The calling and election are both of GOD, only. For as REDEEMER of His Brith-ish People, CHRIST died for the NATION.* And because CHRIST died for the NATION, GOD can use the Nation, and indeed the THRONE, in which is mystically united.

The more consecrated the individuals in the NATION, the better GOD can use the Nation. The more righteous the earthly occupants of the THRONE the better GOD can use the Throne.

* John xi, 50.

† The Brith-ish or Covenant Man Nation has now developed into the Brith-ish Empire or Nation and Company of Nations of Gen. xxxv, 11. It is obvious from Daniel ii, 44, that the Brith-ish Kingdom is an Empire like (and yet unlike) its predecessors. Note Ferrar Fenton's reference to the whole Empire; Matt. xxiv, 14. F.F.

But the usefulness of these instruments does not depend upon their individual worth, but upon the fact of the redemption.

Does that mean that, in the case of the individual, we may sin that grace may abound? God forbid. We cannot sin with impunity.

Does that mean that because the people of the KINGDOM are redeemed, therefore they are free from the consequences of sin? A thousand times, No! A redeemed people need salvation‡ with all its merits every whit as much as the Gentiles, or, if possible, even more so, so much the greater is their responsibility.

GOD is with them but if they sin they will by no means go altogether unpunished.§

Does it mean that the HOUSE and THRONE of DAVID is immune from chastisement? What saith the Scripture? "If he commit iniquity I will chasten him with the rod of men, and with the stripes of the children of men."[1]

At the same time, chastisement by no means abrogates the force of the declaration: "But my mercy shall not depart from him," and then in verse 13 (2 Sam. vii): "I will establish the

But to return to our threefold problem: The individual believer may be far from sanctified at the time that GOD begins to use him. For sanctification is a process which only begins at conversion.

But his sanctification is provided for, as it is written: "He which hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the Day of Christ."[2]

Again, the people of the KINGDOM may be far from righteous but their cleansing and eventual sanctification has been provided for.[3]

The individuals occupying the Davidic Throne may fall short judged by Divine standards, but a great

is destined to emanate from this source, and none other.[4]

Under the terms of the old covenant the usefulness of the KINGDOM depended upon the conduct of the individuals concerned.

With their defection the whole scheme breaks down and the KINGDOM is scattered.

But to-day, the restoration of the KINGDOM (the "Your Kingdom must be being restored" process of development)[5] comes into operation under the "better" promises of the new covenant.

‡ Every Sabbath Day throughout the whole world wherever Brith-ish People worship, the stirring words of the great Israel Psalm, the Te Deum, are sung. In this Psalm we pray for the salvation of a redeemed race. We pray that God's People who have been redeemed nationally may individually become numbered amongst the saints, i.e., among those who are in Christ Jesus. It is possible to be a member of a redeemed race—a race in covenant relationship with God—and yet not be in Christ. God can use the Jacob element in the nation because of the redemption. But He cannot use the nation as a perfect instrument until the "Jacob" elements, having crossed the Brook Jabbok, are promoted into the higher biological scale of the sons of God.

[1] Was not Cromwell a scourge in the hand of God? True in mistaken zeal he would have swept away the Throne as well. But in the Divine plan the Throne was to play an essential part in the constitutional government of the Kingdom. The Throne was therefore preserved.

[2] Phil. i, 6.

[3] See Ezek. xxxvi, 25–38; Isa. lx, 21, etc.

[4] See Zech. xii, 10.

[5] Matt. vi, 10. Ferrar Fenton.

No longer does the work and future of the Brith-ish KINGDOM depend upon the "IFS" and "BUTS"[6] of human fallibility.

The good influences of the KINGDOM are operative as a result of the *un*conditional "I WILL" and "THEY SHALL" clauses of Jer. xxxi, 33–40. And this covenant, which opens up for a new and living way of service to all the nations of mankind, depends for its effectiveness upon the fact of national redemption. This fact the Epistle to the Hebrews (especially verse 15 of chapter ix) makes abundantly clear.

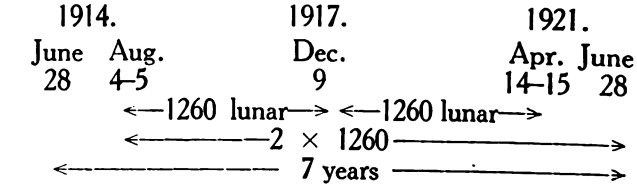
Now of the things which we have written this is the sum.

Once the individual is in CHRIST, nothing can separate him from His love.[7]

Once the KINGDOM is redeemed, and thus "brought back" into covenant relationship with GOD, it can never be destroyed.[8] Moreover, its progressively increasing capacity for usefulness and service is assured.

The HOUSE and THRONE of DAVID, sharing in that national redemption, will continue to function, so long, at any rate, as the moon shines forth, a faithful witness[9] in the heaven.

THE DAYS OF THE END.



THE SIGNIFICANCE OF JUNE 28TH, 1914, AS AN INDEX DATE.

BY J. BERNARD NICKLIN.

No. II.—JUNE 28TH, 1914, AND INDUSTRIAL STRIFE.

FOLLOWING the War came a period of industrial unrest which began in 1919, and reached an acute stage in the Coal Strike of April to June, 1921.

The most critical day in this was April 14th-15th, well remembered as "Black Friday," when a last-minute settlement most probably averted a revolution. This day, it should be noticed, was the anniversary of the sinking of the Titanic, and 1260 lunar from Jerusalem's surrender, as well as 2 × 1260 lunar days from Britain's entry into the war. The Coal Strike meanwhile dragged on until June 28th, 1921—the seventh anniversary of our date when a settlement was reached. This day was also 2 × 1260 days from Britain's entry into the War.

JUNE 28TH AND TWO EFFORTS TOWARDS WORLD-PEACE.

A double 1260 period from the commencement of the War, as just observed, led to an era of industrial strife and its settlement. From the conclusion of the War, a double 1260 period led to a great effort towards World-Peace—the Locarno Conference. To be exact, twice 1260 days from the Armistice, and twice 1260 lunar from the day the League of Nations was formed (January 25th, 1919), expired October 5th, 1925, the opening day of Locarno; while, from the signing of the Peace Treaty of Versailles, 2300 days ended two days before the agreement was reached and signed at this Conference, October 16th. And here it might be mentioned, that in these day-intervals "signing" or "agreement" usually follows two days after periods expire. Why this should be is hard to say. It suggests perhaps "to-day, to-morrow and the third day perfected."

The other effort towards Peace is the Kellog Pact, or Peace and Security Pact, signed August 27th, 1928. From the birth of the League of Nations, which was the starting-point of this Post-War Peace Movement, to just two days before this Pact was signed, the interval was one again of 3500 days.

Readers will recognize 2300 as the number for the "cleansing of the sanctuary" (Daniel viii, 14). How fitting, that as an interval it here separates the signing of the Peace Treaty and this Locarno effort at "cleansing" the war-spirit from the world! Among the many "year" periods expiring in this closing era, 1914–1936, chronologists name the Seventieth Jubilee—70 × 50 years (3500)—which began, it will be remembered, at the entry into the Promised Land, when the Land was divided. These seventy Jubilees seem to parallel the "Seventy Weeks" (Daniel ix, 24), the one a time-measurement leading to Christ's sufferings, the other to His coming Glory. It can therefore not be without significance that we twice behold this number here as a "day-interval," in one case pointing to the extinction of the rule which so long desolated the Holy Land; and the other, to an event that we trust was a harbinger of the Glorious Reign of Peace soon coming!

JUNE 28TH, 1914, AND TWO IMPORTANT POLITICAL CHANGES.

One was the change in Government, November 2nd, 1924, when Labour gave place to the Conservatives, and Mr. Baldwin became Premier; the other, the change of June 1st, 1929, when the Conservative administration ended, and the present Labour Government came into power.

These dates are remarkably connected, the former being 3 × 1260 days from June 28th, 1919, and the latter 3 × 1260 from that important event, the Formation of the League of Nations. It will be noticed that whereas June 28th, 1914, was half 75 days from Britain's entry into the War, the Formation of the League of Nations was 75 days from the Armistice:—

JUNE 28TH, 1914, AND TWO IMPORTANT ECCLESIASTICAL EVENTS.

These are, the Rejection of the Prayer Book Measure by the House of Commons on June 14th, 1928; and the Papal-Italian Settlement, announced February 7th and signed February 11th, 1929.

While the former occurred just 2 × 1260 plus 2 × 1290 days from June 28th, 1914, the latter was 4 × 1335 days from this date:—

Note here that all three numbers of Daniel xii occur in this group, viz., 1260, 1290 and 1335. While the number 1290 has reference to the "desolation of the Sanctuary," 1335 is associated with "finality."

JUNE 28TH AND TWO FINANCIAL EVENTS.

The era February 7th-11th, 1929, has been mentioned above as witnessing that most important prophetic event—the Roman settlement, but on February 7th, the London Bank Rate was raised from 4½ to 5½ per cent. On September 26th, it was again raised from 5½ to 6½ per cent., while during the week ending November 2nd, a financial storm was raged, reaching in New York the violence of a tornado, causing a collapse on the Stock Exchange, said to have rendered hundreds of thousands of Americans homeless.

These rises in the Bank Rate are linked respectively from the Armistice, and Signing of the Peace Treaty, by an interval of 2 × 1260 plus 1260 lunar days, while the Financial Crisis is 3 × 1260 days from the latter:—

DOES THE BIBLE STAND OR FALL WHEN TESTED BY SCIENCE, HISTORY AND PHILOSOPHY?—IV.

BY PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc.

GENESIS, CHAPTER TWO.

VERSE 1.—"Thus were the heavens and the earth created," etc. There are not two accounts of creation. Chapter Two follows, expands and gives details not specified in Chapter One.

In this chapter we have a short reference to the creation story, and in it we get two important facts worthy of consideration.

". . . . when they were created, in the day that the Lord

Digitized by Google

God made the earth and the heavens, and every plant of the field before it was in the earth, and every herb of the field before it grew."

First.—Here we see a remarkable and striking use of Yom, day, which clearly takes in the first three days. Verify for yourself. Hence Yom in the second chapter includes three days or Yoms as in the first chapter.

This shows two significations of one word, and that word is Yom, translated day.

This will come up later, when we will find that Yom may mean a week, a year, or a hundred or thousand years as we shall show in due time.

Second.—We are told that He created the plants before they were in the earth, and every herb before it grew. Here again is a challenge to the atheistic evolutionist who teaches a contradictory theory. Not so, however, with the theistic evolutionist !

The statement is that the plants were made before they grew and before they were in the earth. The materialist teaches that plants were not made, but that by accident a slimy cell or group of cells were formed by the operations of soil, water, heat, light, magnetism, etc., and from this chance cell came, by multiplication, all cells, plants and animals.

This is very different from saying that the plants were "made before they were in the earth and before they grew."

We shall look into this, and see what lessons we may learn from the storehouse or school of nature now at work. Eastern Canadians know that when fires swept away the primary forests of beech, maple, oak, elm, ash, etc., straightway a new forest of poplars, interspersed with birch, followed.

In British Columbia, when the evergreen forests of pine, fir, cedar, spruce and hemlock are destroyed by fire, we see that straightway the alder and the poplar take possession of the ground.

How comes this? Whence the countless young poplars, birch and alders across Canada? One thing sure is this, the seeds are not lying awaiting the removal of the native forest, and if they were, the fires would utterly destroy them.

But they appear in myriads after the destroying fires.

Our answer is this : The poplars, birch and alders are created and were so created before being in the ground, and await the conditions, the suitable environment which, when found, they at once occupy and therein and thereon grow into visible material trees.

They are made before they are in the ground and grow in the earth when the conditions are suitable.

This view will catch up hosts of similar facts and conditions all around the earth and in every area of organic plant life.

This explanation is in harmony with the above statement taken from Chapter Two of Genesis, which otherwise is difficult to comprehend.

THE WATER SUPPLY.

We now turn our attention to the river in the Garden of Eden.

Verse 10 :—"And a river went out of Eden to water the garden, and from thence it was parted, and became into four heads," i.e., the origin of four rivers, the names of which are given.

The river went out in four directions. Whence came it? Did this river flow into the garden and then flow out of the garden? Not that ! It rose up from the depths of the earth and appeared as a mighty living river within the garden itself.

Bear in mind this important fact. The location, the site, the garden, was God's choice on this earth of all the possible locations and sites then to be had. He selected one choice spot. Do you imagine He chose it for a few months, or years, or centuries ; or for ever while this earth lasts? Keep this in mind for future consideration.

THE ESTABLISHMENT OF ISRAEL'S PRIESTHOOD AND WORSHIP.

(The substance of an Address at Headquarters.)

BY DANIEL FARMER.

TURNING to Exodus, chapters xix and xx, we find it was the desire and purpose of God that the whole nation of Israel should be unto Him "A Kingdom of Priests," but alas ! their lapse into gross idolatry almost directly after God had made known this desire temporarily disqualified them for this high position and honour.

No form of evil seems to so anger the Divine as that of idolatry, a fact which needs loudly restating at this time.

The children of Levi were selected for the priesthood as the representatives of the whole nation.

In Exodus xxv we are given the particulars for the construction of this first building for the worship of the true God. In the nations around, and in Egypt from whence Israel had just come, there were "lords many and gods many," but the message to this people was : "Hear, O Israel, the Lord thy God is one Lord."

With the materials so freely offered this tent or tabernacle was made "after their pattern" (Ex. xxv, 40). In many departments of life and conduct we are allowed freedom of preference, but when it is a question of worship acceptable to God (Job iv, 23), then all the symbols expressing such must be Divinely chosen.

All human vagaries and fancies in this realm are described by the Holy Spirit as "will worship" (Col. ii, 23).

In the order of their construction, as well as in the order of their erection (see chapter xv), the arch, or central part, is first dealt with, as God deals with man (Ps. li, 6). But in this study we shall begin with the outer court, and learn the way into the Most Holy Place. "Let them make Me a sanctuary, that I may dwell among them," was God's command. His desire is for the companionship of man. He came down at Bethlehem in the person of His Son (John i, 14), and in the grand finale we are told, "Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men" (Rev. xxi, 3).

In the Book of Numbers we have the details of the formation of the court which surrounded this tabernacle.

The Court of the Tabernacle.

Now it is evident that although God desired the companionship of man, yet, nevertheless, there must be the observance of some conditions—for God is holy and man is sinful—this had been very recently shown by Israel's conduct. Consequently, a space is put between God and His people, which no man was allowed to pass except by the observance of certain rites and ceremonies.

The Outer Court consisted of a white curtain hung on pillars of brass. White in Scripture is an emblem of purity, holiness (Ps. v, 7; Rev. iii, 4; also xxi, 11). Brass signifies judgment (Rev. i, 18). Thus the camp was kept at a distance by this white curtain, hung on sixty brazen uprights, five cubits high, over which no man was allowed to pass.

At the East End was the "gate of the Court," composed of curtains woven with the colours, blue, purple, scarlet and white. Combine these colours in liquid form and we get flesh colour. How suggestive! Only one way into God's Presence, viz.: "through the veil, that is to say, His flesh" (Heb. x, 20).

"I am the Way, no man cometh unto the Father but by Me," said our Lord.

"Thou art the Way, by Thee alone
From sin and death we flee;
And he who would the Father seek Must seek Him, Lord, by Thee."

The Brazen Altar.

Directly the worshipper passed into the Court, he found an altar, four-square in shape, made of wood and overlaid with brass.

Bringing his offering (the offerings varied according to the offence—see Lev. i-v), say, a lamb, he laid his hand upon its head, slew it, and then the priest offered it upon the brazen altar. Thus the worshipper identified himself with the guiltless lamb and learned the great truth running through Scripture from Genesis to Revelation, viz.: that "without shedding of blood is no remission" (Heb. ix, 22). This "scarlet thread" is a hall-mark of the salvation proclaimed in Holy Writ—as is the scarlet thread which proclaims the Government-made rope in our dockyards to be such.

Man had forfeited the gift of life by disobedience, and only on the ground that the penalty of death was paid by someone able to rise again could a second offer of life, in justice, be made (Rom. iv, 25).

The Brazen Laver.

This was made from the brazen mirrors given by the women of Israel. Its use was twofold. It reflected the condition of the worshipper, also provided means for his cleansing.

If the brazen altar speaks of atonement, the laver speaks of the Word of God, and of the daily cleansing of all who serve Him, even as our Lord taught (John xiii, 10).

Between the brazen altar, the place of acceptance and the Most Holy Place, how often the children of God are conscious of defilement in walk and work. So we read, "Christ loved the Church and gave Himself for it, that He might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the WORD" (Eph. v, 25). Thus, in experience, we find Psalm cxix, 9, is true. At the laver, water was provided for the washing of the hands and feet of the priests.

The Tabernacle.

The tabernacle itself was a portable tent composed of forty-eight boards covered with gold, each board ten cubits high and a cubit and a half broad. The interior consisted of two compartments, viz.: the Holy, and the Most Holy Place, the whole building standing upon a solid foundation of one hundred sockets of silver, made from the redemption money paid by the children of Israel (Ex. xxxviii, 27). When erected it was covered by four curtains overlaying each other. The outer curtain was of badgers skins (R.V. seal). The next was of rams skins dyed red, the third of goats hair, the inner one being woven of blue, purple, scarlet and fine-twined linen. The whole a symbolical representation, first of Christ, then of Christ and His people.

Here it stood, based not upon the sand, but on "redemption"—even as the great Founder of the Church said He would build it on Himself (Matt. xvi, 18). No storm ever overthrew it, it is calculated the weight of these solid sockets being equal to five tons. Nor can the true Church of God ever be shaken.

"On the Rock of Ages founded,
What can shake thy sure repose?"

Amidst the things yet to be removed, God's Church is not to be found (Heb. xii, 27).

The Holy Place (The Candlestick).

On the south side of this first compartment stood the golden seven-branched candlestick, or lampstand, made of solid gold, beaten into form, not cast, fed with oil and ever kept burning. What an apt figure of the Light of the World! Surely He was of pure gold—becoming the Light of the World, not by an easy, but by a very difficult experience. (Heb. ii, 10).

This man-made symbol often needed trimming, so do His people whom He calls "light." There was no other light, no natural light, in this Holy Place. The things of God are not naturally perceived (1 Cor. ii, 14; John iv, 24).

The Table of Shew-Bread.

This stood on the north side, made of wood and covered with gold, around the top of which ran a double border. On it were placed every Sabbath twelve loaves of bread, covered with frankincense—a loaf for each tribe—called "Shew," or face bread. Frankincense has to do with merit, acceptance, and so Israel, in spite of great demerit, found acceptance on the ground of a Merit yet to come.

The bread was for the priests only to eat. If the candlestick typifies the Light of the World—the table speaks of Him Who said of Himself: "I am the Bread of Life" (John vi); and Who in verse 35 gives us the key of explanation, for He exclaims, "He that cometh to Me shall never hunger, and he that believeth on Me shall never thirst." So that to come is to eat, and to believe is to drink. "Feed on Him in thy heart by faith." How simple! This chapter is often wrongly applied to the institution of the Lord's Supper, but it was spoken twelve months before the Supper was instituted. In verse 53 our Lord teaches that, just as He, when here as Man, lived by faith on God, His Father, so we in our turn are to live by faith on Him.

Digitized by Google

" I hunger and I thirst,
Jesus my manna be,
Thou Living Water burst
Out of the Rock for me."

The Altar of Incense.

This, also made of wood and covered with gold, stood at the West end of the Holy Place, facing the vail which hung in front of the Most Holy Place. Incense in Scripture is typical of prayer (Ps. cxli, 2 ; Rev. v, 8). The High Priest took a live coal off the brazen altar of sacrifice and put the incense upon it on the altar. No prayer, worship or service is acceptance to God apart from the merit of His dear Son, the great Sacrifice once offered on the altar of Calvary.

" I stand upon His Merit,
I know no other stand."

The Most Holy Place.

The only piece of furniture here was the Ark of the Covenant, containing the two tables of stone, above which was the golden mercy seat, upon which the blood was sprinkled seven times once a year (Lev. xvi). Here was the place and this the condition upon which God would meet and talk with Moses, and to-day, in Christ, with us.

The men of Beth-Shemesh removed the mercy seat which covered the Commandments as they looked into the Ark, and were sorely smitten (1 Sam. 6), for " The Law worketh wrath." Christ is the end of the law for us (Rom. x, 4) ; apart from Him the law is the end of us.

The Robes of Aaron.

The under one was the white broidered coat, for Aaron symbolized the coming of the Great High Priest Who would in Himself, and in His life and conduct, be " holy, harmless and undefiled " (Heb. vii, 26). Above the white robe was worn the " Robe of the Ephod," made " all of blue " (Ex. xxviii, 31). Blue is the colour of Heaven, and of Himself our Lord said : " I came down from Heaven " ; so He was, and is, of a twofold nature. All the priests of merely world-religions simply come up.

The Ephod—the third and uppermost—was woven of a combination of colours, the same as the colours of the gate of the Court, and the two vails, with the addition of gold. If white and blue typify a holy and heavenly priest, gold has to do with a royal one. Our Lord was of the royal House of David—to Him the throne of David is yet to be given (Luke i, 32).

At His first Coming " gold was amongst the gifts " (Matt. ii). When He returns to reign, " to Him shall be given of the gold of Sheba " (Ps. lxxii, 15), for " He must reign " (1 Cor. xv, 25). Hebrew scholars tell us that the word " purple " means to accumulate, so shall this one do, for " . . . He shall bear the glory, and shall sit and rule upon His throne, and He shall be a priest upon His throne " (Zech. vi, 13). 700 years before His birth it was foretold, " Of His Kingdom there shall be no end " (Isa. ix, 6). To Him " all the ends of the world shall remember and turn " (Ps. xxii, 27), and " To Him every knee shall bow " (Phil. ii, 10).

" Jesus shall reign where'er the sun
Doth his successive journeys run."

The Mitre.

This was of white linen, and on a blue lace attached to it was a plate of pure gold with the words, " Holiness to the Lord." " It shall be upon Aaron's forehead, that Aaron may bear the iniquity of the holy things, which the Children of Israel shall hallow in all their holy gifts, and it shall be always upon his forehead, that they may be accepted before the Lord " (Ex. xxviii, 36). What an unspeakable word of comfort to the worshipper or worker, far more conscious of shortcoming than of transgression.

Upon his breast, the place of affection, and on his shoulders, the seat of strength, Aaron bore the names of the Children of Israel—wonderful pictures of Him Who not only loves, but is " able to save to the uttermost."

Summary.

Such then, in the briefest outline, is the description of Israel's priesthood and order of worship. The writer to the Hebrews says these things were but " patterns of things in the heavens," " a figure for the time then present " (Heb. ix). It was the " kindergarten " stage of spiritual understanding. To repeat any of these forms and ceremonies indicates not " High " Church, but a very low one indeed—what is spoken of as the babe condition—(Heb. xv, 5, 13), not an indication of growth and advance but a retrogression back to the " weak and beggarly elements."

When, in the past dispensation, there was an appointed priesthood, it was not for their salvation, but simply to lead the worship of, and to instruct, an already redeemed people. Only once in the whole of Scripture is there recorded a confession to the priest (Matt. xxvii, 3).

The ritual which threatens the disruption of the Protestant Church of England is not a repeat of the Old Testament order, but, alas ! a copy of the old heathen practices of ancient idolatrous Babylon, from which God, in His great mercy, set us free at the Reformation. The offering of a material sacrifice to-day, Mass or Eucharist, is the mark not of a Christian minister but of a heathen priest. None who take that course, or even go back to the Old Testament altar, " have no right " to the only Altar of this age, viz. : the Sacrifice of our Lord and Saviour (Heb. xiii, 10). All other altars are a denial of His " One sacrifice for sins for ever " (Heb. x, 12).

" Before His Father there,
His sacrifice He pleads,
And with unceasing prayer,
For us He intercedes."

The world is yet to see this Priest-King upon the throne, the glorious union of Church and State, for which all good men long and pray, " Thy Kingdom come," of which the mitre and the tiara of the Vatican are but a travesty.

THE NATIONAL POLICY OF ISRAEL.

BY "FUSILIER."

ANYONE who comes up against the fact of our inheritance of Israel's mission and whose interest is aroused will probably ask himself these two questions :—

(1) Can it be possible that we are the descendants and inheritors of Israel, the Chosen Race, and of its God-given mission ?

(2) If we are, where does it land us ? What is the result to us ? How does it affect us ?

As regards (1) I do not propose to go into this at present, but I do say judge by results.

If it can be shown that the British-Anglo-Saxon race is carrying out the mission given to Israel by the Great Builder, if it can be shown that the work being done by our race is just the work laid down for Israel, ought not we to conclude that there must be something in it ?

Think of it this way :—If the Church had never claimed to be the heir of Israel's promises, and so stopped people from expecting the reappearance of Israel as a nation, would not the peoples of the world, all down the ages, have been expecting Israel to turn up again and carry on her job ?

If they had been looking for Israel to turn up, would they have had any doubt that she was found, as soon as it was spotted that the Anglo-Saxons fitted the description of the long-expected race ? This is not a question to us of mere antiquarian interest, it is a matter absolutely vital to us and to the world.

That it is a very important matter is seen by examining (2). How does it affect us ? In enlarging on this question I am not going to trouble you with proofs and identity marks now. I am going to assume that we are Israel and indicate how it affects us.

(1) It gives a Rule of Life quite plain and simple and easily understood, the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man ; Israel being the big brother, charged with the responsibility of the family's welfare.

(2) It gives us the only true lines for a National and Empire Policy. We often say why can't we be rid of these party politics and politicians and have a National Party with a National Policy ?

If we recognize ourselves as Israel we find our National Policy laid down for us by the Great Builder, not quite as interpreted by a lot of politicians hustling one another for place and office while the nation's business waits, but a God-given National Policy which, if we follow it, can alone bring us success.

Surely it must be up to us to find out about this policy and go all out for it ?

Now here are a few suggestions for your consideration based on the National Policy of Israel.

SEA POWER.

Israel was given the Command of the Sea ; what business has any statesman of ours to cut our Navy to a point that may endanger our food supplies ? They say they are working in the cause of World Peace ; do they know how to attain this better than the Great Builder ?

They cry "Peace, peace, when there is no peace."

Who was it said "If a strong man armed keepeth his house, his goods are in peace" ? Our clever politicians seem to think that a strong man disarmed is going to keep his goods.

Now look at the plan of the Almighty for the Command of the Sea. It is to be Israel's job.

The British Empire and the U.S.A. are surely Israel, and most probably we must add Japan. It is just these three Powers who seem likely to co-operate in a Three Power Pact to regulate the command of the sea. It looks as though the plan of the Almighty is coming off, in spite of the politicians. But these three Powers have still to learn the nature of His plan. They have to learn that they are taking on Israel's job of sea dominion for the good of the world, to keep the sea safe for all to use lawfully. It is only by the proper understanding of His plan that any such Pact can stand. Between these three, it must be each for all, all for each, and all for World Peace.

THE EMPIRE AND AN EMPIRE POLICY.

The British Empire is the most amazing Empire that has ever existed and by far the greatest.

It seems to have come into existence largely by chance, it seems to hold together largely by chance, and yet, after the War, when kingdoms and empires were falling to pieces in all directions, the British Empire emerged more powerful and more strongly knit together than ever.

What is the explanation of this amazing Empire that seems to thrive on hard knocks, that seems to survive and grow in spite of the criminal blunders of politicians ?

Do you think it is just a fluke ? If so, it is the biggest fluke on record. Or do you agree that it is just such an Empire as we should expect Israel to be in these days if she reappeared and took her rightful place as foretold in the Bible ?

If Israel has reappeared, the National Policy laid down for her in the Bible must apply.

I believe that the British Empire is that company of nations into which Israel was to grow.

The U.S.A. are also of Israel ; their Government is not our concern, but the Government of the British Empire is very much our concern, and we ought to ask ourselves whether we are governing it in the best possible way.

Under our present system, large portions of the Empire are the sport of party politics and politicians, in that a change of Government in England may mean an almost complete change of policy towards large parts of the Empire.

Think of it—a new set of rulers every few years, many of whom are completely ignorant of the countries they are setting out to govern. Is this the best way to run an Empire like ours ? No. An Empire Policy is necessary, and this can only be attained by setting up an Empire Parliament.

If we were to have an Empire Parliament, who would be its Leader and Chairman ? Surely not Mr. Jack-in-the-box politician, or the Home Premier for the time being. Britain would be largely represented in any such Parliament, but, if you wanted to keep Home party politics out of it, you would have to find a Chairman other than our Home Premier.

Suppose we look for our Empire Parliament Leader by the light of the constitution laid down for Israel.

At a certain time in Israel's history she asked for a King.

Digitized by Google

Israel's first King was Saul; chosen and appointed by the people, he proved a very bad King.

Israel's second King was David, chosen and appointed by God. Thus was founded the Royal House and Throne of David, that was to last for ever in David's line. (2 Sam. vii, 16.)

In this way David and his descendants became the supreme earthly Rulers in Israel.

David's Throne was to endure for ever; where is it now?

It is just where you would expect to find it . . . . ruling over Israel, for His Majesty King George V is the direct descendant of David.

Many people have wondered what it is that holds together the unique Commonwealth of Nations that we know as the British Empire, and most people agree that the link that binds all together is the British Throne. It is not yet generally recognized that the British Throne is the Throne of David.

It is only natural that the present representative of the Throne of David should preside over an Empire Parliament.

An Empire Parliament, with King George presiding and the Prince of Wales as his Deputy, would very soon work out that Empire Policy which is advocated by many and which must be our great hope of the future.

Colonization and Unemployment.

Israel was given the job of colonizing the waste places of the world. History tells us how Britain has carried this out, but of recent years there has been a falling off. The Empire is there, crying out for colonists from the Old Country, but they are not going out as in former times.

Last year the U.S.A. woke up to the fact that she wanted more of the old stock from Britain and doubled the annual quota she was willing to take from us; she did not, however, get all she asked for by a long way. Emigration falls off, unemployment increases at home.

Israel is forgetting the directions laid down for her surplus population, with the inevitable results.

Man-made devices of the politicians have been largely responsible, chief among which is the dole, that gets us nowhere and is directly responsible for the falling off in emigration.

How then can we set Israel on the outward march again, to places where her sons can have room to grow up?

A family cannot emigrate on the dole, so capital is needed to tide over the start. If it were possible for a family to have, say, five years' dole in a lump sum, perhaps that would help to restart the outward march again and relieve some of the crowding at home.

It is not claimed that emigration alone would cure unemployment in this country, it is claimed that emigration is indicated as the outlet for our surplus population.

Further aids to the unemployment problem can be found in the Bible, among which is the Bible's teaching on the use and abuse of Capital.

Israel's Mission to Rule Backward Races.

Our Empire contains nations in all stages of civilization. Some, like Canada and Australia, have attained self-government because they were fit for it, but others most certainly are not yet ready for it. Israel was given the job of ruling the backward peoples. Our race has proved itself the only one able to do this job successfully. But, since we have been given this job, it is up to us to see it through, not to leave it half done by granting self-government to peoples that are not fit for it. This would only mean utter misery for the peoples concerned. Think of the state of India and Egypt if we cleared out and left them to themselves.

Israel means "Ruling with God," and Israel is meant to Rule under His Guidance; she cannot hand over her job to peoples in no way fitted or ready to rule themselves. It is a pity some of our politicians don't realize this, for they might then make fewer blunders.

Now turn the Israel test to Palestine, where Jews and Arabs are ready to cut one another's throats for possession of the land. It will help a bit to realize that the Jews never did and never will own the whole of Palestine; the Bible says so. Judah's share was one-twelfth only, the other eleven Tribes all had their portions, and the Book says it shall be so again. As a matter of fact, when all Israel was settled in Palestine, Jerusalem itself did not belong to the Jews, it was in the portion of Benjamin.

If our politicians think they are going to hand over Palestine to the Jews because it used to belong to them, they are right off the lines and had better think again. There are eleven other Tribes with equally good or better claims.

The Bible said that Israel would deliver Jerusalem from the hands of the Unbeliever, and British Empire units took it with the help of the Arabs. There were no foreign troops engaged.

The Arabs are descended from Ishmael, son of Abraham, and they know it, and they also know that Abraham was to possess Palestine. Do you blame them if they cannot see where Judah's prior claim comes in? The peaceful settlement of Palestine cannot be brought about on the lines laid down by the Balfour Declaration.

Judah is still disinherited and cannot take part in the councils of Israel or be received back into Israel unless and until she accepts Him Whom she crucified.

Here are a few ideas for a National and Empire Policy based on the directions given to Israel. When we realize our identity as Israel, we shall find our Policy all laid down for us in the Bible, the one true Policy, by following which we can alone fulfil our destiny.

A TESTIMONY CONCERNING "SYSTEMATIC GIVING."

By One Who Has Tried It.

I HAVE before me a formula written and signed forty-two years ago.

Before that formula was adopted in 1888 I had recognized that (except in special circumstances—1 Tim. v, 8) a Christian should systematically set apart a tithe of his income for the Lord's service; for if under the old dispensation that proportion was required, then under the new dispensation one could not decently do less. I had already carried that conviction into effect for more than ten years, during which time I had married, and two children had been born.

I then realized that if income should increase beyond a certain point the percentage should also increase, and I reckoned that I was in the best position to determine that increase of percentage whilst the time for its operation had not yet arrived, for I was aware that the accumulation of money would be likely to create, or foster, a desire to retain it, or to spend it extravagantly. Consequently, I concluded that I had better adopt a well-considered formula in advance, in case it might be needed. In preparing my formula: (a) I fixed first as a datum, a certain sum, plus a certain sum for each child dependant, and up to that annual datum I resolved to distribute in the Lord's service at my existing rate of 10 per cent. On any surplus of income above that datum and up to £— I decided to distribute 15 per cent. and on every additional £— an extra 5 per cent. and so on.

I further resolved (b) that I would never possess as capital more than a certain sum plus an additional sum for each child dependant, so that if that position were ever attained, I should then distribute all my income that I did not expend. I provided that this clause (b) should never be substituted for the clause (a) unless it served to increase the amount available for distribution.

A few years after the adoption of my formula there came a year when my income was a minus quantity and I had to live upon my capital. For the preceding year and the following year my income was small, and for two years my formula produced nothing! However, I continued most of my subscriptions on a reduced scale, out of capital, in the assurance that the tide would turn, and I was not disappointed.

Now, let me disclose interesting information as to how the formula has worked out since its adoption.

During the first year of its operation :—

Out of every £1 of income	14	2	was spent.
	3	10	was saved.
	2	0	(10 per cent.) was given.

During the whole period of forty-two years' operation (to 31st December, 1929) the proportions have automatically worked out approximately as follows :—

	s.	d.
Out of every £1 of income	8	6	has been spent.
	3	6	has been saved (in reaching the maximum capital).
	6	2	has been given.
	1	10	has been passed on to relatives.

At the time of the adoption of the formula my capital was about one-eighth of the maximum amount therein stipulated, and it was not until twenty-eight years later that the maximum was reached. Since that time I have been able to distribute each year all the excess of income over expenditure; that distribution has often amounted to more than half my income, and in one year it was more than two-thirds of my income, thus demonstrating the value of clause (b) in the formula.

The foregoing testimony affords an interesting example of the Proverbs :—

"There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth; there is that withholdeth more than is meet but it tendeth to poverty."

"The liberal soul shall be made fat: and he that watereth shall be watered also himself."

It also exemplifies the promise :—

"Give, and it shall be given unto you . . ." It also affords a significant comment upon the challenge of God.

"Bring ye the Whole Tithe into the storehouse . . . and prove Me now herewith saith the Lord of Hosts if I will not open the windows of Heaven, and pour you out a blessing . . ."

It is noticeable that to tempt (test) God in any other manner is forbidden (Deut. vi, 16; Matt. iv, 7). Giving affords the solitary opportunity to prove or test God, by invitation.

We can find many who are rich, yet "not rich toward God" (Luke xii, 21), but we cannot find those who by giving to God have become impoverished. But, the giving of money, though eminently practical, is by no means the highest form of giving to God (Luke xviii, 29-30); moreover, this story of giving is not worthy to be compared with many of its kind that have been (Mark xii, 44) or might be recorded; it discloses nothing that is meritorious, for the system indicated has had one serious defect in that it has involved no self-denial or sacrifice; the formula has merely served to check any unhealthy desire to accumulate wealth, and tended to restrain any temptation to spend extravagantly.

This anonymous but reliable testimony is simply offered in the hope that it may be of practical service to young men with fair prospects who desire at the outset of their career to adopt the principles that shall guide them in determining the minimum of their monetary offerings to their Lord Who gave Himself for them.

Some may say that "Systematic Giving" is a cold, commercial, formal practice, suggestive of taxation. That objection will not bear investigation. Periodical gifts to our Lord, for subsequent distribution as He may guide us, may be presented with quite as much love and gratitude as spasmodic or casual gifts. Giving in money or service should really be a matter of principle, rather than the outcome of occasional emotion. There are many who are quite generous at times, when their sympathies are awakened for the time being by some story of need or distress—but what would one think of a person who was honest at times, or truthful at times!

Giving (discriminate, not indiscriminate), like honesty and truthfulness, should be a principle of life, and all such principles reach their highest level when they are adopted for Christ's sake.

WEEK BY WEEK.

We have stressed the necessity of a material basis for Kingdom activities in the earth. We have shown that the strength of a Kingdom-Empire organization behind us is necessary if we are to properly carry out our spiritual mission to humanity.

The close relation between Trade and Religion has been indicated. And the need for a new spirit in Industry as well as in the spiritual life has been made evident. Tribulation indeed is revealing to us the fact that there is no essential difference between the two.

Life is one and cannot be split up into water-tight compartments. If religion is religion it must touch life at every point.

Digitized by Google

We cannot keep the spiritual life for Sundays only. We need a new spirit in the whole of our life national as well as individual; and no exceptions.

Revival of Trade and Revival of Religion have been seen to be interdependent. A national re-birth is called for.

We now propose to consider some of the inverted political ideas which are undermining our Industrial and Economic foundations and thus indirectly striking a blow at the heart of our spiritual and religious life.

In spite of the witness of the Great Pyramid, BRITAIN has been slow to realize that chaos in economic conditions can be just as destructive as war itself.

Certainly Unemployment, which is one result of economic chaos, is costing the country as much as the prosecution of a war.

Up till the present stage the KINGDOM has been based upon a healthy individualism. It has been built by the individual effort of men and women.

Much of our trouble* to-day comes from the intrusion of so-called "Socialistic" ideas which confuse ethical ideas and economic laws.

This is no attack on Socialism. We are all Socialists if by that we mean a desire to create better living conditions for all the people.

It is the inverted ideas behind Socialism that are so harmful. We must learn to draw a definite, logical distinction between the ethical and the material.

Sir Ernest Benn has some pertinent things to say regarding this question: "Socialists try to make the best of both worlds in this matter of the ethical and material," he writes. "They wax eloquent against riches. There is of course a very strong case against the

and it is very important that we should each of us be taught how to use such riches as we secure and to entertain the right ideas in our endeavour to secure riches.

"But Socialists do not scruple to rail against riches as bad in themselves."

Sir Ernest sees danger in the tendency of the ideas behind Socialism becoming distorted into "a kind of fanatical religion which argues that comfort, are bad for the soul and must therefore be abolished.

WEALTH AND MATERIAL WELL-BEING

"Surely if ethics and economics are to be connected at all a much more inspiring religion can be built upon Capitalism than ever came out of the degradation of the Socialist idea," he continues.

"Socialism, if it is connected with anything at all in the public mind, is linked up with the notion of an easy life, and religion and ease can have little in common.

"Apart from the economic truth that life is not, and never can be easy, there are surely some deeper, truer, more ennobling inspirations to be found in the endeavour, the service, the work, the triumph over difficulties which are inseparable from the struggle for existence unfortunately termed Capitalism.

"The common confusion of ideas in material and ethical matters leads to all sorts of misconceptions which drag us down.

"This muddle over the ethical and the material would cease to worry us if we could get which is rendered to each and all by the individual effort of each of us. We need a revival of individualism.

"Nothing has stood in the way of our industrial development and the advance of our material well-being except our mania for politics—our collective obsession, our determination to discuss and regulate every action before we undertake it.

"We should, by all the rules of progress, be infinitely better off than any Continental nation. Nevertheless, NEW YORK looks upon us as part of hopeless EUROPE.

"ENGLAND found out how to make wealth—not money but things—years before AMERICA started. Fifty years ago the standard of life here, with all its faults and failings, was much higher than had ever been known in human experience in any age or any country.

"Then we became addicted to politics and since that time have been engaged in throwing away our heritage. From the economic point of view politics are far more destructive than war.

"Our triumphs of the Victorian era—that period in which we lifted our own people and other peoples of the world out of the slough of their mediæval despond to a civilized state—were achieved before education became a shibboleth.

"ENGLAND founded TRADE and COMMERCE and provided the

with a people who, for the most part, were illiterate. Our education is being chiefly used now in the manufacture of new political sophistries.

"When our people reach the stage when they are able to visualize‡ the needs of a nation of forty-five million people, then and not till then, shall we get a new idea and new enthusiasm.

"We shall have revealed to our newly-opened eyes the complete and utter folly of most of the things we are doing to-day. We shall see how, by political means, we are robbing ourselves of the very things that are offered to us by the politicians.

"We are suffering from a surplus of labour and a shortage of wealth. If we reverse our policy, dismiss politics from our minds, dedicate ourselves to activity and the production of wealth, we could arrive very quickly at a condition of affairs in which there was a shortage of labour and a surplus of wealth."

Thank you, Sir Ernest, for a most remarkable conclusion! Note the order of the last three paragraphs of this summary—(1) A new spirit; (2) A national awakening and repentance; (3) Surplus of wealth.

* Board of Trade returns show that British exports during the month of April, 1930, were lower for any month since May, 1926, when the General Strike took place. And with the exception of that month April's exports were the lowest since July, 1921. Readers will recall that 1921 is known as the Black Year of Industry. Both 1921 and 1926 are significant years in Pyramid chronology.

† Genesis xiii, 2, tells us "Abram was very rich." But Abram knew how to use his riches aright.

§ Cf. Ezek. xxxvi, 26, and Jer. xxxi, 33.

Now turn to Ezekiel xxxvi, and you will see that the new spirit of verses 25 to 28 is followed by the national awakening and repentance of verse 31 and the surplus of corn, fruit and root crops of verses 29 and 30.

A striking parallel which again confirms the inseparable nature of the national economic and spiritual life.

BRITAIN needs economic as well as spiritual salvation. The need for this is pressing. The demand for it incessant; the possibility of it shortly becoming living reality, a certainty.

THE FULFILMENT OF PROPHECY.

BY E. M. FOSTER.

THE Psalmist declares, "The Lord is my Shepherd I shall not want," and again, "Hear, O Thou Shepherd of Israel, Thou that leadest Joseph like sheep." Ezekiel takes up the theme of this parable, and in chapter xxxiv prophesies the coming of the Shepherd and the gathering of the sheep. The Prophet clearly states at the end of that great chapter whom he has in mind. They are the lost sheep of the House of Israel scattered amongst the Gentile nations.

Clearly our Lord had Israel in mind when He referred, as He so often did, to His sheep. Still scattered they were in His time on earth, and so that they might have the glad tidings quickly, He bade His disciples go first "to the lost sheep of the House of Israel." Remember, no other people are ever called "sheep" in the Bible. And so it came about that the Gospel first reached the ears of Israelites in Judea and Asia Minor and "in the uttermost parts of the earth"—the Isles of the West. And the first Christian Church to be built was the one established at Glastonbury.

There is another great parable running like a fine thread through Scripture. Again we turn to Ezekiel (chapter xvii). This is the riddle, the solution of which is known to all B.-I. students. It tells how the Lord God cut off the tender twig from the great cedar, and planted it in a high mountain. Here it grew into a great cedar tree, until all the birds came and nested under its branches. Princess Tea Tephi is here described. Descended from King David, she came under Divine protection to these shores, and by her marriage with Eochaidh, the Heremon or Arch-King of Ireland, the Throne of David was established in Britain.

Turn to St. Luke, chapter xiii, for an echo of this parable. To what does Christ compare the Kingdom of God? To a grain of mustard seed. And this smallest of shoots, like "the tender twig," grew until it became a great tree, and all the birds of the air nested in its branches. Here is confirmation from the Highest that the Throne of David stands secure for ever, and that Britain-Israel shall grow until she fills the whole earth.

One more example. We all know Daniel's Stone Kingdom. It is the Kingdom set up by God to overthrow all former empires and then rule over the world for ever. Pass now to St. Matthew, chapter xxi. It is the parable of the vineyard. The Jews have rejected their Saviour. To whom then shall the Kingdom of Heaven be given? Jesus answers, "Have you never read the Scriptures? . . . The Kingdom of Heaven shall be taken from you and given to a nation yielding the fruits thereof." And it is a Stone Kingdom, this realm of God, grinding to powder on whomsoever it falls. We have Christ's words confirming this (Matt. xxi, 44). It is Great Britain, the possessor of the insignia and rights of Israel. With such testimony as this we may send out our challenge to the world.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

BY THE REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A.

QUESTION.—Being urged to join the League of Nations' Union, I should be grateful if you will answer the following questions:—

(1) Am I correct in believing that the inauguration meeting of the League of Nations was opened without any sort of religious service?

(2) Do any of the League meetings open with prayer to the "Prince of Peace" to guide and bless their deliberations?

H. M. M. (Herts).

ANSWER.—The answer to both questions is probably in the negative, as we have no information to hand stating that these official and international meetings commence—or have commenced—with prayer. I remember asking Lord Robert Cecil (as he then was) why there was no mention of GOD in the Covenant of the League, and he informed me that while the League was based upon the religious principle of detestation of war, it was not possible to introduce religion specifically.

It must be remembered that the representatives and members of the League belong to all and sundry religions and religious sects, so that certain difficulties would immediately arise should the question of an Opening Prayer be forthcoming. In this respect the League differs obviously from Parliament.

With regard to the League of Nations' Union, this would depend upon the locus standi of the particular Branch which you are invited to join. If it be attached to a church or to a place of worship, there is no reason whatsoever why it should not open with prayer. But, otherwise, it is not the custom for public, political or civic meetings to do so.

On the other hand, how much better it would be if only Christian people were elected to positions of importance and authority! "The Church which is His body" should be the leader of the nation, and all public authorities should, in a Christian country, seek counsel of Christ "at all times, and in all places," in order that His blessed Spirit might be the supreme Leader in public thought and government. Does it not say that "the government shall be upon His shoulder"? And yet our nation is so slow in seeking the guidance and the premiership of Christ.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

WE are in the midst of the biggest Press campaign ever undertaken on behalf of British-Israel. We had a whole-page Manifesto in "The Times" on Thursday, May 15th, and in "The Morning Post" on May 17th, under the title, "The Present Menace and how to meet it." Other papers are to follow with it this week and next week. Enquiries are pouring in by every mail. In our correspondence are letters of approval and appreciation from University professors, clergymen and business men who regard this Manifesto as of National importance. Our own members are writing their congratulations, and expressing their gratitude. The Rev. Commander Roberts writes:—"I congratulate you on the moderation of its tone and the effective logic of its reasoning. This is what is wanted in every paper. I hope it will have a very wide circulation, with God's blessing."

J. W. D. writes:—"I have read it with the greatest pleasure and profit. I do not think it is possible to provide more information and detail concerning B.-I. in fewer words. How anyone approaching the subject with an open mind can fail to accept every conclusion proved puzzles me."

One member purchased 200 copies of "The Times" for sending out by post; another residing in the country bought all the copies available in the local news shop.

In response to requests we have arranged for reprints of the Manifesto, and we can supply these at 1s. per dozen. We already have one order for 250 copies.

H. K. B. writes: "This Manifesto is, in my opinion, a magnificent production, worthy of a stupendous subject, and I should like to feel that I had in some degree contributed to the cost of it, so I enclose my cheque, and I earnestly pray that God will prosper this splendid effort of the Federation."

We hear of clergymen who made it the subject of their sermons on Sunday last. One took for his text Acts iii, 25. He asked what we took this to mean, pointing out how essential to the understanding of the Gospels are the Prophets, he dealt with Peter's address in Solomon's Porch from a British-Israel standpoint. From that he passed to what he described as one of the most inspiring manifestations of disinterested devotion to the spiritual and temporal welfare of the nation that he had ever seen—the wonderful appeal in "The Times," the leading paper of the world, at an expense which it was difficult to estimate, without the least thought of gain or reward, the whole-page appeal to the nation and the Empire to return to God, to value His promises, to make themselves worthy of the blessings which had been showered upon them, and to adopt the one remedy for all our evils. Whether one believed the teaching of British-Israel or not—personally he did—the fact remained that to the reasoning being the solution of all our present difficulties was contained in that dignified and impressively-worded appeal, paid for by men who have unbounded faith in God and who had the courage of their convictions. He described the Manifesto as an impressive demonstration of the highest political importance.

The sermon made a profound impression.

The Rev. Pascoe Goard had a good voyage across the Atlantic. He writes from Toronto that they had a good and business-like Convention there on May 3rd. He was going on to Detroit, thence to Chicago and Winnipeg; from the latter city we have a cablegram of cordial greetings signed by the President of the Conference there—Mr. W. H. Blackaller. We have also had a cablegram from the Secretary of the Detroit Convention, and we look forward to a mailed account of the proceedings.

Mr. John Leech, K.C., and the Rev. Gregory Bestall gave interesting addresses at Headquarters last week. Our readers are reminded of the celebration of Empire Day at Headquarters to-day (Saturday) by a Social Tea at 4 p.m. and a lantern lecture at 5.15 by Mr. Herbert Garrison.

On Tuesday next, May 27th, the Rev. Cyril C. Dobson is to give two distinct lantern lectures at Headquarters on "The Garden Tomb at Jerusalem," at 3 and 8. Tea to be served between the lectures.

Mr. Leech will lecture on Wednesday next at 3, and the usual evening meeting will be held on Thursday.

On page 336 you will see illustrated the specimen lesson used in conjunction with Study No. 1 of the British-Israel-World Federation Headquarters Study Circle. Each of the other ten studies will be accompanied by a similar chart, together with extended notes on the analysis as shown on page 3 of the cover, which was also used for Study No. 1. These charts and notes are recommended for the use of Study Circles at a cost of 3d. each or 3s. post free for the set of eleven when complete, obtainable from: The Covenant Publishing Company Ltd., 6. Buckingham Gate, London, S.W.1.

Will friends in and around Norbury, Thornton Heath, Streatham and Upper Norwood, who would attend or support the local Study Circle kindly send in their names and addresses to Headquarters, that the local Secretary may be advised? Weekly meetings have been arranged.

The four meetings addressed by Miss Hamilton Hunter at Portsmouth and Southsea on May 5th and 6th were splendidly attended, and the addresses highly appreciated. The speaker's appeal to those who believe in British-Israel teaching, yet had not hitherto taken any active part, resulted in the enrolment of fourteen new members and some Crusaders, and the institution of a monthly prayer meeting. There was also a response to a call for new members by Miss Hamilton Hunter at Southampton on the 7th.

The Battersea Branch has asked that we call the attention of local friends to the special meeting at the Town Hall on May 28th, with Mr. J. J. Morey as speaker and Rev. Kenneth Dodds presiding.

The Folkestone Branch is very grateful to the Rev. Kenneth Dodds for his two splendid lectures at the Town Hall on May 8th. His subject, "The Heavenly Oratorio," a study of the Book of Revelation, and the way he dealt with it opened up new and glorious visions. Another visit is eagerly anticipated.

W. S. writes :—

"One of the marks of Israel's identity was that they should be a Christian people and a missionary nation.

They should as the election of race carry the message of salvation to those nations and individuals who by acceptance might become of the election of grace.

How is Israel to do this if the vast majority know nothing of their birthright and destiny, nothing of their racial election?

What is our duty who have this knowledge? Surely it is to pass on that knowledge to others who do not yet know.

Missionary work? Yes. There is still a great deal to be done among our own people. Millions blind and deaf to their heritage to whom the knowledge of British-Israel Truth would be as life to the dead.

Let us who can see lead the blind.

Let us who can hear guide the deaf.

Let those who can give, give to those who have not the knowledge.

Our work is ever-growing, and the demands on our treasury are ever-increasing for this almost world-wide work. In fact we cannot meet the calls made on us for lack of means.

Will you share in the missionary work which has to be done by sending a donation to-day?

We will do all that humans can do, but we cannot do it unless we are furnished with the means. Send to The Secretary-General, 6, Buckingham Gate."

Mr. Lucas, Secretary, writes :—

"The Toronto Central Branch has been honoured by a visit from Rev. F. W. Domina, of U.S.A., who addressed meetings in British-Israel House on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights. The appreciation of his lectures was plainly evident in the increase in the size of his audience each night over that of the preceding one. He has a wonderful message, and will, we hope, visit us again before long.

On Wednesday night our Toronto East Branch held its regular weekly meeting and enjoyed a splendid address from its President, Mr. Gladstone Brown. This Branch is doing splendid work, and has built up a large and growing membership."

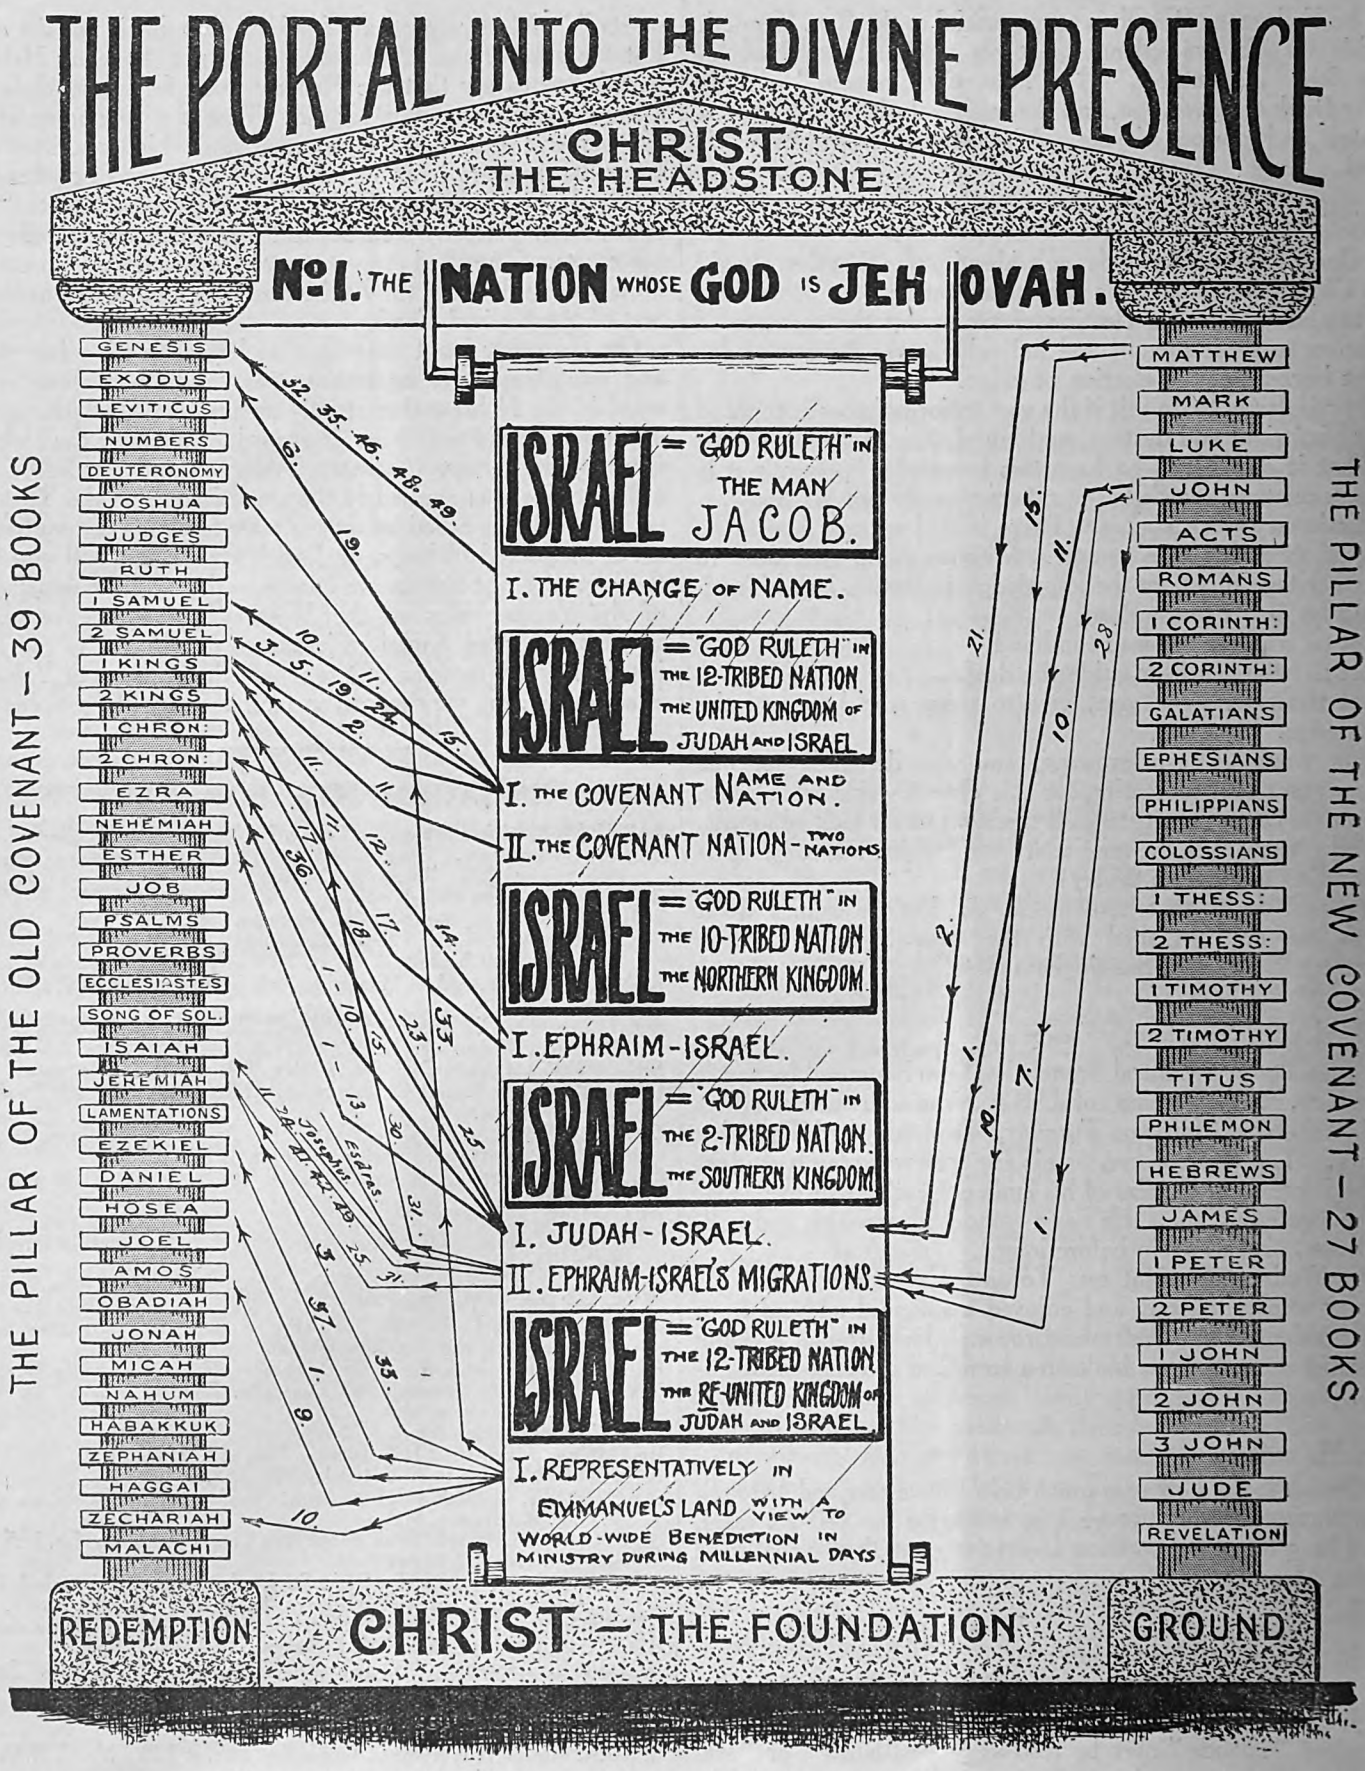
Mr. James Cuthbert writes :—

"In reading the article, 'The Restoration of Israel,' by Dr. J. Llewellyn Thomas, the following sentence occurs : 'Now the word "islands" may be read as "coast-lands" or "sea-coasts."' Most respectfully I submit that this is not the case. For the sake of the faithful and those not knowing Hebrew permit me to say that the Hebrew word for island does not mean coast-lands, and never did. That is a rendering which the perverse ingenuity of commentators, higher critics and latter-day revisers have manufactured and sown broadcast.

The Hebrews, whose land on the West bordered the sea-coast, knew perfectly well the difference between islands and sea-coasts. They had only one word for island—ay—the word always so rendered in the Authorized Version, as well as in the text of the Revised Version.



On the other hand there are no less than nine for coasts and coast-lands. If ay means coast-land, then there is no word in the Hebrew that strictly means island, which, as our old friend Euclid would say, is absurd. (We have the Hebrew word ay in Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney and Anglesey. As a diminutive it is applied to the small islands in the Thames each of which is called an ayt—a pure feminine diminutive.),

An instructed Hebrew, or Jewish Rabbi, will tell you that the isles of Great Britain are known to them by the appellation of Ayi h'ayam—isles of the West. So that the name by which the United Kingdom is known in Hebrew to the Jews is precisely the same as that to which the message of Yehovah is addressed, the very words, in fact, used by His prophets!"

Glastonbury Traditions

Joseph of Arimathea

BEING A TRANSLATION FROM THE LATIN

BY

OF

THE SECOND CHAPTER OF BRITANNICARUM ECCLESIARUM ANTIQUITATES OF JAMES USSHER, ARCHBISHOP OF ARMAGH AND PRIMATE OF ALL IRELAND, PUBLISHED AT DUBLIN IN 1639. WITH THE ORIGINAL FOOTNOTES.

This is the first published translation of this important chapter of the great Archbishop Ussher's Monumental Work on the Antiquity of the British Churches, produced in Latin in 1639.

It contains the collected traditions, as gathered from various sources by this eminent writer, concerning the coming to Glastonbury of Joseph of Arimathea and his companions, and distinguishes, with notable impartiality, between such as may be regarded as merely legendary and those which, on the basis of continuous authority, are worthy of acceptance.

In particular, he adduces the arguments used by the British delegates to the Councils of Pisa, Constance, Siena and Basle (1409, 1417, 1424 and 1434, respectively) in support of their claim regarding the priority of antiquity of the British Church, and deals with the evidence on which such arguments were based.

The original footnotes are reproduced (the more important being translated) in order that the reader may consult the authorities cited by Ussher, should he desire to do so.

THE RETURN FROM ACROSS THE RIVER.—VI.

By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard.

What a thrilling moment for Heaven when the hosts of the Lord fall into the march earthwards across the intervening spaces!

That the intervening spaces are great from the standpoint of Heaven we are not required to believe. Rather it seems that the General Assembly are assembled very closely to the earth which they are considering, and which the Lord is administering in their presence.

So the rally has been effected of the hosts of the sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty. These march in their families and tribes; as of old their fathers marched when Israel formed and marched in the wilderness. With them are the innumerable hosts of the blood washed out of every nation, language, people and tongue. Before them goes the Lamb, Who has now put on the robes of His authority and on Whose vesture and thigh there is a Name written, King of kings and Lord of lords.

Behind Him march His personal attendants numbering one hundred and forty-four thousand—that is to say, an army division of ten thousand out of every one of the twelve tribes of Israel.

Marching parallel to these, under the leadership of Michael, the Archangel, are all the angel hosts, their serried ranks stretching in seemingly endless procession like a river of light.

Now our attention is directed to the earth. As is usual on our earthly Globe, it is morning, afternoon and night simultaneously in different parts of the earth. So our Lord indicated when He said, "two women shall be grinding at the mill; one shall be taken, and the other left"—this was the task of early morning. Again He said, "two men shall be working in the field"—this is the task of the day. And yet further, "two shall be sleeping in one bed"—this indicates night and darkness.

The earth will be going on with routine pursuits, and none will be thinking of the approach of the King with the armies of Heaven and the angel hosts.

Describing the event from the standpoint of the earth our Lord said, "As the lightning cometh out of the east and shineth even unto the west, so shall the coming of the Son of man be."

We are given here and there details of that wonderful moment of future history; so we get this flashlight, "He shall descend from heaven with a shout; with the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God."

Here are three audible phenomena, the shout of triumph of our Lord Himself. How thrilling the Voice! How transporting the tone when, with all His humiliation past, all His patient intermediate waiting ended, all His endurance of the sin and consequent suffering of His people and all people on earth ended, He comes to put an end to chaos, and to establish righteousness and order by His Own administration from the throne of His father David!

His Voice was heard from the Cross, crying, "My God, My God, why hast Thou forsaken Me?" Again it was heard, crying, "It is finished," and these voicings of our Lord have rung down through the ages, stirring the hearts of each succeeding generation to sympathetic pain.

Now once again His Voice rings forth with a shout of ineffable triumph and glory as He comes to "take the throne of His father David and rule over the house of Jacob for ever."

Answering to His Voice is the voice of the Archangel as he marshals his angelic host for the final clash with the power of Satan.

Once before Michael and his angels had met the hosts of the Devil and his angels in Heaven ; once before Michael and his angels had prevailed, and the Devil and his hosts were cast out from Heaven, but, alas ! they came down to earth, having great power. And bitter was the suffering and fierce the spiritual conflict they brought into the earth sphere.

But now the angel host, accompanied by the hosts of the sons of men, are commissioned to purge the earth sphere from the presence and malign influences of the powers of evil.

With what thrilling exaltation Michael inspires his angel hosts for the last great conflict and triumph !

How reassuring to the almost overwhelmed people of the Lord in the greatest international crisis of world history will be the shout of our Lord and the voice of the Archangel !

And now we are called to listen to the thrilling peal of the trump of God as it sounds the assembly once again, for the hosts of Israel in all their generations to muster in the ancient form of the Israel square, as is set forth at the organization of the nation in the first chapters of Numbers.

Never since the trump of God sounded to herald the approach of Jehovah at Mount Sinai has human ear responded to the sound. Now it rings out the reveille for the sleeping dead, and the assembly for the living.

In answer to these unique voices and the trumpet's call, " The dead in Christ shall rise first . . ."

Let us think for a moment what is here implied. The hosts of the redeemed, riding upon white horses, have accompanied the Lord from before the throne ; and yet, as far as earth is concerned, these are the dead. That is to say, their physical bodies died, and all but the last generation in whose bodies the process was not complete had returned to their primal dust. Such bodies were not suited to the Heavenly conditions. But now that the redeemed were returning to earth again, they must take to themselves suitable bodily clothing for the thousand years' long experience which lies before them.

