The official memorandum of the agreement states that it is between the British Commonwealth of Nations, the United States and Japan. Probably this is the first time that the term "British Commonwealth of Nations" has been used in an official international document. It has not hitherto been within the terminology of the politicians nor of the Churches, but it has been distinctively that of the British-Israel Movement.

It is hoped that another Conference will be held in 1935, when France and Italy may come into the agreement. But Mussolini has declared that he requires five years to perfect the organization of his forces, so that Italy will not be subject to the dictation of the League of Nations. And Mr. Davidson, in his fourth article last year, demonstrated that we may look for a passing from the sphere of sea-power in January, 1933, and a revolutionary change in the British Race in the British Empire and the United States of America after that date.

The agreement between the three Powers has reference to the Washington Treaty which is to hold until 1936. That is the date given by the Pyramid for the passing out from the present tribulation. With all the difference between expositors of the time periods of prophecy there is a consensus of opinion that prophetical times are focussing upon 1934 to 1936.

So that the statesmen of all nations will do well to pause and think of what will be the conditions that will confront them in that period to which they are giving their attention. The Church leaders will be well advised to look and see if this step in historical development is not also a step in prophetical fulfilment and that it is the working of God. And let all men seek to know and understand this great entity which has come to the virility of maturity, "The British Commonwealth of Nations."

DOES THE BIBLE STAND OR FALL WHEN TESTED BY SCIENCE, HISTORY AND PHILOSOPHY?—I.

BY PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc.

THESE comments are dedicated to all believers in and lovers of the Holy Scriptures.

Our purpose is to examine the Old Testament from many viewpoints, note the plain language interpretation of its contents, and compare with data gleaned from the extensive studies and hard labours of scholars, scientists, historians, theologians and philosophers.

We know that only a small portion of the human family accepts the Bible as Divinely inspired, and of final authority. Look at a list of the peoples who do not—Shintoists, Confucians, Buddhists, Parsees, Brahmins, Jainists and Mahometans! A goodly list indeed! These represent fully 1,200,000,000 of the human family, and they are increasing in numbers annually more rapidly than the believers in the Bible are increasing.

Of the balance of the human family there are many millions of other sorts of religionists, moralists, spiritualists, theosophists, symbolists and allegorists who have little or no use for the Book as an authoritative guide for their lives.

We may go further yet. While the Roman Church officially proclaims the Old and New Testaments to be true, the Word of God given to man by inspiration, that Church, in effect, leaves the Scriptures on the shelf, and scarcely uses it in the everyday life of its people. This is no condemnation of the Roman Church; only a statement of a well-known fact.

Further still, there are a very large number of nominal Christians and Protestants who neglect the Book almost altogether.

Then we have the Protestant Christian Church, rank and file, split into two great divisions known as "modernists" and "fundamentalists." The "modernists" accept only a very limited portion of the Scriptures as of Divine authority, and regard it as if it were only a good average history, or a work on literature, spiced with romance of the impossible, or at least of the improbable.

From the above analysis we begin to realize that the percentage of the human family accepting the Holy Scriptures, as of Divine authority, is small indeed.

We cannot stop here, but are impelled to go further in our search and close analysis of facts and conditions in relation to this matter.

No person can doubt the honesty, sincerity and zealous devotion to the Word of God on part of the men and women who are classed as "fundamentalists." They believe in the whole Scriptures as the God-given word and revelation to man. And in all zeal and honesty they read and teach the Book on this basis of acceptance and belief.

This is important, cheering and of great value—but here we must pause!

Is it not a fact that the fundamentalists to a large extent believe and teach the following:—

First.—That national Israel of the Ten Tribes was exiled and utterly lost long before the time of Christ, and that they permanently ceased to figure as a nation in the affairs of humanity.

Second.—That the numerous blessings promised to national Israel have been fulfilled and are being fulfilled in the Christian Church.

Third.—That the Jews are the only representatives on earth of Israel of the ancient days.

Fourth.—That any national, concrete blessings promised to Israel, not fulfillable in the Church, will be fulfilled in and with the Jews.

These four statements represent facts relating to the majority of our men and women who are truly loyal in heart to the Scriptures.

As we proceed slowly, carefully and deliberately through the pages of the many Books of the Scriptures, we must keep in mind the above related beliefs; and at the same time try to show that the fundamentalists are so teaching the Bible as to increase the number of scholastic disbelievers and modernists.

To our mind it seems a logical necessity for honest, fearless disciples of these good fundamentalisis to pass over into the ranks of men who do not accept the Book as of Divine origin and authority. This we will show as we proceed.

To hold our own thinkings and the thinkings of our readers within well-defined bounds, we proceed to quote and comment upon the various parts of the Scriptures which seem to call our attention in relation to easily-understood, logical and sane interpretation.

With this in view we will begin at Genesis, chapter one (in next issue), and from there travel with our readers down the pages of history, prophecy and moral philosophy, indicating the methods of science as we pass.

THE DOCUMENTS OF DANIEL.

ONE of our contemporaries contains the following critique of the Documents of Daniel:

"'The Documents of Daniel,' by Rev. W. Pascoe Goard (The Covenant Publishing Co., Ltd., 3s. 6d. net). Those interested in the 'British-Israel' theory will find in this treatise an attempt to separate various documents supposed to exist in the Book of Daniel and an attempt to connect them with the course of world history. We find it very bewildering and think much too highly of Daniel's visions to believe that the period they foreshadow is manifested in the British Empire and the United States of America."

Our critic seems not to have seen what one would imagine every reader of the Book of Daniel would see, namely: That the Book of Daniel is made up of separate documents which the author dated and carefully separated.

One would imagine that such a critic would have been aware that Archbishop Ussher recognized that this was the case, and he assigned a date to each of the documents concerned.

Such being the case, it is with somewhat of amusement that we read of "an attempt to separate the various documents supposed to exist in the Book of Daniel." There is no such attempt. There is implied the recognition of an exceedingly well-known fact.

It is also with somewhat of amusement that we read that "Those interested in British-Israel Truth will find in this an attempt . . . to connect them with the course of world history." Surely our critic never read the Book of Daniel. Had he done so he must have known that the author of the Book of Daniel, and not the author of "The Documents of Daniel," specifically related the various documents of Daniel to the course of world history. For instance, let us take one or two such references:

The very first paragraph of the Book of Daniel relates that Book to the course of world history in the following unmistakable terms:

> "In the third year of the reign of Jehoiakim king of Judah came Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon unto Jerusalem, and besieged it.
> And the Lord gave Jehoiakim king of Judah into his hand, with part of the vessels of the house of God: which he carried into the land of Shinar to the house of his god; and he brought the vessels into the treasure house of his god."

The second document begins in chapter ii with a similar connection with world history in the following words: "And in the second year of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, Nebuchadnezzar dreamed dreams."

Chapter vii begins: "In the first year of Belshazzar, king of Babylon."

Chapter viii begins: "In the third year of the reign of king Belshazzar."

Chapter ix begins: "In the first year of Darius, the son of Ahasuerus of the seed of the Medes, which was made king over the realm of the Chaldeans in the first year of his reign."

Chapter x begins: "In the third year of Cyrus, king of Persia, a thing was revealed unto Daniel."

Chapter xi begins: "Also I in the first year of Darius the Mede."

Thus at every point are the separate documents dated, and specifically related to the chronology of world history. All that was done when the Book of Daniel was written. Our critic has not seen it, that is all.

These things are for all to read, whether they believe in British-Israel presentation of Truth or not.

Now as to our critic thinking too highly of the Book of Daniel to believe that the period "foreshadowed is manifested in the British Empire and the U.S.A.," we call attention to the fact that the Book of Daniel foreshadowed many periods; in fact, every age of the period stretching from the erection of Nebuchadnezzar's throne to the final destruction of the Empires which succeeded him, and to the possession of the kingdom by the saints of the Most High. Every reader of the Book of Daniel, and therefore our critic, if he has read the Book of Daniel, will agree that Daniel foreshadowed in chapter ii the course of the Nebuchadnezzar dynasty; the rise and progress of the Medo-Persian power; the sudden accession of Greece; and the following Roman period, during the whole of the prophetic "evening-morning" as Daniel calls it, amounting to a period of 2,520 years of history.

Is there any difficulty in believing, nay, would it not be greatly difficult not to believe that the Book which deals with every one of the great world Empires of history would not also deal with the greatest Empire the world has ever seen? If the Book of Daniel did, as a matter of fact universally accepted, deal with the Continental Empires, how can the Book be suddenly raised to so exalted a plane as to suppose it to be too high to deal with the British Empire?

But if our critic means that the final stage of history dealt with in the Book of Daniel is on a more exalted plane than the present British Empire and American Republic, then we say we heartily agree with him so far. For the final stage of the Daniel prophecies deal with the Millennial reign of our Lord.

PREDESTINATION.—VI.

ISRAEL'S BIRTHRIGHT.

BY THE REV. R. G. F. WADDINGTON, M.A.

DAVID, in his prayer of humble thanksgiving, after hearing the promise of Jehovah to his House, says:—

"What one nation in the earth is like Thy People, even like Israel, whom God went to redeem for Himself for a people, and to make Him a name, and to do great things for you, and terrible things for Thy land before Thy people, which Thou redeemest to Thee out of Egypt, from the nations and their gods? And Thou didst establish to Thyself Thy people Israel to be a people unto Thee for ever; and Thou, Lord, becamest their God."

One may say, if one wishes, that this is just the vain and empty boasting of a puppet king, who imagines himself one of the great ones of the earth, because he has managed to subdue his immediate enemies. And some of the newer Commentaries, though they do not say so in so many words, do suggest it, by the tone of their comments. But can anyone, who reads without bias, really charge David with vainglory? This prayer, like all other Bible prayers, breathes such a spirit of humility and trustfulness, and expresses such a desire for the magnification of Jehovah, that boasting is excluded. No, the adverse critic really has to import into the Scripture something that is not there.

Now when you turn from Scripture to the history of Britain, it is impossible, I think, to avoid noticing a parallel, which seems to suggest that the promises of which David speaks, in common with other Old Testament writers, have their fulfilment in our British history.

Here is a quotation of many years ago.

"The British Empire, which we usually find coloured red on the maps, literally encircles the globe, east and west, north and south. If it were not so scattered, the first thing to strike the eye would be its vast extent, more than nine millions of square miles of the earth's surface, a fifth part of the whole habitable globe, and the largest Empire of either the ancient or modern world." Since that was written, in 1890, there have been added to our Sovereign's dominions nearly four million square miles.

How has this increase been accomplished? When Sir John Colomb wrote the words I have quoted, Europe was of opinion that Britain had reached the zenith of her power and was on the decline.

When we entered upon the war of 1914, there were many who believed, and more who hoped, that the end had come. Even the most optimistic felt that we should do well to retain our hold upon our possessions. Did not Germany consider, and lay great store on the consideration, that some of our Colonies would seize the opportunity to become independent? Yet, directly contrary to all expectations, more than a million square miles was added to our Empire.

There is no boasting in that, it is a plain statement of fact.

Nor are we altogether willing rulers over some of the lands we have been called upon to administer. There are newspaper magnates, for example, who profess very loudly their patriotism, who are for ever demanding that we should withdraw from some of our commitments, and leave the responsibility to others. "Why should Britain have the responsibility and expense?" they ask.

Their very attitude, then, is a testimony to the fact that these added territories have not been due to the force of an ambitious imperialism, like that of Rome, but rather to fortuitous circumstances. Fortuitous, that is, from the ordinary human point of view.

Again, it is a very common method on the part of our Church leaders to appeal to the professing Christians of this country to take a true interest in the Mission work of the Church abroad, to lay their emphasis upon the position and extent of our Empire.

This is typical of their appeal:—"Why has God given to us our Empire, scattered here and there all over the face of the globe, so that we British are in contact with every race of man? Why has God given into our charge, to rule over them, so many millions of the heathen? Is it not that we might bring them to know Christ?"

You will notice that these leaders do acknowledge that our Empire is God-given, and that it is in accordance with God's purposes that we have such opportunities. They even quote the words from the prophet, "Ye are My witnesses, saith the Lord, that I am God." Will the scoffers and critics, then, be good enough to face the logic of the facts of history? Will our Church leaders be good enough to realize the logical conclusion of their own pleading? What other nation, in all the range of history, has taken root and spread abroad as our nation? What other nation has developed the desolate heritages of the earth, and formed a girdle round the earth as our nation? The late W. E. Gladstone, speaking of the decay of nations, and the probability of the decay of Britain, once said, "Let us not for a moment imagine that we are standing on a foundation absolutely sure and absolutely immovable, and that we are not liable to the same dangers which have overwhelmed and overthrown other countries of other times, like Carthage, Rome and Venice." But, in speaking this way, did he not overlook a vital fact? Did he not forget that this Empire of ours is fundamentally different from those he mentioned, and all other Empires of the world's history? Surely he did.

I do not think that we realize half as much as we ought that our Empire is not a military Empire, that it has neither been won by the sword nor held by the sword. And this is the vital fact that Gladstone overlooked. "All they that take the sword, shall perish with the sword." So have the former Empires perished, their military sway enduring only for a while, because no people or government can bear the persistent drain of military enterprises, which, however successful they may be, are always non-productive.

But ours is an Empire founded on construction, not on destruction. It is the result, in the main, of colonization, not aggrandizement, and its aim is to give opportunity of development to all races over which it holds sway.

It may be true to say that our Empire had its first beginnings in war, for after the loss of the American Colonies, which, by the way, were certainly not obtained in war, though they were lost in war, it was the Napoleonic wars which gave us a new start in expansion. Yet will you please note that though in the wars following the French Revolution we fought the French wherever the French were established, it was not with the idea of establishing an Empire that we fought. Furthermore, we made no attempt to drive out the French from Canada, and other places where we defeated French armies. We have allowed them to remain, and to share with our own people equal privileges as citizens. Witness the fact that a French Canadian is the Prime Minister in the Dominion Parliament. In India, it has not been any desire to crush native races that has led to our expansion there, and to the wars we have fought there. Force of circumstances, which our statesmen and people never foresaw, has led to our establishment in many lands, and colonization has continued the work of Empire-building.

Dr. Haslam, Professor at Toronto University, was once speaking with an Indian gentleman, who was complaining that the British in India "did not play the game." Asked to explain what he meant, he replied that Indians could come over to England, take first-class degrees at the Universities, and yet in India they had to take second place to men whom they had left behind in the examination rooms in England. "Tell me," said Dr. Haslam, "Do you think that we hold India by reason of our greater intellectual powers?" And the answer was a very scornful "No." "Do we then hold India by our military power?" Again the answer was a scornful "No."

Then, after a while, came the somewhat unwilling confession on the part of the Indian, that we hold India "by reason of our greater moral power." The truth of the matter is, as every unbiassed mind is compelled to acknowledge, that India is not a single country with a single people, but a conglomeration of peoples, races and languages, along with antagonistic religions, and without British control there would be confusion, murder, rape, lawlessness beyond description, such as prevails in China to-day.

Sir Rabinadrath Tagore, in a speech I heard him deliver, said, "If the British were to withdraw from India, within six months there would not be a rupee left, neither would there be a maiden." The clear verdict then of historic facts is that our Empire has a vitally different fundamental from all other Empires the world has yet known.

Does this fact, however, affect the prediction of Mr. Gladstone? Surely it does.

The dangers that overwhelmed Rome were dangers which were the direct product of her own method of government, which was essentially a government of suppression, and the drain upon her resources made by her military campaigns was more than she could endure. But the British Empire has little need of armies to maintain its hold, for the simple reason that it is a Colonial Empire.

Where there is an army, as in India, it is far too small to hold the whole country in awe. If, for example, Gandhi were to realize his aim, and unite the peoples of India in a struggle for independence, the army there would prove totally inadequate to deal with the situation that would arise, for the whole army numbers but eighty thousand, of which barely a quarter are British. There was some cause, then, for the scorn of Dr. Haslam's Indian friend.

Will anyone contend that we hold Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, by military power? Surely no one would be quite so stupid. Are not these parts of our Empire self-governing, self-developing lands? And do they not owe their very existence to the developing of the land itself by colonists?

Now this fact, that our Empire is not a military one, held by the power of the sword, leads to the further fact that it is an Empire founded upon ideals of liberty and righteousness.

And if it be founded on these ideals, can it ever be overwhelmed? Some may question this second fact. I would therefore remind the questioner that we are governed at the present time by a Socialist Parliament. Has Mr. Henderson or anyone in similar authority in the Cabinet ever suggested a policy of scuttle? If our dominion were not a righteous one, if it were based upon policies of suppression, would not men like Mr. Henderson be the first to demand our abandonment of our possessions? Why does he not advocate the evacuation of Palestine, for example?

Is not the plain answer, that he knows full well that upon our rule in Palestine depends the safety of both Arab and Jew there? He knows that we are not there because we wish to exploit and suppress, but because we have a moral obligation. If we were "treading down" Jerusalem, I am quite sure that our Socialist Cabinet would be no party to it, but would be quick to withdraw. The fact, then, that our Socialist Government is continuing the policy of the past years is proof positive that our Empire has nothing in it of that "bloated imperialism" against which Socialists are so fond of declaiming.

Will our critics consider the logic of these facts, and explain our position of authority in the earth, our Colonial development, and, in a way, most remarkable of all, our expansion during these last thirty years in which most critics, both at home and abroad, expected the Empire to diminish?

We have grown, let me repeat, by Colonial effort, and by a peculiar force of circumstances which has thrust responsibility upon us. We have spread abroad on the right hand and on the left, we have made the desolate heritages of the earth to blossom and bud, we have filled the face of the earth with fruit. We have been brought into contact with every race of mankind. Cannot every reader of the Scriptures see the striking parallel between this British development and the foretold development of Israel?

Is it really and sincerely possible for our opponents to say, as the Rev. S. H. Wilkinson says in his "British-Israelism Examined," that "these promises were never meant to be taken literally"? Is there really any sound reasoning in the challenge of the "Modernist," who declares that "Prophecy is not fore-telling, but only forth-telling," when one can see with one's own eyes the Scripture picture of Israel completed in Britain.

The Bishop of Bradford, preaching in my Church on "The World Call to the Churches," declared that "The mantle of Israel has fallen on Britain." Yet he describes my teaching as "grotesque."

Surely if Israel's mantle has fallen upon Britain, then two things follow of sheer logical necessity. First, that the promises made to Israel really have a literal meaning. Second, that prophecy really has the meaning of "fore-telling."

And the moment that logical necessity be admitted, then the identity of Britain with Israel is established. For who will wish to argue that God has changed His mind, and given to one what He promised to another? To argue thus is to postulate a lie for God. But the moment one postulates a lie for God, He ceases to be God.

Therefore the foundation upon which we rest our case, like the foundation upon which our Empire rests, is absolutely sure.

"O Lord God, Thou art God, and Thy words are truth, and Thou hast promised this good thing to Thy servant."

OBITUARY.

THE LATE MR. ISAAC LOVELAND.

MR. ISAAC LOVELAND passed away at Sevenoaks on March 20th, 1930, in his ninety-third year, and we lose in him another link with the past!

Born at Riverhead, near Sevenoaks, a few months after Queen Victoria came to the throne, he was in business at Shoreham, Kent, for fifty years, retiring in 1908 at the age of seventy, when he went to live in Sevenoaks.

He was in all things a kindly Christian gentleman, and higher praise there is not. He did much in a quiet, unobtrusive way to further the Cause of British-Israel Truth.

In the 'seventies he made the acquaintance of the late Edward Hine, from whom he learnt British-Israel Truth, and the subject so attracted him that from this on he was the constant friend of Mr. Hine, standing by him each year. He walked from John o' Groats to Land's End and traversed most of Great Britain and Ireland, and, when close on three score years and ten, walked in one day from Sevenoaks to Hastings—some forty miles!

In the 'seventies Mr. Loveland heard a lecture on "Our Identity" by Mr. Edward Hine, which so interested him that he became a convert to the Truth and also the firm friend of the lecturer, standing by him through thick and thin right up to the last.

To this day there are many scattered over the world who admit that their eyes were first opened to the Truth of Our Identity by reading Edward Hine's "Forty-seven Identifications," and it was due to the continued help of Mr. Loveland and a few others that Mr. Hine's writings and lectures were possible. In the 'seventies and 'eighties of last century they did much to open people's eyes to the Truth. Mr. Loveland himself spoke very little in public and only wrote a few short pieces occasionally for publication in some of the Kentish newspapers, but he could always be relied on to help when help was needed, and was in all things a kindly Christian gentleman. He led an active, healthy life, temperate in all things, and almost to the last enjoyed good health, for he was only ill a short time before he passed away. His loss will be felt by all who knew him and remember his kindly ways.

ISRAEL'S SCRIPTURE AND PRAYER UNION.

OUR present Report is a little more progressive than any yet issued. Up to March 27th we have 258 new members this year. We wish to thank, especially, our helpers in our Branches for their very kind assistance, as it is impossible for one man (or woman) to keep up the rush of correspondence for old cards and for new as well. Probably this is one of the efficient means of binding readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER together, next to our Congress Meetings in London. Many have crossed the flood. Some, having acquired our plan of Bible Reading, are satisfied after two or three years' trial with the results, and, having got into the method, have formed the habit of consecutive reading, and we trust also of prayer for Israel and Judah. It is practically impossible for me to write to every member each year, and so we must rely upon members carrying out the request on each card to send their 6d. each year for renewal, or they are otherwise overlooked, and will each member kindly send his registered number when sending for renewal.

It does not answer to send renewal cards without application, as so very many take it for granted their little mickles are not wanted. Whereas it is these which enable us to do so much good to others.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

BY THE REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A.

QUESTION.—I have had the denial thrown back at me in different religious arguments with the unsaved person—and sometimes the supposed saved—that they do not believe there is a personal Satan, the Devil. I can prove to them that the Bible says so, and that should suffice, but it does not in all cases, in these days.

I should like to have the Scripture proofs and references through THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER, and the answer to the following questions:—

Who is Satan, the Devil? Where did he come from? Where has been his dwelling-place, and where is it to-day? In what form of being, beast or spirit, does he exist, and how does he exist in mankind? If it was he who brought sin and death to mankind in the Garden of Eden, how did he get there, and whence did he come? In reference to Rev. xii, 2–9, what was the date in the history of the world when this casting out took place?—J. D.

ANSWER.—There is no doubt whatsoever about there being, and always having been, a personal Devil. That Satan exists as a personal centre of evil influence, physical as well as moral (for the two are closely associated), is the undoubted teaching of the Bible.

The term "Satan" is Hebrew, and means "adversary." In the earlier usage of the word it is employed in the general sense of "adversary" personal or national (cf. Num. xxii, 22; 2 Sam. xix, 22; 1 Kings v; 4, xi, 25, etc.), and corresponds with the expression "accuser" in Rev. xii, 10. Job gives us an insight into his character and position in the prologue (Job i and ii). Though malignant and evil, this spirit is evidently counted among the angels by origin and nature, for he comes among them as one of their order. His presence is evidently expected and recognized. Like them he has to give an account of what he has observed. This representation is in accordance with other notices in the Bible (see 1 Kings xxii, 19–22; Zech. iii, 1, 2; Rev. xii, 9). The existence of a malignant spirit, permitted to range the earth, tempting and calumniating God's rational creatures, is implied or asserted in all Scripture from Genesis to Revelation. It is to be observed that the final expulsion of this evil spirit from the higher region is represented in the New Testament as a result of the Saviour's Coming.

Being a spirit, Satan is not limited to geographical bounds, nor has he an earthly dwelling-place. He could therefore as easily appear in the Garden of Eden as to our Lord in His temptations, and equally to us and in us to-day—for he is still very, very busy in the world.

Digitized by Google

Both in St. Paul (cf. Rom. xvi, 20 ; 2 Cor. xi, 2, 3) and in the Revelation Satan is identified with the Serpent (Gen. iii). It is also noteworthy that St. Paul shared the contemporary belief that angelic beings inhabited the higher (heavenly) regions spiritually, and that Satan also with his retinue dwelt not beneath the earth, but in the lower atmospheric region (cf. Eph. ii, 2, "the prince of the power of the air," i.e., Satan—also Eph. vi, 12, and Luke x, 18, "I beheld Satan as lightning fall from heaven").

The Fourth chief Vision of the Apocalypse opens with Rev. xii, 1, to which it is very difficult to fit chronological data. The continuous-historical interpretation of prophecy is the safest guide to the exegesis of prophecy throughout the Old and the New Testaments, as it presents a consistent and harmonious understanding of what under all conditions and from all points of view is confessedly a difficult subject.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

THE Leave-taking Meeting at Headquarters for the Rev. Pascoe Goard on April 22nd was attended by a large company. The proceedings began with tea, and both of our reception rooms were filled. Many came from long distances. The voluntary helpers were kept busy. Our President, Major J. Knowles, O.B.E., gave the opening address and then handed over the charge of the meeting to the Secretary-General. After the President's tribute to the invaluable services of our guest and wishing him bon voyage and a safe return in the autumn, addresses were given by Mr. Garrison, the Revs. J. Lumley Davies, L.D., S. E. Mowforth, Sparshott Johnson, M.A., E. A. Couldrey, and Mr. J. J. Morey. Deep gratitude was freely expressed for the illumination of the Scriptures by Mr. Goard's many articles and speeches. Our Guest followed with a fine address, which held the close attention of the large audience. The whole company rose when he stood up to open his speech. There was also an unanimous standing vote for sending to Mrs. Goard, from the meeting, affectionate greetings and warm thanks for her self-sacrifice in sparing her husband to us for such lengthy periods. Mr. John Leech was absent through illness.

Several members of the Council assembled on the platform at Waterloo station in the early morning of 23rd April to say au revoir. Mr. and Mrs. Garrison accompanied Mr. Goard to Southampton and saw him off by the Empress of Scotland, the good ship which brought them back from Canada in August last. Their berths had been booked to go with Mr. Goard on this important mission to the Conventions, but these had to be cancelled as Mr. Garrison's state of health was not equal to the journey ; moreover, his presence at Headquarters was considered essential in any case. Mr. Goard was due at Quebec on 30th April and hoped to commence his speaking tour across the continent on 1st May at Montreal.

Our Branches everywhere and all our readers are requested to pray for the Divine blessing on the Conventions at Toronto, 3rd-5th May ; Detroit, 6th, 7th and 8th ; Winnipeg, 14th, 15th and 16th May. We shall await reports with eager interest.

* * *

A new speaker was gladly welcomed to our platform on Wednesday, 23rd April, in the person of the Rev. S. E. Mowforth, who delighted his audience with an address on "A Chaplain's Experiences in Mesopotamia." He has kindly promised to give us another address in the near future on "With General Allenby in Palestine." The speaker at the evening meeting at Headquarters on 24th April was the Rev. T. Sparshott Johnson, M.A., who gave an interesting address on "The Faith of our Fathers."

* * *

Mr. John Leech, K.C., will resume his lectures at Headquarters on Wednesday afternoon next, 7th May, at 3. Miss Hamilton Hunter will be the speaker on Thursday evening next, 8th May, at 8 o'clock.

Mr. Leech gave four lectures at Bournemouth on 10th and 11th April. He and Mr. Garrison are booked for Hove and Brighton this week.

We feel sure that all our readers will be very glad that A. R. H. is able to resume his most interesting articles—"Week by Week"—and they will look forward to all which are to follow.

* * *

A very pleasant afternoon was spent at Headquarters on 26th April by the British-Israel Crusaders, the Junior Department of the Federation. Mr. John Leech, Chief Crusader, Miss Hamilton Hunter and Miss Willmott gave addresses. There was a goodly company of young folk, and they greatly enjoyed the speeches, music and singing, and the excellent tea provided and served by lady volunteers. Mr. Garrison gave a talk on "Palestine," illustrated by some of his beautiful lantern pictures. There are great possibilities in this Junior Movement and it is worthy of hearty support. The enthusiasm of the young people is most encouraging. The British-Israel Crusader, the monthly journal of the Department, is a good success, and fast increasing in circulation. At Bournemouth 300 copies were sold to those attending the meetings there.

"Uncle Grey" writes : "I have grown very keen on British-Israel Truth since reading your weekly journal, THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER, and studying your books. Would to God that every minister would get back to God's Holy Word."

* * *

The reports by our Commissioners and lecturers shall appear in an early issue of this journal.

We are very grateful to those who have kindly responded to our appeal for funds. We need much more help to enable us to meet all the demands upon us. We trust a word to the wisely generous is sufficient.

There is a steady demand for tickets for the next Congress, which opens (D.V.) on 6th October next.

Mr. R. O. Lucas, Ontario, Secretary, writes: "British-Israel Truth is obtaining publicity in Toronto. The Rev. Joseph Gay, A.T.S., has been with us and has delivered several addresses to large gatherings.

The Globe, one of the best of our daily newspapers, has given splendid reports of his lectures and the people are crowding to hear him. We have managed to persuade him to remain with us another fortnight, and are arranging for him to speak every night, and we expect that his audiences will grow steadily in size. Mr. Gay is a fine speaker, and we hope to add largely to our following while he is here.

We are preparing for the visit of Rev. Wm. Pascoe Goard, to which we are looking eagerly forward. We have arranged a public meeting for him in a large Church on Monday evening, May 5th. Our only regret is that he will not be longer with us.

The Annual Ontario Convention takes place in Toronto on May 3rd. Mr. Goard will be present, and we look for a most successful gathering, with all the Branches of the Province represented.

The Toronto Central Branch has been addressed by Rev. F. C. Ward-Whate, of St. Alban's Cathedral. The lecture hall was full to overflowing, and those present were treated to an inspiring survey of world conditions, especially as concerning our Empire. The title of the address was 'British-Israel Truth and the Solidarity of the British Empire.' The meeting climaxed by the President reading a letter acknowledging the receipt by His Majesty the King of the motion of loyalty forwarded to him by this Branch at the time of the opening of British-Israel House last December.

Mr. A. D. McLeish, President of the Branch in Peterborough, Ontario, sends greetings, and reports that many people in Peterborough are interested in our Message through the splendid work of the Branch."

The meeting of the Walsall Branch, held on Tuesday, April 15th, was addressed by Miss Hamilton Hunter, who spoke on "The Redemption of the Nation Israel." She explained the difference between Redemption and Salvation, the former being national and the latter individual. Proof was given from Scripture that Israel was redeemed from Egypt, from the nations, and from their gods, and the Biblical statements were applied to present-day facts and circumstances. The lecturer showed also that although the Redemption of Israel was accomplished entirely without the nation's volition, personal salvation can only be made effective by the conscious acceptance, by each individual, of the finished work of Christ. Many of the speaker's points and explanations were new to the majority of those who attended, and the whole address was listened to with deep interest by the largest number present at any of the Walsall meetings this session.

* * *

Our Secretary in Winnipeg writes: "Rev. E. J. Springett has addressed the Kiwanis Club on British-Israel Truth, at their request. Mr. C. C. Clough spoke at a public meeting in Winnipeg on 'Why I Believe in British-Israel Truth.' A number of questions were answered by Mr. Springett and others."

IS THE BIBLE CREDIBLE?

Do you realize that if you accept the Modernist theory of Evolution you deny the Divine inspiration of your Bible?

Modernism and German-made Higher Criticism combine to destroy faith in the truth and the sacredness of our beliefs. God either created man in His own image or He did not, and if not, we are as the beasts that perish.

Dr. McCrossan's book comes as a refreshing draught to a thirsty man, to those who truly believe that God's Word is in the Bible—that God's Word is the Bible. His array of facts and his forceful style chastise the Higher Critic and the Modernist. He takes his stand on God's Word and is unassailable.

Everyone who holds the Christian faith should read

By

REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A., F.R.A.S., C.F.,
Vicar of St. Stephen's, Bow.

This little work contains the substance of Two Lectures, given at Glastonbury by Mr. Lancaster in 1925.

The former, brief though it is, is a remarkably clear exposition of what has now come to be accepted as the character of the pre-Christian Briton, not a painted Savage, but a well-educated, well-equipped man with a very considerable and justifiable pride of ancestry.

The latter, dealing with the establishment of Christianity in our island in the early years of the faith, cites a formidable list of authorities in support of his contention that St. Paul, Joseph of Arimathæa and many other New Testament Characters were the first bringers of the Gospel.—An arresting and convincing paper.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

ACROSS THE RIVER.—III.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

THERE are two roads here below. They lead to very different crossings of the river, and to very different associations on the other side.

We follow in this chapter the road which leads to the Paradise of God.

Two thieves hung each upon a cross, one on the one hand, and the other on the other hand, of the Saviour, when the Saviour also hung upon the Cross. One thief was repentant, the other was hardened. One died appealing to the Saviour, the other died reviling the Saviour.

TO ONE our Lord said: "This day shalt thou be with me in paradise."

To what place of gloom and darkness did the other wander? We will join with the penitent who hung by the side of Christ upon a cross. Our prayer also shall be, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom."

One might stop to wonder when the thief learned about the Kingdom of our Lord. Had he perchance been among the multitude who had heard Him preach the Gospel of the Kingdom? Had he been among those who witnessed the miracles our Lord performed? At all events, the dying thief knew the good news of the Kingdom, and prayed accordingly. We also know and we also pray, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." And we have already the earnest of His assurance that we also shall be with Him in Paradise.

So we muse about this great matter.

We have been thinking about the crossing of the river. We have mingled with the many who are always to be found at the margin of the river. Soon it will be our turn to be accompanied to the margin of the river and to cross to the other side. We shall be met midway or before by the Lord, and by the many who wait to welcome the people of God as they march in endless succession from the hither to the farther shore.

One wonders what we shall find on the other side! And as one wonders the mists which shroud the river stir, grow thin and lift, so that we get wonderful glimpses of the other shore.

Perchance, in dreaming, one's Spirit crosses to that other land, and as did the Apostle Paul, under guidance, sees things which it is impossible to utter, but also things which have been told, and so may be read or told again.

Shall we in Spirit, and in the Spirit, make an excursion to the farther side, borne on the wings of Divine Revelation, seated in the luxurious vehicle of the written Word of God?

We have come to the margin of the river, and have said good-bye to the friends who have accompanied us to the hither side.

We have been met, according to promise, by our Lord, and have been mercifully received into His place of abode, the Paradise of God.

What now shall we see, and who shall we meet on the farther shore? Let us see what the Divine Word has for us, which tells of earth and Heaven—and also tells of hell, alas, but, thank God, with the latter we have nothing to do, for with the Apostle we can declare "for the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death."

What then has the Word to tell us of these whom we shall meet on the farther shore?

"For ye are not come unto the mount that might be touched, and that burned with fire, nor unto blackness, and darkness, and tempest,

And the sound of a trumpet, and the voice of words; which voice they that heard intreated that the word should not be spoken to them any more:

(For they could not endure that which was commanded, And if so much as a beast touch the mountain, it shall be stoned, or thrust through with a dart:

And so terrible was the sight, that Moses said, I exceedingly fear and quake:)

But ye are come unto mount Sion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels,

To the general assembly and church of the firstborn, which are written in heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect,

And to Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel."—Heb. xii, 18-24.

So we see that the two destinations are here vividly shown. We must avoid the way to the river which leads to Mount Torah or Horeb, which is the mountain of the law, and be sure to take the road by way of on which our Saviour died for us. But what a company we have come to in our journeying, awaiting us across the river!

Let us tabulate them, so that we may see a little clearer the overwhelming nature of the glorious company which awaits us, and who will unitedly bid us welcome home. Here they are.

"But ye are come unto Mount Zion"—the Capital of Israel, "and unto THE CITY OF THE LIVING GOD."

"The heavenly Jerusalem"—the centre of the worship of the Universe, "and to an innumerable company of Angels.

To the general assembly and Church of the firstborn, which are written in Heaven,

And to GOD THE JUDGE OF ALL,

And to the spirits of just men made perfect,

And to JESUS THE MEDIATOR OF THE NEW COVENANT,

And to the blood of sprinkling that speaketh better things than that of Abel.

See that ye refuse not Him that speaketh"—(by the blood of sprinkling that is to say).

What a City! What a gathering!

THE CITY OF THE LIVING GOD.

Well, dear heart of mine, this is a destination worthy of the efforts of every traveller in the journey of life. How great the kindness and mercy which affords us the opportunity of thus ending the journey. How exalted the privilege. How abounding the hope, nay, certainty for the future.

But perhaps one may say, "I fear in my heart that I shall miss my way, and find myself at the foot of the terrible mountain of Judgment rather than on the hill top of Mount Zion, the City of the Great King."

Then let His assurance, given to us by the LIVING GOD, be your solace, and let it banish your fear. He has caused it to be written for all who trust in Jesus Christ, the Mediator of the New Covenant, who have come under "the blood of sprinkling."

"For I would that ye knew what great conflict I have for you, and for them at Laodicea, and for as many as have not seen my face in the flesh;

That their hearts might be comforted, being knit together in love, and unto all riches of the full assurance of understanding, to the acknowledgment of the mystery of God, and of the Father, and of Christ;

In whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge.

And this I say, lest any man should beguile you with enticing words.

For though I be absent in the flesh, yet am I with you in the spirit, joying and beholding your order, and the stedfastness of your faith in Christ.

As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him:

Rooted and built up in him, and stablished in the faith, as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thanksgiving.

Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ.

For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily.

And ye are complete in him, which is the head of all principality and power:

In whom also ye are circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ:

Buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead.

And you, being dead in your sins and the uncircumcision of your flesh, hath he quickened together with him, having forgiven you all trespasses;

Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross:

And having spoiled principalities and powers, he made a show of them openly, triumphing over them in it."—Col. ii, 1-15.

How complete is the work of Grace which He is working for us, so that without spot or blemish or any such thing we may appear in His sight in the City of the Living God and in the Church of the firstborn.

But, after all, glorious as the statement is, it is but a list of glories unspeakable. Shall we turn to yet another chapter and see the actuality of this wonderful thing so held up to our vision?

We shall join with John in an expedition to that very City and see it in most abounding activity.

In order to do this, let us get the Bible and open to the fourth and fifth chapters of Revelation.

As we look we are struck with the order of the convocation described. The order is that of the encampment of Israel as shown to us in the first several chapters of the Book of Numbers.

In the midst is the throne in Heaven.

AND ONE SAT ON THE THRONE, and round about the throne were four and twenty seats (thrones):

And upon the seats I saw four and twenty elders sitting, clothed in white raiment; and they had on their heads crowns of gold.

. . . And in the midst of the throne and round about the throne, were FOUR ZOON (beasts) full of eyes before and behind.

And the first beast was like a lion—Emblem of the Judah brigade:

And the second beast was like a calf—Emblem of the Ephraim brigade:

And the third beast had a face as a man—Emblem of the Reuben brigade:

And the fourth beast was like a flying eagle—Emblem of the DAN brigade.

Each of the four brigades contained, as we see in Numbers, three tribes of Israel. Thus, as in the wilderness, the twelve tribes were encamped about the throne.

"And the four beasts had each of them six wings about him; and they were full of eyes within: and they rest not day and night, saying, Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, which was, and is, and is to come.

And when those beasts give glory and honour and thanks to him that sat on the throne, who liveth for ever and ever,

The four and twenty elders fall down before him that sat on the throne, and worship him that liveth for ever and ever, and cast their crowns before the throne, saying,

Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honour and power: for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created."—Rev. iv, 8-11.

Thus we see Israel encompassing the throne of God, and we see the throne of God as of yore, in the midst of the nation Israel.

Thus was the great concourse set for the enactment of a great transaction in Heaven.

Let us note what is in progress. For it is in Heaven as it may well be on the earth that a thing once arranged and carried through with all its details, great and small, with all its personalities and properties, that event remains visible, audible, active before the sight and hearing of Heaven and earth, and of those who dwell therein for ever.

Such is the retention of sight and sound, that sights from the beginning of things and things from the beginning of things abide for ever, and as in our study at will we shall be able to go to such and such an age and date, and to such and such an event, and there see in progress all that sight, sound, touch, taste and smell have ever been able to make known to us; and with improved and greatly increased powers we shall be able to see and to hear and to know things about matters in which we may have borne a part which we could never have known through the limited senses of which we are now possessed. So in this, the great pageant which John saw, we can now see in the pages of the Bible, and shall be able to see on the spot where it was, and evermore shall be in process of enactment.

"And I saw in the right hand of him that sat on the throne a book written within and on the backside, sealed with seven seals.

And I saw a strong angel proclaiming with a loud voice, Who is worthy to open the book, and to loose the seals thereof?

And no man in heaven, nor in earth, neither under the earth, was able to open the book, neither to look thereon.

And I wept much, because no man was found worthy to open and to read the book, neither to look thereon.

And one of the elders saith unto me, Weep not: behold, the Lion of the tribe of Juda, the Root of David, hath prevailed to open the book, and to loose the seven seals thereof.

And I beheld, and, lo, in the midst of the throne and of the four beasts, and in the midst of the elders, stood a Lamb as it had been slain, having seven horns and seven eyes, which are the seven Spirits of God sent forth into all the earth.

And he came and took the book out of the right hand of him that sat upon the throne.

And when he had taken the book, the four beasts and four and twenty elders fell down before the Lamb, having every one of them harps, and golden vials full of odours, which are the prayers of saints.

And they sung a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof: for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation;

And hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth."—Rev. v, 1-10.

Thus does all Israel acclaim the Lion of the tribe of Judah before the throne of God in Heaven.

And now we must open our eyes and our minds to a wider vision still. For suddenly outside of and around the throne and the elders and the four beasts, or "living ones," appear a multitude of the Angel hosts, even THE multitude of the Angel hosts adding their voices to the songs of praise:

"And I beheld, and I heard the voice of many angels round about the throne and the beasts and the elders: and the number of them was ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands;

Saying with a loud voice, Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing."—Rev. v, 11-12.

Wider yet and

WIDER THE MIGHTY ANTHEM SWELLS,

and the multitude of interested spectators grows until all creatures join in the mighty anthem of praise.

"And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I saying, Blessing, and honour, and glory, and power, be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever.

And the four beasts said, Amen. And the four and twenty elders fell down and worshipped him that liveth for ever and ever."—Rev. v, 13-14.

Such voices! At first we are struck with the fact that the voices have the thrilling tones of the human voice. This is to be recognized beyond question. But such voices, massed and blended in countless numbers and volume; never before did human ear thrill with such mighty universe-shaking sound, from deepest diapason to heights which earth's soprano thrilling in the most exalted obligato, the swelling harmony filled the heavens! Tones so deep that the earthly ear could not register them and so exalted as long to have passed beyond the power of the human ear to distinguish, even by the Choir producing them interwoven by the seven or eight octaves usual to us of the earth, made up the song of Israel's praise.

What shall we say of the Angel songs? What purity; what power; what scope; what harmony; wave upon wave, harmony weaving through harmony, interspersed with melodies acceptable to the ear of God Himself, billowed and swelled on the raptured ear of the listener. Then these blended the human and the Angelic in a song which caused such rapture of ecstasy as resembles agony of joy.

And then the added voices of all the creatures of Heaven and earth and the regions under the earth. With all discord filtered away and all harmony intensified, the universe seems to be filled with song.

Neither, I am convinced, is this simply a thing of the past. The records of nature have recorded and are ever reproducing in all its grandeur this great audition of music and praise, and this great transaction, so that every soul which enters Heaven may, when the time and conditions of his activities allow, go and see and hear and bear a part in the great refrain and action.

Now, what is the function which has been proceeding which has thus shaken Heaven with glory and triumph? What is it but the Coronation and Investiture of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lion of the tribe of Juda.

From this point, chapter by chapter, we find the outworking from before the throne of God in Heaven the control and salvation of the earth, and the nations of the redeemed people. This is the first of the many great things and scenes to which John was conducted when he passed over the river, not through the gates of death, but as a witness who should see and report for us on earth.

Now, what is all this great assembly? Turn back to the tabulation of those persons and things to which we have come as we read in the Epistle to the Hebrews, and shall see that we have indeed come to Mount Zion—the place of the throne of the LORD, the Capital of Israel:

And to the City of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, the centre of the worship of Israel and of the world:

And to the general assembly of the Church of the firstborn, which are written in Heaven.—We ask, "Who are the firstborn?" And the answer comes back from the Voice of the LORD Himself, "Israel is my firstborn son":

And to God the Judge of all—"and one sat on the throne":

And to the spirits of just men made perfect—as these are tabulated separately from the Church of the firstborn, we must see in them the perfected ones not of the firstborn or Israel race—men from "all races and languages and peoples and tongues":

And to Jesus the Mediator of the New Covenant:

And to the blood of sprinkling—Yes, all who are in that assembly have come to the blood of sprinkling—without which there is no admission to the general assembly herein shown:

Which speaketh better things than that of Abel—the blood of Abel speaketh of wrath, passion and murder—the blood of sprinkling speaketh of pity, mercy, uttermost sacrifice, and redeeming love.

SEE THAT YE REFUSE NOT HIM THAT SPEAKETH

these better things for you. It is a common saying in these days of spiritual and mental pride, "I cannot accept of the Atonement." Poor man, indeed poor, poor man. For by this and all the Scriptures it seems that he cannot accept a place in the general assembly of the firstborn which are written in Heaven. To be without the blood of sprinkling is to be exposed to the stroke of the destroying Angel in Passover night—it is to be without the wedding garment at the Supper of the Lord.

This is the wonderful introduction to the activities and the company of the redeemed on the other side.

When we are strong, and sufficiently prepared for the glory and the joy, our heavenly Conductor will take us to that great centre of all heavenly activity, and we shall be able to record anew our vote in favour of the Lamb, and this is what we shall find on the ballot paper:

"Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing."

And so our voices will join in the thunderous acclaim:—

"And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I saying, Blessing, and honour, and glory, and power, be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever.

And the four beasts said, Amen. And the four and twenty elders fell down and worshipped him that liveth for ever and ever."—Rev. v, 13-14.

BRITISH-ISRAEL FACTS NOT FANCIES.—XII.

BY MAJOR-GENERAL C. A. HADFIELD.

THE "KINGDOM OF GOD."

FROM the many and various Scriptural references of the "Kingdom of God" there must be two kingdoms: one on earth—representing Israel of old—one in Heaven. That is, if we read the Bible in its literal sense. God's plan is to rule the world through Israel, and "the Kingdom of Israel" represents the "Kingdom of God" on earth.

In 1 Chron. xvii we read that God ordains "a place for My people Israel." "I will settle him in Mine house, and in My

Digitized by Google

Kingdom for ever, and his throne shall be established for evermore." And in chapter xxviii: "He hath chosen Solomon My Son to sit upon the throne of the Kingdom of the Lord over Israel." This is clearly a reference to an earthly kingdom: "The kingdom of Israel," which is referred to in 1 Kings xi, 31: "I will rend the kingdom out of the hand of Solomon. . . ." This is "The kingdom" which was taken from the Jews! This kingdom was never a Gentile possession. Again, "the kingdom which is" represents an earthly kingdom restricted to Israel. The kingdom which is to come is the kingdom open to all believers, and which kingdom of God, in Heaven, will absorb the earthly kingdom of Israel, over which Christ Himself will reign during the millennium. That is, the kingdom of God, which "flesh and blood cannot inherit" (1 Cor. xv, 50), and of which "it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter" (Matt. xix, 24)—God's kingdom of Heaven! Thus we can reconcile the Scriptures to mean that God has ordained "His chosen people Israel," who became "the chosen" when the kingdom was taken from the Jews, at the crucifixion of Christ, to rule over the earthly kingdom, "until He comes Whose right it is" to reign over the whole earth. "Till they see the Son of man coming in His kingdom," i.e., to set up Christ's throne in the place of the last of earthly monarchies.