Up from the ground, and in from the surrounding atmosphere, and even from the waters of the seas, with instantaneous flight spring atoms which arrange themselves into molecules, materializing bodies in the very form and the very substance which answers to the spirit of each individual. The Apostle Paul declares that this will take place " in a moment ; in the twinkling of an eye ; the dead will be raised ; and we shall be changed."

The hosts of Heaven have come to earth, and as one changes his garments from time to time to suit his occupation, so these have put on a garment of flesh to suit the earthly conditions. And yet, how exalted ! How spiritual ! How free from the taint of mortality ! How independent of gravitation ! How disdainful of material barriers ! How altogether suited to the exalted personality and immortality of the wearers are the garments thus assumed !

And so the dead are raised, and the living in Christ are changed ; from the mortal to immortality ; from the natural to the spiritual ; from weakness to power, and to glory unspeakable at the Coming of the Lord.

The passages which make these things so clear for us are :—

" But some man will say, How are the dead raised up ? and with what body do they come ?

Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die :

And that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be, but bare grain, it may chance of wheat, or of some other grain :

But God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body.

All flesh is not the same flesh : but there is one kind of flesh of men, another flesh of beasts, another of fishes, and another of birds.

There are also celestial bodies, and bodies terrestrial : but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another.

There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars : for one star differeth from another star in glory.

So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption ; it is raised in incorruption :

It is sown in dishonour ; it is raised in glory : it is sown in weakness ; it is raised in power :

It is sown a natural body ; it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body.

And so it is written, The first man Adam was made a living soul ; the last Adam was made a quickening spirit."—1 Cor. xv, 35-45.

" Behold, I shew you a mystery ; We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed,

In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump : for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed.

For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality.

So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory."—1 Cor. xv, 51-54.

Now the Lord, accompanied by His resurrected and translated hosts, enters upon the establishment of peace and righteousness in the earth, and the ushering in of the millennium reign.

The attendant angels watch and guard, and lend their aid. The earth-born generations operate henceforth, freed from Satanic influence and power, under the benign rule of Jesus Christ, under the influence of the immortal saints of God, and under the ministering agency of angels. It will be well indeed for the earth !

But speedily the thousand year day is ended.

Satan is loosed again for a little season. He was interrupted by the lightning-like Coming of the Son of man in a war against Israel and humanity. His angels were put to flight, and he himself was chained. Now that his imprisonment is over, he gathers his angels to a standard, and setting his standard up on the earth, he gathers the hosts of the sons of men who have been ruled in peace and righteousness by the Son of man against their will. The spirit of rebellion remained still latent in their hearts. Now that the standard of Satan is raised, they fly to enrol themselves beneath it. A multitude as the sands of the sea. They are marshalled in military formation, and compass the camp of the saints above, poised and ready to precipitate war, and again deluge the earth with blood.

It was necessary that the Devil should thus be loosed, and permitted to raise his standard, in order that freedom of choice between Christ as Leader and Saviour, or the Devil as leader and destroyer, should be exercised by every one of the earth-born generation.

By night and day they steal away from the camp of the saints and enlist with the enemy.

It is not, however, the Divine purpose that war should again trouble the earth, nor sin and rebellion dwell therein.

"Once in the end of the world Christ appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself."

Now at the end of the Adamic period God in His Heaven intervenes to put away sin from the earth by the destruction of the unrepentant and permanently rebellious sinner, and the end is told in a short phrase of a short sentence thus: "And fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them."

Thus the long, long ages of sin and feud and war is to be ended on earth for ever.

Then as the great finale, the great White Throne is established, and the dead are judged out of the books which are opened.

But, thank God, there is another Book, which is the Book of Life. "And every one who was not found written in the Book of Life was cast into the lake of fire; this is the second death."

And now St. John, turning from this tragic ending of the human period through which we are passing, cries:—

"And I saw a new heaven, and a new earth: For the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea.

And I John saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband.

And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God.

And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away.

And he that sat upon the throne said, Behold, I make all things new. And he said unto me, Write: for these words are true and faithful.

And he said unto me, It is done. I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end. I will give unto him that is athirst of the fountain of the water of life freely.

He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son.

But the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death."—Rev. xxi, 1-8.

DOES THE BIBLE STAND OR FALL WHEN TESTED BY SCIENCE, HISTORY AND PHILOSOPHY?—V.

JERUSALEM

By PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc.

First.—Throughout the Scriptures we are often told that Jerusalem has been selected as God's earthly throne for ever, the for ever of human earth activities.

Select the verses that emphasize Jerusalem as the past and future centre* of God's earthly control of human affairs, and you will be amazed.

Second.—Read Ezekiel, Joel, Zechariah, and John the Revelator, and find that in Jerusalem there will be a mighty river coming up from the bowels of the earth, which will perform wonders in the desert places. Read Ezekiel xlvii, 1-12:

"Afterward he brought me again unto the door of the house; and, behold, waters issued out from under the threshold of the house eastward: for the forefront of the house stood toward the east, and the waters came down from under from the right side of the house, at the south side of the altar.

"Then brought he me out of the way of the gate northward, and led me about the way without unto the utter gate by the way that looketh eastward; and, behold, there ran out waters on the right side.

"And when the man that had the line in his hand went forth eastward, he measured a thousand cubits, and he brought me through the waters; the waters were to the ancles.

"Again he measured a thousand, and brought me through the waters; the waters were to the knees. Again he measured a thousand, and brought me through; the waters were to the loins.

"Afterward he measured a thousand; and it was a river that I could not pass over: for the waters were risen, waters to swim in, a river that could not be passed over.

"And he said unto me, Son of man, hast thou seen this? Then he brought me, and caused me to return to the brink of the river.

"Now when I had returned, behold, at the bank of the river were very many trees on the one side and on the other.

"Then said he unto me, These waters issue out toward the east country, and go down into the desert, and go into the sea: which being brought forth into the sea, the waters shall be healed.

"And it shall come to pass, that every thing that liveth, which moveth, whithersoever the rivers shall come, shall live: and there shall be a very great multitude of fish, because these waters shall come thither: for they shall be healed; and every thing shall live whither the river cometh.

* One of the most striking proofs of the fact that since the destruction of Jerusalem in A.D. 70 God's earthly administration has been temporarily operating elsewhere is contained in that somewhat cryptic utterance, "Jerusalem shall be inhabited again in her own place, even in Jerusalem." (Zech. xii, 6.)

When the government of Israel leaves its temporary seat at Westminster (in the Appointed Place or Isles of the Sea north-west of Palestine) and returns once more to Jerusalem as the centre of the coming all-world Empire, then this prophecy will find fulfilment, and God's government on earth will once more radiate from its proper place, even in Jerusalem.—EDITOR.

"And it shall come to pass, that the fishers shall stand upon it from En-gedi even unto En-eglaim; they shall be a place to spread forth nets; their fish shall be according to their kinds, as the fish of the great sea†, exceeding many.

"But the miry places thereof and the marishes thereof shall not be healed; they shall be given to salt.

"And by the river upon the bank thereof, on this side and on that side, shall grow all trees for meat, whose leaf shall not fade, neither shall the fruit thereof be consumed: it shall bring forth new fruit according to his months, because their waters they issued out of the sanctuary: and the fruit thereof shall be for meat, and the leaf thereof for medicine."

This reveals an important fact of nature. If a great river is to come up in the new Jerusalem, then that river is now flowing under Jerusalem. The river of Ezekiel, yet to be, is there now.

Third.—There was a river in ancient Eden which came from the earth depths and gave the origin to four rivers.

It ceased to function above the surface of the earth. Doubtless it has operated under the surface for thousands of years.

Would it be strange if we find the ancient Edenic river, the now flowing river, under Jerusalem, and the Ezekiel river to be one and the same? Not very strange! Just natural!

Mighty geologic movements changed the flow and surface location of the Edenic river and its four avenues of travel. The Book assures us of tremendous coming geologic changes which will include the appearance of the Ezekiel-John‡ river in Jerusalem.

Then perhaps we will more readily see why the perpetual Divine choice of the Jerusalem site was made in the days of Adam and the Garden of Eden.

THE DAYS OF THE END.

THE SIGNIFICANCE OF JUNE 28TH, 1914, AS AN INDEX DATE.

By J. BERNARD NICKLIN.

No. III.

LET us pause and consider some of the conclusions arising from that which was presented in former issues.

A score or more of these day-intervals have now been examined. There can be no question as to their existence. Dates can be verified at any Reference Library and calculations easily checked. To anyone unbiassed they afford clear evidence of the supernatural ordering of events.

But these intervals, as we have endeavoured to show, are the numbers of Bible prophecy, and the events connected with them are those prophetically foretold for these latter days, relating, for example, to Jerusalem, the Jews, End of Mohammedan Rule, the World War, World Peace, Rome and the Papacy, and so on. The inference clearly is that from the beginning God has pre-determined the course of human history, "declaring the end from the beginning," and that "the Most High God ruleth in the kingdom of men." And we read that "He hath appointed a day in which He will judge the world in righteousness by that Man whom He hath ordained."

These numbers seem to tell us that that DAY is at hand! A Day of destruction it will be, in which the present world-order, its financial, social, political, religious systems and organizations will pass, "when the kingdoms of this world are become the Kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ."

Are they the preliminary tremors of the coming "Earthquake" that are thus indicated by these day-intervals?

We have noticed how they have developed from June 28th, 1914, affecting in turn almost all classes and departments, and that they concern Great Britain in particular.

Then we would call attention to the unmistakable "doubling" that has been so marked a feature. Two events related in almost every group, intervals occurring twice. Surely this is Divine confirmation? "By the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established."

The event of recent years, which by its overwhelming suddenness seemed to forebode this Coming Day, was the sinking of the Titanic at midnight April 14th-15th, 1912—and there is a striking connection between this and these day-intervals which will presently appear.

JUNE 28TH AND TWO FUTURE JEWISH FESTIVALS.

Readers familiar with the prophetic significance of the Jewish Feasts know that as the first four annual Feasts were fulfilled at our Lord's First Coming, on days of the year on which they fell, so it is believed will the last three, viz.: Trumpets, Atonement and Tabernacles, be fulfilled at His Second Coming. Now, the Feast of Trumpets or Alarm is the forerunner of the Great Day of Atonement, which falls nine days later—the one day of all others among Jews for mourning and putting away of sin, but the all-important event awaited on this day was the return of the high priest from the Holy of Holies, and this in the Jubilee year was heralded by the blowing of a loud trumpet proclaiming redemption and liberty. All this seems to point to the Day of Atonement as the day when the Son of Man is to be revealed, our Great High Priest, Whose Return is to be accompanied by the Sound of a Great Trumpet, and "unto them that look for Him," as the writer to the Hebrews says, "shall He appear the second time without sin unto salvation."

The Feast of Tabernacles, or Great Hosanna, which commenced five days later, was the last and most joyous of all the Feasts. It commemorated the deliverance from Egypt, and was, moreover, the great Harvest Home. Many believe that the opening of this Feast will witness our Lord's triumphant Return into Jerusalem.

As Christ's Second Coming is the Grand Climax we are looking for, with what watchfulness and expectancy should these latter Jewish Feasts be awaited! But is it not significant that five times 1260 days from June 28th, 1914, will end on the Feast of Tabernacles, 1931; and that five times 1260 days from June 28th, 1919, will end on the Day of Atonement, 1936?

In this group we seem at last to behold the Alpha and Omega of these day-intervals! Note the characteristics of completion. A double fivefold interval extending from the initial date of the War to a Day of Atonement! Note also the number "five" signifying "redemption"; and recollect that the "Stone" that smote the Image, which depicts as we believe the great event we are anticipating, was the "fifth" kingdom seen in Daniel's vision.

But in these intervals there are other confirmatory datings which strike us, for instance:—

September 27th, 1931, will also be 4 × 1260 days from Jerusalem's surrender, December 9th, 1917. Elsewhere* we have mentioned that this date coincided with the 24th day of the 9th month in the Jewish Calendar for 1917, a date thrice quoted in the prophet Haggai in connection with Jerusalem's restoration. It will also be recalled that the year 1916-17 was the 1335th year of Mohammedanism, and that it would thus witness an important step towards Jewish restoration which was predicted long before by Dr. Grattan Guinness. Now the year 1931–2 will be 1335 lunar years from the Mohammedan occupation of Jerusalem. Hence we have here a very remarkable set of circumstances:—

What will September 27th, 1931, or the year commencing it, bring forth?

September 26th, 1936:—

Is the termination of 2 × 1260 days from November 2nd, 1929, which concluded the week of the Financial Crisis already referred to;

And also terminates 1260 days from April 14th–15th, 1933, which we recognize will be the 21st anniversary (a generation) from the Titanic disaster.

If the years 1912–1915 saw the beginning of world "travail"—of which our Lord said, "This generation shall not pass, till all these things be fulfilled"—we are brought to the years 1933–36 as its end-time.

But in 1933, fifteen years expire from the Armistice—signed at the 11th hour, of the 11th day, of the 11th month—1918—the "Midnight Hour" as it has been termed. (Seven Times of the Gentiles being regarded as a Great Week, of which each Day = 360 years, and each Hour = 1/24th of 360 = 15 years.) Confirmation of the existence of this Hour seemed assured, when on the day the "Half-Hour" was due to "strike," May 12th, 1926, the General Strike suddenly terminated, the War Armistice and Industrial Armistice being thus linked by this Half-Hour interval.

Also, November 10th, 1933, when "Midnight" will be reached, is a date strongly marked both in relation to these day-intervals and the Great Pyramid, as presently to be shown.

Moreover, the year 1933–4, according to the most reliable chronologists, terminates 2520 years from Nebuchadnezzar's destruction of Jerusalem—the final stage of Judah's overthrow.

For the above reasons 1933 is therefore also strongly marked, and it does seem significant that the date in that year indicated by these day-intervals should be the 21st anniversary of the Titanic disaster:—

WEEK BY WEEK.

By A. R. H.

In previous articles we have indicated the need of a material and national basis for Kingdom-activities in the earth. Our power to get wealth is God-given. National wealth and material well-being are essential if we are to establish and carry out the principles of the Covenant upon which the Kingdom-Empire in the earth is based.*

Further we have pointed out the relation between Trade and Religion and shown that the spiritual and economic forces of the national life are interdependent.

The present time of national trouble and perplexity is revealing the fact that we need a new spirit in Industry every whit as much as we need it in our national religious life. If Britain is to fulfil her destiny and remain "chief of the nations" she must seek the ways and means of manifesting a new spirit in every phase of her national life. A national re-birth is called for. The mind of the nation must be brought into harmony with the MIND of CHRIST.

Only thus can we find strength to resist and overcome the inverted, chaotic, economic doctrines and political sophistries which are undermining the foundations of our moral power. Only thus can we find the inspiration to destroy the paralysis which is sweeping over our economic system, and, in the realm of government, initiate those reforms, restitutions and restorations which alone can make our future sure and guarantee an everlasting greatness.

In the present final article of this series we examine the three outstanding signs of the times which go to prove that THRONE, GOVERNMENT and PEOPLE are each and all moving irresistibly toward this most desirable consummation.

It is a remarkable fact that the present time of national stress and strain should be coincident with a marked renewal of national interest in the BIBLE. The secular Press of GREAT BRITAIN is giving space for discussions regarding the BIBLE on a scale never known before. True, some of it has no direct spiritual intention.

One famous daily paper, for instance, has been publishing a series of articles with the sole purpose of directing "attention to the beauties of the English language and the many moods and designs to which it can be adapted by its masters."

But we should be foolish to underestimate the value of this propaganda purely on the grounds of its avowed secular object. If only we can get the people to read the BIBLE we can safely leave the rest to the Spirit of the LORD. It is the Spirit which quickeneth. And countless thousands who have begun by reading the sacred BOOK purely for the sake of discovering the beauty of its literature have ended in being captivated by the Spirit animating its pages and brought into direct spiritual contact with Him Who is the First Author of Beauty. Such is the power of a human literature which has behind it the inspiration of a living SPIRIT.

Furthermore the Book of books is not the WORD of GOD only. It is also and it is on this plane of presentation that its significance for the present age finds its chief fulfilment.

Once the reality of this fact dawns upon the minds of the people we shall have cause to rejoice indeed. For the Kingdom conception of Bible truth is the spearhead of Christian progress.

Without it every forward movement builds up its own opposition and quickly find its progress and momentum dying and exhausted. Without the Kingdom-vision and Gospel in its fullness a religious revival dissipates its energy.

With the Kingdom-vision the Gospel attains full stature as the whole counsel of GOD and becomes sharper than any two-edged sword. Its force and energy are irresistible. No power on earth can frustrate its advance.

Moreover it calls for that complete without which a new moral awakening is impossible.

The Methodist Recorder nearly stumbles into the light of this revelation in its review of these problems last week. It tells its readers that the "simple" Gospel is the gate to the profoundest philosophy of life (i.e., contains the solution for all present-day world problems), and that those who enter the gate must follow the path wherever it may lead them.

But surely the gate of the Gospel leads us straight into the citadel of the KINGDOM. Can there be any doubt as to where the path will lead us?

In Kingdom teaching resides the cure for that exhaustion which seems always to afflict modern ethical revivals, and is the cause of such concern to the Editor of our contemporary.

Only the preaching of the whole Gospel can meet the needs of the present-day situation. And the whole Gospel is contained in that GOSPEL of the KINGDOM, which, as Ferrar Fenton has it, shall or must "be proclaimed throughout as a witness to all nations," before the end of the present dispensation.

[1] Matt. xiii, 19. A.V. [2] Matt. xxiv, 14. F.F.

To many religious-minded people it may at first seem strange that so material a crisis as Industrial depression should be driving the nation irresistibly towards so great a spiritual goal. But it is clear from Deut. viii, 18, that any form of distress menacing the wealth and material prosperity of the Kingdom strikes a blow at the heart of the Covenant itself upon which the Kingdom is based.

And without controversy the crushing is causing a quickening of the social conscience of the nation. It is questionable if any other form of pressure could produce so great an awakening of moral sensibility.

The whole nation is coming to realize that the present social system is in Bishop Gore's words "a gross violation of the MIND of CHRIST," and that fundamental changes must be effected.

These changes will not be brought about by following the leadership of revolutionary extremists. Reformation cannot be achieved by the simple process of inverting the social pyramid. Industrial redemption can only come along the lines suggested by LORD SANKEY, who, in the HOUSE of LORDS, recently declared: "The great need of our country is an ethical revival throughout society. Let us not only in one class but in every class. Let us see that there is a fair share and just reward for those whose brains contribute to the success of the industry; a just reward for those who by their savings have enabled it to be started and supported. Above all, let there be a just reward to those who day by day risk their lives in working it.

"We may adopt the most modern methods, but the human element is and will remain the key to the situation. It is there that the economists and calculators fail. They regard men as machines; but it is not machines who have made our EMPIRE."

Pregnant words these and specially significant, coming as they do from the lips of BRITAIN'S LORD CHANCELLOR. And the sentiment of these words, uttered within the walls of BRITAIN'S HOUSE of PARLIAMENT, finds an echo in the words of the DUKE of GLOUCESTER, who, in representing the ROYAL HOUSE at the Annual Meeting of the British and Foreign Bible Society, said:—

"In scattering the Scriptures among the peoples, no questions are asked about churchmanship, nor are religious formulas dictated.

"The Society works among those of varying animistic beliefs, and amongst those of Hindu, Confucian, Shinto, Buddhist, and Moslem faiths, seeking not to destroy but to fulfil, and to avoid the bitterness of controversy.

"No distinction is made between nations or discrimination against race. White, black, brown, yellow or red, all one family equally entitled to the supreme bequest of their one Father.

"A creature needs only to be human to come within the scope of the Society's operations. Its sole purpose is to circulate one Book, and that without note or comment.

"This will be a happier and more peaceful world when in our personal and public affairs we all make the BIBLE our final and accept its ruling as the LAW of LIFE."

Here again we have a striking testimony. And this time one that comes from the lips of a member of the ROYAL HOUSE of BRITAIN.

Incidentally it assumes a new significance in view of recent celebrations. A week or two ago BRITAIN celebrated the twentieth anniversary of the accession of HIS MAJESTY KING GEORGE V to the DAVIDIC THRONE. The anniversary was celebrated with more than usual sincerity, since it marked the restoration of HIS MAJESTY the KING to normal health and activity.

One of HIS MAJESTY'S first public appearances since his illness took place at WEMBLEY for the Cup Final Football Match. And it was on this occasion that a most remarkable thing happened.

Following the National Anthem, the vast crowd of one hundred thousand people stood bare-headed and sang the hymn, "Abide with me." KING and PEOPLE singing aloud the praise of GOD. Could religion and sport have been combined in this manner in any other country but BRITAIN?

Instinctively one's mind went back to the CORONATION, when the monarch is anointed both PRIEST and KING.

And so on this occasion we see him as KING, interested in the daily life and health of his people; their love of clean and wholesome sport. Again as PRIEST, he joins with them in delight to hear the nation's voice raised in praise and prayer to GOD.

Surely in this event we have a foreshadowing of the day soon coming when the HOUSE of DAVID and EPHRAIM-ENGLAND together[4] turn in supplication toward GOD. How easy and natural it could all be is evident from the examples of the tendency in this direction aforementioned.

And yet it seems we shall need a further national shock and crisis before we shall be ready as a nation to act together in unity. In that day, led by the THRONE of DAVID, the people will seek the LORD their GOD and say, "Let us join ourselves to the LORD in that shall not be forgotten."

A nation will be born of GOD in one day.[6] The BRITISH PEOPLE will have become Brith-ish in deed as well as in name. They will have become truly BRITH-ISH ISRAEL—Covenant Men ruling with GOD.

And as a result shall come such an outpouring of the new spirit of the new covenant upon the heart and mind of the nation that the multitudinous difficulties and distresses that afflict the national life will be swept away like the morning mist dispersed by rising sunbeams.

Sorrow and sighing will flee away. For have not GOD'S PEOPLE become all righteous?[7] To the world will be manifest the ISRAEL KINGDOM in all its glory redivivus. BRITAIN will have become in truth a KINGDOM of PRIESTS and an HOLY NATION.[8]

THE FULNESS OF THE GENTILES IN THE BRITISH COMMONWEALTH OF NATIONS.--II.

BY DR. WADGE (WINNIPEG).

PAUL'S ARGUMENT—GENTILE ISRAELITES.

REFERENCE—"The Epistle to the Romans." By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard.

We turn now to chapters ix, x and xi of the Epistle to the Romans and study Paul's statements as to the Israelites in his argument there. We must first remember that Paul wrote this Epistle about A.D. 60, i.e., approximately 30 years after Pentecost, when the Christian Church first became an identity distinct from Judaism. Consequently, it is obvious that any statements he makes at this time in reference to the Israelites cannot logically be taken as referring in a spiritual way to the Church. If Paul had been writing such messages to the Church, he surely would not have made such elaborate reference to the basic rights of the House of Israel.

Further, in studying this argument we must remember that when the House of Israel was carried into captivity by the Assyrians, they had ceased as a nation the worship of Jehovah—having been idol-worshippers for generations, they had lost their proper name—being then known as the Beth-Khumri, they had lost the distinctive physical rite of the Israel nation—circumcision, and they had been divorced by God. Owing to all these conditions they were a people for the time being outside of God's covenants. Thus they literally became heathen; and consequently they became known to the Jews as Gentiles. As we have already shown, the Greek word ethnos is more appropriately translated by nations than by Gentiles, so it will greatly help to clarify the argument if we keep this in mind during the consideration of these three chapters.

In the latter part of the first chapter of this Epistle Paul writes of the heathen and describes their degeneracy; in chapter ii he describes the self-righteousness of the Jew, "For he is not a Jew, which is one outwardly; neither is that circumcision, which is outward in the flesh." (ii, 28.) And then he shows that both heathen and Jew are grouped together by the one condition common to both—unbelief.

In chapter ix he introduces Israel by name, though he has already referred to them under the names of Greek and Gentile. Paul makes it clear that the Gentiles he refers to are not heathen, but his "Kinsmen according to the flesh; who are Israelites; whose is the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises; whose are the fathers, and of whom is Christ as concerning the flesh, who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen." These rights and privileges belonged to Israel and descended to the House of Israel through Joseph and Ephraim, to whom was given the birthright blessing. "For Judah prevailed above his brethren, and of him came the chief ruler, but the birthright was Joseph's." (1 Chron. v, 2.) That these rights still belonged to the House of Israel, though uncircumcised and unbelievers (heathen), is shown by the fact that Paul here ascribes these rights to his kinsmen in the flesh, and not to the Church, though it had then been in existence for approximately 30 years.

Again, in proceeding with his argument, and in speaking of the potter fashioning his vessels for service whether for positions of honour or otherwise, he shows that God " endured with much long-suffering vessels of wrath fitted unto destruction (i.e., the real heathen), that He might make known the riches of His glory upon vessels of mercy, which He afore prepared unto glory, even us, whom He also called, not from the Jews only, but also from the Gentiles." (ix, 22-24, R.V.) That Paul by speaking of Gentiles was here referring to the Ten-tribed House of Israel is proven by the fact that he refers to the Gentiles as being prepared unto glory, vessels of mercy, and also by the fact that he immediately proceeds to show that these Gentiles were Israelites.

In the next two verses Paul quotes from the prophet Hosea, who was distinctly a prophet to the House of Israel, and whose prophecy was primarily to that House. Turning then to the portion referred to by Paul we read in chapter i as follows (verse 4, R.V.):—. . . for yet a little while, and I will avenge the blood of Jezreel upon the house of Jehu, and will cause to cease the kingdom of the house of Israel." Verse 6: " For I will no more have mercy upon the house of Israel, that I should in any wise pardon them." Verse 9: " For ye are not My people, and I will not be your God." But still, though cast off, divorced, disowned by God, and separated from Judah, the House of Israel was at some future time to be known to the world as God's own people. Verse 10: " Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered; and it shall come to pass that in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not My people, it shall be said unto them, Ye are the sons of the living God." Now these people to whom this prophecy applies were not of the House of Judah, as Hosea has distinctly shown in verse 7. Further, we read that after the House of Israel are to be called the sons of the living God, they are again to unite with the House of Judah. Verse 11: " Then shall the children of Judah and the children of Israel be gathered together, and appoint themselves one head." Now Paul, in referring to those who were called to be vessels of mercy, mentioned the two peoples, Jews and Gentiles, and by quoting from Hosea as he did, we find that by the word Gentiles Paul was referring to the divorced Israelites of the House of Israel.

In the matter of presenting a case for judgment, Christ said, " But if he hear thee not, take with thee one or two more, that at the mouth of two witnesses or three every word may be established." (Matt. xviii, 16, R.V.) Working on this principle, Paul proceeds to call another witness. This time it is Isaiah. Paul's quotation from Isaiah is " If the number of the children of Israel be as the sand of the sea, it is the remnant that shall be saved." (Rom. ix, 27-29.) Turning now to Isaiah x, 5-23, we read of the Lord's intended use of Assyria as " the rod of Mine anger, and the staff in whose hands is My indignation " as the agent for the chastisement of the House of Israel. A review of the actual historical passages of Scripture relating to this punishment shows that the Assyrian Empire was the agent only in carrying the remnant of the House of Israel into captivity, for when later the Assyrians attempted to capture Jerusalem, their mighty army was destroyed in a night by an angel of God. (2 Kings xix, 35.) So we see here also, that in calling Isaiah as a witness, Paul was calling one whose testimony showed that he was referring to the House of Israel and not to the House of Judah. Consequently, if his evidence is to be used in connection with the calling of the vessels of honour, then it must refer to those called from the nations or Gentiles, as it could not refer to the Jews. This witness bears evidence also that these Gentiles were Israelites of the ten-tribed kingdom.

Having presented the evidence of two witnesses, Paul now resumes his argument (ix, 30-33), and states that these people as Israel (i.e., before the disruption of their kingdom) following the law did not become righteous, because they sought righteousness through works, neither as Gentiles (i.e., after the downfall of their kingdom) did they obtain righteousness, because they did not have knowledge of God nor of His saving grace, and so they had not the righteousness imputed unto those who have faith in God.

Continuing in chapter x, Paul shows " that they have a zeal for God, but not according to knowledge." For being ignorant of God's righteousness, and seeking to establish their own, they did not subject themselves to the righteousness of God. (Verses 2, 3.) Further, Paul shows that they were ignorant of the fact that " Christ is the end of the law to every one that believeth " (verse 4), for he asks the question (verses 14, 15): " How shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? " Then Paul asks again: " Did they (the Gentiles) not hear? " And in the next verse he asks also, " Did Israel not know? " Plainly he is speaking of one and the same people, so that it is again evident that the Gentiles to whom Paul refers are the non-Jewish heathen Israelites.

Following on in chapter xi, Paul asks, " Did God cast off his people? " Immediately he answers, " God forbid." Did God repudiate the Israelites? Certainly not. And he cites himself as an example. He was an Israelite of the tribe of Benjamin, therefore of the House of Israel (though the tribe of Benjamin had been left with the House of Judah till Christ came). But though belonging to the House of Israel he was not repudiated. He had, in fact, been chosen as an Apostle to the Gentiles (Israel nations). So he personally knows that God has not cast off His people. Also he has shown by Hosea that these people have not been permanently divorced or repudiated.

But now he brings a third witness to show that these Gentiles are Israelites. He calls Elijah, and Elijah was another prophet sent directly to the House of Israel. He refers to Ahab's persecution of Elijah, to the prophet's plaint to God that he only was left of all God's followers, and to God's reply that He still had 7,000 followers that had been true to Him. He is here referring to an event that is absolutely non-Jewish, i.e., to the great scene on Mount Carmel, when Elijah stood alone for God against Ahab and the hundreds of priests of Baal, when God so wonderfully demonstrated His power and majesty. Thus Paul compares the Baal-worshipping Israel of Ahab's time with the Gentile Israel of his own day, and thus he indicates by a third witness that they are one and the same people.

Then proceeding with his argument (xi, 4-8), Paul shows that as God had a remnant of 7,000 true believers left in Elijah's time, even so a remnant of Israel of his own time should be saved according to grace. And this remnant was now the elect, not the elect by race merely, but also the elect by grace. But "the rest," i.e., the balance of the racial elect, both Jews and Israelites of the kingdom, did not attain to this election by grace. Why? They had the spirit of slumber; they were hardened or blinded. Ch. xi, 8: "God gave them a spirit of stupor, eyes that they should not see, and ears that they should not hear, unto this very day." Paul states that this stuporous condition lasted right down to his own times. Now this statement of Paul's is a quotation from Isaiah. The original is Isaiah xxix. 9-14: "Tarry ye and wonder; take your pleasure and be blind; they are drunken, but not with wine; they stagger, but not with strong drink. For the Lord hath poured out upon you the spirit of deep sleep, and hath closed your eyes, the prophets; and your heads, the seers, hath he covered. And all vision is become unto you as the words of a book that is sealed, which men deliver to one that is learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee; and he saith, I cannot, for it is sealed: and the book is delivered unto him that is not learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee; and he saith, I am not learned.

"And the Lord said, Forasmuch as this people draw nigh unto me, and with their mouth and with their lips do honour me, but have removed their heart far from me, and their fear of me is a commandment of men which hath been taught them; therefore, I will proceed to do a marvellous work among this people, even a marvellous work and a wonder; and the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid."

So now we see why they had a spirit of stupor. It was because they did not worship God in spirit and in truth. As we study this passage, the message seems to fit the conditions of our modern times as well as it did the times of Isaiah and of Paul.

But who were these people that had a spirit of stupor in Paul's time? They are "the rest" as opposed to "the remnant." They were those that were hardened according to the prophecy of Isaiah, both Jews and Israelites of the Ten Tribes, who did not accept Jesus as their Messiah. But now Paul brings out more detail. He quotes from Psalm lxix, 22, 23. On turning to this song of David, we find that it is a Psalm prophetic of the Coming Messiah, speaking especially of His zeal, His humiliation, and His adversaries. Paul's quotation is a direct reference to the enemies of the Messiah. In Rom. xi, 9, 10, the quotation is:—

This prophecy applies to our time as well as to Paul's time. Passing by its application to our own time, we see that in Christ's time it was applicable to the Jews, in that He was a stumbling block unto them, and so their eyes were blinded that they could not see. Paul then asks, "Did they stumble that they might fall?" and answers his own question, "God forbid: but by their fall salvation is come to the Gentiles" (Israel nations). Now we know that the Jews stumbled at the acceptance of Jesus as their Messiah. But the Israelites did not so stumble, for they being then Gentile peoples were not there with the Jews and had no knowledge of Him. Few of them even heard of Christ until after His Resurrection. So then "the rest" that were hardened, and stuporous, and blind, and deaf, were the part of the Israelitish nation that rejected Jesus, chiefly the Jews. Following this rejection of Jesus and His Gospel, His Apostles carried the message of salvation to the rest of Israel, that is, to the nations or Gentiles descended from the House of Israel, and so the loss of the Jews became the riches of the nations (Gentiles—nations), and by this stumbling of the Jews the Gospel was preached to the individuals of the Gentile nations descended from the Ten Tribes, nations who had been nationally redeemed by the death of Jesus.

Thus was Paul, being, as he said, "an apostle of Gentiles" (xi, 13), really an Apostle sent to the nations of the Ten Tribes of Israel to bring to them the Gospel of Christ, even as some 600 years previously the prophet Ezekiel had been sent to bring them back to the worship of God.

Then a little further on in his argument, Paul makes it clear to the saints in Rome and to the readers of his Epistle that this condition of affairs, though a stumbling block to those whose eyes were blinded, was not to be a mystery to them through ignorance. He says (xi, 25-27), "For I would not, brethren, have you ignorant of this mystery, lest ye be wise in your own conceits, that a hardening in part hath befallen Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in; and so all Israel shall be saved; even as it is written,

> There shall come out of Zion the Deliverer; He shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob; and this is my covenant unto them, when I shall take away their sins."

A hardening in part hath befallen Israel. Here we see that the whole nation is referred to, so that doubtless multitudes are hardened in the House of Israel as well as in the House of Judah. As Isaiah said: "This people draw nigh unto me, and with their mouth and with their lips do honour me, but hath removed their heart far from me." How true this is at the present time! For as we look around the English-speaking world, it is plain that multitudes of our British peoples—Ephraim-Israel—have not yet accepted Christ as their Saviour, and so have not yet participated in the election by grace; while hosts of those who are now among the elect by grace, as well as by race, have not had their eyes opened to see that Jesus their Saviour is also Jesus their King or Messiah, and so have not seen that He needs their true allegiance and service for the extension of His Kingdom in preparation for His imminent return. This hardening or blindness is, however, to be relieved. And when it is relieved all Israel shall be saved, and there will be an acknowledgment of Christ, both by the Gentile Israelites and by the Jews, as in a flood of repentance. When shall this time be? The condition of time is expressed by the adverb until, and that introduces the condition of measure which must be completed in order that this relief of blindness may take place. The condition is that the fulness of the Gentiles be come in.

Referring back now to our study of words, we find that this expression is more properly rendered fulness of the nations be come in. Of what nations should we expect this fulness? Obviously, from Paul's argument, it must be a fulness of Gentile Israel nations. Are there any such at the present day? Yes. All the nations descended from the Ten-Tribed Kingdom are such nations. But all such nations cannot be included. Only those Gentile Israel nations who have accepted Christ can be included. Is there any further limitation? Who can say? But if we turn back to the Old Testament to the only other place in which this expression is used in the Bible, we find that " the multitude (fulness) of nations " mentioned in Gen. xlviii, 19, refers only to those nations descended from Ephraim. As the Holy Spirit uses this expression only twice in all the Scriptures, and as He definitely uses it on the first occasion in connection with the descendants of Ephraim, and as He is (speaking reverently) always consistent in His use of terms, it must be concluded that this term in Rom. xi, 25—the fulness of the Gentiles—is intended by the Holy Spirit to indicate the nations descended from Ephraim.

But this condition states that the period of blindness is to last till the fulness of the Gentiles be come in. As fulness indicates allness, wholeness or completeness, then the time or period of blindness or hardening is to be relieved when this fulness or completeness is accomplished. Now, of what does this fulness consist? Let us study the modern Ephraim nations for this quality or condition of fulness. Accepting the belief of all Anglo-Israel students that England is Ephraim, then let us look for the fulness of the English nations.

THE ALL-AMERICAN CONVENTION.

BY OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.

THE first All-American Convention was held at Detroit for three days, May 6th, 7th, 8th. Mr. Howard B. Rand, LL.B., of Haverhill, Mass., the Convention Secretary, is to be congratulated upon the unqualified success which accompanied the Convention from the very first meeting to the last. Many friends were absent through illness and other causes. Bishop Allen, who is in his 84th year, fully intended to be present, but was prevented by sickness at the last moment. Dr. Lincoln McConnell, Dr. Fowler Ham and Mr. Herbert Garrison, Secretary-General of the B.-I.-W.F., London, were also unable to attend. They sent messages of greeting to the assembly. The delegation was otherwise very representative, some coming from distant parts such as California and Florida. There were also many guests from over the Canadian border, especially from Toronto. Among those present were the Rev. Pascoe Goard, newly arrived from London, England. His great knowledge, wide experience, and wise counsel proved of incalculable value. He was indeed a tower of strength. We were greatly honoured by the presence of Chancellor Du Bois, of Chicago, who addressed the assembly on the closing day of the Convention, presenting our Truth with that legal thoroughness of which he is a great master. Rev. Joseph Gay, A.T.S., who is on a visit from England, was also present and gave several soul-stirring and thought-provoking messages. Canon Collins, of the Canadian Episcopal Church, gave an address on the Wednesday evening. Conferences were held each morning, and some important resolutions were unanimously passed, bringing into being the Anglo-Saxon-World Federation of America. Dr. Stephens, of New York City, was unanimously elected Chairman of the Convention, and not a little of the success of this history-making Convention is due to his genial, but firm Chairmanship.

The big Nazarene Tabernacle is truly a friendly place, a true spiritual home. The beloved Pastor of this flourishing Church, Dr. Howard W. Jerrett, is a thorough-going Anglo-Israelite. He and his good people gave us a true Anglo-Saxon welcome, and contributed, in a large measure, to the spiritual atmosphere which pervaded the assembly from beginning to end.

The good news of the Gospel of the Kingdom rang out with no uncertain sound. We have often heard Mr. Goard, but we never remember hearing him to better advantage. His truly sympathetic audience drew the best out of him. His masterly grasp of the Scriptures, and more especially the prophetic Scriptures, lighting up these troublesome days in which we live, giving to them a meaning luminous and convincing, made a profound impression upon his hearers, whose thoughts were carried, even to the point of amazement, as he traversed the ages, making the messages of the old-time prophets applicable to our day and generation.

The most striking thing in the messages of Mr. Gay was his two expositions of the Gospel of St. Matthew, which he characterized as the Gospel of the King. These were given at the afternoon sessions on the Wednesday and Thursday. He opened up a new field of enquiry by showing how this Gospel is planned on the Pentateuch. He said some very striking things and threw considerable new light upon St. Matthew's Gospel. He pointed out that while the Pentateuch dealt with the Kingdom, St. Matthew dealt with the King of the Kingdom.

And now what shall we say concerning the effect of this our first Convention? It will register the commencement in our beloved country of that which is calculated to usher in for our people a brighter and more glorious day. Men of all ranks, classes and nationalities among us are seeking a solution of our national difficulties, and for those international problems which are baffling the wisest of our statesmen. Are our national difficulties surmountable? Are the international problems solvable? Yes! in the light of Anglo-Israel teaching; by the Bible as we interpret it. This we most firmly believe, and in thus believing we are confident that this first Anglo-Saxon-Israel Convention, held at Detroit, in the Year of Grace 1930, will be the effectual beginning of a Movement which will bless our people more than anything else. Latimer said to Ridley, as they stood fastened to the stake in the square at Oxford, and as the torch-bearers were lighting the faggots which in their turn lighted up their mortal bodies before reducing them to ashes, " Be of good cheer master Ridley, for we are lighting a candle in England which cannot be extinguished." Though we cannot, thank God we would not if we could, claim the same intense martyr setting, yet we can, we sincerely believe, take those words unto ourselves and say, " Be of good cheer brothers, for, by the grace of God, and by the power of His most blessed Spirit, we have this day kindled a light, or rather re-kindled it, for as Wycliffe was to the Reformation a morning star, so some, such as Wilson, Hine, Totten, Poole, Wild, Streator, Odlum, Goard, Allen and others have been to us in this great Truth ; we have re-kindled a light which shall not be put out."

We would urge all to pass on the inspiration of these meetings to all in their districts with whom they may come into contact. Publish the good news of the Kingdom in season and out of season. See to it that THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, our great weekly organ, together with our special monthly Bulletin, gets into every home and every public library. Keep in close touch with our most worthy General Secretary, Mr. Howard B. Rand, LL.B., at 110, Merrimack Street, Haverhill, Mass. Get from him our books and pamphlets, and see to it that they are used to the fullest possible extent. We would offer a suggestion to any Branch or group of believers, that they should send a free copy of some of our standard works to the ministers and clergy of their town or city. This has been done in England with very marked results, so that not a few of our ministers and clergy have been won for the Truth. It would be a good thing if a general fund could be created for this purpose. We understand that such a fund exists at the Headquarters of the British-Israel-World Federation, 6, Buckingham Gate, London, S.W.1, England. A good example is always worth following. Let us follow this one. The voice and the pen must go together where possible. But the pen can reach where the voice cannot. This is the day of propaganda. Much of it is mischievous propaganda. Ours is the truth in Christ Jesus our Lord, establishing the Bible as the Word of God written. Let us proclaim it far and wide.

"TARSHISH."

WHILE spending an enjoyable holiday in Cornwall, I became interested in the tiny streams guided by wooden troughs to altitudes sufficient to give impetus to the speed of the water, and carry the sludge along, depositing the heavier metallic substance, viz., tin, at the bottom. While visiting these streams I thought of a book, published 64 years ago, by P. H. Gosse, F.R.S., who describes how Phœnician rovers carried the white metal, scarcely less precious than silver, across the Bay of Biscay, through the Pillars of Hercules, and up the Mediterranean, till it might be seen spread out in the market-place of Tyre and the merchants in front of the stalls calling out, "Bedel from Tarshish ! Bedel ! Pure Bedel ! Bright Bedel ! Buy, buy ! "

The appendix to the book, entitled "Land and Sea," gives the following information regarding the identity of Tarshish :—

1. Tarshish was situated to the westward of Asia.

(b) Because in Psalm xlviii, the ships of Tarshish are represented as threatening the coast of Palestine.

(c) Because in Psalm lxxii, 10, Tarshish is associated with the isles—the Hebrew expression for the maritime West.

(d) Because in Isa. xxiii, merchants are represented passing over the sea, from Zidon, and from "the isle," i.e., New Tyre to Tarshish.

(e) Because in Ezek. xxvii, 12, 25, "merchants of Tarshish" and "ships of Tarshish" are represented as crowding to the markets of Tyre.

(f) Because Jonah (i, 3) found a ship at Joppa going to Tarshish.

2. Tarshish was a maritime, not an inland country, as shown by passages above cited.

3. It was a place of maritime celebrity, at least as early as the time of David and Solomon.—Psalm lxxii.

4. It was a noted resort of the Tyrian traders.

5. It produced silver.—Jer. x, 9 ; Ezek. xxvii, 12.

6. It produced iron.—Ezek. xxvii, 12.

7. It produced tin.—Ibid.

8. It produced lead.—Ibid.

9. Tarshish continues to exist to the end of this dispensation.—Psalm xlviii ; Isa. xi, 16 ; Psalm lxxii, 10. All of which refer to the introduction or the course of the millennium.

10. Tarshish is a maritime power to the end. Psalm xlviii ; Isa. xi.

11. The ships of Tarshish will be the chief medium for conveying the people of Israel "from far" to their own land, for millennial blessings (Isa. lx, 9), where note when Tarshish is the first of "the isles," or maritime countries.

12. Tarshish is an eminently mercantile people at the end.—Ezek. xxxviii, 12.

13. Tarshish is a warlike people at the end.—Ibid. In this invasion of the land of Israel by Gog, the Prince of Rosh, the "young lions" of Tarshish, as well as its merchants, remonstrate against the invasion, though they do not take arms against it. This indicates a commanding power.

An objection may occur against propositions from 1 Kings x, 22 ; 2 Chron. lx, 21, where the navy of Solomon is represented bringing from Tarshish gold and silver, ivory, and apes and peacocks. These are products of Africa or Southern Asia, rather than of Europe. If we could be quite certain that "peacocks" is the right rendering of "Tukim," it would fix this voyage to Oriental Asia ; and the same conclusion would be confirmed if we could certainly identify their fleet with that of Solomon and Hiram, which (1 Kings x, 11, 12) sailed from the Red Sea to Ophir. In 2 Chron. xx, 36, ships are represented as built at Ezion-geber, in the Red Sea, for a voyage to Tarshish ; but in the parallel passage (1 Kings xxii, 48) these ships are called ships of Tarshish, intended "to go to Ophir."

The evidence in favour of a Western Tarshish is far too strong to be set aside by these passages, allowing them the full weight of an opposing character, of which they are capable. At the utmost one could only admit two Tarshishes, one Oriental, the other Occidental, and some have adopted this hypothesis. But it seems far more probable that, owing to the celebrity of this proper Western Tarshish, the word came to be used indefinitely for any remote country beyond sea ; and that the Hebrews used the expressions "a voyage to Tarshish," or "ships of Tarshish," equivalent to "a voyage to foreign parts," or "ships that go foreign."

Commentators have generally been content to fix on Tartessus, a city said to have been early founded by the Phœnicians, in the south of Spain. There is much doubt about the actual position of this city. According to Herodotus IV, 152, it was outside the Straits of Gibraltar, but all agree that it had ceased to exist before the Christian era. This fact alone is fatal to the identification of Tarshish with Tartessus (probably this Phœnician colony was named after the original Tarshish).

Whatever points of agreement there may have been, Tartessus entirely fails to meet the requirements of propositions 9-13. Tartessus has long disappeared; and even if we were to extend the identification to the region which once bore that city, we should fare no better.

Spain has neither maritime nor mercantile eminence; her ships are not likely to be the chief agency used in the transport of returning Israel; nor does she possess any "young lions" likely to remonstrate with an invading despot.

Britain meets every requirement without a single valid objection.

1. Britain is west of Asia, peopled by Shem's descendants.
2. Is a maritime country.
3. Was a place of maritime celebrity in very early ages.
4. The Phœnicians resorted to Cornwall (Strabo III, 175) in very remote ages; and specially for the metals, tin and lead. Mines yet exist in Cornwall, and mountains of slag, the evidence of works which date far beyond the historic era.
5. Cornwall produces silver.
6. It produces iron.
7. It produces tin. This was the great staple commodity of Cornwall from time immemorial, and gave the region the name of "Cassiterides" or the "tin coast."
8. It produces lead.
9. Britain still exists.
10. Is now a maritime Power.
11. Has been much honoured of God, and is more likely than any other Power to be the medium for conveying Israel to Palestine. (Isa. lx, 9.) Britain is at the head of the maritime nations.
12. Britain is eminently a nation of merchants.
13. Her well-known bravery and love of liberty will suit the remonstrance of Ezek. xxxviii, 13, while her pacific policy may account for her interference being limited to remonstrance.

Many collateral passages might be enumerated which indicate Britain as destined to carry out God's purposes of mercy to the end. Enough, however, has been advanced to warrant the confident conclusion that the Tarshish of Scripture is Great Britain.

THE TIME OF JACOB'S TROUBLE.

By L. Furze Morrish (Melbourne).

It is often affirmed that the Time of Tribulation, as Mr. Davidson terms that period measured through the "low passages" of the Pyramid, closely resembles the time of Jacob's early struggles in the land of Haran. The war-period and the era of industrial depression, each of seven years' duration, are commonly known to correspond with the seven years spent by Jacob for Leah, and the succeeding seven years for Rachel. So much is recognized. The years which follow, however, are so much in keeping with the general analogy, and so remarkably related with that era which Anglo-Saxondom now seems to have entered, that a short survey might be of interest.

Let us briefly consider Jacob's years of struggle before reaching peace, contentment and prosperity, and see their repetition in modern times.

Jacob's Time of Hardship.	Modern Israel's Time of Trial.
Seven years' service for Leah. Jacob under an impression he was working for his heart's desire. Disillusionment.	1914–1921. British people under the impression they were fighting the "war to end war." Peace expected to usher in a Utopia. Disillusionment.
Seven more years for Rachel. Jacob finds himself still poor, and still forced to work six more years for his "goods."	1921–1928. Industrial Depression. Britain's struggles to end strikes and evolve reasonable working conditions. A realization in 1928 that the country is suffering.
Six more years' service for wealth. Jacob still anxious regarding Esau's attitude.	1928–1934 (?) Six years' apparent struggle by Britain for her existence as a leading nation. A period of moral testing.
Appearance of Esau, and Jacob's remarkable spiritual awakening, when his name is changed to Israel — Soldiers with God.	Some great shock (?) and a great national spiritual awakening, when the nation learns its identity with Israel, God's Instrument in the earth.

Regarding this latter period of trial, we have now entered it but do not know what form the trial will take. The industrial depression period may pass, but everything is not well with the Empire. It seems that difficulties are to be met with in connection with the Gold Standard for one thing, and with Disarmament for another. Mr. Davidson advances the suggestion that Britain will have to assume her rightful position as spiritual leader of the nations, and divest herself of her role of Mistress of the Sea. (This spiritual leadership must, of course, be closely related to the near Return of Israel's King, when the earthly monarchy gives way to the Theocracy). There is a distinct connection between the former being, as it were, a replica, on a lower plane, of the latter. To those who think solely in terms of this material plane, the foregoing may sound like nonsense, yet those who are spiritually minded must see the connection in Baptism, and the meaning of the Hebrew Moses, Messiah, Mashah.

The much-to-be-desired spiritual leadership must be waiting for us to reach up and grasp it as our rightful possession from the time of Abraham. It therefore remains to be seen what steps we shall be forced to take in that direction, for receive it eventually we must, either voluntarily or through some sort of national suffering.

Let us therefore try to think in terms of spirit-life and we shall see that a definite time of trial lies before us, in which we may, as a nation, have to watch and pray, and in which each one of us, man, woman and child that is old enough to discriminate between right and wrong, will be forced to throw in our lot with one of two parties, those for or those against God.

It will assuredly not be a matter of one religious denomination against another; one political party against another; one social class against another; but of bodies of individuals throwing in their lot with Israel—God, or Babylon—Satan, the latter cunningly disguised to look like the former.

In Australia we have already had a taste of this, firstly in the question of the abolition of compulsory military training, and recently in the Victorian Referendum on the Liquor Question, being taken this day, March 29th, 1930. On this latter issue—Abolition of licence to sell alcoholic liquor in open bar, the whole of a normally easy-going community has been in a ferment for some weeks. At the time of writing the result of the vote is not known, and is by no means a foregone conclusion. The propagandists of the open liquor-bar have used every known plea to save the liquor trade, from appeals to protect Australian liberty even to pleas of Humanity, to protect the wealth of the liquor trade, until reasonable men and women are in a genuine quandary how to vote aright. Such an issue, albeit far removed in distance from the centre of the Empire, surely shows the trend of events: it seems as if further direct issues will soon be placed before the Anglo-Saxon people as a whole.

How it will end we known not, but we may form an opinion that out of this time of perplexity, and after the Nation has "wrestled with the angel," will come the great spiritual awakening that will make Anglo-Saxondon realize its identity with Israel, and its great destiny as and Constitutional Government to Humanity, ready for the time when Israel's King returns to take the Throne.

Those who accept Anglo-Saxon identity with Israel seem to come automatically under the blessing poured on Solomon (instinctively to discriminate between "good and bad," however disguised the latter may be. See 1 Kings iii, 9, and Gen. iii, 5). Should we not therefore be prepared to throw our weight into the right scale when the time comes for a straightout decision to be made?

"ISRAELITES AND JEWS."

BY J. N. RAYZOR.

MANY students fail to differentiate between Hebrews and Jews, and Israelites and Jews. The Hebrews were antecedent to the Jews, but were not Jews. Even so were the Israelites the progenitors of the Jews, but they were not Jews. Abraham is often referred to as a Jew, but he lived hundreds of years before their day. He is also referred to as an Israelite although he had been in his grave many years by the time Jacob's name was changed to Israel.

Jacob had twelve sons who became the heads of the Twelve Tribes of Israel. In Egypt, when Israel was old and blind, he blessed Joseph's two Egypto-Israelitish sons—Ephraim and Manasseh—adopting them as his sons. He gave to them their father's place in tribal relation. The Levites were given the Priesthood, but were not allowed a share in the division of the lands.

Moses, at Sinai, organized the Tribes into a kingdom—a theocratic kingdom, and gave them the Common Law. All Anglo-Saxon governments are based upon the Common Law.

Israel, after the Judges, was given a king. Under Rehoboam the nation was divided into dual kingdoms—Judah, a two-tribed nation, and Israel a ten-tribed nation. The two kingdoms ran parallel for some years until Israel was overthrown by Shalmaneser, and its people carried into Assyrian captivity. Judah later was captured by Nebuchadnezzar, and the majority of the people carried into Babylonish captivity. Not until their captivity were they, as a nation, first called Jews.

God could not have made His covenants with the Jews, as He promulgated them centuries before there were any Jews.

The Anglo-Saxons are the descendants of Ten-Tribed Israel. The Jews to-day are small in number compared to the hosts of the Anglo-Saxons.

To-day, Great Britain, her Dominions and Provinces, and the United States have a total population of more than six hundred and fifty millions, while the Jewish population has changed but little. Are these racial variations an indication of God's dereliction? Nay, His Word is inviolable. He is fulfilling His promises through the Ten-Tribed Israel-Anglo-Saxon nations!

Jesus forewarned the Jews that the kingdom should be taken from them and given to a nation "bringing forth the fruits thereof." If the successor to the Jew is to be identified by fruitage, the Anglo-Saxons fill the measure. Great Britain and the United States have the marks, they are Common Law nations. Again, they are the only nations that have laws compelling the observance of the Sabbath—a living memorial of the creative work of God.

Great Britain and the United States furnish about 90 per cent. of the Christian Missionaries, and a larger per cent. of the money spent in world evangelization.

Ten-Tribed Israel, as a nation, has lived apart from the Jews, but the best friends the Jew ever had are his two big Anglo-Saxon brothers.

Jesus repeatedly referred to the "Lost Sheep of the House of Israel." The Jews were never lost. There is not a period in the history of the Jew that cannot be accounted for.

The Apostle James knew the Jews were not the same as Israel, as he addressed his Epistle to "The Twelve Tribes which were scattered abroad."

The Jews—not the Israelites—crucified Jesus. A few years after the Crucifixion Titus destroyed Jerusalem.

Since the destruction of the Temple the Jews have had neither king nor kingdom.

Lord Allenby entered Jerusalem in 1917, as the head of an Anglo-Saxon army, without the shedding of one drop of blood in the City.

Let the Jew join his Anglo-Saxon brothers in proclaiming the Sonship and Messiahship of Jesus, that the covenants may be speedily fulfilled and all Israel be united in one great national salvation.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

OUR Manifesto to which reference was made in our last issue appeared in the Daily Telegraph on May 21st and in the Daily Express on May 23rd, also in the Spectator and the British Weekly last week. This week and next week it is to be in other papers. We are informed that it is the subject of discussion everywhere. Extraordinary interest has been aroused. The Secretary-General has had a stream of Pressmen calling upon him ever since the Manifesto first appeared in The Times on May 15th; sometimes four and five waiting until a confrere got his interview over, then taking their turn; all showed great interest and considered the matter to be of National importance and offered help.

The remarkable response to our CALL proves conclusively that thinking men and women are eager to know more about the remedy for the PRESENT MENACE which this Federation seeks to make widely known.

A clergyman writes: "I realize the dreadful peril of atheism and communism in the world to-day, and I pray that your noble efforts may be blessed with success."

W. H. says: "This is the finest call to the Anglo-Saxon peoples I have ever seen in the public Press."

The Secretary of a Wesley Guild writes: "I have been much impressed and cheered by reading the Manifesto. Please send me THE NATIONAL MESSAGE and your catalogue of books. I want to bring the matter forcibly before our young people."

W. C. S., Glasgow, writes: "Re your notable pronouncement; I am keenly interested and should esteem it a great favour if you could send me further particulars and any literature available, when I could be of service in the interests of your appeal in the Name of the Master."

M. J. writes: "Many are full of thankfulness about it all. Please make it known everywhere." This we are doing as far as our means will allow. We are reaching millions, we want to reach ALL throughout Anglo-Saxondom. All correspondents are being sent letters signed by the Secretary-General, accompanied by literature; Headquarters staff are pressed to the limit, dealing with it all. Thousands of reprints from The Times are available and requests for them are coming in. Our Bristol Branch has asked for 500 copies. Winnipeg cabled for a supply. Amid the chorus of approbation we hear of one Ecclesiastic who preached against the Manifesto; his sermon, as reported, showed a deplorable lack of knowledge; two British-Israelites made effective replies. Out of our vast correspondence we have only one unfriendly letter, and that one was so violent and impertinent it could only be explained by the character of the Society to which the writer is known to belong.

Our readers are reminded that The Times reprints can be supplied at 1s. per dozen, plus postage.

Helpful addresses were given last week by Mr. John Leech, K.C., and the Rev E. A. Couldrey at Headquarters. Meetings next week as usual. All invited.

Empire Day celebration at Headquarters on Saturday last was considered a great success. A record number took tea. Mr. Garrison's illustrated lecture on India attracted a crowded audience; several could only listen on the landings, and some had to turn away from lack of room. The President, Major Knowles, presided over a very enthusiastic and appreciative assembly.

Some points from the lecture shall be published later. The beautiful pictures were greatly admired.

A long record of missionary service among the Indian tribes of British Columbia has come to an end with the death of Mrs. C. M. Tate, wife of Rev. C. M. Tate, pioneer Church worker and British-Israelite, at the ripe age of eighty-eight years.

Digitized by Google

Mrs. Tate was born in London in 1842, and went to Canada seventy-four years ago, taking up teaching among the Indians. While engaged in this work at the Indian School, Port Simpson, Miss Knott, as she then was, became the bride of Mr. Tate, in the presence of a large gathering of Indians, who were practically the only witnesses attending. Last year Mr. and Mrs. Tate celebrated the golden anniversary of their wedding. Many hardships were encountered during the early years of their work in British Columbia. The splendid schools at Coqualeetza are the outcome of the pioneer school started by them when they were in charge of the work among the Chilliwack Indians, where it was found necessary by them to take some sixteen Indian children into their home. Later, a grant for the school was made, and a building to accommodate forty pupils was erected, followed by a larger school, accommodating one hundred students and a staff of ten teachers, which has since been replaced by a building for twice as many pupils and staff.

Mr. and Mrs. Tate organized missions at Port Renfrew and Clayoquot also, then went to Duncan, and in 1910 went to Victoria, working among the Indians at Esquimalt, East and West Saanich, and Patricia Bay.

Mrs. Tate was an ardent British-Israelite, and attended the local meetings up to a few days before her death.

Will those readers and friends in and around Finchley who are willing to support a local Study Circle please send in their names and addresses to Headquarters, that the local Secretary may be advised, and have help in arranging weekly meetings?

Watford Branch report that Mr. W. Sleeman's visit there on the 12th inst. was much appreciated, when he gave a well-reasoned address on "Some Identifications of British-Israel."

The Rev. Commander Roberts writes :—"I have received very encouraging news from Rhodesia: A patient in hospital for whom prayers were asked has recovered so far and is progressing favourably. Prayers are asked for her husband, who has had a breakdown. They say they believe the Almighty answers the supplications of the Circle. I ask for prayers for a friend of mine who has a malignant growth."

Mr. H. L. Gibbs writes :—

"On May 6th my mother gently entered into rest. Wife of a Baptist Minister at West Carling, just over seven years ago, later at Faringdon, Berks, and now at Rock Ferry, Birkenhead. For many years she has been a reader of the BANNER, and has rejoiced in the knowledge of British-Israel Truth and quietly disseminated it. All her life a semi-invalid she lived and fed upon the Scriptures and every day she had her quiet time, when, if one crept to the door, one could hear her in audible prayer. A few days before her death her mind wandered and what she had lived on came to the surface. I personally heard her say, 'The Rev. Pascoe Goard is wonderful. In his Documents of Daniel he takes you into the very Presence of God.' Among other Psalms she quoted 'Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord? or who shall stand in His holy place? He that hath clean hands, and a pure heart; who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully.' (Psalm xxiv, 3-4.) She was also heard to say 'Jesus, Lover of my soul, oh receive my soul at last.' The last thing she attempted to read was a copy of the NATIONAL MESSAGE. We laid her to rest in Westminster Cemetery, Hanwell, thinking of that day now so imminent when the graves shall be opened at the Word of the Son of God. Do any doubt? Let them pause and consider. The whole world by the aid of loud-speakers can hear the voice of one man. Where now is the sceptic of 50 years ago?

"We as a family beg to thank the Rev. Pascoe Goard for his articles 'Across the River' in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE. They wonderfully fit our case."

Mrs. E. A. writes :—

"What this Truth has been to me in sickness, sorrow and death of my beloved husband I cannot say. It kept me sane."

Being a paper read before the Oakham, Rutland, Clerical Association.

BY

REV. COL. A. D. SETON of Mounie, B.Sc.

". . . If the coming of Jesus be only a 'spiritual' coming into the hearts of men, as is so often contended to-day, then there is neither rhyme nor reason in this Davidic Covenant, nor any sense in the prayer, 'Thy Kingdom Come, on Earth.'"

BRITISH-ISRAEL, THE PLAIN ARGUMENT

BY

P. W. THOMPSON, M.A.

". . . In time, place and circumstance the prophecies of Ephraim and the history of Britain dovetail, and that exactly. In the light of what has been said, no Englishman of sane judgment dare live as though he had not the responsibilities of an Israelite resting upon him. He must not merely 'fear God and work righteousness,' but he must do so with a special zeal."

This pamphlet puts the case in a nutshell and is most logical and convincing.

A NEW BOOK BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

JUST OFF THE PRESS.

THE KINGDOM LAW OF DIVINE HEALING

"One of the significant things in the present period of the religious life of our people is the frequency of Divine Healing. . . .

The wide range of cases, including nervous disorders, organic diseases, fractured bones, imperfect organs of sight and hearing, and so on, show that there can be no resting in the theory of psychotherapeutics. There is more than the organising of the mental forces of the patient. There is more than mental and physical assistance which may be rendered by others. There is the evidence of Divine interference on behalf of the patient.

It is interesting to note that these cases come in connection with the deep interest in sacred things, personal approach to God, and, in most cases, united prayer to God.

It is also interesting to note that physical healing is invariably, as far as we have been able to observe and to know, a part of a religious awakening which embraces the whole of the personality of the subject of Divine Healing. Those who are indifferent to God and to Holy Things are not healed. Those who are living in rebellion against God are not healed. Those who are 'living after the flesh,' as the Apostle Paul puts it, are not subjects for Divine Healing. . . .

So widespread is the present manifestation of Divine activity, so universal is the manifestation of the power, that we are assured the Lord is trying to break into the consciousness of His people, and to draw them nearer to Himself than has hitherto been the case in our experience during the lifetime of those now living."

CIVIC AND RURAL LIFE ACROSS THE RIVER.—VII.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

THE things which we have written show the close interaction of the great company who have crossed the River with the nations of the earth. It is to be noted that there is no hint of intercommunication with the living. The innumerable multitude appear before the throne. But there is the assurance that those who have passed over are interested to the highest pitch in matters pertaining to the earth. They see the Lord instituting this and that line of activity on behalf of the earth and earthly things, and the angels among them take up and carry out the assigned duties. But the living must "Play their own game" according to the rules laid down from the beginning. They have the guidance of Moses and the Prophets. They have further the guidance of Jesus and the Apostles. If they will open their hearts they have the guidance of the Holy Ghost. There is no need that the spirits of the departed should also enter the field for their guidance. It would be in the highest degree dangerous because of the impossibility of identifying the spirits, and, even if they were identified, of knowing their relationship to God and His Kingdom in the land which is over on the other shore. Demons can easily simulate the departed, and there is no doubt but that the world is surrounded by countless hosts of these.

It will be the glorious task of the Lord, His Saints and the Holy Angels to purify the surroundings of the earth from the presence of such beings.

Let us work out our salvation, and fulfil our appointed task under the eyes of the great cloud of witnesses who look down upon us from above; and then in due time we shall appear with Him and with them in glory.

We shall now take up the thought of things which are as yet in the future both for heaven and for the earth. It is that of the

NEW HEAVEN AND THE NEW EARTH.

This is stated to be a part of the Divine plan for the astronomical system to which we belong, and for the people who dwell in the earth and in the heaven of the redeemed.

The new heaven and the new earth cannot be understood by the ordinary experiences of mankind such as get into the daily Press of the nations.

The new heaven and the new earth may be explained perhaps by the astronomer, who sees strange sights and knows of strange things going on in the heavens. He is acquainted with the fact that the state of the worlds in the heavens is not as stable as one would imagine. There are worlds which have died, as perhaps our own satellite, the moon, has done. There are worlds whose fires are waning and whose light is failing. There are worlds which are black; whose fires are extinguished, and which are dead.

There are worlds which are being born, and others in all stages of development. It is no new thing in the Universe that the Lord should make a new world. And as there are new worlds being arranged and rearranged, it is no new thing that there should be a new heaven such as belongs to our own solar system or to others like it; the heaven being the area swept and controlled by the gravity of the central sun.

Now what the new earth will be as to density, size, movement, relationship to the central sun of the system, and so on, the Bible tells us nothing.

Therefore what the people of the Israel of God will be who will inhabit that world set in that heaven we do not know.

Digitized by Google

It will be a holy world. It will be a deathless world. It may be of a character which is not based upon the atom and the molecule which go to the making of the world we occupy and the Universe to which it belongs.

It may be that the new heavens and the new earth will be of a nature entirely different from all the material which we have been able to perceive in the present world through the senses with which we are endowed.

There are elements or properties in the atmosphere of this world which we cannot perceive. Other orders of life perceive such qualities. For instance, the dog goes far in this direction when he moves and acts by what we call scent. Some breeds of dogs live in this world. Some breeds of dogs are very feebly supplied with the apparatus which enables them to enjoy this world.

Other forms of life manifestly know and use elements which the dog does not know. What it is we do not know. But they act in such a way that we are able to tell that they are responding to forces of which we can make no guess. At all events that is the way with the man in the street. If there should be a scientist who, working in his laboratory, has been able to discover these hidden forces and to find out what they are, we do not know it.

A very ordinary illustration of this is the electric fluid. We know that it can be produced by motion. We know that being produced it can be controlled to a degree, and applied to the service of mankind, but we do not know what it is.