"Thenceforward, My kingdom is not of this world" (John xviii, 36). That is the "kingdom of Heaven," open to the penitent believers in Christ of all races.

Most of our teachers and theologians would have us believe that "the kingdom" on earth is Christ's Church militant. But if an actual material kingdom existed in David's day which was not "the congregation and elders," why should we imagine that the secular arm of the Lord has become abolished?

We cannot accept the theory that "the kingdom" means "the Church," for do we not read in Matt. xxi, 43, that "the kingdom was taken from the Jews"; and yet St. Paul declares that to them are committed the oracles of God? The kingdom of God, spoken of by St. Paul, is a sinless one, but when Christ appears at His Second Advent "the Son of man shall send forth His angels, and they shall gather out of His kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity." So there is nothing inconsistent with Scripture.

If we understand there are two distinct kingdoms referred to in the Bible, we can then see more clearly what is meant by the many different references, which otherwise do not seem "to square" themselves.

British-Israelites believe that Great Britain—as Israel—holds the sceptre of the kingdom over which Christ is to reign on earth, and which is the kingdom referred to in 2 Sam. vii. Also that it is the same kingdom and people who have had a hand in the destruction of the past monarchies to fulfil. "But it (the fifth) shall break in pieces and consume all these (four) kingdoms" (Dan. ii).

TO THE CLERGY.

The general practice of looking upon "Israel," i.e., other than the known and recognized Jews as being "The Church" is their form of "Spiritualizing" God's promises (which were of a purely material nature) to Abraham. This practice, unfortunately, is answerable for much of the present-day unbelief and criticism.

The Clergy do not tell us how it is possible for "the Church" to be our Lord's "Battle Axe," by which Nations are to be broken; or how "the Church" can "possess the gate of his enemies." Nor what is their interpretation of this passage "gate of his enemy."

They do not even explain by what means "the Church" has, in their eyes, been changed into "a Nation and a company of Nations," which God says Israel the old Nation was to grow into in the "last days."

They fail to explain who—in their opinion—are the "ten servants" into whose keeping Christ committed His Kingdom on earth, saying "occupy till I come."

Possibly some help would be afforded if some who are in doubt would read a book entitled "The Destiny of the British Empire and the U.S.A," written by the "Roadbuilder," pointing out how during the Great War so many Chaplains failed to inspire "Tommy" with "Faith" in the Bible, because they were in doubt themselves and could see no literal Israel other than the Jews. How then can the Clergy satisfy themselves, or their congregations, who is, and where is, the Kingdom of God which, after it was taken from the Jews by our Lord, was given to a "Nation bringing forth the fruits thereof"?

How do they explain why God said that one of the seed of David was to rule until Christ's Second Advent, if, in their eyes, there is now no reigning seed of David serving as a King of a living Nation of Israel?

Surely the Nations to whom God committed His Earthly Kingdom were the "ten servants" or the Ten-Tribed House of Israel to whom He entrusted the Missionary Work of seeking the "lost sheep" (or the House of Israel), sent, centuries earlier, into Assyrian Captivity, and who were to spread the Gospel throughout the earth; not, as Israel, but under another name and language. The English-speaking races are actually doing the greater part of all this Missionary Work, probably to the extent of nearly 80 per cent. of the World's Missionaries.

It is quite possible that much confusion has arisen over all this by giving credit to "the Church" for this particular work, rather than giving credit to "the Nation" for sending forth from the Church Missionaries to carry out Christ's Commands in spreading the Gospel.

Another wondrous error amongst our Clergy, and shared by the Head of our Church, is in classing all as being either "Jews" or "Gentiles," and looking upon the Anglo-Saxon race as "Gentiles" because they are not Jews.

Rather would it seem that Jerusalem was saved from "Gentile" Control in 1917, and not merely changed over from the control of the Gentile Turk to that of the "Gentile" British, for if Great Britain be Israel they cannot be a Gentile Nation.

Will our Clergy, and more especially the Leaders and Shepherds, explain why Israel's new name was Isaac—and, "In Isaac shall thy seed be called" (Gen. xxi, 12), if it fails to teach us that Isaac's descendants became Saxons? i.e., Isaac's Sons, Saac-Sons, or Saxons?

Is it not likely that it is the failure to obey our Lord's Command to "Search the Scriptures," and carefully interpret them, which is answerable for all the "doubts" of God's actual words written in the Bible "for our learning" as meaning what they express. It is also perhaps answerable for the wish of some critics who would like to see the Bible re-written and revised, as they think would be more in keeping with some of the present-day teaching, and their own personal views? No, we must leave God's Word as it stands, and as it has been handed down. Our duty is to Search the Scriptures, and endeavour to interpret them aright. If we accept the phrases as meaning what they express it becomes evident that the Old Testament is God's own History of the Nation of Israel who was to be an Everliving (though Concealed) Nation, destined to become very great and powerful in the "last days." "The Kingdom," in fact, which was entrusted by the Master to His Ten "Servants" (i.e., Ten-Tribed House of Israel) to occupy until Christ's Second Advent,—Israel "My Servant"!—the Kingdom of our Lord and Master, which was to be reigned over by one "of the seed of David," "until He comes Whose right it is" to sit upon the earthly throne.

We are taught by the Prophet Isaiah, in chap. xlix: "Listen O Isles (the British or Covenant Isles) unto Me, and hearken ye people from afar" (the people of the U.S.A. and our Oversea Dominions). A certain sign to us of our identity. Then read the whole of this chapter and see how aptly it fits the Anglo-Saxons. Then, too, the references to "Tarshish," and its ships, all of which seems to be confirmed by Isa. lxvi, 19; surely these "Ships of Tarshish" are, and were, the Ships of Israel, and Britain. Read 1 Kings x, 22; 2 Chron. ix, 21; and Ezek. xxvii, 12, 25.

Let us remember that long before our Lord's time metal was shipped from the British Isles (of the West) to the East, thus proving that the British Isles must have been, in those early centuries, a manufacturing centre for other overseas countries. This seems to be fully confirmed by the ancient historians who wrote before, and after, Christ's time on earth, and made references thereto.

Therefore this seems a strong "sign" for our guidance that Israel—apart from the Jews—called "My Servant," must exist as much to-day, as of old; must keep the Sabbath as only we and the U.S.A. "Nationally" keep it; must be invincible in war, must be "the greatest of Nations," must now have a King of the Royal seed of David, must be the "light bearers" to the Heathens, must be God's "Kingdom" on earth which is foreordained to be ruled over in future by Christ Himself on this earth.

Where then is Israel? Israel—"the lost sheep"? None of these characteristics fit the Jews, so must fit Israel. Finally, will any Clergy, or others, answer (logically) the following queries, in addition to those referred to above?

1. Where is the "appointed place" in which God promised that He would "plant His people Israel" (2 Sam. vii, 10).

NOTE.—Most certainly the Jews have not been gathered into one place!

2. In what manner has the "Church" become the "Nation" and the "Company of Nations" into which Ephraim was to develop? (Gen. xlviii, 19; Ezek. xxxvii, 19–21).

3. In what manner does the "Church" possess the "gate of his enemies"? (Gen. xxii, 17).

4. In what manner can the Church come into possession of the area of land from "the river of Egypt to the great river Euphrates"? Has any of it fallen to the Church?

5. Who are the "great people"? (Gen. xlviii, 19.)

6. Who are "the children that thou shalt have after thou hast lost the other"? (Isa. xlix, 20.) Has the Church lost any?

7. If so, can it be explained that by forsaking her Communion they have become lost, but have established themselves as a "great people." If so, where?

8. In what way can be explained why God, on His Oath, swore that Israel should exist as a Nation, as long as the Sun, Moon and Stars continue to shine, if they can find no Israel other than the Jews now? Most certainly the Jews are not a Nation and have no King.

9. Can anyone argue that "the Jews" have developed into a Nation "as numerous as the sand of the sea-shore" and the strongest of all Nations? Most decidedly No!

10. Where is the indestructible throne of David? (Jer. xxxiii, 17.) And where is the perpetual Sceptre of Judah? (Gen. xlix, 10.)

11. How will the "Two Families" be reunited? (Jer. xxxiii, 24.) And how will they choose themselves "one Head"? (Hos. i, 10, 11.)

12. If the Jews be the only Israel which they can see, can it be logically proved from Holy Scripture that Almighty God has fulfilled His reiterated promises? And are the following passages fulfilled in the Jews? Deut. xxxiii, 13-16 "of natural riches, mineral and agricultural"—of being a "Maritime people," as in Numb. xxiv, 7; Ps. lxxxix, 25 (see also P.B. v. 26), or of "ruling over many Nations"? or of "being ruled over by none"? (Deut. xv. 6.)

If those who teach that "Israel" was exiled into obscurity (or intermingled with the Jews) and became, as "a Nation," extinct in the centuries B.C., can satisfactorily solve these questions, then naturally they "Knock the bottom out" of all British-Israel "Facts," as shown above, and convert them into "Fancies."

Until this can be done, and done beyond a shadow of a doubt, the "Facts" produced must hold the day.

No amount of arguing can "convince" a person, unless one can produce with it some sound reason. There are many who are anxious to cast doubts upon the inspiration of certain portions of the Bible. But when we begin to doubt, where are we to draw the line? Because, to man's mind, one passage seems to be contrary to nature, as we understand the laws of nature, it is not for us to reject it as being non-inspired; or we at once doubt God's might and power. The Almighty Who has created us—and the universe, and all therein, and to Whom nothing can be impossible, however much so it seems to our small minds.

It is surely—argue as we may—more reasonable to believe that God intended us to interpret the expressions in His Holy Bible just as they are written, and given to us, rather than for us to go out of our way to believe the words mean something different.

DOES THE BIBLE STAND OR FALL WHEN TESTED BY SCIENCE, HISTORY AND PHILOSOPHY?—II.

BY PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc.

GENESIS, CHAPTER I.

"BERAISHITH," in the beginning. The beginning! What beginning? We are not told, but the context will help us to a reasonable and a scientific conclusion.

The beginning of this earth history and activity, when it was passing out of the fire and chaotic period and condition into a then new heaven and a new earth.

"Elohim"—God! How simple, direct and forceful! And here is the challenge to all atheists in fact, or discursive reasoning! The mental acrobats are challenged by this statement. God, the Elohim, made, created, formed the heavens, and the earth. The challenge is, this: God caused the earth condition which is to be considered in this historic setting of chapter one of Genesis, the beginning or Beraishith. God, not chance, not senseless evolution, is, and was, the cause. The modern materialists were challenged in this first verse thousands of years ago.

"Barah," made, created, or formed the heavens and the earth. This word Barah is used many times in the Scriptures, and frequently means to modify, form, collect, make, etc.

Hence we can, in harmony with the use of this Hebrew word Barah, translate, God formed the heavens and the earth at the beginning of the new world condition of our planet.

"Hashamayim we aith haeretz," the heavens and the earth. On examining these two names, or nouns, in the Scriptures, we see clearly that in many cases the word heavens means the atmosphere which surrounds the earth, or haeretz.

Hence we may freely translate as follows:—In the beginning of this part of the solar system God formed, by His Own methods, the earth and its atmosphere.

Every Hebrew scholar will readily admit this to be a fair rendering of the Hebrew words. And it meets all the demands of astronomic science in the hands of men who admit that conscious mind, operating through volition, is a manifest factor of this universe.

And here all the above Asiatic and other teeming millions are at one with this interpretation. A very small percentage of humanity refuses to believe in a universal, eternal conscious cause of this universe, and its complex and manifold contents.

"The earth was without form and void, shapeless and empty!" "Thohoo wevohoo!" This, of necessity, was the early condition of this earth passing from or towards the end of its nebulous condition.

Astronomers of all qualities, with few exceptions, long ago agreed on and described this state of our earth as it was emerging out of its fiery condition.

This nebulous condition is, and has been, postulated by our modern astronomers very generally in the universities and elsewhere for a long time; and has passed as good philosophic science.

Once granting the nebular hypothesis to be approximately or really true, then the condition above-mentioned in Genesis is applicable, natural and scientific.

"And darkness was upon the face of the deep"; "we chosech alpenay theom." In the then state of the earth, the light of the sun, of necessity, was prevented, by the vast and dense amount of gases and watery vapour, from reaching the surface of the newly evolving world.

"Alpenay theom," the face of the deep, or the surface of the earth as it then was. Not land, not water, but the state preceding, when the earth was consolidating or solidifying from the nebulous semi-gaseous, liquid and viscous condition.

And God said, "Let there be light, and there was light"; "Wy davbair Elohim yehe ōr we yehe ōr."

All light of which man has a direct knowledge, as to its origin, comes in a similar way to-day. It matters little whether it was the old-time flint and steel, the tallow dip, candle, coal oil lamp, gas, electric light, or certain lights produced in the physical or chemical laboratory.

In almost all cases the light comes in obedience to man saying by his acts, Let there be light. In college, office, church, factory, or home, we produce light by an act of the will. How simple and natural for the Master chemist and physicist to say, "Let there be light."

He so said, and light was. In my library, where I write, I say to the light bulb, Let there be light, and by using the materials, forces and laws of nature, light is produced for my use; and by my will.

The Hebrew word for light is ōr, pronounced ore. It is the origin of our English word ore, as gold ore, horizon, orison, orange, orangemen, Ur of Chaldea, etc. This is a touch of philology by the way, which many times later on will be repeated.

"And the evening and the morning were the first day."

Literally, "evening was, morning was, day one!" So far as the earth was then concerned, the dark period preceded the period of light! Hence dark was, light was, day or period one.

All this is simple, natural and scientific. No objection here on the basis of true scientific knowledge. So far, the demands of science are met and no one need throw aside Genesis, chapter one, on the ground that it is not true to scientific thought and requirement.

"And God said, Let there be a firmament in the midst of the waters, and let it divide the waters from the waters."

A wonderful statement; natural, necessary and scientific. To divide the waters, not on the face of the earth, but the waters on the face of the earth from the waters in the heaven above; hashamayim, the upper atmosphere, where the waters are kept in store for rain, hail and snow in their times, and according to varying atmosphere and other conditions.

Let us get the grip of the fact and science here, so as to see the true and necessary interpretation, as well as the plan and the Divine intent.

With this in view, we shall press into the secret workings of the forces and materials of earth and its surroundings.

"Let there be a firmament in the midst of the waters, and let it divide the waters from the waters."

Doubtless, the above statement was written more than 3,000 years ago; and it is a wonderfully accurate statement of fact as we shall see.

First.—The "rakea" or firmament was in the midst of or between the waters. The word bethoch, between, is used, and the word for waters is hammayim, being a noun of dual number and means the two waters.

Digitized by Google

The rakea is the space between the two waters, viz., those above and those below. This is the statement of Scripture and harmonizes with the facts of nature as we will soon clearly see.

Second.—And let it, the rakea, divide the waters from the waters, i.e., between the waters on the earth and the waters in the upper regions of the Shammayim or atmosphere.

Third.—The waters under the firmament were divided from the waters above the firmament. He called the rakea or firmament, Shammayim, heaven or atmosphere.

On the above three statements we proceed to comment carefully in harmony with earth, water and atmosphere conditions.

First.—We know, as naturalists, that it is in the upper air or atmosphere the water is stored for rain, hail and snow. The Book also so tells us.

Second.—There is a space under the upper water storehouse, and above the earth surface, where the water is not stored, but where the water, as clouds, collects previous to its descent upon the surface of the earth.

This is the rakea, firmament, or the dividing space between the waters on the face of the earth and the water of the upper atmosphere.

Go slowly here, reader, and do not jump forward, imagining you know all between here and the end. You do not; and a surprise awaits you, if you read carefully and patiently.

In the above we are striving to indicate just what the Scriptures are telling us about the water supply and its double location. The above is to show what the Book says; and what now follows shows the process and makes clear the absolute scientific exactitude of the Bible story.

First.—The process of supplying the waters above the firmament or in the upper atmosphere.

If you ask the scientist how the water gets from the oceans, lakes, rivers, marshlands, and elsewhere, into the upper air, or atmosphere, you will be told that it is caused by evaporation. This is the universal answer, and is no answer.

The simplest and most ignorant inhabiters of the earth know as well as the university men that water evaporates and becomes invisible in the air; but they, as well as the scientists in general, do not know, cannot explain, and never have explained the process by which the lower, or earth-surface water passes up through the rakea, or firmament, into the Shammayim or upper atmosphere, in spite of gravitation.

Let us ask a question here. How does water which is heavier than air pass up through the air, and remain in balance? Why does it go up, and when up, why does it not at once fall again?

Reader, do you know? If not, then you cannot answer. And if you cannot answer, then why say the first chapter of Genesis is unscientific? Rather admit ignorance! This is the conclusion of the vast majority of natural scientists, modernists, and too many Christians. They simply assert that they do not believe this chapter is either scientific, or historically true.

Let us proceed! Water, being heavier than air, cannot rise through air unless it receives a factor, another element which changes its condition in relation to the lighter substance, viz., the air particles.

Does it receive such a factor, element or change? Let us see. An illustration will prepare our minds to perceive just such a factor as we are in search of.

Take a piece of elderberry pith and fasten to it a silk thread. Hold the other end of the thread in your hand. The pith ball will fall towards the earth, by the pull of gravitation, but the silk string will support it.

Take a small glass rod, magnetize it by friction, and touch the end to the pith ball, keeping the rod fixed. The pith becomes magnetized or electrified, and at once moves away from the rod.

In spite of the force of gravitation, the pith remains at a distance from the perpendicular so long as it is magnetized and the magnetized rod or medium is in position.

The acting element is the tendency for like magnetized bodies to separate. The glass rod and the pith ball being visible, we are able to see them in action. In the case of invisible particles of water, similar changes of position take place under similar magnetic conditions.

These similar conditions we now examine carefully. The earth revolves on its axis once in twenty-four hours. This means that any given spot on the equator travels at the rate of 1,000 miles per hour, and at a distance of 3,000 miles north or south of the equator, a given spot will travel at the rate of about 500 miles per hour. At the poles, 6,000 miles from the equator, the speed of the pivotal point is no miles per hour, although that point revolves once in twenty-four hours.

From the above we can readily perceive that, as the atmosphere, resting on the earth, is a movable body in relation to the earth's surface, it must follow that there is a steady process of intense friction.

The air moving from the polar to the equatorial regions causes friction which is intensified because it necessarily falls back south-westward in the northern regions, and north-westward in the regions south of the equator.

In addition to this regular and permanent process of friction, there are irregular frictional processes going on all over the earth on a very large and varying scale.

These processes arise from the storm movements of the air, large and small.

In both cases, the universal and permanent process, and the changeable and locational process, the friction is very great, intensely great.

From the first movement come our trade winds and ocean currents, and from the second we get our typhoons, hurricanes and other storms, as well as the tremendous waves of the ocean.

Hence, from the frictional rubbing of the air upon the surface of the waters of ocean and elsewhere come countless millions of magnetized invisible particles of water. The earth surface is always negatively or positively charged, and the particles of water are charged by friction, as in the case of the glass rod and the pith ball.

These charged particles, at once, are repelled from the surface of the earth upward, and pass through the firmament into the upper atmosphere, in a most natural and necessary manner, just as the pith ball tries to get away from the glass rod, but is held by the silk thread.

Digitized by Google

This process is as steady and regular as the operation of gravitation, as the revolution of the earth on its axis, or the passing of time.

Here, then, we have a wonderful, a natural, a simple, steady and persistent operation of forces and material, which keeps a tremendous water supply above the firmament for the needed rains, snows and hailstorms.

To answer the close analytical, logical scientist, and philosopher, who wishes to see the chief ramifications of nature as far as possible, we explain further.

The earth is a natural magnet, being a huge dynamo, with its polar regions positive and negative. Hence in the above frictional process of magnetizing the particles of water, one half passes up from south of the equator, and is positively magnetized, while the other half passes up through the rakea or firmament from north of the equator, and is negatively magnetized.

By the very principle of repulsion, as in the pith ball and glass rod, the magnetized invisible particles of water are sent into the upper atmosphere and so held until another basic change takes place.

This process may be of a twofold nature. Through constant upper-air action, vast quantities of the particles near the upper equatorial regions come into contact, since one portion is negatively and the other is positively charged. Thus, in contact, they unite, as positively charged particles unite with negatively charged particles, and thus both become magnetically neutralized. The result is that when neutralized, the newly-formed particles must yield to the force of gravity, and move toward the surface of the earth. Thus they now pass down through the firmament by the law of gravity, whereas, when they formerly went up through the firmament, they did so against gravity and under the repulsive force of like magnetisms.

Hurriedly we have outlined the main features, and conclude by affirming that in the description of the firmament, and the waters above and below, we have the clear, sufficient and permanent explanation of the universal rain supply from the beginning, down to the present time. Hence we assert this part of Genesis is scientifically accurate and complete.

The waters under the firmament were gathered into their places by a very simple and natural process. If the earth had a smooth level surface, then the entire land would be covered and the ocean would be one and universal.

However, the surface wrinkling and crumpling raised and depressed portions of the earth. Thus, large portions are above the reach of the oceans, and the rest is depressed so as to be covered by these oceans, all of which make only one when done. The Genesis account here is in perfect harmony with fact, and is, therefore, scientific and believable.

Letters are reaching us from many parts expressing the great pleasure derived from hearing the Gramophone Record of the address by the Rev. Pascoe Goard, on the British-Israel Evangel, the Gospel of the Kingdom and the Gospel of Grace. We have still a stock of these records which we shall be happy to supply at 12s. 6d., plus postage. They are beautifully clear and distinct, and they are of standard size. Applications should be made to the Secretary-General, 6, Buckingham Gate, London, S.W.1.

THE MESSAGE SENT BY THE BRITISH-ISRAEL-WORLD FEDERATION TO THE FIRST ALL-AMERICAN ANGLO-ISRAEL CONVENTION IN DETROIT, MICHIGAN, U.S.A., ON MAY 6, 7 AND 8.

BRETHREN OF THE ANGLO-SAXON FEDERATION,—

The President, Secretary-General and Council of the British-Israel-World Federation send you hearty fraternal greetings on this occasion of your All-American Convention.

It is with gratitude that we look back over the last decade of the history of the work which we have all so greatly at heart, namely, the unveiling of the Truth contained in the parallel lines of Scripture and of history, and in the unfolding of the great facts in the progress of our peoples, which answer to the teachings of prophecy and past history.

First, let us say a word regarding the great Truth which is given to us to unveil, abstracted from the concrete facts. The stream of Truth runs along the line of Israel. It is a wonderfully connected story shot through and through with many threads of one connected system of Truth. Considered in the abstract as definitely inspired literature, the preacher who takes the Book in hand and undertakes to unfold its teachings finds himself under the necessity for assuming the continuous racial and national life and development of the people, which forms the basis of our platform.

The unthreading of the interwoven narrative, interpretation, prediction and exposition of the teaching, all of which are in the national story first told to Abraham in Genesis, and continued to the end of the Canon of the New Testament Scriptures, is the task and the great triumph of Christian scholarship.

As exponents of Bible Truth, you and we know ourselves to be in the most favoured position. The uncovering of the facts of history which show the story of the Scriptures to be incarnate in the life of persons and nations, especially in the life of Israel, furnishes for the archæologist and Christian historian a task of supreme importance and of essential benefit to mankind.

What wonderful progress has been made in this direction by the many volunteer workers who have devoted life, energy and means to the task. It is an honour to be associated with the princely men of God who are devoting time and fortune to this great task.

The final stage of the great process in Anglo-Saxon history, to go no further back than 1914, is one of the most startling epochs in history.

The ending of the Gentile Empires in accordance with the Divine prediction made by the prophets of Israel and Judah; the unloosening of the latent energies of the Anglo-Saxon race from 1776 onward; the birth, not only of a new nation, but of a new civilization in the world in the emergence of the Empire and of the United States of America, is the greatest thing that has happened in the world since the birth of our Lord Jesus Christ.

The ending of Israel's punishment in 1799, the beginning of the ending of the treading down of Jerusalem in 1917, the crash of the Continental Empires in 1918, the approaching end of the sentence on Jerusalem, not later than 1936, the attendant world conditions and international affairs so clearly indicated by the prophets and by our Lord for the end of the time of the Gentiles, all these things taking place before our eyes and the eyes of the world, triumphantly demonstrate the Truth of the sacred Scriptures.

The birth of the new civilization to which we have just referred is now identified beyond question or doubt, as the emergence after the time of punishment has passed of the Kingdom of God, supreme in the earth once more.

Accompanying the unveiling of Truth, and the recognition of the facts, is the consciousness of the Presence of Jehovah, God and King of Israel.

As our groups and Associations gather here and there in many parts of the earth, there comes to us the consciousness of the almost visible manifestation of the Presence of our Saviour and of the Father Whom He came to reveal.

It is with delight that we recognize that the preaching of the Gospel of the Kingdom and of Salvation, as was done by our Lord and His Apostles, is bringing in a great revival.

It is to this that we have come. Details may be disregarded. Questions as to tribes and their divisions may be set aside, for we remember that in 975 B.C., when the twelve tribes became two nations, two national units only play a part thereafter in the sacred histories, and generally speaking in the prophecies. The probability is that we are Ephraim holding the stick of Joseph, and that you are Manasseh, fulfilling the prophecy and the promise made to the elder son of Joseph. These things are probably so.

But if we would win the Anglo-Saxon world for Christ, and through them, the world, we shall not emphasize these details but drive straight forward with the Anglo-Saxon Federation, one for God and the Kingdom.

We earnestly pray for the Divine guidance on your deliberations on this most important and epoch-marking occasion, and we hope and believe that arising out of your work there will come a great awakening to the whole of your great country.

We shall follow your deliberations in spirit day by day.

This Federation stands for harmony and brotherly co-operation between our peoples.

Brethren, we greet you most heartily in the Name of the Covenant-keeping God of Israel. Hallelujah! The Lord God Omnipotent reigneth!

Yours fraternally in the bonds of Israel and the glad service of the King of kings,

JAMES KNOWLES, President.

HERBERT GARRISON, Secretary-General.

WEEK BY WEEK.

BY A. R. H.

THE GREAT TRIBULATION working out its first phase of inharmony in the international struggle of 1914 to 1918 is now being pressed home into the very heart of the KINGDOM under the guise of unemployment.

Judgment has begun at the HOUSE of GOD.

Distress in the great staple and competitive industries of the country is rapidly awakening a spirit of alarm and anxiety * in the heart and mind of the NATION regarding the future such as was never felt even in the darkest days of the GREAT WAR.

For the basic industries of the country are to the general trade of the NATION what the front line and overseas forces were to the Home Front in 1914.

If the basic industries go, everything will go. Britain's economic future is at stake. The future of BRITAIN, humanly speaking, is as seriously menaced by industrial depression as it ever was by physical conflict.

Never has the material existence and welfare of our people been in such jeopardy.

Whether we like it or no, in our present stage of national development we remain the

MERCHANTS OF TARSHISH†

—a nation of shopkeepers. We cannot immediately‡ escape the responsibilities of our mundane calling.

And if the foundations are destroyed, what shall the righteous do? The spiritual activities of the NATION are dependent upon the continuance of national material prosperity.

If the industrial prosperity of BRITAIN fades, her missionary enterprises, charitable institutions, schemes of social reform—all will perish.

Man cannot live by bread alone, but it is equally certain that he cannot live at all without it.

It is even so with the KINGDOM. In our loyalty to higher things let us never come to despise our great temporal heritage.

In the glory and beauty of created things proportionably is the majesty of their MAKER seen. In the soundness of Britain's economic and industrial structure is the great destiny of her at large portrayed.

SPIRITUAL MISSION TO HUMANITY

The material blessings showered upon the BRITH-ISH ISRAEL PEOPLES have not been given them as a reward of virtue or a sign of special favour.

Material prosperity is ours that we may be equipped for our proper service to humanity and not fail in our tasks of spiritual ministrations for lack of temporal resources.

We are inspired by the spirit, but we live in a material world and must work with material weapons.

No one is justified in despising those whose appointed task it is to make "two blades of grass grow where one grew before."

The work of colonization and Empire development—the task of establishing the earth and inheriting desolate heritages

* This preliminary awakening of a spirit of alarm is preparatory to the great outpouring of the new spirit of the new covenant. It is an essential part of the process of writing the law of God upon the heart and mind of the people. See Jer. xxxi, 33. Concern about material existence will cause the nation to turn back to God, Who is the only Giver of all good things. They will receive the new heart and new spirit of Ezekiel xxxvi, 26, and reap the material blessings of verses 29, 30 and 38, etc.

† If the Merchants of Tarshish are in distress let them call all the Young Lions of Ez. xxxviii, 13, to an Imperial Conference and work out a scheme of Empire economic unity. Then will dawn for our Empire an era of prosperity such as the world has never known.

‡ By the time that Britain is ready to take over her duties in the earth as "a Kingdom of Priests and an Holy Nation," the other nations will be sufficiently trained to carry on all the necessary industrial processes of civilized life. Industry is already beginning to pass from the hands of Anglo-Saxon into those of Asiatic races. During the difficult transition period Britain must make a supreme effort to reorganize her industrial life. Properly organized the Empire could be entirely self-supporting. The Empire and eventually the whole world will become one economic unit. The part the various races will play in this scheme of things is described in Isa. lxi, 5, etc.

of Isa. xlix, 8—and that of maintaining good government§ and peace, costs money.

Money is not evil.[1] And as the Daily Express leader has it:—"There is more nonsense talked about money than almost any other subject. When industry is depressed it is only human to try and convince oneself that the earning of money is a sordid business and an unworthy aim in life. But is it true?

"Every normal young man should have as his aim the making of money. It is his duty to himself, his family, and the STATE. It is only by creating and gathering wealth that the community can be sustained.

"Who deserves the respect of the people more than the heads of our shipping companies, our banking institutions, and our insurance companies, who plough and bring the harvest to these shores? The luxury which they enjoy is the smallest part of their lives. They are workers. They are builders. They create employment. And their labour knows little respite.

"There are good and bad millionaires—just as there are good and bad politicians, miners, and housewives. But there is one thing certain, there are not enough millionaires.

"The privileges and obligations of wealth are interlocked. It is the pouring out of money into fruitful investments that spreads the amenities of life over all classes of the community.

"The gospel of individualism needs preaching. Money is worth while. Success is worth while. 'Make two blades of grass grow where one grew before.' That should be the motto of the youth of this country."

Yes! that's the pioneer spirit—and given a more definitely British-Israel flavour the motto might just as well be stated:—"Make the wilderness and solitary place glad and the desert rejoice and blossom like a rose."[3]

Religion owes much to the fruits of this pioneer spirit. First the CROWN then the CROSS; that is the Divine order. First Trade and Government, then missionary activity.

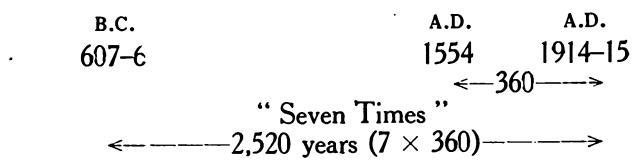
THE DAYS OF THE END.

The Significance of June 28th, 1914, as an index date.

BY J. BERNARD NICKLIN.

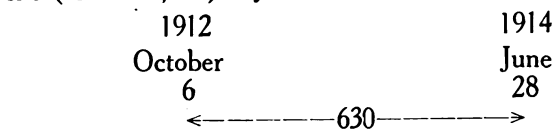
No. 1.



The Significance of June 28th, 1914.

It is well known that the assassination of the Archduke Ferdinand, heir and nephew to the Emperor of Austria, on June 28th, 1914, was the "spark" which led to the outbreak of the Great War.

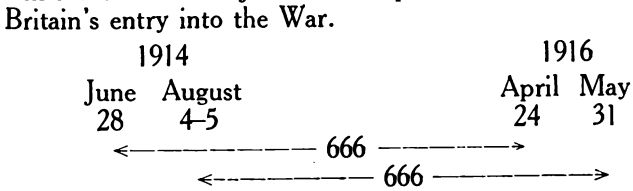
It is not so generally known that this event is a remarkable index date for events of these latter days.



1914–15, from a prophetic standpoint, was significant, being "Seven Times," i.e., 2,520 (or 2 × 1,260) years from 607–6 B.C., the commencement of Nebuchadnezzar's campaign which ended in the complete overthrow of Judah and Jerusalem some 19 years later. Thus 1914-15 is rightly regarded as the commencement of the closing era of the "Times of the Gentiles."

It was also a "Time" (360 years) from the commencement of that bitter era of the Reformation, the burnings and martyrdoms of Queen Mary's reign which came to an end abruptly with Mary's death, November, 1558—just 360 years from the end of the War.

Bearing in mind that June 28th, 1914, is therefore not only the initial date of the Great War, but occurs at the commencement of this important closing era, we will now show that it is linked by the day-intervals of Bible prophecy to certain events in the War, and to national, industrial, political, ecclesiastical and financial crises that have occurred since, as well as to outstanding dates indicated by the Great Pyramid.



Note first, how it is related to the Balkan War. From the day hostilities commenced in this (October 6th, 1912) it is 630 (or half 1,260) days:—

June 28th, 1914, is linked to midnight, August 4th, 1914, by an interval of 37½ days (which as "years" prophetic students will recognize as the difference between 1,260 lunar and 1,260 solar) and this accounts as will be seen for these two dates invariably occurring together.

June 28th, 1914, and two critical War dates.

In April and May, 1916, Germany aimed two strategical blows at Great Britain. Either might have paralysed us and changed the whole course of the War had they succeeded, but Providentially they did not. These were the Irish Rebellion of April 24th–May 1st and the Battle of Jutland, May 31st. The Irish Rebellion began 666 days from June 28th, 1914, while the Battle of Jutland took place 666 days from Great Britain's entry into the War.

This number "666" in Rev. xiii, 18, has reference to an anti-Christian system. As a day-interval there are several other instances of it in the War, connecting events relating to Germany and the Kaiser.

§ Isa. ix, 7.

[1] The Bible is often misquoted as teaching that money is the root of all evil. But what the Bible really says is that the love of money is the root of all evil; a very different thing. Money is a medium of exchange and properly used is a source of untold blessing. Like all other good things its use is open to abuse. But if it becomes a curse it is not the fault or money, but the people who misuse it. The organization of British nations is built up on a family basis. God has created the Brith-ish Family of Free Nations that they may become a medium of blessing to all the families ot the earth. Families must have money.

June 28th, 1914, and the Jews and Jerusalem.

The two outstanding events of the War which affected the Jews and Jerusalem were undoubtedly the Balfour Declaration, November 2nd, 1917, with its promise of Palestine to the Jews, and the surrender of Jerusalem on December 9th, 1917, to General Allenby. Both events occurred respectively 1,260 and 1,260 lunar days from June 28th, 1914; while the latter was also 1,260 lunar days from midnight, August 4th, Britain's entry into the War.

It is also of note that General Allenby took over the Palestine command on the third anniversary of this date.

Of the various references in Daniel and Revelation to this number 1,260, there is one in Rev. xi, 2, to the "treading down" of the Holy City, and Dr. Grattan Guinness has shown that on the scale of lunar years, this ran out appropriately in connection with the Mohammedan "down-treading." Until the year 1917 the Mohammedan calendar was lunar. Now 1,260 lunar years, as already mentioned, are equal to 1,222½ solar. Instances of 1,222½ days, as above, are therefore referred to as "1,260 lunar."

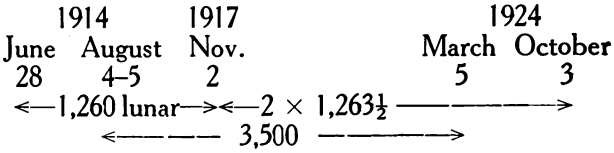
June 28th, 1914, and the End of the War.

As this date was so notably connected with the liberation of Jerusalem from the Turk, so is it related by a remarkable day-interval with Turkey's surrender at the end of the War (October 30th, 1918). Turn up any sound exponent of the Protestant Historical School, and the "hour, day, month and year" of Rev. ix, 15, has reference to Turkey, and represents a period (already fulfilled in years) of 396⅓ days :—

a year	365¼ (the Greek word here denotes a solar year)
month	30
day	1
hour	1/24
	396⅓ (= 66 × 6)

Great Britain's prophetic number is 390—the number of Ephraim-Israel (see Ezekiel iv, 5) which is confirmed by the way it ran out during the War.

Multiplied four times, these numbers from June 28th, and August 4th–5th, 1914, lead respectively to Turkey's surrender, and the Armistice :—



Five in Scripture denotes "redemption" and "deliverance," so on the fifth anniversary of June 28th came the signing of the Peace Treaty.

June 28th, 1914, and two events terminating Mohammedan Rule.

In verses following the reference to the "down-treading" of the Holy City, in Revelation xi, is given a period of 1,263½ days—1,260 (v. 3) plus 3½ (v. 9) = 1,263½ days.

From June 28th, 1914, a period of 1,260 lunar, plus twice 1,263½ days, terminated October 3rd, 1924, when the Caliphate came to an end.

From Britain's entry into the War, to March 5th, 1924, when the Sultan was deposed by the Angora National Assembly, and the Ottoman Dynasty ended, the interval was 3,500 days—an interval to which reference will be made later on in another connection.

THE DEITY OF CHRIST.

By HENRY PROCTOR, F.R.S.L.

THERE is a flood of misapprehension on this point, because the distinction between the pre-existent Christ and the Man Christ Jesus is not clearly realized. Many admit the Divinity of Christ, but not the Deity. They confess that He is the Son of God or, like Renan, that He is "the first of all the sons of God," but they do not believe in His Godhead, as the Second Person in the Trinity—that He is also God the Son.

In order that He might come down to earth as a man, "He emptied Himself by taking the nature of a servant, born in human guise and appearing in human form. He humbly stooped in His obedience even to die, and to die upon the Cross." Therefore God raised Him high, and conferred on Him a Name above all names. "God, indeed, raised Him to the very highest place and gave Him the Name which stands above all other names" (Phil. i, 8, 9.—Moffat and 20 Cent.) The exaltation of Jesus as a man does not, however, prove His pre-existent Deity. For that we should turn to the Old Testament, where as "Adonai" He is distinguished from "Jehovah," as in Psalm cx, 1. The plural form "Adonai" "is never used except as a Divine Name" (Perowne). Our Lord Himself quoted these words (Matt. xxii, 41-45 and Mark xii, 35-37) to prove His identity with the Second Person, the Adonai, to Whom Jehovah spoke "Yahweh la-Adonai" (Psalm cx, 1).

The Epistle to the Hebrews, chapter one, is in itself a dissertation on the Deity of Christ. He is "the Son, whom He appointed Heir of all things, and through whom He made the universe. For He is the radiance of the Glory of God and the very expression of His being, upholding all creation by the Power of His Word." How can this be anything less than Deity? Thus far we have dealt with the first three verses of Hebrews i, but verse 5 refers to His humanity. "Thou art My son, this day have I begotten Thee." On "this day" His humanity was exalted, invested and crowned with the same glory, honour and power which belongs to His Deity. This is the adoption of His humanity into the Godhead. In verse 6 all the angels of God are commanded to worship Him.

In verse 8 the Father addresses Him as God: "Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever," and in verse 10 the creation of the earth and the heavens is ascribed to His agency: "Thou, Lord, in the beginning didst lay the foundation of the earth, and the heavens are the works of Thy hands." "For Christ is the very incarnation of the invisible God, firstborn and head of all creation; for in Him was created all that is in Heaven and on earth, the visible and the invisible, Angels and Archangels and all the Powers of Heaven. All has been created through Him and for Him. He was before all things, and all things unite in Him" (Col. i, 15-17), and "He is the Head of all Archangels and Powers of Heaven"; of all principalities and powers (Col. ii, 10).

In Isaiah xl, 3, He is called "Jehovah" and "our God" (Yahveh Eloheynu), for the "kol kore" or proclaiming voice is that of John the Baptist (Matt. iii, 3). In Psalm xxiv, 7-10, He is called "the King of Glory"; "Yahveh Tsevaoth"—the Lord of Hosts (See 1 Cor. ii, 8).

In Jeremiah xxiii, 5, 6, He is called "Jehovah Tsidkenu"—The Lord our Righteousness (see 1 Cor. i, 30). In Isaiah vi, 1-6, He is not only Adonai, but also "Yahveh Tsevaim"—the Lord of Hosts.

He is the Sender of the Holy Spirit, equally with the Father (John xv, 26). He it is also Who baptizes with the Holy Spirit, and Who raises the dead (John v, 21; vi, 40, 54). All men should honour the Son even as they honour the Father (John v, 23). The 20th Century New Testament here translates: "So that all may honour the Son just as they honour the Father. He who does not honour the Son fails to honour the Father who sent Him." They should be considered worthy of equal honour: "No one who disowns the Son can possess the Father: he who confesses the Son possesses the Father as well" (1 John ii, 23—Moffat).

And yet there are many cults who deny the Deity of the Son, even though the Scriptures, which they profess to believe, continue to affirm it from Genesis to Revelation. They take the statements regarding His limitation while on earth as Son of Man to refer to the Son of God, whereas, this only lasted for the period during which He emptied Himself of all the power which pertained to His Deity, so that of His own self He could do nothing—laying aside also His own wisdom and knowledge, and speaking only the words of His Father (John v, 19; xiv, 24).

But now God has highly exalted Him, and invested the Son of Man with all that honour and glory which He had as God the Son, with the Father, before the world began (John xvii, 5). Yea, and with much more than this, for He that was made for a little while lower than the angels, has now ascended far above all heavens; angels, authorities and powers being made subject unto Him, and He is now seated at the right hand of the Majesty in the heavens, "high above all other government and authority and power and dominion, and every title of sovereignty used either in this age or in that which is to come." God has put "all things under His feet, and has appointed Him universal and supreme Head of the Church which is His Body, the (fullness or) completeness of Him Who everywhere fills the universe with Himself" (Eph. i, 20-23—Weymouth), so that "in ALL things He hath the pre-eminence."

A REVIEW.

"THE ROME OF ST. PAUL."*

By ALBERT G. MACKINNON, M.A., D.D.

IT does not fall to the lot of everyone, even in these days of swift and easy travelling, to visit Rome; and those who can do so need knowledge as well as imagination if they would reconstruct the ancient buildings and see the sights that greeted St. Paul's eyes when, after long journeying, he at last reached the Imperial City—not, alas, as a freeman, but to stand on his trial before Cæsar.

The author of "The Rome of St. Paul" not only transports us in imagination to the great city on the Tiber, but shows it to us as it was when St. Paul lived there—a city of temples and palaces, of slums and tenements, of wealth and poverty, vice and virtue, a city of many gods but no religion.

But buildings without inhabitants are lifeless; and it is when the author brings vividly before us the ordinary life of the Roman citizen of those far-off days, and peoples the streets and palaces with men and women confronted with problems so strangely like our own, that the ancient city springs to life.

If history repeats itself it is because, underneath the change and unrest of outward things, the human heart remains very much the same; and one is struck by the similarity between the problems that have to be faced by each new civilization in turn. Labour and government presented difficulties to the Romans, as they have done to all civilized communities. "The housing problem in Rome," says Mr. Mackinnon in the fascinating chapter on "Social Conditions and Problems," "was as live a question in Paul's day as it is in ours. The city contained 1,790 palaces and 46,602 tenement houses. In these a population of nearly a million and a half had to find shelter. The private residences accounted for about two hundred thousand, including slaves. The rest had to pack themselves into lodging-houses or flats. These were not well built. Jerry-building was at a premium in those days." Other interesting details of Roman life described in this book include the means of transport and the postal services.

The chapter on "The Temple Worship of Rome" gives us the religious background to the Roman citizen's life, and shows the depths to which man will fall when seeking after gods made in his own image. It is evident, too, from this and other chapters, that much that was connected with the Temple worship has not been discarded, but has found a place among the rites and ceremonies of the Roman Church. As the author truly says, "the gods have gone—not quite. They have left their footprints." And such customs as the use of holy water and wax candles, setting up of images, etc., are traced back to their pagan origin. Our Anglo-Catholic friends would do well to take note of this!

Having been made to feel at home in the Imperial City, we are introduced to the great Apostle of the Gentiles, visit him in his "hired house," and see him at his daily work of writing and preaching. The early Church in Rome, and the surprises that confront us as we study its records, are dealt with in a fascinating manner, and we visit some of the earliest Christian homes and meet face to face the friends who did so much to cheer St. Paul in his captivity. Amongst these friends are Aquila and Priscilla, whom he first met at Corinth, and about whom the author has much of interest to say; and the young Roman soldier, Rufus Pudens, who married Claudia, the daughter of the British King Caractacus, and who, with their children, formed a small nucleus of Christians in the pagan city. Listen to what Mr. Mackinnon says about them:—

"We cannot leave this gracious home with its hospitable inmates without connecting it with that very last message of St. Paul in the closing verses of 2 Timothy: 'Eubulus greeteth thee, and Pudens, Linus, and Claudia.' I know unsentimental critics wave aside all romantic interpretations. But somehow, living in the atmosphere of that house of Pudens, the dry bones of mere textual statements live afresh. Pudens and Claudia become real personages. Imagination may trespass a little across the frontiers of reason, but it does not outrage conscience. Something tells us that it would be just like the Claudia we have depicted, to show her loyalty to the Apostle at the very last, even though in those dark days of his second imprisonment, when he was deserted by so many, such devotion might mean death. We love her for it, and despite heartless critics, I cannot but think that this Claudia is the same who lived in that beautiful house whose ruins we see to-day, and who was the friend of Martial, and a British princess."

The chapter on "St. Paul's Letter-Carriers" introduces us to those faithful friends without whose willing service the inspired writings of this Apostle might never have reached their destination. What do we not owe to them? It is interesting to note that "when Paul needed a 'King's Messenger' he chose a woman. That should dispose of the calumny against this Apostle that he underrated the position of women in the Church. He did the very reverse: he honoured and confided in them."

The controversial question of St. Peter's connection with Rome is dealt with in a well-balanced manner, the arguments on either side being clearly stated, and we see that the shadow which St. Peter cast there was, as our author says, "a long one."

Twelve beautiful photogravure plates and a striking wrapper, reproduced from photographs of ancient Rome reconstructed, taken by Professor Giuseppe Gatteschi, supplement the vivid and facile descriptions given by Mr. Mackinnon, and make the book a most attractive volume. This is a book that should be widely read, not only for its inherent interest, but also for the admirable background that it forms to the life of one of the greatest Kingdom-builders the world has ever seen.

Empire Day—May 24th—will be celebrated at Headquarters by Tea and Social Converse, from 4 p.m., followed at 5.15 by a lecture on "India, Past and Present," with lantern pictures, by Mr. Herbert Garrison.

Three meetings were held in the large Hove Town Hall in the afternoons of April 28th, 29th and 30th. Addresses were given by Messrs. N. C. writes from Washington, U.S.A.:—"Enclosed please find three dollars towards the most wonderful work in all the world. May God's richest blessing rest upon all that is undertaken in His Name and for His Glory."

The Rev. Cyril C. Dobson, M.A., will give two lectures at Headquarters on Tuesday, May 27th, at 3 and 8, on "The Garden Tomb at Jerusalem," illustrated by lantern pictures and diagrams. Mr. Dobson is an authority on this wonderful subject. He recently visited the sacred spot, and he has published a very interesting book thereon. We feel sure that our friends will be glad to hear him. Tea will be served between the meetings.

Mr. R. O. Lucas, Hon. Secretary of the Ontario Branch, writes in glowing terms of the success of a long series of meetings in Toronto addressed by the Rev. Joseph Gay during April; he speaks of crowded audiences and very keen appreciation with the practical results of many new members and a general Forward Movement, which should be accelerated by the Convention in the city, taking place as we go to press, with the Rev. Pascoe Goard as chief speaker. Our Toronto friends are greatly taken with the idea of Study Circles, and they hope to see them established all over Canada.