Perhaps the new heaven and the new earth will be of such a nature, so rarefied, so free from grossness and density as not to be recognizable by our present gross personalities. We suspect that such will be the case. Beings which would inhabit such a new heaven and new earth would be invisible to the gross earth dwellers such as we now are. The blessed would be so ethereal as to be able to ride upon the clouds and to go at will through what seems to us to be dense and impenetrable barriers. Thus our Lord passed at will in and out of a closed room without the opening or the closing of a door.

Shall we say then that the world of which we speak is a spiritual world? It is not necessary that we should do so. Electricity is not a spiritual entity. It is a very cognate fact in the universe. Sound waves are not spiritual. They are invisible, except within the range of our hearing they are inaudible; but that they are very real let the nearest receiving set give audible evidence.

The new heaven and the new earth will be such as suit the requirements of the glorified bodies of the saints of the Lord.

It will be a world in which Angels will find it convenient to be and perhaps to dwell. It will be such a new heaven and new earth as the glorified spirits of men will find a rallying-place to assemble and use as their headquarters in the universe of God.

"Behold, I make a new heaven and a new earth."

"And I saw a new heaven and a new earth."

"As the new heavens and the new earth which I will make shall remain before me, saith the Lord, so shall your seed and your name remain." (Isa. lxvi.)

Thus we see that the Lord has in hand a new heaven and a new earth for our especial dwelling-place in the next stage of the life which He is so abundantly giving us.

THE HOLY CITY.

In the new heaven and the new earth is the new City of God, the heavenly Jerusalem.

Let it be remarked that there is still a new heaven over the new earth. The Holy City, New Jerusalem, comes down from God OUT OF HEAVEN.

So, then, there will be civic life in the new heaven and the new earth.

This is, it seems, an altogether later development. The new heaven, the new earth and the new city have not as yet been revealed, even in the heaven where the throne of God is now established, as set forth in the fourth chapter of Revelation.

During all the period of the present dispensation the hosts of heaven seem to be making their rallying-centre around the throne of God, as set out in the fourth and fifth chapters of Revelation.

This seems to us to be a long period. But there, where a day is as a thousand years and a thousand years as a day, it is such a convocation as we should attend for a day or at the outside for two days.

Then comes the millennial reign of our Lord and the general wind-up of the seven thousand years of Adamic history. Then comes the new heaven and the new earth. All those who have gone before throughout all the ages of the past are equally waiting for the new heaven and the new earth and for the New Jerusalem. We shall all start at once in the new heaven and the new earth and not in succession as generations, as in the present world.

Now with this in mind, we will turn to that wonderful description of the City and of the Life to be lived in it.

THE NEW JERUSALEM.

"And there came unto me one of the seven angels which had the seven vials full of the seven last plagues, and talked with me, saying, Come hither, I will shew thee the bride, the Lamb's wife.

And he carried me away in the spirit to a great and high mountain, and shewed me that great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God.

Having the glory of God: and her light was like unto a stone most precious, even like a jasper stone, clear as crystal;

And had a wall great and high, and had twelve gates, and at the gates twelve angels, and names written thereon, which are the names of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel:

On the east three gates; on the north three gates; on the south three gates; and on the west three gates.

And the wall of the city had twelve foundations, and in them the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb.

And he that talked with me had a golden reed to measure the city, and the gates thereof, and the wall thereof.

And the city lieth foursquare, and the length is as large as the breadth: and he measured the city with the reed, twelve thousand furlongs. The length and the breadth and the height of it are equal.

And he measured the wall thereof, an hundred and forty and four cubits, according to the measure of a man, that is, of the angel.

Digitized by Google

And the building of the wall of it was of jasper: and the city was pure gold, like unto clear glass.

And the foundations of the wall of the city were garnished with all manner of precious stones. The first foundation was jasper; the second, sapphire; the third, a chalcedony; the fourth, an emerald;

The fifth, sardonyx; the sixth, sardius; the seventh, chrysolyte; the eighth, beryl; the ninth, a topaz; the tenth, a chrysoprasus; the eleventh, a jacinth; the twelfth, an amethyst.

And the twelve gates were twelve pearls; every several gate was of one pearl: and the street of the city was pure gold, as it were transparent glass.

And I saw no temple therein: for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it.

And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it: for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof.

And the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it: and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honour into it.

And the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day: for there shall be no night there.

And they shall bring the glory and honour of the nations into it.

And there shall in no wise enter into it any thing that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie: but they which are written in the Lamb's book of life."—Rev. xxi, 9-27.

Like the ideal of life here, there will not only be the life of the City, but also of the garden, or the great sweeping stretches of the country. This, of course, is to illustrate heavenly things by earthly things; the probability is that the things are very different. Perhaps there is little similarity in them. But the impressions and the pleasure of the one will be the magnified impressions and experiences of the other, so we will read of the beauties of country or garden life as we see it portrayed for us there:—

"And he shewed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb.

In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations.

And there shall be no more curse: but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it; and his servants shall serve him:

And they shall see his face; and his name shall be in their foreheads.

And there shall be no night there; and they need no candle, neither light of the sun; for the Lord God giveth them light: and they shall reign for ever and ever.

And he said unto me, These sayings are faithful and true: and the Lord God of the holy prophets sent his angel to shew unto his servants the things which must shortly be done.

Behold, I come quickly: blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book.

And I John saw these things, and heard them. And when I had heard and seen, I fell down to worship before the feet of the angel which shewed me these things.

Then saith he unto me, See thou do it not: for I am thy fellowservant, and of thy brethren the prophets, and of them which keep the sayings of this book: worship God."—Rev. xxii, 1-9.

The two chapters which we have now read in part are the outstanding passages which, passing beyond the great White Throne and the General Judgment of the last day, sweep on into the Eternal condition of things.

Surely it is not possible for human language to portray a more perfect world or a more desirable life. We may not stay to go into the details.

Now what we have been trying to do in this series of articles is to climb the heights of what Bunyan called "The Delectable Mountains," from which the dim outlines of the Holy City and the eternal glory may be seen, and from thence to take a foreview of life to the Riverside, to the crossing of the River, and to the other shore. This we have done in the light of Divine inspiration, right through to the Coming again of the Lord, accompanied by all the Saints and the Angel hosts. We have traversed with Him, and them, the thousand years of the millennial reign, and on still into the endless vistas of the Eternal condition.

With such practical knowledge of all these things, what does it matter that we are compelled to suffer some hardship perchance here, some physical suffering, some hard usage from the world, and from the people and things of the world. The world and its fashions are passing. We are also bidding the world and its affairs good-bye after a while, never to return until the order has changed for the best in the Personal reign of our Lord. Soon, very soon, even though it should be a lifetime away—soon, we say, very soon even then, we shall have risen above the clouds and darkness, above the world and its fashions and censures, to the realms of light and truth and life and love.

We are living in that endless life now. We are marching over the preliminary stages. We shall be called to go higher when the Lord wills it to be so. And there is before us a field of usefulness for evermore.

Now here are the closing words of the great Book, which are like glory clouds of the sunset sky. It lightens up the ending of the day, and fills our minds with light and peace.

"And he saith unto me, Seal not the sayings of the prophecy of this book: for the time is at hand.

He that is unjust, let him be unjust still: and he which is filthy, let him be filthy still: and he that is righteous, let him be righteous still: and he that is holy, let him be holy still.

And, behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be.

I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last.

Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city.

For without are dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie.

I Jesus have sent mine angel to testify unto you these things in the churches. I am the root and the offspring of David, and the bright and morning star.

And the Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely.

For I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book:

And if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book.

He which testifieth these things saith, Surely I come quickly. Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus.

The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen."—Rev. xxii, 10-21.

PREDESTINATION.—VII.

"Give place to me that I may dwell."

BY THE REV. R. G. F. WADDINGTON, M.A.

THERE are so many references in our daily newspapers to the Empire that it seems incredible that there should be any educated person who is unaware of the extraordinary complexity of the Empire and of its limitless possibilities and resources. And yet there are many such people who simply have no conception of the wonder of their citizenship.

The dignity and glory of the Empire are to some folk empty words; to others they are words that rouse feelings of bitterness; there are some who are friends of every country but their own.

There are those whose souls are so dead that love of Homeland stirs no fire in their breasts, but if patriotism does not lead a man to make himself conversant with the main facts of his privileged heritage, he is lifted up but little from the level of those who belittle the privileges.

Where is the excuse for the ignorance of the educated man? I know of none.

Even on the day that I write there is an article in the Morning Post on "Canada's Riches." "Canada in 1930 will surprise the world." That is a remark of Mr. Mackenzie King, Canadian Prime Minister. The article gives the latest figures available concerning Canada's progress, showing conclusively that Canada has passed almost unnoticed from the first stage of her development, the agricultural, to the second stage, the industrial, and that Canadian manufactured goods are being sold in 113 of the world's markets.

Canada, which has always been regarded solely as an agricultural country, has to-day 22,963 manufacturing establishments, whose capital investment in plant, buildings and equipment amount to more than £800,000,000.

"What do they know of England, who only England know?" Does not this one reference to Canada give point to this saying? And what is true of Canada is just as true of Australia, and yet how little people here at home grasp either the fact or the significance of the fact.

For extraordinary as the development of Canada and Australia has been, it is only a fraction of the development that is possible. We believe that we can find in the Bible the whole explanation of the marvel of our Empire.

Here is our little Britain, the centre of a vast world-wide Empire, possessing and developing the very desolate heritages that were promised by the God of the Bible to Israel, thrusting out, further and further afield, not with the sword, but with the plough; seeking, not to hold native races in vassaldom, but to educate and uplift them. We are doing a work that the Church cannot do; that the Church was never called upon to do; that the Church, by reason of its manifold divisions, would be unable to do, even if it were so bidden; a work that the Jews have never dreamed of doing, nor ever attempted. Yet opponents, who insist upon belief in the God of the Bible, the God of Truth, tell us that our case is one of "superficial and flimsy plausibilities."

But if God has given to us our opportunities and our responsibilities, if God has brought us into contact with so many races of the world, if God has given to us that most precious treasure of an open Bible, if God has called us to preach the Gospel of Salvation to all the world, if God has made us Protestant, then there is no alternative whatever to the conclusion that we are Israel.

How can one explain the opposition of Bible students who believe the Bible message? How can they tell us that we do wrong to expect a national fulfilment of promises made to a nation, and confirmed again and again to that nation? And how will they explain the fact that Britain is enjoying that national fulfilment? If these great heritages now in our possession, now being developed by us, now growing strong as members of our Commonwealth, are to become the possession of the Jews, and to be developed by the Jews, on the entirely erroneous supposition that the Jews are "All Israel," then not only must this Empire be broken up and destroyed, but all the work already done in many lands will have to be undone, in order that the Jews may start afresh on the "desolate" places of earth. But if this is really going to take place—AND IT MUST TAKE PLACE IF THE JEWS ARE ALL ISRAEL, AND IF THE BIBLE MEANS WHAT IT SAYS concerning Israel—then the reign of peace and righteousness on earth, which is a Bible ideal, and which is the hope and faith of every Bible lover, is of necessity removed to so far distant a date in the future that it becomes an altogether unpractical, and therefore valueless ideal.

If, as all Bible lovers believe, we are living in "the Last Days," and may expect the Return of the Lord very soon, then it does become absolutely impossible for the Jews to obtain possession of, and develop the desolate heritages. So our belief, that because Britain is enjoying the privileges promised to Israel, she is therefore Israel, is a belief that harmonizes with New Testament promises of the Second Advent, and makes that Advent a practical possibility for our own day. But if Britain be not Israel, Britain must surrender her position to Israel, and that removes the hope of the Advent from accomplishment in our time.

Much has been written upon the subject of the "Seven Times." Let it suffice that students of prophecy like Dr. Guinness, Dr. C. I. Schofield, Mr. A. E. Ware, are agreed that the expression means a period of 2,520 years.

Digitized by Google

Mr. A. E. Ware, in his book, "The Hour of Translation,"* gives a chronological chart recording events relating to the Jews during two periods, each of nineteen years, one at the commencement and the other at the close of the Captivity, showing also how the two periods, separated by "Seven Times," synchronize in all important features.

It is a chart dealing with historic facts that cannot possibly be gainsaid. Jerusalem fell into the hands of Nebuchadnezzar in the year 603 B.C. That is a fact. It is also a fact that Jerusalem was taken by the British in A.D. 1917, and no matter how much one may quibble and talk about flimsy plausibilities, there is no denying that there is this period of 2,520 years between the two events.

Mr. A. E. Ware deals only with events in the history of Judah, and he uses these events, and the argument from the "Seven Times," in order to convince his readers that the Second Advent is nigh at hand. And he is typical of students of prophecy who are convinced that they have got hold of a most definite Bible "pointer" to the Advent. But if it is legitimate to apply the "Seven Times" to events in Jewish history, is it not also legitimate to apply it to events in Israelitish history?

Apply it then to events in Israel's history.

Did not Israel's period of captivity run from 740 B.C. to 721 B.C.? During those years Israel suffered defeat after defeat at the hands of Assyria, and at the last was taken away out of the land. If you add on the period of the "Seven Times," you are brought undeniably to the period A.D. 1780 to A.D. 1800.

What is the outstanding feature of those years? Is it not the rise, to greatness and Empire, of Britain?

What was Britain before that period? Just a small island kingdom. The first attempt at Empire building had failed, with the secession of the American colonies. But during that period, which corresponds exactly to the downfall period of Israel, Britain began to grow with remarkable power, and she has gone on growing ever since.

Let us consider the growth of Empire.

It was during this revival period, in which Israel was to experience the reversal of her captivity troubles, that Britain obtained her hold on Canada, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand. These lands can all of them be described as "desolate heritages."

In the case of Canada, we defeated the French to gain our hold, but that hold was concerned only with the eastern province. The whole of the great prairie lands of the centre, and the whole of the western provinces, have been obtained by colonization, and vast tracts of land have been reclaimed from wastefulness to prosperity.

The early colonists, seeing that the land was good arable land, which only wanted clearing and ploughing, set to work. But the seed they used was the kind that they were used to growing in Britain, which does not ripen till well into September. Canada, however, often experiences frost in early September. Consequently, there was a climatic barrier which had to be overcome. Now I venture to suggest that the people of any other race but the British would have given up the attempt to grow corn. They would have said that though the soil might be excellent the climatic difficulty was insuperable.

But the British farmer-colonists set to work to produce a grain that would ripen earlier. They succeeded in producing a grain that will ripen within one hundred days of the sowing. And by that means they have pushed the wheat-growing limit of Canada one hundred and fifty miles nearer the North Pole.

What a glory is that of Canada now, with its vast farms, its fisheries, its fruit farms, its forests, its minerals, and even its factories. Is it possible for men to pass it by as a small matter? Is it possible for Bible lovers to see no parallel here with Israel's prophesied destiny?

What now of Australia?

I think of the tour of our Royal Wanderer, Prince David, heir to this glorious Imperial Throne, when he went over that mighty ocean called the Pacific.

Many years ago, in the days when Spain, Holland and Britain vied one with another in seafaring enterprises, Francis Drake had looked out over the expanse of that ocean, and had prayed God for life and opportunity to sail once over it. But in his most inspired moments, did he ever dream that one day the heir to the Throne he loved and served so well should sail over that ocean to visit two New Englands, set in those Southern seas? He was master of a small wooden vessel of but fifty tons' burden. What if he had possessed the prophetic eye to see our Prince travelling in an ironclad of 22,000 tons! How intensely he would have been thrilled if he had foreseen that same Prince passing from place to place, over some 40,000 miles of ocean, never touching a port that was not British, nor visiting a people that did not acknowledge allegiance to the British Throne. Australia, one of the New Englands visited, is very young in the history of nations, yet how great it has become in the short fourteen decades of our possession.

We were not the discoverers of Australia, nor the first to consider its opportunities. France had the first opportunity, nearly three hundred years before we seized the chance. But France saw only a barren land, sparsely inhabited by a race of people that was dying out, and France argued that if the natives could not make anything of the country, neither could a foreigner. So France left Australia to its fate. Spain next turned attention to the land, and Philip II of Spain fitted out an expedition to conquer it.

The then Pope of Rome, true to his high and mighty claim to all the earth, gave Australia to Philip and his successors for a perpetual possession. But the expedition returned with the report that the country was useless, it was only a backwater in civilization's progress.

Holland and Portugal also prospected the land, but their verdict was no more favourable than that of their forerunners.

Is it impious or flimsily plausible to suggest that God had overruled in the matter, and had prevented any of these countries forming a favourable opinion, because Australia was one of the "desolate heritages" reserved for Israel's development?

Certain it is that Britain has succeeded in making this barren, unwanted land, considered sterile by four European nations, into a splendid daughter nation of a splendid Empire. It has a rapidly increasing overseas trade of over £290,000,000 a year. It has minerals in abundance, sheep farms and fruit farms, forty large cities, and its own colonies in New Guinea and the Pacific Islands.

Yet the tale is not half told of the Empire that God, the God of Abraham, the God of Israel, the God of the Covenant, has placed in our charge.

THE FULNESS OF THE GENTILES IN THE BRITISH COMMONWEALTH OF NATIONS.--III.

By Dr. Wadge (Winnipeg).

THE BRITISH EMPIRE AND THE DOMINIONS.

One cannot take time to enter on the long and brilliant story of the development of the British Empire. The expansion of our race was predicted by Jacob (Gen. xlix, 22). "Joseph is a fruitful bough, a fruitful bough by a fountain; his branches run over the wall." This expansion commenced long before the kingdoms of Great Britain and the adjacent islands were consolidated into the one mighty kingdom which was destined to become the "mother of nations." The first acquisition occurred in the days of good Queen Bess when, in 1583, Sir Humphrey Gilbert took formal possession of Newfoundland, though this island had been claimed for Henry VII, in 1497, by John Cabot.

It is significant that this acquisition was early in the era of gradual restoration to Divine favour and blessing. In 1552, when the English House of Commons adopted the Forty-Two Articles of Religion of the National Church, it thus completed the final breaking away of England from the Church of Rome both temporally and spiritually. Also Parliament made manifest that the English people as a nation had returned to the pure worship of God without any contamination of graven images in their churches. Thus they were living up to the injunction given to their forefathers when the nation was first organized. "Ye shall make you no idols, neither shall ye rear ye up a graven image, or a pillar, neither shall ye place any figured stone in your land, to bow down unto it: for I am the Lord your God. Ye shall keep my Sabbaths, and reverence my sanctuary: I am the Lord."—Lev. xxvi, 1, 2.

This return to God occurred at the end of the cycle of the Seven Times, 2,520 years, after Jeroboam had led their forefathers of Ephraim to idolatry by setting up the worship of the golden calves. About 250 years after this idolatry had been officially established, these people of the Ten Tribes had been carried away into captivity and had become Gentilised. Now in England, 2,520 years later, they are returning nationally to their allegiance to God; and 250 years after the Parliament in the days of Edward VI made this absolute break with the Papacy, this country had completed the last stage of the long cycle of punishment which was meted out to them on account of their truancy to God and departure from Him, and were again restored to Divine favour.

But, be it noted, the first expansion of this people into a mighty nation did not take place till after it had returned to its allegiance to the great Lord God Who had chosen them to be a "holy nation," that they might be His servants in extending the knowledge of His love and His blessings to all the other nations, blessings of a material and temporal nature as well as of a spiritual nature.

Since Sir Humphrey Gilbert took possession of Newfoundland to the present day is only a matter of 347 years, yet nothing more spectacular has taken place in all the long ages of world history than the growth of this people of England. In Queen Elizabeth's time their territory was less than 60,000 sq. miles, and the population was about four to five million people. In this short space of 350 years this people has grown and expanded and traversed the world until now it controls an area of nearly 14,000,000 sq. miles, or approximately one quarter of the land surface of the world. The population in this tremendous area now owning allegiance to our gracious Sovereign, King George V, is over 445,000,000 people, of which the white population, which is mainly Anglo-Saxon in race, numbers over 66,000,000 people.

This vast aggregation of territory has been acquired by occupation, settlement, cession, purchase, treaty, or conquest. Besides this huge possession there are other large areas under the protection of the British Government, as for example, Egypt. Further, by mandate, the Allied Powers of the Great War allocated to the care and protection of Great Britain, South Africa, Australia and New Zealand such territories as Palestine, Mesopotamia, West Africa, part of New Guinea, and Western Samoa. These mandates were later approved by the League of Nations, and these territories are still under the protection and supervision of the Mother Country and the Dominions mentioned.

Throughout this vast area there is almost every form of known government, from the most primitive to the most complex, from the most autocratic form of an Indian Maharajah to the most democratic form of a great self-governing Dominion, yet all owe allegiance to the one Sovereign common to all, King George V, a prince in direct descent of the House of David. No people or nation that has come under the control of the British Crown, nor over which has been unfurled to the wide winds of the heavens the folds of the glorious Union Jack, but has been inestimably blessed by its connection with the British race, and especially so in the justice and protection secured to individuals of both high and low estate of all these races under the sway of the Common Law of England.

But this is not all. This small people gave birth to another nation, the United States of America, which has also grown in a marvellous manner, till it now controls nearly 4,000,000 sq. miles of land, and a population of about 120,000,000 people. Humanly speaking, the cleavage causing the separation of these two nations took place on account of inequality as between the home people and the colonists, as the latter considered they were being taxed without representation in the government. Though this was true, yet the people of the Homeland were not much better off at the time, for the government of the day was really in the control of King George III rather than in the control of the people themselves.

From that time on, however, Great Britain was more considerate of the opinions and requests of the colonists. In 1763 she acquired Canada from the French by conquest

Digitized by Google

In 1774, by the Quebec Act, she permitted the newly-conquered French inhabitants of Canada to retain the French civil law, to which they had always been accustomed, along with the English criminal law. During and following the American Revolution a large number of United Empire loyalists emigrated to Acadia and Canada. French civil law was not satisfactory to them. So in 1791, by the Constitutional Act, Canada was divided into two provinces, each with their own legislature, with a partial measure of representative government. Later on there was dissatisfaction in both provinces over the autocratic methods of government as developed by these legislatures and the executive councils, the latter of which were appointed by the governors. The government had really fallen into the hands of a "Family Compact," and all sorts of abuses became prevalent. This led to rebellions in both Upper and Lower Canada in 1837.

The British Government then selected Lord Durham to be Governor-in-Chief over all the Canadian provinces. As a result of his investigation of the situation he recommended to the Home Government that responsible government be established in Canada. This was accomplished by the Union Act of 1840, by which Upper and Lower Canada were again united and given a form of government in which the Executive Council was responsible to an elective legislative assembly.

Lord Durham had also looked forward to the time when all the colonies of British North America should be united under one central government. Policies and events gradually developed towards this end, so that the Confederation of the Canadian colonies became an accomplished fact by the passing of the British North America Act by the British Parliament in 1867. Thus the Dominion of Canada came into existence, and the second great daughter of Great Britain was born, to become the first in the family as the eldest daughter had cut herself off from the family communion. Its description as a Dominion was taken from Psalm lxxii, 8: "He shall have dominion from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth," that is, dominion from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from the River St. Lawrence to the Arctic Pole.

During the development of responsible government in Canada, the development of self-government was also taking place in other parts of the Empire. Newfoundland was granted a constitution and representative government in 1832, and responsible government in 1855. In 1779 Cook annexed New Zealand, but this was repudiated by the British Government. However, in 1840, this land, by treaty with the leading tribes, was added to the British possessions, and settlements of English colonists were made. In 1852 self-government was granted, and in 1856 a full parliamentary system and responsible ministry were inaugurated. It was named a Dominion in 1907. In Australia the various colonies remained separate and independent of each other for about three decades longer than in Canada, but in 1900 they also united to form a Dominion under the title of "The Commonwealth of Australia." Then, after the Boer War, the British Government exhibited one of the most remarkably courageous and magnanimous acts of all the ages in granting almost immediately representative and responsible government to the conquered Boers in the Transvaal and the Orange River Colony. And shortly after this, in 1909, these provinces united with Natal and Cape Colony to form the "Union of South Africa." Thus was developed within the British Empire the group of self-governing nations now known as "The British Commonwealth of Nations."

But this is not all. So far, this is only the story of their development as nations. We have seen that they obtained responsible government, though their Parliamentary Acts and Laws were still subject to disallowance by the British Government. For several decades at the end of the nineteenth and the beginning of the twentieth century the Dominions were chiefly occupied in developing their resources and thoroughly establishing their own forms of self-government. But they were steadily reaching out and claiming further responsibilities of nationhood. So now we come to the extremely interesting story of their efforts in securing, by constitutional means, a position of equal status with the Mother Country.

THE DAYS OF THE END.

THE SIGNIFICANCE OF JUNE 28TH, 1914, AS AN INDEX DATE.

BY J. BERNARD NICKLIN.

No. IV.

JUNE 28TH AND THE PYRAMID.

FOLLOWERS of the Pyramid tell us that the four outstanding dates indicated by it for these latter days are :—

Aug. 4th, 1914.
Nov. 11th, 1918.
May 29th, 1928.
Sept. 16th, 1936.

These, respectively, mark the beginning and ending of the First Low Passage, and beginning and ending of the Second Low Passage. The First Low Passage stood for the War, and the Second is understood as symbolizing the Final Tribulation, but when entered May 29th-30th, 1928, nothing spectacular happened, some wondered why. The explanation lies surely in our Saviour's own words concerning the Tribulation, "Except those days should be shortened." Although the length of this Second Passage did denote the time appointed, mercifully the days have been shortened—foreshortened. By how much? Have we any indication?

Let us look at these dates :—

From August 4th-5th, 1914—2 × 1260 days plus 2 × 1263½ days ended May 29th, 1928—the date of entrance of the Second Low Passage.

We have referred elsewhere to the number 1263½. It is given in Rev. xi as the number of the "Witnesses," and if the Pyramid, as we believe, is the Pillar of Witness at the border of the Land of Egypt, referred to by Isaiah, this number is appropriate. The bisection date—June 28th, 1921—has already been referred to as the day peace was reached in the 1921 Coal Strike.

From November 11th, 1918—7½ years (half the "Midnight Hour"), as remarked above, expired May 12th, 1926, the important day when the General Strike ended, now from this day 3 × 1260 days will run out Sept. 16th, 1936, which marks the End of the Second Low Passage, and entrance into the King's Chamber (typical of the Millennium).

September 16th, 1936, also ushers in the Feast of Trumpets that will precede the Day of Atonement, shown already as our final date :—

1914.		1918.	1919.	1921.	1926.	1928.	1936.
June 28	Aug. 4	Nov. 11	June 28	June 28	May 12	May 29–30	Sept. 16–26

←——2 × 1260——→←—2 × 1263½—→

←——7½ years——→←3 × 1260→

←——5 years——→←—— 5 × 1260 days ——→

Mr. F. M. Lawson, who has recently been studying the above connection between the Day-intervals and the Pyramid, has called attention to some further interesting points. He has noticed, for instance, that both the Pyramid passages are components of the prophetic numbers. Interpreted as usual, on the scale of a Pyramid inch to a prophetic month of 30 days (the First Passage being equivalent to 1560 days, and the Second to 3030 days) these when analysed appear as :—

While no one hitherto seems to have suspected it, these Low Passages, when closely examined, are thus seen stamped with the numbers of Daniel.

We have called attention above to the connection of 3 × 1260 days between May 12th, 1926 (the day the "Half-Hour" struck) and Sept. 16th, 1936 (the End of the Last Low Passage). Mr. Lawson has noticed another connection. On May 30th, 1930 (the day after Ascension Day), which will be two years from the entrance of the Last Passage, 1260 days run out to the "striking" of "Midnight," Nov. 10th, 1933. 2300 days run out to the End of the Passage, Sept. 16th, 1936.

Also, March 16th, 1930, the day of Intercession in the Church of England for Russia was 1335 days from Nov. 10th, 1933, while March 19th, the day of Intercession in the Roman Church, was 2 × 666 days.

This appears to invest Nov. 10th, 1933, with additional significance, and further looks as if from May 30th, 1930, a darker period will be entered.

There was a time when the writer was somewhat sceptical regarding Pyramid chronology, but that day is past. When investigators independently, and along different lines, arrive at similar results there is no room for doubt. The Day-intervals are seen now not only in agreement with the Year-Day and Midnight Hour, but with the datings of the Pyramid Low Passages, affording proof surely both as to the Divine origin of these various prophetic scales, and to their correct interpretation.

It seems to us, God has set before His Israel for these Last Days two Clocks—keeping exact time one with the other—the Bible Clock and the Pyramid Clock. Both have two main Hands—a Year Hand and a Day Hand—and as the minute hand of an ordinary timepiece affords a closer approximation of the time of day than does the hour hand, so do these Day Hands of prophecy show more exactly where we are than the Year Hands ; while both are synchronized as are the hands of a clock.

Now, the fact that the "Day" Hands of these Clocks have come into view since 1914, and that both point unmistakably to the near approach of "Midnight," there can be little doubt that we are very close to the End Crisis of all.

CONCLUSION.

We have noted the progressive sequence of Day-intervals from June 28th, 1914, and that these appear to end finally on certain significant days in 1931, 1933 and 1936. That in 1931 and 1936 these terminal dates coincide with the Latter Jewish Feasts. We have recalled that during the coming Six Years the "Times of the Gentiles" finally run out ; that a "generation" from the commencement of the War, and the "Midnight Hour" expire ; and, moreover, we have noted that the Last Low Passage co-terminates with what is apparently our final date. Associating these facts with the prophetic character of current events, can we doubt that the Great Day of God Almighty is close at hand ?

We would ask readers to weigh the evidence here submitted. We believe that God is revealing by these numbers the solemnity of the present time. We believe that He intends them as a warning to His people. While "light" is promised to the children of God, the World itself will be taken by surprise, "for as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth." The World is to be deluded by a false cry of "Peace and Safety," but this will swiftly be followed, we are told, by "sudden destruction" as travail comes upon a woman with child, and they shall not escape.

Views naturally differ as to the course and character of coming events. Our part is to watch and wait.

"The vision is yet for an appointed time, at the end it shall speak and not lie : though He tarry, wait for Him, because He will surely come, He will not tarry."

GENESIS, CHAPTER III.

THE TEMPTATION.

IN the last analysis, the temptation as given in Genesis is the only temptation possible to humanity then, down through the ages, or to-day.

Digitized by Google

Do This and Live—Do That and Die.

Adam and Eve were treated as freewill agents. They were not forced to obey. They had their choice, and they decided to disobey, as you and I have often done. You and I know that, whatever is the nature of our temptation, whether to lie, cheat, steal, or injure another, at once we are conscious that it is wrong, and we are faced with the direct question and command :—

"Is this wrong?" "Yes it is!" "Do it not." And if we do it, we know we do so as an act of rebellion, and there is no other possible sin than rebellion.

This was the sin of Adam and Eve, and it has been the one and only sin of humanity from then till now. It was fundamental then, and is basic now. As we carefully look it in the face by all the processes of logic, philosophy, metaphysics and moral ethics, we find the account given in Genesis the only account possible to-day. Hence we are faced with the honest conclusion that this historic account of rebellion is truly accurate and scientific.

The setting then was specific, as it ever is, of necessity. A man grows angry, jealous, vengeful through a period of time, and kills his neighbour. The story of his developing towards murder might be long or short, simple or complex, but in the end two things stand out before the murderer, and the reader, viz., a freewill choice and an act of rebellion.

These are the two outstanding elements of Adam's sin, and of every culpable transgression from then till now.

THE RESULT OF THE TRANSGRESSION.

"Thou shalt die" was the Divine statement. "Thou shalt not die" was the tempter's conclusion. How about this? Adam made free choice, and rebelled. He did not die in body, and he lived intellectually. Of necessity, he died morally or spiritually. He cut the line of obedience, and the relationship of father and son was cut or broken. Hence the worst form of death took place.

But the tempter said, "Thou shalt not die"; while the great Father said, "In the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt die."

God's day is as 1,000 years, and Adam died at the age of 960 years, shortly before his and God's first day passed.

Further! However, as he died to, and was estranged from, Divine life, and so Eve, it was not possible for them, in their dead state, to produce children alive wherein the parents were dead.

They could be born from their parents with physical and intellectual life, but not with spiritual life, which had been cut off and out by the rebellious act of their parents.

Listen, friend! Have you, by certain acts, cut the love-line between yourself and your wife, brother, sister, son, daughter, parents or friend? Have you? If so, then you know what love-death is. Do you not know this to your sorrow?

You are alive physically, intellectually, and may be alive spiritually, but are in the cold, chilling embrace of a murdered love. Your love life is gone, and you know the awful fact.

So with Adam, he, by choice and rebellion, killed or cut the Divine life-line holding him in sweet communing living connection with his God and Father. He so knew it that he lied. The consciousness of the awful overwhelming death terrified him so that he "ran to cover."

How realistic! How true to nature and fact then! How true now! When you and I do wrong, lie, cheat, steal, backbite, hate and carry vengeance in our hearts, do we not run to cover, and try to hide our fallen condition? Are we not ashamed? So Adam! How true to nature then and now!

As the life-line between man and God was severed by free choice and rebellion, there was no possibility of dead man bringing himself to life, and restoring the primary ideal condition of true sonship and fatherhood.

Therefore, the Father-heart of love gave the fallen son promise and hope of restoration. And this then was the basis of the promise made in the Garden. This the basis of human restoration and salvation of which we will say more in due time.

WEEK BY WEEK.

BY A. R. H.

IT is wonderful to be in LONDON—heart of the EMPIRE—on EMPIRE DAY.

This year's celebrations were more inspiring, impressive and significant than they have ever been. The crowds were larger; the fervour and enthusiasm greater.

A mighty host gathered in Hyde Park to join in and the solemn service conducted by the BISHOP of LONDON.

London's Park became an open-air CATHEDRAL. Think of it! Two hundred and fifty thousand voices raised unitedly in song and prayer. And beyond the microphones another multitude that no man could number joined in the hymns of celebration.

The festival was broadcast to the WORLD, and as the Daily Express significantly puts it: "This wonderful proof of the British Empire's pride in its past and belief in its future became a song that vibrated across the universe."

Quite true. And how appropriate that the consciousness of the wonder of the origin, mission and destiny of the BRITISH RACE should cause the people to burst into song. Are we no the People dwelling in the ISLES of the SEA. of whom it is written [1]:

"They shall lift up their voice,
They shall sing for the majesty of the LORD,
They shall cry aloud from the sea.
Wherefore glorify ye the LORD in the valleys,
Even the name of the LORD GOD of ISRAEL
In the ISLES of the SEA.
From the UTTERMOST PART of the EARTH
Have we heard songs,
Even glory to the righteous."

Ferrar Fenton's rendering of the first of these lines is characteristically penetrating: "Now they raise a sound of cheering," he writes, and then in verse 15: "The LORD with [1] See Isaiah xxiv, 14-16. Note the whole setting of this wonderful chapter. The judgment of the nations of the earth is outlined, but the world darkness is illuminated (see verses 13-15) with the joy of the triumph of Brith-ain—Land of the Covenant and centre of God's everlasting Kingdom in the earth.

Digitized by Google

splendour[2] they are honouring — In the ISLANDS of the SEA."

Well, if the British cheer " hurrah " is, as so many believe, our modern equivalent for the ancient Israel cry of " Jehovah," then our cheers are as significant as our songs.

There is an arcanum here. Even the Daily Express realizes there is something unique about the British cheer when it says : " The crowd will be led into those tremendous full-lunged cheers which are of a British crowd, and the Spirit of Empire will be acclaimed to the sound of the mighty " Hip Hip HurRAH-h-h-h ! " [3]

What is this ? The Spirit of Empire acclaimed by the cry of " Jehovah "—" Jehovah "—" Jehovah." But how natural if BRITAIN be indeed the everlasting KINGDOM-EMPIRE of Daniel ii, 44.

Certainly the cheers and songs from the UTTERMOST PART of the EARTH (i.e., the Island of Britain) on EMPIRE DAY—broadcast as they were to the ends of the earth—redounded to the honour and glory of JESUS CHRIST—the Righteous One.

In our cheering we took upon our lips the sacred name of JEHOVAH, the GOD, KING and REDEEMER of ISRAEL ; and we knew it not. Truly we are justly called " the blind people that have eyes." [4]

What a day it will be when the " eyes of them that see " [5] are no longer dim, but with the passing of national blindness, our blind eyes shall see out of obscurity and out of darkness.[6]

What a day indeed when the nation awakens from a dim vision of its origin and destiny into the conscious knowledge that we are indeed the OCEANIC EMPIRE of which it is written : " I will preserve thee, and give thee for to establish the earth, to cause to inherit the desolate heritages."

What a CHARTER of EMPIRE ! Think what it would have meant to the thousands assembled on EMPIRE DAY if they had known this whilst they sang their " Rule Britannia."

For in " Rule Britannia " we hail the birth of the OCEANIC EMPIRE—the KINGDOM concealed behind the symbolism of the PEARL, i.e., that which has come up out of the Sea.

So when we sing the words : " When BRITAIN, first, at Heaven's command, arose from out the azure main," we are not indulging in poetical fancy only. We are singing aloud the identity of BRITH-AIN, LAND of the COVENANT, with the KINGDOM of GOD.

Surely when these things become a common knowledge our vision of the past [8] will become so exalted and our prospect for the future [9] so radiant that we shall burst into filled with the spirit of the new covenant, as it is written : " Sing unto the LORD a new song, and His praise from the END of the EARTH, ye that go down to the SEA and all that is therein ; the ISLES and the inhabitants thereof. Let them give glory unto the LORD and declare His praise in the ISLANDS." [10]

And in our new-found Kingdom-consciousness with what love and joy we shall turn to the record of the CHARTER of our KING : " I the LORD have called thee in righteousness, and will hold thine hand, and will keep thee, and give thee for for a LIGHT of the Gentiles . . . ."

With the magnificent spectacle of KING and KINGDOM (the latter now fully redeemed, restored and reconciled) working together in unity we shall apprehend the wonderful truth that CHRIST and His Cause are identical.

How our blindness persists at all in the face of such overwhelming evidence is astonishing and confounding. No wonder PAUL called it a " mystery "[12] and ISAIAH " a marvellous work and a wonder."[13]

Imagine the scene in LONDON the other day. Multitudes massed in solid phalanxes, north, south, east and west, have gathered to witness the story of the EMPIRE—the tale of centuries—told in a few minutes' marching of a pageant's symbolism.

Even the ordering of events was an inspiration. (1) The PAGEANT of EMPIRE, (2) The procession of CHURCHES, (3) The Breaking of FLAGS, (4) The SERVICE ; Recessional and Blessing.

In other words, First the KINGDOM—Then the CHURCH. First that which is natural ; afterward that which is spiritual. First the Crown then the Cross. Finally, KINGDOM and CHURCH in unity.

Watch the Pageant of EMPIRE :—The Spirit of Empire has taken up a central position with her attendants and is now ready to receive the homage of the marching throng.

They file past, making obeisance and presenting offerings of fruit, flowers and merchandise before the Spirit until she stands amid all the cheers and colouring swamped by the largess of loyalty. Such were the gifts of the five hundred men and women, youths and maidens representing the DOMINIONS, COLONIES, DEPENDENCIES and four KINGDOMS of the BRITISH ISLES.

Watching this lavish display of natural wealth one naturally recalls the message given to the BRITH-ISH PEOPLE the day before they passed over Jordan to take possession of the Land of Canaan—first of the Brith-ains or Lands of the Covenant, and Land that shall shortly again become the centre of GOD'S KINGDOM-EMPIRE in the earth :—" Remember the LORD thy GOD ; for it is He that giveth thee power to get wealth, that He may ESTABLISH HIS COVENANT[14] which He sware unto thy fathers. . . ."

Even the Pageant of the Empire's wealth could not separate us from the COVENANT. How the Kingdom-vision glorifies the spiritual value and significance of material things !

Now come the Churches. The Bishop of London, the Royal Navy, Army and Air Force Chaplains ; dignitaries of the Free Churches lead the procession and are followed by a choir of two hundred men and boys wearing red, purple and black cassocks. The Banners of St. George, St. Andrew, St.

[2] It is striking that the Daily Express uses the same word, i.e., " splendour," in forecasting the great event. Thus it says : " All the splendour of the Pageant's Song will be broadcast to the World—heard in some countries at midnight and in others at dawn ! " What a commentary on Isaiah xxiv, 15-16, F.F. See also Isaiah xlii, 11 : " Cheer you men. . . . From the Hill-tops hurrah in delight."

Patrick and St. David float aloft and the procession marches to the strains of Mendelssohn's "War March of the Priests."

All the units have now taken up their positions. The glorious music of "Onward, Christian Soldiers," played by the massed bands of the Brigade of Guards, thrills the heart and mind of everyone present. "CHRIST, leads against the foe . . . "; the magic words ring out and re-echo to the furthest limits of the vast concourse. What a confession of faith! And it comes unitedly from the voices of a quarter of a million people. It is the challenge of a NATION.

A sudden hush falls on the multitude as the hymn comes to its conclusion. The silence is broken by maroons, a roll of drums and a flourish for the ceremony of the breaking of the flags of the EMPIRE over the heads of the people. Seven KINGDOM-EMPIRE Standards flutter proudly in the breeze.

And now comes that greatest of the

HYMNS OF EMPIRE,

"Land of Hope and Glory," with its prophecy of universal dominion.

The Bishop of London reads the prayers. "O GOD, forasmuch as without Thee we are not able to please Thee . . . ." An EMPIRE conscious of its dependence upon GOD supplicates for Divine guidance and blessing.

The solemn mood deepens as the masses sing "O GOD, our help in ages past." The words, "Under the shadow of Thy THRONE Thy saints have dwelt secure," serve to remind us of nearly a millennium of undisturbed peace from foreign aggression enjoyed by the people of these ISLANDS.

Then comes the Lord's Prayer, followed by a prayer to ALMIGHTY GOD "from Whom all thoughts of truth proceed to kindle in the hearts of all men the true love of peace."

It is the wish of the people of the KINGDOM that the peace and security enjoyed in these ISLANDS may become the heritage of all men the world over.

Now Stainer's Sevenfold Amen; the Recessional; the Blessing, and GOD Save the King.

No wonder the French Ambassador and other distinguished foreigners who came to see the festival went away astounded. They might well have been astonished by so marvellous a demonstration.

It was something different to celebrations of previous years. "There was no single star turn. There was no central figure on which to gaze. There was no speech. It was just just a mighty birthday."

Of course it was a People's Festival. It was "A Covenant of the People" being celebrated by the People of the Covenant. Yes, just a mighty birthday celebration of an EMPIRE destined to become mightier yet. And a forecast of that greater national Re-birth Day to come when the whole NATION shall be born of GOD in one day.[15]

Then shall the KINGDOM for which we pray have come in very deed. The "Your Kingdom must be being restored "[16] process of development will have found completion in a glorious consummation, and the stage be set for the final triumph of universal absorption, as it is written: "The kingdoms of this world are become the KINGDOM of our LORD and of His CHRIST."[17]

THE UNION OF THE TWO STICKS.

BY P. PENWARDEN.

IT is commonly believed that the Jews are the present-day representatives of the House of Judah, and that the union of the two Houses is still future. It would therefore be well for those who entertain this view to digest carefully the excellent fare provided by the Rev. Pascoe Goard in his book "The Documents of Daniel," wherein he states that the Jews were not the nation Israel restored, nor the House of Judah restored, but were a new nation set up for a definitely specified time—seventy weeks—and that such nation ended with the destruction of Jerusalem in A.D. 70. It would seem that much confusion of thought has arisen through the failure to appreciate the fact that the bulk of the House of Judah were taken into captivity by Sennacherib shortly after the deportation of the House of Israel, and that the Jews are the descendants of the portion of Judah left in Jerusalem who were subsequently removed to Babylon some 120 years later by Nebuchadnezzar during his three expeditions.

Let us turn to chapter xxxvii of Ezekiel, which contains the promise of the union of the two Houses.

The first portion deals with the resurrection of the whole House of Israel, and is followed by the promise of the reunion illustrated symbolically by the joining of the two sticks. It will be noticed that when the fellow captives of Ezekiel asked for an explanation of the illustration, he was instructed to say (v. 19): "Thus saith the Lord God: Behold, I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah, and make them one stick, and they shall be one in mine hand."

(v. 20): "And the sticks whereon thou writest shall be in thine hand before their eyes."

On the face of it, there does not seem to be much point in this action on the part of Ezekiel if the union was to be postponed for some 2,500 years at least. The Prophet then proceeds to inform them that the Children of Israel were to be taken from among the heathen whither they had gone, gathered on every side and brought into their own land, made one Nation in the land upon the Mountains of Israel with one King over them all, and they were to be no more two Nations, neither should they be divided into two Kingdoms any more at all.

The period of Ezekiel's prophetic ministry was from 595 to 574 B.C. What is clear from these verses is that the two nations who had been in captivity through the several deportations of Tiglath Pileser, Shalmaneser and Sennacherib since 710 B.C. were to be gathered together and brought into their own land and made one Nation upon the Mountains of Israel. This obviously can have no reference to the descendants of the survivors of the remnant who endured the 70 years' captivity at Babylon. As they were to be made one Nation upon the Mountains of Israel, the union must have been previously effected. It is agreed that the Davidic Throne was planted in a high Mountain and eminent in the Mountain of the height of Israel, and the reunited Nation over which the House of David would reign was to be established upon the Mountains of Israel. It is also agreed that the House of Israel has been so gathered into these Islands with the Davidic Throne reigning over them. What is not so clearly perceived is that the House of Judah must be with them. The terms of the promise contained in this chapter prohibit the exclusion of Judah, and this is confirmed by Jeremiah iii, 18: "In those days the House of Judah shall walk with the House of Israel, and they shall come together out of the land of the North to the land that I have given for an inheritance unto your fathers." Verse 12 of the same chapter tells us that the land of the North was the land wherein the House of Israel were then in captivity. If, therefore, the House of Israel escaped from the land of their captivity, then Judah must have accompanied them, or this prophecy has failed.

Moreover, look at the precise wording of Ezekiel xxxvii, 22: "And they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all." The Jews were not organized into a nation until the end of the 70 years' captivity, and they never were, are not now, and never will be a kingdom.

That the Jews are distinct from the House of Judah is clearly shown in Jeremiah xxxiii, 24:—

"Considerest thou not what this people have spoken, saying, The two families which the Lord hath chosen, He hath even cast them off? Thus they have despised my people, that they should be no more a nation before them." The Jews are referred to as "this people" on at least nine occasions in Jeremiah. Here we have the Jews represented as despising the two Houses in their captivities. Ezekiel xi, 14-16, states: "Again the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, thy brethren, the men of thy kindred, and all the House of Israel wholly, are they unto whom the inhabitants of Jerusalem have said, Get you far from the Lord; unto us is this land given in possession. Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord God; Although I have cast them far off among the heathen, and although I have scattered them among the countries, yet will I be to them as a little sanctuary in the countries where they shall come." Here we have the whole House of Israel in the dispersion as distinct from the Jews, the inhabitants of Jerusalem, who were claiming the land for themselves.

Throughout the whole of the New Testament the Jews are nowhere referred to as being Judah or the House of Judah.

In conclusion, I venture to suggest that the solution of the problem is this:—On the deposition of Zedekiah the House of Judah and the House of Israel had both ceased to exist as separate Nations and Kingdoms, and not until then, and only then, was it possible for the reunion to be effected, having regard to the strict terms of verse 22, chapter xxxvii. Is there any Scriptural evidence that such a Nation was established at this period? Yes. The Stone Kingdom (see Daniel xxi, 44 and 45), and this is the Nation referred to by Christ in Matt. xxi, 43 and 44:—

(v. 43): "Therefore say I unto you, the Kingdom of God shall be taken from you (the Jews) and given to a Nation bringing forth the fruits thereof."

(v. 44): "And whosoever shall fall on this Stone shall be broken."

The Stone Kingdom was set up on the re-establishment of the Davidic Throne at the hands of Jeremiah, and the destiny of that Kingdom has been fulfilled in the history of the British Race. At this most important epoch in the history of Israel we find the Throne re-established over a nucleus of the Nation, consisting of many of the descendants of Dan, Simeon and Zarah—the birthright holder of the twin sons of Judah—and it is submitted that it was then that the prayer of Moses for Judah to be restored to his people was answered, and how it came to pass that the Sceptre did not depart from that Tribe. Furthermore, the "battle-axe" portion of Israel was then in the place essential to the commencement of their age-long conflict with the four Gentile Empires, the descendants of such portion to ultimately become incorporated with their brethren, already established upon the Mountains of Israel.

ISRAEL IN INDIA.

By A. R. H.

"Five of you shall chase an hundred,
And an hundred of you shall put ten thousand to flight."

"Daily Express" headlines:—"300 Police oppose 30,000 Mob," brought the above quotation from Leviticus xxvi instantly to mind, for the odds referred to in the second sentence are the same as those referred to in the Press announcement, viz., 100 to 1.

The Special Correspondent writing from BOMBAY, Sunday, May 25th, tells wonderful stories of the heroism of British Police, including a remarkable account of how one mounted policeman single-handed put a whole mob to flight.

"Five European officers were injured in a raid on the salt lagoons at Wadala this morning," he writes. "The battle front extended for nearly two miles and a half, to hold which at all costs was the almost incredible task assigned to Superintendent R. B. Smith, twenty-eight European Police Officers and a meagre force of 250 Bombay City Police.

"The Police had strict orders from the Commissioner not to resort to force but merely to disperse the crowds.

"Time and again they found themselves exposed to showers of bricks and rocks, yet according to the strict letter of their instructions they were powerless to retaliate by force.

"On one occasion a mob came down to a stream separating them from a long chain of salt pyramids with the intention of wading across for a concentrated raid.

"Sergeant J. Whitmill of Birmingham with Sergeant Thomas Adams of Dagenham, Essex, and three others crossed the stream, and, without further assistance broke up the concentration in the face of furious opposition.

"Whitmill and Adams were opposed to no fewer than 500 raiders and when finally Whitmill, finding himself alone; noticed one of the raiders escaping over the stream with a bag of salt, he plunged into the muddy water, and under a hail of stones arrested him.

"One of the most critical moments of the day was saved by a Mussulman in the mounted police.

"The crowds had drifted southward, after being repulsed at Wadala, and launched a raid at a point where there were fewer police.

"The foot police were powerless to stop the onrush. The position became almost untenable, and just for one instant the European Police Officers, out of disgust at their officially imposed restraint, stood back and did nothing.

"Then out of the blue there appeared a Mussulman horseman in khaki uniform and a turban. He galloped into the mob, slashing his baton over their heads in all directions till they fell to the ground like ninepins.

"Two or three times he bored his way through the crowds till in less than five minutes they were fleeing over the fields."

Such are some of the daily trials of the British Police in maintaining the law and order of the good government and peace of Isa. ix, 7, in the Indian Empire.

Their loyalty and courage deserve universal acclamation. But cannot something definite be done to secure for these splendid servants of the Crown an even fuller protection than they now enjoy?

Under the influence of the Covenant it is written :—"One man of you shall chase a thousand; for the Lord your God, He it is that fighteth for you, as He hath promised you."*

There is a message here for the Police in India. And there is a message here for Britain. The sooner the whole nation claim the protection of the Covenant the better it will be for everyone concerned.

None realize this fact more vividly than British-Israel believers.

So to British-Israel believers I say this :—The Soul of India is in travail. Pray for India that she may be delivered. Pray also for Britain that she may awake to her power under the Covenant and that her servants in far-off lands may be endowed with that fuller supernatural influence over lawlessness as promised.

It is obvious from the examples of miraculous control just quoted that the prayers of individuals have already found fulfilment. But we want the full deliverance and power. If we can bring the whole nation to ask for power under the Covenant, our victory in the cause of law and order will be complete.

THE BRITH-ISH RACE.

THE BIBLE tells the story of a Brith-ish or Covenant Man Race—a race of men with whom GOD has made a covenant.

Only one race has ever been in covenant relationship with GOD and that race is ISRAEL.

ABRAHAM was the first Brith-ish or Covenant man. Abraham was not a Jew but a Hebrew, which is a very different thing. For whilst it is true that every Jew is a Hebrew, all Hebrews are not Jews. All Englishmen are British but all British people are not Englishmen.

ISAAC, the son of Abraham and father of the Saxon Race, was not a Jew; he was a Hebrew.

JACOB was a Hebrew, and so were his twelve sons, including even Judah himself, from whom the Jews are descended.

The Jews are a remnant of Judah, one of the tribes. And they are a very small remnant at that, called by St. Paul "the broken-off branch through unbelief."†

The Jew is a marked man "known by the shew of his countenance"‡; a change in physiognomy peculiar to him of all Israel peoples and brought about through intermarriage with the Syrian. The normal Israel physiognomy is Israel-Saxon not Jewish.

The British people alone of all the peoples of the earth in their National Church speak of the covenant made with their forefathers, ABRAHAM, ISAAC and JACOB.

ABRAHAM is indeed the father of our race and all ought to know it! We are a people temporarily blind to our identity, as indeed it was prophesied that Israel would be.

The Jews know that they are not representative of all Israel, for they still pray in their synagogue for the discovery of their brethren of the "lost" ten tribes.

ST. PAUL, speaking of the national blindness that would come upon GOD'S PEOPLE, said: "I would not brethren that ye should be ignorant of this mystery... that blindness in part is happened to ISRAEL, until the Fulness of the Gentiles be come in." §

JESUS said of the Fulness of the Gentiles: "JERUSALEM shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the Times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." ¶

JERUSALEM ceased to be trodden down of the Gentiles when LORD ALLENBY (Allah Nebi, as the Arabs called him, meaning Prophet of GOD) entered the city in 1917, and all the Biblical and secular prophecies concerning the deliverance were literally fulfilled.

Since that date the blindness has been rapidly passing away, and to-day the BRITISH-ISRAEL-WORLD FEDERATION (with its Headquarters opposite Buckingham Palace in LONDON), supported by millions of adherents throughout ANGLO-SAXONDOM, is actively engaged in bringing the British peoples to a knowledge of their identity, origin, destiny and high calling.

THE WONDER WORKER.

BY W. S.

MONEY, if rightly used, is a great power for good. The-Best Informed-With-Facts organization to-day cannot get on without money, but it does make it work—and work overtime.

We may not stay now to go into this in detail, but we can show that in proportion to the amount subscribed the B.-I.-W.F. does more work for less money than most organizations of a similar character.

What we set out to show you is what can be done by small sums. For instance, the other day somebody grumbled because they thought that one guinea a year for members and five shillings a year for associate members was too much.

Now I am quite sure they never thought the matter out. Five shillings a year—just over a penny a week. Do you think that too much to pay in return for a knowledge of British-Israel Truth?

If everyone who knows of this Truth and has not mustered up courage enough to join up as a member, and will now do so, we should be able to meet the calls for lectures and meetings and literature.

Have you joined yet? If not, do it now. Anyway, send a donation to-day to :—

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

OUR Manifesto, to which reference was made in two former issues, continues to excite great interest throughout the country. It has now appeared in The Times, Telegraph, Morning Post, Daily Express, Daily News, Daily Mail, Spectator, British Weekly, Church of England Newspaper, Methodist Recorder. Whether or not it can appear in any other papers will depend upon the amount of support our readers may offer us. Among a vast number of letters received we quote from the following:—The Rev. Dr. Mountain writes: "I was delighted to read that splendid article, 'The Present Menace and how to meet it,' and to find it in several daily papers. It is a wonderful article in every respect, and could not be improved. I can see the hand of our dear friend, Rev. Pascoe Goard, in it. The Lord must have very definitely led him. God bless it abundantly." Yes, let us all pray earnestly for the Divine blessing on this effort, that the eyes of the people may be opened, their minds convinced, their hearts touched and their wills controlled.

R. R. C. writes:—"I was grateful to our Creator for the Manifesto in The Times of May 15th. May God bless you and your Federation for it. I am not yet (consciously) a British-Israelite, but that does not mean that there may not be more truth in it than I am at present aware of. I got several copies of The Times to send to friends. I am glad you mentioned the 'fierce heat of the Wesleyan Revival of Wesley's day.' Please send me your literature."

A University Professor writes:—"I thank you for your letter and for literature sent me, all of which shall have my careful attention. I shall ask for an appointment to meet you on the occasion of my next visit to London. I link up with you in your diagnosis of the present, and prescription for the future. There is in my mind no doubt as to the existence of a present menace, or as to responsibility for meeting this resting mainly with the British Commonwealth of Nations and with the United States. I am myself watching with anxiety. . . ."

W. S. writes:—"I am wholly in accord with what you state regarding the menace of Communism, and it behoves this or any other country to deal with the enemy at the gates firmly and unflinchingly. But will they? You say 'the forces which have worked such disaster in Russia are present even in Britain at this time, and must be met and subdued.' I agree, and for the good of Britain and the world, Communism should be strangled right away. The advocates of revolution have been treated in too lenient a manner in the past, with the result they are becoming bolder and more menacing, assisted as they are by Bolshevist Russia. How is the faith of the Anglo-Saxon world going to be revived? You must be aware that there is another enemy, and that actually in the city and in the house, namely, the apostasy, and it is sweeping over the Churches. . . ." Alas! Too true, but our correspondent has not yet sufficient light to see where the remedy lies. In a very long letter he sets forth what is called "Dispensational truth," and to that alone he at present clings, BUT . . .

Several letters among our vast correspondence show agreement with us up to a point, then there is a stumbling, and old ideas and traditions bar the way to the light of B.-I. Truth. It is all to the good, however, that so many are taking the trouble to write and so give us the chance to send them our literature, No man can measure the possible results of this publicity, but it must be accompanied by prayer.

Mr. John Leech, K.C., and the Rev. Sparshott Johnson, M.A., were the speakers at Headquarters last week. Meetings next week as usual, Wednesday at 3 and Thursday at 8. The Rev. Cyril C. Dobson, M.A., gave two very interesting and informative lectures at Headquarters on May 27th, on "The Garden Tomb at Jerusalem," illustrated by lantern pictures and diagrams.

Mr. John Leech, K.C., and Mr. Herbert Garrison are to address a meeting in the Assembly Hall, Chichester, on Tuesday, June 17th, at 7.30 p.m., on "The Present Menace and how to meet it." They will answer the Dean of Chichester, who recently preached against our Manifesto in The Times.

Our readers are reminded that our Hostel, Abbots Leigh, Glastonbury, is open to B.-I. Members, Associates and their friends. Full board-residence at moderate terms. Glastonbury is a wonderfully interesting place for a rest and a holiday. The country is beautiful just now, and there are facilities for visits to historic spots around.

The Rev. R. G. F. Waddington, M.A., was the speaker for the Harrogate Branch on May 12th. His subject was "Israel in the New Testament," during which he said that the Old Testament became a vital necessity in the proof of the New. How did St Paul prove Jesus? By referring to the covenants made by God to Abraham. He also showed that the great evangelical doctrine of justification by faith began with God's covenant to Abraham.

The Bolton Branch weekly meetings are having success, and members are finding them very helpful. One went to the Secretary to say that he had been spending hours studying the Bible since the previous week's meeting, and found it so entrancing that picture shows and theatres were "dead things" to him now, and they praise God for that witness to His Word.

ONTARIO ANNUAL CONVENTION.

The Second Annual Convention of the Ontario Provincial Branch of the British-Israel Federation of Canada was held at Toronto, May 3rd to May 5th, and was in every way a splendid success.

The Annual Business Meeting of the Branch was held on May 3rd. It was well attended, and the business was handled thoroughly and expeditiously. The Secretary's report set forth a year of advance, marked especially by the splendid work of the Hamilton Branch, and the great forward step taken by the Toronto Central Branch in the purchasing of British-Israel House.

The meeting decided that steps should be taken toward the establishing of Study Circles in every town and city in the Province, and an office of Study Circle Secretary was added to the Executive, which office will be filled by Mrs. J. C. Learmonth. We would be very glad to hear from anyone in Ontario with regard to the formation of a Study Circle in the town or city in which they live. We hope to honeycomb Ontario with B.-I. Study Circles! Believers—rally to the Cause! We count on you! Remember, the Study Circle of to-day will be the Branch of to-morrow!

A splendid report was given by Mrs. R. J. Lymer, Chairman of the Propaganda Committee. This Committee has done wonderful work. Mrs. Lymer's report read, in part, as follows: "Ten thousand pieces of B.-I. literature have been sent all over the world, to all Government officials in South Africa, Australia, India, China and Japan. A 'Special Message' has been sent to every public library in Canada, to every Orange Lodge, to all Government officials in both Canada and U.S.A., to every Congressman and Senator, to public school teachers and principals, to hundreds of ministers in Canada and U.S.A., of all denominations; also to military officers, to Masons, to hundreds of nurses in different hospitals all over America, North and South, to editors of newspapers, to hundreds of professional men and women, to Sunday School teachers, and to neighbours and friends. And hundreds of these people have been followed up by personal calls. We do it all in His Dear Name."

The election of officers for the ensuing year was held and a splendid Executive elected, with Mr. S. J. Frame again unanimously elected to the Presidency.

Mr. Frame was also elected to be this Branch's delegate to the Annual Convention of the Canadian Federation in Winnipeg, and will carry with him our greetings to all Canadian Branches.

Rev. Wm. Pascoe Goard and Mr. H. Cox were elected to be our fraternal delegates to the All-American Convention in Detroit, to which they also will carry word of our good wishes and desire of co-operation.

Resolutions of loyalty to His Majesty, King George V, and to those at B.-I. Headquarters in London, were passed unanimously and will be forwarded by the Secretary.

Following the business part of the meeting, the delegates had the pleasure of hearing the Rev. Wm. Pascoe Goard, who is more helpful and inspiring than ever. His presence adds very greatly to the success of our annual meetings.

On Saturday evening Mr. Goard addressed a gathering of B.-I.s in the Lecture Hall of B.-I. House, and on Monday evening spoke in Carlton Street United Church here before what was probably the largest B.-I. meeting yet held in this city—a really splendid gathering, included in which were believers from many distant points who had come to Toronto especially to hear Mr. Goard.

Altogether our Convention, under God's guidance, was more than satisfactory, and points forward, we all feel sure, to a record year now approaching. Let us all redouble our efforts that it may be so!

R. O. LUCAS, Secretary.

THE SECOND COMING of OUR LORD

By REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

The threads of the Bible Story are many, each of them reaching one great culmination—namely, in the Second Coming of Christ.

The following threads may be indicated, all of which culminate in the Second Coming:

(1) The teaching regarding the Temple.
(2) The teaching regarding the Nation Israel.
(3) The teaching regarding the House and Throne of David.
(4) The teaching regarding the House of Judah.
(5) The teaching regarding the External Nations.
(6) The teaching regarding the Church.
(7) The teaching regarding our Lord Himself.
(8) The teaching regarding the Apostles and their Position and Office in the Regeneration.

All these, and other threads of the Bible Story, find their culmination in THE SECOND COMING OF OUR LORD.

The last utterance of our Lord, as given in the last sentences of the Book of Revelation, reiterates all preceding prophecy and testimony concerning the Second Coming: these are the solemn words:—

"Even so, come, Lord Jesus. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen."

JOEL'S PROPHETIC MESSAGE and WARNING

By HOWARD B. RAND, LL.B.

This is a remarkable book on the message of Joel which is clearly shown to be a warning to this day and generation. Not only does the author deal with the prophet's utterances, but he gives the order of related prophecies from other parts of the Bible.

Those who desire to harmonize the prophecies with the historical events of the present day and during the few remaining years of this dispensation cannot afford to be without this most interesting treatise.

The prophetic symbols used by Joel have been placed in their proper historical setting. The reader can clearly identify economic, national and international events as they come to fruition, for they are clearly outlined by this prophet's remarkable revelation. In this day of prophetical fulfilment this book should be in the hands of every teacher and student of prophecy.

A NEW BOOK BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

JUST OFF THE PRESS.

THE KINGDOM LAW OF DIVINE HEALING

"One of the significant things in the present period of the religious life of our people is the frequency of Divine Healing. . . .

The wide range of cases, including nervous disorders, organic diseases, fractured bones, imperfect organs of sight and hearing, and so on, show that there can be no resting in the theory of psychotherapeutics. There is more than the organising of the mental forces of the patient. There is more than mental and physical assistance which may be rendered by others. There is the evidence of Divine interference on behalf of the patient.

It is interesting to note that these cases come in connection with the deep interest in sacred things, personal approach to God, and, in most cases, united prayer to God.

It is also interesting to note that physical healing is invariably, as far as we have been able to observe and to know, a part of a religious awakening which embraces the whole of the personality of the subject of Divine Healing. Those who are indifferent to God and to Holy Things are not healed. Those who are living in rebellion against God are not healed. Those who are 'living after the flesh,' as the Apostle Paul puts it, are not subjects for Divine Healing. . . .

So widespread is the present manifestation of Divine activity, so universal is the manifestation of the power, that we are assured the Lord is trying to break into the consciousness of His people, and to draw them nearer to Himself than has hitherto been the case in our experience during the lifetime of those now living."

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

THE CLEANSING OF ISRAEL—THE REBIRTH OF THE ANGLO-SAXON WORLD—I.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

THE Anglo-Saxon peoples bear the reputation of standing by their undertakings. A Treaty in the eyes of Britain and America is looked upon as a sacred thing.

This was the case with the parent nation of these peoples from the beginning of their history. They were born in a Covenant as a race. That is to say, Isaac their forefather, in whom they are called as Saxons, was born contemporaneously with the racial Covenant made with Abraham, "our Forefather," as we acknowledge him to be in the national Book of Common Prayer. This Covenant we may see when we turn to the seventeenth chapter of Genesis.

Covenants have been the basis of the nation's life, as we see when we read the national Covenant made with the nation Israel.—See Leviticus xxvi and Deuteronomy v–vii.

Covenants have been the foundation of the Throne and Kingdom.—See 2 Samuel vii and Jeremiah xxxiii.

Covenants are still the foundation of our faith and the ground of our hope.—See Romans iv and v and Hebrews viii.

If the people of the Covenant—the Berith-Ish people—show in their hearts a natural reverence for their own spoken or written word, especially when passed in the way of Treaty or Covenant, how much more shall the Covenant-keeping God hold His plighted Word sacred.

There is nothing that we know of that is so sacred as the WORD of God. We read concerning Him: "Thou hast exalted thy word above all thy name." The Name of God is holy. The WORD of God, passed in covenant and promise to the House of Israel, is signed with the Name, "I AM, Jehovah," and is also sealed with the blood of our Lord Jesus Christ. That Covenant is among the most sacred things to be found in all the universe, in the eyes of God.

Among other things that the Lord has thus promised is the following as to the cleansing of Israel:—

"Moreover the word of the Lord came unto me, saying,

Son of man, when the house of Israel dwelt in their own land, they defiled it by their own way and by their doings: their way was before me as the uncleanness of a removed woman.

Wherefore I poured my fury upon them for the blood that they had shed upon the land, and for their idols wherewith they had polluted it:

And I scattered them among the heathen, and they were dispersed through the countries: according to their way and according to their doings I judged them.

And when they entered unto the heathen, whither they went, they profaned my holy name, when they said to them, These are the people of the Lord, and are gone forth out of his land.

But I had pity for mine holy name, which the house of Israel had profaned among the heathen, whither they went.

Therefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord God; I do not this for your sakes, O house of Israel, but for mine holy name's sake, which ye have profaned among the heathen, whither ye went.

And I will sanctify my great name, which was profaned among the heathen, which ye have profaned in the midst of them; and the heathen shall know that I am the Lord, saith the Lord God, when I shall be sanctified in you before their eyes.

For I will take you from among the heathen, and gather you out of all countries, and will bring you into your own land.

Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean: from all your filthiness, and from all your idols, will I cleanse you.

A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you: and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh.

And I will put my spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my judgments, and do them.

And ye shall dwell in the land that I gave to your fathers; and ye shall be my people, and I will be your God.

I will also save you from all your uncleannesses; and I will call for the corn, and will increase it, and lay no famine upon you.

And I will multiply the fruit of the tree, and the increase of the field, that ye shall receive no more reproach of famine among the heathen.

Then shall ye remember your own evil ways, and your doings that were not good, and shall lothe yourselves in your own sight for your iniquities and for your abominations.

Not for your sakes do I this, saith the Lord God, be it known unto you: be ashamed and confounded for your own ways, O house of Israel.

Thus saith the Lord God; In the day that I shall have cleansed you from all your iniquities I will also cause you to dwell in the cities, and the wastes shall be builded.

And the desolate land shall be tilled, whereas it lay desolate in the sight of all that passed by.

And they shall say, This land that was desolate is become like the garden of Eden; and the waste and desolate and ruined cities are become fenced, and are inhabited.

Then the heathen that are left round about you shall know that I the Lord build the ruined places, and plant that that was desolate: I the Lord have spoken it, and I will do it.

Thus saith the Lord God; I will yet for this be enquired of by the house of Israel, to do it for them; I will increase them with men like a flock.

As the holy flock, as the flock of Jerusalem in her solemn feasts; so shall the waste cities be filled with flocks of men: and they shall know that I am the Lord."—Ezek. xxxvi, 16-38.

Now this is a specific promise made to us by the Promise-keeping, Covenant-keeping, God of Israel.

CONTEXT.

Read the first paragraphs of this chapter and see that this promise is immediately preceded by the promise to restore the land to us as Israel, and to restore Israel to the land.

This promise remained in the archives of the nation during all the time of Israel's punishment. Then, as soon as the long, long years of Israel's punishment had passed, Israel-Britain began to interest herself in and to assert her authority concerning the administration of the Holy Land. See the diplomatic correspondence between Britain and the "Sublime Porte"—as the Turkish Capital was then called—in A.D. 1844 relative to Christians and their protection in the Turkish Empire.

Our possession of the land of Israel began in 1917, when we took over Palestine and the Holy City.

The promise immediately preceding the promise of cleansing has come to vigorous life in the days in which we are now living. This is a clear indication that the interwoven promise of cleansing for Israel has also come to life, and we may look for the immediate fulfilment of the promise.

THE CLEANSING BEGUN.

The cleansing of Israel began under Henry VIII and Elizabeth. It has been proceeding step by step. A great step in that direction was in the Wesleyan revival. Another step has been in the defence of the Prayer Book from the Romanizing wing of the English Church. But, as we all can see, the fulness of the promise has not as yet been carried out in Britain and Anglo-Saxondom.

The cleansing is, first, ETHICAL.

"From all your filthiness will I cleanse you."

In this promise, which has an astonishing reach, there is the indication of the removal of things held very dear to the hearts of the people of Israel of modern days, as they were held dear to the Israel of ancient days.

Drunkenness is clearly included in this category. However much we may value the privilege of the use of alcoholic stimulants, they must go. There is this compensation, however. All that such stimulants can give of pleasure and of temporary exhilaration, and much more than that, is at the disposal of the experimental Christian as a result of the Spiritual forces which are set up in his being. He has the exaltation; he has the release from worry and care; he has the produced joy of heart. And the great benefit of it is, that all these things are permanent and are without reaction. His exaltation is, or should be, permanent. His release from worry and care is abiding. His joy is never fading. He goes from strength to strength and from glory to glory. The Apostle Paul was well aware of this when he said, "Be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess, but be filled with the Spirit."

Social impurity of all kinds will be swept away.

The gambling spirit connected with trade, commerce and sport will give place to the pure joy of "playing the game."

The "fleshly," "sensual," "devilish" things which are to be found in the body politic must go to make place for clean sport, righteous action, vigorous, healthful, clean life. And when they are gone, and the nation is awake from the nightmare of filthiness in all directions, these unclean things, even the memory of them, will be a cause for wonder and for shame.

THE CLEANSING IS RELIGIOUS.

"From all your idols will I cleanse you."

Wherever the creature is worshipped, whether in form of service, in wafers which are certainly material flour and water; the wine, which is as certainly "this fruit of the vine" after the blessing even as before; whether in vestures worn in the sanctuary, or other objects in the outside world; from all life and worship the idols shall be swept away.

"From all your filthiness and from all your idols will I cleanse you."

THE CLEANSING IS PERSONALLY AND NATIONALLY EXPERIMENTAL.

"And I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh."

Have we a stony heart? Are we a stony-hearted people? Let us answer the question by looking with the eyes of our understanding at that which we have been accustomed to. Look at the poverty of the masses, to which the nation, including the masses themselves, have been accustomed for ages and ages, and with which they have been satisfied, notwithstanding that God's law was given "to the end that there be no poor among you."

Look at the ignorance among the people, and we taught ourselves to believe for ages that this was as the Lord would have it; and we exhorted each and every one to be content with that station in life to which it had pleased God to call us.

Bless our dear hearts, there were many in abject poverty and in the darkness of illiteracy who were sprung even from the Royal House of David, and from every other family in the race. Ignorance and poverty were never God's appointment.

Then let us look at the slums of our cities, which, thank God, are beginning to disappear, but which nevertheless are with us still. Look at the fact that we can feast on one street, while people can suffer want in the next street.

Let us look at our fostering of crime, for instance, through the traffic in alcoholics, in venal moving pictures, plays and literature; and then at our way of punishing crime.

The law of the Hebrew, "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth," was mercy indeed compared with our way of handling crime. What is that law? Is it the law of revenge? Far from it. It is the limiting statute in Israel which provides that the punishment shall never exceed the injury done. To send a young person to jail for petty theft and brand him or her as a criminal was unknown to the law of Israel, and would be unknown to ours if we were not stony-hearted. The way we brand the person who has disregarded our property rights, and tolerate those who have disregarded the vital rights of chastity and honour, stands out before men and angels as a horrible thing.

DOES THE BIBLE STAND OR FALL WHEN TESTED BY SCIENCE, HISTORY AND PHILOSOPHY?—VII.

By Professor Edward Odlum, M.A., B.Sc.

Cain—Abel.

We now come to Cain and Abel. A sad story indeed! Here we find a human contest, and murder resulting from the early struggle between obedience and disobedience. From then till now this is the cause of all anger, hate, vengeance, wars and murder. Wrong, in the human heart, rebelling against right, against goodness and justice! Cain disobeyed, was ashamed, angry; and as his brother was obedient and happy on the other hand, Cain vengefully slew him, and thereafter carried the murder mark.

Here, again, we arrive at fundamental philosophy. You and I, in spirit, have trod over the rugged and terribly sad road which Cain travelled. The Cain-Abel story is a story of our own life conditions too often repeated; and is therefore a story, in concrete form, of all human life lived along the lines of disobedience and consequent direful conditions.

Remarkable how this Genesis story, or history, rings so true and accurate to human nature all through the ages! No other book or human production can, for a moment, compare with the concise comprehensiveness and accuracy of the Genesis story.

The Human Life-Line!

We note the genealogy and chronology from Adam to Noah, and also the flood of waters which left eight persons who passed safely over that cataclysm in the Ark of Noah.

The Flood.

The earth was covered with water, as we are told in Genesis. What was the process, the time, the preceding, concurrent and subsequent complex conditions we shall not discuss, but at once give our attention to the voice of modern geology.

All geologists teach that the earth's surface has been under water, for short or long periods. At times one portion has been submerged, and at another time a different part has been engulfed. Some parts of the earth have been up and down several times, as a study of geology will show.

The chief point here is this fact:—Geologists say that the earth has been submerged. Genesis says so too. In this double testimony there is harmony.

If geology has given scientific testimony on this subject, so has Genesis. The Genesis setting is specific, the geologic setting is frequently specific. Where geology attempts details, it is outclassed in the use of words, and the language of description, by the short, terse and comprehensive account as given in Genesis.

If some careful observing geologist should say that the short Flood period was too short to produce the fossils which palæontology produces for examination, we answer and say that Genesis tells of an earlier date than that of Noah when the land was submerged.

The Rainbow Covenant.

The Lord sets forth a covenant which has been kept till the present time, and will be to the end.

"And I, behold, I establish my covenant with you, and with your seed after you, and with every living creature with you, of the fowl, of the cattle, and of every beast of the earth.

"And I will establish or maintain my covenant with you."

Herein a covenant is made with man and beast, that not again would a flood overwhelm the earth. This covenant has been maintained, and so far the promise is made good. As it is a promise for all time, for the live history of this earth, it is impossible for man at any time to say the fulfilment is complete and ended.

The Token of the Covenant.

"This is the Token of the Covenant which I make between me and you, and every living creature that is with you, for perpetual generations."

"I do set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth."

1st.—"I do set my bow in the cloud." He was referrin to a fact of nature. I do set: the constantly repeating phe nomenon, when clouds, rain and sun were and are in right relationship to the beholder.

2nd.—"I have made a covenant that not another flood will overtake the earth."

3rd.—"Here is the sign, the token, the visible remembrancer of my promise. When you see the sign, then recall my covenant of safety." The rainbow remains, and is yet a remembrancer of God's first covenant with the whole human family, made after the Flood.

It is interesting to know that the words for token of the covenant are ōth and Brith. The first is the Hebrew origin of our word oath, the second the origin of our word Brith, in British, Briton, Britain and Britannia.

Too many have attacked the Genesis story of the Rainbow covenant on the ground that the rainbow is represented as being made for the first time, when the covenant was made with Noah after the Flood.

There is not one word to indicate this teaching or meaning, but the opposite. I do set indicates a custom; just as if I should say I do eat, or walk, or write or sleep. In each case I am referring to a common act and condition, and not to an act performed now for the first time.

MICHAEL, THE SPIRITUAL RULER OF THE EMPIRE.

By HENRY PROCTOR, F.R.S.L.

WHEN our Blessed Lord was tempted of the Devil, he showed Him "All the kingdoms of the inhabited earth," and said to Him: "To Thee will I give all the authority, and the glory thereof; for it has been entrusted to me, and on whomsoever I will, I bestow it" (Luke iv, 5-7). To a vast extent this was true, as we see in the Book of Daniel that there were Satanic rulers over the world-powers of Medo-Persia, under which Daniel was then living, and also under the Grecian Empire, then coming into prominence, who both of them opposed the Glorious Messenger, who was sent in answer to the prayer of Daniel, who were therefore fighting against Israel in the spiritual realm.

It would appear, therefore, that Satan had appointed his representative spiritual rulers over the various kingdoms of the world then in being.

There was one exception, however, among the world-rulers who was on the side of God, and this was Michael, the great Emperor of Israel (lit.), "the Emperor, the great one who defends your people" (Israel).—(Dan. x, 13-14 and xii, 1.) From Rev. xii, 7-9 and Jude, verse 9, we see that he is called "The Archangel," as if he were Commander-in-Chief of all the Heavenly Host. So we learn that none supported the cause of God and His people Israel except that Glorious Being, who appeared to Daniel, possibly the Lord Jesus Christ Himself (Dan. x, 21).

So that while all the world-powers represented in the Image were ruled by Satan—"the Emperor (Archon) of this world"—"The god of this age"—"The Emperor of the authorities of the air" (Eph. ii, 2, Greek), Israel alone was excepted, as being a Theocracy under the spiritual rule of Michael—which must therefore be the case to-day with the whole of Israel. Michael is the Spiritual representative of Him Who reigns over the House of Jacob (All Israel for ever).—(Luke i, 33.)

In Dan. xii, 1, we are warned of a time of trouble such as never has been since there has been a Nation. "Then shall Michael rise, the great Emperor, who defends your people (Israel)."

To all appearance this was the case during the late War, for that Angels appeared at Mons has been attested, not only by our own officers and soldiers, but by German prisoners also.

When our "Contemptible Little Army" was in danger of annihilation, groups of Angels appeared, and stood between the armies on several occasions. The German horses halted, then turned and stampeded. Officers and men have repeatedly testified to the reality of these happenings.

This indeed is no new thing in the history of Israel, but from the time of their forefather, Jacob, the Angelic Host has been concerned in the defence of Israel. For just previous to his meeting with Esau, with his army of 400 men, a host of Angels met Jacob, and he said: "This is God's Host, and he called the name of the place Mahanaim." Two hosts or camps throughout the wilderness journeyings, they were present, and at critical stages made their presence known, as at Jericho: "While Joshua was resting near Jericho, he raised his eyes and saw a Man stand near him with a drawn sword in His hand. So Joshua went to Him and asked: Are you our enemy or NO?"

When He replied "No," for I am Chief of the Army of the Everliving, who have come to you (Jos. v, 13-14, Moff.), also in the case of David (2 Sam. v, 34), God said to him: "When you hear the sound of marching, at the heads of the Valley of Weeping, then rush forward, for the Everlasting will advance before you to defeat the army of the Philistines (F.F.).

In like manner the enemy of the Lord was seen at Dothan, round about Elisha. "The mountain was covered with cavalry and chariots of fire surrounding Elisha, and descending upon him" (2 Kings vi, 17, F.F.).

So that Michael and his Angels fought on the side of Israel of God during the Great War, the greatest that has ever been, which was the inception of a time of trouble such as never has been since there was a Nation (Dan. xii, 1).

THE PSALMIST—A PROPHET.

By W. E. OLDROYD (N.S.W.).

LORD BEACONSFIELD wrote concerning the Psalmist: "Who is the most popular poet in this country? Is he to be found among the Wordsworths and the Lord Byrons? To the myriad-minded Shakespeare can we award the palm? No. The most popular poet in England is the sweet singer of Israel. Since the days of the heritage, when every man dwelt safely under his vine and under his fig-tree, there never was a race who sang so often the odes of David as the people of Great Britain."

Indirectly, this Hebrew testimony may suggest that wherever Hebrew conceptions are most deeply rooted in the life of a nation, there is the heart of that race, that people with whom the new covenant was made—even the appointed nation of Christ's prophecy, to whom the guardianship was to be transferred (Matthew xxi, 43). If the prophecy refers to our own nation—and we believe it does—then what is more likely than that the British people should be found singing the odes of David. The Psalmist may be called the poet-king; but he was also a prophet, and the prophetical aspect of the Psalms demands our attention. The Apostle Peter, on the Day of Pentecost, referred to the Patriarch David being a prophet; and our Lord acknowledged the same: "All things must be fulfilled which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the Psalms, concerning Me."

THE PSALMIST AND THE DURATION OF THE ABRAHAMIC COVENANT.

The Psalmist believed in the continuity of the Abrahamic covenant. "For ever," "to all generations," are expressions used by him. Throughout the Psalms he continually repudiates that circumstances may change, that centuries may alter, the counsel of the Lord. Psalm cv: "He hath remembered His covenant for ever, the word which He commanded to a thousand generations. Which covenant He made with Abraham, and His oath unto Isaac; and confirmed the same unto Jacob for a law, and to Israel for an everlasting covenant."

Psalm xxxiii: "The counsel of the Lord standeth for ever, the thoughts of His heart to all generations. Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord, the people whom He hath chosen for His own inheritance."

The writer to the Hebrews (chapter vi) refers to the confirmation of the covenant. "For when God made promise to Abraham, because He could swear by no greater, He swear by Himself, saying, Surely blessing I will bless thee, and multiplying I will multiply thee. . . . For men verily swear by the greater, and an oath for confirmation is to them an end of all strife. Wherein God, willing more abundantly to show unto the heirs of promise the immutability of His counsel, confirmed it by an oath . . ." St Paul in Galatians (chapter iii) points out that the law cannot disannul the Abrahamic covenant. "And this I say, that the covenant that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect. For if the inheritance be of the law, it is no more of promise; but God gave it to Abraham by promise." The Prophet Jeremiah joins with the Psalmist in proclaiming the faithfulness of God to His covenant: IF heaven above can be measured, IF the moon and stars no longer give their light, then, and then only, would there be any room to doubt the unchangeable purpose of God.

THE PSALMIST AND THE DURATION OF THE DAVIDIC COVENANT.

The Prophet Nathan (second book of Samuel, chapter vii) informed the Psalmist that God would establish the throne of his Kingdom for ever. If his son committed iniquity, he would be chastened with the rod of men; but the word of the Lord would still hold good concerning his House and his Kingdom. In the Chronicles is recorded an interview between the Psalmist and his son, the father assuring him that God will establish the throne of his Kingdom over Israel for ever. Psalm lxxxix is very clear concerning the Davidic covenant. "My covenant shall stand fast with him. His seed also will I make to endure for ever, and his throne as the days of heaven. If his children forsake My law, and walk not in My judgments; if they break My statutes, and keep not My commandments, then will I visit their transgression with the rod, and their iniquity with stripes. Nevertheless [we need to emphasize the word 'nevertheless'—notwithstanding, whatever happens] My loving-kindness will I not utterly take from him, nor suffer My faithfulness to fail. My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of My lips. Once have I sworn by My holiness that I will not lie unto David. His seed shall endure for ever, and his throne as the sun before Me. It shall be established for ever as the moon, and as a faithful witness in heaven." It is evident that the Davidic covenant, as well as the Abrahamic covenant, must be in operation to-day, for their continuity is guaranteed by the oath of Jehovah and the ordinances of heaven.

MERCY AND REDEMPTION.

"Oh that the salvation of Israel were come out of Zion! When God bringeth back the captivity of His people, Jacob shall rejoice, and Israel shall be glad. Let Israel hope in the Lord: for with the Lord there is mercy, and with Him is plenteous redemption, and He shall redeem Israel from all his iniquities." "For the Lord hath chosen Jacob unto Himself, and Israel for His peculiar treasure." No less than twenty-six times is the word "mercy" used in Psalm cxxxvi—a mercy which endureth not only during the reign of David, but a mercy which endureth for ever.

The Prophet Hosea testifies to the mercy which follows the captivity, and writes in his final chapter expressly of the blessing of Ephraim-Israel. The language used by Hosea pictures Jehovah as a God of compassion, and is in keeping with New Testament conceptions. "I will heal their backsliding" represents Jehovah as the Great Physician; "I will love them freely" represents the New Testament's conception of God's love as rendered in John iii, 16. "I will be as the dew unto Israel: he shall grow as the lily."

The Prophet Micah declares: "Thou wilt perform the truth to Jacob, and the mercy to Abraham, which Thou hast sworn unto our fathers from the days of old."

THE PSALMIST AND THE APOSTLE PAUL.

There are two notable points upon which the Psalmist and the Apostle are agreed. David wrote: "The Lord will not cast off His people" (Psalm xciv). St. Paul wrote in his Epistle to the Romans (chapter xi): "Hath God cast away His people? God hath not cast away His people whom He foreknew." The second point upon which they are agreed is that God is able to make "the barren" fruitful (see Psalm cxiii and Paul's Epistle to the Galatians, chapter iv). The history of the Northern Kingdom of Israel furnishes an example—for Israel is spoken of as "the barren one" in the prophecies of Isaiah (liv). The prophet Isaiah recognized the power of the Lord in changing the barren state into a state of fruitfulness and blessedness. "Sing, O barren, thou that didst not bear; break forth into singing, and cry aloud, thou that didst not travail with child; for more are the children of the desolate [Israel] than the children of the married wife [Judah], saith the Lord. . . . Thou shalt break forth on the right hand, and on the left; and thy seed shall inherit the Gentiles, and make the desolate cities to be inhabited."

THE ENDURING THRONE AND THE ORDAINED PLACE.

These are referred to in the Prophet Nathan's message to David in the second book of Samuel, chapter vii: "I will appoint a place for My people Israel," and the Chronicles of the Kings refer to this home for Israel as an "ordained place." St John refers to this home of Israel as a "prepared place," for in Revelation xii we find that the woman clothed with the sun (whom can she represent but Israel?) fled into the wilderness, where she hath a place prepared of God. This place we believe to be the British Isles. Following the consolidation of Israel in the Isles, her branches spread to the four quarters of the globe, eventually forming the "company of British (covenant) nations." Well might the Psalmist say: "HE THAT KEEPETH ISRAEL NEITHER SLUMBERS NOR SLEEPS."

WEEK BY WEEK.

By A. R. H.

THE Trooping of the Colour on the King's Birthday is one of the finest of all British military ceremonies.

For the first six years after the War I never once missed seeing it. For the past five years I have been unavoidably absent. So that this year's celebration seemed all the more inspiring. I found myself witnessing the spectacle through new eyes. And my impressions were being registered on a new mind.

This was helpful. For one of the most important facts regarding the British-Israel vision is the lesson it teaches us of appreciating the significance of simple things. It is difficult, however, to see significance in what is commonplace. And anything that helps us to pierce the veil of materialism which hides the world of spiritual reality is good.

"What do they know of England who only England know?" is a question often asked but rarely answered. It is the sort of question which is an answer in itself. And the answer is "Practically nothing."

It is necessary to leave ENGLAND and travel widely overseas before you can have any conception of what ENGLAND really stands for in the world.

To know anything properly we must be able to take it into our mind and there establish differences. The wider our standards of comparison the more we shall learn and the greater significance we shall see.

If we live too close to a thing our knowledge of it tends to become more and more sub-conscious and inarticulate. It is only when our knowledge is awakened into self-consciousness and articulation that its true value begins.

This is especially appropriate to the Englishman who is very much inclined toward complacency and takes everything for granted.

Love of tradition is so strongly settled in our blood that we fail to realize its peculiar value. Because we love tradition we do not question it. And not questioning it we fail to realize its true significance.

The average Englishman would have awakened with a shock had he found himself next to the eager young AMERICAN, almost speechless with admiration, who accosted a Daily Express representative: "The marching is pretty good at WEST POINT but the GUARDS beat anything I have ever seen . . . . . This is where you've got the WORLD licked.

TRADITION!

We haven't any way back home. I guess this hits you all pretty hard because it links up with history and things . . . ."

A son of MANASSEH hungering after his birthright! Well, MANASSEH; this is part of the price you pay for forgetting [1]

YOUR FATHER'S HOUSE.

But although you forget your Father, your Father does not forget you. And having trodden the path of a separate development you will yet fulfil your destiny in glorious reunion and come to share again in that great heritage of "history and things" which is as much yours as ours.

Now as a general rule the procession starts from BUCKINGHAM PALACE. But HIS MAJESTY THE KING being unable to attend, H.R.H. the PRINCE of WALES was appointed deputy and the cavalcade departed from the PALACE OF ST. JAMES.

For half an hour before the arrival of the PRINCES there waited in the MALL opposite the COURT of ST. JACOB the military attachés of the four DOMINIONS and fifteen FOREIGN POWERS. All the representatives were mounted, the four khaki-clad representatives of the BRITISH DOMINIONS being specially conspicuous on account of their position of precedence over all the Foreign Powers and the fact that they were all (and alone) mounted

ON WHITE HORSES.[2]

No one could fail to remark the extraordinary contrast between the gaily coloured uniforms of Foreign Powers and the sober khaki of the British representatives. The khaki uniform, with white collar and black tie, of the UNITED STATES attaché, completed the picture of ANGLO-SAXONDOM, unitedly represented to the WORLD, in a sober hue entirely distinct in spirit from the gay, almost comic-opera-like plumage preferred by other nations.

It was as if ANGLO-SAXONDOM instinctively in its dress expressed the consciousness of its special mission. The ANGLO-SAXON NATIONS are still in khaki—still on active service—"occupying"[3] until He come Whose is the KINGDOM and THRONE of DAVID.

Now the representatives stiffen to attention. PRINCE DAVID OF WALES appears from the COURT of JACOB,[4] followed by the other PRINCES of the ROYAL HOUSE, and placing himself at the head of the procession leads the representatives of the BRITISH DOMINIONS and FOREIGN POWERS, down the MALL to the Parade ground.

On either side the route is lined by

for red is the traditional colour for ceremonial occasions.

Apart from the representatives of ANGLO-SAXON NATIONS following the PRINCES of the ROYAL HOUSE, all the British military men are in ceremonial dress not service uniform. But this adds to rather than detracts from the significance of the distinction.

The ceremony concluded, the procession re-forms and returns to BUCKINGHAM PALACE. Two outriders of the HOUSEHOLD CAVALRY jingle pass. HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN is coming . . .! Following her is the standard-bearer escorted by a troop of LIFE GUARDS.

[1] Manasseh means "forgetting." See margin to Gen. xli, 51.

Their breast-plates shine and glitter in the sunlight against their scarlet tunics. Their scarlet helmet plumes are tossed in the breeze as the cavalcade prances by. And following them comes one solitary rider in dark blue tunic with dark blue helmet plume, carrying, not a sword but insignia, a large

SILVER BATTLE-AXE.

British pageantry is once more marked by an unmistakable sign identifying BRITAIN with the ISRAEL KINGDOM, which is to be different from other WORLD EMPIRES in that its expansion follows the law of absorption[6], not conquest.

ISRAEL is GOD'S BATTLE-AXE and WEAPONS of WAR.[7] But GOD is not a god of FORCE, but a GOD of PEACE. His KINGDOM in the earth is not founded on force, but on love, law, liberty and freedom.

The KINGDOM must be defended by force if its life is menaced by aggression. But its own progress and conquests are conquests of the spirit and come through promulgation of the truth.

In the political realm this is being effected through the extension of the COMMON LAW or LAW of the LORD. In the spiritual realm through the proclamation of the WORD of GOD.

The triumph of CHRIST and of His KINGDOM is to be in a wider sense than any of us have ever imagined, a triumph of the CROSS.

For the name "Cross" is now discovered[8] to be derived from the Sumerian word Garza, which also means

SCEPTRE OF THE KING.

And its word-sign from earliest times has always been pictured as the two-barred cross or battle-axe.

Yes, the battle-axe of CHRIST is not a human weapon of destruction but a CROSS—the sceptre of a KINGDOM—the sceptre of the earthly THRONE of DAVID.

An earthly THRONE and KINGDOM but everlasting, as it is written[9] :—"But unto the Son He saith : Thy THRONE, O GOD, is for ever and ever :

A SCEPTRE OF RIGHTEOUSNESS

is the sceptre of Thy KINGDOM," and again : "The LORD GOD shall give unto Him the THRONE of His father DAVID, and He shall reign over the HOUSE of JACOB for ever : and of His KINGDOM there shall be no end."[10]

THE FULNESS OF THE GENTILES IN THE BRITISH COMMONWEALTH OF NATIONS.--IV.

BY DR. WADGE (WINNIPEG).

THE BRITISH EMPIRE AND THE DOMINIONS.

DURING the peaceful reign of Queen Victoria, and under the benign protection of the British Navy, there was no great stimulus to develop naval or military forces, or to take special interest in the foreign policy of the Empire. However, in 1812, the British House of Commons resolved that "Colonies exercising the right of self-government ought to undertake the responsibility of providing for their own internal order and security, and ought to assist in their own external defence." Gradually the Home Government withdrew their troops from the Colonies and each Colony provided for its own militia forces. In 1884–5 Canada and Australia voluntarily sent contingents of troops to serve with the British in the Sudan Expedition for the relief of General Gordon. Again, and also voluntarily, these two Dominions and New Zealand assisted the Mother Country in 1900–1902 by sending 30,000 troops to the Boer War. In the matter of naval affairs, progress was not so uniform, and was considerably delayed by internal political differences of opinion. However, the idea of contributing to the British Navy appears to have fallen into disfavour, as being "incompatible with the growing sense of 'nationhood,' though it was always recognized that the local navies which they preferred to build" would co-operate with the British Navy in the time of war.

In 1887, during the Jubilee of Queen Victoria, the Colonial Secretary of the British Government held a Conference with the representatives of the Colonies present for the Jubilee. This Conference considered such questions as defence, tariffs, communications, etc., but did not discuss foreign policy. Other Colonial Conferences were held in 1897 and 1903.

In the 1907 Conference, the representatives provided that the Conference should henceforth be known as the Imperial Conference, that it should meet every four years, and that the representatives should be the Prime Ministers of the Colonies meeting on a footing of equality, with the British Prime Minister occupying the chair instead of the Colonial Secretary as heretofore. At the Imperial Conference of 1911 "the Dominion Prime Ministers were for the first time admitted to the secrets of foreign diplomacy." This action indicated that the Home Government had voluntarily elevated them a step higher in status. In 1912 and 1914 some minor steps of progress were made in the development of the status of the self-governing Dominions. But the Great War and the Treaty of Versailles provided special opportunities for the much more rapid development of equal status.

The onset of the war developed with such a rush that there was no time for consultation with the Cabinets of the Overseas Dominions. But all the Dominions whole-heartedly joined the Mother Country, freely, of their own accord and without any suggestion of compulsion, in this war with Germany for the principles of self-government and for the liberties and rights of the people of the great democracies of the world. To have failed to do this would have denoted utter selfishness and the utter lack of appreciation of the benefits and rights of self-government. However, all the Dominions showed by their conduct throughout the war that they were prepared to defend to the utmost extent the liberties and rights which had been secured to them by the great efforts and sacrifices of many generations of their forefathers in the Homeland. Literally our troops, by their conduct, by their tremendous efforts and by their wonderful success in every phase of battle and of war, won for the Dominions their rights to a place in the first ranks of the mighty in the Councils of the Empire.

In 1915 an Imperial Conference was not assembled as it was considered wiser to leave the calling of another till after the closing of the war. But when Lloyd George became Prime Minister, his "determination to secure greater efficiency in the conduct of the war, and the more complete mobilization of the strength of the Empire," led him to summon representatives of all the great Dominions and also of India to a Conference with the British Government. Meetings took place in 1917 and 1918, and two consultative bodies were formed—the Imperial Cabinet and the Imperial Conference. All war problems were freely considered and the Dominion representatives were accorded full privileges of equality in all the work of these bodies. Yet no resolution was made that had any compulsory effect on any Dominion. In discussing Federal Empire relations in 1917, " it was resolved, on Sir R. L. Borden's motion, that any system must maintain 'all existing powers of self-government' organized by the Dominions, and recognize them 'as autonomous nations of an Imperial Commonwealth.' "

At the termination of the war the Dominions felt that they had as much right to be represented directly at the Peace Conference as the smaller Powers; consequently alongside the British Empire representatives there were recognized delegations from Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and India. These delegates were accorded the same rights and privileges as those of the minor belligerents. Further, in consultation with the Home Government, the Dominions asked for and were accorded the right for their delegates to sign the Treaty of Versailles each on behalf of his own Dominion. This they actually did. " Similarly the Dominions insisted that the ratification of the Treaty should not be carried out until approval of it had been expressed by their Parliaments, and—this demand was conceded by the British Government." On the formation of the League of Nations the Dominions requested that they should be independently represented. This was arranged, so that though there was a delegation from the British Empire it represented only the United Kingdom and the Empire outside of India and the great self-governing Dominions. Thus we see that in the short space of less than ten years the national and international status of the Dominions had increased greatly, and was recognized not only by the Mother Country, but also by all the nations represented in the League of Nations.

BRITISH-ISRAEL FACTS NOT FANCIES.—XIII.

By MAJOR-GENERAL C. A. HADFIELD.

THEREFORE, it is the Church who—as our teachers—must bear the blame for any false or erroneous interpretation which the " Church " places upon God's plain literal statements as recorded in the Bible.

When we are clearly informed that God made definite promises to Israel that Joseph's descendants should have certain possessions (of a material nature) in the latter days, and there should be a reunion of the separated Twelve Tribes; it stands to reason that God means to confirm His promises in a literal manner, for He cannot lie, and He cannot fail. To change the literal everlasting Nation of Israel into " The Church " is as absurd as it is unreasonable, for it cannot be proved in any manner which can convince one from the Bible.

It is this unfortunate " Spiritualizing " which is answerable for so much unbelief and criticism of to-day. God's promises to Israel, God's written history of Israel, and His fore-ordained future for Israel, all show, in the clearest manner, that God forgave the outcast sinning Israel of old, which He punished by exile into Assyrian captivity, and then bestowed His mercy upon the Nation which He intended to be a great power in the world's future history. The " Stone Kingdom " recorded by the Prophet Daniel.

If we examine the history and the characteristics of the Anglo-Saxon people, we see how wonderfully they possess all that the Prophets foretold for Israel in the last days.

Let us each answer, where is the Joseph's nation referred to in Genesis xlix?

All those who venture " to doubt " the words of Moses and the Prophets are venturing to argue against the direct preaching of Jesus Christ, Who remarked: " They have Moses and the prophets, let them hear them. . . . If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead." And again: " If ye believe not his (Moses) writings, how shall ye believe My words " (see Luke xvi, and John v, 47).

If Christ believed Moses and the prophets, by what possible right—or authority—may man, in these days, reject the writings? By what right can man place his own interpretation upon the prophecies rather than faithfully accept Christ's?

We can hardly argue that we accept the words of Christ as regards His preaching; but we reject the writing of Moses and the prophets. Simply because we have an idea (which we cannot substantiate from the Bible) that " the Church " has become " Israel." We must have sufficient " faith " to believe that " with God all things are possible," and therefore all that the prophets have written are true and have their special lessons, certainly we cannot reject certain passages of Holy Scripture and accept others! So long as our Church leaders admit that the Northern Kingdom of Israel has been cast off for ever and replaced by the Church; so long shall we —nay, must we—be faced with unbelief and infidelity, for we cannot in this case see any visible proof of the prophetical writings being fulfilled as regards God's promises to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

But what upsets our Church leaders greatly is, What has become of Ephraim and Manasseh? And, how are the twelve tribes to come into possession of the land of their forefathers? That territorial area which is described as lying between " the river of Egypt and the great river Euphrates "? Most decidedly that area of land cannot be " spiritualized " into something other than what the Bible repeatedly says it is, viz., land, and, in a certain position of the earth's surface. Anyone who dares to argue otherwise is self-condemned without doubt. But what a mistake to " blindly " lead the majority who scarcely read or understand the Old Testament. The time has arrived for this subject to be closely examined, and without prejudice.

We must be honest, and we must admit, that if we reject a living literal Israel, we cast a doubt upon all the promises of God to Abraham and his seed. We also disbelieve that the Jews have to reunite with the so-called " Ten Tribes exiled to Assyria," i.e., reunite in a literal manner.

Unless we throw over the Bible we can only believe that God has not cast away His People, and placed a Gentile people in their place, for Christ came to redeem Israel, not to destroy.

As the Rev. L. G. A. Roberts teaches us: "When Judah rejected the Lord Jesus, Israel, redeemed, began to take up the work, so until Judah proved faithless, to them were committed he oracles of God (Rom. iii, 2) . . . the time has come, and these promises to Israel should now be no more 'Spiritualised,' but acknowledged to be fulfilled in the British and Anglo-Saxon race, who are the literal seed of Abraham."

When the Jews rejected Christ, the tribe of Benjamin, who had, we are told, returned from captivity with the House of Judah, accepted the Messiah, and this tribe spread abroad the Gospel to the dispersed tribes of Israel—or, as they were called by our Lord, "The lost sheep of the House of Israel."

The words of Zacharias in Luke i, 68-75 should teach our Clergy a wonderful lesson for a true and literal nation of Israel, and these words ought to be impressed upon every Church-goer; for, when read in conjunction with a nation Israel, under a changed name, and speaking a new language, it becomes manifestly clear that God's promises have been fulfilled to the letter, and so the passage is not meaningless.

"Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for He hath visited and redeemed His people, and hath raised up an horn of salvation for us in the house of His servant David; as He spake by the mouth of His holy prophets, which have been since the world began; that we should be saved from our enemies and from the hands of all that hate us; to perform the mercy promised to our fathers and to remember His holy covenant; the oath which He sware to our father Abraham, that He would grant unto us, that we being delivered out of the hand of our enemies might serve Him without fear, in holiness and righteousness before Him all the days of our life."

By this we know that the nation Israel, redeemed by the death of Christ, has been "kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time" (1 Peter i, 5).

The nation Israel, that "in times past (i.e., when exiled) 'were not a nation,' but are now (forgiven) 'the people of God.' The nation of God." The nation which (once) had not obtained mercy "but now have obtained mercy" (1 Peter ii), as is shown above. Does not all this marvellous "fulfilment" of Scripture give our Clergy a proof positive of the inspiration of the Bible, and an answer to those who dare to throw doubts upon the truth of the Bible?

Whereas, try how they may, can any of our Clergy satisfactorily prove that Almighty God has failed to keep His sworn oath?

True there are great "Spiritual" blessings to be yet bestowed upon us when we, as a nation, become fitted for them, but we must not mistake the material promises for the spiritual promises of Salvation. There is a great distinction which is apparent to us when we accept God's Word as meaning just what it expresses. The meaning of all this surely is, that God has selected His nation Israel to exist in order to form "His Kingdom," over which Christ is to come and rule on this earth during the Millennium.

It is an interesting fact, perhaps especially to the Clergy, that we are given so many passages in the New Testament which confirm the writings of the Prophets regarding what can only be a Divine imposed "blindness" for a certain period of time in order to conceal Israel the living nation, so as to live unrecognized through the ages.

Let us study a few, such as Isa. vi, 9, 10: "Hear ye indeed, but understand not"; and again, see Isa. xxix, 10-14; referring to the Lord "closing" the eyes, and "hiding the understanding of the wise." These writings must be given as "Signs" for our help and guidance: for we find St. Matthew (xiii, 14, 15) refers to this "blindness," also St. Luke (viii, 10), also St. John (xii, 40), also St. Paul (Rom. xi, 8), etc.

They certainly are no chance or random references by the Apostles, but rather to teach us "the blindness in part is happened to Israel," but this blindness is to last only "until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in."

So we are permitted to know, that when that "fulness" be accomplished, Israel, the living nation, will stand revealed to the world by a gradual progress of time and events, each prophesied event being an added proof by which to open our eyes; reluctant and unwilling though many of us may be to have our eyes opened to Israel being anything but "The Church."

Let the Clergy rest assured that these remarks are made in no carping spirit, but solely in order to try to arrive at the Truth of the Scriptures, and to prove the inspiration of the Prophetical Books as is being visibly shown to us day by day in the world's events.

Let everyone remember God's words: "Thou (God) wilt perform the truth to Jacob, and the mercy to Abraham which Thou hast sworn unto our fathers from the days of old." (Micah vii, 20.)

THE WINNIPEG CONVENTION.

By Dr. H. W. Wadge.

THE Second Convention of the British-Israel Federation of Canada met again in Winnipeg on May 14th, 15th, 16th.

At our opening session most cheering reports were given of the great extension of the general public interest in our work and teachings in all the provinces. In all parts of Canada marked progress is evident, and prospects are bright for rapid development this year.

In our Convention last year it had been decided to meet again in Winnipeg in the month of June, 1930. But this spring the Officers and Committee were of the opinion that, owing to the attendance of friends from the London Headquarters to the All-American Anglo-Saxon Congress being held in Detroit in May, it would be advisable to hold our Canadian Convention soon afterwards, in order to take advantage of the same speakers, as they travelled west.

So far as the three prairie provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta are concerned, this time militated against the sending of many delegates to the Convention, as our whole farming population was right in the midst of its spring work. Unfortunately, also, the delegations from Ontario and Quebec were unable to attend as they had hoped to do.

After due consideration to the whole question of Conventions, and of the tremendous distances from city to city, and from province to province, it was decided that it would be advisable to have arrangements made for three separate Conventions for each year, one for the four western provinces, one for Ontario and Quebec, and one for the maritime provinces; and that one of these, in rotation, should be constituted as the Dominion Federation Convention for the year.

Another important decision arrived at was that the Director elected to the Executive from each province should take the initiative in developing the work in his province until a Provincial Branch was properly organized to take over and develop the work thoroughly. Before adjournment it was resolved that the next Annual Meeting should be held in Toronto in June, 1931; and also, that the Western Convention should be held about the same time in one of the cities of Alberta or Saskatchewan, in Calgary if possible.

The Rev. Pascoe Goard, from Headquarters, Rev. H. A. Edwards, from Jasper Park, Mr. W. H. Blackaller, our worthy and esteemed President, from Victoria, B.C., and our own Rev. E. J. Springett, were a host in themselves, and all went well. The good people of Winnipeg attended the public meetings in ever-increasing numbers, and enthusiasm grew as the three days passed. Many quiet but thoughtful and careful Bible students were present, and appeared to be greatly impressed by the free, fair and frank discussion of our understanding of the interpretation of the Bible.

We are of the opinion that our teachings of the Bible are being accepted more and more; and that many are reading our literature along with Bible prophecy very carefully.

Mr. Blackaller gave us two very carefully prepared and logical addresses on "The Bible the only Foundation of Stable Government," which were greatly appreciated. Rev. H. A. Edwards gave addresses on "The Redemption of the Material Creation" and "The Position of the British Empire To-day." From the platform one could see how Mr. Edwards secured and held the close attention and interest of the whole audience by his quiet, masterly, scholarly presentation of these subjects. Mr. Edwards will always be welcomed by a British-Israel audience in Winnipeg.

From his many previous visits to Winnipeg, Mr. Goard has become well known as a Bible expositor, and he is always sure of a good attendance. This year was no exception. Great appreciation was shown of his presentation of British-Israel work and of the teachings of the Bible. His addresses on "World Movements," "The Birth of the New Civilization," "Present Conditions in the Empire," and "The Onward March in the Fulfilment of Prophecy," were inspirational, and also deeply spiritual. One is glad to report that throughout our meetings all our speakers placed great emphasis on the spiritual side of our belief, our work, and our life.

Of the indefatigable President of our Winnipeg Branch, Rev. E. J. Springett, it should be told that he was the driving power, under the Father above, in keeping every part of the work moving like a well-oiled machine. With his bright cheeriness, cogent Chairman's remarks, and sound advice in our business meetings, we were never permitted to wane in enthusiasm, nor to grow slack in procedure.

Though the far parts of the Dominion are the sufferers by not having had delegates present, still we in Winnipeg have fared bounteously in a feast of good things. To the Lord Jesus Christ, our Saviour and King, be the honour and glory.

That our friends in the Motherland may be enabled to realize some of our difficulties, as regards distance and expense, perhaps a few comparisons will not be invidious. Winnipeg is the hub of Canada; Montreal lying 1,420 miles to the east, and Vancouver even farther to the west, 1,480 miles. These distances are approximately the same as from London to Petrograd, or from London to Constantinople. Again, our province of Manitoba alone would accommodate two sets of the whole British Isles and have enough room left over to put in Wales a third time. In fact, Wales could be comfortably set in our Lake Winnipeg as an island, or rather as an archipelago representing its higher lands and mountain peaks. These two or three comparisons of only one of our provinces, and not the largest either, to the whole of the British Isles will perhaps give some indication of the difficulties we face from distance and extent in attempting to hold British-Israel Conventions for the whole Dominion.

The election of officers resulted in almost the same slate as for last year. This year they are as follows:—

THE WORLD ASTIR.

By E. M. Foster.

It is not at all unusual where students foregather in our colleges for the conversation to turn on the new and great spiritual revival which they believe is very near. The present Churches, they say, are not only disunited, but are about to crumble, and out of the ashes will arise this new world-religion of Brotherhood and Peace. However unorthodox the individual's view may be, he is almost bound to tell you that this revival will be a manifestation of Divine Power on earth and as such will be interpreted as the Second Advent.

Another group of men, among them many scientists, devote their attention to the "Other World." Sir Oliver Lodge in "Raymond" imagines that the Spiritualist movement will bring about a more direct communion with God.

Although the ideas of these thinkers are misleading and dangerous, their sentiments show the world-longing for the Messiah.

From experience we know that when that feeling is manifest He comes. Before His First Coming there was great anticipation in Palestine, led by St. John the Baptist—albeit "a voice crying in the wilderness." Inspiration came even to the Gentiles. Did not the great pagan poet, Virgil, foresee the near approach of the Prince of Peace when he wrote his Fourth Eclogue?

Now, in these last days, the great British-Israel Movement strives to restore the faith of the Early Christian Church. It assures the world that it has every right to dream of a coming Millennial Age, and in the simplest language bids people read their Bible afresh. There and there only is the world's true and perfect destiny revealed.

DEAF!

THERE is no condition in the life of the individual or of the Nation which presents so much difficulty as deafness. It differs from its sister-affliction, blindness, in that it severs the sufferer from those around, it separates and isolates. And deafness—lack of hearing, the ears that hear not—play a prominent part in Holy Writ, especially in the denunciations of the perversity of Israel and the hardening of their hearts against the Divine teachings. "Yea, thou heardest not, thine ear was not opened." "If ye will not hearken—I will bring plagues upon thee."

There are, however, distinct references to those physically afflicted of whom to-day it is computed there are some 40,000 in Britain alone. "Who maketh the dumb or deaf? Have not I, the Lord?" "Thou shalt not curse the deaf," and in every case there is a distinctive sympathetic spirit underlying the reference to those suffering from this deprivation; always there is an implied understanding of the hard lot of those so shut out from full communion with those around.

It is rarely realized that some defect in the ear at birth or caused by some early infantile disease (before a baby has learned to speak) causes dumbness. People frequently ask about a child so afflicted: "Is he deaf and dumb?" But this mutism is really not a separate defect—but a sad result of the early deafness, which has prevented the child hearing and imitating the speech of those around. And this deaf-mutism is not only an appalling calamity in itself, but it involves serious mental retardation—not a mental defect—but a slowing up of the whole mental processes, which renders education a slow and difficult task, demanding skill and devotion on the part of the teachers and much effort and concentration on the part of the pupils. The results are, however, frequently little short of miraculous, and there are to-day numbers of them who have overcome their difficulties to the extent that in many cases deaf pupils pass examinations similar to the Senior Oxford standard, and there are others, some of them both deaf and blind, who have passed various university examinations.

But much as has been done—there still remains a great field of effort to be explored before this affliction of deafness can be removed or even partially removed from our midst. It is calculated that nearly fifty per cent. of the deaf-mutism and deafness occurring in later life is preventable, and the efforts of the National Institute for the Deaf, a centralizing body for all societies and workers for the deaf, is being directed more and more towards first, prevention, and, secondly, the amelioration of the sad lot of the deaf.

"Hear ye deaf and look ye blind and see" is the message to the world through the British-Israel Federation.

"And the DEAF shall hear the words of the book" is a promise for THAT day. Sympathy and love will help many shut off from the blessings of hearing, and will hasten the great day when all shall hear and understand the Divine message.

THE TRUE STORY OF A BOOK.

BY THE REV. C. C. DOBSON, M.A.

THE early eighteenth century was the darkest period, religiously, in the history of England since the time of the Reformation. It was the age of notable deists, agnostics, rationalists, and unbelievers, when "all men of rank were thought to be infidels." Among such leaders of thought were Gilbert West and Lord Lyttelton, the friend of Dr. Johnson, Chesterfield, Pope and others. These two men believed the Bible to be an imposture, and they determined to expose it. To do this they decided that they must begin by exposing the two greatest miracles by each writing a book. Lord Lyttelton chose the Conversion of St. Paul, and Gilbert West the Resurrection. Their tasks led them to a careful examination of the Bible accounts of these two events, and they took about a year to write their books. When they had completed their tasks they met together, and something like this passed between them. "I have written my book," said Lord Lyttelton, "and I have a confession to make. When I came to study all the evidence for the story of the Conversion of St. Paul, and weighed it by all the known laws of evidence, I found St. Paul was miraculously converted in spite of himself. I am now a Christian, and I have written my book on that side, and not against it." Gilbert West replied, "I have a similar confession to make. I have found the Resurrection of our Lord to be a true fact, and I, too, have become a believer, and have written my book on that side."

This story was well known to me, and I often wondered whether it was strictly correct, or whether it had become coloured by repetition. One day while I was busy writing my own book on the Resurrection, there was a knock at my door, and a man came in to see me. He said "I was looking at a second-hand bookstall in the city, and I came across an old book on the Resurrection. They only wanted a penny for it, so, as I knew you were writing a book on the subject, I bought it for you. Is it any good to you?" I thanked him, and looked at the book. You may imagine my surprise when on opening it I read, "Observations on the History and Evidences of the Resurrection of Jesus Christ," by Gilbert West. Printed by Dodsley, 1747. It was the very book which Gilbert West had written as related above. Very significant is the motto he had written on the title page :—

"Blame not before thou hast examined the Truth ; Understand first, and then rebuke."—Ecclus. xi, 7.

To me that book is not worth a penny but at least £50. It proved the truth of the story. But I was to have another proof.

Not long afterwards I was looking among the books in my father's Library, and I found a large volume I had never noticed before. It was called "The Works of Lord Lyttelton." One of the first things I found in it was, "Observations on the Conversion and Apostleship of St. Paul in a Letter to Gilbert West." It occupies 60 pages of this large folio, and was the very book he had written which was here reprinted in his collected works.

These two great unbelievers found out the truth when they came to examine it for themselves. What does the Resurrection prove and teach us ?

(1) That Jesus was what He claimed to be—the Son of God.

(2) That God accepted His life and death as the atonement for sin.

(3) It gives us the assurance that there is life beyond the grave for all, for Jesus was the "first fruits of them that slept."

(4) It proves the Bible to be the Word of God, written at the hands of inspired authors, for it foretold His Resurrection.

(5) It provides us with a picture of the nature of our Resurrection.

And why is the story of the Conversion of St. Paul so important ?

Because it proves that the Risen Christ can, by His Holy Spirit's working, change anyone's life in spite of himself.

One might say that St. Paul did not live in our time, and that what happened in his time cannot happen to-day. How about Lord Lyttelton and Gilbert West ? They, like St. Paul, were converted in spite of themselves, for they did not want to be converted.

What happened to St. Paul and to them can happen to anyone to-day.

OBITUARY.

THE LATE REV. LINCOLN McCONNELL, D.D., LL.D.

IT will be a great shock to our readers, as it was to us, to learn that our good friend, the Rev. Lincoln McConnell, D.D., LL.D., of Jacksonville, Florida, U.S.A, has passed away suddenly. He had a heart attack on his way from his home to his office at his Church on May 6th last, and only lived a few minutes thereafter. He died on the day the Convention opened. He had intended to be present at the Convention in Detroit, but at the last moment was prevented by urgent business. He had a little trouble with his heart before Christmas, but was getting on very well as far as his family and his friends knew. He conducted a Revival Meeting in Augusta, Georgia, the week before his death, where it is said he preached a beautiful sermon.

He was a man of wonderful ability and devotion. All who knew him loved him. We shall never forget his visit to us with his wife and their friends, Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Ward, in 1928.

We welcomed them to our Headquarters on July 20th, 1928, when the doctor gave us a striking address. Soon after that they went on a tour to Egypt, Palestine and Europe. Returning to London they were with us at the Congress in October of that year, just a few days in advance of which Dr. McConnell delivered a powerful lecture on "Who was Jesus ?" to a large audience in the Central Hall, Westminster. His addresses at the Congress reflected his sunny nature. He impressed us with his eloquence, his legal arguments, his convincing logic, and delighted us by his smashing blows at destructive criticism of the Bible. He described British-Israel Truth as "the greatest story in the world, embracing as it does the whole Counsel of God. There is no romance in all history to compare with it, and no drama can equal it for thrill and movement." With his legal training he said : "I have never found any case so easily proved, and any honest-minded jury would have no difficulty in finding that the evidence for our case is absolutely overwhelming."

Dr. McConnell was a lovable man—full of heart. He endeared himself to us, and his affection for the Secretary-General will ever be a treasured memory. His loss to America is a very heavy one. It is hardly less to us and to our great Cause. We tender to his widow and family our heart-felt sympathy in their sad and sudden bereavement.

A PRAYER.

O GOD, WHO HIDEST Thy mysteries from the wise and prudent, and revealest them to babes : Grant, we beseech Thee, that, as preachers of Thy Truth, the words of the British-Israel-World Federation may never be spoken in vain. Make, O Lord, Thy Words in their mouths as fire, and their unbelieving hearers as tow. Send Thy blessing at all times on their endeavours to give sight to the blind, and to open the deaf ears. More especially we pray Thee to send Thy blessing at this time on the Manifesto being published in the Newspaper Press, so that both the ears of everyone that heareth it shall tingle, and their hardheartedness be blotted out when the times of refreshing shall come from Thee. Send Thy light, we beseech Thee, into the hearts and minds of the Leaders of the Churches, and Theological Professors, who darken counsel by words without knowledge : Bring them, and those who look to them for guidance, into the fold of the true Israelites, that there may be one flock and one Shepherd : Through Jesus Christ our Lord.—Amen.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

THE Secretary-General has been besieged by a continuous stream of Pressmen every day except Sundays ever since May 15th, when our Manifesto first appeared in The Times. He has given interviews and has explained British-Israel to each one. To have responded to every request for publication would have called for many thousands of pounds more. Our callers have represented the Editorial, Managerial and Advertising sides of journalism, and they have included men of the Press in the Dominions, U.S.A., and the Continent of Europe.

A. C. H. writes: "I think your Manifesto in the public Press is the greatest thing you have ever done and published, and this is saying a great deal." A Vicar writes: "Allow me to congratulate you very heartily upon the interest which has suddenly been aroused throughout the country by your inspiring message in the Press on the history, mission and destiny of Britain and America. Unless Anglo-Saxondom stands together in this time of unrest and confusion, the MENACE on which you write will bring world revolution. I have been speaking recently up and down the country and I am able to confirm your statement that this Manifesto is being read with appreciation and pondered over by all sections of our people. In travelling a good deal by train I have found it to be the general theme of conversation. It must greatly influence for good the conscience and temper of the people, and this will bear good fruit and lead to an enormous advance and increase in the numbers of British-Israel believers. I am prepared to place my services at the disposal of the Federation for two or three evenings a week."

F. A. B. S. writes: "Please send me literature as offered in to-day's Daily Mail. I am a schoolmaster of ten years' experience. I am willing to help your great Cause in any way I can. The hope of the world lies in the establishment of the knowledge of the living, loving and infinite God. Oh for an education based upon life's Divine simplicities. Does your great Movement stand for education reform? Let me know how you can use me in God's service in the time I have available."

The Secretary of the Blackburn Branch writes that their membership is steadily increasing and that they will continue to hold meetings on the second Thursday of each month until after September, when they hope to revert to the fortnightly meetings for the Winter session. The Rev. E. A. Couldrey visited Blackburn on the 3rd June, and lectured to a fine gathering on "Moses or Modernists: Which?"

The Sydenham Branch session closed with a visit from Mr. J. J. Morey to St. John's Hall, Forest Hill, on May 30th. Mr. A. J. Wakeford presided. A powerful address was greatly appreciated and interest aroused by Mr. Morey's unfolding of his subject, "Some Age-long Mysteries Solved." There will not be any further meetings of this Branch until September.

The Rev. E. A. Couldrey gave his first lecture for the Southport Branch on June 2nd, on "A Warning Note with a Message of Hope." The Branch report that Mr. Couldrey is very welcome in the North-West Area.

The Rev. R. G. F. Waddington visited this Branch on May 26th, and gave a most interesting lecture on "Israel's High Priest."

Mr. J. J. Morey lectured for the Battersea Branch in the Town Hall on May 28th. "Quite the best meeting we have had," reports the Secretary.

We remind our readers that the Eleventh Annual Congress opens (D.V.) in Central Hall, Westminster, on October 6th next. We have a fine array of speakers for the occasion. There is a steady demand for tickets, and a record number has been sold so far.

E. T. writes: "The Manifesto is a great and timely CALL and challenge to the Nation, and all B.-I. workers must be tremendously heartened by it."

A Naval Officer writes: "I have much pleasure in acknowledging yout prompt and courteous reply to my enquiry, and I thank you for the literature which you have so kindly sent me. This I assure you will have my earnest consideration. From what I have already scanned it seems to open up a deal of thought and certainly offers much more than mere palliatives. There is a positive ring, free from the blemish which so often strikes our minds, namely bitterness. It calls for self-discipline and it is not coupled with the spirit of shallowness."

Mr. John Leech and Mr. J. J. Morey were the speakers at Headquarters last week.

A new speaker—the Rev. H. S. Webb—is giving an address on Thursday evening of this week.

The speakers next week are the Rev. S. E. Mowforth on Wednesday afternoon, and his subject will be "With General Allenby in Palestine," when we hope for a full audience. The Rev. Kenneth Dodds will be the speaker on Thursday evening, and his subject "Israel's Bill of Rights."

We are hearing from many of our readers who propose to attend the Convention at "The Hayes," Swanwick, July 29th to August 2nd, and we urge all who contemplate attending to write to us as soon as possible. Railway concessions have been granted by the railway authorities.

We hope for a large gathering at Headquarters on Monday afternoon, June 23rd, at 3 o'clock, when we propose to celebrate the Prince of Wales birthday and the anniversary of the opening of our Headquarters. The Bishop of the Falkland Islands, who is at present on a visit to England, has consented to speak. The Secretary-General will make an interesting statement in regard to the present remarkable Press campaign and its results. Other speakers will be announced later.

The month of May was a very busy one in the Southern Area. Mr. Morey gave thirty lectures at twenty centres, and everywhere met with enthusiastic audiences.

A successful four days' mission was held at Portsmouth, when twenty-five new members joined the Branch. Addresses were given by Mr. John Leech, Rev. E. A. Couldrey, Rev. T. Sparshott Johnson and Mr. Morey.

The new Cause at Taunton held its second public meeting, when Mr. Morey lectured on the Second Coming of Christ.

At Eastbourne the Saffrons Hall was packed, and a real awakening is evident in this important centre.

A successful public meeting was held in the Battersea Town Hall, and at Croydon, Herne Bay, Brighton, Blackheath, Plumstead and many other places the interest is more than maintained.

ONTARIO NOTES.

Mr. W. H. Blackaller arrived in Toronto May 18th from Winnipeg, where he presided at the Annual Convention of the British-Israel Federation of Canada, and was re-elected to the Presidency. We here have shown our appreciation of his visit by keeping him busy almost every evening.

He addressed a well-attended meeting of the Garrett Branch, which, in future, is to be known as the "Toronto West Branch," and the officers are already making plans for the work in the west end of the city next autumn.

On Wednesday evening our "Toronto East Branch" enjoyed a splendid lecture from one of its members, Mr. Spearman. The subject was "From David to David," and Mr. Spearman illustrated his talk with splendid slides. The meeting hall was crowded to capacity and then overflowed into the hallway.

Mr. Blackaller addressed the "Toronto Central Branch" on Thursday night, his subject being "Preparations for the Second Coming of our Lord." Again the lecture hall was overcrowded, so glad are our folks of a chance to listen to our Canadian President.

On Friday night he presided at the meeting here, which continued and completed the Canadian Convention which was commenced in Winnipeg on May 14th; and on Monday evening he will be present at the first meeting of the newly-elected Ontario Provincial Executive. Then on Wednesday he and Mrs. Blackaller will travel forty miles westward to Hamilton, where Mr. Blackaller will address a special meeting being arranged by our Hamilton Branch.

To-day is Victoria Day, May 24th. On such a day of Empire-wide rejoicing, our hearts go out in gladness to our friends across the sea in Britain at the "Heart of Things." May God continue to guide and bless you all.

Yours most faithfully—in the work,

R. O. LUCAS, Secretary.

NOTE ON THE WORD "ZŌŎN."

In article V of the series "Across the River," May 24th, page 321, "Zoon" should read "Zōŏn" (ζῶου), a Greek word meaning a living creature. The reference is to the "four beasts" mentioned in Rev. iv, 6–9. In the Revised Translation the passage is more correctly translated "four living creatures" (ζῶα). Adam Clarke says: "The word beast is very improperly used here and elsewhere in this description. Wiclif first used it, and translators in general have followed him in this unsuitable rendering." The first living creature was like a lion; this is understood to be the standard of Judah on the East with the two tribes of Issachar and Zebulun. The second, like a calf or ox, was the emblem of Ephraim, who pitched on the West with the two tribes of Manasseh and Benjamin. The third, with the face of a man, was the standard of Reuben, who pitched on the South with the two tribes of Simeon and Gad. The fourth, which was like a flying (spread) eagle, is understood to represent the emblem on the ensign of Dan, who pitched on the North with the two tribes of Asher and Naphtali. This traditionary description agrees with the four faces of the cherub in Ezekiel's vision. (Dr. Adam Clarke's Commentary on Rev. iv, 6–9.)

The proceedings were broadcast.

A NEW BOOK BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

THE KINGDOM LAW OF DIVINE HEALING

"One of the significant things in the present period of the religious life of our people is the frequency of Divine Healing. . . .

The wide range of cases, including nervous disorders, organic diseases, fractured bones, imperfect organs of sight and hearing, and so on, show that there can be no resting in the theory of psychotherapeutics. There is more than the organising of the mental forces of the patient. There is more than mental and physical assistance which may be rendered by others. There is the evidence of Divine interference on behalf of the patient.

It is interesting to note that these cases come in connection with the deep interest in sacred things, personal approach to God, and, in most cases, united prayer to God

It is also interesting to note that physical healing is invariably, as far as we have been able to observe and to know, a part of a religious awakening which embraces the whole of the personality of the subject of Divine Healing. Those who are indifferent to God, and to Holy Things are not healed. Those who are living in rebellion against God are not healed. Those who are 'living after the flesh,' as the Apostle Paul puts it, are not subjects for Divine Healing. . . .

So widespread is the present manifestation of Divine activity, so universal is the manifestation of the power, that we are assured the Lord is trying to break into the consciousness of His people, and to draw them nearer to Himself than has hitherto been the case in our experience during the lifetime of those now living."

BOOK 1.

The Destiny of the British Empire and U.S.A.

By

THE ROADBUILDER

Ninth Edition Revised—40th Thousand

The theme of "The Destiny" is that Anglo-Saxondom fulfil, not one or two, but all the prophecies foretold for Israel when in Palestine, when in the Isles and afar.

Great Britain and her offspring nations are in physical possession of each and all of the covenants and promises made by God to the Fathers, to Israel and to the Divinely set up House of David, from whom our Royal Family are descended.

It contains many other facts that age does not wither nor the passage of time render stale.

Lord Byng of Vimy writes: "Thank you and bless you for your wonderful book."

Miss Mary Wilson wrote: "I have just finished The Destiny, and have never before been so thrilled by the perusal of anything on a printed page."

BOOK 2.

GOD'S COMMONWEALTHS

BRITISH AND AMERICAN

With a Chapter on Christ's Visit to Britain

By THE ROADBUILDER

The theme of the book is, that the History of the rise and growth of the British Empire and the United States of America is foretold in the Bible as God's servant Nations; that these two great Commonwealths fulfil, and are in physical possession of, all the Covenants and Promises that Jehovah made to the Fathers, to Israel of the Isles, and to the House of David, down through the ages.

That Jehovah designedly hid these facts from Anglo-Saxondom until the time of the Gentiles was fulfilled, as it was when General Allenby redeemed Jerusalem from the treading down by Gentile Turkey in 1917.

The author shows how Joseph of Arimathea came to Britain (with Lazarus, Martha his sister, and Maria Magdalene) and lived there thirty-eight years, and was buried in Britain. Quotes twenty authorities showing that St. Paul was in Britain for years, that the Disciple Aristobolus and the Apostle Simon Zelots lived and died in Britain, and in the last chapter writes on the rather startling rediscovery that our Lord was in Britain for many years, and as a carpenter built with His own hands the first Christian Church in the world at Glastonbury, England, as declared by St. Augustine in 596 A.D.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

THE CLEANSING OF ISRAEL—THE REBIRTH OF THE ANGLO-SAXON WORLD—II

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

EVIDENCES enough have been adduced to show that we are afflicted with petrifaction of the heart, a heart of stone.

"And I will give you an heart of flesh."

This is the heart that Jesus had, which ever responded with groanings and tears to human suffering and woe. His heart not only responded and wept with the sorrowful and suffering, but again and again, and finally and supremely, bestirred Him to soothe the sorrow, to turn it into joy; and, finally, to remove the cause of all suffering and of all sorrow. "Once in the end of the world Christ appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself."

"And I will put My spirit within you."

What a promise, and what a fulfilment, is at hand. We have in this day, perhaps, more spirit-possessed persons than have been known in any modern age. Their names are legion. Some are possessed with spirits which are wholly evil. Some are possessed with spirits which are unclean. These plunge into excesses, which would seem to indicate that the spirits of unclean men and women, cut off by death from the pursuit of their vices, seek to enter the bodies of others that they may thus continue to enjoy the lusts of the flesh after death.

Some are possessed with spirits which seem to be not actively evil, but which show a desire to continue to enjoy the mental activities which interested them while in the flesh. It is a strange time. One must walk under the protection of the blood of the Everlasting Covenant if one would preserve one's freedom from spirit influence. Such spirit possession, control or communion is not as it should be for the child of God. For him there has been prepared greater honour.

"I WILL PUT MY SPIRIT WITHIN YOU."

We are here talking of a reality as certain as that of life itself. Namely, that it is the privilege of the child of God to be possessed of the Spirit of God. When such is the glad experience of the child of God, there will be no room for any other indwelling spirit. Of that we may be sure.

This matter is further dealt with by our Lord when He solemnly promised to send the Holy Ghost, the Comforter, to the disciples and to those who should believe on His Name. Read the fourteenth and succeeding chapters of St. John's Gospel.

It is further made manifest by the descent of the Holy Ghost at Pentecost, and by the reception of the Holy Ghost by the members of the early Church, for instance, as at Ephesus. See Acts xix.

The happiness and power of men and women in whom is dwelling the Spirit of God is beyond question.

THE CLEANSING IS LEGAL.

Now what is the result of this cleansing, this removal of the stony heart, and the gift of a heart of flesh? Above all, what is the result of this putting of the Spirit of God within us?

"I will . . . cause you to walk in My statutes, and ye shall keep My commandments and do them."

There has grown up in connection with our Parliamentary procedure an ominous phrase. It runs, with variations, something like this : " The Government will TAKE POWER to do thus and so."

What is the process of this " taking power "? Why, it is simplicity itself. It is the using of the authority of a Judge to make a ruling which causes that to be law which previously had not been law. Or for the Cabinet to pass an " Order in Council " which makes that to be law which had not been law before. Or for a Government to use its subservient majority in the House to pass a measure, which makes that to be law which had not been law before. This is the process of " taking power." Authorized by any one of these agencies, the Administration lays a burden of obedience on the people, to refuse which would be to become a criminal, and to suffer in person a penalty for disobedience. To obey, on the other hand, would be to suffer in estate, without remedy.

Now all this is radically wrong. There is no real source of power to make new laws in the earth. God the LORD has reserved the giving of law as His Own prerogative. To imagine there is such a power in the earth, and to act on that imagination, has been the cause of the disruption of many a State, the overthrow of many a Government, and the breakdown of many a Kingdom and Empire. If left to run its course, this very " taking of power " will upset the Parliamentary system of Anglo-Saxondom, and that very soon.