Mr. A. W. Godfrey, of Watford, reports excellent addresses by Mrs. Hesketh Jones on "The Year-Day Principle," and by Mr. Morey on "The Restitution of All Things."

J. A. A. writes from South Africa :—" I always look forward to the MESSAGE each week. I congratulate you upon the high tone of the articles, especially those of the Rev. Pascoe Goard, which are truly inspired." C. A. R. writes :—" I would not for anything be without the MESSAGE, which, by confirming, as it does, the truth of the Bible, is such a source of comfort and strength. Travelling about as we do, we have many opportunities of passing it on. I want some more special numbers for distribution, please."

Reserved seats are now being booked for the Eleventh Annual B.-I. Congress, which opens (D.V.) in London on October 6th next. A fine array of speakers is expected.

Addresses were given at Dorking by the Rev. Kenneth Dodds on April 14th, the afternoon subject being " Israel in Peter's Epistle," practically the whole of which was shown to be directed, or related to, Israel. It was the evening address, however, which fully engrossed the attention of its hearers ; possibly few people in the hall understood the meaning of " The Bill of Rights," but as the " Bill of Rights of Israel," the lecturer made it a subject of inspiration and wonder, while the spirit and refinement of its delivery were highly appreciated.

* * *

At Bradford, the Rev. R. G. F. Waddington, M.A., is giving a series of four lectures on " Predestination," these being based on the articles appearing in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE.

The following is an extract from a letter from Penzance :—

" On April the 3rd a gentleman, staying in Penzance for six weeks, came to enquire about British-Israel teaching ; he had heard Mr. J. J. Morey lecture at Canterbury, and wanted to know still more. After four hours' conversation he departed saying he had been greatly blessed, and would very much like to bring his wife, so we invited them to tea on another day, and had a truly great time. They wanted to buy ever so many of our books, but we asked them to read any of those we possessed and choose which they preferred, when we should be happy to get copies for them.

" He is the son of a Church of England clergyman, and went through the war with the Canadian Contingent ; he said he had vowed never to fight again, but now it would make all the difference ; he said he wished all the boys had known in the last war—they would have fought with double the pluck and spirit, confident of winning.

" They are coming as often as they can while they are here."

The Rev. Gregory Bestall gave a much-appreciated address on " The Miracle of the Bible " at Sydenham on April 28th. He is a welcome visitor there. Mr. Bradbury took the chair.

That the British Commonwealth of Nations had been chosen by God as His chief agent to spread the message of Christ throughout the world was spoken of by the Rev. T. H. Whitehouse, lecturing at Gloucester on April 24th. Stating that God had hidden His revelations in enigmas until their hidden meaning should be revealed and men received enlightenment, Mr. Whitehouse quoted a number of passages from the Bible in support of this belief. The Federation claimed to be the only body of Biblical students who could make the Bible one coherent whole. In the great struggle the Empire would be the champion of the world in the fight with the forces of Satan. Already it could be seen that the war-lords were arming, blaspheming and threatening to dethrone Christ, and to establish the " world revolution." A great spiritual revival, such as had never been known before, would follow that struggle, and then Christ would return to His Throne to reign for ever.

A further lecture was delivered by Mr. Whitehouse in the evening. The chair was taken by Mr. E. A. Chamberlain and Mr. A. E. Smith. There were good audiences, with interest growing and a number of people enquiring for further information on British-Israel.

We regret to note the death of Mr. W. R. Mulock, K.C., prominent Winnipeg barrister, and member of the British-Israel Branch there, and well known as President for many years of the Manitoba Auxiliary of the Canadian Bible Society. Mr. Mulock was Canadian by birth, of the Province of Ontario. His parents were the late Rev. Canon Mulock, of St. George's Cathedral, Kingston, Ontario, and Martha Catherine Mulock. He was a college student at Queen's, and later at University College, Toronto. He studied law in Toronto, where he was called to the Bar as a young man of twenty-two in 1872. He was of decided ideas on public questions, with reference to which he was never slow to express his opinions, a characteristic which remained with him through life.

He remained in Toronto for ten years in the practice of his profession, and then became deeply interested in the Western country, for which he even then predicted an extraordinary future. He finally decided to join the movement to the prairies, and was admitted to the Bar in Winnipeg in the year 1882. Since that time he had been a successful and honoured member of the legal fraternity, a trusted counsellor and a highly esteemed citizen. He had reached the age of 80 years. Mr. Mulock was an ardent supporter of missionary enterprise, and missionaries from near and far-off fields always found a welcome awaiting them in Mr. and Mrs. Mulock's home, the house of the open door, where Mrs. Garrison and I had the pleasure of delightful converse with both during our visit to Winnipeg last summer, when a mutual attachment was formed which stands out as one of the special features of our journeys through Canada. We treasure a beautiful letter from our beloved friend, written only a short time before he crossed the River. To Mrs. Mulock and her family we offer our most sincere sympathy in their bereavement.

A Rector writes:—

"Those who hold the British-Israel teaching are earnest students of the Scripture and believe in the Bible as the Word of God in its entirety. They are also firm believers in the Evangelical teaching of the Church of England. Further, they are not ashamed of the name 'Protestant,' which is enshrined in the glorious history of the British nation. Thus, if British-Israel teachers extol also the Cross of Christ, I wish them well in their genuine efforts to impress the importance of Bible Study in these critical days."

STUDY CIRCLES.

We are pleased to report that the Study Circle held at Headquarters on Wednesday evenings at 6 o'clock is a great success. The Rev. W. A. Sinden's addresses are highly appreciated, and readers will soon be able to study for themselves his able and comprehensive notes upon Dr. Llewellyn Thomas' book, "God and My Birthright." Watch our advertisement columns for the announcement relating to these lecture notes. Encouraging reports come in from all parts. There is a general desire everywhere to make this Movement the means of a great Advance, and we are hoping that in the coming autumn hundreds of Study Circles will begin in good earnest definite courses of Bible study.

Make your plans now. Decide upon your text-book, and prepare your outlines. Endeavour to bring together friends who have not yet come right in, together with believers who have not yet studied the subject closely. Please write us for advice and help when in any difficulty, and let us be determined to make 1930 the beginning of a great Advance.

PROPOSED B.-I. SUMMER CONVENTION.

We have an invitation to hold a Summer Convention from July 29th to August 2nd next, at "The Hayes," Swanwick, Derbyshire, which, by general consensus of opinion, is an ideal place for the purpose, and the terms are very moderate, only 8s. per day for Board and Residence.

"The Hayes" consists of a mansion and two hostels, providing three hundred and eight beds, standing in a park of forty acres, with attractive gardens, etc., etc. Lying, as it does, between Ambergate and Pye Bridge in mid-Derbyshire, there is within easy access some of the choicest scenery in the country. In addition to the Conference Hall and Dining Room, there are a number of large and small sitting-rooms and meeting rooms. "The Hayes" is lighted by electricity throughout, and is in every respect comfortably furnished. Adequate domestic service is provided for the comfort of guests. Garages have accommodation for thirty cars.

We have to guarantee a certain number, and we must decide as soon as possible whether we can accept this invitation or not. We shall be glad, therefore, to hear from all those who wish to attend this Convention WITHOUT DELAY. Particulars shall be sent to all applicants regarding railway facilities and motor services.

A full list of speakers will be available later. In the meantime we can place on the list Mr. John Leech, M.A., K.C., the Rev. Maxwell Carnson, from South Africa, Rev. T. Sparshott Johnson, M.A., Mr. John J. Morey, and probably the Secretary-General.

Please address letters to the Secretary-General, 6, Buckingham Gate, S.W.1.

Glastonbury Traditions concerning

Joseph of Arimathea

BEING A TRANSLATION FROM THE LATIN

BY

H. KENDRA BAKER

OF

THE SECOND CHAPTER OF BRITANNICARUM ECCLESIARUM ANTIQUITATES OF JAMES USSHER, ARCHBISHOP OF ARMAGH AND PRIMATE OF ALL IRELAND, PUBLISHED AT DUBLIN IN 1639. WITH THE ORIGINAL FOOTNOTES.

This is the first published translation of this important chapter of the great Archbishop Ussher's Monumental Work on the Antiquity of the British Churches, produced in Latin in 1639.

It contains the collected traditions, as gathered from various sources by this eminent writer, concerning the coming to Glastonbury of Joseph of Arimathea and his companions, and distinguishes, with notable impartiality, between such as may be regarded as merely legendary and those which, on the basis of continuous authority, are worthy of acceptance.

In particular, he adduces the arguments used by the British delegates to the Councils of Pisa, Constance, Siena and Basle (1409, 1417, 1424 and 1434, respectively) in support of their claim regarding the priority of antiquity of the British Church, and deals with the evidence on which such arguments were based.

The original footnotes are reproduced (the more important being translated) in order that the reader may consult the authorities cited by Ussher, should he desire to do so.

REMARKABLE DISCOVERY OF STONE TABLETS INSCRIBED BY MOSES

It is reported in the Press ("Daily Express," 25th April, 1930) that the stone tablets discovered in the district of Mount Sinai have now been deciphered, and Professor Herbert Grimme, the German Egyptologist, states that in three lines the writer "thanks the Pharaoh Hatshepsut (who succeeded her father) for having pulled him out of the Nile and raised him to high honour." Professor Grimme declares that the name of the writer can be deciphered as "Moses," and his own view is that the inscription was composed by Moses. He believes that a complete key to the life of Moses, and the flight of the Israelites, is concealed in Mount Sinai, and proposes a German excavation expedition ("Daily News").

INSCRIPTIONS FOUND REFERRING TO THE BUILDER OF THE PYRAMID

In the "Daily Mail" (17th March, 1930) it was reported that a further interesting discovery was made in the course of excavations at the tomb of RA OUER, who lived about 2730 B.C. An ante-chamber tomb has been found of RA OUER'S father, which contains most important inscriptions, including references to CHEOPS and his PYRAMID, in perfect condition. When these inscriptions have been completely translated it will no doubt be found that the builder of the Great Pyramid was no other than the grandson of Adam, as the date mentioned shows that Ra Ouer's father and Adam's grandson were contemporary, and both lived at the time the Pyramid was built. The builder of the Pyramid, and his real object in building it, is explained in the Book "And it was so," which deals with facts and information discovered by excavators in connection with Biblical personages and the Old Testament period. "And it was so" has been written for the purpose of showing how true the Bible history is, and how recent discoveries are proving that Biblical persons really existed. Recently, for instance, Sir E. Wallis Budge, late of the Egyptian and Syrian Dept. of the British Museum, was able to translate old Syriac writings which told, among other things, of the life of MELCHISEDEK, who his parents were, and how he came to be Priest of the Most High God. This information is given in "And it was so," as well as details about Mummies of Pharaohs, and of others earlier than the Flood, which have been found with inscriptions written by actual people of the Old Testament period, some fixing their exact date by recording astronomical events occurring during their lives.

All these details make very interesting reading, and throw new light on Bible times and persons.

A completely connected history is shown in "And it was so," from Adam to Christ's time, including the 421 years from Esther to the New Testament, which years are not accounted for in the Bible. "And it was so" (225 pages) is the most fascinating, interesting and convincing book ever written about the Bible, and contains details and facts only recently discovered from excavations, and from inscriptions on Tombs, Monuments and Tablets. The "Daily Express" says it is "one of the most remarkable books on Biblical matters that has been published in recent years," and gives nearly a whole column to reviewing it in detail.

"And it was so" can be obtained (Price 5/- and postage 6d.) direct from the Author, who will autograph copies if desired.

ACROSS THE RIVER.—IV.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

HOME.

WHAT a wonderful experience attendance at the General Assembly of the Church of the Firstborn has been, as we saw in the last issue. But now that we have seen and heard and been swept to the height of Heaven's ecstasy by the great convocation, we are ready to ask concerning the home life on the farther shore.

FAMILY LIFE BEYOND THE RIVER.

So the heavenly Guide takes us by the hand to bring us to the dear ones who have preceded us beyond the River. How early and how wonderfully the luminous Word of truth speaks on this particular matter. We shall take a few passages in the very first books of the Bible, and see that the assurance is given, and given again, over and over, that when we cross the River we shall be gathered to our own people. Let us see.

"Then Abraham gave up the ghost, and died in a good old age, an old man, and full of years; AND WAS GATHERED TO HIS PEOPLE." (Gen. xxv, 8.)

What a comforting story of crossing the River is this. Abraham had tasted so greatly of life in all its phases. He had come to a good old age, an old man, and FULL of years, and now he was weary and would rest. Then comes the assurance, the statement of fact, "AND WAS GATHERED TO HIS PEOPLE."

Of Isaac, Abraham's son, the same story is told: "And Isaac gave up the ghost, and died, AND WAS GATHERED UNTO HIS PEOPLE, being old and full of days."

Of Jacob we read a beautiful story of a scene on the margin of the River, to which the Patriarch had now come:—

"All these are the twelve tribes of Israel: and this is it that their father spake unto them, and blessed them; every one according to his blessing he blessed them.

And he charged them, and said unto them, I am to be gathered unto my people: bury me with my fathers in the cave that is in the field of Ephron the Hittite.

In the cave that is in the field of Machpelah, which is before Mamre, in the land of Canaan, which Abraham bought with the field of Ephron the Hittite for a possession of a buryingplace.

There they buried Abraham and Sarah his wife; there they buried Isaac and Rebekah his wife; and there I buried Leah.

The purchase of the field and of the cave that is therein was from the children of Heth.

And when Jacob had made an end of commanding his sons, he gathered up his feet into the bed, and yielded up the ghost, AND WAS GATHERED UNTO HIS PEOPLE.—Genesis xlix, 28–33.

One more example we shall take of this assurance, because of the more intimate family note it gives. This is it, speaking of a whole generation of that Israel which constituted the basis of the Church of the Firstborn, which is written in Heaven: "AND ALSO ALL THAT GENERATION WERE GATHERED TO THEIR FATHERS." These had been the companions of Joshua, the son of Nun, of which generation it is written: "And the people served the Lord all the days of Joshua."

So we see that from the very beginning the Holy Book has carried the assurance that beyond the River the families, and the people, are gathered; and that the individuals of us who are called to pass over are gathered to our people, to our fathers, to the loved ones of our own circle.

We may rest in this assurance of being greeted by Father, Mother, Husband, Wife, Children, and all other loved ones who have gone before. It will be a happy company who will welcome us with such shouts of gladness as this old earth never knew. For here, with every meeting there is the shadow of parting, and with the most gladsome and buoyant life there comes like clouds over the sky the shadow of death. But there the partings are ended, and death is vanquished for ever.

And this brings in the fact of orderly arrangement of the generations, and of the neighbourhoods over there. Chums, companions, groups, neighbours; all homely, all happy, all friendly; grouping, dissolving, combining, scattering at will, in happy fellowship, which shall never be broken by anger, passion, hatred or pain.

So time and place will have their part to play in the co-ordination of the family of God. Abraham and Sarah's were registered in their generation thirty-five hundred years ago.

Moses, Aaron, Joshua, and so on, were registered circa twenty-three hundred years ago.

David and his associates were registered three thousand years ago.

The Apostles and their contemporaries were registered eighteen hundred years ago.

Our Celtic fathers, and Saxon fathers, and Norman fathers, were registered with their generations.

The present generation associated in these stirring times, who are now in the act of crossing the River, are, one by one, being welcomed with such a welcome by our fathers and mothers, and by their even earlier generations, until we reach back to the days of our Lord, back to the days of David, back to the days of Abraham, the whole of the Israel descent from which we have sprung constituting one of the chief families of Heaven.

Aye, aye, being "gathered to their fathers" means something in the life beyond the River. Neither will the welcome in the family of God be less warm for those who have by adoption become "fellow citizens with the saints and of the household of God."

Shall we know our loved ones there? This is the question asked again and again here below. Yes, and yes indeed, dear friend. Here we have knowledge of comparatively very few of our loved ones. There we shall know these few better, and shall value and love them more; but we shall also know our people in such numbers, ranks, and generations, as we have never dreamed of knowing here below. Home life on earth cannot begin to enter into comparison with the home life, the family life, across the River.

THE MANY MANSIONS.

But what of a family residence over there?

A little thought will tell us that places where "our fathers" gather will vary. What would suit the taste of one family group would not suit the taste of other groups; and for each family a suitable place will be provided.

Here is a musical family. Perhaps at the beginning they were of the choristers who sang in the services of the Temple at Jerusalem. These will never be for long very far from the great musical centres of Heaven.

Here is a group of outdoor people whose glory has been work in the engineering field. These have carried railroads through the wildernesses of the earth. They have harnessed the torrents, they have bridged the chasms, they have built the defences of cities and countries, and have done the rugged outdoor work of the world, hand gripping with the forces of nature continually. These would scarcely enjoy being with the musicians "harping with their harps." Well, to such the Lord will probably be saying, "You have wrought well on earth according to your powers, and according to the material at your disposal, and according to the forces which prevail in the earth. Now there is for you a larger sphere, and there are richer materials worthy of your greater powers. There are materials for world making. Planets are to be formed. Stellar systems are to be organized. There is the place prepared for you in the outdoor life beyond."

Indeed, there are "many mansions" in My Father's house, using the word in the astronomical sense. There the powers of the universe are in action of which we know something. These are to be harnessed, and to be used for the purposes of the people of God.

So we might go from class to class, and see that the family dwellings will be in endless variety, suitable to the bent of each group of the citizens of Heaven.

But what of the personal and domestic life on the other shore?

Here is our Lord's personal assurance for you, and His personal assurance for me: "I GO TO PREPARE A PLACE FOR YOU, that where I am there ye may be also." So wherever we go, and whatever place He prepares for us, we have the ineffable assurance that He will share it with us.

A Mansion!

No architect can draw the plan. No builder can tell of the materials which enter into its construction. Our minds can only think of such houses or mansions as we need, and as we use on the hither side. But of what use would a house of "marble halls," built of stone and mortar, be to us over there?

There was a time when our Lord complained that "foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of man hath not where to lay His head." That was because He belonged at that time to the hither side of the River.

There came the time when He crossed to the other side, and then came back again to comfort us with His resurrected Presence. In Daniel's time He gave us the privilege to see Him, the then pre-natal Christ. Later He became incarnate, and gave us the privilege of seeing Him as the living mortal Christ.

Then He crossed the River and came back again to give to us the privilege of seeing Him, the Risen Christ.

When He became incarnate, houses and walls were desirable things for Him. But when he returned from over the River, houses were to Him as nothing. He passed through such walls, and they formed no barrier to Him. He came and went at will without the opening or the shutting of a door. To Him, then and since, material barriers have not existed, they belong only to the hither side of the River. Storms and tempests, night and day, cold and heat, miles and mountains, all had their weariness and their pain for Him before crossing the River. After that they were to Him non-existent. The earth had for Him no house, nor had He place where to lay His head.

Digitized by Google

One can understand the benevolent tenderness of the Lord God of Israel when speaking of David's purpose to BUILD HIM AN HOUSE. Well might the king declare: "BEHOLD THE HEAVEN AND THE HEAVEN OF HEAVENS CANNOT CONTAIN THEE."

The Lord Who dwells in the midst of Israel did not require an house to dwell in. It was a convenient place for men to draw near to Him. It was useful for them, but nothing for Him.

Jesus, after His resurrection, neither required nor used any house. He entered to find His people. He left when He had completed His visit to them.

After we cross the River an earthly house will have no meaning for us; it belongs to this mortal frame, on the hither shore.

So how shall we conceive what will be the nature of the place prepared for us on the other side? Yet there will be a place. It will be home in the fullest sense of the word.

The purpose of the many mansions, the reality of the many mansions, the families dwelling in the many mansions, are sure. Let the best and most beautiful the earth has to show come to mind, and it will not begin to foreshow the glories of the place prepared by the Saviour.

Think, the Maker of the heaven and earth, Himself, has the place in hand for us. He would not leave it to another. He said: "I GO TO PREPARE A PLACE FOR YOU." The place will accordingly be worthy of its Maker. The only limit to the glory of the place will be the need to keep it within the compass of our ability to use it and enjoy. What then must be the exquisite beauty of the place! How precious will it be when we know what loving Hands have prepared it for us! Not even the hands of father or mother; but the Hands that were nail-pierced on Calvary. "I GO TO PREPARE A PLACE FOR YOU"; one of the many mansions of "MY FATHER'S HOUSE."

Again let us think. The place prepared for us is in OUR FATHER'S HOUSE. It is in a dwelling-place which is, this time, indeed a House of God.

I know a palace which has been inhabited by Britain's Kings and Queens. Now it is indwelt by many who have served the State, and who have enjoyed recognition as good servants of the State by the King. How they love the place where the Royal footsteps have so often trod, and where the Royal family life has been enjoyed.

The place which Jesus has gone to prepare for us is

IN "MY FATHER'S HOUSE."

Moreover, our Lord will also dwell there: "THAT WHERE I AM THERE YE MAY BE ALSO." Now this is a statement which is doubly made, and quadruply assured to us to be a fact.

(1) "In My Father's House are many mansions."—The positive statement of fact.

(2) "If it were not so I would have told you."—The negative assurance.

(3) "I go to prepare a place for you."—The action in accordance.

(4) "That where I am there ye may be also."—The purpose.

Such a statement, so insisted on by our Lord, is not symbol, but is solid fact. And so the PLACE, the MANSION, is sure.

Now as to the preparation?

We can say nothing as to walls and roofs, as to windows and doors. We do not think that any of these things will enter into the architecture across the River. But there will be Heaven's equivalent for all these things.

We cannot visualize the furniture of the mansions across the River. All the furniture in the homes on the hither shore are for the purposes of the service and ease of the mortal body. All the furnishing in the "many mansions" will be for the purposes and the service of the spiritual and immortal body there. But if we take the feeling of satisfaction we obtain from perfect and beautiful furnishing here, and multiply that satisfaction to the proportion of joy experienced on the farther shore, then we may faintly know what is the joy of perfect appointments, such as our Lord Himself will put into the "many mansions," and for us into our own in particular. Think: He would not entrust it to any other's taste.

If we wish to enquire further, let us take the snow-flake, let us take the grass blade, let us take the wing of the insect which hums in the light, let us take the petal of the rose, and in all these, and a million other things, let us see how perfectly and how individually He has done all these works of beauty. Then let us think of one of His masterpieces which He has gone to prepare for us, even a mansion on the other shore.

And then as to the personnel of the household? Who should it be but the loved ones who have crossed before us, and who will be waiting on the doorstep to bid us welcome home. Even the best of the furnishings our Lord will provide will not take the place of the beloved faces of friends who have gone before, nor of those who shall follow after. Think of them, waiting on the doorstep, with faces aglow with delight, and with hands outstretched in greeting, to welcome us home.

The Mansions are in the most stately City of the whole universe as known to man in this life or that which is to come. Of that we shall speak again. We may contemplate with delight the fact that He is providing us with a City dwelling, such as Kings and Potentates on earth never have known, and never shall know, on this side of the River.

Around the City, and around the Mansion, will be the Paradise of God.

Of that also we shall speak again.

At the centre of the City is the Throne of God. Flowing from the Throne is the crystal river, the river of life. On the banks of the river are the trees of the garden.

Yes, a homely place, a cheery place, a restful family gathering place, will be the mansion prepared for us by the loving hands of Jesus Christ our Lord.

DOES THE BIBLE STAND OR FALL WHEN TESTED BY SCIENCE, HISTORY AND PHILOSOPHY?—III.

BY PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc.

"LET the earth bring forth grass, the herb yielding seed, and the fruit tree yielding fruit after his kind, whose seed is in itself upon the earth."

Here again we are faced with some far-reaching facts, truths of the deepest import to students of the Bible, as well as botanists and zoologists.

Digitized by Google

First.—We are told that plant life appeared on the earth before the animals came into existence, and that the lower forms of plants came first.

This is the story to-day told by our botanists, zoologists and geologists. Geology, in its history of rock fossils, tells us that the order as given in Genesis is the order of organic development as found in fact.