But the cleansing which is coming will cure the body politic of this menace and disease. It will be recognized that God is the only Lawgiver, and that He has given the Law. It will be recognized that perfection of Government will come with, and only with, perfect obedience to God's perfect Law. So the nation will go back to God's Law as it was given to Israel by Moses, developed by judgments duly recorded, and ratified by Jesus Christ our Lord.

We humbly suggest to His Majesty the King, and to his responsible Ministers of State, that the time is opportune to appoint a Royal Commission to enquire into the Law as it was given to Israel, with a view to its application to the present needs of the British Empire. And the same recommendation and suggestion we make to His Honour the President, and to the Government, of the United States of America.

The cleansing will be preparatory to restoration of actual residential possession of the ancient heritage granted to our Fathers in the Abrahamic Covenants, which latter are as living and valid to-day as are any such instruments in the world. True, we hold and administer the country, but we do not dwell therein. When we do, the Temple area will resound to the praise of the God of Israel, and the land will resound to the gladsome voice of the Israel people.

" And ye shall dwell in the land which I gave to your fathers."

THE CLEANSING WILL BE SPIRITUAL.

Finally, the cleansing is preparatory to the full restoration of Spiritual communion with God. This will be as wide as the nation, which will share that glorious experience with the Church.

" And ye shall be My people, and I will be your God."

This, it will be seen, is the reversing of the doom of divorce contained in the beginning of the prophecies of Hosea ; and the fulfilment of the promise contained in that " Bill of Divorcement," as the Lord calls it, in Isaiah l.

It is the fulfilment of the promise of spiritual restoration quoted and used by the Apostle Peter when he said to the " Strangers scattered. . . . Which in time past were not a people, but are now the people of God ; which had not obtained mercy, but have now obtained mercy."

What a consummation is this, when the people shall be restored fully to God, and God shall be fully restored to His people.

Now, all this is promised to Israel ; and the TIME IS COME.

There is one condition reserved by the Lord. It is simple, but it is final. That one condition must be complied with, and we must be the ones, among others, who shall fulfil the condition.

THE ONE CONDITION.

" THUS SAITH THE LORD GOD ; I WILL YET BE ENQUIRED OF BY THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL TO DO IT FOR THEM."

How merciful is our Lord in imposing such a simple condition, and no more !

Had the Lord required of us to do some great ACT ; had He required us to offer some great SACRIFICE ; had He required of us to suffer some great PENANCE ; how bitterly we should have shrunk from it all. But no ; all that He has asked of us is that WE SHOULD ASK OF HIM that He would do for us this great and astounding work in Israel.

We cannot cleanse ourselves. We cannot change our own hearts. We cannot change our laws. We cannot command the indwelling of the Holy Ghost. But we can ASK HIM TO DO IT FOR US.

LET US PRAY, with the Bible open before us at the thirty-sixth chapter of Ezekiel, or the fourteenth chapter of St. John, and with His Word open before us, let us pray that the Lord will make this year a golden-lettered year by His progress in the cleansing and restoration to Divine favour of Israel-Britain-America, and all the other remnants and branches of the Israel people ; not forgetting all those who, in accepting Jesus Christ among other races and nations, have become fellow citizens with the Saints and of the household of God—Israelites by adoption.

OUR CLERGYMEN AND MINISTERS, ASSEMBLED AT THEIR ANNUAL CONFERENCE IN LONDON, AGREED TO SET ASIDE SOME MOMENTS BETWEEN TEN AND ELEVEN O'CLOCK EVERY SUNDAY NIGHT FOR PRAYER THAT GOD WOULD WORK THIS GREAT WORK IN ISRAEL THIS YEAR ; that is to say, IN ALL THE ANGLO-SAXON WORLD. WILL YOU JOIN WITH US IN THAT HOUR OF PRAYER?

WILL THE SCRIPTURE AND PRAYER UNION, UNDER THE LEADERSHIP OF OUR VETERAN COMMANDER ROBERTS, ALSO JOIN WITH US? AND WILL ALL OTHERS DO SO TO WHOM THIS WORD SHALL COME?

WHERE DO WE STAND TO-DAY IN REGARD TO PROPHECY?—I.

BY THE REV. COMMANDER L. G. A. ROBERTS, R.N.

THERE are, as most students know, three schemes for the interpretation of Prophecy.

The Preterist, which makes out Nero as the Antichrist.

The Futurist, which looks for a future fulfilment of the Book of the Revelation, from chapter iv to the end.

Digitized by Google

The Presentist, that declares Revelation iv to xx the great struggle of the Kingdom of God against the powers of the world; from the time of John to the Coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. This last-named is also called the Historical View. After very many years of reading and study, this view presents itself to my mind as the only reasonable conclusion. This does not imply that the coming of the Jews into the Kingdom may not be sudden, and in some way bear witness to a miniature fulfilment, should they throw in their belief in "One coming in His own Name." But this we believe will tend to confirm the Jew that Jesus Himself is their Messiah. "And they shall then look upon Him whom they pierced," but before this many of them will be saying "Blessed is He that cometh in the Name of the Lord," the veil being taken from their eyes.

To this end every Christian should be pressing. (Romans xi, 15, 16.) A brief summary of what, in the Book of Revelation, has been fulfilled and has become history will help us. The sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth, tenth chapters, and the eleventh as far as the eighth verse we have left behind. These are the ushering in of the Kingdom of God. The early falling away; the ten persecutions under the Roman Pagan power; the overthrow of Pagan Rome by the Kingdom set up by the God of Heaven. From chapter vi the struggle of the White Horse "conquering and to conquer" against "the Kings of the Earth" begins in this first series and will not end until the Kingdoms of this World (order of things) become the Kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ. (xi, 15.)

We have here also Rome under a tentative Christian Government, set up by Constantine the Great from Britain. To put it candidly, Rome was given the opportunity of receiving the Gospel of the Grace of God. This she openly refused under the ten persecutions. Therefore Britain was permitted to overthrow Rome. Constantine set up a Church Government over all the Roman Empire. During this time, in the seventh chapter, we have the sealing of the 144,000 out of all the tribes of Israel. And there was silence in Heaven for the space of half an hour until Theodosius's death; about 70 years' grace was offered to Rome to repent. But Rome, instead of repenting of her idolatry, paganized Christianity, and became worshippers of images, relics, martyrs and saints in the plâce of their former pagan gods. This is set forth in Rev. viii, 5, contrasted with v. 4, called "a condemnatory allusive contrast." Here we have the prayers of the 144,000, or the true saints, offered through Jesus Christ alone (v. 4), and those prayers offered through other mediatories as became the case in the Roman Empire after this time, led on to God giving them up to a man-made god (v. 5).

Now in consequence of this idolatry the seven angels with the seven trumpets come forth as in Rev. viii, ix and xi. The first four trumpets—1*st*, Alaric the Goth; 2*nd*, The Terrible Attila, the Hun; 3*rd*, Genseric the Vandal; 4*th*, finally destroyed as a military power, and the Government moved to Constantinople.

Now Rome becomes an ecclesiastical predominance and is ruled by the Papacy, commencing in A.D. 606, by the decree of Phocas.

Then follow the 5th Saracenic Woe Trumpet and the Turkish Woe, the 6th Trumpet, both in the ninth chapter of Revelation. For the eighth and ninth chapters the scene is laid in the Roman earth. The tenth and eleventh shift the scene to Britain.

We have here the effect of the Glorious Reformation, which commencing with pre-Reformation heroes in Britain, principally such as Bishop Grostête of Lincoln, Bradwardine and Wickliffe, culminated in Huss and Luther on the Continent. The mighty Angel who is represented as coming down from Heaven having in his hand a little book open, the Greek New Testament brought from Constantinople as the result of the conquest of Constantinople in A.D. 1453, which Erasmus translated, and effected what Wickliffe, the Morning Star of the Reformation, began so well.

This was the work of the Renaissance in Europe, the Continent being guided more by classical theology, whereas Britain was led by Scriptural theology. The Reformation in Europe was mainly political; in Britain it was spiritual—so His right foot was on the sea.

In the eleventh chapter we have the power of the Word of God in the purification of the worship of Almighty God through Jesus Christ, the settlement of our Church ordinances and the Thirty-Nine Articles. The fact that we have protested against the errors of the Church of Rome for 1,260 years, and that now, having done so, our testimony on the Continent is to cease. This culminates first in the inefficacy of our Witnesses there, but their ultimate ascension into the political Heaven, when the Spirit of Life from God shall enter into the two Witnesses, Britain and England, as formerly we were in A.D. 606, when the Apostasy began.

Now, we may venture an opinion, if there is to be a literal as well as a symbolical fulfilment, we may assume that a massacre may take place at Jerusalem, brought about by the Beast that ariseth out of the bottomless pit, of both Protestants and Christian Jews (or even orthodox Jews). This will open the eyes of Judah to the acknowledgment of the British Messiah as their own, "There is salvation (strength) to me also in the Lord of Hosts their God." (Zech. xii, 5.) Israel's God.

The language of Rev. xi, 13, "And the remnant were affrighted and gave glory to the God of Heaven." This remnant may allude to Isaiah i, 9 and x, 21, also Mic. v, 3.

The Twelfth, Thirteenth and Fourteenth Revelation treat of the same period, only commencing in symbol with the original enmity of the Serpent against the Seed of the Woman. The Woman is Israel, the Child, Jesus Christ, as born of Mary. The natural birth and the ascension are also types of the travail of the nation Israel in the bringing forth of the Congregation (Church) in contrast with "the Mystery, Babylon the Great and Mother of Harlots."

Worked out on the year-day system, the era of Constantine's establishment of Rome as a Christian Corporation would be circa A.D. 303–313. The Man-Child ascension we know as Christ, the catching up to the throne of God is also symbolized and applies to "the place prepared of God" whither the woman fled and was hid in the Wilderness (Britain) (Jer. xxxi, 2; Ezek. xx, 35–40), until 1,260 years had passed, i.e., from 303–313 to 1563–1573, Queen Elizabeth's reign. This chapter xii, with xiii, gives us the Apostasy persecuting the Kingdom of God, whose dwelling is "in Heaven" (xiii, 6). These are contrasted with "them which dwell upon the earth" (xiii, 8). This Apostasy has its number, 666, which symbolic number fits Rome, Lateinos, Napoleon and other leaders of the enemy, and is the year both of the worship of the Roman hierarchy in Latin and also of the protestation of both British and English nations and Church against the assumption of Rome.

Chapter xiv gives us the triumph of the 144,000 sealed ones, now on Mount Zion, with the Lamb, figurative of Britain, since the Reformation and especially the era of Christian Missions, then the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ at the time of Harvest. We have passed the preaching of the Gospel announced in v. 7, and are still carrying this on. V. 8 takes up the Witnessing power again, which for 3½ days-years was laid aside, and will be verified when Rome is destroyed. A great persecution still awaits those who dwell upon the Roman earth; out of which God's people are bidden to "come out." Armageddon is the scene of the last seven verses.

The fifteenth and sixteenth chapters are recapitulations, and dwell upon the outpouring of the Vials, during which the Kingdom of God is seen to be on the sea of glass, separated from the judgments which fall upon the Kingdom of the Beast. This epoch began under Napoleon and we are now at the close of the sixth Vial, preparatory to the return of the Kings from the East, at the final drying up of the Turkish Empire.

WEEK BY WEEK.

By A. R. H.

MALTA has suddenly come to the fore on the political horizon. Difficulties between CHURCH and STATE in this little Island have reached a crisis which promises to represent an international test case of the first importance.

Self-governing MALTA having "come of age" politically is anxious to cast-off the temporal leading-strings of the VATICAN. There is at present no revolt against the spiritual authority of the ROMAN CHURCH as such. Spiritual authority in spiritual things is fully accepted. But there has arisen a demand that in purely civil affairs the Government should be freed from the interference of the spiritual authorities.

But why should the example of MALTA be of such exceptional importance? The reason is as follows:—MALTA is an extreme case. MALTA is a Papal stronghold. The cause of freedom won in MALTA spells ultimate victory for every other Catholic nation in the world.

Moreover a victory for freedom in MALTA will deal a blow against the temporal power of the VATICAN from which it will never recover.

From the days when MALTA was ruled by the military-religious ORDER of the KNIGHTS of ST. JOHN, the Church have owned one-third of the landed property in the Island.

Onward through the turbulent Middle Ages, when MALTA stood her ground as bulwark of EUROPE against the influence of the Church remained supreme.

But in a century of British administration a complete transformation has taken place. Development of political consciousness has proceeded apace. Schools, hospitals and public institutions have passed from the Church into the hands of civil authorities, and the Church is finding it impossible to insist upon political domination in a country judged by dominion standards to be its own master.

Realization of the actualities of autonomy has been a bitter experience for the Church. The new developments have been too sudden for its liking. The vigour with which the Government have obtained the rights of civil authority inherently due to it has made the necessary readjustments seem unusually abrupt. The suspicion has hardened that Lord Strickland in his efforts to abrogate the temporal power of the clergy aims at destroying their spiritual authority.

This charge is unfounded, for in reality Lord Strickland's proposals would safeguard the dignity of the clergy. As a Daily Express Special Correspondent neatly summarizes it:—"Lord Strickland wishes to establish a strong independent civil power, and is generally supported by the working-classes, to whom MATERIAL PROGRESS MEANS EMPLOYMENT.

"The legal class opposes him for fear that, with an educated populace, it would lose its old prestige."

The whole matter has reached an acute stage now, due to the Bishop of Malta's proclamation declaring that all who vote for Lord Strickland commit "a mortal sin" and will be denied the spiritual ministrations of the Church; the attempted assassination of Lord Strickland in the Law Courts; and Lord Strickland's counter action in securing an ordinance by which the elections are suspended until the Vatican opposition and interference is withdrawn.

But the clock of progress cannot be put back. Reactionary organizations full of mediæval ideas about keeping the masses in subjection and ignorance cannot prevail once the rising tides of freedom, education, enlightenment and progress are let loose.

By the promotion of education (especially the teaching of the English and Maltese languages in place of Italian and Latin), Lord Strickland has been able to achieve more in his short term of office than any of his predecessors have accomplished in half a century. And the mass of the people love their Premier just as much as they love the British connection.

The Maltese people are being sorely tried. For in addition to internal strife over questions of CHURCH and STATE they have to face an assault (insidious as yet) from external sources upon their nationality. It is not generally known, but every Fascist Officer has a map of the so-called "Italian Irredenta" fitted into the back of his wrist-watch and in the centre of the map is MALTA!

Let a Maltese authority now continue the story for us:—"No occasion is lost of impressing upon the world that MALTA is unredeemed Italian soil and that the Maltese are labouring to free themselves from a foreign yoke," writes Walter Borg, in the Review of Reviews. "This campaign has been going on for a long time and is daily increasing in intensity.

"In fact, at a recent sitting of the 'Dante Alighieri' at MILAN, a resolution was passed by acclamation to make an appeal to the not to permit the destruction of the Italianity of the entirely Italian Island of MALTA.

"So persistent is this Italian campaign about MALTA that the world is slowly being persuaded to believe the 'unredeemed soil' theory and to imagine that the Maltese are dissatisfied with their association with the BRITISH EMPIRE, and are anxious to throw in their lot with ITALY.

"Yet nothing is more untrue and displeasing to the Maltese than this insinuation. On the contrary, they are among the most faithful subjects of HIS MAJESTY the KING.

"They entered in 1800 the BRITISH COMMUNITY OF NATIONS of their OWN FREE WILL,

a fact which is recorded by a tablet placed in the most conspicuous part of the principal square of the ISLAND: 'Magnæ et invictæ Britanniæ Melitensium amor has insulas confirmat.'

"Their love for the EMPIRE has not diminished since then. Time and again they have renewed their pledge by shedding their blood for the EMPIRE. During the late war the number of Maltese volunteers was so large that MALTA remained one of the few parts of the EMPIRE where conscription was not enforced.

"Never in their chequered history have the Maltese desired to become an integral part of the KINGDOM of ITALY. For how can they who are and are the only* branch of that great race to-day in existence tell the world that, though ROME destroyed CARTHAGE and its civilization, the race could not and has not been destroyed—how can the MALTESE ever recognize ITALY as their mother country? The Italians can no more absorb MALTA and its people than they can restore the ROMAN EMPIRE.

"This absorption idea is refuted by every chapter and every page in the history of the MALTESE ISLANDS. In spite of the fact that MALTA was for many centuries under the domination of ROME, in spite of the fact that MALTA was a dependency of the KINGDOM of the TWO SICILIES for many generations, in spite of the fact that the KNIGHTS of the ruled it for a very considerable number of years, in spite of its proximity to ITALY, in spite of the commercial relations existing between the two countries—in spite of these facts, the Maltese, who are barely a quarter of a million souls, have remained a Race apart.

"The central points of the Italian thesis for the annexation of MALTA are that geographically, historically, and racially, the ISLAND and its inhabitants are Italian; and Italian also in language and religion.

"Although MALTA is only 60 miles from the Sicilian coast, the topographical configuration of the ISLAND is the best evidence that it has never been a part of SICILY. It is the opinion of competent authorities that MALTA formed the extreme point of a ridge which ran from the North African coast across the MEDITERRANEAN and divided that body of water into two basins. The ridge sunk under the water in the course of the centuries, probably in some tremendous volcanic upheaval, leaving above the sea only the farthest end of it which is to-day the ISLAND of MALTA. The monolithic temples existing in the Island and recent archæological discoveries confirm this theory. SICILY can show nothing of the kind, the two countries having been distinct and apart.

"Again history, as far back as history is recorded, shows that MALTA was the advance guard of CARTHAGE. HANNIBAL, the great Carthaginian general—the terror of ancient ROME—was born and brought up there. In the contest between the ROMANS and the CARTHAGINIANS for the mastery of the MEDITERRANEAN, MALTA played much the same part which HELIGOLAND played in the late war. It was the headquarters of the Carthaginian fleet, and no doubt it was also a centre for the replenishment, both in men and stores, of the Carthaginian army operating on Italian soil.

"It is no less interesting to observe that tradition likewise is against the theory expounded by Italian writers. HOMER places the scene of the love idyll of Ulysses and Calypso in Gozo, Malta's sister island. Tired of love and idleness, Ulysses pines for his home and his people. Yet according to Herodotus there must at that time have been a Greek settlement in Sicily. There was a Greek colony in Sicily when ST. PAUL on his journey to ROME was shipwrecked on Malta's shores; still in it is stated that the 'barbarians' treated the survivors with much kindness. And at that time those who knew no Greek were referred to as 'barbarians.'

"Not only did the Maltese speak no Greek, but they differed then, as now, in all the racial characteristics which are peculiar to the Italians of the south. Those who visit MALTA for the first time cannot but be struck by the

of the children. This is especially so of the country districts where there has been little mingling of blood. The dolce far niente atttitude characteristic of the southern Italians is absent here. The Maltese are a busy people, energetic, and always on the go. Like their forefathers, the Phœnicians, they are a seafaring race, and Maltese seamen are renowned for skill and courage at sea. The folk-lore of the people too is non-Italian.

"But where the gulf which separates the two peoples is widest is the fact that the language spoken by the Maltese is essentially different from Italian or Sicilian. Unlike the latter, it is not a dialect and cannot, therefore, be considered as pertaining to any of the different dialects spoken in Italy. In construction and in syntax it stands by itself. The linguistic patrimony of the Maltese is not the Italian language. The Maltese speak a language of their own, a language like the people themselves. They inherited it from their ancestors, the Phœnicians, and have preserved it through the centuries almost intact, notwithstanding the fact that it has for thousands of years been kept in the background by foreign rulers of the Island. This fact alone speaks volumes for the strength of the language and for the racial qualities of the people who speak it. The language of the people remains Maltese. Among the higher and better educated classes English is spoken but never Italian.

"The last gun in the battery brought to play on Malta by the Italians fires ammunition of a religious nature. Italians and Maltese have a common religion. They both profess the Catholic faith. Consequently it is argued, the Maltese are a branch of the Italian family. Of all the silly arguments this is the silliest. Community of religion is not community

* Had the writer Walter Borg read Waddell's "Phœnician Origin of Britons and Scots," he would have seen that the Race of which the Maltese are a remnant is far more widespread than he imagines.

† These are the physical characteristics of the Israel and Saxon Peoples.

Digitized by Google

of nationality. However attached the Maltese may be to the Catholic Church, there is nothing they hate more than to be classified as Italian.

"They are just as proud of their race as the Italians are of theirs, and they repudiate with all their power every connection with the Italian People. Their racial independence is which they jealously guard.

"Therefore they resent Italy's bearing towards them. They claim the same right to work out their destiny as the Italians have to shape theirs. Any outside influence on political developments is an encroachment on that right.

"Nevertheless the Italian Press is at great pains to depict the Island as seething with unrest because a real is doing everything in its power to check Italian interference in Maltese affairs and is living up to the dearest tradition of the inhabitants. Nothing could be further from the truth.

"To the very great majority of the population of MALTA the language question has no real meaning. They realize that their future is bound up with that of the EMPIRE, and the is the language they are interested in. There are a few hot-heads—not more than twenty in number—who have 'irredentist' aspirations. They make a lot of noise, but have never dared to bring the language question before the electorate. They have always studiously avoided it. The whole Island would rise against them.

"The present activity of the Italian Press is akin to that of a thief who, caught in the act, resorts to violence. But the danger signal has been given."

Thus is concluded a stirring story of the Maltese question told by one of her own people. The heart of the BRITISH PEOPLE in the BRITISH ISLANDS will go out in loving sympathy to the inhabitants of the ISLAND OF MALTA in their present difficulties, the more so as the realization of their common origin and destiny dawns upon them.

The Methodist Recorder commenting on the situation says:—"Whatever the inciting cause, the VATICAN must be held solely responsible for the present trouble, on account of its refusal to 'seek in co-operation with HIS MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT some means by which the interests of CHURCH and STATE in MALTA can be brought into lasting harmony'—to quote a British Note.

"We hesitate to believe that the POPE is designedly using his great influence and power to assist Italian Imperialistic policy . . . . . But it is certainly that one of the main items in the programme of the political party opposed to Lord Strickland, and supported by the Church hierarchy, is the extension of the Italian language and culture in the ISLAND."

The late Concordat between the ROMAN GOVERNMENT and the VATICAN makes the menace a formidable one. For never in history, perhaps, have there been at the same time two stronger men at the head of Church and State. But BRITAIN stands like a rock behind MALTA in her struggle for freedom. And the rock will stand unshaken against all assaults.

In this dispute BRITAIN has no quarrel with the ITALIAN PEOPLE. Many are the ties of friendship which bind ITALY and BRITAIN one to the other. The dispute is one of principle and has arisen from the inevitable clash between contending ideals in sovereignty and government.

It is a striking fact that the matter should have reached a definite crisis on that significant date, referred to in Mr. Bernard Nicklin's late series of articles, entitled "The Days of the End."

MAY 30TH, 1930,

Writing on June 5th regarding this, Mr. Nicklin says:—"I notice in to-day's issue of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE the last instalment appears of my article and, as in this, prominence is given to so recent a date as May 30th—as being 1260 days to the striking of Midnight (November 10th, 1933), and 2300 days to the End of the Last Pyramid Passage (September 16th, 1936)—some of your readers may be wondering whether anything of a prophetic character occurred to signalize it.

"As mentioned, this date was the second anniversary of entering the Last Low Passage, and that in itself rather makes it notable. But seeing that the 1335th day, and 2 × 666th day preceding November 10th, 1933, respectively marks the Day of Intercession of the CHURCH of ENGLAND (March 16th) and Day of Intercession of the CHURCH of ROME (March 19th) for RUSSIA, it would seem the event (if one at all) to be looked for, might well be one relating to BRITAIN and the PAPACY.

"Now it is a coincidence that in to-day's newspapers, what is spoken of as A GRAVE CONFLICT between the BRITISH GOVERNMENT and the VATICAN, reached an acute stage on May 30th, by the British Note handed to the HOLY SEE on that day, charging the VATICAN with taking action 'which constitutes nothing less than a claim to interfere with the domestic politics of a BRITISH COLONY.'

"Realizing what lies ahead for EPHRAIM-ISRAEL, and what lies ahead for the ROMAN CHURCH, and also the Scriptural connection of 1260 with the latter, and that 2300 is the number for THE CLEANSING OF THE SANCTUARY, one cannot help thinking this incident may prove of import. At any rate, it will keep us watchful."

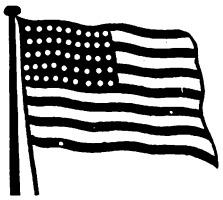
Yes, the eyes of all nations begin to look with anxious watchfulness toward ROME, where a restored temporal power at the VATICAN HILL begins to make its influence felt in nearly as bellicose a manner as that emanating from IL DUCE himself.



Mussolini's fiery speech at FLORENCE in May, 1930, when he offered the WORLD 'the precious friendship or stubborn enmity' of ITALY, saying: "It was I myself who ordered this review, because words are a very fine thing, but muskets, machine-guns, ships, airplanes, and guns are even better; because right if unaccompanied by might is a vain word,"—was a cause of much misgiving to those who have the peace of the world at heart.

FASCISM, right or wrong, has made ITALY a strong nation. God grant that her new-found strength may not snare her into the path of disaster through failure to resist the temptation of a warlike adventure.

THE PRESENT MENACE
AND HOW TO MEET IT.

By the REV. W. PASCOE GOARD, F.R.G.S., etc.

The years 1914–1918 marked the period of the world's great agony resulting from physical conflict.

The period since 1918 has been a continuation of that agony in the mental world.

The result of the mental disturbance may be tabulated in part as follows :—

(1) The Empires of the Continental world have crashed, viz., the Russian, Turkish, Austrian and German Empires.

(2) Ancient systems of organized religion have been shaken, such as the Greek Church of Russia, and the Mohammedan organization of Turkey, including the Caliphate.

(3) Other systems of organized religion are feeling the strain and are in manifest danger.

(4) The economic organization of Europe crashed under the pressure. The economic situation of the world is feeling the strain of the mental unbalancing of the minds of the peoples.

(5) More lives have been destroyed since the war, in Russia and elsewhere, by the mental upheaval and the consequent revolutions, than were destroyed by the Great War.

(6) Morality has shrivelled under the scorching breath of Communist doctrine.

(7) Family life has been threatened, and has in part been swept away.

BRITAIN is not exempt from the menace. If Britain and the Anglo-Saxon world would escape the destruction which has fallen upon Russia and which has shaken the fabric of the western nations, she must examine and estimate the danger and take the necessary steps to avert it in time to save our institutions and our faith. We may state the position in a sentence, and then we can examine it in detail.

WHAT GERMANY AND HER ALLIES TRIED TO DO THROUGH MILITARY ORGANIZATION, COMMUNISTIC RUSSIA HAS ENDEAVOURED AND IS STILL ENDEAVOURING TO DO THROUGH DOCTRINE.

The assumption of the Communist leaders is that DOCTRINE IS MORE EFFECTIVE THAN THE SWORD.

COMMUNIST DOCTRINE.

The first and basic plank in the platform of doctrine held and acted upon by the Russian Bureau is that :—

THERE IS NO GOD, and the corollary, RELIGION IS A FALSE AND MISCHIEVOUS THING.

There follows the logical deduction. Morals which have been founded upon religion are unnecessary and burdensome. Therefore they should be jettisoned from the individual and the national life. Love, self-sacrifice, pity, mercy and kindred sentiments which have been esteemed to be virtues, are now declared to be weaknesses and even vices. Let hatred take the place of love, firmness the place of pity ; the strong hand of authority take the place of self-sacrifice, and the play of natural instincts take the place of morals and self-restraint. In fact, let the ancient " natural man " be unchained and let morality be as a thing forgotten. This is the doctrine proclaimed by the Communists.

AN ANTI-GOD CAMPAIGN

has been inaugurated. Family life and purity have been abolished. National honour and the obligation to fulfil engagements have been repudiated. People are being dragged in the mire of moral and physical pollution. There are natures which will glory in all this, and seek to join in the saturnalia produced.

It is unbelievable by decent moral beings that such oceans of blood have been shed, such innumerable lives destroyed, such culture repudiated, such lust and crime enthroned, as is the case at the present time in one of the physically and numerically greatest nations of the earth ! That one of the erstwhile " Great World Powers " should thus plunge is a matter for wonder and for dread. What has happened to one of the civilized nations might possibly happen to all. Then would come the end of Civilization and all that it contains of peace and prosperity.

These may sound like the ravings of an alarmist. But they are statements of sober fact.

The forces which have worked such disaster in Russia are present throughout the world, even in Britain at this time, and

MUST BE MET AND SUBDUED.

How did the world fall into this state of affairs ? Where is the fountain head of the flood which is thus threatening to sweep the world over the brink of a veritable Niagara of revolution ?

The story is now more than a century old. Early in the eighteenth century Voltaire began his course of raillery against religion and all connected with it. Had he been alone it would have counted for little, but there was in the minds of the people a disposition to follow such a lead ; the virus, widely spread, finding expression in the utterances of Voltaire and his school, produced the French Revolution. Some of the MSS. of the late Ferrar Fenton deal with the anti-God war in the French Revolution. The writings might stand without alteration except as to dates and names for the anti-God war in Russia to-day. The Movement is one, the cause one.

After the French Revolution, when the thinking of the world had been stabilized by the faith of Britain, and the peace of the world had been re-established by the arms of Britain, the stream of atheistic propaganda ran underground for awhile, but emerged again in in Germany. It gave to us the red years of 1914–1918.

In logical progress it produced the Revolutions in the Continental Empires, and struck deeply into Russian soil, producing the state of chaos now to be found there. That there is in this a continued world menace of the most malign and dangerous kind, no man in his right mind can deny.

Every department of our national life is feeling the strain which this miasma of Communistic anti-God doctrine is putting upon it. In every department there is danger of collapse.

Everyone will agree that the first duty is to try to understand all the factors which make up the present condition of affairs, and that when we have that understanding it is imperative that action should be taken in regard to the matter. What shall that action be?

THE FAITH OF THE ANGLO-SAXON WORLD.

All thinking people will agree that the world was saved in the nineteenth century by the faith of the Anglo-Saxon race. While Europe was being deluged by the unfaith of Voltaire and his school, the faith of Britain was revived, and fanned into a fierce heat by the Wesleyan Revival. It was the preaching of Wesley and of his associates that stablished the thinking of the Anglo-Saxon world at the time of the French Revolution.

IT MUST BE THE FAITH OF THE ANGLO-SAXON WORLD WHICH WILL AGAIN STEM THE TIDE OF REVOLUTION NOW SWEEPING OVER THE NATIONS.

This is more important to Britain to-day than party platforms can possibly be. Party platforms and political activities, important though they may be to the nation in normal times, cannot stem the tide of pernicious doctrine which is sweeping the whole fabric of civilization to the verge of the cataract. Even the League of Nations, excellent as its declared objects are, carefully avoids mention of the Name of God and therefore cannot meet the menace of the anti-God campaign. The faith of the Anglo-Saxon world, if rightly directed to an understanding of the factors in the present-day unrest, can, and must, save the situation. Upon our understanding of these things depends our ability to counter the flood of Communist doctrine.

Now the phase of doctrine apropos the present situation is the doctrine of

THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

Lest we should be misunderstood, we must here call attention to the fact that the Gospel, as presented to us in the New Testament, has two distinct phases which run parallel to each other all through the Book. The first phase is the preaching of the Gospel of the Kingdom of God; and the second phase is the preaching of the Gospel of Salvation. We follow the order in which the two phases of the Gospel are introduced in the New Testament.

We read in the first Chapter of St. Mark that our Lord "came into the regions of Galilee preaching the Kingdom of God." This was the first word of the Christian dispensation.

He thereafter trained and sent out His twelve disciples, and then His seventy, instructing them to preach, saying, "The Kingdom of Heaven is at hand."

We read in the last paragraph of the Acts of the Apostles: "And Paul dwelt two whole years in his own hired house, and received all that came in unto him, preaching the Kingdom of God, and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ." So we see that the Kingdom of God was also included in the last stage of Apostolic preaching.

In the twenty-fourth Chapter of St. Matthew, our Lord declares: "This Gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come." So on the authority of our Lord Himself we know that the Gospel of the Kingdom shall also be the last word of the Christian dispensation. Needless to say, neither our Lord, nor His disciples, preached the Gospel of the Kingdom to the exclusion of the Gospel of Salvation, but the two phases run parallel to each other throughout the Bible. We are quite orthodox, then, when of the Kingdom of God.

The fact is that God has established for Himself, and for the world, a national organization. This national organization is founded upon a system of Divine Law, which is given to us in the Bible and which is the basis of the Common Law of Britain. This national organization is under the direct administration of the LORD GOD ALMIGHTY, in regard to all supreme matters affecting His Kingdom in the world—He allows us self-government in all minor affairs.

This national organization is founded, primarily, upon one family selected from among all the families of the earth. The family so selected to form the basis of the Kingdom has been cultured and cared for during three thousand five hundred years, and has been trained to meet the crisis of the present age. The modern development of that FAMILY IS THE CELTIC, ANGLO-SAXON, and all the other branches of the people which go to the making of the Anglo-Saxon race so-called. These form the organized centre and nucleus of the official Kingdom of God, which is destined to include all the nations of the earth. Celt, Saxon, Dane, Norman and all the various branches of British people are of the same stock. Together these go to the making of what the world knows as the Anglo-Saxon people. We mean Britain and her Overseas Dominions, and the United States of America.

THE ANGLO-SAXON NATION AND COMPANY OF NATIONS, AND THE UNITED STATES BRANCH OF THE SAME PEOPLE, CONSTITUTE THE NATIONAL BASIS OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD IN THE EARTH.

We say—the national BASIS—no person and no race is excluded. All are invited to enter in. This has no reference to the matter of Salvation for the individual. It has reference to God's administration, ensuring peace and prosperity for the nations.

THE HISTORIC GROWTH of the national organization of the Kingdom of God is tabulated. Among the several chronological tables which scholars have provided, we shall follow Archbishop Ussher, as his table is the most easily accessible to all.

In 1927 B.C. (circa) God called and established Abraham and Sarah, and in them, through Isaac and Israel, He established His household for ever. The great charter of the family is found in the seventeenth Chapter of the Book of Genesis. It is signed by :—

EL SHADDAI (God Almighty).—Abraham.—Sarah.

This is the original household as established by God. Into this household was born Isaac, the father of the Saxons. Of him was born Jacob-Israel, the father of Israel. Of Jacob were born the twelve patriarchs, the heads of the tribes of Israel. And into this household are still being born the modern descendants of the Fathers.

In 1496 B.C. (circa) their descendants were organized into the nation Israel, henceforth to be the national basis of the Kingdom of God in the earth, as set forth in the nineteenth and twentieth Chapters of Exodus. The charter contained in those Chapters is of more importance to us as a race and nation than is Magna Charta or any other modern document. It is the establishment of our race and nation by the fiat of Almighty God, while Magna Charta was only the act of King John.

In 1100 B.C. (circa) the House of David was established to rule over the Kingdom of the Lord for ever, and it still rules in the present House of Windsor in the person of His Gracious Majesty King George V.

In 975 B.C. the nation was divided into two kingdoms, and the nation so divided has never been fully re-united to this day. At that date JUDAH WAS SEPARATED FROM ISRAEL, and since that day Israel has been a non-JUDAIC PEOPLE.

The Israel of Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel and the minor prophets, the Israel of the four Gospels and of the Acts of the Apostles, and of the Epistles, had no tribe of Judah in it. Therefore there is no excuse for confounding non-Judaic Israel with Judah or the Jews. Judah has its own honoured place in the Holy Scriptures, and its own assigned place in world affairs.

ISRAEL HAS BEEN, AND IS, A KINGDOM SEPARATE FROM JUDAH.

This is an historic condition which has obtained for 2,900 years.

In looking for Israel, therefore, we must look for a non-Judaic people. Israel has always continued to function as a nation in one or other of its branches. To this the oath of God was pledged ages ago, and He has fully redeemed His pledge. See Jeremiah xxxi, and see the clear-cut records of secular history.

In 740–721 B.C. Israel was carried captive by Assyria ; Judah was not. The story of Judah's later captivity and return does not concern us here.

In a short time Israel struck out for freedom and obtained it. For centuries Israel dwelt about the Caspian and Black Seas, some north and some south of the Asiatic border. Those north were called Scythians ; those south were called Sacae ; these, and many other names, such as Kumri, Gaetae (Goths), etc. They dwelt in those regions, moving about within limits, until the eruption of the Huns about the third century A.D. drove them pell mell into Europe, over the Danube into the Roman Empire ; through the Roman Empire to the margin of the Atlantic and the Baltic ; and thence, under pressure from the Continent, into Britain.

They passed through Europe as Goths, Ostro-Goths, Visi-Goths, and under other names. In Britain these ultimately united with the ancient Britons, and so became once more a part of the Kingdom.

The Goths came into Britain as Saxons, Jutes, Danes, and so on, taking names from the localities in which they had rested en route. (See Gibbon's " Rise and Fall of the Roman Empire " and various notes thereon.) Coming into Britain they found here the ancient Britons, who were a much earlier migration of the same stock. Finally in A.D. 1066 came the Norman branch of the same people. They were all Divinely directed in their wanderings, and brought to these Isles. Even in the great law of migrations we can understand succeeding waves of the same people taking up the same line of march.

Organized anew in these Islands, they reappear as the national basis of the Kingdom of God in the earth, among the governments of the earth. They have been governed by God from (circa) 1496 B.C., when the Law was given (at Sinai), which is the basis of the Common Law of England. That Law was codified in England as early as 1100 B.C. by King Brute. Again it was codified in England about 500 B.C. by King Mulmutius—and yet again by King Alfred the Great.

REPRESENTING HIS GOVERNMENT

in the midst of His Kingdom and is still as much as ever the King of His Kingdom nation. His law is the only safe system for the guidance of mankind, and for the successful rule of the nations of the earth.

From 740 B.C. to approximately A.D. 1800 the Israel-British nation was under sentence of punishment, and, therefore, world rule was entrusted by Almighty God to the succession of Continental Empires for an exact period of seven prophetic times. These prophetic times began with the setting-up of Nebuchadnezzar's Empire in 602 B.C. (see Daniel ii) and ended in A.D. 1918, when the Empires crashed, exactly at the end of seven times, or 2,520 years. About A.D. 1800 Britain, which is modern Israel, began to emerge from that period of punishment—amounting to 2,520 years, or " seven times "—and to rapidly take her place as the restored " Ruler with God " which the name Israel means.

The time of the French Revolution was the beginning of the END OF THE CONTINENTAL POWER.

The French Revolution culminated in the Napoleonic régime, which broke in pieces under the guns of the British Fleet at Trafalgar and upon the squares of the British Army at Waterloo.

1914–1918 saw the end of the Continental system, when Turkey, Austria, Germany and Russia ceased to be Empires.

RISE OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

After A.D. 1800 the British people began their miracle expansion both as to the numbers of the people and the extension of the British Empire. From sixteen millions we have grown to one hundred and sixty millions in a century and a quarter. From " Little England " we have grown to a world-wide Empire, plus the greatest single people on the face of the earth—the United States of America. Under the united flags of the Anglo-Saxon race, one-third of the human race is enjoying liberty and peace—that is, about 650 millions of people.

THE FAMILY WIDER THAN THE NATION.

The family or Household of God established in the earth through Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, is more widespread and numerous than the Israel people within the Kingdom of God. The Kingdom never at any one time embraced all of the family of Israel. Therefore the fact that people of the same stock are to be found elsewhere in the world is not of vital importance to this consideration of the matter. Europe, Asia and Africa have colonies of these peoples, settled there from the distant past. Some of these remember from whence and from whom they came; others do not, but bear signs by which the ethnologist identifies them.

ELEMENTS OF THE KINGDOM.

The Kingdom, as organized at Sinai out of the chosen family, contained three elements which must be found in every Kingdom; namely, the Nation, the King, and the Constitution or law. Take any one of these elements away, and whatever else the organization which remains may be, it will not be a Kingdom. So, turning to the record of the setting-up of the Kingdom as it is written in Exodus, Chapters xix and xx, we find:—

THE NATION.—Israel.

THE KING.—Jehovah.

THE LAW.—The Ten Commandments and the following statutes.

These three vital elements were there brought together and organized into the Kingdom of God in the earth. The history of the Kingdom shows a spectacle at times reaching to the point of supreme tragedy. It shows the Lord striving to lead His people, to train His people, into the necessary habits of life and mind to render them suitable to be what they had been called to be, namely, the national basis of the Kingdom of God.

All the succeeding history of Israel shows the same wonderful spectacle carried unweariedly on through over three thousand years to our own day. For a time the people were more or less obedient to the Divine Law. At least their will was good in that direction. They confessed themselves to be the people of the Lord. They acknowledged Him to be their God. They reverenced and owned obedience, as a duty, to His law, no matter how short they came in actual fulfilment.

THE KINGDOM SUPREME.

During this time, especially in the reigns of David—the founder of the reigning House of Britain—and of Solomon, his son and successor, Israel dominated the world situation. They were too strong for any enemy to attack at this period of Israel history. They occupied the road between Assyria and Egypt. Egypt could not move to attack Assyria, and Assyria could not move to attack Egypt while David and Solomon held the intervening territory. Therefore, Israel dominated and commanded the peace of the then known world.

THE KINGDOM REMOVED.

But the time came when Israel went away from God in religion and in law. Therefore, they were removed from world leadership. They were also carried into captivity. Their sentence had been pronounced ages before by Moses, their founder and prophet. We can read it in the twenty-sixth Chapter of Leviticus, and that sentence was for 2,520 years, or until A.D. 1799. That sentence began to go into effect in 740–721 B.C. and ended at the end of 2,520 years, in, say, A.D. 1800 (See Dr. Grattan Guinness' " Approaching End of the Age," etc.) This, then, was the position of Britain at the beginning of the nineteenth century.

THE KINGDOM BEING RESTORED.

It was at that time that she fought with her back to the wall against the western world in arms. When the conflict—indeed, the whole series of conflicts—was over, Britain came out with treaties which confirmed to her, or gave her, Newfoundland, Canada, Gibraltar, Cape of Good Hope, Bombay, West Indies, etc., and her own ships took possession of Australia and New Zealand; and so the Empire was fully born. At the same historic period America became a nation, and so the Empire and the Republic may be said to have appeared almost simultaneously.

At that time a new civilization was born into the world—the Anglo-Saxon Civilization.

We are used to talking and thinking of the succession of Empires. Have we thought of the succession of Civilizations? Think of those civilizations which existed in ancient Babylonia and in ancient Egypt. Think of the new type of civilization which sprang up in Israel, on the shore of the Mediterranean (1496 B.C.), which flourished until 740 B.C., and continued in the Jews to A.D. 70. Think, now, of the Roman world civilization. Then think of European civilization replacing all these. Following European civilization, at the beginning of the nineteenth century in the Anglo-Saxon world. It is younger than European civilization. It is different from European civilization. European civilization was founded upon Imperial Rome and upon the Civil Law. The historic descent of European civilization is by way of Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece and Rome. The New Civilization is the emergence of the Kingdom of God once more to a dominant place in world affairs, and the elements entering into it are the same Israel nation, the same God and the same Law amplified by the Sermon on the Mount. We know these as (1) the British-Israel or Anglo-Saxon nations; (2) Jehovah, the King; and (3) the Law of the Lord or the Common Law of England.

A NEW CIVILIZATION IS BORN

That civilization which has thus emerged has covered continents and islands to a greater extent than European civilization ever did. That which has been built up in the material, sociological, administrative, moral and spiritual departments of that civilization exceeds every such structure the world has known. What countries it involves! Individual Provinces of Canada, States of Australia and of the United States of America compare with major European countries. What material wealth it has produced! What multitudes of people have appeared to take possession of these heritages! And then we remember that this civilization is the work of a century and a quarter! The whole matter is still only in the beginning. Who can estimate what a second century of such development promises both for the British Empire (the Nation and Company of Nations of Gen. xxxv, 11) and the Republic of America (the Great People of Gen. xlviii, 19). Nothing like it has ever been seen on the earth before in extent, but in principle it is ancient Israel in all its glory reappearing. It glories in the same God. It delights in the same Truth. It is obedient (more or less) to the same Law. It trusts in the same salvation.

THE KINGDOM MUST ENDURE.

Now, what does all this mean? Is it something which is to be destroyed by the virus of Communism—which never yet attacked a nation or a civilization which it did not destroy, unless it was met and overcome by superior doctrine and faith? Or is this Kingdom a work of God brought to the present stage as a great blessing to the earth and to all who dwell in it, and which shall be carried on triumphantly to the end? We believe it to be the work of God. We believe it to be the Kingdom of God on the way to that perfection we are led ultimately to expect in His Kingdom in the earth. It is in part for this we pray when we say, "Thy Kingdom come." It is for this we pray when we say, "O Lord, bless Thine heritage, make Thy chosen people joyful. Govern them and lift them up for ever."

Neither is this the final thing which God will yet produce in the earth. It is the initial organization. It is the race and nation and fellowship of nations through which He will produce His ultimate triumph in human government. It is the Kingdom of God in the twentieth century.

In that next and ultimate stage all nations will constitute the Kingdom of God. To this Kingdom ultimately, and many of us believe soon, the Lord Jesus Christ will come. There He will find the British Royal House directly descended from the throne of David operating in accordance with the oath to that effect of the Lord Almighty. When He so comes 'God shall give unto Him the throne of His father David, and He shall rule over the House of Jacob for ever, and of His Kingdom there shall be no end."

Now for the Challenge and the Call.

These things are being accepted by members of all Christian and patriotic organizations within the boundaries of the Empire. They recognize the preaching of the Gospel of the Kingdom to be a prime duty, and that there is help and strength in it for every organization which exists to preach the Gospel of Salvation. The one phase of the Gospel supports and enforces the other. Our Lord Himself and His disciples, who afterwards became His Apostles, all preached both the Gospel of the Kingdom and the Gospel of Salvation: two phases of the same Gospel.

In the Gospel of the Kingdom there is Salvation for the structure of our Civilization.

WE ASK FOR A CONCERTED MOVEMENT TO PREACH THE DOCTRINE OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

By this means we shall meet and overcome the doctrine of the anti-God campaign; and by this means we shall also restore faith and confidence, and so stabilize national life in world affairs.

The British-Israel-World Federation, inter-denominational and non-political, is bending every effort to this end. It is the friend of every Church and organization devoted to the preaching of the Gospel. It is the friend and well-wisher of every person who is loyal to God, to the Throne and to the State. We are challenging the Christian world of Britain, the British Commonwealth of Nations and the United States to get together upon this and to proclaim that the Kingdom of God is manifest in our national life.

There is salvation for our civilization in this Crusade.

There is salvation for our material prosperity in it.

There is salvation for the world in it.

Leaders of the Empire in Church and State, give this Crusade the weight of your exalted position and great powers!

Men of faith, put your spiritual power and influence into the driving powers of this Movement!

Men of learning, inform yourselves of the facts and put your learning at the disposal of the Lord and His Cause, in this campaign!

Men who wield the power of the Press, put your great influence behind this campaign!

Men of wealth, put your resources behind this Movement!

Let us win the nation and the world for God!

Let us in this, the only way, avert the Communistic menace which threatens to destroy civilization; restore the faith and stability of our national institutions, bringing the Commonwealth of Anglo-Saxon Nations back to God and His Law.

THE RALLYING CENTRE

of this Great Movement, which has millions of adherents, including thousands of outstanding men and women representing all classes of the community, is the British-Israel-World Federation. It is sending out millions of books and pamphlets, and carrying on a platform campaign throughout Anglo-Saxon countries.

Visitors are cordially invited to inspect the large body of literature displayed in the Book Room at Headquarters, opposite Buckingham Palace.

The weekly journal, "The National Message," devoted to this subject, circulates in vast numbers throughout Anglo-Saxondom. Single copies 2d. A complimentary copy of a Special Number of this journal, together with a catalogue of books and pamphlets by experienced writers and scholars, will be sent on application.

DOES THE BIBLE STAND OR FALL WHEN TESTED BY SCIENCE, HISTORY AND PHILOSOPHY?—VIII.

By Professor Edward Odlum, M.A., B.Sc.

THREE FAMILY HEADS.

We come now to the sons of Noah, viz., Shem, Ham and Japheth. From these sons came the Shemitic, Hamitic and Japhetic lines of human descent and genealogy.

Abraham and Israel, as well as the Edomites, Ishmaelites, Ammonites, Moabites, Midianites and many others came from Shem, and are Semitic.

The Hamitic line was remarkably stressed in the Canaanites, and the people of Mizraim or Egypt.

Canaan was made prominent in many ways, one of which we mention.

When Ham committed a transgression, the condemnation and punishment for the future were imposed upon his son Canaan.

"Cursed shall Canaan be." Remarkable! Perhaps Canaan was inherently bad or corrupt, and instead of the Hamitic punishment being imposed upon the whole family of Ham, it was limited to one of his sons, one who already deserved correction for wrongdoing.

My purpose here is to indicate the very great difference between imposing punishment upon all of Ham's sons and only one of them, thus being seen a limiting and merciful act.

It is not wisdom and good balance to say that Canaan was punished for Ham's transgression, when we know that we do not know the then true nature of the man Canaan. We are not possessed of the full facts and therefore are not in a position to give wise judgment in toto. Hence we do well to see the limitation of the curse to one instead of extending it to the four sons. Perhaps if we had the whole sad story we would learn that the man Canaan was the real perpetrator of a hideous crime condoned by his father Ham!

Cush—Nimrod—Asshur.

We find that Assyria and its capital were founded and developed by Hamitic stock. In later years, these Hamite people of Assyria and Nineveh invaded, conquered and carried Ten-Tribed Israel into captivity.

These people were enemies of Israel and Syria during a long period of time. Later on we may find space to indicate the modern Prussian as Hamitic Assyrians, and the Anglo-Saxons as Israel. "Jasher" tells us that Esau cut the head off Nimrod.

Shem—Abraham.

In Genesis, the 11th chapter, we get the genealogy and chronology from Shem to Abraham, the Prince of Ur, the man called from the east to Canaan to receive all the land from the Mediterranean Sea to the mountains east of the Jordan and the Dead Sea.

Like the chronology from Adam to Noah, this chronology from Noah through Shem to Abraham is very important to all students of the Bible.

"Religion is the tie that connects man with His Creator, and holds him to His throne."—Daniel Webster.

FUTURISM A GREAT HINDRANCE TO THE TRUTH IN AMERICA.

By the Rev. J. J. Kelley (New York).

Here in the States a great hindrance to the spread of Anglo-Israel Truth is the teaching of Futurism. Our Protestant Churches are honeycombed with it, and of course the Roman Church has always taught this doctrine. Futurism has invaded the strongest Churches. Think of it, a body of men calling themselves the defenders of the Bible and boasting that they believe the Scripture from Genesis to Revelation, and yet being ignorant of the great outstanding truth of all the ages, i.e., the fulfilment of the Abrahamic Covenant. The Gap Theory exists only in their brains and there it is almost a vacuum.

It is high time that we who believe in Ephraim and Manasseh should inform the world of the truth regarding Futurism, which is the last bulwark of the Papacy. When at the close of the last Great War Austria fell with a crash, then there was not one single Roman Catholic Empire in all the world. The Pope therefore turned in panic to Italy as a last resort, but Italy will be a broken reed in his hand. The people need to be informed of this, and the best way to do it is to expose Futurism with its claims of a revived Roman Empire.

We must neutralize Futurism with all the unscriptural doctrines flowing from it. The presentation of the glorious truth of Great Britain and the United States as God's chosen and elect people will be owned and blessed by the Holy Spirit. Let us have done with apologetics. This is no time to come to the world with our hats in our hands asking for a chance to prove the truth of the Scriptures. Only the bold, fearless proclamation of the truth will win. We would not think of painting the lily or sprinkling perfume on the rose; nor would we think of trying to prove to our critics that the sun was shining.

This Gospel of the Kingdom must be preached in all the world, with great power and passionate love. Then many of the nations will turn to the living God as the flower turns to the sun. The Church must be aroused to see that her Blessed Lord has not forgotten her throughout all the centuries of the "Age of Grace." She must be taught to tell forth, not only the marvellous things of the future, but also the wonderful things already accomplished.

Brethren, what a responsibility is ours as the messengers of God, and what a glorious opportunity. We have the message for which the world is waiting. The last act of the drama will soon be unfolded, the stage is set. The next few years will see great developments as well as the spread of the Stone Kingdom.

Let us then be up and doing, let us be aggressive, militant, and then we shall be victorious.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

By the Rev. G. H. Lancaster, M.A.

Question.—Do you know anything about a small publication called "The Family Bible Teacher," which is being actively circulated and distributed? Do you know under what auspices it is published, and under what special ideas it is labouring? I have to-day received a further copy which causes me still further surprise, in that it claims that our keeping of Sunday to be of Satan, acting via the Roman Catholic Church. I am an evangelist and missioner, and should like to have your opinion.—A. M. G. (Lincs.).

ANSWER.—Thank you very much for your two letters, and for the enclosed copies of the above. The editor or writer of the pamphlet seems to be under a misunderstanding, and to misinterpret dispensational truth. We have had other enquiries about the same, but know nothing of the origin or authorship of the pamphlet.

It is quite correct to state that our Lord observed and enforced the keeping of the Hebrew Sabbath, because He came "to fulfil the law," i.e., to "fill it to the full." Christ during the days of His flesh observed the ritual and Mosaic Law of the day. Before His Atonement on the Cross, and His glorious Resurrection and Ascension, He could not do otherwise. But He left it to His Apostles and the sub-Apostolic Church to develop the growth of the Christian Faith, while in all probability He gave them implicit yet unwritten instructions during the great forty days prior to His Ascension.

There is no express command in the New Testament for the observance of Sunday (as we know it), i.e., the first day of the week, but we know that St. John speaks of "the Lord's Day" (Rev. i, 10), which shows that the day upon which Christ rose from the dead was recognized before the end of the first century as being a distinctive day, and one dedicated to our Lord Himself, i.e., Sunday.

It is obviously incorrect to state that Sunday is of Satanic origin, and that it was founded by the Roman Catholic Church, since it was observed as the recognized and official day of Christian worship a few centuries before the Roman Catholic Church (as such) was formed, since Papal Rome did not actually exist until A.D. 610 by decree of Phocas, nor again could it have been formed as Spiritual Rome until after the collapse of the Roman Empire in A.D. 476.

The Christian Sunday originated with the Resurrection of Christ, which took place on the day after the Jewish Sabbath, and which was consequently the first day of the week. This day was again emphasized by the appearance of the Lord on the following Sunday to the disciples (and especially to Thomas) (John xx, 26). The Day of Pentecost happened, of course, on Sunday (not on the Sabbath Day), while the Epistle of Barnabas (xiii, 10) suggests that Ascension Day was a Sunday, though this is not in accordance with tradition and Christian evidence.

For a long while the early Christians conducted their worship daily in the Temple (Acts ii, 46), observing at the same time the Jewish Sabbath ritual on the seventh day, while they gradually began to make a distinctive observance of the first day of the week (Acts xx, 7), thus keeping both Sabbath and Sunday. Apostolic custom and command accentuated the importance of "the first day of the week" (1 Cor. xvi, 2), since it marked the day of the Lord's Resurrection, so that before the end of the first century it was regarded (as stated above) as "the Lord's Day."

The early Fathers laid great stress upon the "Lord's Day observance." We find Ignatius (Ad Magn. IX) exhorting Christians to be "no longer Sabbatizing, but living in observance of the Lord's Day, on which also our life sprang up again." Eusebius taught the same, as also did Melitus of Sardis (A.D. 170).

The word "Sunday" was first used by Justin Martyr (who was born circ. A.D. 114) who calls it τῃ τοῦ Ηλίου λεγομένῃ ἡμέρα in his beautiful exhortation on "the Weekly worship of Christians." This was obviously nearly five centuries before the Roman Catholic Church was formed.

To sum up then. After the Resurrection of Christ the seventh day and the first day were kept each week. Gradually the importance of the first day of the week ("the Lord's Day") overshadowed that of the Sabbath Day (although the Ebionites long continued to use both days) until Sunday began to take precedence, and the Sabbath Day observance fell into abeyance amongst the Christians.

Finally, in A.D. 321, the Emperor Constantine, in his famous Constitution, as a "legal duty" ordered "all courts of justice, inhabitants of towns and workshops, to rest on Sunday (venerabili die solis)," when Sunday observance became the law of the land.

"ENGLAND."

Dear Motherland—Home of the free,
The dearest place on earth to me;
I dream of thee where'er I roam,
Land of my birth and "Home Sweet Home."
Well favoured thou, dear land of ours,
With fruitful trees and woodland flowers,
Thy hills and vales of living green,
The fairest picture ever seen:
Thy sons and daughters o'er the sea
Can ne'er forget "The Old Country."

May God thy Rulers ever bless,
And grant them from their foes to rest;
For there are foes within thy gates,
Who, filled with envy, greed and hate,
Would overthrow the British Throne,
And take away thine ancient stone: *
May God protect thee day and night,
For He alone for thee doth fight;
God send thee now prosperity,
Dear Motherland—"The Old Country."

Dear Motherland, to thee I bring
My love and faith unwavering;
Weighed in the balances of time,
A name untarnished still is thine;
Thy word, thy bond the whole world o'er,
Thy justice known from shore to shore,
God's law thy law, His truth thy shield,
To Him due honour ever yield,
For He is thy Security,
Stand firm, Fear not, "Dear Old Country."

WE are looking forward to Monday next, June 23rd, when we celebrate the Prince of Wales' Birthday and the Anniversary of the Opening of our present Headquarters. The proceedings will commence at 3 p.m. The President of the B.-I.-W. Federation—Major J. Knowles, O.B.E.—will preside. The Bishop of the Falkland Islands, one of our Vice-Presidents, will speak, also the Rev. John Compton, a member of our branch at Sydney, Australia, and Mr. Herbert Garrison, Secretary-General of the Federation. Tea will be served from about 4.45. All are cordially invited.

The speakers at Headquarters last week were Mr. John Leech, K.C., and the Rev. H. S. Webb; this week, the Rev. S. E. Mowforth (Wednesday), and the Rev. Kenneth Dodds (Thursday); next week—Mr. John Leech on Wednesday afternoon, and the usual meeting on Thursday evening.

The Executive Committee met on June 13th, and went through a long agenda of important business, including preliminary arrangements for the next Congress which opens on October 6th (D.V.). Mr. Garrison was requested to give another of his illustrated lectures on the Wednesday evening, October 8th, and special tickets for this event will shortly be ready. Encouraging reports were made as to our work all round.

For the benefit especially of our thousands of overseas readers, we publish in our issue of this week the Manifesto which has appeared in twenty-one English papers. Our supply of "The Times" reprints is nearly exhausted, so great has been the demand. Both Canada and South Africa have cabled for large quantities.

The Rev. R. G. F. Waddington, M.A., is doing excellent work in many parts of the country. He has recently visited our Hastings and Folkestone Branches and delighted the members with his addresses.

Our Liverpool Branch held a Tea and Social Meeting on June 5th, to welcome the Rev. E. A. Couldrey. Among the visitors there were members of the Rochdale, Southport and Wigan Branches. The ex-Mayor of Rochdale presided. A very pleasant time was spent.

We have many visitors at Headquarters from Overseas—Australia, New Zealand, Canada, U.S.A., South Africa, India, Ceylon, East Africa, Palestine, etc. We have the welcome news that a new Branch of the Federation has been established in Perth, the capital of West Australia; the President is a member of the Legislative Council, and a late Prime Minister of that State. Among well-known residents who have joined as members are the late Dean of the Cathedral, a Rector, and Officers of Government Departments. We heartily wish the new Branch every blessing and the greatest possible success.

Mr. Henry Iveson, of Rochdale, is at present in Palestine investigating and photographing the latest excavation and unearthing of Biblical sites. He is also planning special work at the Great Pyramid.

M. H. writes:—"The enclosed 3s. is from my little granddaughter, aged 12, a B.-I. Crusader. She has been very ill, and has only lately been able to return to school; she was given 5s. as a present. To my surprise she brought to me 3s., asking me to send it to 'the B.-I. place.' I asked her, 'Do you really want to give as much as that?' She answered, 'Yes, of course I do, and I am quite sure about it.' And then I found she had just been reading your letter on the back cover of her B.-I. Crusader."

From Cheshire:—"After reading your announcement in the 'Daily Express' of May 23rd, I have decided to respond to your call. I have carefully studied your claims and wholeheartedly endorse them. If there is any way in which I can further the Cause in this part of the country I trust that you will inform me of it at your earliest possible convenience."

At the invitation of the Hastings and St. Leonards Branch, Colonel G. F. A. Smythe, of Dover, recently gave two very interesting lectures.

The subject in the afternoon was "The Early British Church," and the lecturer traced the origin and development of Christianity in Britain in Celtic times since the foundation of the Church in Glastonbury, by St. Joseph of Arimathea, in the first century A.D. He dwelt on the fact that the Latin and Gallic Churches were established subsequently to the foundation of the Church in Britain, a circumstance which justified the claim for priority made by the British and conceded to them by the Churches on the Continent.

The various authorities for the evidences put forward were quoted by the lecturer as showing that, apart from tradition, documentary confirmation was available in support of the claim made on behalf of the British Church. In the course of his lecture Colonel Smythe referred to the grant of 12 hides of land, by the British King Arviragus (brother of Caractacus), to St. Joseph of Arimathea, in relation to which an entry appears in Domesday Book confirming the Grant.

At the close of the afternoon lecture the Rev. C. C. Dobson (Vicar of St. Mary-in-the-Castle) gave a short interesting addition to Colonel Smythe's address, stating that he had recently discovered evidence that King Arviragus had built fortifications, which were undoubtedly on or near the site of the existing ruins of Hastings Castle.

The evening lecture was devoted to an address on "The Druids: An Early Preparation for Christianity," when the similarity between the religion of the Druids and the Hebrews was considered. Although a certain amount of paganism was blended with Druidism, it was known that the worship contemplated the coming of a Messiah, coupled with the belief in a triune God and the immortality of the soul. The vestments of the priests were practically identical with those of the Aaronic priesthood. The teaching in their colleges included astronomy, natural science, and history, and required an arduous study of no less than 20 years.

E. R. writes :—" Enclosed please find my subscription and the balance for help in our good Cause. This is the end of my first year of B.-I., and it has been the most blessed year of my life and has drawn me nearer my Saviour. I pray for your success every day and do all I can to help. I am only an Old Age Pensioner but I know God will bless our endeavours."

At a usual fortnightly meeting of the Launceston, Tasmania, Branch, the subject of " Three Messages from the Cross—Saviour, Redeemer, Confirmer," was taken by the speaker, Mr. Benjamin, who said that in respect to the first, Saviour, it was so generally admitted and recognized by every branch of the Christian Church, indeed by all Christendom, that it needed no words to emphasize this axiom of Christian truth on which the Church of God was built. The second, Redeemer, was not so clearly understood, as it was frequently and loosely used with the word Saviour, as if the salvation of the world and redemption were one and the same thing. Redemption was national, racial, of Israel ; and could only be used in a collective sense. Redemption was an act of God, and did not and never did depend on the co-operation of man. Salvation was individual and was irrespective of person. Salvation did depend upon man's co-operation. Confirm meant to ratify, to make possible of accomplishment and fulfilment. Christ confirmed the promises then ; the promises were in operation to-day in our midst. Thus we were presented with the threefold work of our Blessed Lord in three supreme manifestations of which none was complete without the other—Saviour, Redeemer, Confirmer.

Lieut.-Colonel Hugh Nourse, of Kokstad, recently visited Maritzburg for the special purpose of giving a lecture under the auspices of the Federation. He spoke upon the subject of " Britain's Birthright and the Covenant People," dealing first with the binding nature of covenants, and pointing out that Scripture gave striking evidence, in the case of Saul and the Gibeonites, and Zedekiah and the King of Babylon, that a covenant made in the Divine Name must be observed, and its evasion was followed by severe punishment. He referred to modern history—the keeping by Britain of her covenants made with Portugal and Belgium respectively, and the consequences of the Napoleonic War and the Great War which followed—and went on to trace the Divine covenant made with Abraham and Jacob, and its fulfilment in so many points in the British nation and company of nations, and the American people.—Natal Mercury.

Many will remember Lieut.-Colonel Nourse, who visited England and Headquarters a few months ago, and gave an address here.

At the weekly meeting of the Belfast Branch of the British-Israel-World Federation, held on May 29th, in the Y.M.C.A. Hall, Shankill Road, Mr. T. A. Thomson presiding, the following resolution was unanimously passed :—

" That we, believing what the Bible says : ' God made man in His own image and likeness,' protest against the attempt being made in the Belfast Museum to teach otherwise by showing man's development from the lower animals and thus discrediting, especially in the minds of the young, the Bible itself.

We think that, at a time when it is the desire of all right-thinking people in Parliament and Council Chamber to establish the teaching of the Bible in our schools, the Libraries', Museums' and Art Committee might make better use of the space at their disposal than by undermining the authority of the Book, and we regard their action as highly inconsistent.

We believe that the exhibit of ' The ascent of man from the lower animals showing the main and side branches of his family tree ' violates the religious feelings of multitudes of our fellow-citizens and ratepayers, and we call for its removal forthwith.

And we direct that a copy of this resolution be sent to the Chairman of the Libraries', Museums' and Art Committee of the Belfast Corporation, and also to the Press."

M. F. W. writes :—

" In THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER, May 31st, there is an article —' Tarshish.'

" In connection with what the article says, it may interest you to know that in olden days tin was shipped from Saltash in Cornwall under the name ' peacocks.' Tin which has been burnt or touched by fire takes upon itself all the colours of the peacock.

" This peacock tin, or peacocks, was in the form of ingots—the process of making was interesting. The bars were heated cautiously on an inclined hearth, when relatively pure tin runs off, while a skeleton of pure metal remains. The metal run off was further purified by ' potting,' viz., stirring it with the branch of a tree, the apple tree being preferred. Tradition says the branches of apple trees were particularly requisitioned for this purpose from the Plain of Avalon in Somersetshire ; England, or Tarshish, shipped gold from Wales, ivory from rhinoceros horn found in the swamps of Glastonbury and elsewhere, and peacocks from Saltash.

" It is only about fifty years ago that the name ' Saltash ' was used. The original name was ' Asher ' ; some of the streets have that name to this day. The Tribe of Asher had nearly as many ships as the Tribe of Dan ! The whole shipment took place down the River Tamar, another Hebrew name ! To sum up, therefore, gold, ivory and peacocks were shipped to the East from the great shipping port, Asher, on the Tamar, Cornwall."

not read it or something about it—entirely as a result of British-Israel. There is one point on the practical and less spiritual side—its helpfulness in drawing the U.S.A. and ourselves together, for that B.-I. is invaluable, and I wish to see you about it. As I know of nothing more valuable to-day than British-Israel, I enclose a cheque for £50 to be spent at your discretion, with best wishes for your success."