The lower orders of plant life; and then the trees bearing fruit! And let us notice that all this developed organic life took place in one of the Yom periods, called "day three."

Concerning this word Yom, we will have considerable to say when dealing with the Second Chapter of Genesis.

Second.—Strangely enough, materialistic evolution is challenged in this story of the third day. Genesis plainly tells us that plants are limited to their own seed and kind. Sane, experienced botanists know that this is true to-day. An acorn produces an oak, and not a cucumber. A pumpkin seed does not produce a thistle, but it does produce a pumpkin, and thus all the way through normal plant life and growth.

This is good science, and Genesis meets all the requirements at this point. There is no room, thus far, for the modernist or honest critic to refuse belief in the Genesis story.

Now for the challenge facing the atheistic or materialistic teaching of evolution. The Scriptures say that plants grow from seed according to their kind, or after their kind.

The evolutionist contradicts this in his teaching.

He tells us in plainest language that, by variation and natural selection, two species can and do come from one. And in course of time these may produce two species quite far apart in nature and function.

However, the sane, close, experienced observer of nature positively knows and teaches that plants produce offspring after their kind, and that this seed is a limited and limiting seed after his kind—"whose seed is in itself"—asher zaro-bo.

THE FOURTH YOM.

Let there be lights. We have them to-day. There are many lights in the heavens in addition to the Sun and Moon.

This part of the story is told us before the story of animal creation is rehearsed. Perhaps the cosmic light, penetrating through the atmosphere, heavily laden with gases and watery vapour, was enough to give growth to the lower orders of planets!

When the atmosphere was cleared, then the solar, lunar and stellar lights could shine directly upon the surface of the earth.

Speaking of the lights, the story tells us that they were for dividing day from night, for signs, seasons, days and years.

It was during this period that He set them to give light upon the earth. Had He not given a fixed, a definite set, then we would be without much we now have.

Let us think of the earth passing around the Sun in the Sun's equatorial regions, and the earth's polar axis perpendicular to the plain of its orbit.

This arrangement could not give the seasons, for it would be one perpetual hot season at the earth's equator, one perpetual winter towards the poles, and a perpetual spring or autumn between parallels 25 degrees north and south and 65 degrees north and south.

But when the "set" was given, a part of that set was the set of the earth, so that the polar axis tipped over 22½ degrees towards its elliptical plane. By this "set" seasons were provided for in a simple and natural way.

Were the earth to revolve around the Sun, and not on its axis, it would be without day and night; but in the setting process, the earth was provided with an axial motion, giving our 24-hour day period.

Thus, then, the set provided day and night, and the seasons. But we are told the set provided for the years as well. By the season-producing set the year was fully provided for, and without that set we could not by any ordinary method discern one year from another.

The set involved the Moon's peculiar relationship to earth and Sun by which we get lunar days, months and years; by which we get light at night, and by which, in its four phases, we get such signs as have governed the farmer, gardener and breeder of animals for thousands of years to a very considerable extent.

Yes, we have such an astronomical set in our solar and terrestrial heavens as gives us day and night, months and years, seasons and signs. The Book so affirms, and we have at the present time all which are mentioned in Genesis of that particular Yom, day, or period of time.

So far as we have now journeyed we see that the account is strictly accurate, true to nature, and, therefore, scientific.

ANIMALS.

The story of the appearance of the animal creation is simple, natural, and on all fours with that of the production of plants.

We find that the animals were limited strictly to their kind, reproducing according to the organic limitations of their kind, by governing intelligence.

To-day we know the animal world continues existence, each species being limited to its kind as Genesis informs. This fifth day or period, or Yom story, was scientific then, and is scientific to-day.

Let us note that in the animal world the waters and lower life were associated in the account during day five, and the earth and animals were associated during day six.

The Bible story is that of plants, water animals, land animals and man. This is the true story of fact as proved by the specialists such as botanists, zoologists, geologists and archæologists.

True to nature now! True to nature then! Exact science then! Now science exact!

The last part of the creation story is related to the appearance of man and to his basic higher nature.

"Man in His own image" is the keynote. What more do we or could we desire or need?

We do know that man to-day has reason, volition, powers of decision, of variation of work, and of the immediate object to be reached. Thus the Book! The great Book of nature and reason tells us the nature of the Supreme Being.

From every source in all ages of human history we learn that the attributes and nature of God are exactly those of man, made like Him, in a limited degree. Therefore man is made "in the image of God."

Digitized by Google

The last verses of Chapter One tell us that man was given the proprietary relationship over animals and plants. What are the facts to-day in this regard? Just this; man is master, and naturally assumes mastership over all other organic existence; yes, and inorganic as well on this earth. This is a fact universally known and understood, and should, with the foregoing, give an unshaken faith in the historic and scientific accuracy of this First Chapter of Genesis.

What more can a reasonable man or woman require or ask? Here we once more affirm that Genesis meets the facts, and was a teacher of true astronomic and other sciences 3,300 years ago or more; and, in no way, falls before the attacks made by men and scholars.

"THE NEXT GREAT AWAKENING."

ADDRESS BY THE REV. J. J. WHITEHOUSE, M.A.,
At Headquarters, on the 10th of April, 1930.

MR. CHAIRMAN, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,

Mr. Garrison has spoken about the courage of a Clergyman who, believing this Truth, will make it known. I cannot claim to be anything of a hero in that respect, because I am a North-countryman, and whatever I believe I must say. I want to speak this afternoon about the next great spiritual awakening, and ask the questions, is it imminent, and, if so, what conditions are producing it?

I suppose we have all felt at moments that we are living in a period which is working up for a climax of some sort. Every phase of life you examine to-day is abnormal. In fact, so abnormal is it, that the abnormal has become the commonplace! That is one of our difficulties. Look at our vast

ARMY OF UNEMPLOYED.

We are getting so used to them that the abnormality of it does not strike us to-day so forcibly as it did eighteen months ago. And this mood is percolating through every phase of life to-day. We are witnessing the abnormal in everything and we are accommodating ourselves to all kinds of strange experiences. What does this mean? During the War a good deal was said about the birth of a new age. The summer of 1914 ended one chapter of human history, and the introduction of another chapter was begun in letters of fire and blood. The thought expresses an actual reality which is the key to a great number of our problems to-day. We are at the beginning of a new age. We are trying to adapt ourselves to conditions which we do not understand. We are aiding the birth of a new age without realizing it.

It is like the period of adolescence. Boys and girls from thirteen onwards to seventeen or eighteen are in the grip of new forces that they do not understand and life seems curious to them. Everything seems wrong.

We are experiencing something like that. We are caught by forces we do not understand. We have to realize, as the first thing, that actually we have closed one chapter of human history and are beginning the first line or two now in these years of a really new chapter—a new age. You may think of it as developing into of civilization. As other epochs of the past have marked new beginnings—new levels, so this epoch is witnessing the emergence of something new. Take, e.g., the outlook for Religion. What is the religious level of to-day in England? It is humanitarianism. You go to a man who does not go to church or recognize the necessity of organized religion, and you try to find out what are his conceptions of his duty to God—in other words, his religious level. You find he is perfectly happy if he subscribes to a hospital or some other philanthropic enterprise! I will not say that he looks upon it as a kind of insurance for the chances of the next life—I do not mean that—but it gives him a chance to express the religious emotion that he feels and that is his level. You may say that he hangs his religion upon that beautiful parable of our Lord, which is summed up in those striking words, "Inasmuch as ye did it to the least of these, My little ones, ye did it unto Me." Humanitarianism!

You go to the same man and ask him to give to Missions, or to build a church! He cannot see your point at all! He will give to his hospitals! but the more spiritual side of religion, the centre, the kernel of religion, personal allegiance to Jesus Christ, and opportunities for spiritual worship, well, that seems to be quite outside his faith and thought! I think you can see how he has reached that level, if you study the history of the last hundred years.

Bishop Gore, in one of his books, points out that there were three features which influenced the religious outlook of the 19th century a hundred years ago. The first was the growth of scientific knowledge, the second the growth of Biblical criticism, and the third, the industrial revolution.

Let us look very briefly at science. We know that practically most things that we have to-day in the way of advancement—scientific advance—have come to us within the last hundred years. Well, in the 19th century there was that movement amongst scientific leaders, led by Darwin and Huxley, on evolution. Before that scientific theory was launched upon the world, the belief of the average Englishman was that God had created every species as we find it now. Of course you know what the theory of evolution teaches—that one species is evolved from another. Well now, the result of the growth of scientific knowledge in the 19th century was briefly this—to substitute the reign of law for the influence of a personal God. That was the particular result of the scientific movement of the 19th century upon the religious thought of England.

Then, secondly, Biblical criticism. We know how the Bible was torn so that there was practically little left but the cover which binds it. Ewald and Strauss, one in the Old Testament and one in the New, practically left us nothing! Abraham was a myth or a tribal name! You could not believe anything practically that the Bible said, as actual fact, and then they attacked the life of our Lord and, so to speak, knocked out the foundations of our faith.

And then the third feature which influenced the religious thought of the 19th century was

THE INDUSTRIAL REVOLUTION.

The steam engine took the place of handicraft. Life was speeded up; men found, as the century went on, less time for religious meditation and religious thought.

Digitized by Google

Putting those three features together, what was the general result upon the religious thought of England during that century? First of all, it cast doubt in the minds of many people upon the authority of our faith. The Bible appeared to be snatched away from us. The old belief in the creative power of God had been merged into a process of law.

The second was this: that social enterprises took the place that the Church had occupied previously. We are all religious—we cannot help it! We have got to find some expression for that deeper religious spirit in the heart of each one of us, and the expression it found in the 19th century and onwards into our century has been in social work. Ladies from the West End went "slumming" as they called it!

Is this sufficient, this humanitarian level? Is it the Christianity of Jesus Christ and of St. Paul? The answer is—it is part of that Christianity, but only part. There is a fuller vision of the faith.

How can we lead our day and generation from the average level up to the higher level—the fuller vision—the faith as we have it in the Holy Scriptures?

I suggest that a brief study of past occasions when England has been brought back to a fuller faith—a study of these restoration times would help us to understand the principles which guide these movements.

If you study the history of past revivals in England, you will find that they were produced by the restoration of some forgotten Bible truth. We will start with the 16th century—the Reformation. The conscience of the country had been in the keeping of an organized Church. The absolution of the soul was received from that Church. What was the forgotten truth in that? The forgotten truth was that man is justified by faith, individual faith, that no system and nobody human can come between—that the only Mediator is Jesus Christ, and we need none other.

When Luther preached that doctrine in Europe, and others in England had caught on to it, the said "Yes, that is what we want; that sounds true." As a result, there was a great surging back to God.

Then came in the next century—the 17th century—the Puritan revival. That was in the time of the Stuarts, when there was a recognized belief in the Divine Right of Kings. What the country wanted then was the Divine Right of God, the Sovereignty of God and the liberty of the individual to worship as his conscience dictates. Cromwell and the Puritan Fathers proclaimed that truth and England got behind them and there was a revival.

Take the 18th century, the Georgian period, when the morals in this country sunk about as low as they could sink and the religious vision was not very much higher. Blackstone said he went to hear every preacher of note in London, and he did not know whether they were preaching for Confucius, Mohammed or Christ! What did a country that tolerated that need? They needed conversion, a turn right round. Then Wesley proclaimed this forgotten truth, and it caught on like a flame from the south to the north of the country.

One other, the next century, the 19th century. Some of you are perhaps old enough to remember the Moody and Sankey Mission in England and America; how it caught on in this City of London especially, and at Cambridge. Why did it catch on? Was Moody an extraordinary preacher, or Sankey an extraordinary singer? No doubt, but that was not the reason. The reason was that they restored a forgotten Bible truth. There had been a revival in the early part of the 19th century led by Finney, who proclaimed the terrors of the Law. Then came Moody like a ray of sunshine, preaching the love of God. It was as if the sun suddenly shot out from the sky on a winter day; it was what people were hungering to know about, and men on the Stock Exchange went to hear the great Evangelist day after day at his mid-day services.

Now we have come to the 20th century. What is the forgotten Truth that will recall this country back to its allegiance to God? It is the Kingdom of God. We know a good deal about God's love, but there is the Gospel of the Kingdom which until quite recently we have not said much about; at any rate, we have not said what the Bible says about it. As one looks at present-day conditions, one feels that the whole world is thinking now internationally.

The moment is ripe for a pronouncement of this Truth, if we can only get it over in the right way; if we can only make people see that there is a witness to be borne by the nation as well as by the individual. What a tremendous thing it would be for the rest of the world if this country of England realized that we have to bear.

I was speaking last night, during the Lenten Services, about the progress of the Faith and the modern Mission. What a tremendous change has come on this problem within the last ten years? As I was telling the people of the hardships of the Missionaries pushing their way through the jungle, it suddenly occurred to me that to-morrow it may be the native can stand in his hut, and the preacher be in Westminster Abbey. Not only will his voice be heard, but he will be actually seen by television. What a tremendous thing it will mean for the world.

Is it at all likely that this great awakening is near? I believe it is. And my belief is based upon three considerations: First, I seem to perceive all over the world a gradual formation of two camps—the Camp of Righteousness and the Camp of Evil, and there is a definite grouping of men in one or other camp; and the second consideration is, the modern excavations which are going on in Bible Lands.

That is one of the most Providential things that has happened for a long time. In Ur of the Chaldees, which we were told on the authority of the critics did not exist, Mr. Woolley (who was sent out there by the British Museum, combined with the University of Philadelphia, that is, England and America) has unearthed much valuable evidence. There is Ur and there is Jericho! We were told a week or two ago that they had found the actual evidence of the Flood in Mesopotamia, and also that they have come across the very walls that fell down flat in the time of Joshua. What is all this doing for us? It is making the Bible so clear that it cannot be challenged.

And then, thirdly, there is the stress of circumstances. I am one who believes that the authority of the Pyramid will be found to be absolutely right. It is only because any who doubt have not got the veil lifted, so that they can read the signs of the times aright.

The prophets tell us, there will come a time of stress for this country, when we will be absolutely up against it. When we are up against it, then it is that we shall call upon God to "do it for us." Then will come the next great awakening! And this is where the British-Israel Truth will be revealed as leading in the Vanguard. But let us approach this awakening, which may be nearer than we think, in the spirit of humility and with no other desire in our hearts than the desire to serve. There must be no jingoistic note sounded! We have nothing to boast about. The real note should be a note of humility. Let us also get a true balance of Bible truth. So many people have the idea that we leave Jesus Christ out. I always start by pointing out that He is the Saviour of the whole world, and God has selected one nation amongst all the nations to bear witness to this truth.

Consistency of Life is the thing that tells every time, and if we could have Britain consistently Christian, methinks that the nations of the world would come to us and say, "You have given us many good things—you have shown us how to be just and merciful—you have broken the shackles of slavery—you have taught us how to colonize and make enemies into friends. Now we want your best gift. We perceive that you have been with Jesus Christ, and we too want the Christ Who has made you great."

NATIONAL REDEMPTION.—I.

By A. R. H.

Widespread misconception exists regarding the meaning and significance of national redemption. Many confuse it with world salvation. But redemption and salvation are not synonymous terms.

Redemption means to "bring back." Salvation means "to restore to health."

This article has been written to show readers the part played by national redemption in the scheme for world salvation.

Of the seed of Abraham there are both "One" and "Many." There is the "one" seed paramount—Christ. And there is the multitudinous seed formed into a nation of light-bearers destined to take the "one" seed which is Christ to all the nations of the earth.

Christ is a light to the Gentiles. He is the glory of the servant nation called to take His light to other nations.

The guarantee that the servant nation will rise to its high calling lies in the fact of national redemption. It was expedient that Christ should die, not for the world's salvation only but also for the redemption of Israel.

For the working out of the plan of world salvation depends upon the ministrations of a redeemed race. Christ died as Redeemer of His People, and by His death they are nationally redeemed, i.e., brought back into covenant relationship with God.

As Redeemer, Christ stands guarantor that the race shall not fail in service to the world.

In their National Church liturgy the British People claim to be God's servants.

Some people think it is presumptuous on our part to make such a claim, and so it would be if the choice rested with us as to whether we were God's servant nation or no.

"Ye have not chosen Me, but I have chosen you,"* said JESUS, and this principle is as true to life nationally as it is individually.

As a nation we are called by grace and not of ourselves. For the promises made to our fathers upon which our calling depends came as a result of the justification which is by faith† and not of works.

As a RACE we could never have qualified for election as God's servants on our own merits (by the merit of our own self-righteousness), neither could any other people, race or nation have so attained election.

"The Lord thy GOD hath chosen thee to be unto Himself, above all people, that are upon the face of the earth. The LORD did not set His love upon you, nor choose you, because ye were more in number than any people; for ye were the fewest of all people."

Such was the message to the Brith-ish Peoples as they stood upon the threshold of the Land of Canaan at the very genesis of their career of colonial adventure.

To take the Union Jack§—the Pax Britannica[1]—to the ends of the earth, to "establish the earth" and "inherit the desolate heritages"[2] has been but preliminary to the firm establishment of the Christian faith, indeed to that very end!

Isaiah's remarkable message to the Brith-ish Peoples in the makes this fact both eloquently and abundantly clear.

To "bless" means literally "to redden with blood." By these means (i.e., colonization and setting up of the government of the throne of DAVID) is the end—the taking of the blessings[4] of the atonement—being achieved this very day before our eyes.

Some good people, however, still cannot see how GOD could possibly use the throne apart from the perfect spiritual and moral excellence of the individuals occupying it.

They quote for example the names of some of the kings of Israel and certain of the early British kings.

But the THRONE represents the CROWN. And the CROWN is above the King. The CROWN is the invisible—the King the visible—symbol of national unity.

The CROWN is permanent, never changing. The kingly representative may change, but even in the hour of death the proclamation goes forth: "The King is dead; Long live the King."

To those who imagine that the usefulness of an instrument in the hand of GOD depends more upon the individual than upon their office,[5] we address the following question:

* John xv, 16.
† See Romans iv, 3 and 13, etc.
‡ Deut. vii, 6.
§ Union of Jacob.
[1] The Government and Peace of Isaiah ix, 7.
[2] Isaiah xlix, 8.
[3] Isaiah xlix.
[4] Genesis xii, 3.
[5] Caiaphas does not seem to have been a particularly good man, but God used him in his capacity as High Priest for the utterance of a prophecy concerning Jesus. See John xi, 49-52; verse 51 makes it clear that it was not the individual that God used but his office or official authoritative position as High Priest.

Digitized by Google

Does GOD use Christian people apart from the perfection of the individual, and can GOD use the KINGDOM apart from the righteousness of the people composing it?

It is obvious that the individual Christian, however sanctified and consecrated he may be, can never claim to be a fit instrument by virtue of his own righteousness.

But GOD can use him all the same and does use him.

However worthy the individual believer may be—however exalted, noble and perfect his character—yet, brought under the searching light of the Christ-standard, his " righteousnesses are as filthy rags."

But he is not acceptable to GOD on account of his righteousness. He is acceptable and can be used of God only because by faith in Christ, he has the righteousness of Christ. His righteousness —the perfect righteousness which is of Christ—is imputed to him.

The more holy the individual Christian, the better the instrument he becomes—the more fully GOD can use him—but his usefulness does not depend upon personal devotion or righteousness—but upon faith.

In the case of the BRITH-ISH KINGDOM and the

the principle is much the same.

The doctrine of redemption fulfils for the KINGDOM[6] much the same function as the doctrine of justification by faith performs for the individual believer.

REPORTS BY COMMISSIONERS AND LECTURERS FOR 1929.

THE work of the year has proceeded satisfactorily, and steady progress has been made.

Lectures have been given regularly at 48 centres. Of this number seven are in the South-Western Area, which has been temporarily placed under my care.

Of the remaining 41 centres six have been opened during the year, viz., Deal, Earlsfield, Fordingbridge, Ryde, Totland Bay and Woking.

During the year I have given 260 lectures, this number being fewer than in the previous year owing to the month's holiday kindly granted to me in the spring, when I visited Palestine and the Near East.

The work in my Area is now more than two men can discharge, and I am now being assisted by the part-time services of Miss Hamilton Hunter, Rev. E. A. Couldrey, and others.

Arrangements are in hand for the opening of new centres at Sevenoaks, Tiverton and Dartmouth.

I am greatly cheered by the growing interest I find everywhere, and am positive I could open new centres in every town in my Area if men could be supplied to give them systematic attention afterwards.

I have not encountered any real difficulties or any severe opposition. We praise God for the constant blessing which has attended our labours.

JOHN J. MOREY.

1929 has been for the most part a repetition of previous years. It has been taken up principally with lecturing up and down the country, chiefly in the Southern Area. I have delivered during the year some 200 addresses and sermons.

During the year the Crusader Movement has been inaugurated, and I restarted the Speakers' Training Class with a view to supplying suitable speakers for the Crusader meetings. It is hoped to establish a Speakers' Correspondence Course, so that those who are unable to attend the London classes shall, however, have the benefit of training by correspondence. I organized a Summer Convention at Llandrindod Wells, Mid-Wales, at the end of August. This was a distinct success and justified the holding of our Summer Convention this year at Llandrindod instead of at Glastonbury as in previous years.

We continue by the Grace of God unto this day.

(Rev.) JOSEPH GAY.

The Midland Commissioner during 1929 laboured in 31 towns and cities, gave 111 public lectures, conducted two missions and assisted in 25 other meetings.

Foundations have been laid in various places where it is hoped to build in the future and an immense amount of literature has been circulated throughout the Area.

Vitality of the Branches has been well maintained, and a very large number of persons have been interested and expressed acceptance of our Truth.

The national message of the Bible to our race is being driven well home, and is becoming fast embedded in the racial consciousness; a fact of immeasurable importance.

The financial position of the Midland Area continues excellent. All expenses of work in the Area have been met out of local resources, and a substantial balance remains toward cost of work planned for 1930.

It is a happiness to refer with gratitude and admiration to the energy and love of our workers everywhere. One wonders whether in the whole field of Christian service there can be found such a wonderful fellowship; such warmth of affection, steadfastness of zeal, self-sacrificing devotion, and readiness to spend and be spent in prosecution of the King's business, as we find among these banded together in the Cause of Kingdom Truth.

A scheme has been launched for uniting all members and adherents in the Area for a weekly day of prayer for definite objects mutually agreed upon.

We feel that God is at this time challenging us by events to persistently enquire of Him, that He may do for us all the wondrous things recorded in His promises.

(Rev.) T. H. WHITEHOUSE,
Midland Commissioner.

It is possible to report a year of very distinct advance in the North. The opportunities that my splendid henchman,

[6] " I have graven thee upon the palms of My hands; thy walls are continually before Me." Such are the wonderful words in which the Redeemer of Israel confirms the fact of national redemption for His Brith-ish People in the Isles. See Isaiah xlix, 16, etc.

Mr. Whitton, and I have had, have increased almost beyond the possibility of our dealing with them. With one single exception, the many Branches are in a very healthy condition, and this is due, I think in the main, under God, to having good and spiritually-minded officers.

A notable feature of my work has been a striking increase in the number of drawing-room meetings held.

I have given 108 addresses during the year, and have used the services of four lieutenants, to go to places in Yorkshire, when I was unable to go myself. These four, whom I have had the privilege of teaching, have done very excellent work, and a demand for their services has been created.

We have lost a very valuable worker in Mr. J. Tench, who kept work going in County Durham, and it is difficult to continue his work from Bradford. But in spite of the seriousness of his loss, we hope to make progress up in the far north of this Area, and hold regular lectures in several centres.

(Rev.) GUY F. WADDINGTON.

During the year I have addressed 131 meetings. 1929 has been a year of immense progress in the work of the British-Israel local Branches.

Audiences have been most appreciative; there was better organization everywhere, and a growing keenness for more knowledge.

The British-Israel Crusader Movement was started. We had long set our hearts on carrying on British-Israel activity among "the lambs" of the flock.