J. B. writes :—" After reading your Manifesto and carefully studying your claims, I whole-heartedly endorse them, and I have decided to respond to your CALL. We have received a most interesting letter from a correspondent in Germany who says he worked as a missionary in South America for 17 years, and while there first learned of our teaching from a copy of our journal handed him by a Scotch missionary. He soon became convinced that B.-I. was true. Now after reading additional literature he feels sure that B.-I. writers are inspired by God, and he says that he will be an active witness in public, and that his soul is full of joy and light because after many years of incertitude he has at last found the precious pearl that British-Israel Truth is the Truth of God.

R. L. writes from the Isle of Man :—" I shall be glad if you will forward me a copy of your weekly journal, together with a catalogue of your books, so that I may familiarize myself with your attractive Federation, which was quite unknown to me until now. You have presented a forceful Manifesto in Britain's leading papers, pertinently postulating a great present need in Religious Revival to stimulate passionate enthusiasm in the most consummate concern of the individual as well as of the nation and the world. It would indeed be fortunate if an all-prevailing antidote was forthcoming to the poisonous influences of Soviet and Communist inroads."

A. B. W. writes :—" I congratulate you on the splendid Manifesto in the daily Press. I am in a City office, and I know it has been the subject of conversation among large numbers of business men."

A Clergyman writes :—" I am delighted with your Manifesto."

A Justice of the Peace writes from Glasgow :—" I congratulate you on the Manifesto. In the North here it has created a lively interest in the Cause of B.-I., and I have been simply deluged with enquiries and congratulations."

E. E. L. writes :—" The Manifesto is quite wonderful, and I am overjoyed at the reception it is having."

J. M. B. writes :—" When we saw your great Manifesto in the 'Morning Post' it thrilled us like the clarion of a war ultimatum. We sat up and talked about it half the night. I was too excited to sleep. It seems like the beginning of a new epoch, and folk will now have to come out on one side or the other. It is a great decisive step, and we wait the results with eager anxiety. We bought up all the papers we could get, and posted or gave them away."

Mr. R. O. Lucas writes from Toronto :—" At the Annual Convention of the Ontario Branch of the British-Israel Federation of Canada, I was instructed by unanimous vote of all present to convey to you, and to all who are labouring with you at Headquarters, 'Greetings from this Ontario Branch, and a message of appreciation and thanks for Rev. Joseph Gay's splendid addresses, and for the opportunity provided for still greater advance of our work through the system of Study Circles which is being created, and for the wonderful work being generally carried on by you.'

It gives me very great pleasure to forward this resolution to you, Sir, and to assure you of the loyalty of our members, and our sincere desire to co-operate with you in the carrying on of the great work which binds us all so closely together.

'May God guide and bless the work everywhere in our far-flung British-Israel fraternity' is our constant prayer.

Yours most sincerely—in the Service of the Kingdom."

A. B. B. writes :—" How truly grateful we were to see the B.-I. Manifesto in the daily Press. It has been a wish for a very long time with us that something great should appear in this way from the Federation, and we felt when the right time came it would appear. It is bound to impress thousands of people. Will you accept the enclosed donation?"

The Rev. R. G. F. Waddington, M.A., writes :—" A Bible Class was started at Bradford on May 30th, and it is intended to hold it alternately with the lectures. I have been most gratified by the response ; over fifty people turned up on the first night, and interest never flagged for a moment. There was no difficulty in getting folk to talk, express opinions and ask questions."

THE SECOND COMING of OUR LORD

By REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

The threads of the Bible Story are many, each of them reaching one great culmination—namely, in the Second Coming of Christ.

The following threads may be indicated, all of which culminate in the Second Coming:

(1) The teaching regarding the Temple.
(2) The teaching regarding the Nation Israel.
(3) The teaching regarding the House and Throne of David.
(4) The teaching regarding the House of Judah.
(5) The teaching regarding the External Nations.
(6) The teaching regarding the Church.
(7) The teaching regarding our Lord Himself.
(8) The teaching regarding the Apostles and their Position and Office in the Regeneration.

All these, and other threads of the Bible Story, find their culmination in THE SECOND COMING OF OUR LORD.

The last utterance of our Lord, as given in the last sentences of the Book of Revelation, reiterates all preceding prophecy and testimony concerning the Second Coming: these are the solemn words:—

"Even so, come, Lord Jesus. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen."

JOEL'S PROPHETIC MESSAGE and WARNING

By HOWARD B. RAND, LL.B.

This is a remarkable book on the message of Joel which is clearly shown to be a warning to this day and generation. Not only does the author deal with the prophet's utterances, but he gives the order of related prophecies from other parts of the Bible.

Those who desire to harmonize the prophecies with the historical events of the present day and during the few remaining years of this dispensation cannot afford to be without this most interesting treatise.

The prophetic symbols used by Joel have been placed in their proper historical setting. The reader can clearly identify economic, national and international events as they come to fruition, for they are clearly outlined by this prophet's remarkable revelation. In this day of prophetical fulfilment this book should be in the hands of every teacher and student of prophecy.

IS THE BIBLE CREDIBLE?

Do you realize that if you accept the Modernist theory of Evolution you deny the Divine inspiration of your Bible?

Modernism and German-made Higher Criticism combine to destroy faith in the truth and the sacredness of our beliefs. God either created man in His own image or He did not, and if not, we are as the beasts that perish.

Dr. McCrossan's book comes as a refreshing draught to a thirsty man, to those who truly believe that God's Word is in the Bible—that God's Word is the Bible. His array of facts and his forceful style chastise the Higher Critic and the Modernist. He takes his stand on God's Word and is unassailable.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

WHAT IS THE ATTITUDE OF THE LORD TOWARDS THE "PAGAN" PEOPLES?

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

IT is not healthy for us to confine our thoughts to the attitude of the Lord to His Own nations, and the race from which they are formed. Therefore we shall devote this article to the consideration of the attitude of the Lord towards the pagan or heathen peoples of the earth.

It is to be remembered that the Israel race began in the call of Abraham and in the birth of Isaac.

It is manifest that this was not the beginning of God's activity to the peoples of the earth. The activities of Divine Grace did not begin with the founding of the Abraham-Isaac-Jacob seed.

In the antediluvian world there had been such Divine activity. Divine Grace was always free for all those who would seek the Lord and would do His will. Yet even in the antediluvian world there was the predisposition of the descendants of Seth to the service of the Lord.

After the Deluge we have the record of the three families of Noah. It is manifest that among these the family of Seth responded most readily to the influences of Divine Grace.

But down to the time of Abraham there had not been a generation chosen before they were born for the uplifting and regeneration of the race of mankind.

Prior to the time of Abraham both the law and the Gospel, both the law and the service of God, were in the earth and men were called upon to obey the one and to enter the other.

After the call of Abraham the activity of the Lord was not withdrawn from among the non-Israel nations. It never has been so withdrawn.

ELYON EL.

As Elyon El, the translation of which is The Most High God, the Lord dealt with the non-Israel nations of the earth. His dealing with the nations is historic in the Bible.

Now there is a matter which after a moment's thought becomes clear, but which we are apt to overlook, which it is important for us to remember. As God dealt with the non-Israel nations in the days gone long past, so He deals with them to-day.

In saying this it is well to call to mind that all peoples who have accepted Christ, and the Christian faith, have become Israelitish by ADOPTION. For every man of every race who is in Christ Jesus is of Abraham's seed, and has become heir to the promises. The Christian nations therefore are privileged to be members of the Church and registered as of the Commonwealth of Israel.

But the non-Israel, non-Christian nations, are still dealt with by God according to His Elyon El manifestations.

Further, it will be interesting to note that the basic note of the Elyon El administration is to carry conviction to the minds of the people so dealt with as to the Personality of the Living God, and as to the reality of His rule over the nations and races of mankind. This is illustrated by His dealing with the Babylon and Medo-Persian kings. Nebuchadnezzar, Belshazzar, Darius, Cyrus, all had manifestations of the present and personal character of The Most High God.

The result of such manifestations was the establishment of monotheism in the East in the place of the ancient forms of polytheism and idolatry.

One wonders if ever the vision of such nations went further than this. At the present time such knowledge is shown in the Moslem world, in the Brahmin world, in the Buddhist world, and so on.

So we have (1) frank and open paganism ; and (2) we have the monotheism of the great monotheistic faiths in the realm administered by our one God under the name and manifestation of Elyon El.

The great movement of faith in the Elyon El manifestation and Divine administration is from polytheism to monotheism. To this end the Lord strove in the days which are historic, as in the Babylon and Medo-Persian period, etc. This prepares the way for the higher faiths. If any should ask the ground of such a statement as this, it will be found for instance in the progress in matters of Divine knowledge granted by God to the peoples of the above-named Empires, as set forth in the kingly proclamations of Nebuchadnezzar, Darius and Cyrus, etc.

JEHOVAH.

Now we come to the Israel peoples and we find first the Jehovah manifestation and the theological task set to the Israel peoples. This brought not only the consciousness of the Living and True God, it brought the realization of personal and national relationship to God by (a) direct contact with His Personality, and (b) by Covenant relations with Him, and (c) by the fact that He actually dwells in Israel as King.

In this connection we have Judaism, which is a knowledge of just this amount of truth, and an historic remembrance of national and personal experience of the race in the days gone by ; of contact with the Lord in the Temple services, and the wonders of the Holy of Holies. But, alas ! this is but an historic memory on the part of the Jewish people. The Shekinah Glory has ceased to shine behind the curtain of the Temple. The Smoke and Cloud which denoted His Divine Presence appears no more. Still Judaism recognizes the Living God, the oneness of God, the mercy of God, and, although it is not manifest through Judaism, the faithfulness of God to Covenant, promise and prophecy.

The Christian faith goes farther, and brings to us the knowledge of God manifest and incarnate in Jesus Christ our Lord. It brings to us the consciousness of His personal Presence manifest to the true man of penitence and faith, and to the fulfilment in Him of the promised redemption of Israel and Saviourship of the world.

This is the triumph thus far of the progress of Divine manifestation.

Not all men, and not all nations, have the Christian faith, nor the knowledge of Jehovah-Jesus.

How then does God deal with the pagan or heathen nations who have not the knowledge of God in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself? It has been too lightly assumed and held that God deals with the nations through Jesus Christ alone. It has been too lightly held that all nations which know not God in Christ are cast out of His sight. But the Apostle Peter learned a different lesson when he declared, " I perceive that . . . . in every nation he that feareth Him and worketh righteousness is accepted with Him."

No man may be accepted of God on a less standard than His own knowledge. The monotheism of the Elyon El manifestations was a step forward, and a long one for the nations which dwelt on the banks of the Tigris and of the Euphrates. But it would not be acceptable to God in the instructed Jew.

The monotheism and Covenant relationship of the true Jew is a long way in advance of the monotheism of the Elyon El manifestation, and would be accepted of God at the hands of the true Jew who had never been brought into contact with real Christianity and with Christ. But it would not be acceptable to God at the hands of the instructed Christian. The instructed Christian would be required, and is required, to live up to the privileges of his knowledge of God in Christ.

Now let us ask, " How does God deal with the pagan or heathen world ?" We have the first indication which we shall mention, without going further back in the sacred record, in the appointment of Israel to be God's Kingdom of Priests. This, of course, was in line with the earlier promise made to Abraham, " In thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

Now a Kingdom of Priests implies a congregation to whom the Kingdom of Priests shall minister. These we find to be all the families of the earth.

It will scarcely do to limit the Divine Grace to those who have received the ministration of the Kingdom of Priests, and who have entered into light through that ministration. If we accept this ground, then God help us as a Kingdom of Priests. How horribly we have failed in our duty of universal ministration if because of our failure those who have not received such ministration, and are in darkness of paganism, are therefore cast into hell. Surely God has His methods in the Elyon El manifestation of Himself of dealing directly with such nations. " I perceive that . . . . in every nation he that feareth Him and worketh righteousness is accepted with Him."

The second fact we shall adduce is God's dealing with Nebuchadnezzar and the other succeeding kings of the Continental Empires. To Nebuchadnezzar God gave a manifestation of Himself. He did also to the succeeding monarch, as we read in Daniel. Yet these kings were pagan.

Moreover, the Most High God planned for these pagan kings and people Empire and rule over the earth outside of the Kingdom which the God of Heaven established in the days of these kings which should never be destroyed, which should not be left to other people . . . and which should stand for ever.

That God should thus mark the course and grant the charter to these pagan monarchs, and grant His Royal charter to their kingdom, is worthy of note. See Daniel ii.

Further, we see that the Lord Himself confirmed the rights of the pagan Emperors of the Babylon succession, which in His day were vested in the fourth Empire, namely, Rome.

When the Jews brought a stated case to Jesus for His judgment, and asked Him, " Is it lawful to pay tribute to Cæsar?" He gave judgment as follows : " Render therefore unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's, and unto God the things that are God's."

Digitized by Google

Now to God was due "Repentance towards God, and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ." To Cæsar was due the loyal service of the Babylonian succession, which was Divinely granted under the charter of the second chapter of Daniel.

Therefore the Lord granted the kingdom to the pagan monarch Nebuchadnezzar. He later called Cyrus to the responsibility of administering that Charter, pagan though he was, and so on. (Rom. xiii, 1-7; Titus iii, 1; 1 Peter ii, 11-17.)

Again we find that the Apostle Paul exhorts the Christians who dwelt in Pagan Rome to be subject to the powers:—

"Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God.

Whosoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God: and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation.

For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil. Wilt thou then not be afraid of the power? do that which is good, and thou shalt have praise of the same:

For he is the minister of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, be afraid; for he beareth not the sword in vain: for he is the minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil.

Wherefore ye must needs be subject, not only for wrath, but also for conscience sake.

For for this cause pay ye tribute also: for they are God's ministers, attending continually upon this very thing.

Render therefore to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honour to whom honour."—Romans xiii, 1-7.

Also he instructs Titus to exhort the Church in Crete as follows:—"Put them in mind to be subject to principalities and powers, to obey magistrates, to be ready to every good work."

Thus the Church is urged to be subject to the secular powers.

Again the Apostle Peter writes as follows on the same thing:—

"Dearly beloved, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul;

Having your conversation honest among the Gentiles: that, whereas they speak against you as evildoers, they may by your good works, which they shall behold, glorify God in the day of visitation.

Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake: whether it be to the king, as supreme;

Or unto governors, as unto them that are sent by him for the punishment of evildoers, and for the praise of them that do well.

For so is the will of God, that with well doing ye may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men:

As free, and not using your liberty for a cloke of maliciousness, but as the servants of God.

Honour all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honour the king."—1 Peter ii, 11-17.

So then we see that the Lord permitted pagan rule, and enforced obedience to the powers of pagan States in secular matters.

Now the fact that the Lord thus lays upon the Christian of the pagan world the duty of loyal service in secular matters to the pagan State, and the corresponding fact that the Christian in the Israel State is called upon to obey the law of the Lord and the House of David's administration, puts a difference between the Christian practice in pagan countries.

THE LORD RULE.

While thus we see that the Lord has had His hand upon the pagan nations and kingdoms from the beginning, we also see that the Lord has established Mosaic and Davidic rule in the earth.

The first passages we shall submit which deal with this matter of the Jehovah rule in the earth are the Abrahamic Covenants set forth in Genesis, which are so familiar in these pages that we shall not quote them. (See Genesis, chapters twelve, fifteen, seventeen, twenty-two, and so forth.)

Next we refer to the setting-up of the Kingdom of God in Israel, as recorded in the nineteenth chapter of Exodus.

Again we refer to 2 Samuel vii, which contains the charter of the House of David for ever.

The next step in the historic progress is the separation of the ten tribes under Jeroboam, and the setting-up of the Kingdom of Israel. See, for instance, 1 Kings, chapter xii.

We note the carrying away of both Israel and Judah into captivity, according to the command of the Lord.

Next we refer to Ezra and Nehemiah for the setting-up of the nation of the Jews.

Thus far matters concern the history of Israel and Judah in Palestine. Now we come to the important document in the second chapter of Daniel, which shows the Divine charter to the Babylon succession of Empires, which were frankly pagan for ages.

The same chapter (Daniel ii) shows that in the time of the kings of these Empires, running contemporaneously with them, "shall the God of Heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever."

We see the ratification of the Kingdom of Israel and of David for the future in Jeremiah xxxi and xxxiii.

We see the same Kingdom preached by our Lord and by His disciples, first the twelve, and then the seventy, to the "lost sheep of the House of Israel," that is to say, to those who are the citizens of that Kingdom, but forbidden to be preached at that time to the Gentiles and to the Samaritans.

We see finally the declaration of our Lord in the twenty-fourth chapter of St. Matthew, that "This Gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a testimony unto all nations, and then shall the end come."

Now why should that Gospel of the Kingdom be forbidden to the Gentiles in the day of our Lord, and yet should be preached in all the world for a testimony unto all nations at the end of the dispensation?

The answer seems to be very clear. During the time of our Lord, and indeed until very modern days—that is to say, until 1918, the charter to the Nebuchadnezzar succession was in force, and the command, "Render therefore to Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's," stood. But in 1918 the time of the Babylonian chapter, and the Empires themselves, suddenly came to an end; then it was in order to preach the Gospel of the Kingdom to those nations who were before included in the charter to Nebuchadnezzar and his successors.

Now during all this long period, while in matters of faith the Church of Christ in all the world was one, or should have been, it must be readily seen that in matters of SERVICE there was a vital difference.

The Christian in Pagan Rome had his first duty to God and his second duty to Cæsar. Often that duty led him to do things which were in deadly opposition to the Israel Kingdom, that is to say, to the Kingdom of God in the earth. As, for instance, when the Christian soldier in the armies of Pagan Rome invaded and attacked Christian Britain and Christians in Britain. In His mercy the Lord made obedience to Cæsar the duty of the Christian soldier in the army of Pagan Rome, even when those armies attacked Christian Britain.

Again, the Christian in Pagan Rome was commanded to be obedient to the powers of the Pagan Roman Empire in secular things. He comported himself in accordance with the CIVIL LAW, which was the law of Pagan Rome.

On the other hand, the Christian in Britain was commanded to comport himself in accordance with the COMMON LAW, or the LAW OF THE LORD, and to render obedience to the House of David.

These were not small matters of service. But when it came to faith, the Christian in Pagan Rome and the Christian in Christian Britain were both called upon to stand firm in obedience to the commands of God and the truths of the Gospel, resisting even unto blood.

These considerations have led us to say that Christianity was not in all things the same for all peoples and all nations. We have said and still say that while one in faith, there is a difference in allegiance to the King or Emperor or other form of government, a difference in conduct required under the differing systems of law, and a difference in the service required.

This difference must remain until the Lord shall make all nations to be essential parts of His Kingdom, under one rule—His Own; under one law—the Law of the Lord; and in one service to the House of David.

WHERE DO WE STAND TO-DAY IN REGARD TO PROPHECY?—II.

BY THE REV. COMMANDER L. G. A. ROBERTS, R.N.

THE Seventh Vial is now about to be poured out. Coming events are casting their shadows before them, in the extreme anti-Christian views which are being propagated. It may be said that the Napoleonic Era commences the scene of the thirteenth and sixteenth chapters, the last of these, with the seventeenth, ending, giving us the conclusion of the mystery of iniquity spoken of in 2 Thes. ii, 7.

We are now in the era of the three unclean spirits like frogs proceeding out of the mouth of each of these systems of iniquity, which control the kingdoms of this world—Pagan, Papal and Mohammedan. The final form is expressed in Rev. xvii, 8-11, as "the beast that was, and is not, and yet is." "And the beast that was, and is not, even he is the eighth, and is of (i.e., as a result of) the seven, and goeth into perdition."

These three Antichrists are each doing their best to obtain world supremacy. They are said to be raising opposition by the croaking forth of their unclean sentiments out of their mouths. The spirit which works in them all is the Devil, and his object is to raise up all the world against the Kingdom of God. (Rev. xvi, 12 to end, and xvii, 11 to end.)

The question for to-day is, have we yet done with Turkey or Rome? Is not this tri-unity yet to be its own destruction? We think so, and that Palestine (Armageddon) is the scene of its last and fatal struggle. The Old Testament prophecies cover very much of the future. The position in Rev. xvi of the Seventh Vial as following the Sixth, which has entirely to do with the Turkish Empire and its sequence upon the first five Vials which have their fulfilment in the Roman Apostasy, itself suggests that Turkey is intimately mixed up with the final phase of the mystery of iniquity, which itself destroys Babylon the Great, the Mother of Harlots. (Rev. xvii, 11-18.) In fact, Great Babylon comes into remembrance before the final stage of Armageddon, as seen in the sequence of Rev. xviii, which is immediately followed by "the wife making herself ready" (Rev. xix, 7), then the Marriage Supper of the Lamb, and lastly Armageddon. Here again (Rev. xix, 11) we have the White Horse, now fully acknowledged, and its rider, seen to be the Lord Jesus Christ, as in Rev. vi, 2, though not seen Israel who, with the Gospel message, went forth conquering and to conquer, now victorious.

This conclusion is arrived at from various consideration. In Gen. xxvii it is Jacob and Esau, and in Obadiah we see the same. Jacob is Israel, Esau is Edom (Turkey). Look again at Isa. xxxiv, especially the eighth verse, and again, Isa. lxiii, especially the fourth verse. But in Ezekiel xxxv-xxxvi, 5, Edom is also (xxxviii, 6) "the house of Togarmah of the north quarters and all his bands," called Idumea. This secret confederacy is the subject of Ps. lxxxiii, Satan's final effort to exterminate God's hidden ones, His Israel, from being a Nation. It will be seen how Assur is joined with them. Assur is Russia, and the ten federated point to the ten horns of Rev. xvii, 16, which ten will then have acquired dominion over "the earth" of prophecy. Assyria (Russia) is the last of Israel's terrible opponents. (Isa. xiv, 25; xxxi, 8; also x, 12; Mic. v, 5, 6.)

There are infinitely more passages in the Old Testament which deal with the last days of this dispensation, or the things which usher in the Kingdom of our Lord than are probably realized. They all need to be consistently read, thought over and pieced together with those prophecies in Revelation which deal with the Seventh Trumpet and the Seventh Vial, together with the Seventh Seal, as this affects especially Israel, who alone have been sealed unto the day of their redemption. For instance, the Great Trumpet of Isa. xxvii, 13. The same is alluded to in Zech. ix, 14, "And the Lord God shall blow the Trumpet." In Rev. xi, 15, "And the seventh angel sounded, and there were great voices in heaven, saying, The kingdoms of this world are become the Kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ, and He shall reign for ever and ever." Connect this also with x, 7, which anticipates what is the mystery of God.

A Brief Epitome of what may be expected very shortly.

In Rev. xvi under the Seventh Vial is the order of things immediately following the corrupt utterances of Atheism, Romanism and Mohammedanism. This in Ezek. xxxv–xxxvi, 1, 2, 3, is intimately connected with Palestine, Turkey and the League of Nations' (lips of talkers) discussion, respecting the Mandate committed to Britain. This may bring on us an immediate and sudden massacre in Jerusalem (Rev. xi, 7–10), if the Futurist plan has any foundation in the Jew, which we should almost immediately realize; for the Presentist's view is that the two witnesses having prophesied for 1,260 years from A.D. 664–668 to 1924–1928, i.e., protested against the assumptions of Rome and Turkey. After this limit their protestation is silenced by their political death as far as the Continent is concerned. We assume that this took place in the false step taken at the Malines Conversations, to bring about an union between the English (Anglican) Church and the Roman, which can never be; for after 3½ years, the Spirit of Life from God enters into the witnesses and our Churches are renovated, as we trust is to be the outcome of this flagrant error of some who think our Lord meant union with "so-called Christains;" Whereas God says, "I will not give my praise to graven images." It may be this is Rome's last chance (Rev. xiv, 6–12). Is it possible for those who worship God in Spirit and in Truth to allow idols or Saint adoration of any kind, in the face of Isa. ii, 18, and when Mic. v shall be realized? Christ's Kingdom will be come!

So the Seventh Vial opens with a great voice out of the Temple of Heaven, and from the Throne, saying, "It is done!"

The mighty earthquake now follows.

The great city (Babylon) is divided into three parts.

Let us assume Mussolini has secured the Southern part; Germany another, the Northern part (secretly with Russia); France, with Poland, the central part. This apparently is at present the condition of "the earth."

The next stage is that the constitution of the nations will fall (as in Rev. xvii, 11–17) under the intrigues of Russian Bolshevism. Now Sovietism will deal with the Roman system of worship as it has already with the Greek system. The fall of Rome is in "one hour" (Rev. xviii, 10), the same as in xvii, 12. The self-exaltation of Rome is brought about by the death of "these two prophets" (Rev. xi, 10, and compare with Ezek. xxxv, 14.) Turkey (Edom) and Rome unitedly brought about as by Ezek. xxxvi, 5, 6. Notice the inference, "When the whole earth rejoiceth" (Ezek. xxxv, 14, with Rev. xi, 10), and see why. But God comes forward for the salvation of His people!

One should read Rev. xi, 10 to end, of chapter xiv, 13 to end; xvii, 11 to end; xviii, the doom of Babylon. Something will happen to warn all God's people to come out of Babylon beforehand (xviii, 4). This we take to be the same as in xi, 12, 13. The giving glory to God, and xix, 1–6, the great Hallelujahs precede the so-called "Rapture." We all understand to-day the difference between a live wire and a wire with no connection. We who are alive and remain shall be caught up. Yet "I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me." I think this answers the question, Who are they who are caught up?

We confess we do not like this word, it sounds as if some people valued their calling and election as more worthy than their fellows, whereas "The Lord knoweth who are His." We have to take care to make our calling and election sure, by exhorting all around us to be as if waiting for the Coming of our Lord. If we are workers together with Christ we shall surely count the long-suffering of the Lord is salvation. Are we making ourselves ready? Many will be caught up to meet Him and also return with Him. As in Matt. xxv, 6, ἀπαντητιν to meet Him and return (Luke xii, 36). "Blessed are they which are called to the Marriage Supper of the Lamb." So we have the wife who hath made herself ready and the Virgins as well. This agrees with Ps. xlv, 14. Israel (the Bride) and those added to her (Isa. lvi, 8) go in to the wedding.

However, before this, when the harvest is come, "the Son of Man shall send forth His reapers, and shall gather out of His Kingdom all things that offend and do iniquity . . . . Then shall the righteous shine . . . . . in the Kingdom of their Father" (Matt. xiii, 41-43). We see, then, God's infallible Word, "Thy people shall be all righteous." "A righteous Nation which keepeth the Truth." "My people, children that will not lie: so He was their Saviour." (Isa. lxiii, 8).

This is the Everlasting Nation.

DOES THE BIBLE STAND OR FALL WHEN TESTED BY SCIENCE, HISTORY AND PHILOSOPHY?—IX.

BY PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc.

THE CALL OF ABRAHAM.

Genesis xii.—"Now the Lord had said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will shew thee.

"And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great, and thou shalt be a blessing.

"And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee; and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed."

What sweeping statements are here made to the man from the royal city of Ur! We must look at them somewhat.

First.—God had said: "Get thee out." How He had so said we are not told, but Abram quite clearly knew, and definitely obeyed.

Second.—A clean break! Get out from thy country, kindred and father's house.

What a clean sweep, a complete break in his dearest relationships! Abram made the break, left the city of Ur, went to Haran or Charan, and later went south into the land of Canaan, where he and his heirs had a land home given him and them.

Third.—"Go to a land that I will shew thee."

Digitized by Google

Important and definite! Abram did not set out in the dark and was not as a man who beats the air. He had the clear-cut word and promise of a land Divinely chosen for him and his descendants for ever, as will later appear.

Fourth.—" I will make of thee a great nation." What a wonderful and easily understood promise! No uncertainty! And what a source of comfort and strength for Abram's future days of trial!

The promise of a great nation has been made good. In fact, it was made good 1,000 years before Christ, in the time of Saul, David and Solomon. How the matter stands to-day will be dealt with later on in these running comments.

Fifth.—" I will bless thee and make thy name Great." Here was wonderful encouragement for the lonely man newly arrived in a strange land, and at the time he needed it most.

" I will make thy name Great." No such promise to others! A definite promise to Abram! " Thy name shall be Great." This promise is fulfilled to the letter as well as to or in the spirit. Abram's official descendants, heirs and group of nations in these days, are collected under the name of Great Britain, which means the Great covenant land. Thus in these last days we find that the promise of the name being great is completely redeemed.

Sixth.—" Thou shalt be a blessing." This is the other side of " I will bless thee." In the second case it is, Thou shalt bless others, even the families of the earth.

And wonderfully this has been made good. All the great religions of the world have come from Abram and his seed. And these religions have been believed by thousands of millions during past ages.

Seventh.—" I will bless them that bless thee." This is a specific promise concerning all who in any way are favourably related to Abram and his heirs through all time. This was a help to the patriarch then, but is a greater help to those who, of intent, bless the seed of Abram. With them God keeps His word. With this in view I, the writer, personally aim at giving blessing to Abram in his seed, and thereby become an heir to this specific promise.

" I will curse him that curseth thee."

For half a hundred years this verse bothered me and there was none to help. One looks at Abram in Canaan and in Egypt, and again in Canaan, and in no way imagines men casting around to curse this man from Ur of the Chaldees.

We do not think of any man of Canaan, Philistia, Moab, Ammon, Edom, Ishmael, or of the other peoples settling down to curse Abram direct or indirectly through his seed. And yet these are the words of God. Why are they used? What did He see and know to cause Him to so express Himself?

Two Cursing Organizations.

For some reason Turkish Moslemism has done considerable cursing of others including Israel on several occasions. Perhaps to some extent an unbrotherly act was known and referred to in part in the above words.

But it is in mind that the reference is to one of great power elsewhere. Since the days of Henry VIII and Elizabeth, the Antichrist of history has cursed, and yet officially curses Britain, the chief world representative of Abram on earth.

This Antichrist curses Abram, and God curses him. The words are I will curse him, not them.

Not only has this Antichrist cursed Britain, but he has, for hundreds of years, bent every energy and diabolic plot to break the power of Great Britain on earth. And in the meantime God has been cursing the Antichrist, and will utterly blot him from the face of the earth and the activities of humanity. He will not curse Abram-Israel-Britain.

WEEK BY WEEK.

By A. R. H.

UNDER the guiding hand of GOD, ISRAEL-BRITAIN'S ancient allies—the natural elements—have again come to her assistance. The break of the monsoon this week with the usual accompanying will have a restraining effect upon the law-breaking activities of civil disobedience campaigners in INDIA.

As a Daily Express special correspondent puts it: " During the next three months approximately one hundred inches of rain will fall in this (Bombay Presidency) part of INDIA; and since even police constables on point duty are compelled to carry on under umbrellas, open-air demonstrations will cease at this time to offer the same attractions to the mob as they do in fair weather.

" Government authorities do not disguise their relief at the ARRIVAL OF THE MONSOON.

A high official with whom I discussed the measures about to be taken against picketers in the CITY of BOMBAY expressed the belief that little trouble would now be encountered. 'PROVIDENCE has come to our assistance,' he said, pointing to the downpour through his window, overlooking the raging sea. 'You will find this will mean the for some weeks to come.'

" The relief has come in the nick of time, for the first really serious crisis in BOMBAY since Ghandi's campaign was launched was expected this week, when the authorities had prepared to enforce the recent Ordinance of the VICEROY against the practice of intimidation by picketing British shops."

The destructive spirit of anarchy has reared its ugly head in INDIA and is likely to cause further distress for some time yet. But the relief of a temporary respite from the more violent of its manifestations will be welcome to all Government officers concerned.

Trouble in INDIA has loomed so largely on the horizon that other events have suffered something of an eclipse. For instance, the pronouncement of Dr. Shiels at GENEVA on June 9th appears to have passed almost unnoticed. And yet it represents the regarding the future of PALESTINE that has been made since the BALFOUR DECLARATION in 1917.

The statement represents an entirely new orientation in

Digitized by Google

British Government policy. It puts, what will seem to most people, a completely new interpretation to the whole Zionist question. It is a complete reversal to the long cherished ideal of Zionist zealots.

But it has brought British policy into line with the fulfilment of Scripture prophecy and has vindicated the view expressed and held (alone and in the face of the world) by the British-Israel-World Federation for the past thirteen years, that PALESTINE can never become a JEWISH NATIONAL HOME in an exclusively Jewish sense, but that whilst the JEWS may find a home in PALESTINE with their other Israel brethren, PALESTINE remains the HOMELAND of the BRITISH-ISRAEL PEOPLE as a whole.

Thus the Times reports the matter: "The Permanent Mandates Commission of the LEAGUE of NATIONS studying the measures taken to prevent a recurrence in PALESTINE of the events of August-September, 1929, examined to-day (June 9th) the policy which GREAT BRITAIN intends to follow in future for the carrying out of the PALESTINE MANDATE.

"According to the official communique issued this evening, Dr. Shiels, Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies, made the following statement on the policy to be pursued:—

"His Majesty's Government stood now, as at the beginning of its task, for

THE FULL MANDATE.

That policy would not be changed, but measures had been or were being taken with a view to making the application of the policy more effective, and utilizing the lessons of the past. The defence and police forces now gave a greater margin of safety. Press excesses and seditious propaganda would now be under greater control.

"It was sometimes said that the British obligation to the JEWS was a positive one and their obligation to the ARABS a negative one. That was a dangerous line of argument.

"It was in the best and ultimate interests of the

that the non-Jewish population should feel that the MANDATORY POWER was equally and actively solicitous for their welfare.

"The principles governing British policy in the British dependencies were peculiarly suitable for Palestine, where progress in could only be made by the adaptation of lessons constantly being learned.

"Success, however, ultimately depended not on machinery or on the attitude of Governments but on the willingness of the two peoples to co-operate. Without that the MANDATORY POWER was constantly compelled to act as an umpire instead of as a co-ordinating agency.

"The Arab leaders must see that the scenes of last August were never repeated. The British Government was amenable to reason and argument, but not to actions abhorrent to the spirit of civilization and progress. While national independence was good, the power of willingness to co-operate with another people was better.

"The Jewish leaders, on the other hand, must see that more trust was shown in those who had undertaken solemn obligations. Persistent criticism of Government officials was unwise and often unfair.

"Efforts must also be made to see that Jews throughout the world knew that it was a Jewish home in Palestine, and that the Mandatory Power had undertaken to advance."

Dr. Shiels concluded his pronouncement with the pious affirmation that he thought on the whole there was reason for great hope! Let us trust his optimism will be justified. But it seems far more likely that this revolutionary change in interpretation of policy will precipitate a serious crisis.

A Jewish home in Palestine and not a Jewish State! Not only does this interpretation spell the death-blow to Zionist aspirations. It paves the way for the coming permanent occupation of the by GREAT BRITAIN herself, in her role as modern representative of "All the House of Israel wholly" of Ezekiel xi, 15.

The Berith or Covenant seed of ABRAHAM were to be called after ISAAC,[1] not JUDAH. The possession of PALESTINE is thus confirmed as being that of ABRAHAM[2]—Father of the BRITISH RACE—and his ANGLO-SAXON covenant seed.

The Zionist claim to the LAND has sprung from the assumption that they, the Jews, are the only national representatives of the HOUSE of ISRAEL in existence to-day, whereas they know, or ought to know, that they are "the broken-off branch through unbelief" and only a remnant of JUDAH, one of the tribes.

Jeremiah's warning is pointed here: "Considerest thou not what this people have spoken, saying, which the LORD hath chosen, He hath even cast them off? Thus have they despised MY PEOPLE, that they should be no more a NATION before them."

THE TWO FAMILIES[3]

Somewhere in the world to-day ISRAEL and JUDAH are reunited as a NATION.[4] All the Scriptures make this fact abundantly clear. And the Jews who are nothing more than a remnant of Judah only are not that NATION.

The prophesied union of all the sons of JACOB in the ISLES of the SEA north and west of PALESTINE is symbolized in the UNION JACK or UNION of JACOB national standard of BRITAIN.

Significantly to-day, as the standard of the MANDATORY POWER, the flag of BRITAIN flies over the LAND of PALESTINE. This does not exclude the Jews from right of domicile in the Land of their fathers, but guarantees them the right of domicile in peace and safety alongside their other brethren of ISRAEL. But will this inclusion satisfy Zionist aspirations?

This for the Zionist means abandonment of the cherished dream of a JEWISH STATE. Will he be able to see that a voluntary surrender of exclusiveness and willingness to share with his re-found brethren of long-lost Israel is something better? Or will he, like the elder son in the parable, resent the presence of the prodigal son with his claim of equal inheritance in the joint possessions?

That Britain's forthcoming claim to the title-deeds of PALESTINE will be fiercely disputed is strikingly foreshadowed in that amazing prophecy of Ezekiel: "Son of man, thy brethren, even thy brethren, the men of thy kindred, and are they unto whom the inhabitants of JERUSALEM have said, Get you far from the LORD; unto us is this LAND given in possession."

Here the Jewish claim is set forth in all its arrogant pretentiousness. Obviously, Ezekiel is amazed at the presumption of a mere remnant of ISRAEL attempting to claim exclusive possession of the LAND which belongs to the ISRAEL PEOPLE as a whole. The language, used in setting forth in contrast the full brazenness of the claim, amounts to tautology, as witness the expression: "All the House of Israel wholly." Could any term be more emphatically *in*clusive and more strikingly antithetical to the *ex*clusive claim of the Jewish inhabitants of Jerusalem?

But now read the reply to the Jews who base their claim on the presumption that they alone are the modern representatives of ancient ISRAEL: "Therefore say, Thus saith the LORD GOD; Although I have cast them[7] far off among the heathen, and although I have scattered them among the countries, yet I will be to them as in the countries where they shall come."

Now a message for ISRAEL-BRITAIN: "Therefore say, Thus saith the LORD GOD; I will even gather you from the people, and assemble you out of the countries where ye have been scattered, and I will give You the Land of Israel."

Let Ferrar Fenton conclude the story of the British occupation:—"And when they arrive there they will cast away all their pollutions and depravities from them. Then I will give them a single heart, and put in their breast. I will remove the heart of stone from their body and give them a heart of flesh, so that they may walk by My institutions and regard My decrees, and practise them, and they will be MY PEOPLE, and I will be their GOD."

Thus is gloriously foreshadowed the coming occupation of the LAND by the People of the New Covenant. And the PEOPLE of the NEW COVENANT are the British People dwelling as a NATION in the ISLAND of BRITAIN and the GREATER BRITAINS overseas.

Under the beneficent occupation of BRITAIN—modern representative of "all the House of Israel wholly," the LAND of ISRAEL, for so long desolate[10], will once again become the

GLORY OF ALL LANDS.[11]

But between us and this glorious consummation falls the shadow of a possible preliminary secondary future fulfilment of temporary outrage, as per Daniel xi, verses 16 and 41.

Moreover, the same sinister influence[12] behind the outbreaks in INDIA will make itself felt in relation to the LAND of ISRAEL.[13] And this threat and challenge to possession will finally cause BRITAIN, unitedly with all her YOUNG LION DOMINION-NATIONS,[14] to take the final step necessary to transform the human Mandate from the LEAGUE OF NATIONS into recognition of the precedent and higher Mandate received of higher hands than human, the Mandate which is ours as PEOPLE of the COVENANT by virtue of the covenant made with our Fathers[15] signed with the Name of GOD.

[5] The Promised Land is not Palestine only, but includes all the vast territory lying between the River of Egypt (the Nile) and the River Euphrates; about three million square miles in all. This area under the climatic changes following the flooding of the Dead Sea Valley will become the most desirable Land on the face of the earth. Jerusalem as a seaport will be ideally situated as future centre and capital of the Empire. It is linked by the Red Sea and Mediterranean with the two great oceans, Pacific and Atlantic. It is the centre of the three Continents of Europe, Asia and Africa, whose Continental railroad systems already tend to converge on this point. The Trans-Siberian system extended across the sixty miles of the Behring Straits will bring the whole of the American Continent, North and South, into direct unbroken connection with the new world government.

THE BIRTH OF THE IRISH NATION.—I.

BY WILLIAM F. DILLON.

I.—We trace the birth of Irish Life
From the legends of the past,
When tents of Shem lay scattered wide
Thro' Europa's forests vast,— Where tribal groups had settled down
On each well selected spot,
Some tribes had reached the Western Isles
They divided them by lot.

Both Celt and Saxon from this ancient stock
Began their growth four thousand years ago.

NOTE.—Celts and Anglo-Saxons are of the same identical stock, and there is no racial difference between them according to Professor Huxley. Gladstone, in the "Juventus Mundi," says, that the Danai of Greece, and the Tuatha de Danaan of Ulster, were the same people. Some of the tribe of Dan were traced to Greece, and the symbol of an eagle with a dragon in its claws was the same on the seal used by the early Lacedemonians of Greece.

Sharon Turner has proved in his history of the Anglo-Saxons that their early home was in Asia. Ptolemy says, the Sakai people, known as Saxons, came from Asia to Europe.

II.—For centuries these tribes had grown,
And their petty Kings they crowned,
Who led in fratricidal wars,
And on leash the barking hound.
The tribe of Dan then reached our shore,
And they settled in the land,—
Their King they soon had made Ard Righ,
While the Druids made a stand.

This tribe of Dan had come from Greece
To Scotia's shores some centuries ago.

NOTE.—The Tuatha de Danaan was part of the tribe of Dan, one of the tribes of Israel. They came from Greece and settled in Ulster, and subsequently they took up their headquarters at Clothair, afterwards called Tara. Scotia, meaning "the home of the wanderers," was the ancient name of Ireland, up to the 11th century. Emania, the ancient capital of Ulster, was founded, according to the learned Doctor Kelly, of Maynooth College, about 346 B.C., and he calculates it was eight generations, that is 240 years, before this time that the prophet Jeremiah left Jerusalem, which synchronizes exactly with the time that Ollamh Fodhla lived at Tara, which is strong proof that Jeremiah and Ollamh Fodhla were one and the same person.

III.—The chosen race had wandered far
From the paths by law laid down,
So God above had punished them,
And he took from them their crown.
But Ollamh Fodhla, Prince and Seer,
With the King's fair daughter fled,
To land at Carrickfergus port,
Thence to Eochaid, King and Head.

'Twas then that Zedekiah was dethroned,
Two thousand and five hundred years ago.

NOTE.—Ollamh Fodhla means ancient seer, or wonderful revealer, from two Hebrew words, and was a title given to one who possessed secret knowledge. He landed at Carrickfergus in Ulster, accompanied by his Scribe, Simon Baruch, or Brock, and the Princess Tea Tephi, daughter of Zedekiah, the last King of Judah, a few years after Jerusalem was destroyed in 586 B.C., probably about 580 B.C. They travelled on to Clothair, afterwards called Tara, which was the headquarters of the Tuatha de Danaan, and there they received a Royal welcome from King Eochaid II, the Ard Righ of all Ireland.

IV.—This Ard Righ from the tribe of Dan,
At the age when men should mate,
Was filled with love when he beheld
Such a Princess at his gate,—
With hearty welcome to his Court,
Where he sat in Royal State,
He rose and placed her by his side,
And declared the Court en fête.

Her guardian brought the King the Liafail,
And she, King David's harp from long ago.

NOTE.—It is said the Princess Tephi brought with her the actual golden harp of King David, and the stone called "Jacob's Pillow," upon which he saw a vision of a ladder reaching up to Heaven, and the angels ascending and descending upon it. The Children of Israel carried it everywhere on their journeys, and it was finally deposited in the Temple at Jerusalem, where many of their Kings were crowned. It was afterwards called the Liafail, or Stone of Destiny, and its history would fill a large volume. For ten centuries the old Irish Heremons, or Head Kings, were crowned upon it, and it was taken to Scotland by Fergus, the brother of the Irish Ard Righ, and 34 Kings of Scotland were afterwards crowned upon it. In A.D. 1296 it was brought to England, where it still remains.

V.—The Heremon resolved to gain
Princess Tephi for his bride,
Agreed to all conditions, which Ollamh Fodhla would decide.
Resolved he was to overthrow
All the Druid Altars raised,
And place the Decalogue alone,
As a guide where God is praised.

Historians date this truly great event,
Two thousand and four eighty years ago.

NOTE.—Before consenting to the marriage of the Princess Tephi with King Eochaid II, Ollamh Fodhla imposed the conditions: "That the worship of Jehovah should supersede Druidic worship, and that the Ten Commandments given to Moses should be the basis of Irish Law." Thus Ollamh Fodhla became Ireland's great Lawgiver, and his name has ever been regarded with respect and veneration during the past 25 centuries. It is curious to note that the old Brehon Irish Laws are almost identical with the old Common Saxon Laws of Alfred the Great.

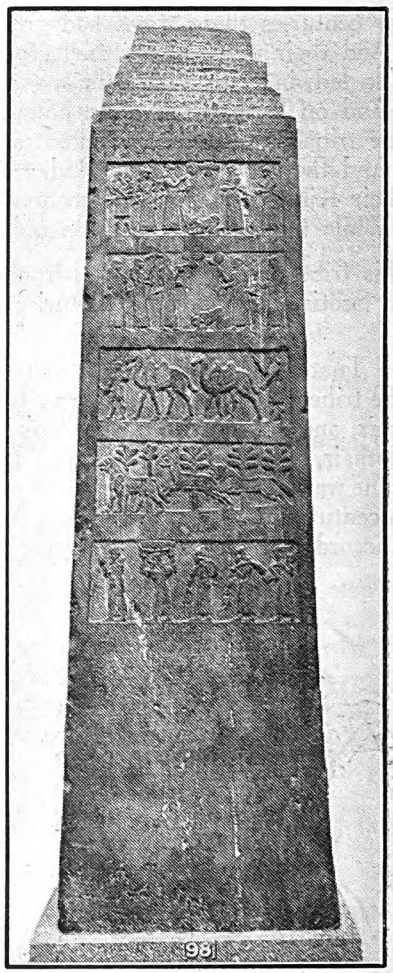
MONUMENTS: OLD AND NEW.—I.



By GEORGE BEALBY.

"There is nothing that solidifies and strengthens a nation like reading of the nation's own history, whether that history is recorded in books, or embodied in customs, institutions and monuments."—JOSEPH ANDERSON.

Some of our readers may have noticed an interesting letter which appeared in the "Daily Telegraph" of April 28th last by Mr. Herbert R. Weller, A.M.C., wherein the writer calls attention to the resemblance that exists between the Cenotaph in Whitehall and the black obelisk of Shalmaneser III in the British Museum (see illustration in next column).

Such an article inevitably brings back to the mind important happenings in the history of Israel, for the monarch of Assyria records upon this monument how he subjected Jehu, son of Omri, King of Israel, to tribute, and mentions Hazael, who succeeded Ben-Hadad as King of Syria. In 2nd Kings, chapter viii, we are told that while Ben-Hadad lay sick, Hazael smothered him with a wet towel during his sleep, and usurped the throne of Syria.

Omri, the sixth King of Israel, transferred the capital of the Northern Kingdom from Tirzah to Samaria, and strengthened an alliance with the Phœnicians by the marriage of his son Ahab with Jezebel, the daughter of Ethbaal, King of Tyre. The daughter of Ahab was even a more unscrupulous and dangerous lady than her mother, for it was this woman Athaliah who endeavoured to exterminate the House of David, but being a devotee of Baal, she probably was in ignorance of the fact that her nefarious plans were in direct opposition to the solemn Covenant of Jehovah, God of Israel. (1 Kings ix, 5; 1 Chronicles xvii, 12, and xxii, 10; 2 Chronicles xiii, 5; Psalms lxxii, 17; lxxxix, 3-4 and 34 to 37; Jeremiah xxxiii, 17; Ezekiel xxxiv, 23-24, also xxxvii, 24; Zechariah xii, 8.) Her murderous intentions failed, as they were bound to fail, and the perpetuity of the Royal House continued, and still continues to exercise its beneficent influence over millions of loyal subjects throughout the world at the present time.

Prior to the period of Omri (*circa 840 B.C.) we hear little of any friction between the Kingdom of Israel and the rulers of Nineveh; although, as we learn from this inscription of Shalmaneser, the militarism of Assyria loomed threateningly on the horizon about this time, but Samaria was not attacked until a hundred years later. Menahem, King of Israel, paid a tribute of one thousand talents of silver to Tiglath-pileser (2 Kings xv, 19), and we learn from the cuneiform inscriptions, recording the exploits of this Assyrian potentate, that this tribute was levied in the year 738 B.C.

Apart from the question of tribute, various forms of alliance and treaties with hostile neighbouring countries were repeatedly ratified, both by the people of Jerusalem as well as with the Northern Kingdom of Israel, in spite of the frequent warnings of the Prophets, who were continually pointing out the futility and danger underlying such a course of diplomacy. (Isaiah viii, 9-12.)

The people of the Covenant were to stand alone, relying upon the protection of Jehovah, Lord of Hosts, and were not even to be reckoned among the other nations of the earth. (Exodus xxxiii, 16; Leviticus xx, 24-26; Numbers xxiii, 9; Hosea vii, 11; Micah vi, 5 and 16.) All warnings, denunciations and exhortations, however, fell upon deaf ears; peace pacts and treaties were made, first with one party, then with another; the Temple worship became corrupt, idolatry prevailed, till finally the judgment overtook them as set forth in the twenty-sixth chapter of Leviticus. Samaria was sacked after a siege of three years in 721 B.C., the Northern Kingdom of Israel was driven into captivity, scattered among the heathen and dispersed through the countries (Ezekiel xxxvi, 19) in Halah and in Habor by the river Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes. (2 Kings xvii, 6.) "O Assyrian, the rod of mine anger, I will send him against an hypocritical nation, and against the people of my wrath will I give him a charge, to take the spoil, and to take the prey, and to tread them down like the mire of the streets." (Isaiah x, 5, 6.)

It was Shalmaneser V who launched the campaign against Hosea, King of Samaria, but the destruction of the city was accomplished by his successor, Sargon, who thus proudly proclaims the magnitude of his conquest upon another tablet, which fortunately has been recovered and preserved: "In the beginning of my reign I besieged; I took by the help of the god Shamash, who gives me victory over my enemies, the city of Samaria. Twenty-seven thousand, two hundred and eighty of its inhabitants I carried away. I took fifty chariots for my own royal share. I took them (the captives) to Assyria and put into their places people whom my hand had conquered."

*The dates according to the monuments are somewhat later than those given by Ussher.

PREDESTINATION.—VIII.

By the Rev. R. G. F. Waddington, M.A.

I come now to a brief reference to other parts of our Empire, in which God has appointed us to rule over many millions of peoples of other races.

The Sudan is a vast country where, within living memory, the many native races were crushed under one of the most savage tyrannies that even "Darkest Africa" has known. Various tribes divided against themselves, constantly engaged in internecine warfare, easy victims of ruthless slave raids, dwelling in a land of great resources which were almost unused. That was the Sudan. What is it to-day? A land freed from the fear of the slave-raiders, safe from the ravages of civil strife, its people prosperous and content. There are two great engineering works, one at Assuan, the other at Senna, which regulate the flow of Nile water, and which have caused the cultivation of millions of acres of once barren land. There are schools like the Gordon College, where the natives are taught useful trades and farming, and there are Evangelistic Agencies, such as the Sudan United Mission, doing wonderful work on the spiritual side of the Gospel of Christ. All this within the short period of British rule. Truly a remarkable transformation without parallel in the history of the world. And let us bear in mind that we are not dealing with gentlemen in frock coats and top hats, but with folk deemed the most savage and degraded, and the most oppressed people of Africa, who to-day are peaceful, law-abiding citizens of the British Empire.

India shows much the same kind of response to the effects of British rule, for famine and cholera, the twin curses of India, have been almost completely enchained by the precautions taken by our Government there. In the North-West two great irrigation canals have been built, which have already done much to convert the Indian desert into a cultivated field; and when the many connecting works are completed, the whole of that once barren waste, the source of so much of India's famines, will have been brought under the possibility of development. The scourge of leprosy has also been considerably curtailed by the efforts of the Government, whilst such evil practices as Suttee, Head-hunting, and Thugging, have been almost entirely suppressed. Will anyone be offended if I declare that these works are forms of preaching the Gospel and the carrying of the message of Salvation in Christ?

Some little time ago a writer in the Sunday at Home said, in the course of his article, "I can never open the sacred records without discovering two distinct elements. I find the element of Prophecy, and the element of History, but the striking thing is that the two run along parallel lines. I find the Prophets threatening Edom, Tyre, Babylon and Jerusalem with certain disasters, and, long after, I find the Historians describing these same disasters as, one by one, overtaking the disobedient cities. I see at once that the Voice that speaks in Prophecy is the Voice of Him Whose Hand directs the moving pageant of History. Prophecy and History are twins."

That is a very useful testimony, but I wonder why the author did not go a little further. He confined his attention to the judgment side of Prophecy, and says, what is undoubtedly true, that God's foretold judgments have been literally fulfilled. But are all God's prophecies, prophecies of doom? Are there not many prophecies of Blessing? Are there not even more prophecies of Blessing?

If Prophecy and History are twins, will not History bear in its records the story of blessing? If the punishment prophecies are true, then the blessing prophecies will be true also, surely? Yet this author I have quoted is only one of many writers and preachers who will acknowledge the truth of the first set of prophecies, and will ignore the truth of the second set. They admit that the threats of judgment have come literally true upon Israel and Judah, but they will not admit that the promises of blessing and restoration were meant for literal truth also upon Israel and Judah. Surely this is something of the "blindness in part" of which Paul speaks? Clearness of vision as regards one set of prophecies, blindness as regards a second set, that is greater in content and just as definite as the first set.

Just think of one point in the quotation. The author refers to the punishment of Edom, and declares that the prophecy has been fulfilled: history has completed the prophecy. Quite true, it has. But the prophecy says more than just that Edom will be punished. It says that Israel was to be the instrument of punishment. "I will lay My vengeance upon Edom by the hand of My people Israel." If the first part of the prophecy is true, and has come true, surely the second part must be true also? Surely we cannot take texts out of the Bible and say that God meant the first half and not the second? And can we then say that God meant what He said when He threatened judgment, but did not mean what He said when He promised blessing?

But, alas, for the logic of the modern student! He will tell you, YOU personally, to trust God; that God is good; God is Love; God has such great blessings in store for you; and he will tell you in the same breath that God never meant these promises of blessing for Israel, the nation, but only for "spiritual Israel," the Church. Then why were not the punishments fulfilled upon "spiritual Judah"? If prophecy and history are twins, have we not a right, in logic, to expect the literal fulfilment of the promises to the nation Israel, even as the prophecies of judgment have been literally fulfilled upon the nation?

Think then upon these promises.

"Joseph is a fruitful bough (son of a fruitful tree), a fruitful bough by a fountain; his branches (daughters) run over the wall." Here is a picture, is there not? of a people spreading abroad, not by violence, nor for aggrandizement, but by steady growth, and for a useful purpose.

Who will look at the British Empire to-day, with its daughter Nations in the Colonies, won by the farmer and the plough, rather than by the soldier, and say that this promise has no application to us?

"I know it my son, I know it: he also shall become a people, and he also shall become great: howbeit his younger brother shall be greater than he, and his seed shall become a multitude (fulness) of nations." Who will look at the British Commonwealth of Nations to-day and say that Jacob's blessing is a meaningless fable?

"The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad; and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose." Who can look at the many lands reclaimed from waste and desolation by British enterprise, and say, "No, it does not apply to us, it was a promise to the Church"? Have I not shown, very briefly I know, but none the less clearly I hope, that Canada, Australia, South Africa, the Sudan, India, New Zealand, are all witnesses to the truth of this, and many similar promises, made to Israel, and applied to Britain? Palestine and Mesopotamia, though so recently brought under our control, can also bring their fruitfulness to testify to the same fact. And here is another little witness.

You have heard of Hong Kong, of course, but do you know its story? The Chinese gave Hong Kong to the British over eighty years ago. It was a barren rock, and terribly unhealthy, used by the Chinese as a settlement for convicts. It saved the authorities the trouble of providing other means for their execution. And the Chinese gave it to us because they thought that it would effectually "choke off" both British Missionaries and British Merchants. But the British saw the advantages of the magnificent natural harbour, and they knew that its unhealthiness could be mastered. So to-day Hong Kong is one of the most important British possessions in the East, with a population of 440,000, and a vast trade. Moreover, the Chinese themselves have benefited so much by the trade that has flowed through Hong Kong that it has been said, "China ceded to the British an island of granite, and has received a mountain of gold in exchange."

"Is not this the fast that I have chosen, to loose the bands of wickedness, to undo the bands of the yoke, and to let the oppressed go free, and that ye break every yoke? Is it not to deal thy bread to the hungry, and that thou bring the poor that are cast out to thy house? When thou seest the naked, that thou cover him; and that thou hide not thyself from thine own flesh?"

Can anyone think of the work that Britain has done in the Sudan, in India, for the starving peoples of Armenia and Eastern Europe; of British Missions in many lands; of the thousands of our own children saved from the streets and converted into first-class citizens by the agency of Dr. Barnardo's Homes and similar organizations; can anyone think of these things and say that there is no comparison between the prophecy and this work?

And so one could go on page after page, prophecy foretelling many blessings for and through Israel; history recording fulfilment of them all, on and through the British.

Now if God be true, how does it come about that He has given to us British the blessings that He promised to Israel? Surely there can be but one answer to that question that is both logical and faithful? Surely no believer in the truth of God can say ought else but this, that Britain IS Israel?

Mr. Avery H. Forbes tells us, in his "British-Israel under New Searchlights," that there are difficulties in the tracing of Israel to Britain that he cannot get over, and that therefore our case is false. But even supposing that the historical record of Israel's migrations is incomplete or uncertain, and admitting that the writers of our early British History are not agreed amongst themselves, how can the disputes of historians, and their varying and various theories, be allowed to override the plain fact that we are enjoying the foretold destiny of Israel?

There are various accounts, mutually contradictory, of the Battle of Jutland. Employing exactly the same kind of argument that Mr. Forbes rejoices in, we shall conclude from these diverse accounts that either the battle was never fought, or that it resulted in a crushing defeat for the British Navy. There are, indeed, some British folk who still think that we were beaten in that fight. Will they, then, be good enough to explain why the German Fleet never came out again, except to surrender? Will they be good enough to explain why, with a victorious fleet, Germany did not finish off the war, so far as Britain was concerned, within three weeks of their great victory? For how ever could we have continued if we had lost command of the sea?

Is it not rather absurd to build up theories to show that something is not true when we have the plain resultant fact right in front of our eyes?

And here is the fact, that there are specific prophecies in the Scriptures concerning Israel; her blessing, her mission, her growth, her influence; and these prophecies find an exact counterpart in the history of Britain during the last 150 years. How ever can the petty theories and unbeliefs of modern historians nullify that fact? But Mr. Forbes refuses to listen to the Voice of Scripture. He says that the historical difficulties he has found in his researches prevent him reading the Bible, or taking any account of the Word of God. Yes, that is what he himself says. Here it is:—

"There are four avenues of evidence by which the subject can be approached: Scripture, Ethnology, Tradition, Secular History. I have not studied the first three," says this opponent. Surely, then, his examination of our case has been sadly, if not shamefully, lacking in care and thoroughness? But the reason he gives for this lack is truly an amazing reason. "On advancing along the fourth avenue, I found myself up against a stone wall which I could neither climb over nor break through. If this wall cannot be negotiated, the other avenues cannot be reached." That, I venture to suggest, in all kindness, is the most absurdly illogical statement that I have ever encountered. And that illogical statement is considered by Mr. Forbes to be quite sufficient to overthrow our case, and nullify all our arguments from Scripture.

There is nothing whatever to prevent Mr. Forbes from following the avenue of Scripture, if he so wishes. To say that the "wall" that he has found when following the historic avenue prevents him from going along the Scripture avenue is like saying that because there is a traffic block in one of Bradford's streets, a man is prevented from travelling along the Great North Road to London.

And let it be further noted, that there are many people, like myself, who have travelled along the road of history, and we have not encountered the wall that blocked Mr. Forbes' way.

I hope, in a later chapter, to travel that road, and trust that I shall have your company on the way. In the meantime, let me say that the historians can have their quibbles, and raise their difficulties, and talk about their walls to their hearts' content. I, personally, am content to rest my case and my belief on the Bible, and on the power of God Almighty to carry out His promises.

When God says "I will," I refuse to allow the "But I don't see how" of any man to shake my belief, nor to blind my eyes to the fact that those promises are clearly fulfilled in the British Empire. And may I remind my readers that there is all the difference in the world between the verdict of history and the verdict of historians. Mr. Forbes gives us the verdict of historians, and he picks out those whose theories agree with his own, ignoring all others, and therefore he asks his readers to accept opinions about facts, rather than the facts themselves; and the Rev. S. H. Wilkinson, in his little foreword to the Booklet, realizing this weakness, makes an attempt to cover it up by suggesting that Mr. Forbes "holds his authorities in reserve."

Let our opponents show us, if they can, that the statements made about the extent, the growth, the work, the influence, the development, of the British Empire are all wrong. Let them show, if they can, that these statements bear no resemblance to the promises made by God to Israel. Then, and then only, can they find fault with the representation of our case, and deny our Predestination.

Unfortunately, for the adversary, our Church leaders of many Denominations, as I have already pointed out, are constantly referring to the British Empire and its God-given responsibilities and privileges. Even Roman Catholic Bishops give their testimony. The Bishop of the Roman Catholic Diocese of New York has just returned from a tour of the world, and is full of praise for British rule in the East, especially in India, and he says, "If Great Britain withdrew from this part of the world, chaos would ensue."

Our present Prime Minister, Socialist though he be, has said exactly the same thing in his Empire Day address over the Wireless. Very well, then, the assaults of our adversaries must fail. They are trying to overthrow the rock and stronghold of Gibraltar with air-guns. They may succeed in chipping tiny bits off the rock, here and there; they may even succeed in wounding some of the defenders of the stronghold, but they can do no more.

God Himself is our Defence, and His Word is the impregnable Rock of our Cause.

WINGS OF JUNE.

IN his book, "Prehistoric London," Mr. E. O. Gordon gives a wonderful account of the ancient ceremonies performed at Stonehenge on the longest day, June 21st.

On page 64 he writes: "The scene within the Circle on the morning of the longest day, as the rays of the Life-giver shone direct upon the altar within the Holy of Holies, the Sacred Ark, Navis, or boat-shaped symbol formed by the massive trilithons, has been graphically described by a Welsh writer: 'We behold the hundred Druids on their knees at four o'clock a.m. June 21st, waiting for to appear, and when he arrives, suddenly flashing his beams like a winged cherub into the most Holy of Holies . . . The flashes of June 21st symbolized the descent of the Awen, or Holy Wings, the Druidic name for the Holy Ghost, the Comforter.

"'In the Kimmerian language of Druidism, he is called Awen Hafen, or the Wings of June. The arrival of the Awen was greeted with the words, Holy, Holy, Holy, by the kneeling multitude on the downs outside, and the sound of praise was like the murmuring of the ocean.'

"Stonehenge is the one and only prehistoric sanctuary which carries on the continuity of its tradition as to this day. The summer solstice, now as of old, is a magnetic attraction to hundreds of sightseers, who gather together from all parts of the world at eight minutes to 4 a.m. on the longest day, June 21st, to watch the sun glide majestically on his upward path from behind the consecrated Pillar, Index or Hele (Greek helios, the sun) stone. It is not until the whole orb, slightly flattened by the refraction of the air, has come into view, that the requirements are fulfilled, and then the coincidence is exact and the sun appears, as if balanced on the apex of the stone.

"It is perhaps possible to imagine the effect, but to an actual spectator the picture is most impressive, and the dark mass of the bowing stone, as seen through the frame formed by the uprights and centre lintel of the Circle, adds brilliancy and completeness to the effect of a sight never to be forgotten."

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

MR. JOHN LEECH, K.C., and the Rev. Sparshott Johnson, M.A., have addressed a series of meetings in Cambridge. The Secretary-General and Mr. Leech went to Chichester on June 17th to answer the Dean of Chichester who preached against B.-I. in the Cathedral there on May 19th, the Sunday following the publication of our Manifesto in the Times. The audience gathered in the Assembly Hall soon demonstrated their sympathy with the speakers. The Rev. Arthur Ernest Ingham, B.A., Vicar of Aldingbourne, Rural Dean of Boxgrove, late Hon. Chaplain to the Forces, and son of the late Bishop Ingham, presided, and stoutly defended British-Israel teaching. Mr. Garrison followed and traversed the statements of the Dean of Chichester as reported in the local papers, pointing out how entirely wrong they were, and how he had attacked some Bishops and many Clergy of his own Church. Mr. Leech declared that the Dean's statements were hopelessly ill-founded. British-Israel, he said, is founded on the Bible, and is supported by the most reliable history. Major E. F. Holland, of Brighton, also spoke briefly in support of B.-I. Several people came from long distances. Literature was given away and some was purchased. Earnest requests were made for "follow-up" meetings, and these will be arranged for the autumn season.

A very interesting lecture on "With General Allenby in the Holy Land" was given at Headquarters by the Rev. S. E. Mowforth, Chaplain to the Forces, on June 18th. The speaker's recital of his wonderful experiences was listened to with intense interest. He has consented to give another lecture on his travels in India, after the holiday season. Mr. Garrison presided and welcomed Mr. Arthur Exley, J.P., President of our Brisbane Branch, and his wife. Mr. Exley gave a brief address. He hopes to speak again at Headquarters later on. Our visitors will be remaining for the Congress.

The Rev. Kenneth Dodds gave a most acceptable address at Headquarters on June 19th. After this week the ordinary meetings will be suspended until September as usual.

Letters from the Rev. Pascoe Goard tell of his experiences across Canada and the U.S.A. to the Pacific Coast—Vancouver, extracts from which we hope to give in a future issue. Mr. Goard sends his love to all enquiring friends. He had just listened to a very fine address by Professor Odlum, who is still vigorously serving the Cause of B.-I.

Erratum.—On page 393 of our last issue, second column, twelfth line from the top, "various" should read "variorum." Will readers please make this correction, so that those to whom they may lend their copies of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE may have the right rendering?

Mr. J. H. Brenchley writes that he has lectured for our Branches at Southport, Manchester, Liverpool, Wigan, Preston, Blackburn, Blackpool, Bolton and Barrow, held some drawing-room meetings, and preached every Sunday for the last few months on the lines of British-Israel interpretation, finding people everywhere thankful to hear the Scriptures explained, and ready for the Message we have to give.

Miss Hamilton Hunter has addressed meetings in Highgate, Reigate, Horsham, Plumstead, Brighton, Eastbourne, Folkestone, Harrow and Sutton. Mr. J. J. Morey has been busy with meetings in Portsmouth, Gosport, Southampton, Chatham, Battersea, Worthing, Bedford, Sutton, Guildford, and at Headquarters.

The Rev. E. A. Couldrey has lectured in Southport, Blackburn, Rochdale, Liverpool, Manchester, Blackpool and Wigan.

Several new members and supporters have resulted from our Manifesto. We cordially invite those of our readers who have not yet joined the Federation to link up with us. Forms will gladly be sent on application.

Indications point to a goodly number at the Summer Convention at Swanwick, Derbyshire, July 29th to August 2nd. A very pleasant and profitable time is looked forward to. Cheap fares have been arranged with the railway companies.

Abbots Leigh, our Hostel at Glastonbury, has a steady stream of visitors. The district is charming at this time of the year. Those who wish for rooms are invited to communicate with the Secretary-General.

Arrangements by the Executive Committee for a guest-house for the Federation in the London area are nearing completion, and it is expected that several will be glad to avail themselves thereof.

All are asked to note in their diaries the date for the opening of the Eleventh Annual Congress—October 6th next, in the Central Hall, Westminster. A record number of tickets have been applied for.

A College Principal writes :—" I have read the Rev. Pascoe Goard's book, 'The Kingdom of God,' three times, and I regard him as a master of interpretation ; I have also read his articles in your journal. Please convey to him my warm thanks. A friend lent me the complete numbers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE for two years past, and I am now subscribing for it ; I am now an avowed British-Israelite. Yours is the most profoundly spiritual journal I know."

A. R. S. writes :—" Lady B. has been sending me copies of your journal. I find all the numbers of absorbing and compelling interest, often staying up until 2 and 3 a.m. reading them. I must congratulate you on the Manifesto which has been appearing in the papers. This Movement is obviously of the utmost importance, and should be the means of curing much of the agnosticism and indifference at the present time. It throws a flood of light on much that was previously obscure, and it establishes the truth of the Bible, and explains to a large extent the mysteries of God. I shall try to get to your meetings."

W. E. G. M. writes from Manchester :—" Having read your Manifesto in the Daily Mail, I shall esteem it a favour if you will kindly send me all the literature you have relating to the B.-I. Movement. I am very much interested in it having been for some time working out the problems on my own account as dealt with in your article. I see the signs on every hand that the great British Empire has been appointed to bring the world out of its present condition of chaos, and I am ready to assist all I possibly can in forwarding your Cause. As a commercial traveller I come in contact with many people daily who are taking a greater interest in the deeper things of life than has been the case for a very long time. I am become a true disciple, and I am quite ready to give my services whenever and wherever possible."

J. S. writes from Barrow-in-Furness :—" Your wonderful journal has been a great help to me since I was first induced to read it in November last, and it gets better every week. I am trying to spread the knowledge of the glorious Truth it contains."

* * *

M. E. R. writes from Gippsland, Victoria, Australia :—" I desire to join you in this most necessary Forward Movement. I am in a far remote corner of our great Empire, a true believer in our Israelitish origin. I have succeeded in getting some people interested and they are taking THE NATIONAL MESSAGE. I shall be glad if you will send any literature to help me along. This is a small country town with four little churches, and we have some believers in each one. Some of the ministers do not believe in Christ's literal Coming, nor in the resurrection of the dead. I am praying for a helper to be sent me, and I ask for your prayers, for I feel a call to stir up this place to know the B.-I. Truth. People don't know what they are missing. If it pleases God to spare me they shall know. The Press here is good to me, and I get some letters published every year."

Another correspondent writes :—" Thank you for all the light and knowledge you are giving in the opening up of the Prophecies which have to so many people meant little or nothing, because the pulpits know not that the Prophecies find their fulfilling and application in British-Israel."

The Rev. Commander Roberts says that large numbers have written to him expressing their gratitude for the great benefits they have received from their connection with " Israel's Scripture and Prayer Union." Prayer binds souls together. Let us ask Almighty God to guide and control our nation in regard to the persecution of Christians in Russia, and to bless the efforts of the Russian Missions working for their good, also the great Albert Hall Meeting to be held on July 14th under the auspices of the Christian Protest Movement.

THE STATESMANSHIP OF JESUS

By the Rev. W. PASCOE GOARD, F.R.G.S.

This book is an exposition of the Epistle to the Hebrews. The Epistle bears in the signature place the name "GOD."

The double fact that the human authorship is withheld, and in the signature place the name "GOD" appears, indicates the Epistle to be a letter directly inspired from God to us.

The subject of the Epistle is God the Son; His Office and Ministry, as King of Righteousness; King of Peace; King of Salem.

The book is brilliantly written. It brings out new truths and restates well-known truths, so as to make all appear strikingly new.

The place of Israel in the New Covenant is made to appear with great clearness.

THE NAMES OF GOD

OR THE MAJESTIC ORDER OF DIVINE SELF-REVELATION.

By the Rev. W. PASCOE GOARD, F.R.G.S.

The late Rev. Prebendary WEBB-PEPLOE wrote:—

"May I express my sincere gratitude to the Rev. Wm. Pascoe Goard for his book on The Names of God, which I have found of the highest value. It may enable others to grasp the progressive nature of God Himself, His Names, and His Personality.

It is a remarkable discovery, and deserves the closest attention. I have published a book on The Titles of Jehovah. I wish I had known half of what Mr. Goard has produced in his book.

I ask him to believe that he has helped a humble servant of Jehovah in his study of the Word."

BRITISH-ISRAEL: THE PLAIN ARGUMENT

By P. W. THOMPSON, M.A.

". . . . . Would you kindly send the 'National Message' for six months to above address, as I often find it sold out when I send for it here?"

This extract from a reader's letter illustrates the popularity of our journal and tends to show its increasing circulation. But we are not satisfied yet. We are quite convinced that there are thousands of potential readers among the friends of our adherents who are not readers of the NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER simply because they are unaware of their great heritage. Are you willing that such a state of affairs should continue?

The remedy is simple. Below you will find an order form; fill this in with your friend's name and address, enclosing the appropriate remittance. This will ensure that the NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER is forwarded weekly, thus sowing valuable seed. By this means we shall make new friends who would otherwise be out of our reach.

If you are not in a position to send the names of friends, please forward us a remittance and we will commence subscriptions to people whom we hope to interest in the work of the British-Israel-World Federation.

Do not delay. Send your remittance at once, and so enable us to go forward with our campaign.

THE TIMES OF THE GENTILES

by

BASIL STEWART (Discipulus)

A clear and deeply interesting exposition of prophecies respecting the great "Seven Times," showing how the events therein foretold have been precisely fulfilled in history, and how little now remains to be determined. Of special interest to-day is the author's forecast of the immediate future, in which he makes clear that the terrors of Armageddon are reserved solely for those anti-Christian forces which have, from platform and press, carried war into Heaven and challenged God Himself! Working to-day all over the world to bring about our downfall, they are rapidly digging their own grave in "the valley of Hamon-gog." Many people are trembling as to what the next few years may bring forth. Read this remarkable book and share the writer's optimism. The Second Advent is also dealt with at length. A large and instructive Chart illustrates the letterpress.

THE BRITISH-ISRAEL IDEAL

By W. G. DUNCAN THOMPSON

"... If Parliament, Colonies and Dominions, supported by public opinion, were to recognise officially the Christ as Supreme Lord of our Empire and were to commence immediately to revise the whole constitution in the light of that recognition; if our laws, our economic usages, our business dealings and our political and diplomatic activities became impregnated with that ideal, what would happen? ... EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

FROM BABYLONIA TO THE ISLES, OR THE MARCHING ORDERS TO ISRAEL.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

THE Divine record (Isaiah xlviii, 20-22 and xlix) here cross-sects the course of world history at the time of the rise of Cyrus the King.

The instrument in the Hand of God to bring about the liberation of Israel is this chosen man. Before him Babylon should fall. At his command the remnant of Judah should return to Jerusalem to rebuild the City and the Temple.

Also at his command the ten-tribed House of Israel should be free to march forth from Babylon, the land of the Chaldeans, to the end of the earth.

Asiatic history tells the story, as it is found inscribed on tablet, stone and pillar.

The Bible tells the story in history and in prophecy.

The outlines of the return of the Jews are well known to every Bible reader.

The outlines of the migration of ten-tribed Israel to the Isles are etched for us in the prophecies, and in secular literature, and are being dug up and pieced together by the labours of archæologists, historians and ethnologists. There is such a mass of information already gathered, and in process of being gathered, from many sources that the fact of the migration of Israel is now beyond question. Only the details have to be recovered.

It will be seen that in this and all our studies concerning Israel and Judah we present ISRAEL PLUS JUDAH, and never ISRAEL VERSUS JUDAH.

Judah has her place all down through the historic Scriptures. In fact, the Jew holds his place in the Bible histories long after Israel had passed out from the purview of the Bible histories.

Judah also holds her place in prophecy, first, as to the nation of the Jews, which should endure for seventy weeks, and then disappear in a flood; and, secondly, as the dispersion; and, thirdly, as a tribe in Israel restored, in the latter days.

Israel is dealt with in the Covenants for the latter days, in contradistinction to the House of Judah. Israel is dealt with in the immutable promises of God, made both to Israel and to the House of David. Israel is fully dealt with also in the prophecies concerning Israel, which cover all the period intervening between the captivity of Israel and the millennium; during the period of the millennium; and even thereafter throughout the everlasting condition set forth in the two last chapters of Revelation.

Our study finds Israel still in the land of Babylonia in the days of Cyrus the King.

Israel had experienced a busy time in Assyria, later called Babylonia. Shortly after having been carried captive to Assyria, Israel raised the standard of revolt and made war on the power of Assyria. She swept through much of the country and attacked even the city of Nineveh itself, reducing it to ashes. Thus Israel prepared the way for the rise to power of Babylon, by which state Assyria was overthrown.

Later, Israel, under the name of Sacæ, joined forces with Cyrus, and enabled the Medes and Persians to capture the City of Babylon, and to change the Empire to that of Medo-Persia.

When the Medo-Persian Empire thus succeeded the Babylonian, under the Medo-Persian system of law and a better form of government, the captive peoples Israel and Judah were free to come and go at will.

Digitized by Google

The Jew sent an expedition back to Palestine to restore the City and Temple, and to reinhabit the land of Judah.

Israel marched out of Babylonia northward, settling in the south of Europe "beyond the head waters of the Euphrates." Now "beyond the Euphrates" in this case does not mean east of the Euphrates, but north of the head waters of that great river. Take a map which shows the course of the river, and it will be seen that the upper course is from an easterly direction to a westerly direction. The Israelites crossing the "narrow passages" or head waters of the river passed over it travelling northward towards the European Continent.

GOD'S MARCHING ORDERS TO ISRAEL.

We shall now look at God's marching orders to Israel; the Divine provision for them during the movement; and their destination.

> "Go ye forth of Babylon, flee ye from the Chaldeans, with a voice of singing declare ye, tell this, utter it even to the end of the earth; say ye, The Lord hath redeemed his servant Jacob."—Isa. xlviii, 20.

The prophet Isaiah had been dealing with "Israel in the Isles" from chapter xl forward to the end of chapter xliv. At the end of the latter chapter there is an abrupt break in the prophetic message, and from the Isles the course of the prophecy swings to Babylonia, the place of the captivity of Israel.

Part of the amazing prophecy is addressed to Cyrus, called and commissioned of God to overthrow the Babylon Empire, and to let His people go free. The chapters which intervene lead up to the marching orders quoted above.

Let us remember that Judah was sent back to Jerusalem, there to build the City and the Temple and to reinhabit the land of Judah.

Israel on the other hand was sent forth to march through the countries to the end of the earth.

Consider the solemn warning at the end of the paragraph, "THERE IS NO PEACE, SAITH THE LORD, UNTO THE WICKED." Now who may the wicked be who come into mind in the warning spoken in this connection, and again later? Doubtless they are those who disobey the orders to march forth, and whose faith shrinks away from the dangers of the expedition into the wilderness of the north.

THE ROUTE.

"And they thirsted not when he led them through the deserts; he caused the waters to flow out of the rock for them: he clave the rock also, and the waters gushed out."

This statement of fact reminds one of the provision God made for their fathers over a thousand years before, when they marched out of Egypt, and for forty years through the wilderness. It was the same God Who commanded them to march in each case and Who led them forth. It was the same race of people who were so led forth. It was the same miraculous power which provided for their wants as they slowly passed on their way.

The latter generation moved out from Babylon during the time of Cyrus and his successors in the Medo-Persian regime. They were in the north when Alexander the Great invaded Medo-Persia. They were still "beyond the Euphrates" when Josephus wrote his Antiquities of the Jews at the end of the first century A.D. They were there, a multitude beyond counting, at that time, beyond the boundaries of the Roman Empire, and not subject to the power of Rome.

This brings us down to the end of the first century A.D. in the history of this branch of the Israel people. Remember they were but a part of the race. The Colony of Britain was at that very time strong enough to occupy all the strength of the Roman Empire in the British wars, and so skilful in arms as to call forth all the ability of all Rome's renowned Generals.

There intervened a few centuries, the history of which is being more and more fully pieced together, in which the hosts of Israel, divided under many leaders and called by many names, marched and counter-marched, swayed by the movements of nations as ancient Asia and youthful Europe struggled together. The fall of Asiatic civilization and the rise of European civilization, with all the commotion, the fall of the one and the rise of the other, caused the nations of Europe to advance and retreat, to migrate this way and that during centuries. In that swaying of nations the Israel people were involved. As we have said, they moved under many leaders, and they were called by many names.

Out of that welter of nations and peoples there gradually formed the main stream of migrating Israel, namely, the Gothic stream. This was divided into three sections: the Goths, the Austro-Goths, and the Visigoths. The outlines and many of the details of this movement are fairly well set forth in European history.

This movement came to rest at last for a time. Then a new impulse set the people on their way again, now under more modern names, and the bulk of them with the centre of their national organization made their way to the British Isles.

The movement consumed about a thousand years. During all that time the Lord had directed the westward impulse of the Israel movements, and had protected and led them "like a horse through the wilderness" as the above quotation indicates.

How shall we reconstruct the history of the movements of Israel during that period?

The general history of the centuries indicated has been a field in which many have been working from a number of angles. Some from the standpoint of Roman history, as, for instance, Gibbon in his "Rise and Fall of the Roman Empire." He was, as so many others are, "Rome Centric." He saw everything in history as it related itself to Rome. Much that is of value has been preserved by Gibbon. But his whole work considered as history is out of focus. There were peoples and forces in existence and active much more important than Rome ever was or ever will be. Of some of these Gibbon had no knowledge, of others but the faintest and most distorted idea. For instance, that the Israel people were a factor in mediæval and modern world affairs he did not know.

Sharon Turner has come nearer to the facts we are interested in, in his standard work published in many editions, called "The History of the Anglo-Saxon People."

Bruce Hannay has been working in that field, and the results of his work are found in his book "European and Other Race Origins."

Digitized by Google

Professor Waddell has been working in that field, and has given the results of his labour to the world in his book entitled "The Phœnician Origin of the English, Scotch and Welsh."

None of these, however, have started out to trace the history of this greatest of peoples, namely, the Israel peoples, from the time they left Palestine to this modern day.

Professor Edward Odlum, than whom no man living is better qualified, has spent many years upon this quest. He has gathered from the libraries of Britain, America and the Continent data of every description. He has employed secretaries English speaking, Continental and Jewish. He has travelled in every Continent, and by personal observation and organized research has accumulated the necessary facts to make the record of the history of the people stand out and live through the centuries. Now he is engaged in preparing this mass of detailed information for publication, in the form of a reference set of volumes which will take premier place in literature in this domain. He is traversing the history of Asia and Europe with this leading thought in mind, and from what the writer has seen of his work thus far he will accomplish for Israel what Gibbon did for the Roman Empire. This great set of books should begin to pass into the printer's hands in the course of a year from this time if Professor Edward Odlum's health holds in his usual robust form. We believe God has assigned to him this task, and we believe God will carry him through to a successful completion of the same. When this book is in the hands of the reading public it will no more be a question as to how Israel history shall be reconstructed. But for the final editing of the material, and preparing it for the Press, that is a task now well forward. We are speaking of data now assembled, and not dreaming of something which might possibly be brought to pass. In the meantime the question stands: How shall we piece together Israel history to the days in which we live?

There are many contributory sources of information. Each such source constitutes a field of research. First comes the plain history of the Bible. This is Book I of the study, and it brings us down to 721 B.C. Next comes the field in which has been hidden for ages the history of the Asiatic civilization, included amongst which is the history of Israel during its Asiatic domicile. Archæologists are uncovering the history of ancient Asia in a wonderful manner. Tablets and inscriptions, while giving general Asiatic history, include the priceless information of the many synonymous names under which the people of Israel existed or travelled. These furnish a key to the early European histories, written by Greek and Latin historians. This is Book II.

Armed with the glossary of names furnished by tablets and inscriptions, ancient histories become luminous with information concerning the Israel peoples. This is Book III.

These early histories so illuminated again furnish the key to mediæval history, and lead up to modern history. This is Book IV.

Many are working at this task from the viewpoint of Israel history; and every indication leads directly in the line of the marching orders of Israel from Babylon to the Isles, that is to say, the British Isles, as the centre of organized Israel.

ANNIVERSARY MEETING.

SPEECH BY MAJOR J. KNOWLES, O.B.E.,

PRESIDENT, B.-I.-WORLD FEDERATION, AND OTHERS, AT HEADQUARTERS, ON 23RD JUNE.

TO-DAY is the 36th Anniversary of the Prince of Wales' Birthday. I know I speak on behalf of everybody here when I say that we are very proud of our Prince. He stands a splendid example to the youth of this country and of the world. He does his job magnificently and always maintains the prestige of the British Royal House. The Americans admire our Prince, and many of them have been heard to say that he is as much their Prince as he is ours. We wish him every possible good wish to-day and always.

To-day is also the Anniversary of the Opening of these Headquarters.

I think you will agree that since we have been here our Movement has advanced in a way no one could have foreseen. I think I may say we are now known throughout the English-speaking world and in many foreign countries as well.

Since the opening of the recent Press campaign which you have all seen in the papers, the Secretary-General has been simply overwhelmed with callers, and has been hard put to it to deal with the correspondence that has come in. He will be speaking to you about it, and will tell you of the work he has been called upon to do.

I am sure that we are extremely fortunate in having the Bishop of the Falkland Islands here this afternoon. We are very grateful to him for sparing time to come and speak to us, and we extend to him a very hearty welcome.

We are very glad, too, to welcome the Rev. John Complin from Australia, who will also be speaking to you presently. He has just recently retired from being in charge of the Central Baptist Church in Sydney, one of the oldest in Australia, and we are very glad he is able to be here this afternoon.

Ladies and Gentlemen, I am sure you would like us to send a message to His Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales:—

"All the members of the British-Israel-World Federation respectfully wish your Royal Highness many, many happy returns of the day."

Now we are to have the pleasure of listening to a gramophone record of a speech by the Prince of Wales himself.

(Gramophone record followed, kindly lent by Rev. Sparshott Johnson.)

I am sure you will agree that the Prince of Wales in those few words put the British character as clearly and as well as it could have been put. We pride ourselves in this country on playing the game. I hope we shall all do that to the best of our ability.

Now, Ladies and Gentlemen, before I call on the Bishop, the Secretary-General has a few words to say.

MR. HERBERT GARRISON:—

My dear Mr. President, my Lord Bishop, Ladies and Gentlemen, what I have to say to you will be a surprise to some, not to all. This happens to be the birthday of the President of our Federation as well as the birthday of the Prince of Wales. Now, it is not everyone who can have the honour of having a birthday on the same day as the Prince of Wales; I may tell you that, in my judgment, our President is well worthy of that honour. All of us agree that he is the best President we have ever had, and we do not want any other. I feel it would be suitable at this juncture that we should by a standing vote wish our noble President many, many happy returns of this day.

MAJOR KNOWLES :—

Ladies and Gentlemen, I thank you all for the kind way in which you have received this speech by Mr. Garrison. I am sure I am very grateful to you for the kind way in which you have always treated me, and you know I take a very keen interest in this Federation.

THE BISHOP OF THE FALKLAND ISLANDS :—

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen, I suppose the first thing I ought to say is that it is Mr. Garrison's birthday to-day, but I cannot say that quite, but I will say that it might be his birthday, for he looks younger than ever, and I was quite surprised to-day to see him looking so sprightly and I told him I thought he was getting younger instead of older. I come here this afternoon with an apology, because, having been away so long in South America, where we are outside the run of things, I come back feeling a rather ill-informed British-Israelite. To presume to get up here instead of sitting at the feet of someone else I consider to be a piece of presumption on my part, and yet at the same time it might not be useless for such as I to add his little testimony to what he feels. In a Roman Catholic country like South America there are great difficulties. I have given a certain number of lectures, and at the first two or three there were a certain number of Chilians who could understand English. I found these people saying, "You are not the only pebbles on the beach." Unless we can put it carefully we are likely to do harm. There is a great responsibility in the matter. From one point of view it is easy because there is a great feeling in foreign countries that there is something strange and curious about the ideals and life amongst them of our great race ; because of the fact that we seem to be in our ideals and practices above most other people. We had just now a mention in the Prince of Wales' speech of the integrity and justice and so on of our race, but you have to live in a foreign country to know that we are the only people in the world among whom there is the justice that is in this country. I said to a man who ought to know better (and he had lived most of his life in Chili), talking about some buildings he was erecting, "Your buildings are not getting on." "No," he said, "I have a dispute with the contractor, and I am afraid it will have to go to arbitration." "That will be the best thing," I said. He said, "But I cannot get the right arbitrator."

I said, "But an arbitrator is a man who holds the scales evenly balanced in his hand." Then we got talking about justice in England in our Courts of Law. If you are a prince or a pauper, you get justice. "Oh yes," he said, "but you can square an English judge all right." "Can you ?" I said. "Yes," he said, "there are fifty thousand ways you can square a judge." I said, "You try. You cannot square a judge in any shape or form in England."

Well, now, I wish this great Federation unbounded prosperity. I would lay down, as we all had to lay down in our early days of Euclid, axioms. There are six points that we have to consider :—

1. To draw the great difference between Israel and Judah.

2. The British-Israel Federation exists to prove the truth of God's Word. Now if we were out to prove that God was false or that there was no God at all, I could quite understand that God would not allow this great Federation to exist, but I cannot expect that our God is going to allow this great Federation to exist and put forth all these ideas and try to prove the truth of His Word on false premises.

3. In our search among the nations of the world we must expect to find Israel amongst the greatest nations. It is no good to try to prove that the Red Indians, Afghans, and so on, are Israel. It is laid down in the Scriptures that Israel is to be the GREATEST nation in the world.

4. While the Jews are before us, inasmuch as they rejected our Lord Jesus Christ and finally crucified Him, and therefore they are undergoing the penalty, we would be surprised if God would have altogether thrown over the section of the nation which had no part in the Crucifixion and which now have the commission to be His representatives under another name.

5. If Israel exists to-day, not only must the sons of Ephraim be the greatest in the world, but because of that they shall be open to suspicion ; they shall be open to jealousy. "Come and let us root them out." Certainly it is that our great Empire for some reason is regarded with suspicion in certain quarters. Whenever we put out something which we think might help things, the other nations say "What is behind this ?" I think the great object of Germany was, "Come, let us root them out of the land." We are always open to suspicion and jealousy, and you have that in the prophecy of Isaiah. Somehow we get out of it and then we are in something else, and so on. God is really ruling and directing the whole thing.

6. While the Church plays an important part in the affairs of the true Israel of God—for they are not all Israel that are of it, yet the nation has not been turned into the Church. It is only when taking these points and laying them down that we can proceed in arguing with others who do not know these things, to proceed on a demonstration and an argument to show that we are not merely just a nation that has risen up, but something placed in the world for a purpose. The world is not made up of a hotchpotch of nations, merely coming up and going down. All through the world's history God has been carrying out a great design. Do not get disheartened because people do not believe. You have been given this commission to evangelize. We are witnesses to other people, and they, whether they will hear or whether they will forbear, the trumpet has been sounded and the watchman has saved his own soul.

What a different thing our Church Councils would be if we only knew ourselves. When the prodigal son came back, he knew himself in a different light.

The other nations of the world feel they are in contact with the seed that the Lord has blessed. They think there is a supernatural power somewhere which keeps England up in a marvellous way. Let us thank Almighty God for His great blessings.

I want to say something else now which I say with all the seriousness and reverence of which I am capable, "If we are not Israel, then God has stultified Himself." The Dictionary meaning of the word "stultify" is "to cause to appear foolish." If we are not Israel, God has exposed Himself to a charge of stultifying and that is taking the plain meaning of the words. Counsel would say, "What is the exact meaning the man in the street would put on these words? God is eternally true, and if these charges are true, God is not Eternal Truth. If He has failed in His purposes, something has come in and made Him alter His plans." "Behold, I will take the House of Israel from among the nations." If that has not been carried out and not going to be, we are dealing with an unfaithful God Whom we are called upon to serve and trust.

Now, my brethren, having drawn that hurried, but I think logical, conclusion upon the charge of failure on God's part, let us leave this part of the subject, but first let us bow our heads in humble submission to Him Who is the unalterable God.

If we say that the promises are transferred to the Church and that the nation has ceased to be, and the promises are now placed in the keeping of the Church, we are up against the Book. The idea is based on the New Covenant which we find in Jeremiah xxxi: "I will make a New Covenant with the House of Israel and with the House of Judah." It is in connection with this promise of the New Covenant that the importance of the distinction of the Kingdom is based. It goes on in the next verse: "I will put My law in their inward parts."

Supposing we were to accept for the moment that the promises are transferred to the Church, then we should be forced to the conclusion that God has broken up a more or less united people, loyal to King and Country, and created a disunited Church. The Gentile Church has made a lot of claims which people have accepted more or less and which our Church does not positively denounce. When you come to think that this great Empire has been allowed to exist, and yet broken up, and means nothing, that is rather a great thing to state and certainly a greater thing to expect. Breaking up is one thing; making, another.

What we want to cultivate in the pursuance of our subject, and in order that we may become more and more convinced of the truth of it, is faith in God.

There must be openness of mind. Just say to God, "Here I am. I am willing to receive any impression," and I believe God will make us see the truth. Let us remember that our intelligence is too finite. He knows what should be done, and it is not for us to criticize. Let us go out with determination to follow His lead wherever it may be. Remember that in all difficulties and uncertainties the eternal "God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms."

REV. JOHN COMPLIN:—

My dear Mr. President, my Lord Bishop, Ladies and Gentlemen, after about 23 years' absence from the old land, I am here again and, honestly, I am smiling at so many that I have not met before that I think they must think I am taking liberties. There is such a warmth at the heart after so many years of absence. Though I belong to a wonderful country, Australia, there is no place like the Homeland. First of all I wish to convey to you the greetings and good will of the Sydney Branch. They have kept the flag flying and the prospects are good, and we hope that we shall soon be able to report to our Secretary-General here, whose name is fragrant as far as Australia, some wonderful developments.

I am delighted to be here to have the privilege of celebrating the birthday of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. I regard him, as you all do, as one of the noblest, most zealous and most successful advocates of British solidarity in the world. He came to Australia and brought the fragrance of the Flag and the Throne of this old Motherland and was acclaimed by the people as one of their very own, as he certainly is.

I rejoice particularly in being here this afternoon because I represent to some extent one of the Overseas Dominions which acquitted itself at least in no unimportant way in that time a few years ago when this old Motherland was facing her greatest time of peril I suppose in all her history.

We are a population there of about three-quarters the population of this colossal London of yours, about six millions.

OUT OF THAT SIX MILLIONS, 400,000

of the young manhood, counting the nurses (and they ought to be counted), 400,000 of the young manhood and womanhood of that population responded to the call to die if needs be for this great Flag. I have sometimes thought it seemed as if the old Motherland was a lioness in the forest in peril and raising herself she uttered a roar to the young lions in the forest glade. The call of this old Motherland stirred the hearts of the manhood and womanhood of the Dominions Overseas, and the world witnessed what I think was the most extraordinary phenomenon in the history of nations, the men of the British race foregathering, responding to the call of the old Motherland. They came ready to lay down their lives. Wherever the place of sacrifice was, there they gathered and, oh! how they acquitted themselves!

I was talking to a doctor in Palestine the other day and he was speaking about the Australian morale. He said: "Two signallers were left for signalling purposes while the main force went to engage a Turkish force. They happened, after the main force had gone, to look behind, and there, coming in the distance, was a party of 30 Turks under two German officers.

These two signallers had no weapons at all, and one said to the other: "What shall we do with this lot?" and his fellow said: "Take them prisoners, I suppose." Quicker than I can tell you, these two unarmed men dashed down on the party. The first knocked down one German officer and the other took the weapons from the one not injured. The Turks were sick of fighting Australians by that time. At that moment a doctor came up—I presume it was the doctor to whom I was talking—and they said to him: "Keep your eyes on these Turks. We will watch the two Germans." So the two unarmed men took the whole party prisoners.

One could go on telling story after story of the record that those young Australians attained, gathered from all sorts of secular callings, never taught the art of war, yet how they acquitted themselves! There was the other price paid by Australia. I will not mention more than the debt of over £100,000,000 ; I speak rather of the men—60,000—who went away in the pride of their young manhood and never returned, and the Secretary of the Returned Soldiers' Association said a few weeks ago another 60,000 had died as a consequence of what they suffered in the great ordeal of the War.

One of the last letters I received just before I left Sydney was from a lady who lives in Wellington. She said, " I see by the newspaper you are going to Palestine. I would like you to go and see the grave of my boy. I do not think you remember him, but when you had your mission here a few years ago, Victor took his stand for the Lord Jesus Christ. He never went back. When the War made its appeal, he volunteered. He was killed in action in Palestine. I would like you to go and see his grave." It was my privilege—though I confess my eyes were wet with tears—to go to the war cemetery there where Titus raised his standard in A.D. 70, at the destruction of the city, and amongst the long rows of gravestones erected to the memory of those young men and a few nurses, I read the name : Trooper Victor Turnbull, age 19 ; then the words that his mother had asked them to have cut in the stone, " Called to higher service." His sacrifice is one item of the great price that Australia paid on behalf of the old Motherland.

I am sorry that some good people look askance at me because we can see in this connected family something better and Divine than appears on the surface. Surely intelligent men and women who read their Bibles, and look out from the sacred page on the nations of the earth, can realize there is something different in the English-speaking race. Surely they can see we are not like the other nations, France, Germany, Italy, and so on. When a man is about to build him a residence, he makes a plan and in his plan you will see each room and what its purpose is. Surely the great God, the great and Sovereign Architect of this world and the nations in it, never made the world and its history without a plan. Moses in the Book of Deuteronomy tells us that the Almighty conditioned the other nations of the earth on the number of the Children of Israel, and St. Paul tells us in the Book of the Acts that God ordained not only the place the nations should occupy, but the duration, the period during which they would exist. I believe that there is a great Sovereign Authority behind the nations. I believe, although we have so often failed Him, " There is a Divinity that shapes our ends, rough hew them how we will." God is overruling. What was behind this gathering to the colours ? How can you explain it except from the fact that the great Sovereign God was moving by His Spirit in the hearts of the manhood of the race. Some men of our Australian Force were not saints, but in that 400,000 men were the cream of the Australian Commonwealth. I think of a certain minister. He had four sons, the youngest was at school, too young to respond to the call. The others rallied to the colours and never came back. I spoke with a brother Methodist minister in New South Wales during the War by the name of Murray. He said, " I am going to the Front. I will not go as a chaplain because they say there is a gap between the men and the chaplain, and I want to help the men ; so I am going to enlist as a soldier and go down into the trenches and share with them whatever they suffer." The last heard of that saint and soldier of God is this. He was lying wounded on No Man's Land. They had driven the Germans back. The stretcher-bearers came and were about to take him up, and he pointed to a man a little further on and said, " He's worse than I am. Take him first." So they took him. Before they could take Murray, the Germans were over that spot again and he has never been heard of since. There could only have been such a tremendous response in the world by the Sovereign power of God working through the lives of this British race.

I wrote a poem on one occasion that I would like to recite to you before I conclude. Just imagine yourselves Australians. I call these the watchwords of the British because they are British people in Australia :—

AN APPEAL TO AUSTRALIANS.

WATCHWORDS OF THE BRITISH.

Children from far Western Waters,
Offspring of an Island Home ;
Called to fill these ancient* Southlands
Where the British Flag has come ;
Bred from out a mighty Past—
GRIP YOUR WATCHWORDS, HOLD THEM FAST.

" OPEN BIBLE," " PREACHED GOSPEL," " CONSCIENCE BY NO MAN CONTROLLED,"
" RIGHT OF SPEECH," " FREEDOM OF WORSHIP,"
By God's grace these must we hold.
Motherlands ! Ye gave us these—
We will die ere they shall cease.

By the Martyr-Fires for Conscience,—
By the blood your Fathers shed ;—
By their age-long upward battling Where the Form of Freedom led,— Hold to all the good they won,
Stand for Truth the Champion.

In the Commonwealth of Nations
On the Australasian Lands,
There shall rise a happier People
Through the labour of our hands ;
Reaping from the potent Past
Truths and Triumphs that shall last.

Praise we God, Who gave us being
Where the Flag of Britain flies ;
Praise Him for His Gospel's teaching,
And the heart's true sacrifice ;†
To our watchwords ever true
God we'll praise, His will we'll do.

I like to think of the picture of the old mother lioness surrounded by the young lions of the Dominions, and please God, these united, shall maintain this Flag and this Nation in her predominant place amongst the nations of the world. Thus shall we have peace on earth and good will amongst men.

* Geologists believe Australia to be the oldest land surface of the globe.
† " A broken and a contrite heart, O God, Thou wilt not despise."

I rejoice to be here, dear friends. I beg you to be encouraged. The future is rich with promise. We know the will of God with our nations in all parts of the world. Our security and prosperity lie in a willing response to the Sovereign purpose of God as His witnessing Nation foretold in the pages of that Book, which, partly national and partly individual, is a Lamp for our feet and a Light for our path.

MAJOR KNOWLES :—

You have shown by your applause how much you enjoyed that address. I am glad Mr. Complin is not returning to Australia for some time, and I hope we shall have the pleasure of listening to him again.

I will now call upon Mr. Garrison.

MR. HERBERT GARRISON :—

My dear Mr. President, my Lord Bishop and dear Friends, I have been specially asked to make a statement this afternoon with regard to our recent Press Campaign.

For years past we have had a great desire to get something into the public Press that would arouse the attention of their millions of readers, but how to accomplish the task was the problem, and the way did not seem clear nor the money to be in sight. Now, a very wonderful thing happened on New Year's Eve last. The Rev. Pascoe Goard was with us upstairs, where Mrs. Garrison and I had been looking after him. I had to post some letters for the midnight mail and Mrs. Garrison and Mr. Goard said, " Do be back in time to hear the Westminster chimes ring in the New Year." I went out and posted my letters and cleared the letter-box. (Laughter.) I mean our own letter-box inside our front door. Among the letters there I found one the handwriting on the envelope of which I knew. I brought the letters upstairs and quickly opened that one and, just as I opened it, the Westminster chimes were ringing in the New Year. I was delighted to find that this letter from my good friend—a member of the Federation—was an offer to supply—I must not mention the sum or the gentleman's name—a very large sum of money if Mr. Goard would write an article for the public Press on British-Israel, setting forth our teaching, and his suggestion was that the money should be spent in getting it into a certain paper. We both wrote and thanked him for the offer, and Mr. Goard said he would endeavour to carry out the gentleman's request and write such an article. I must tell you that for a long time Mr. Goard pondered over this matter.

I want you to understand that it is quite a different thing writing articles for THE NATIONAL MESSAGE and writing such a Manifesto for the daily Press. In view of the large sum of money offered, naturally we thought it was due to the donor and to our Cause that it should be a very carefully-drawn statement, thoroughly well thought out. Mr. Goard got no guidance for a time, and weeks went by until one day and began to write. It is a very long story and I cannot fully describe it. He wrote and re-wrote again and again. You may not realize the labour, care and thought put into it. At last came the time when he must start for Canada. The final draft was ready. " I want to take it with me," he said, " and study it on the ship. I may get more thoughts. I will send it back to you from the Gulf of St. Lawrence." He sent it back with certain pencilled alterations, writing me : " Edit it and do with it what your judgment dictates." I had it re-typed, and after that I made more alterations and rearranged headlines. In this I had the help of Mr. Heaver.

Then came the question of starting it on the Press. I called in consultation the donor and told him my ideas and he gave me his ideas.

I said my judgment was that the first paper should be The Times. He said, " I agree, but can you get it in ? " I said, " I may have difficulty, but I will have a shot at it." It went to The Times, was read by the Editorial Department, as well as the Advertising Department, and they rang me up and started to ask questions.

After-events showed my answers were considered satisfactory, though I could not be sure at the time. I confess I had some anxiety and I did not sleep overmuch that night, but when the morning came it was a great relief and joy, and my heart was full of thanksgiving to find our Manifesto in

THE LEADING PAPER OF THE WORLD.

(Applause.)

Metaphorically I sat back and waited (only metaphorically, mind you). The other papers, I felt sure, would now send to me, I should not have to go to them ; and so it proved. I made up my mind it should go in many more. Early that morning the rush began. Pressmen started 'phoning and calling. I have had scores of them here from that day to this ; four and five at a time, some waiting as long as two hours. If we had put it in all the papers we have been asked to put it in, we should have needed an enormous sum of money.

Every man was received cordially and lengthy interviews given. They all considered the Manifesto to be of national importance, and some said : " By far the finest they had ever seen in the Press."

Now, there is another story which I can only tell in code form. There is a certain paper the Manifesto has not yet been in, and you will be astonished if you see it there. They have rung me up several times and then their manager came and said, " We want to publish that Manifesto." I said, " Really ! But I thought so and so." He said,

" NO, NO. WE ARE PATRIOTIC ; WE WANT IT."

" Look," I said, " I have spent all the money, but stay, I will speak to a certain gentleman and we will see what will happen." I have since spoken on the 'phone to that gentleman and he is coming here to-morrow. I predict you will see the Manifesto in that paper within a few days, and it has an immense circulation.

I have a box full of Pressmen's visiting cards. These men have had British-Israel up to the brim. I followed the policy of treating every one with courtesy, making them feel at home for an hour or two while I unfolded the story of British-Israel. They asked questions which I was happy to answer.

They said, " What a wonderful story ! What fine Headquarters ; what a position and what a staff ! We had no idea ! "

THEY HAVE SEEN THINGS IN A NEW LIGHT.

Can you understand the meaning of this Manifesto going into 21 papers and coming under the notice of millions of people? It has meant a vast correspondence. We anticipated that and laid our plans accordingly; all the standard reply letters and all the printed matter, and Special Numbers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, were ready. In most cases the enquiries have been answered the same day, and I have personally signed every letter.

The Bishop says I look younger. Well, it is a joy to work for the Lord in connection with this Movement. Correspondence has come from Europe, Asia, Africa and America. We have had telegrams of congratulations and cablegrams from abroad. Here is one to-day from India :—

"SEND ME 50 DOZEN MANIFESTOS. CONGRATULATIONS. PRAYERS FOR SUCCESS."

Some have been cabling from Africa and America. Presently we shall be hearing from Australia and New Zealand.

We had 10,000 reprints from The Times, but it should have been 20,000. We must order a further supply.

Now, I must tell you that the big sum given by the original donor was added to by another generous supporter—a Life-Member, and further supplemented by others, all of whom wish to remain anonymous.

I want you to realize that this Manifesto has put British-Israel on a higher platform than it ever occupied before. It is being talked of in clubs and trains and business-houses all over the country. I have that from business men. It is going on and on, and we shall never know the full result. I want to suggest to you, Mr. President and dear Friends, that it would be manifestly fitting and, I feel, in accord with your wishes that we should from this meeting send a message to the Rev. Pascoe Goard and thanks for the vital part he has played in this great Manifesto. (Applause.)

MAJOR KNOWLES :—

I am sure we are all in accord with the last suggestion made by Mr. Garrison. There is one thing he forgot to tell you, that is, we are the only religious organization that has ever had the courage to take a whole page of The Times, to say nothing of all the other papers.

REV. ARTHUR PRITCHARD, M.A. :—

I have here a copy from The Times newspaper with our Manifesto. I have read this I do not know how many times. I want to drive home one point this afternoon—the sentence near the end of the Manifesto :—"Men of faith, put your spiritual power and influence into the driving power of this Movement." It seems to me this is the message for us here. This is the message for you, keen, convinced British-Israelites. You are men and women of faith.

"Put your spiritual power," prayer power. I think Mr. Garrison is being held up by prayer. I do my best for him in this way. I should not have been here to-day unless he had sent me a telegram to come.

I do a lot of work for British-Israel quietly, and I am accumulating matter which I hope I shall be able to use when I can devote my whole time to British-Israel.

I want you to pray for Brother Goard every day; I do. I follow him in his travels and work and in his wonderful articles. Pray for THE NATIONAL MESSAGE every day. Pray for the Secretary-General and for all our workers.

Let us make a point, on this anniversary of the opening of this wonderful building, of resolving that we will put our spiritual power in this Movement.

There are five words in the Greek in the last chapter or the General Epistle of James. I won't quote the Greek. "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." We belong to the righteous nation. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man or woman availeth much in its working, so I conclude by quoting this sentence to you and myself again :—

"Men and women of faith, put your spiritual power into the driving power of this Movement."

The meeting concluded with the Benediction, pronounced by the Bishop of the Falkland Isles, and the National Anthem, after which a large company took tea in the Library and enjoyed social converse.

IF LONDON is the heart of the EMPIRE, then ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL is the heart of the CITY of LONDON. Its DOME dominates the CITY and its GILDED CROSS proclaims to the WORLD the faith that has inspired the history of our RACE.

It is not pure coincidence that ISRAEL-BRITAIN'S NATIONAL CATHEDRAL should be named after PAUL, APOSTLE TO THE GENTILES.

That actually he preached on LUDGATE HILL [1] is more than likely. That, of all his contemporaries, he knew more regarding the "mystery"[2] of the "blindness" and temporarily "cast-off" condition of the bulk of the ISRAEL PEOPLE is practically certain. As APOSTLE to the GENTILES, PAUL can hardly have failed to be fully conversant with the significance of ISAIAH'S prophecies regarding the ultimate "gathering" of the "cast-off" ISRAEL PEOPLE into the ISLES of the SEA.

PAUL was a great champion for the so-called "Gentilized" ISRAEL-PEOPLE, as witness his spirited defence in the challenging declaration :—"Hath God cast away His People? God forbid. God hath not cast away His People which He foreknew."[3] He is truly one of us, as witness his declaration of race and nationality :—"For I also am an Israelite, of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin."

Special interest then centres around the occasion of the reopening of ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL on June 25th, when, with stately ceremony and in the SOVEREIGN'S presence, the successful conclusion to seventeen years of labour in renewing the structure and foundations, was commemorated.

And The Times exactly captures the right outlook on the matter when it says :—"Vast labour and expenditure were bestowed not merely to preserve an ancient building, desirable though that was. The restoration of the material fabric implied the inauguration of new spiritual activity. ST. PAUL'S has been restored, not merely as the shrine of departed heroes or as the scene of memorable events, but that its work and witness may serve this and future generations, that it may relate the visible with the invisible, that it may help to keep the capital, the nation, and the Empire in touch with Such seems to be the essential meaning of the ceremony which takes place to-day."

This is a step in the right direction. But what a climax it will be when as a nation we make the great discovery that the visible and the invisible are not only "in touch" one with another, but they are "one." What a day when we nationally awaken to the fact that the NATION and EMPIRE of which we are members and citizens, and the KINGDOM of GOD, are potentially equipollent—one and the same.

"Whatever its failures and difficultics, the CHURCH to-day is very much alive," says The Times. "Men and women everywhere are regaining the conviction that the spiritual element is of supreme importance, and that is the sure foundation of well-being for an individual, a NATION, or an EMPIRE."

How true. But the CHURCH must learn to preach the GOSPEL of the KINGDOM[4] before it can hope to fan this spark of good and intelligent faith into a flame of strong conviction and consuming desire.

* * * *

The pageantry of public ceremony in ENGLAND is uniquely rich in spiritual significance. Not only do we live in days when the hidden meaning of the symbolism is being brought to light. We live in days when the consciousness of our racial mission and destiny is becoming more and more articulate.

As we look on the pageantry and symbolism in connection with this great occasion and compare it with the spirit of the message from the ARCHBISHOP of CANTERBURY, we cannot fail to be impressed at the harmony which exists between the two in their common witness to the dawning vision of the KINGDOM.

On arrival at the CITY BOUNDARY marked by the TEMPLE BAR,[5] their MAJESTIES the KING and QUEEN are met by the LORD MAYOR and the ceremony of the presentation of the CITY SWORD[6] takes place.

The following is the extract from the Order of Ceremonial issued by the CITY REMEMBRANCER:—"On the arrival of their MAJESTIES, the LORD MAYOR and all the members of the Deputations will uncover. The SWORD and MACE will be reversed. The MARSHAL will remain mounted. The LORD MAYOR, having received from the SWORDBEARER, will advance, and, lowering the point of the SWORD, will surrender it to His MAJESTY.

"Upon the SWORD being returned by His MAJESTY, the LORD MAYOR, Aldermen, Sheriffs and Commoners will at once return to their carriages, and precede the Royal carriages to the WEST ENTRANCE of ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL.

"When the procession from TEMPLE BAR arrives at the CATHEDRAL, the Aldermen and Commoners of the Deputations will be conducted by the

and the City Marshal to their seats, the Commoners under the Dome and the Aldermen in the Choir. The Swordbearer, Macebearer and City Marshal will wait for the LORD MAYOR at the foot of the Chancel Steps. The Lord Mayor, bare-headed, carrying the Sword erect, facing the Royal carriage, with the Sheriffs behind him and the Remembrancer behind him, will await their Majesties at the foot of the steps of the Cathedral.

"When their MAJESTIES have alighted, and after their reception by the BISHOP of LONDON and the DEAN and CHAPTER of ST. PAUL'S at the WEST DOOR, a procession will be formed . . . . The LORD MAYOR bearing the PEARL SWORD, their MAJESTIES the KING and QUEEN, supported by the BISHOP of LONDON and the DEAN of ST. PAUL'S, will be conducted to the Royal Seats under the DOME, where the LORD MAYOR will lay the CITY SWORD on the table before the KING.

"The REMEMBRANCER having conducted the Sheriffs to their seats in the Choir, the SWORDBEARER, MACEBEARER and CITY MARSHAL will then conduct the LORD MAYOR to his stall in the Choir."

H.R.H. PRINCE DAVID of WALES together with H.R.H. THE DUKE of YORK accompanied their MAJESTIES the KING and QUEEN to the CATHEDRAL. Thus, with fitting Kingdom-ceremony were the Royal representatives of the DAVIDIC THRONE conducted to the assembly of thanksgiving.

THRONE, KINGDOM and CHURCH are each and all worthily represented in the procession, for no fewer than 160 ARCHBISHOPS and BISHOPS are present and walk from Crypt to Choir during the singing of the processional hymn: "Blessed City, heavenly Salem."

Commencing on this highly spiritual level the service reaches its climax in a call to dedication and service:—"I bid you welcome to our CATHEDRAL CHURCH of ST. PAUL on this day of completed restoration," comes the voice of the Dean echoing through the aisles and arches, "asking you to join with me in earnest thanksgiving to ALMIGHTY GOD, Who has inspired and guided this work through long years, and has brought it to an end.

"Here, in our MOTHER CHURCH OF LONDON, I call upon you to dedicate yourselves afresh to the LORD CHRIST,

HIS KINGDOM AND HIS CAUSE, pledging your whole selves, body, soul and spirit, to the honour of HIS NAME, the

SOVEREIGNTY OF HIS RULE, and the fulfilment of His Will, in loyalty and singleness of heart."

[4] See Matt. xxiv, 14. Ferrar Fenton and Authorized Version.

[5] It is significant that the English Legal Profession—a leading branch of the Levitical secular priesthood—should have chosen as their quarters the deserted groves of the Templars, and as the famous historian Trevelyan puts it, "study in their own Inns of Court, half-way between the commercial capital at London and the political capital at Westminster, a geographical position that helps the English Lawyer to discover his true political function as mediator between Crown and People." It is fitting then that the Temple Bar should be chosen as the particular site where the Pearl Sword of the Kingdom should be ceremoniously surrendered to H.M. the King—as representative of the throne of David—by the citizens of London, on each occasion that the King visits the City.

[8] The Mace is our modern equivalent of the Cross-sceptre or staff traditionally carried by John the Baptist and is symbolical of Divine universal victory. See Waddell's "Phœnician Origin of Britons and Scots."

Surely here we have signs that the CHURCH of CHRIST is beginning to awaken to the fact and significance of the reality of existence of the KINGDOM OF CHRIST. The CHURCH at last is beginning to sound the Kingdom-call in no uncertain voice but with full insistence and authority. May the impetus in this direction be accelerated. Multitudes are waiting for the signal and only need strong leadership, when we shall find them rushing forward to take the KINGDOM of heaven by storm. They believe in the invisible kingdom. They only need to be shown the visible KINGDOM and the triumph of faith will be complete.

In our Lord's day His People were so obsessed with the fact and reality of the visible, material KINGDOM and NATION that they could not "see" the kingdom of heaven. They could not understand that every outward physical manifestation must have an inward spiritual counterpart. The physical kingdom-nation they thought to be the only reality.

To-day, His People are so obsessed with the idea that the kingdom of heaven is within them that they forget that it is also among and around them. They cannot understand that every inward spiritual reality must have an outward material manifestation. They cannot see the earthly kingdom-nation. They think the spiritual kingdom to be the sole reality.

But the two are "one." The kingdom of heaven and the kingdom of God are the inward and outward manifestations respectively of one great supreme reality. And the CHURCH and EMPIRE operate respectively in their several realms of influence. The CHURCH is responsible for keeping pure and inspiring the inner, psychic, spiritual and mental life of the KINGDOM. The EMPIRE is responsible for building up the visible, material framework of the KINGDOM in conformity to the ideal design.

Just as the boundaries of the KINGDOM OF GOD on earth are ever being extended to embrace all mankind, so the influence of the CHURCH is ever being advanced to encompass the boundaries of the KINGDOM.

Both CHURCH and EMPIRE are vital organizations, devoted to the same ultimate object, the restoration and perpetuation of the full DIVINE SOVEREIGNTY in the WORLD.

The Lord's Prayer, with its crowning affirmation: "Your Kingdom must be being restored" (Ferrar Fenton Version), clearly indicates the gradual nature of this process of development. The climax will see the boundaries of Church and State become conterminous.

As the ARCHBISHOP of CANTERBURY eloquently puts it in his recent message :—"The CHURCH and have grown together, and the ways of their growth have a most striking similarity. Beginning with a few trading settlements or military stations, planted it would seem almost by accident in widely scattered parts of the world, the BRITISH EMPIRE is emerging on the stage of history as of Free and Self-Governing Nations. There is no fixed Imperial Constitution. The bond is one of spirit, of common memories and traditions, of common allegiance to the CROWN.

"So the old CHURCH of ENGLAND has within a century spread swiftly and steadily across the seas. Where once there were only a few isolated and scattered missionary dioceses, there is now a community of free and self-governing Churches in all parts of the WORLD. Within this as within the BRITISH COMMONWEALTH of NATIONS, the bond is spiritual—a common Faith and Order, common memories and traditions, a common reverence for the MOTHER CHURCH of ENGLAND and the ancient SEE of CANTERBURY. But no uniform ecclesiastical rule is imposed. The unity is spiritual and free."

Referring to the great company[12] of BISHOPS (300 in all) who are coming over for the forthcoming Lambeth Conference, the ARCHBISHOP says :—"I ask all Christian people who may read these words to pray that GOD may guide these men, coming from all parts of the earth and charged with responsibilities so grave, in their deliberations, so that the CHURCHES which they represent may set forward the

throughout the WORLD."

Just as the BRITISH KINGDOM by virtue of its miracle constitution represents a political nucleus which every nation under heaven can freely join, so to-day, the CHURCH of ENGLAND represents an ecclesiastical nucleus which every Christian organization on earth can freely join.

Nations do not surrender anything of their freedom or character by association with the KINGDOM. They bring their own peculiar glory into it.

So with the outside churches joining the parent ISRAEL CHURCH of BRITAIN. For the universal CHURCH of CHRIST is wider than the nucleus around which it radiates. And the coming recognition of the visible centre and nucleus will give spiritual unity the tangibility necessary for purposes of true reunion. Moreover, it will give living witness to the fact that all who are in CHRIST—no matter what nationality they may be—become by adoption, Abraham's seed, and heirs, with the racial seed of ABRAHAM, of the promises.[13]

As for the racial seed, it is not sufficient for them to say "We have Abraham to our father."[14] GOD can raise up seed of Abraham from the very stones and dust of the earth. We too must be born again[15] and become a spiritual seed.

Thus we catch a glimpse of the radiant vision. For with CHURCH and KINGDOM working together in unity the day must shortly dawn when the kingdoms of the WORLD will, one and all, become the KINGDOM of our LORD and of His CHRIST.

[9] The significance of the word "Realm" was revealed during a debate in the House of Commons (15.3.27) when Sir A. Hopkinson brought forward the information that according to a dictionary the word "realm" means "a kingdom." "It goes on to say 'the Kingdom of Heaven,'" claimed the honourable member, concluding his remarks with the testimony, "I do not know whether that is applicable but the British Empire is the nearest we can get." This is a splendid commentary on Dan. ii, 44.

[10] What a commentary of Gen. xxxv, 11.

[11] The Bishop of London in his address quoted words from the last sermon of a great scholar and historian forecasting the great destiny of the English Church: "Under the Church which has the historic Orders in one hand and the Open Bible in the other, Christendom will one day be reunited." "In every part of the world," commented the Bishop, "this is coming true."

[12] Including Bishops from the Churches in the United States of America described by the Archbishop of Canterbury as sharing "the same tradition, the same spirit."

DOES THE BIBLE STAND OR FALL WHEN TESTED BY SCIENCE, HISTORY AND PHILOSOPHY?—X.

By PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc.

THE CALL OF ABRAHAM.

"I have called thee from Ur of the Chaldees to give thee this land."

A great statement! The Lord called Abram to become the father of a great nation, hence the necessity for a national habitat. And lo! here in the land of Canaan is God's choice of all the earth. It is His gift to Abram and his seed for a home in which a strong and populous group of nations could be developed for a great world work.

The position is this: A called man! A promised nation! A given national home! And, later on, we read that the Lord gave this land to Abram's seed "for an everlasting possession."

Therefore these coming people, the seed of Abram, were provided with all they needed for great national life and power.

LOT AND ABRAM.

Abram and his nephew Lot had their separate herds, herdsmen and business enterprises. Their servants quarrelled, and then Abram and Lot decided to fully separate so as to hold their own pasture lands.

Lot was given his choice, and, as a selfish young man, he selected what he deemed the best of the land.

He, the younger, should have said to his uncle, "You are my senior, and so I wish you to make choice."

He settled in the lower plains of the river Jordan and Abram took the hill country.

Lot did not care about the Lord's promise of that very land to Abram and his seed for ever. He determined to have it, and so took it when Abram magnanimously gave him his choice.

LOT—SODOM—MOAB—AMMON.

In due time the cities of the plain were so rotten with sin of the foulest sort that they were doomed to destruction by fire, not by water. Lot and his family had to get out, and out they went. When the destruction was complete, Lot and his daughters had to leave the Promised Land, cross the Jordan eastward and settle in another land.

Thus, then, the land was left to Abram, and selfish Lot departed. His sons Moab and Ammon knew the history, knew that Lot had claimed that lower Jordan Valley, had lived in it, and through fire was forced to flee away from it eastward. Knowing thus, in later ages they determined to conquer and own that very land.

But all in vain! The Lord had given it to Abram and his seed for ever, and therefore Moab and Ammon had to get out and stay out. This is clear, final and very simple. It puts the Sodom-Gomorrah story in a new and wonderfully clear outline. This an indication of how God stands by, and assures the fulfilment of His given Word.

THE ENLARGED GIFT TO ABRAM.

Genesis xv: "In the same day the Lord made a covenant with Abram, saying: Unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates."

This was indeed a large land grant running into millions of square miles of rich territory. It was given to Abram's seed, not would be given, but "I have given." In the mind of the Lord it was a finished act, though the actual occupational possession did not take place fully before the Great War of 1914-1918, when all that land passed by Mandate to Britain and to no other nation.

Here, then, is a promise hung up in the air for about 3,800 years before it was fulfilled. A long time to wait, but the waiting was not in vain.

In Great Britain this promise was made good, and the gift to Abram's seed is effective while I am writing these pages. And we, now living, have seen the process of fulfilment.

ABRAHAM—SARAH—ISHMAEL.

God had promised to Abram unlimited blessings, especially to his descendants. And lo, Abram has no child. In desperation, he takes a second wife and Ishmael his first son arrives. Later comes Isaac by his first and real wife Sarah. To Ishmael is given Arabia and important promises of blessings, but the chief blessings are reserved for Isaac. Of Ishmael it was said, He shall dwell in the presence of his brethren, and so Ishmael never became a migrant from the Promised Land. This in itself is a marvel.

MONUMENTS: OLD AND NEW.—II.

By GEORGE BEALBY.

MEANWHILE Jerusalem remained comparatively undisturbed; for Sargon, having accomplished his purpose in the destruction of Samaria, did not proceed further southwards, but returned in triumph to Assyria. King Hezekiah of Jerusalem did not come into collision with the armies of Assyria until the invasion of Sennacherib, eight years after the fall of Samaria (2 Kings xviii, 12). The city of Jerusalem survived even this devastating onslaught, and the Jews escaped the debacle that had overtaken the Northern Kingdom for some hundred and thirty years, until Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon, took the city and drove the Jews into captivity, 586 B.C.

This calamity overtook Jerusalem twenty years after the glory of Assyria had been extinguished, and great Nineveh lay humbled in the dust. "And it shall come to pass that all they who look upon thee shall flee from thee, and say Nineveh is laid waste; who will bemoan her? Whence shall I seek comforters for thee? Draw thee waters for the siege, fortify thy strong holds: O, King of Assyria, thy nobles shall dwell in the dust: thy people is scattered upon the mountains, and no man gathereth them." (Nahum iii, 7, 14, 18.)

The combined Median and Babylonian forces brought all this to pass in 606 B.C., when the Assyrian Empire came to an end, and the grandeur of Nineveh was for ever blotted out.

The foregoing history is so familiar to readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE that it may seem superfluous to call attention to it here, and yet we may profitably pause a moment to consider the significance of some of these developments a little more closely. It is said that history repeats itself; possibly there is more in this remark than is generally supposed, for written history is the sure word of prophecy fulfilled. When Shelley said: "The past now stands before thee like an incarnation of the to-come . . . . . Look, lo! The coming age is shadowed on the past as on a glass," the poet was only re-shaping the words in Ecclesiastes: "The thing that hath been is that which shall be: that which hath been is now, and that which is to be hath already been; and God requireth that which is past." The exact details of future events are mercifully hidden from us, but we are told enough for our general guidance, and certainly sufficient to make us watchful as the prophetic Word is gradually unfolded before our imperfect vision.

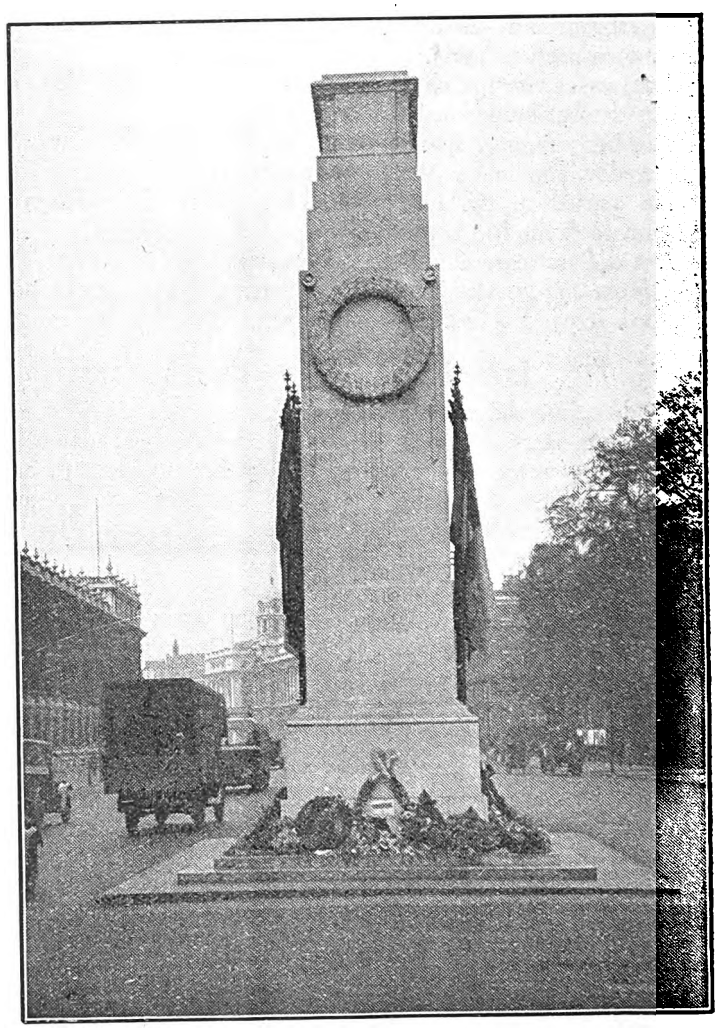
To-day we are privileged to see what Daniel meant by the blessings attending the one thousand, three hundred and thirty-fifth day, but until Palestine was delivered from the grip of the Turk in the year 1335 of the Mohammedan Kalendar on December 9th, 1917, this passage had for ages remained obscure and difficult to understand. Dr. Grattan Guinness has pointed out that the beginning of this period of years dates from the Hegira in A.D. 622, but that Jerusalem was not captured by the Saracens until seventeen years later, so that we might look for a further confirmation of the prophecy in the year 1934; possibly it may be so, we do not know. We do know, however, that after the expiration of the great "seven times," or 2,520 years, from the time of the captivity in 721 B.C., the expansion and full development of the Israel Kingdom began to be manifest throughout the world. We have seen that in 606 B.C. Israel threw off the shackles of captivity, remaining no longer under the heel of Assyria, and moved northwards, a free and warlike people, among the countries of south-eastern Europe. (2 Esdras xiii, 39-47.)

The "seven times" reckoned from the date 606 B.C. brings us to the year A.D. 1914. The late William Reeve of Toronto (whose name is familiar to students of the Great Pyramid) says: "The writer identifies Germany with Assyria." That Assyria and other nations of the past are to have their counterpart in the latter days seems apparent from such passages as Isaiah xi, 11 and Zechariah x, 11. If this be so, we have the picture of Israel fighting to throw off the fetters of Assyria in 1914, as she first successfully did in 606 B.C. Furthermore, we have the endless repetition of Peace Pacts, Conferences and Treaties from day to day, all of which Isaiah says "shall come to nought" (viii, 10). The franchise has been so indiscriminately enlarged that men, women and children are all bent on having a hand in governing something or other, while amid the resulting chaos that prevails, we look in vain for someone to exercise the necessary leadership and authority required to meet the situation.



"As for my people, children are their oppressors, and women rule over them. O my people, they which lead thee cause thee to err, and destroy the way of thy paths." (Isaiah iii, 12.)

The general feeling in Palestine at the present time cannot be said to be one of brotherly contentment, for the people of Judah seem to regard the entire country as exclusively belonging to them, raising the same cry they made over two thousand years ago: "Get you far from the Lord; unto us is this land given in possession" (Ezekiel xi, 15); but where they find any passage in the Scriptures to support such an assertion is very difficult to say.

Again, it is worth noticing that the capture of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar occurred twenty years after 606 B.C., and if we add this number of years to 1914, we come to the same date, although derived from entirely different data, as the one pointed out by Dr. Grattan Guinness.

What this particular year may have in store for the future of Palestine we shall know before very long, but "no prophecy of the Scripture is of any private interpretation" (2 Peter i, 20); hence we must be content to watch the inspired Word slowly unfolding itself, as in due time it most assuredly will.

If we look upon the ancient obelisk of Shalmaneser III as a symbol of the approaching darkness about to envelop Israel in her captivity, may we not regard the other monument, erected in Whitehall "To the Glorious Dead," as the herald of her apotheosis and entry into the sunshine of a new Day, when the King of Israel shall take over the throne of David, with the government upon His shoulder, to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever?

"For I am Father to Israel and Ephraim is my first born; hear the word of the Lord all ye nations, and declare it in the Isles afar off, and say, he that scattered Israel will gather him, and keep him, as a shepherd doth his flock .... No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn ..... Since thou wast precious in my sight, thou hast been honourable and I have loved thee: THEREFORE WILL I GIVE MEN FOR THEE, AND PEOPLE FOR THY LIFE."

MR. HARRISON HILL'S NOTE ON MR. BEALBY'S ARTICLE ON "MONUMENTS: OLD AND NEW."

THE CENOTAPH: ITS SYMBOLIC MEANING.

"As of a lioness bereft of her young."

"Κενῆς σκύμνον λέαινης" (Soph. "Ajax," 986).

The origin and symbolism of the word Cenotaph will be interesting, perhaps, to readers of Mr Bealby's article. Kenos empty, and taphos a tomb (Greek). But kenos means not only empty, but bereft, and Liddell and Scott's Greek Lexicon adds this startling comment that the absolute meaning is "as of a lioness bereft of her young," and in support of this explanation gives a reference to the "Ajax" of Sophocles, line 986.

> Teukros.—"Then bring him hither with all speed, lest some foeman snatch him up, as a whelp from a lioness forlorn."

This translation appears in Professor R. C. Jebb's edition of the play as represented at Cambridge in 1882.

It is interesting to note that A. C. Benson (King's College) was one of the Chorus of Salaminian sailors, and Teukros was played by H. J. C. Cust of Trinity.

In looking this matter up, I have carefully compared four editions of Liddell and Scott, viz., the First, Fourth, Fifth and Eighth, and the Cambridge Book of the Play.

The definition of Cenotaph in the New English Dictionary, Murray, Oxford, is:—

Cenotaph (Sénŏtaf) L. Cenotaphium or its original Gr. Κενοταφιον, from kenos empty + Ταφος tomb. An empty tomb; a sepulchral monument erected in honour of a deceased person whose body is elsewhere.

Examples of the use of the word follow.

It is not for me to criticize the accepted standard Dictionary of the English language, but one wonders why our over-worked letter C should be given the additional duty of K in words derived from Greek words beginning with K! And, moreover, why such words should be pronounced as though beginning with S! Especially when in the same Dictionary the theological word Kenosis, an emptying, from Gr. κενοειν, is put in its proper place under letter K.

As a student of British-Israel Truth, I have often observed how the origin and meaning of words have been obscured under slight but effectual alterations of spelling and pronunciation.

As we salute the Memorial to the Glorious Dead, let us remember the words of the Prophet Ezekiel:

> "Moreover take thou up a lamentation for the princes of Israel, and say, What is thy mother? A lioness; she lay down among lions, she nourished her whelps among young lions." (Ezekiel xix, 1-2.)

REVIEW.

JOEL'S PROPHETIC MESSAGE AND WARNING. Howard B. Rand, LL.B. The Covenant Publishing Company. Price 2s. 6d.