It is a new development with tremendous possibilities. Given skilful treatment, sympathy and understanding it will set youthful Britain aflame.

The spirit of the Movement was well expressed by some young recruits at a recent Crusader meeting when they said: "B.-I.C. does not stand for British-Israel Crusader only. It also stands for 'British Isles for Christ,' and we mean to help win them for Christ."

E. HAMILTON HUNTER.

The Area of the Northern London District was increased early in the year and extended to include the Counties of Cambridgeshire, Norfolk and Suffolk, and the work has been steadily developed throughout the Area, opportunities opening up on all sides for meetings, followed up in many cases by the formation of a Branch. The vigorous Branch at Hornsey has been a success from the start. Oxford after passing through a rather difficult time has taken a fresh lease of life, and advantage was taken of some meetings arranged by Mr. Garrison at Cambridge to start a Branch which is steadily increasing in numbers and usefulness. The arrival of autumn saw renewed activity in most of the older Branches, and new Branches have been opened in Welwyn Garden City, Highgate, Lowestoft and Saxmundham. A beginning has been made at Hertford, King's Lynn, Norwich and Ipswich, and it is hoped that the New Year will see the starting of Branches in all these places, while openings have occurred in Sudbury, Suffolk, Linton near Cambridge, Hook Norton near Banbury, Royston, Herts, and Wembley. I was invited by the Vicar of St. John's (Hounslow) to preach on two successive Sundays on the subject of British-Israel to large and appreciative congregations, and have had opportunities at St. Mark's (Stratford), and St. Mary Magdalene (Holloway). At the last-named Church I gave a series of Advent addresses on Prophecy, and a desire has been expressed for the formation of a Study Circle. Opportunities have also occurred of discussing the subject with clergy and ministers, and a good quantity of literature has been circulated. As last year, I have had calls from other Areas, but the rapid development of the work in the Northern London Area makes this less and less possible. As the year closes and another opens the outlook in this Area may be said to be distinctly promising.

(Rev.) T. SPARSHOTT JOHNSON.

The past year has been one of steady progress, notwithstanding the setback owing to unauthorized statements regarding the Great Pyramid measurements and the month of May, 1928, not made by Federation lecturers, and which were promptly corrected and explained by our lecturers and written word. During the year 70 lectures have been provided for the Branches in my Area, and 21 visits to Branches made personally. Five B.-I. sermons have been preached in Churches of England, and a B.-I. Bible Class taken on 38 Sunday afternoons.

Most of the Branches in the N.-W. Area are clamouring for a mission from Headquarters. Three newly-formed Branches are ripe for such a mission, and districts at present untouched would heartily respond. Older Branches are also asking for a mission. There is ample evidence of increased interest and circulation of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE.

A "Full-time Commissioner" is greatly needed in this Area. With his advent I can visualize great and lasting strides being made.

May I take this opportunity of personally thanking all who have so ably assisted me by consenting to give of their time and ability so freely to lecture to our Branches.

In conclusion, pray! pray! pray! No appeal is made to God in vain. He will help us where human help fails.

SAML. E. STEELE,
Organizer, North-Western Area.

1929 has been a wonderful year, much has been attempted and progress has been made.

It has been my privilege to conduct eight Missions in various Branches, besides organizing other Missions in Sheffield. have given well over 200 lectures and addresses during the year. I have also paid over 500 visits to the homes of our members.

The correspondence columns of various newspapers have been frequently used by me in spreading British-Israel Truth. In this way I have carried on lengthy campaigns in four well-known provincial newspapers, thereby gaining much publicity for our teaching.

Last August I visited Barrow-in-Furness, where I had four very successful meetings, and thus began a work which has been well followed up by Mr. Brenchley, who has recently formed a Branch of the Federation there.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Brenchley has also established a Branch at Bolton, where he is doing a good work.

I must acknowledge all the help and encouragement which I have always received from our Northern Hon. Commissioner, the Rev. R. G. F. Waddington, who is also doing magnificent work for our Cause.

True, during 1929, we have reached many thousands in our district with the Kingdom Message, BUT THERE ARE STILL MANY MILLIONS IN YORKSHIRE AND LANCASHIRE who have never heard of it.

Ten and a quarter millions of people live within 50 miles of Manchester Town Hall—more than live within 50 miles of St. Paul's Cathedral.

We need at once a full-time Commissioner, who is a capable organizer, and who thoroughly understands the ways of the hard-headed Northern people.

Given the right man, I can see a mighty revival breaking out in this district in a very short time.

WM. WHITTON.

I think I may feel encouraged by the last few months of British-Israel work in Bristol and its environs. The greater number of the meetings are inaugural—in many cases the audiences have never heard B.-I. Truth expounded, or in all cases have a most imperfect knowledge of it. Personally I find that it is a plant of slow growth, and that at "question time" one meets with a considerable amount of bias. However, with the exception of three cases out of 52 meetings (and these were at Modernist places of worship) there has always been a distinct desire to hear more, and where I have been fortunate enough to obtain a series of meetings I have invariably found the interest to increase and deepen, and several have come forward and avowed themselves believers. And in view of the marvellous increase and wide spread of British-Israel teaching in the past decade, it could not well be otherwise.

E. PALMER BOTT.

Since my appointment as a lecturer for the Principality of Wales I have to report a slow but sure progress.

Interest has been revived in some districts and virgin soil sown with the seed in others.

I have preached, lectured and held drawing-room lectures in 19 different centres. These have covered such counties as Pembrokeshire, Glamorganshire and Breconshire. In every instance the message was well received.

I am hopeful of seeing Branches formed shortly at Pontypridd, Newport, Merthyr Tidfil and Port Talbot.

Each week, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, our Literature Stall is open in the Cardiff Market. The Stall is open for 17 hours. During these hours one comes across people from all parts of the Principality.

This is the most important part of my work for the moment, as it has created opportunities for carrying the message into other towns.

Sale of literature is good, and I have sent some hundred or so copies of the special number of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE to private individuals.

Without exaggeration we have in these ways reached at least 2,000 people during the past six months.

"THE FAITH THAT REBELS."

"A RE-EXAMINATION OF THE MIRACLES OF JESUS."

BY D. S. CAIRNS, D.D.

"The challenging title of as fine a book as we have read for many years."—(British Weekly.)

"At last we have a book on miracles which really moves the problem out of the stalemate into which it had fallen."—(Guardian.)

A BRIEF REVIEW.

Having fairly and fully explained the rival theories of miracles—Traditional and Modernist—Dr. Cairns sets forth the view of miracles contained in the Synoptic Gospels themselves, using the Old Testament as the lexicon of the New, getting at the Old Testament presuppositions that governed the thoughts of the Apostles, especially as regards God's covenant of sovereign grace with Israel; the Moral Order of the world; the Spirit of God; and the Kingdom of God.

The point emphatically stressed is the fundamental position of faith in Hebrew piety, since Abraham began the story of faith by going out of Ur of the Chaldees. The Divine life communicated by grace can be received by faith alone. Hence in the Old Testament, as in the New, faith is the subjective condition of salvation. Never was there a truer account of the religion of Israel given than that in the eleventh chapter of the Epistle to the Hebrews. The writer had learned in the school of Jesus to understand the very soul of the religion of His people.

In the Synoptic narratives the first point to notice is the extraordinary emphasis put by Christ everywhere on the necessity of faith. This is the element in His teaching which is, as it were, blurred and half suppressed under both the Traditionalist and Modernist views. Regarding it as necessary to go into this with some detail, the Principal of the Church College, Aberdeen, at length makes it perfectly clear that the whole realm of sin within the heart and of tragedy from without, not being part of the unchangeable order of God, were effectively dealt with by the Father, through the Spirit, in answer to the prayers of faith of the "Ideal Son," Who invited His disciples to similar enterprises of faith and works.

In the middle of the book it is reasonably contended that the idea that Nature is a rigid system, impervious and inflexible to the spiritual world, must be abandoned. Nature is dependent upon God, is purposive throughout towards His spiritual ends, and is plastic in His hands for the guidance and discipline and ultimate perfection of free human spirits.

The positive evils which man through the centuries has been enduring from the great system of Nature are signs that man has not yet attained full spiritual maturity. Thus it would seem to follow that Jesus of Nazareth, being the true Son of God and the ideal human being, it was fitting that He should show Himself uniquely master of those natural evils by the miracles He wrought and empowered His followers to imitate. Faith in the all-controlling power of God was and is the indispensable condition. The faith of Jesus in the Almighty Father, like all faith, was woven of three strands—faith in God's power and reality, faith in His love, and faith in His perfect liberty to help men, "a truth which was obscured so long as men believed in the completeness of the scientific explanation of reality, but whose possibility is now in process of being demonstrated by our fuller knowledge of the limits of science."

Why should religion accept limits to the power of the love of God and the possibilities of prayer? Against all such limits set by man's unbelief stands Christ, with His incessant "Have faith in God."

"The malady of our time lies in its contracted thoughts of God. We think too narrowly and meanly of His Power, His Love and His Freedom to help men. That is what the miracles of Jesus and His teaching about faith mean."

These unique deeds are seen to be the natural results within a Spiritual universe of the appearance of a unique Personality. But they are unique in degree, not in kind; and therefore the believing followers of Christ never need be intimidated by the Modernist idea that Nature is a completely closed physical system. On the contrary, there is no part of it that is not open to the petitionary prayer of faith which can remove any obstacle, however great, standing in the way of the Kingdom of God.

WEEK BY WEEK.

By A. R. H.

Last week we advanced a plea for recognition of the value of our great temporal heritage. We stressed the importance of the material basis of the Kingdom-organization in the earth.

Tribulation is teaching us that the spiritual and economic forces in the life of the nation are inseparably intermixed. The material forces of the Kingdom cannot flourish without spiritual inspiration behind them. The spiritual activities of the Kingdom fail to function on the material plane with the waning of national economic health. Both activities are interdependent.

The life of the nation and its spiritual witness to mankind alike depend upon continuance of material prosperity.

Money itself is not evil. It is the inordinate love of money which is the root of all evil. God, Who is the Giver of all good things, has richly endowed His People with natural resources so that their spiritual mission to mankind may not fail for lack of proper equipment.

The pioneer spirit which has been instrumental in wresting the hidden wealth from the everlasting hills and in establishing the earth and inheriting desolate heritages is a truly religious spirit.

The elect race have a part to play as well as the election of grace. And right nobly have they played their part of colonization—Kingdom-Empire building.

In these difficult times of transition we need to revive the doctrine of individualism upon which our EMPIRE has grown great and preach the gospel of Kingdom-prosperity.

Even the Methodist Recorder begins to see the importance of the material side of Kingdom-activity. In a leading article stressing the point that TRADE is vitally related to RELIGION, it says: "Christian men and women are under a sacred obligation to work for if only to provide work for the victims of unemployment.

"But there is more than this to be said. If the BRITISH NATION should lose its industrial leadership and sink into poverty, then its religious and philanthropic witness must inevitably suffer decline.

"The good causes which rely upon the British people for their main support are almost numberless, and no Christian man can view with equanimity the prospect of the withdrawal of such support.

"No one will doubt that the great work of the BRITISH MISSIONARY SOCIETIES could hardly have been achieved apart from the material prosperity of GREAT BRITAIN in the last century."

Commenting on the fact that money for missionary activity is not forthcoming at present in large enough sums the article continues: "What is the reason for this? Not spiritual decline we are persuaded. We doubt whether there ever was a time when there was so much enlightened enthusiasm for Foreign Missions as there is to-day, or a greater readiness to make sacrifices for this cause.

"The failure to raise the requisite amount of money is to be traced, not to lack of enthusiasm, but to lack of means. In a word, bad trade is hampering and limiting the missionary enterprise of the CHURCH.

"The same applies to the appeal which is being made for the Ministerial Training Fund and which is as yet meeting with an inadequate response. We refuse to believe that the majority of our people do not realize the importance of giving a thorough training to our accepted candidates for the ministry.

"We are not persuaded that this generation is less enlightened and discerning than that which built the COLLEGES. Here again it is lack of means that hinders us. The root cause of our difficulties is bad trade.

"It follows from these considerations that Christian men and women ought to be eager to help to bring about a revival of trade.

"The ways by which this is to be accomplished are primarily the concern of business men and economists. But the Churches may help to and atmosphere in which our problems can be discussed and solved. They can make the people realize that there are vital spiritual interests at stake, and that there is need for serious co-operative and self-effacing effort to cope with the present situation.

"Politics have entirely changed their character in the last generation. Now the questions which agitate the electorate are economic, social and industrial. These cannot be dealt with in the old way. Less than ever is all the truth on one side, and the complex and delicate problems which confront us need for their solution an open mind, freedom from party bias, and a readiness to co-operate with all men of good will.

* Revival of Trade and Revival of Religion are inseparably linked together, as witness the outpouring of the spirit of Ez. xxxvi. 25-27, followed immediately by material blessing of verses 29-30, etc.

† We want a new spirit in industry between employer and employed. The Churches should pray for the outpouring of the new spirit of the new covenant upon the heart and mind of the Nation. See Jer. xxxi. 33-36, and Ez. xxxvi. 26-27.

"The question of tariffs, for instance, should be lifted clean out of party politics and should be discussed and settled on its merits in the COUNCIL of the NATION.

"Unemployment is a question which demands the unprejudiced and co-operative thought of the best minds of the NATION.

"We believe that Christian men should make the state of trade a matter of prayer. We are not anxious that our people should be prosperous for the sake of comfort and ease. Adversity has its uses and we are discovering them in these difficult days.

"But it is time to face the fact that if BRITAIN is to have a future as glorious as its past, no effort must be spared to restore our declining trade. We trust men of all parties will co-operate in the service of the country, and through the country the service of the world."

Thus tribulation is helping our NATION to catch the vision of the fact that it is through BRITAIN that "all the families of the earth" are to be, have been and are being blessed.

It is doing more. It is preparing the ground for the preliminary stages in a movement to restore the Divine Constitution. Everywhere the conviction is gaining ground that PARLIAMENT should be freed from party manœuvres and conform more truly to the highest ideal of what a great should really be. Popular feeling in this regard was admirably summed up by General Smuts recently when he said: "GREAT BRITAIN is fundamentally sound, but I feel convinced that you are up against a hard struggle, and that there should be far more national co-operation than is at present apparent.

"The time is rapidly coming when there will have to be a great effort of co-operation. The problems which your Country has to face are greater than any single party can solve, and the interests of the NATION will have to come first. With combination and the scrapping of party politics the country will undoubtedly win through."

Here we have nothing less than the call for the manifestation of in the administration of government. The people are looking for a new type of government—a national government—a truly constitutional government.

Theoretically to-day the government is carried on by the KING in COUNCIL. The establishment of a COUNCIL of STATE pledged to carry out the principles of the Divine Constitution (upon which Britain's present Constitution is based) would bring us closer to the influence of the throne and of Him‡ Whose influence overshadows that throne than we have ever been before.

If Tribulation leads us to restore the Divine Constitution it will have been well worth while. For the restoration of the Divine law and principles of government must precede the coming of Him Whom the heavens now retain.§

‡ In looking to the earthly kingly occupant of the Davidic throne we must never lose sight of Him Whose minister he is.

§ Acts iii, 21.

National prayer for the revival of trade is all to the good, since it will inevitably lead us straight on to preparing the way for the coming of the KING.

Britain's deliverance is certain. But there is significance in the strong suggestion for the necessity of national prayer: "I will yet for this be enquired of by the HOUSE of ISRAEL to do it for them."¶

"AS DUCKS TO THE WATER."

How is it that some people absorb B.-I. teaching as naturally as ducks take to the water?

First.—I think it is because they have never had any doubts about the Bible, so that when new truths are revealed, it is no surprise for them, but only the natural outcome.

Second.—They were taught the Scriptures from their youth, and received them without questioning them, for as soon as one commences to question God's Word, he is running a grave risk of weakening his faith in it and in God.

Third.—I think God reveals His purposes to those who come to Him empty and praying to be filled.

For instance, suppose one person comes to another for information, but is so puffed up with his own superior knowledge, how can he expect to learn anything? Is not that how our Lord saw it when He thanked His Heavenly Father, saying, "Because Thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes . . . . . for so it seemed good in Thy sight"? (Matt. xi, 25-26.) M. W. P.

A REVIEW.

"JOEL'S PROPHETIC MESSAGE AND WARNING."

BY HOWARD B. RAND, LL.B.

THIS is the title of a very valuable little book from the pen of Mr. Howard B. Rand, LL.B., which is a very real contribution to that literature which has gathered around the prophetic Scriptures. Mr. Rand has allowed the book of the prophet Joel to speak for itself. Realizing the tremendously important fact that the Anglo-Saxon race is descended from the Northern, Ten-tribed, Kingdom of Israel, he shows, with convincing clarity, that the message of Joel has an application and an implication to these last days in which we live, and therefore is a message to which God's Israel nation should give prayerful and diligent heed. He deals with the Book of Joel in its three natural divisions. The first part deals with the Judgments which will fall upon Israel because of her impenitence. In the second part the author rehearses, with great vividness, the attacks of Israel's enemies, Israel's repentance, and the restoration of the Kingdom as God's answer to Israel's prayer. In the third part of his book, the deliverance of Jerusalem and the judgment of the nations, Mr. Rand has laid the prophetic student under a deep debt of gratitude to him. One realizes, as perhaps never before, how completely the message and warnings of this old-time prophet are having their complete fulfilment in our day and generation. The light of modern events is falling upon the Holy Scriptures and transforming them into messages more germane to our time and age than anything which might come from the pen of our modern sage and scholar.

While dealing with the Book of Joel, Mr. Rand, with that ease of the expert, roams through the entire prophetic Scriptures both of the Old and New Testaments, and marshals them in one common witness to the truth which Joel proclaims. By so doing he has increased, to a great degree, the value of his book. If further confirmation were needed, other than that which is freely distributed by Mr. Rand throughout his book, for the message and warning which the prophet Joel gives, then Appendix A, giving the evidence of the Apocrypha, is worth while. Appendix B, a reprint of an editorial which appeared in the Boston Herald for May 25th, 1929, is very arresting. This book will enrich any library to an extent far beyond its size. No earnest Bible student can afford to be without it. J. G.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

By the Rev. G. H. Lancaster, M.A.

QUESTION.—What constitutes a Gentile? Were the Israelites ever so classed in the Scriptures?—A. C.

ANSWER.—The word "Gentiles" is one equivalent of the Hebrew goiim, which is represented in the English also by such renderings as "nations" and "heathen." The Revised Version very frequently replaces the Authorized Version "Gentiles" by "nations." The actual word "Gentiles" (Heb. goiim) occurs 30 times in the A.V. of the Old Testament, and some 98 times in the A.V., N.T. It does not occur in the singular ("Gentile") at all in the Old Testament, and only twice in the New Testament.

The Hebrew word goi has the same root meaning as 'am ("people"), which occurs more than 1,500 times in the O.T. In their primary sense of a connected body (cf. Deut. xxxii, 21), goi and 'am are both applied even to troops or herds of animals (Joel i, 6; Prov. xxx, 25, 26). So the plural forms goiim and 'ammim have the general sense of nations or peoples. Ultimately, however, the application of the singular 'am with rare exceptions (Gen. xxvi, 11, of the Philistines, Exod. ix, 16, of the Egyptians) was confined to the Israelites, while the singular goi was generally, though not exclusively, applied to other nations (although in Isa. i, 4, and Zeph. ii, 9, goi and 'am are both used to designate the people of Judah and Jerusalem).

The Hebrew goiim occurs very frequently in the O.T. as a designation of non-Israelitish peoples (cf. 1 Sam. viii, 5, 20; 2 Kings xviii, 33; xix, 17; 1 Chron. xiv, 17; xvi, 24; 2 Chron. xxxii, 23; xxxvi, 14; Neh. v, 17; Psal. lxxix, 10; cvi, 47, etc.).

The Greek LXX and the Greek Testament employ the word ἔθνος (ethnos) for nations (Gentiles), speaking generally, and λαός (laos) for the chosen people, although ethnos is not infrequently used for the latter, and that without any disparaging distinction (cf. Luke vii, 5; xxiii, 2; John xi, 48, 51, 52; xviii, 35; Acts x, 22; xxiv, 3, 10, 17; xxvi, 4; xxviii, 19).

It will be seen therefore that it is somewhat difficult to draw a hard and fast line when endeavouring to distinguish between the different Hebrew and Greek words, translated Gentiles, heathen, nations, etc., in our Bible. In Gen. xlviii, 19, "fulness of nations," the Heb. word is goiim for "nations," whose meaning may have a double application.

In 1 Cor. x, 32, "nor to the Gentiles, nor to the Church of God," the Revised Version correctly reads, "to Greeks, or to the Church of God" (cf. also John vii, 35; Rom. iii, 9, etc.), which is the more correct translation, although the sense is much the same, for to the Jews of that period Greek culture and religion stood for the culture and religion of the non-Jewish or non-Hebrew world.

In conclusion, it practically means that the "Gentiles" or "nations" were those who were not of the Jewish religion (especially in later times). Hence, assuming that the scattered seed of the House of Israel were to be reckoned amongst the nations, they would appear to the Jews as "Gentiles," inasmuch as they were non-Jewish, although they could yet be of the seed of Abraham. The Jews regarded both Ephraim-Israelite Gentiles and ordinary (non-Jewish) "Gentiles" in the same category. This would account for the hostile feeling which the Jews displayed towards other nations and peoples.

STANDING ON A ROCK.

By E. M. Foster.

BRITISH-Israel has often been called a bright ray of light piercing the darkness. No metaphor seems too strong to illustrate the revelation it gives. How, then, shall we describe the incredible hardness of heart of the many Israelites in our midst? Many of them who cannot believe, do not even wish the teaching were true. They persist in calling it a new idea, when we know that it is only the old true idea once more revived to lead Israel in the way she should go.

When the Renaissance brought classical literature back to Europe, with what delight it was hailed! It was seen in every walk of life. The courtier writing his sonnet tried to vie with his master Horace, and the commoners crowded to the Globe to hear Shakespearian drama pack-full with classical feeling and allusion. Can we picture an England so dull as to be incapable of appreciating these things?

And here and now we have our splendid Federation heralding a greater glory than that of Greece and Rome; and thousands do not even trouble so much as to enquire. Must we then despair and cry out that the glory has departed? Never, never. Although the Shekinah was removed from the Temple, God never deserted and never will desert His Israel. Through many trials, out of Egypt and into the Promised Land the Isaac nation came into the Appointed Place. And even now the returning march eastwards has begun. We who hold the Gospel key can ever rejoice, for not even the gates of hell shall prevail against us.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

MR. JOHN LEECH and Miss Hamilton Hunter were the speakers at Headquarters last week. The former and the Rev. E. A. Couldrey are announced for next week: Wednesday at 3, and Thursday at 8. The Bible Study Circle, conducted on Wednesdays at 6 p.m. at Headquarters by the Rev. W. Andrew Sinden, is affording light and help to the goodly numbers who attend. All are cordially invited. The meetings continue each Wednesday until further notice.

On Saturday next, May 24th, Empire Day will be observed by a special gathering at Headquarters, 6, Buckingham Gate, S.W. Tea Social from 4 p.m., followed by an address by the President of the B.-I.-W.F., Major J. Knowles, O.B.E., and a lecture on "India, Past and Present," by Mr. Herbert Garrison, who will introduce a fine series of lantern pictures from his large and comprehensive collection. This subject has been chosen in view of the present situation in India about which something will be said.

* * *

L. K. writes from South Africa:—"I enclose cheque towards your appeal in THE MESSAGE of March 22nd, and pray for God's blessing on your work. Your teaching has proved wonderfully helpful to me personally, and there is indeed a movement among my dry bones."

HARROW AND WEALDSTONE BRANCH.

Mr. Harrison Hill gave his address on "The Bible in Song and Story" on Thursday evening, May 8th, with musical illustrations. Mr. Douglas Chambers (son of the late Rev. Arthur C. Chambers) presided. Miss Beck, in welcoming the Chairman, expressed the great honour and respect in which his father was held. The lecture was an impressive statement of the fact that the Bible is the basis of English literature and especially of the poetry and hymnology of the English-speaking race. The audience joined heartily in singing George Herbert's setting of the twenty-third Psalm and the Psalm of the Great Hallel (Psalm cxiv), traditionally believed to be the hymn sung by our Lord and His disciples at the Last Supper. "And when they had sung an hymn, they went out into the Mount of Olives." (Matthew xxvi, 30.) "Sing, O Israel" (the tune composed by Mrs. Garrison; words by the Lecturer) was also quickly learned by the audience and sung for the first time in Harrow.

The Rev. T. Sparshott Johnson has recently addressed meetings in Worthing, Woking, Sutton, Royston and Edgware. The last two places have recently been entered, and there is a prospect of Branches being started in the near future.

Miss Hamilton Hunter addressed a large gathering at Blackheath on the 24th ult., the subject being "Israel Traced in the Bible to Britain." At the close Miss Hunter appealed for further individual efforts to spread the great Truth. Eight new members were enrolled.

One of our members sent THE NATIONAL MESSAGE to a nephew in the R.A.F. in Iraq. The paper was at first neglected; but later the recipient had occasion to journey to Jerusalem in charge of a convoy. While travelling in the train his travelling companion interested him in the British-Israel subject and asked him to secure a certain book from Headquarters. Others were sent for, and now a group of young men in a bungalow in Mesopotamia are studying the subject for themselves. Thus the seed is scattered and fructifies.

W. S. G. writes:—"I read your Annual Report with delight, and wondered at the strides you are making. The excellent response to your teaching must greatly rejoice your heart. 'The Nation' and 'The Church' which has befogged Christian leaders and teachers is now plain to me, thanks to your literature. I am an organist, and there is now something very beautiful and real in the Church of England Service. May you be blessed with good health, and may the Spirit of God guide you in all things."

* * *

Miss Hamilton Hunter writes to correct what she fears may give a wrong impression in the notice of her lecture at Walsall which appeared in our issue of May 3rd, where she was stated to have explained Redemption as being national, and Salvation individual. The lecture, she says, was to point out that there was a National Redemption of Israel, and an individual Redemption of men; also a National Salvation (rescue from sin and its consequences), and an individual Salvation. The National Redemption, however, differed from the individual Redemption, being the work of Jehovah—the Lord God of Israel; while individual Redemption was the work of the Lord Jesus Christ, the Redeemer of men. But both National and individual Salvation were the work of the Lord Jesus Christ the Saviour, "for there is none other Name given under Heaven among men whereby we may be saved."

* * *

In the Review published last week it should have been stated that the publishers of the book, "The Rome of St. Paul," are "The Religious Tract Society." A footnote stated that the book—7s. 6d. net—could be obtained from the Covenant Publishing Company, 6, Buckingham Gate, S.W.1, which is quite correct.

* * *

A. S. writes:—"This wonderful B.-I. new light has sent my sons back to the Bible, which their colleges and the nebulous teaching of the Churches had closed for them."

THE BEST SELLER OF ALL.

"Nothing can equal the popularity of the Bible. It is an astonishing fact, when one thinks of all the books that are published year by year, that the Bible can still sell at 40,000,000 copies, as it did last year. All the figures of all the best sellers are put completely in the shade.

All the talk of the lessening force of religion breaks on this solid rock of success. After hundreds of years the Bible remains the greatest comfort and solace of mankind. If it is asked why this is so, the answer is—read the Book and see. Nobody who has ever read the Bible fails to return to it in trials and stresses, in order to renew the comfort and sustain the strength which came originally from it."—Daily Express.

We have to record with regret the passing away of two more of our members: Mrs. Knox, who was a devoted member of the Croydon Branch, and a member of the Committee. She always assisted at the Book Stall, and gave helpful addresses at the Bible Study Circle. The Rev. Commander Roberts speaks in warm terms of her zeal and courage when several years ago she was Hon. Secretary of the Herne Bay Branch.

Miss Jessie Keene, who, with her friend Miss Agnes Moore, was a frequent attendant at our meetings at Headquarters. She was a lady of considerable attainments, and she enjoyed the beauties of her Greek Testament. With Miss Moore she held missions in several parts of the United Kingdom, and many towns and villages have been helped to live for Christ through their faithful ministry of the Word. They had worked for thirteen years in the Christian Police Association, and as Missioners in co-operation with the late Mr. Reader Harris, K.C. They had been associated in good works for forty-five years. We tender our sincere sympathy to the relatives and friends of both families.

Dr. F. H. Carter writes:—

"As an old student of St. Bartholomew's Hospital, and a member of the B.-I.-W.F., I am deeply interested in the announcement in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE that the Rev. Canon Savage has invited Mr. Basil Stewart to speak in the Church of St. Bartholomew-the-Great. As is generally known, this celebrated Norman Church is a part of the original Priory and Hospital founded by Rahere in A.D. 1123. It is significant and inspiring that this noble effort to bring the light of B.-I. Truth into this grand old Church should coincide with the appeal for a million pounds for the Hospital itself for the material needs of the patients.

"Dr. Aldersmith was a fellow-student with me at St. Bartholomew's Hospital. He was a veteran among B.-I. workers, and co-operated with Mr. Davidson in the great book on the 'Pyramid.' He was an able and clever man, and took the highest qualifications. He never practised, but for many years he was Surgeon at Christ's Hospital, the old 'Blue Coat' School; no doubt he wished for the leisure he could never have obtained in general practice to carry on his important investigation of the B.-I. Truth. How he would have rejoiced—nay, is rejoicing—in this beacon of light being brought into the old Church connected with his 'Alma Mater'!"

Mr. P. W. Thompson, M.A., writes:—

"Mr. Basil Stewart states that, on the authority of the Pyramid, we are in for rather a bad time.

"As I take my British-Israel from sources purely Biblical, I am unable to discuss the Pyramid. But from the perusal of my daily paper, I am inclined to agree with Mr. Basil Stewart, as to the facts of the case, whatever the origins may be.

"Now, when God causes Israel to approach a Red Sea or a Jordan, it is only that Israel may be led right through it, without the loss of a shoe-latchet, provided they take God's way. 'God is the best Master that ever was—but He will be Master,' as the old Wesleyan local preacher pithily put it. God's way for financial prosperity is the tithing way. Many of our number have ascertained this from personal experience. Every fresh tither gained brings us nearer to the time when God can bless us nationally in material things. And for the glory of God and the prosperity of Israel we must all become Apostles of tithing.

"'Giving and Taking' can be obtained free of cost from 6, Buckingham Gate. Please let it be made full use of. Let every member of the new Study Circles receive a copy as part of his or her equipment. See that your Bible Class is fully supplied. Get your minister to have it distributed after service at your Church, or use it as an inset in the Parish Magazine."

Mr. F. M. Lawson writes re Three Future Dates:—

"There are certain dates which stand out very definitely marked during the last twenty years.

1. August 4th, 1914.—Great Britain's entry into the war. The entrance to the first low passage in the Great Pyramid.

2. November 11th, 1918.—Armistice Day, or 11 o'clock on the Great Clock. The end of the first low passage in the Great Pyramid.

3. May 12th, 1926.—This can be looked upon as half-past 11 on the Great Clock. The end of the great General Strike. The Great Clock struck the half-hour.

4. May 29th, 1928.—Entrance to second low passage in the Great Pyramid. Only marked by considerable public attention being given to the Great Pyramid. In view of the words "those days shall be shortened" it was not altogether expected to be marked.

And there are three future dates which appear to be at least as important as these four dates:—

(a) May 30th, 1930.—Reasons for this date are given later.

(b) November 10th, 1933.—This date marks 12 o'clock on the Great Clock, i.e., the end of an hour of 15 years from November 11th, 1918. One hour of a day or time of 360 years.

(c) September 15th-16th, 1936.—The end of the second low passage of the Great Pyramid.

Before I show the connection between these three dates, I feel that perhaps it is as well to give a brief personal introduction. Towards the end of 1917 I discovered that the periods, which have always been accepted on the scale of a year to a day, were also running out on the scale of a day to a day. (See

Digitized by Google

'The Great Shaking,' by J. B. Nicklin, published January, 1919.) Since this time Nicklin has made many further discoveries of these periods. (See 'Our Days are Numbered,' by Nicklin.)

During these last twelve years I have frequently concentrated on the future dates, but it is only recently that I have discovered the connection between November 10th, 1933—12 o'clock on the Great Clock—and September 15th-16th, 1936—the end of the second low passage in the Great Pyramid. These two dates are 1,040 days apart. 1040 is the difference between 2300 and 1260. So these two dates are connected by either a date 1260 before the earlier or by a date 1260 after the later one. If they are connected by an early date, that date is May 30th, 1930, which is 1,260 days from November 10th, 1933, and 2,300 days from September 15th-16th, 1936. Consequently as a starting-point it may make May 30th, 1930, as important as the two future dates.

I could give quite a few confirmatory signs, such, for instance, as the fact that March 16th, 1930—the day for Intercessory Prayers by the Church of England for Russia—was 1,335 days from November 10th, 1933, and the fact that Russia is prophetically accepted by many students as being involved in the Final Tribulation is not without significance."

A. R. H. writes:—

"In your leading articles, from time to time, you have referred to the effect on crops of man's relationship to God. You have shown from the law of God how dependent the health of the vegetable kingdom is upon the spiritual health of the kingdom of man.

As Leviticus xxv, for instance, has it: 'Keep my judgments and do them," verse 18; 'And the land shall yield her fruit, and ye shall eat your fill,' verse 19.

Here is a true story illustrating this truth.

In Torquay there are two large houses adjoining each other. Each house stands in its own grounds of some five acres each. The richness of the soil is the same. The aspect (southern) and configuration of the land the same. The owners of both properties are equally wealthy and employ equally skilled men at an equally high rate of wages.

Yet one garden is a failure and in the other everything flourishes as if by magic.

What is the secret of the difference between the two? It is nothing but the relationship of the individual men to God.

The one is a man of wonderful and simple faith, who loves God and loves his flowers.

The other is a discontented man without love in his heart, who lives in open rebellion to life and delights in the use of abusive language.

One day I found old Tom greatly upset following a visit from his unruly neighbour.

Tom is very proud of his tomatoes. But Jim, next door, is very jealous. 'How do you grow your tomatoes,' he had said to Tom. 'I can't make my tomatoes grow at all.' Every other word in his sentences was punctuated by profane expletives.

Tom was furious and ordered Jim out of his greenhouse at once. 'Don't you ever dare come near my plants using language like that,' he cried. 'I don't talk to my plants like that."

Then he unburdened himself further to me. 'You know I always start my day by asking the Lord to guide me in my work. And it's surprising how wonderfully He helps.

'If there's a bit of rain in the morning I always says to the wife: There my dear, the good Lord knew I had some work to do in the potting sheds, so He's sent a drop of rain so that I can get on with my work inside and keep my feet off the wet.' Then jerking his thumb in the direction of Jim disappearing in the distance he repeated: 'I love my flowers. I don't talk to my flowers like that.'

As I left I no longer wondered at the success and beauty of old Tom's garden. It seemed as if all his flowers were singing aloud the praises of God; the God of Love and First Author of Beauty."

THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD'S LATEST BOOK

THE SECOND COMING of OUR LORD

The threads of the Bible Story are many, each of them reaching one great culmination—namely, in the Second Coming of Christ.

The following threads may be indicated, all of which culminate in the Second Coming :

(1) The teaching regarding the Temple.
(2) The teaching regarding the Nation Israel.
(3) The teaching regarding the House and Throne of David.
(4) The teaching regarding the House of Judah.
(5) The teaching regarding the External Nations.
(6) The teaching regarding the Church.
(7) The teaching regarding our Lord Himself.
(8) The teaching regarding the Apostles and their Position and Office in the Regeneration.

All these, and other threads of the Bible Story, find their culmination in THE SECOND COMING OF OUR LORD.

The last utterance of our Lord, as given in the last sentences of the Book of Revelation, reiterates all preceding prophecy and testimony concerning the Second Coming : these are the solemn words :—

" Even so, come, Lord Jesus. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen."

JOEL'S PROPHETIC MESSAGE AND WARNING

By HOWARD B. RAND, LL.B.

This is a remarkable book on the message of Joel which is clearly shown to be a warning to this day and generation. Not only does the author deal with the prophet's utterances, but he gives the order of related prophecies from other parts of the Bible.

Those who desire to harmonize the prophecies with the historical events of the present day and during the few remaining years of this dispensation cannot afford to be without this most interesting treatise.

The prophetic symbols used by Joel have been placed in their proper historical setting. The reader can clearly identify economic, national and international events as they come to fruition, for they are clearly outlined by this prophet's remarkable revelation. In this day of prophetical fulfilment this book should be in the hands of every teacher and student of prophecy.

ACROSS THE RIVER.—V.

By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard.

Activities of the Redeemed Beyond the River.

What a wonderful Book is "The Revelation of Jesus Christ which God gave unto him," commonly called "The Revelation." It is wonderful in its origin. It was given by God Himself. It is wonderful in its transportation from Jesus to John: "He sent and signified it by His angel unto His servant John . . ."

It is wonderful from the human standpoint as being from the pen of the Apostle, or at least from his voice. For the John to whom it was sent is he "who bare record of the word of God, and of the testimony of Jesus Christ, and of all things that he saw."

We have the record which John bore in the Gospel of St. John, and in the Epistles General of John.

"Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear . . . . and keep those things which are written therein." So the wonderful Book pronounces.

We have looked at the great Assembly of the Church of the Firstborn which are written in Heaven. We shall now look at the activity which is going forward among the great company whose abode is in the heavenlies, namely, "The One Who sat upon the throne," the Lamb, the elders, the "Zoon," and the innumerable company of those who have attained that blessed abode through the "blood of sprinkling which speaketh better things than that of Abel," namely, the Church of the Firstborn which are written in Heaven, the spirits of just men made perfect, the Angel hosts, and every creature.

The activities which are recorded are all connected with the opening of the seven-sealed book, which the Lion of the tribe of Juda took from the hand of Him that sitteth upon the throne. This is done in the midst of the General Assembly there described (Rev. chapters iv and v).

Have you perchance watched the simple act which has let loose mighty forces, the effect of which have been commensurate to the powers of nature precipitated into violent action?

Have you seen the touching of a spark to a charge of powerful explosive and watched with bated breath the tremendous results? Have you watched the mechanic swing the sledge which has knocked away the wedges, which act has released the ship from the "ways," and which has set her free to glide into her native element, the water? Have you watched the touching of a button which has opened the sluice gates, releasing the mighty flood of waters in such systems as the irrigation waters of the Nile, or of the great rivers of India? Have you known that such forces have been released, such machinery set in motion in far distant lands, by His Majesty touching a button in Buckingham Palace? If you have seen any of these things, or known of them, then you may be able to gather some slight insight to the forces which were unloosed in Heaven when one after the other the Lamb broke the seven seals of the prophetic book which He had taken from the hand of Him that sitteth upon the throne!

The seals were opened before the throne of God in Heaven. The results are tabulated as taking place in the earth.

These things in themselves are very interesting. But what is of greatest interest to us at the moment is the positive demonstration that the hosts of Heaven are interested in, and busily engaged in, controlling human affairs as they unfold themselves on earth.

Let us look at what is being done in " the General Assembly of the Church of the Firstborn which is written in Heaven." As the Lamb breaks the seals of the book, they see, as we also see, events taking place in Heaven as on the earth as a result of His action :—

(1) The going forth of the four horsemen—on earth.
(2) The cry and the clothing of the souls under the Altar.
(3) The fearful meteorological and seismic catastrophe which overwhelms the earth at the end of the dispensation, coincident with the Coming of our Lord.
(4) The sealing of the hundred and forty-four thousand who have been selected to be the personal attendants of our Lor Jesus Christ. Of these there were ten thousand from each of the twelve tribes of Israel. Henceforth these follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth.

We read of an occasion on earth when the Son of man was beset with foes in the human and spirit spheres when He exclaimed : " Thinkest thou that I cannot now pray to My Father, and He shall presently give Me more than twelve legions of Angels ?

But how then shall the Scriptures be fulfilled that thus it must be ? "

Twelve legions of Angels would be equal to twelve times ten thousand. And the " more than twelve " is an indefinite number beyond estimate. But our Saviour did not call for the " more than twelve legions of Angels," nor for any Angel aid. He went His way to the Cross of Calvary, and to the crossing of the River. But now He accepts twelve times ten thousand of His brethren of the tribes of Israel to be His attendants whithersoever He goeth. He gives the honour to His Own brethren, and to ours.

(5) The muster of the great multitude which no man can number, and their service of God in His Temple.
(6) THE SEVEN ANGELS SOUND THE SEVEN TRUMPETS IN SUCCESSION, and in answer to each trumpet great things take place in the earth.
(7) THE SEVEN ANGELS POUR OUT SEVEN VIALS UPON THE EARTH, and great things take place in the earth as the result.
(8) One of the seven Angels which had the seven vials shows to John from the standpoint of the Heavens BABYLON THE GREAT, which is the City of the seven hills ; and foreshows her destruction.
(9) Heaven rejoices over the destruction of Babylon the Great.
(10) The marriage of the Lamb which succeeds the destruction of Babylon the Great.
(11) The gathering of the Armies of Heaven to follow the King of kings to the earth for its deliverance.
(12) The beast and the kings of the earth, and their armies, gather to resist and make war with the Lamb.
(13) The beast is taken and with him the false prophet, and the remnant are slain with the sword of Him that sitteth upon the horse, which sword proceeded out of His mouth. They were slain by the word of the Lord. Let us hope it is in the spiritual sense in which this figure may be understood. The word " sword " is figurative. May the slaying with the figurative sword be figurative also, being death to sin, leading to the newness of life in Christ Jesus. But we may only hope, we cannot know.
(14) The Devil is chained for a thousand years.
(15) Judgment and reward of the righteous dead.
(16) Resurrection of the just.
(17) The last rebellion, led by the released Devil at the end of the thousand years.
(18) The Great White Throne and the general judgment.
(19) The new Heaven and the new earth.
(20) The Holy City, New Jerusalem.
(21) The Paradise of God.

These are the events tabulated as the agenda proceeding through and being enacted by " the General Assembly of the Church of the Firstborn which are written in Heaven." It is a wonderful agenda which is being handled in that great Assembly.

As we read this agenda, and remember that unless the Lord shall first come, we shall yet be in time to attend some of the sessions, and to take part in the great Convocation. The thought which overwhelms us at the moment is the clearly-stated fact that after crossing the River we shall still be engaged in the affairs of this world. We shall have a wider field and clearer vision than we could ever have in this life.

At the same time, the life over there is not wholly given up to the earth and its affairs. There are Heavenly affairs which will arrest our attention and arouse our interest, and we shall have all necessary time and energy to give to them.

There are great things being handled, both for Heaven and for the earth, and they are being directed by the great Assembly it has been our privilege to attend.

What our particular part of the universal activity will be we do not know. Perhaps you who may have patience to read these things will be able to judge in what direction your natural ability and choice will lead.

Some will attend closely on the service of the Temple. These will comprise such a great multitude as no man can number.

Some will fly on the wings of mercy to the help of those who are struggling through the darkness of this life.

Some will attend at the crossing to help those who are passing over and to welcome them into the higher regions of light and life.

Some will go off on missions to the outer regions, even to the uttermost part of the heaven.

Our Lord gives us a flashlight glance at this when He said to us :—

" And He shall send His angels . . . and they shall gather together His elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other."

Well, there it is ! Our Lord's elect are scattered throughout the earth and the heaven and to the uttermost part of each.

I have gone to great Observatories and have been instructed by the astronomers in charge. They have shown to me, as a matter of course, the brightness of the focussed sunlight, and centred in the brightness the sunspots which were showing for the time on the disc of the sun.

They have shown to me the tables of the distances of the stars, and have made my imagination reel with the magnitude of the heavens. Light years beyond counting marking the distances of the stars from the earth and from each other.

They have spoken to me of stars, of systems, of galaxies, of sidereal divisions of the heavens, and of the heavens as they are known to the observers and astronomical world.

What a story it is! Then here is the statement of the Lord that He will gather His elect from the uttermost parts of the heaven.

What have they been busy at there? What worlds have they seen in birth, what systems have they seen in process of formation? What planets have they visited to witness the introduction of life? What orders of beings have they had under observation? What questions! These must remain unanswered till we get among those who enjoy the fulness of the powers and liberty of action of those who have crossed the River.

"And He shall send His angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together His elect from the four winds, from one end of Heaven to the other" (Matt. xxiv, 31).

Listen to the stirring calls of the Angels: "Sons of God, Rally, rally; come, for the standard of the King of kings is raised and is floating in the breeze. Rally, rally; for the march to earth is about to begin. Come; for the marriage supper of the Lamb is prepared. Come; for the armies of Heaven are now about to set forth for the rescue of the earth from the dominion of Satan and his hosts. Sons of God, Rally, rally, to the standard of the King of kings. The trumpets sound the assembly in Heaven and in the earth."

And even as the trumpet calls and the saints outstrip the light in the swiftness of their flight to join the ranks of the armies of Heaven from the glorious pastures of the skies there come with flying hoofs, and with lifted crests, the horses of the hosts of God. Spotless in their whiteness among the most beautiful of the Divine creations, every one seeking his appointed master, the horses of the Lord also rally to the trumpet call.

"And I saw heaven opened, and behold a white horse; and he that sat upon him was called Faithful and True, and in righteousness he doth judge and make war.

His eyes were as a flame of fire, and on his head were many crowns; and he had a name written, that no man knew, but he himself.

And he was clothed with a vesture dipped in blood: and his name is called The Word of God.

And the armies which were in heaven followed him upon white horses, clothed in fine linen, white and clean.

And out of his mouth goeth a sharp sword, that with it he should smite the nations: and he shall rule them with a rod of iron: and he treadeth the winepress of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God.

And he hath on his vesture and on his thigh a name written, KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS.

And I saw an angel standing in the sun; and he cried with a loud voice, saying to all the fowls that fly in the midst of heaven, Come and gather yourselves together unto the supper of the great God;

That ye may eat the flesh of kings, and the flesh of captains, and the flesh of mighty men, and the flesh of horses, and of them that sit on them, and the flesh of all men, both free and bond, both small and great.

And I saw the beast, and the kings of the earth, and their armies, gathered together to make war against him that sat on the horse, and against his army.

And the beast was taken, and with him the false prophet that wrought miracles before him, with which he deceived them that had received the mark of the beast, and them that worshipped his image. These both were cast alive into a lake of fire burning with brimstone.

And the remnant were slain with the sword of him that sat upon the horse, which sword proceeded out of his mouth: and all the fowls were filled with their flesh."—Rev. xix, 11-21.

So, the question is overwhelmingly answered as to whether when we cross the River we shall lose touch and interest in persons and things on this side. The affairs of earth are still of prime importance to our Lord and to His saints, and we shall bear a more and more important part in all these matters till the end of time. And how worthy such affairs are, and will be, of the best we have to offer in the way of service. And how thrilling with interest will be every moment of every hour of every day which shall find us thus employed to the end of time.

NATIONAL REDEMPTION.—II.

By A. R. H.

CONTINUING from the point at which we left the matter of national redemption in our article last week, we see that the doctrine of redemption fulfils for the Kingdom-organization much the same function as the doctrine of justification by faith performs for the individual believer.

That is to say: just as God can use the individual believer because he is justified by faith and has (not his own, but) the righteousness of Christ, so God can use the Kingdom and the Throne because of the fact of national redemption.

For CHRIST died not as Saviour of the WORLD only. CHRIST also died as REDEEMER of His People ISRAEL. And by His death they are "brought back" into covenant relationship with GOD.

Their usefulness therefore depends, not upon their virtue, but upon their relationship to God.

It would be presumption to suggest that they could win for themselves that relationship. It is not theirs by their own effort or on account of their own merit.