This is a very timely book, and its object is to bring the Nation of Israel to reconsider their ways. The great want of the present day is Prayer and dependence upon God. There is no doubt but what the prophet Joel is concerned to bring Israel back to her God. Though Judah was His sanctuary and the Lord forsook the tabernacle at Shiloh, we imagine He is nevertheless a little sanctuary to Israel His people now. All our misfortune, lack of prosperity, want of employment, etc., etc., can be traced to a departure from our God. The only remedy is our return to the Law of Moses: the same God from the beginning is our Lord Jesus Christ. If we want prosperity, peace and assurance we must repent and be converted as a nation, praying for the Holy Spirit that He may send Jesus which before was preached unto us. Without Him in our midst we cannot rule the nations as God has appointed we shall do. To do this He will be enquired of by the House of Israel. Perhaps in chapter iv there is a misunderstanding; "the Southern Army" here spoken of is in Dan. xi, 40, in reference to the King of the North in the first place, though there is a possibility that some Power in the South may be in league with the Russian Power. The cruel lord of Isaiah xix, to our mind, was first Nebuchadnezzar, then the Persian kings, the turning of the river which weakened the seven streams took place at that time, and the neglect of the rulers of Egypt (Mohammedan Powers) ever since, has been rectified by the saviour, the strong one, sent to deliver Egypt. But Egypt is very proud, stubborn and ungrateful, and will readily break her vow with Britain as soon as she thinks she has a chance to free herself. She will find her mistake, and return again to her saviour sent to her by God; then Egypt with Israel and Assyria shall be a blessing in the midst of the land.

We heartily recommend this book as one deserving of much thought and prayerful study.

A NEW SPECIAL NUMBER of the "NATIONAL MESSAGE"—the fourth—will soon be ready. It is far larger than preceding numbers, nearly 70 pages.

It will be found to be practically a compendium of British-Israel teaching, and invaluable for propaganda purposes. We ask for aid to give it the widest possible circulation.

SUMMER CONFERENCE WILL BE HELD JULY 29 TO AUGUST 2.

These photographs of "The Hayes," Swanwick, give some idea of the scene of our Summer Conference, to be held (D.V.) from the 29th of July to the 2nd of August.

"The Hayes," charmingly situated in the midst of the beautiful scenery of Derbyshire, is an ideal place for a Conference and for a holiday, where our friends who gather there can combine both. For those who wish to visit the beauty spots, arrangements will be made for excursions between the hours of the morning and evening meetings, whereas those who prefer a quiet time can wander through the spacious grounds surrounding the Conference buildings, while the more active will have plenty of scope for their energies in the playing grounds.

Cheap return tickets will be available on the railways, and as there is still time to procure accommodation we would urge those of our friends who are thinking of joining us to communicate without delay with the Secretary-General, 6, Buckingham Gate, London, S.W.1.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

THE enthusiasm in regard to our Manifesto in the Press does not diminish ; on the contrary it increases ; a correspondent writes from Scotland :—

"Please send me 200 copies of The Times reprints to begin with, to be judiciously distributed here in the North, especially among the Clergy. The time is now rapidly ripening for launching out into the deep. Greater opposition to the Kingdom Truth may be expected; but this should not discourage, but rather encourage us, as power always moves through resistance until neutralized and overcome."

We had some time ago a cablegram from our Winnipeg Branch asking for 200 reprints ; now comes another message :—"Send 500 more reprints ; everyone here delighted with Manifesto. All who have seen one copy come back and ask for ten more."

A Colonel telegraphed from India :—"Send me fifty dozen Manifestos. Congratulations. Prayers for success."

As we go to press we have a long cablegram from India asking us to publish the Manifesto in three leading Indian papers, offering to contribute towards the cost, saying the Gospel of the Kingdom is urgently required to help India at the present time and urging us to go forward, trusting the Holy Spirit.

D. H. M. writes from Canada :—"Believing as I do that British-Israel teaching is the greatest preparatory Missionary work of to-day, and as the Bible distinctly shows that Christ made the Gospel of the Kingdom the precursor of the Gospel of Salvation, it must still hold good, and is therefore the best possible preparation for all Missionary work, I have decided to devote my Missionary giving largely to the support of British-Israel Truth as the most urgent Cause on earth to day."

A. R. S. writes :—"I am greatly indebted to you for your letter. Especially do I realize your kindness in writing to me in the midst of the very strenuous time you are having, and your exacting activities.

"The Manifesto so prayerfully and carefully prepared cannot but result in a phenomenal catch, for we may be fully persuaded that this is from the Lord and has been done under His inspiration. Allow me to express my best wishes for the continued success of the Movement, and that you may long enjoy health and vigour for the work."

A WORTHING BRITISH-ISRAEL GARDEN MEETING

The Worthing Branch of the British-Israel-World Federation had about 100 visitors at a garden meeting on Wednesday in the pretty grounds of Holy Trinity Vicarage, Worthing, by the kindness of Canon and Mrs. Hollis. The garden was ablaze with colour, and the weather delightful. After tea two addresses were given, the audience being accommodated under the welcome shade of the trees.

The British-Israel-World Federation describes itself as one of the greatest inter-denominational organizations of the day. Its beliefs are that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation ; the inheritors of her charters ; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction ; and, finally, the executors of the Israel nation's commissions (as laid down in the Bible).

Canon C. J. Hollis, M.A. (Vicar of Holy Trinity) presided. He said the Federation's Manifesto, published in the Press, had aroused extraordinary interest in the British-Israel question. Many people with no real knowledge of the Federation's beliefs were bitter opponents.

The Rev. Commander Roberts, R.N., said England's economic position to-day was serious. When they spoke the truth, every man to his neighbour, then the employers and employed would work harmoniously to reconstruct the Kingdom, and we should progress.

Commander Roberts went on to refer to "the secret diplomacy on the part of Rome" and "Sovietism and Communism," both of which were out, he alleged, to destroy Britain.

A TERRIBLE MENACE.

Mr. J. J. Morey, who spoke on "The Present Menace and How to Meet It," said the menace was coming up strong and terrible against the nation and God. It was a threat to the King and to the throne; but not even Russia, said Mr. Morey, could overthrow Britain's throne, because it was to become the throne of God.

The speaker then proceeded to explain the symbolism of the British coinage in support of the Federation's beliefs. Mr. Morey stressed the fact that British-Israelites believed the throne of God to be a literal throne and not merely a spiritual or imaginary one. England, he concluded, had a throne which Communism could never overthrow.

Canon Hollis expressed thanks to the speakers, and said there were a great many people who, after looking into the question, were not prepared to laugh it out of court and treat it with scorn.

Canon and Mrs. Hollis were thanked for allowing the use of their grounds, on the motion of Mrs. de St. Croix (Honorary Secretary).

Tea was served by lady members of the Worthing Branch of the Federation, while members also assisted at the literature stall.—Worthing Herald.

A correspondent in Washington, U.S.A., writes:—"Your journal is the finest publication I know. It answers our great needs spiritually, and along the lines of profound scholarship it is satisfying: A luminous star in these chaotic days."

J. R. S. writes from Canada:—"Let me congratulate the Federation on the way its great message is spreading and gripping the people."

E. C. B. writes:—"I wish to add my testimony to blessings spiritually and physically received through keeping God's law in regard to what He has given us for food. It is 35 years since I have eaten any of the forbidden things, and though working harder and longer hours than ever, I am proving daily, 'As thy day so shall thy strength be.'"

Yet another writes:—"I take this opportunity of expressing my appreciation of the value of the articles in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE. I know of no other magazine in which the standard is kept so high. One can read from cover to cover and find no padding."

Now, I have something very terrible which I feel it a duty to tell:—A woman who says she read our Manifesto on the front page of the Daily News writes me a letter of eleven quarto pages, and after reading it I felt as though I had been wallowing in a pit of filthy slime. The writer would appear to be demon-possessed. I never before read such appalling blasphemy in all my life. It is not so much an attack on British-Israel as against all religion, denying and contemptuously ridiculing the existence of God, and speaking of Christ, the patriarchs, prophets, apostles and modern ecclesiastics in the most awful and filthy language, and virulently attacking all who believe in the Bible. It might have been written by the most violent anti-God campaigner of the Russian Soviet; yet the author is apparently an Englishwoman and living in London. It is awful to think that she voices the sentiments of thousands in our God-favoured land. I ask those who try to minimize the Communist menace to pause and think, and then wake up to facts and stern realities; nay, I warn them, THE MENACE IS UPON US. Apathy is positively dangerous.

For some reasons I wish all clergymen and ministers could see this letter. If it were read out to a great audience of Christian people such as the one to be expected at the Royal Albert Hall on July 14th next it would cause a shudder of horror, and women would rush shrieking from the building; indeed, no one who attempted to read it would be allowed to get half-way through it.

On the other hand, if it were read to an audience of Communists there would be roars of laughter and frantic applause. Horrible, you say, but can it be true? Indeed it is all too true. I have myself gone amongst such people and tried to reason with them, but you might as well attempt to reason with a tiger.

Small wonder that right-thinking people all over the country have welcomed our Manifesto. Would that clergy and ministers who attack British-Israel could be induced instead to face up to the real menace and try to deal with it. To attack a great body of earnest Christian men and women is a colossal blunder: to neglect to handle what would destroy Throne, Church and State, law and order and all religion is a crime.

Let all men and women of good-will who believe in the Bible and the God of the Bible get together, drop petty squabbling and theological hair-splitting, and stand in solid phalanx against the common foe. Oh for a leader to give the trumpet-call in clarion tones all along the battle line.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

FROM BABYLONIA TO THE ISLES, OR THE MARCHING ORDERS TO ISRAEL—II.

BY THE REV. DR. W. PASCOE GOARD.

THE ISLES.

THE great statement now proceeds from the route to the place reached by these "people from far."

"LISTEN, O isles unto me"—the place, "and hearken ye people from far"—the people.

What "Isles" are these referred to by the voice of the LORD?

WHO are the people referred to as having come from far?

It is manifest to every intelligent reader that the great theme of the prophecy has not been changed although the scene has changed from Babylon to the Isles.

The change of geographical position is made absolutely necessary from the fact that Israel went forth from Babylon in obedience to the marching orders given, and from the further fact of the indicated long and continuous travel under Divine guidance and protection.

From Babylon to the Isles is an indicated progress which cannot be overlooked. But where are the Isles?

The Isles are introduced to us in the great epic of the prophecies of Isaiah in chapter xxiv, 13-16:—

> "When thus it shall be in the midst of the land among the people, there shall be as the shaking of an olive tree, and as the gleaning grapes when the vintage is done.
> They shall lift up their voice, they shall sing for the majesty of the LORD, they shall cry aloud from the sea.
> Wherefore glorify ye the LORD in the fires, even the name of the LORD God of Israel in the isles of the sea.
> From the uttermost part of the earth have we heard songs, even glory to the righteous. But I said, My leanness, my leanness, woe unto me! the treacherous dealers have dealt treacherously; yea, the treacherous dealers have dealt very treacherously."

Let us look at the geographical indications here.

1. "They shall cry aloud from the sea."

But this might be the Mediterranean Sea, just off the coast of Palestine. Ships of the Israel people would be full of refugees from the advance of the invading armies of Assyria. For this at the moment is the theme of the prophet in chapter xxiv.

But the second geographical indication points to people who had reached the isles. Thus we read:—

2. "Wherefore glorify ye the LORD in the fires, even the name of the LORD God of Israel in the isles of the sea."

But these isles might be the isles of the Mediterranean Sea. Two indications will guard against this. First, it must be isles wherein Israel people are praising the Name of Jehovah, the God of Israel; and, secondly, the isles are situate at the uttermost part of the earth, thus:—

3. "From the uttermost part of the earth have we heard songs, even glory to the righteous."

So then the isles of the sea are not in the Mediterranean, but are out beyond the "Pillars of Hercules," or the Straits of Gibraltar, in the western ocean. We have another geographical indication in chapter xlix, 12.

The prophecy is uttered from Jerusalem. The compass readings are to be taken from that standpoint.

There seems to be no exact equivalent in Hebrew for our term "North-west," therefore the cardinal points of the compass must be used.

Digitized by Google

"From the north and from the west" gives us two such cardinal points.

Asking a well-known Professor of theology, an Hebraist of high standing, to translate that passage out of the Hebrew, he read and translated, "From the north and from the west."

Asking further the questions: "Standing at Jerusalem, and extending a line to the north from thence, where will such line reach?" He replied: "The Crimea." Again: "Standing at Jerusalem, and extending a line to the west, where will it lead?" Again he replied: "To Gibraltar."

My reply was: "Here, then, we have the quadrant of a circle, embracing Central and Western Europe. Filling out the circumference of the quadrant, you have the British Isles in the centre of that circumference."

So we have "1, The sea; 2, The isles of the sea; 3, The isles situate at the three uttermost parts of the earth; 4, North and west from Jerusalem."

Many other geographical indications point to the same result. Thus in reading Israel's marching orders to go from Babylonia to the Isles we are assured that they were ordered to journey from Babylonia to Britain, and that they actually arrived there.

With this geographical key in hand, how brilliantly luminous the prophecies of Isaiah to Israel in the Isles become.

THE PEOPLE.

The people involved in the marching orders are indicated in verse 3, chapter xlix, of Isaiah:—

"And said unto me, Thou art my servant, O Israel, in whom I will be glorified."

The people are further indicated in the paragraph contained in verses 13–17:—

"Sing, O heavens; and be joyful, O earth; and break forth into singing, O mountains: for the LORD hath comforted his people, and will have mercy upon his afflicted.

But Zion said, The LORD hath forsaken me, and my Lord hath forgotten me.

Can a woman forget her sucking child, that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb? yea, they may forget, yet will I not forget thee.

Behold, I have graven thee upon the palms of my hands; thy walls are continually before me.

Thy children shall make haste; thy destroyers and they that made thee waste shall go forth of thee."

It is necessary again and again to call attention to the fact that at the stage with which we are dealing Israel was not one solid entity, but was made up of scattered groups of people. Official Jewry centred at Jerusalem until A.D. 70, and thereafter lost its national organization. The Israel kingdom under the House of David was centred in the British Isles. The people of Dan, the Danois of history, were centred in Greece, and were making their way towards Denmark and Scandinavia. We have seen the people of the captivity of ten-tribed Israel were on their migration from Babylonia to Britain.

From the beginning of chapter xlix the narrative assumes the junction of the original British Colony and the arriving migrants from the captivity of Babylon. Later the Danes came in, the descendants of the Danois; and last of all the Normans in A.D. 1066. From that time to very modern days there has been no racial influx into Anglo-Saxon lands; migrants from all European countries have been received and made welcome in Overseas Dominions and the United States, but these have largely lived separately, forming European groups within the bodies politic.

There has been, however, a migration in greater numerical force than any preceding one during all British history since the Great War. That is to say, Jews from the East, to be numbered by millions, have migrated into the Empire and the United States. The world is amusing itself, and being amused, by the Zionist plan of making Palestine a national home for the Jews.

If the Zionist Movement is altogether bona-fide, then it is not achieving a present success, for the people are marching westward to Britain and America.

If the Zionist Movement is designed to distract attention to the invasion of Anglo-Saxondom by Jewry, then indeed it is succeeding amazingly.

As other Movements have been Divinely directed it is probable this modern Movement is also. One will watch with interest the development of the readjustment made necessary by this invasion.

It is well that our people should be warned that this is not an invasion by Israel, God's chosen people, for according to New Testament teaching none have the right to use the Israel name in the realm of faith but those who accept Jesus Christ, "the seed" of Abraham; and in the national realm Israel is yet of the ten tribes.

It is interesting to note that when any Jew publicly confesses Christ, he is read out of the synagogue, and ceases to be officially recognized as a Jew.

It is interesting further to note that such an one, having accepted Christ, and having been naturalized in Britain, becomes automatically both as to citizenship and faith an Israelite. Thus, and only thus, can Jewry be reckoned as a part of Israel either by descent or by faith.

Perhaps now we have before our minds a fairly good view of the personnel of the people addressed as Israel in the Scriptures before us.

THE TASK.

1. "It is a light thing that thou shouldest be my servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and to restore the preserved of Israel." As matter of fact as were the marching orders to Israel so is the indication of the task; and as the marching orders were literally fulfilled, so must the task be. Let our brethren of the clergy and ministry especially give heed to the indication before us. The primary duty of Israel, whether it be of genealogical descent or of the doctrine through faith, is to "raise up the tribes of Jacob and to restore the preserved of Israel." Manifestly, this is a double task. Jacob stands for the natural man; Israel stands for the same natural man regenerated by the Spirit. The symbolic terms come from the names of Jacob our forefather who, before the night spent in wrestling with the angel at the brook Jabbok, was Jacob the supplanter—the natural man ; but after the experience of that night, and the blessing which it brought, was the same Jacob promoted to be Israel, or Prince with God.

Let us face the national side first, " to raise up the tribes of Jacob." How many Biblical leaders and teachers have thus visualized the appointed task of the Church and Nation ? How shall we set about again " to raise up the tribes of Jacob "—the natural descent of the natural man ? Will anyone be unwise enough to say that people of all races, each section having its own peculiar background of history, can be translated into the physical descent of Jacob ? True, the children of faith are the seed of faithful Abraham in the realm of faith ; in that we are all agreed with the Apostle Paul. But it will take some strange course of reasoning to transform the heterogeneous seed of Abraham in the realm of faith into the natural descendants of Jacob. Let it be noted that there is no such suggestion or indication in the Scriptures. Here then is a material task for the " raising up of the tribes of Jacob," the natural descent of the natural man. " It is a light thing " if the tribes of Jacob be found in the Celto-Saxon race ; otherwise the Lord has set as a primary task an impossible thing for His Church and Nation Israel to perform.

Further : " To restore the preserved of Israel." Now Israel is based upon the natural descent spiritualized by regeneration. In this regard Israel fell very low, wandering into idolatry and uncleanness of every kind. Out of the slough, by fluctuating stages, Israel has been struggling ; sometimes a wave of revival has swept the people forward ; sometimes a wave of negation, such as the present Modernist and Anglo-Catholic Movements, have swept them back again until they have lost almost all the ground gained in the preceding revival. But perhaps the relapse is never suffered to lose all the ground previously gained.

At present we trust the tide is at its lowest ebb, and that soon the flood of revival will sweep the people forward once again. If it does, let it be clearly understood the Scripture before us indicates the revival must be of a twofold character : " First, that which is natural, afterward that which is spiritual " ; or, as the passage we are considering has it, " to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and to restore the preserved of Israel."

To the double service the efforts of our organization are directed, and marked revival influences are attending the efforts thus put forth.

The foregoing is touched upon as " a light thing " which is so obvious as to scarcely require mention. It is the Home Mission of the Church and State.

" I will also give thee for a light to the Gentiles, that thou mayest be my salvation unto the end of the earth."

This latter clause is not among the LIGHT THINGS. It is the Foreign Mission of the Nation Israel Church and State.

Again, IT MUST be remembered that the Prophet is talking primarily of natural things. Of nation impinging upon nation ; and of administrative authority accomplishing physical and political tasks. The whole of the Bible makes clear that the LORD God of Israel has never cut Himself adrift from His purpose to GOVERN. He has prepared His throne in the heavens and His Kingdom ruleth over all. (Psalm ciii.)

While failing to see that this is part of the set task for Israel-Britain, it is a matter of constant expression of surprise that Britain should be so manifestly doing God's Will in this regard. It is dimly in the minds of many leaders that there is a commission granted to Britain to do these things. But it is some way supposed that this task has come to Britain as an afterthought, because of Israel's failure to do the work. That Britain and America constitute official Israel, and that they are doing Israel's task in the world, seems to be too simple a fact and too good a doctrine to be true. And yet such is the task. Britain's actions are going farther along the way of obedience than her doctrines go in the way of understanding.

Nationally and spiritually Britain is being the agent of God's salvation to the end of the earth.

What the spiritual task of Israel-Britain has been to the end of the earth is better known. The activities of the great Missionary Societies and of the British and Foreign Bible Societies are practical demonstrations of this realization. But, again, it is with eyes that are unseeing that Britain is carrying on her great spiritual activities in spreading the Gospel in the written Word and in preaching it to every nation.

Britain has translated the sacred Scriptures into hundreds of languages and scatters them in countless millions to the end of the earth geographically, and will probably continue to do so to the end of the earth chronologically, understanding the word in the light of the dispensation to which the Bible applies. BUT WHY she is doing all this among the nations and doing it alone she does not stop to ask. Enough that for some reason or another it is her task appointed to her of God.

So the missionary armies of Anglo-Saxondom are sent forth. The treasures of Anglo-Saxondom are poured out for the purpose. The Prayers of the Church in Anglo-Saxondom are ceaseless along these lines. Why ? is a question she does not stop to ask.

But is not the ceaseless activity in these lines an indication that Anglo-Saxondom is the people, the one people among the nations to whom this task is given and this privilege assigned that Anglo-Saxondom should be " my salvation unto the end of the earth " ? Such is the inevitable conclusion. For His Own purposes God has assigned the double task to Israel alone among the nations. But Anglo-Saxondom is doing the task, therefore Anglo-Saxondom so fulfilling the task is Israel.

It must be remembered, and we repeat it again and again, that the nations of Israel blood or, in other words, the nations composed of the same racial stock as ourselves upon the Continent partake in all these privileges and duties. So we invite Scandinavia, Denmark, Holland, the Belgii, Normandy, Celtic Brittany, and so on, to share in the glory of the task, and in the blessings attendant thereon.

AN EXAMINATION OF MR. AVARY H. FORBES' " STONE WALL."

(Letter No. 1.)

BY PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc.

I HAVE before me a small pamphlet of 19 pages by the above author, and am so interested in its contents as to venture some running comments on a few of the statements therein.

Mr. Forbes, in his 1929 preface, says : " My Stone Wall is this. The British Isles were peopled by the Scandinavians and northern Germans, i.e., from Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Schleswig and Saxony; and the modern inhabitants of those countries, therefore, are descended from the same ancestors as ourselves. . . . They, therefore, are as much 'Israelites' as we are."

Digitized by Google

A FEW COMMENTS HERE.

First.—Let us grant for a moment the main statement as to the people of the British Isles coming from Scandinavia, etc. So far Mr. Forbes is partly right. These north Europeans who came, with the British Islanders, from a common ancestry, must be Israelites if we are of Israel stock. No room for, or need of, argument here.

Second.—Let us deal with the term "British" as I, in common with many others, use it and have so done for years, as many thousands can testify.

To my mind, and to the mind of a vast number of leading British-Israel teachers, the word "British" is from the two Hebrew words Brith and Ish, "Covenant Man." Then, if this be true, it follows that all who have come down the line of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and his twelve sons are under covenant, are the covenant seed, and are therefore British.

It follows, therefore, that if the Norse and other Scands are of the same race in general as the British of the Isles, these Scands are truly "British," being men of the covenant.

If we and they be brothers, and if we be British, then they are British.

There is no trouble in agreeing with Mr. Forbes thus far on the above hypothesis.

Third.—If it be true, and history says it is, that a large influx of Mongolians settled in Sweden a long time ago, then we are inclined to modify the above statement just that far. However, we need not worry over this element, as we know that in Bible times ample room was provided for the entrance into Israel of strangers of other races and peoples.

Fourth.—A word on the above statement from another viewpoint. Let us quote again: "The British Isles were peopled by the Scandinavians and north Germans."

Yes, and no! There is much good history to show that a large portion of the early population of Britain went there by way of Spain and the Mediterranean-Atlantic water route, as well as from Gaul across the English Channel direct.

A large population was in these North Atlantic Isles before the historic times of the Saxons, Jutes, Danes, Angles and Norsemen.

These early peoples in general terms were known as Britons; and many of our British-Israel writers, including myself, consider, from historic sources, that they, like our north Europe ancestors, were of Israel stock.

Suppose they are right in this matter, then their ancestors in Spain and elsewhere were and are of Israel origin. What then does this mean? Why, exactly what the first proposition means. Just as our ancestors of north Europe were and are Israelites, so our south-west European ancestors were and are Israelite in origin.

All this is given and accepted on the ground that if we of the British Isles are in the main of Israel origin, so are the other descendants of our ancestors. Thus we find Mr. Forbes and ourselves on and at the same "Stone Wall"—a dissolved and vanished wall.

Fifth.—Where does this lead us? Very simple! In a few words, it means that if we of the British Isles are Israel in ancestry, it follows that all descended from our ancestors, wherever they may be, are Israel, and, being under covenant, they are "British."

Thus the Danes, Norse, the majority of the Swedes, and many others in Europe and elsewhere, are "British."

In like manner, if the ruling Japanese and the Afghans came from Israel ancestors, they also are under the Abrahamic covenants and are truly "British."

So far Mr. Forbes and I are on common ground. We shall now proceed to another phase of this matter as set forth in his pamphlet.

Sixth.—Amos ix, 9: "I will sift the house of Israel among all nations. . . ."

If Amos told the truth, then Israel, in part, must be in the British Isles, or "all" does not mean all.

I believe Amos, and therefore believe that the Lord sent a part of Israel to the island homeland of a goodly portion of our race.

Seventh.—"Different interpretations of Scripture." Some may be foolish enough as to say, "I cannot admit that there are different interpretations," but this is no part of recognized British-Israel teaching.

I do not imagine that Mr. Forbes would affirm that his interpretation of all parts of the Bible is the correct and only wise interpretation. Such a person I have never yet met, and am of the opinion Mr. Forbes knows well that the exponents of British-Israel teaching make no such foolish claim.

Eighth.—Mr. Forbes quotes "Dr. Meyer" as saying: "British-Israel is not capable of argument." A queer statement! Of course "British-Israelism" does not argue, but British-Israel teachers and leaders do argue, and are quite capable of argument. If they are not capable of argument, why does Mr. Forbes spend so much labour and time arguing against them and their works?

Come, friend Forbes, do not let "Dr. Meyer" take you so far afield. It does not sound well, looks bad, and lacks ordinary Christian good nature.

Ninth.—Mr. Forbes says: "Certainly there are many privileges and blessings enjoyed by the Anglo-Saxon race which might suggest fulfilment of prophecies on behalf of Israel."

This is good. "Anglo-Saxon race" is good too. Here we have the careful Mr. Forbes locating the Anglo-Saxon race in the British Isles. Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Schleswig, Friesland and Germany!! What about them? Mr. Forbes seems to have overlooked them in his use of the words "the Anglo-Saxon race" which he applies to Britain. Very good, let them go! We now look at the Britons of the Isles as "the Anglo-Saxons."

He says their privileges and blessings "might suggest." Why "might"? The fact is these privileges and blessings did suggest, and no "might" about it.

Tenth.—We proceed to quote: "Most of the material privileges must be shared with other nations." It is not clear what this has to do with the question in hand. "Material privileges and blessings" are world-common. All nations have lands, hills, valleys, water, atmosphere, climate, etc., etc. Yes, all nations have material privileges and blessings. Mr. Forbes says so, and so say we all, whether we are British-Israelites or other people.

Eleventh.—Again we proceed. ". . . but in spiritual blessings, Britain, to a large extent, stands alone." Good again! Once more Mr. Forbes coolly casts out our Israel brothers of Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Schleswig, etc., etc. These, our poor brethren, are not in the spiritual class. Out they go, bag and baggage.

We would ask our friend Mr. Forbes a simple question which "might suggest" a certain natural and logical answer. It is this. Why, "in spiritual blessings" does Britain "stand alone"? Why? This means that our north European brothers have fallen by the way, or have not been able to keep up to the British Islanders in the spiritual contest. If not, why not? Where is the basic reason? Why should Anglo-Saxon Britain stand alone in national spirituality? Long ago, a very remarkable prophet said Israel would be "alone." Mr. Forbes says Britain "stands alone" in possession of the highest blessing a nation can possess.

Again we agree with our friend Mr. Forbes.

THE FULNESS OF THE GENTILES IN THE BRITISH COMMONWEALTH OF NATIONS.--V.

By Dr. Wadge (Winnipeg).

THE BRITISH EMPIRE AND THE DOMINIONS.

Following the War, an Imperial Conference in 1921 confirmed the higher position in national status which the Dominions had acquired; also it assisted in developing a new policy in reference to the Japanese Alliance which opened the way for the Washington Conference in 1922.

In 1921 Canada, by enactment, defined Canadian nationals, thus taking the first step of any Dominion in definitely settling the question of a Dominion citizenship as a separate identity from British citizenship.

In 1922 Canada and South Africa declined to support the Chanak policy of Lloyd George in his dispute with Turkey; thus showing that the Dominion Governments could not be bound by an action of the Government of the United Kingdom.

Again, in the year 1922, Canada negotiated the Halibut Treaty with the United States. Formerly any political treaty involving any of the Dominions had been signed not only by the representatives of the Dominions but also by a British representative. On this occasion Canada contended that, as the treaty affected Canada only and no other Government in the Empire, Canada only should represent the King in signing this treaty. Finally the contention was accepted. And for the first time in British history, a treaty with a foreign nation was signed on behalf of His Majesty the King by a representative other than one from the United Kingdom when the Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Canada's representative, signed this treaty with the United States. This was also a notable occasion as being the first instance of the official recognition by the United States of this change in the international status of the Dominions.

"The aspect of the British Empire as an informal alliance of autonomous States" was greatly emphasized by the treaty in 1921 between the United Kingdom and the Irish Free State. By this agreement the status of a self-governing Dominion was formally granted to Southern Ireland. "By Article I of its Constitution it is declared to be 'a co-equal member of the Community of Nations forming the British Commonwealth of Nations.'" Two years later, in 1923, Ireland was admitted to the League of Nations. Ireland also immediately exhibited its autonomous condition by the adoption of a distinctive flag for Ireland, and by the enactment of a measure defining a distinctive Irish citizenship, as Canada already had done.

In the Imperial Conference of 1923 the Irish Free State was represented for the first time. In the discussion of inter-Imperial relations in foreign affairs, the Conference formally validated the advances made in the status of the Dominions. The essential portions of their agreement are as follows:—"That treaties should normally be negotiated and signed, under full powers granted by the King, by representatives of the part or parts of the Empire affected, and that in negotiating any treaty it should be the duty of the Government primarily concerned to secure that any other Government which was affected should be invited to take part in the negotiations. Ratification of treaties thus negotiated should be expressed under the same conditions, that is, on the request of the Government or Governments concerned. It was understood that in all such international business Great Britain and the Dominions would have due regard to each other's interests and those of the Empire as a whole." This statement clearly shows that Great Britain and the Great Dominons, by mutual arrangement, agreed, in 1923. to equal status in external relations.

Other matters were also considered at this 1923 Conference, particularly the support of the League of Nations, local defence which each Dominion was to maintain, and the Navy. It was agreed that the Naval forces of the Empire should be equal to those of any other Power. But "the absolute autonomy of the Dominions was stressed, and no pledges of aid in the maintenance of the Navy were offered, the decision resting with the Dominion Parliaments."

Between the Conference of 1923 and the following Conference of 1926, another matter of Imperial relationship was settled by consultation, in which Great Britain acquiesced in the positions taken by the Dominions, particularly by Canada and Ireland. The occasion arose over the consideration of the Treaty of Lausanne of 1924, the London Reparations Conference of 1924, the Geneva Protocol of 1924, and the Treaty of Locarno of 1925. As a result of various consultations over these Conferences and Treaties the doctrine was established "that the Dominions would only accept active obligations when they had taken part in the negotiations and agreed to their results." "It was admitted that the Dominions might be involved in war by British action which they could not as matters stood effectively control, but it was recognized that it remained for each Parliament whether in the event of hostilities it would afford aid to Great Britain." "The Constitutional position was summed up in Article 49 of the Irish Free State Constitution, which provided that, except in the case of invasion, the State could not be actively involved in war save with the assent of its own Parliament, a doctrine which was also definitely approved by Canada and accepted by the other Dominions."

The development of inter-Imperial equality had thus been completed except in a few matters of detail. In foreign affairs as in all else the Dominions were now equal "in status if not in stature" with the older and greater Britain. However, at the Imperial Conference of 1926 a Committee was formed, with Lord Balfour as Chairman, to enunciate and define "the position and mutual relation" of Great Britain and the Dominions. The result of their work was the pronouncement as follows:—"They are autonomous Communities within the British Empire, equal in status, in no way subordinate one to another in any aspect of their domestic or external affairs, though united by a common allegiance to the Crown and freely associated as members of the British Commonwealth of Nations. Every self-governing member of the Empire is now the master of its destiny. In fact, if not always in form, it is subject to no compulsion whatever." This definition was accepted by the Conference; but, what is more to the point, it was accepted by public opinion in all parts of the Empire.

At that Conference certain details of form were also considered. As to the Crown, it was agreed that a new title should be given to the King expressive of the changed relations of these communities. Henceforth he was to be known as "George V, by the Grace of God, of Great Britain, Ireland, and the British Dominions beyond the Seas King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India."

The Conference "declared that the Governor-General of a Dominion occupies the same position in a Dominion as the King in Great Britain, and that he is not the agent or representative of the British Government, and that he should not act as the channel of communications between his Government and the British Government, but that communications should be in future between Government and Government direct."

"It further stated that the old customs of 'disallowance' and 'reservation' of Dominion Legislation by the King on the advice of his British Ministers were no longer constitutional since the King, being advised on Dominion affairs by Dominion Governments, could not properly be advised against these Governments by the British Government."

With reference to certain Imperial Acts of Parliament, it was decided to appoint a Constitutional Committee to meet at a later date to "consider the best means of attaining legislative equality."

On the question of the right of appeal from Dominion Courts to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, it was recommended that the matter be settled in accordance with the wishes of the Dominions after further consultation and discussion.

In "foreign affairs, the Committee confirmed and supplemented in detail the agreement of the Conference of 1923 on treaties, declared that the major share of the responsibility for foreign policy, as for defence, must continue for some time to rest on the British Government, but that no Dominion should be committed to active obligations without its own Government's consent."

Another paragraph of the report states:—"The British Empire is not formed on negations. It depends essentially, if not formally, on positive ideals. Free institutions are its life-blood. Free co-operation is its instrument. Peace, security and progress are among its objects. And though every Dominion is now, and must always remain, the sole judge of the nature and extent of its co-operation, no common cause will, in our opinion, be thereby imperilled."

In the last paragraph of Sec. II the Committee summarized these various details in the statement:—"Equality of status, so far as Britain and the Dominions are concerned, is thus the root principle governing our inter-Imperial relations."

MANY people know the romantic story of STAMFORD RAFFLES and SINGAPORE. How many are equally familiar with the story of JAMES BROOKE in SARAWAK? Both stories are striking examples of ENGLISH genius for the power to rule. And both stories show how ENGLISH power and influence in the world have been built up by individual men in the face of every opposition and discouragement from ENGLAND and the Government. Both stories illustrate the truth of the fact that we are indeed an EMPIRE malgre nous—in spite of ourselves; or more accurately, in spite of our Government's officially appointed national leaders.

John Buchan's comment is interesting here. "We send our younger sons out into the world," he writes, "expressly forbid them to do things, disavow and discourage them, and then profit by their disobedience."

This is just one of the many peculiar traits in the character of the peculiar[1] BRITISH PEOPLE which distinguishes them from other nations. No wonder our behaviour is called quixotic. But without this type of pressure—without the blighting influence of myopic Governments—could the high type of individuality essential for the task of KINGDOM-EMPIRE building have been produced? We doubt it. The characteristic blindness and short-sightedness of officialdom has indirectly played an essential part in the preliminary stage of KINGDOM-EMPIRE development. Pressure from without calls forth response from within. Strong individuality has been born as a result. And the mark of individual British genius has been left in every corner of the earth.

"Could any nation in the world, or parallel that extraordinary and significant little incident that happened a day or two ago," writes Henry S. Doig in the Dispatch (29.6.30), "when the BRITISH GOVERNMENT acknowledged with thanks the gift of £100,000 presented to it by the RAJAH of SARAWAK, HIS HIGHNESS CHARLES VINER BROOKE, in recognition of friendly relations with the MOTHERLAND.

ANY EMPIRE IN HISTORY,

"This splendid gift was a glorious and fascinating gesture. At a time when critics of the EMPIRE were raising their malevolent voices and gloating over prospective mischief the voice of SARAWAK spoke like the clear call of a trumpet. The BRITISH EMPIRE, it said, is all right.

"Behind that gesture is the wonderful story of the white Rajahs of SARAWAK. For the ruler of this great principality, forty thousand square miles in extent, with a population of over a million souls, is a quiet English gentleman whose wife is the daughter of VISCOUNT ESHER.

"SARAWAK is the lotus-land of the EAST, like its neighbour BORNEO. About the size of SCOTLAND and WALES put together, it has its own flag, its own army and navy, and a revenue that grows year by year into ever more impressive figures.

"Once it was full of savages and their favourite pastime was head-hunting.

THE SEA-DYAKS

of BORNEO were the wildest and most brutal race of degenerates in the known world. To-day all that is changed. Life flows easily and gently in SARAWAK.

"The story of the winning of this is the story of an English youth who was born in the opening years of the last century. The son of a Civil Servant in INDIA he was sent to school at NORWICH, where he distinguished himself by two things—not his lessons."

Doig goes on to tell how he saved the life of a fellow-schoolboy who was drowning in the Wensum and ran away to his parents in INDIA. He received a cadetship in a native regiment, saw active service in ASSAM and was invalided home on a pension. He could not rest and bought a brig and sailed it himself to CHINA. There he saw a welter of confusion, internecine brutal wars and piracy and murder on a wholesale scale. He lay on deck in the sunshine and pondered on life and its vicissitudes and its opportunities. He made up his mind what to do.

"When ABRAHAM LINCOLN, as a boy, saw a slave-market he said to his friends: 'If ever I get the chance to hit that thing I'll hit it hard.'" He did. He fought the AMERICAN CIVIL WAR and emancipated the Negro.

"JAMES BROOKE also resolved to make and piracy. He did, and saved a whole race and an entire country from destruction."

JAMES BROOKE'S chance came when his father died and left him a fortune of some thirty thousand pounds.

"He bought a small schooner, a miniature of 142 tons, and set out to conquer his world. He arrived at BORNEO to find that the native territory of SARAWAK was seething in rebellion. The SULTAN of BORNEO and MALAY was a feeble and vacillating creature. He called in his uncle, Muda Hassim, to take over the government and restore order.

"Muda Hassim had little heart for the job. He heard of the young Englishman and sent for him. He was impressed at once by his independent bearing, his skill in horsemanship and his gift of straight shooting. Here, he thought, was the very man he wanted. He would send him against the head-hunters. If he lost, it would be an English head not a Malay's that would pay the savage penalty. If he won, Muda Hassim could take the credit and bask in the favour of his royal master.

"BROOKE took on the job. And very thoroughly he did it. He organized an army, trained and armed it. He cut swathes through the jungle and built roads and bridges. He gave battle and in two years he had the head-hunters on the run.

"Then a strange thing happened, unequalled even in the annals of romance, a thing that might have been written by MARCO POLO or invented by PRESTER JOHN. Muda Hassim wanted to get back home. So he changed places with the victorious Englishman. Brooke became Rajah Brooke, ruler of Sarawak.

"At first the SULTAN kicked. The idea of a mere Englishman, unrelated to the magnificent Oriental ruling class, becoming rajah appeared just an offence.

"Muda ultimately persuaded him. Either the Englishman, he said, would lose his head or he would tame these Dyaks, of whom the SULTAN, like Muda himself, went in terror.

"BROOKE did not lose his head—in any sense. One of the causes of rebellion was forced trade under which the natives had to buy goods sold to them by the chiefs at whatever price the chiefs chose to fix. If they did not their sons and daughters were seized and sold into slavery.

"A great constitutional writer has said that if a tyrant, no matter how powerful, were to enact a decree that all blue-eyed babies were to be slain at birth, he would automatically end his own tyranny. There are some things that human nature refuses to tolerate.

"BROOKE thought the same thing of this system of selling the daughters for the father's debts. He abolished it. He became his own as well as his own Commander-in-Chief, and gave audience daily at his own house. The natives at first distrusted him. But they found that the strange Englishman's word was his bond and he did not take bribes. Presently a proverb began to circulate: 'The son of ENGLAND is a friend of the DYAK.' Brooke had conquered permanently. He went steadily forward lengthening his cords and strengthening his stakes. There is a saying: 'When GOD finds something difficult to do He entrusts the task to one of HIS ENGLISHMEN.' Does it appear a blasphemous saying when one contemplates the amazing career of RAJAH BROOKE?"

Doig concludes his article with the lament that "our schoolboys are taught nothing of the deeds of English worthies like Brooke. Their poor little heads are filled with rubbish about Perkin Warbeck or some other entirely unimportant figure."

Yes, it is truly deplorable that in the teaching of British history our educationists should shy at the Imperial element. For the Imperial spirit is fundamentally and actively religious.

This sounds a strange doctrine to many people. But it is the doctrine of the BIBLE. And it is the simple religious faith of the average man in BRITAIN.

"To do justice and judgment is more acceptable to Jehovah than sacrifice."[2] That is true religion and true Imperialism. It is what the man in the street means when, in other words, he says, "To live clean and play the game is more important than going to Church on Sundays."

Churchgoing and religious exercises are excellent and essential things; but doing justice and judgment is the principal thing. Among essential things let us learn to put first things first. For even in the carrying out of essential things we need the guidance of a right perspective.

[2] Prov. xxi, 3.

Isaiah claims, in the most compelling terms, that true religion consists in loosening the bands of wickedness, undoing heavy burdens, letting the oppressed go free and breaking every yoke ; not in affliction of soul, bowing down the head like a bulrush and spreading sackcloth and ashes under us.[3]

And it is just because the average Englishman is born with the fire of this conviction burning in heart and mind that he has been so successful throughout the world in the carrying out of GOD'S purposes.

The spirit of religion is the spirit of the LORD. "And where the spirit of the LORD is—there is liberty.[4]"

The spirit of liberty is the outstanding characteristic of

THE BRITISH PEOPLE.

It is a truly religious spirit, for where liberty is—there also will be found the spirit of the living GOD.

BRITISH-ISRAEL FACTS NOT FANCIES.—XIII.

BY MAJOR-GENERAL C. A. HADFIELD.

CONCLUSION.

THE following passages of Scripture appear to be symbolical of the journey of Israel from the time of their escape from Assyrian captivity until the time comes for Israel to be revealed ; indeed, as a guide to us, in these days, of the manner in which the great "everlasting nation" (the "Stone King dom") which was destined "never to be destroyed" was to exist unrecognized in the world. "And I will bring the blind by a way that they knew not ; I will lead them in paths that they have not known ; I will make darkness light before them, and crooked things straight. These things will I do unto them, and not forsake them. Hear, ye deaf : and look, ye blind, that ye may see. Who is blind, but My servant ? or deaf, as My messenger that I sent ? Who is blind as he that is perfect. . . . but thou observest not ; opening the ears but he heareth not" (Isa. xlii, 16, 18, 19, 20). Then again : "Bring forth the blind people that have eyes, and the deaf that have ears" (Isa. xliii, 8).

Thus Almighty God led His people from the wilderness to the place appointed, through strange lands, and unknown paths, unto "a place of safety," the "isles of the west," or the British Isles. And done in such a manner that Israel has never been recognized. The fulfilment of Scripture, still of the future, is "the recognition of Israel, and their promised reunion with the Jews." "Then shall the children of Judah and the children of Israel be gathered together, and appoint themselves one head. . . ." (Hos. i, 11.)

"In those days (now approaching) the house of Judah shall walk with (or 'to') the house of Israel, and they shall come together out of the land of the north to the land that I have given for an inheritance unto your fathers" (Jer. iii, 18). This is a promise that Israel shall become the possessors of the "Promised Land," which is now held by Great Britain. Where is Israel ? Surely Israel is the "kingdom" set up by God Himself, which shall never be destroyed ? Such kingdom cannot be, as so many imagine it to be—Christ, because it is Christ Who is to reign over it. Christ cannot be the stone that "smites the image," for that "stone" is the kingdom over which Christ will reign.

Then we shall see the confirmation of the following prophecy : "Therefore, thus saith the Lord God ; Now will I bring again the captivity of Jacob, and have mercy upon the whole house of Israel. . . . When I have brought them again from the people, and gathered them out of their enemies' lands. . . . Then shall they know that I am the Lord their God, which caused them to be led into captivity among the heathen ; but I have gathered them unto their own land and have left none of them any more there. Neither will I hide My face any more from them, for I have poured out My spirit upon the house of Israel, saith the Lord God" (Ezek. xxxix, 25–29). We shall also see the fulfilment of the prophesied resurrection of the "dry bones" of Ezekiel xxxvii, where Israel and Judah shall be made "one nation" and "one king shall be king to them all ; and they shall be no more two nations . . . and David My servant shall be king over them. . . ." "For had ye believed Moses, ye would have believed Me, for he wrote of Me. But if ye believe not his writings, how shall ye believe My words ?" (St. John v, 46–47). "For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning." "Jesus Christ was a minister of the circumcision for the truth of God, to confirm the promises made unto the fathers" (Rom. xv, 4–8). Can anything be more definite, or convincing, viewed in the light of modern-day events "fulfilling the prophecies" before our eyes ?

Christ says : "The Scriptures must be fulfilled," and in His Sermon on the Mount, "I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil," i.e., to fulfil what the prophets have foretold.

So many people ask, Why is it if Israel and the Anglo-Saxon race be identical do our Church leaders reject it ?

May it be answered thus ? How was it when the Disciples heard that Christ had risen, said, "the words seemed to them as idle tales," and they believed not ? Lack of faith ! For Christ Himself remarked : "O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken" (Luke xxiv, 11, 25).

Those readers who have compared the passages quoted from the Bible must satisfy themselves whether there is yet a more clear proof in the Bible that after Israel's deportation 721 B.C. only an Israel in a spiritual sense is to be accepted by the world. "The Scriptures cannot be broken," hence it behoves all students to interpret aright. Is the straightforward history of Israel's "future," so clearly defined in the Old Testament merely an Allegory ? If the answer is in the affirmative, then it is difficult "to square" God's promises as being fulfilled. If, on the other hand, we read the history literally, and compare it with the English-speaking races of to-day, we see every promise either fulfilled, or in the last stages of being fulfilled. And thereby we prove the truth and the inspiration of the Bible to the satisfaction of the infidel and the agnostic.

If we argue otherwise, how can we account for or explain why the Apostles Paul, Peter and James wrote as they did, making definite references "to twelve tribes which are scattered abroad." These Apostles must have known whether there were, or were not, twelve tribes, or merely the Southern Kingdom of the Jews whom they lived amongst and knew ! Or why did our Lord remark: "These are the words which I spake unto you while I was yet with you that all things must be fulfilled which were written in the Law of Moses, and in the Prophets and in the Psalms concerning Me"?

It is very evident that if the Northern Kingdom of Israel had ceased to exist, or had become extinct, or mingled with the Jews as so many really believe, Christ's Words would convey no meaning, for in such an event the Scriptures could not be fulfilled, and so we argue God's Word has failed. The Scriptures have been broken! What a terrible lack of faith in the Holy Bible. If only to obtain a stronger and greater faith in the truth and inspiration of the Bible it is with studying the truth of the identity of Israel which is so clearly and abundantly supported from Genesis to Revelation.

Let each one who has read these notes decide whether the Bible can be accepted as "God's Word," seeing that, "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God" (2 Tim. iii, 16) and that Christ's command was to "search the Scriptures," i.e., the Old Testament—or whether we are inclined to follow some of the "Higher Critics" in their effort to belittle the Prophetical writings or cast doubts upon their inspiration or parts thereof?

"The Scriptures cannot be broken." (John x, 35.)*

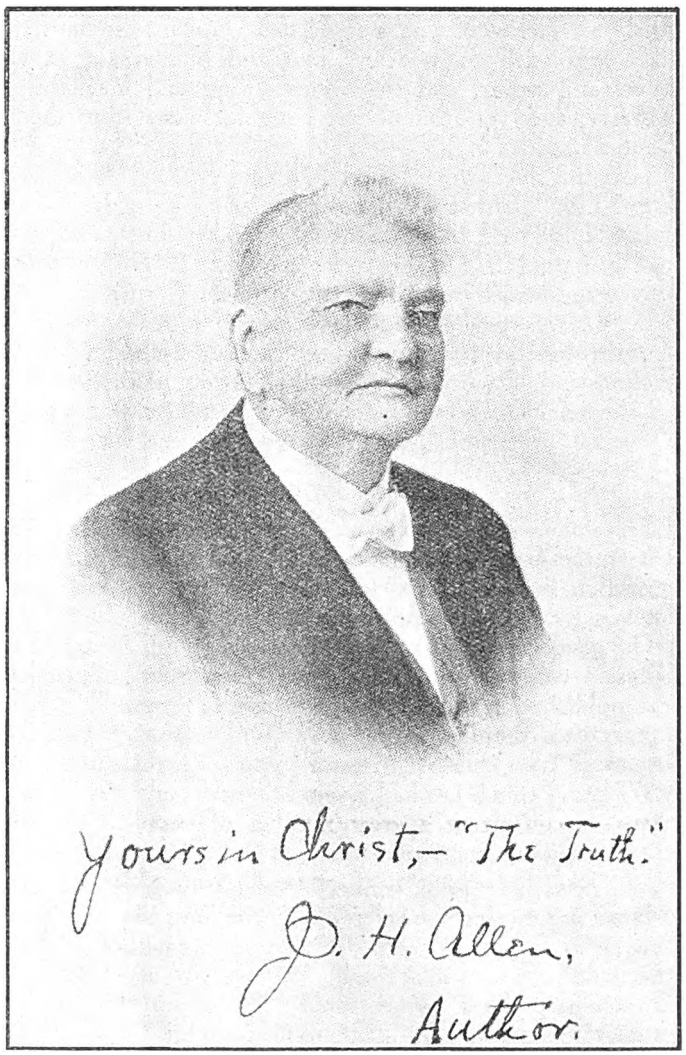
OBITUARY.



THE LATE BISHOP J. H. ALLEN (U.S.A.).

IT is fitting that this appreciation of the life-work of our honoured and beloved friend should commence with his own words of greeting to the B.-I.-W.F. Congress of 1920:—

"When first our feet pressed the soil of this blessed isle, the great surge of heart emotions that swept over our gladdened soul was not so much because we had reached the land of our immediate forefathers—the homeland of our country—although that was indeed a source of great joy, but that which most deeply stirred the profound depths of our spirit nature was the greater fact, the greater blessing—that of being privileged to stand on this fragment of the Holy Land—'the islands of the sea.' Ever since the Holy Spirit opened our eyes to the truth of British, of Anglo-Saxon, of Saxon Identity with the lost House of Israel, the lost House of Joseph, the lost Birthright Family, together with the lost sceptre, kingdom and throne of David, one of our greatest desires has been to visit this land which is teeming with the evidence of our Identity. . . . We believe that both the call for this Congress and the City in which it is to be held is of God. It is in the Divine order. The times of the Gentiles are full; momentous times are at the door; tremendous issues are on us—a great transition period has begun, and startling things are beginning to take place. America is looking for great things from the Congress. Our expectation is that a great wave of light, of interest, of inquiry, and desire for knowledge concerning Anglo-Saxon Identity with the once lost House of Israel will be set in motion that shall reach to the ends of the English-speaking world; the results of which few can imagine, and no one but the Lord can know. Brethren, look up; pray much; God is with us and will give great victory.

"Yours in the Faith,
"J. H. ALLEN,
"Bishop of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, U.S.A."

The Bishop, with the Rev. R. H. Sawyer (U.S.A.), helped to make the B.-I.-W.F. Congress, held at Kensington Town Hall, one of the most memorable of our annual gatherings. This was in July, 1920, a year after the Federation had been inaugurated. Amongst others, our first Congress was honoured by the presence of H.R.H. Princess Alice, Countess of Athlone, and the Earl of Athlone, and the Mayor of the Royal Borough of Kensington in his robes and chain of office.

Bishop Allen, always warmly greeted by the audience, delivered four set addresses, full of instruction, and, at the closing meeting, read a beautiful poem:

"ALL HAIL TO BRITAIN," written and composed by himself, concluding with expressions of gratitude for Mr. and Mrs. Garrison's hospitality for several months, and the care and help of the beloved daughter who had accompanied him and enabled him, in his crippled condition, to come to England.

Some noteworthy remarks in his addresses were as follows :— "Ephraim followeth after an east wind." "Well, when you follow an east wind, you do not go east, you go west, hence the people in the isles of the sea came from the East. That is why the prophet queries : 'Who raised up this righteous man from the East?'" "The fourth of July is the day when the U.S.A. was born. The pain came after the birth, the Mother-country had to be notified that the child was born, then the pain came." "The Bible tells of a flying eagle." "Someone said, 'The American eagle is not a flying eagle, but a spread-out eagle.' But surely a 'flying eagle' means a spread-out eagle." "The word that is translated 'unicorn' is translated also 'wild ox.' So we have bull and bullocks, cows and heifers and calves, and they refer always and inevitably to Ephraim, and you cannot get Ephraim away from them." (Deut. xxxiii, 16, 17.)

"On this rock will I build My Church." "What rock? Peter? No. Christ is the chief corner-stone in the foundation. 'Flesh and blood hath not revealed this unto thee, but My Father'; On this rock—the rock of Divine revelation, of the revealing of Jesus Christ to the heart and lives of men. On this rock the Church of Christ is built."

During his stay in England the Bishop addressed a number of meetings and preached several times in various places, including the Central Hall, Westminster, on two Sundays, by invitation of the Rev. Dr. Dinsdale T. Young. He and his daughter in September, and he gave us an impressive description of his visit to the Garden Tomb at Jerusalem, expressing his strong conviction that it is the actual place where our Lord's body was laid by Joseph of Arimathea.

The good Bishop's Congress addresses appear in full in the Congress volume for 1920; some articles from his pen have been published in this journal from time to time. He was the author of a number of books and pamphlets. His chef-d'œuvre is "Judah's Sceptre and Joseph's Birthright," a book of 377 pages which has had a very large sale, and has been the means of converting a great number of people to British-Israel, including many ministers.

And now this strong, gentle, far-seeing prophet and father in Israel has crossed the river, and, as he joins the company of those who have been "made meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light," he sends to us, still militant here on earth, this sursum corda: "Lift up your hearts" and as we respond, "We lift them up unto the Lord," we give thanks and say: "We also bless Thy holy Name for all Thy servants departed this life in Thy faith and fear; beseeching Thee to give us grace so to follow their good examples, that with them we may be partakers of Thy heavenly kingdom; Grant this, O Father, for Jesus Christ's sake, our only Mediator and Advocate. Amen."

The Bishop had planned to attend the Detroit Convention, but was overtaken by the illness which ended fatally in his eighty-fifth year.

We tender to his devoted daughter, who so lovingly cared for him during so many years, our most sincere sympathy.

BRITISH-ISRAEL PROPAGANDA.

A REPLY TO DR. W. B. SELBIE.

BY A. R. H.

"THE Christian World" Questions Answered column contains a statement from Dr. W. B. Selbie describing the British-Israel position as "entirely fantastic and without a shadow of justification in the Scriptures so long as those are rightly interpreted." He claims that our treatment of the Scriptures seems to be "arbitrary to a degree and to rest upon a method of interpretation of prophecy which is wholly unjustifiable."

Having thus rebuked British-Israel for arbitrary tendencies, Dr. Selbie immediately plunges into the abyss of dogmatism in his unwavering assertion that "Scholarship has now established certain canons of Scripture interpretation which are universally accepted, and any departure from them can only be misleading."

One might almost describe this as the apotheosis of obscurantism! It is certainly a fitting climax to the flimsy generalities which preceded it.

But if any principle has won universal acceptance in modern times surely it is this: that the scholarship of to-day is the negation of the scholarship of to-morrow.

We live in an age of progress. Revelation, scholarship, knowledge and interpretation is progressive not static.

To claim that modern scholarship has decided what shall be the correct manner of interpreting the Scriptures is arbitrary to a high degree. And arbitrary in the worse sense of the word.

It claims to set up a human authority nearly as blightin in its influence as that set up by priests and Popes of old and strikes at the very heart of the evangelical conception of the BIBLE being an open Book. The spirit of GOD alone can lead us into the truth. The attempt to pursue the light of truth along artificially-directed paths is the very cause of the world-wide confusion of thought and distress prevalent in the Christian world to-day, which Dr. Selbie (by implication) so deplores.

The British-Israel method of interpretation is based upon the principle that a simple, direct, commonsense literal meaning to Scripture is usually nearest the truth and that the Scriptures should be taken as one consequent whole, the best system of commentary upon any single portion being that of comparing one Scripture with another. BRITISH-ISRAEL stands for the whole counsel of GOD.

Dr. Selbie scoffs at the "attempt to apply prophecy to modern times." This method Dr. Selbie describes as unjustified and arbitrary.

We cannot see its lack of justification. But we admit it is arbitrary in the best sense of the word. For the word arbitrary is derived from the Latin bitere, which means "go to see." And the genius of the whole British-Israel presentation consists in its very capacity for arbitrarily obeying the arbitrary injunction of the Scriptures: "Seek ye out of the BOOK of JEHOVAH, and read: no one of these shall fail, none shall want her mate."*

We must "go to" secular history and read in its pages before we can "see" the fulfilment of prophecy. There is no other way. And yet this is the method that Dr. Selbie describes as being "wholly unjustifiable."

* Isaiah xxxiv, 16.

Whereas it is just this blindly obstinate attitude of modern scholarship which is responsible for the lack of conviction among Christian organizations to-day. The BIBLE has become to all "as the words of a BOOK that is sealed, which men deliver to one that is learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I cannot; for it is sealed. And the BOOK is delivered to him that is not learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I am not learned."†

The Christian world is so dominated by false ideas about scholarship that when the average Christian wants to find a simple interpretation of a Scripture he finds himself helpless. If he goes to an ordinary man he receives the reply, "I cannot interpret that; I am not a scholar." If he goes to a scholar, the scholar says, "I cannot interpret that literally. Circumstances have changed. You must look upon it as all being beautiful idealism."

But thank GOD that we live in the day when the deaf are beginning to hear the words of the Book and the eyes of the blind to see out of obscurity and darkness.‡ And no organization in the whole world is assisting that process of enlightenment better than the BRITISH-ISRAEL-WORLD FEDERATION.

It is outrageous of Dr. Selbie to claim that BRITISH-ISRAEL offers people "assurances of safety and privileges without exacting too much in the way of conduct in exchange." In making a sweeping statement of this nature Dr. Selbie at once betrays the fact that he knows nothing of our Movement or its leaders. BRITISH-ISRAEL is above all things a definite call to consecration and service. It demands the highest code of conduct.

Dr. Selbie recognizes that there is a craving among the people for "something concrete and for definite authority and assurance," and that this need is being met by BRITISH-ISRAEL. But BRITISH-ISRAEL is, he claims, "mischievous and false," and the Church must therefore seek "some more effective way" of meeting the people's needs. Dr. Selbie calls for "a more living and urgent presentation of Christianity."

But where is Dr. Selbie going to find inspiration for such a presentation? Where can he find a presentation in power, authority, inspiration and effectiveness, equal to the British-Israel evangel—the national message of the BIBLE?

Living and urgent presentations of Christianity will never be produced by minds clouded by learned scepticism. But through the pages of the BOOK, the spirit of GOD is to-day sending forth a message to the BRITISH RACE whose living and urgent nature is irresistible. As it is written:—

> "So on this Race I lay wonders,
> Add wonders to wonders,
> Destroying its scientists' science,
> And baffling its scholars' researches."§

Bible truth is the enemy of popular delusion and fashionable theory. But it is in complete harmony with exact science and sound scholarship based on a sure foundation.

This is where many of the theories of modern scholarship, at present, fail. They are based upon false foundations.

British-Israel workers and believers have no axe to grind. If Dr. Selbie and his satellites can bring forth a better and more living presentation of Christian truth than the British-Israel evangel let them do it. None will be quicker to render their support than British-Israel workers.

But Dr. Selbie must "deliver the goods." A Movement is judged by its "fruits." And only something that is "better" will do.

Moreover, his presentation must be a national message, as it is written: "The good news of the KINGDOM, however, shall be proclaimed throughout the whole EMPIRE, as a witness to all nations; and then will the end come."¶

To the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN WORLD.

SIR,—I beg that you will kindly allow me to protest against Dr. Selbie's article on page 4 of your last issue. It exhibits an utter lack of knowledge of the subject. If the doctor had read our literature and sought information from us he would not have written as he has done. To use the words "obscurantism," "superstition" and "heresy" as in any way applicable to British-Israel teaching is an outrage against millions of Christian people, including hundreds of ministers of various denominations.

If the doctor does not know of any scholars, etc., so much the worse. Has he a right to assume there are none because he does not happen to know them? I could give a long list of University men of distinguished careers—professors, bishops, clergymen and ministers, Hebrew and Greek scholars—many of whom have given half a lifetime of study to this subject and who rejoice in the truth of it. The greatest scholar of his day in all Europe proclaimed it. Thousands of atheists and agnostics have been won to the Christian faith through it.

The minister whose congregation is one of the largest in London to-day has said, "I stand here to express obligation to this grand Federation because of the light it is casting upon the Bible. I believe this Federation has lighted a lamp, the golden beauty of which will never be obscured." Will Dr. Selbie undertake to class him and hundreds of the highest people in the land as heretics? We have opponents, yes; but their arguments have been met and answered again and again.

This Movement is spreading like a flame. It is the auxiliary to the Churches. It has brought thousands into the Churches and never taken one out. Our people are the most zealous missionaries and the most generous givers to missions. It is high time that all ministers carefully and prayerfully examined the subject and came into line with it. If they do not they will be left behind. Our Movement is interdenominational, and it is proving the effective way of bringing people back to God and the Bible. We have millions of adherents and thousands of writers and speakers all over Anglo-Saxondom. Finally, let it be thoroughly understood that Christ is the mountain peak of our teaching.—Yours,

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor, THE NATIONAL MESSAGE.

SIR,—May I contribute one more proof of how England unconsciously carries out her destiny as the race chosen by the Lord God Himself, not only by the way she serves Him and retains His representative on the Throne, when other kings become unseated and dishonoured, but in her Church services sings thankfulness to the Supreme Being for her existence, although her Priesthood refuses to believe that the Israel of Scripture is Great Britain to-day. At the Eton College Chapel last Sunday evening this Coronation hymn was magnificently rendered by the voices of some five hundred of England's flower of manhood to Sullivan's well-known tune, Bishopgarth :—

THE LORD OF HOSTS.

The Lord of Hosts our King shall be,
Whatever foes assail us :
A mighty man of war is He
Whose arm shall never fail us.
The gods of silver and of gold,
Men's hands and brains have wrought them,
We scorn and fight them, as of old
Our fathers scorned and fought them.

Lord God of Hosts, through Whom alone
A prince can rule his nation,
Who settest kings upon their throne
And orderest each man's station ;
Now and through ages following
This grace to us be given,
To serve and love an earthly king,
Who serves our King in Heaven !

Lord God of Hosts, arise, arise,
Be jealous for Thine honour !
Save England from her enemies,
And pour such grace upon her
That from her sins, her foolish pride,
And all her vain endeavour,
Redeemed, released, and purified,
She serve her King for ever !

The boys' choir then sang the extract from Handel's Oratorio : "Then Zadok, the priest, and Nathan, the prophet, took Solomon, and anointed him as king, and all the people rejoiced and said : 'God save the king, long live the king.'"

The organ accompaniment to these simple words is beautiful beyond description, and the congregation could not fail to unite in the gladness of the motif, and the sense of pride and glory as they hear that the people rejoiced and shouted : "God save the king, long live the king."

To a British-Israelite it is significant that the ceremony of anointing a king required the presence of God's Prophet as well as God's Priest. What have we done with our Prophets to-day? May it be that their absence, or our unwillingness to recognize this office of religious interpretation, is in part the reason for some of the political blunders we commit and the uncertainty with which we are surrounded because we disbelieve in seeking Divine interpretation of mundane affairs?

We parents cannot but grieve that our sons are growing up in the schools of England without any idea of their Birthright prerogatives. Nor can we wonder if they find religious teaching rather beside the mark amid the turmoil of more vivid realities, such as sport and politics, that hold their interest and seem to them of more immediate importance than the Old and the New Testaments as taught for examination purposes to-day.

To say, as I have had it said to me by eminent divines, that teaching our people they are the Covenant race would make them presumptuous and overbearing is begging the question, for rightly interpreted the knowledge that we are Chosen carries with it the obligation to serve and to benefit all the other nations on the face of the globe, whether by missionary enterprise, or pioneering, or carrying the standard of civilization, hygiene and irrigation as may best minister to the needs of the community we approach.

To the Editor.

SIR,—May I be allowed to point out that the representation of the medallion of Ollam Fodhla, given in your issue June 28th, is incorrect? A true representation would have been much more significant by reason of the "eastern crown."

I know that shown could not have been taken from a photograph. It is, in fact, a reproduction of that published by the late Graham Coltart in the "Northern British-Israel Review" of October, 1917.

I visited the "Four Courts" in 1908 and, being blessed with very excellent sight, took very careful note of the medallions. I went there for that purpose.

The result is embodied in a little booklet of mine entitled "Ollam-Fodhla, Who was he?" an excerpt from which concludes this letter.

"In accordance with this misconception—which he shared with multitudes of both learned and unlearned—our artist supposed Moses to be a Jew, and invested him with the conventional countenance, of a very pronounced kind, accordingly.

"Yes, that is all very natural, and there is no cause for wonder! But why did he depict Ollam-Fodhla with the same type of face? Moses and Ollam-Fodhla are the only two, of the series of worthies, who are depicted with the (so-called) Shemitic type of face—why? The answer forces itself—Because they were both supposed to be Jews ; in the case of the latter with the more excellent reason, assuredly.

"This brings us to a summation of the evidence, the artist, conforming his ideas to the terms of the tradition, represents Ollam-Fodhla as a Jew. He crowns him with what heraldry calls 'the Eastern Crown, called also the Radiated and the Antique Crown, is borne both as a crest and as a charge.' It is not necessarily a kingly crown. On the field of the medallion he places a shamrock to indicate connection with Ireland. And Ollam-Fodhla is deemed worthy of a place in a galaxy of the great law-givers of the world."

Yours very truly,

LANDSEER MACKENZIE.

To the Editor.

SIR,—Several correspondents commenting on "Week by Week" for June 14th have raised a point which will be of interest to other readers. As one of them quaintly puts it: "Why are we so humble? If we are the greatest EMPIRE the world has ever known, why do we not 'blossom forth' and shout about it. If BRITAIN is the most powerful nation on the earth to-day, why doesn't she display her pride and power accordingly. Why this national humility?"

There is only one answer to this question. Humility is the special mark of citizenship in the Kingdom of Heaven* and the peculiar mark of the NATION which is the embryonic KINGDOM of GOD upon earth. Humility is a sign identifying the BRITISH PEOPLE with the PEOPLE whose GOD is the LORD.

As a Member for Parliament said in the HOUSE of COMMONS recently: "I do not know if the term KINGDOM OF HEAVEN is applicable; but the BRITISH EMPIRE is the nearest we can get."

Yes, the KINGDOM of which we are citizens is the WORLD EMPIRE of Dan. ii, 44. And to-day we are beginning to become self-conscious of it.

Nationally, deep down in the subconsciousness of our hearts, we have always known it. But now with the dawning consciousness of our responsibility as a great NATION we are learning the secret of true greatness. We have found that to be truly great we must be willing to serve; in fact become the servant of all.† BRITAIN-ISRAEL has been called to be the servant nation to all the other nations.

Other nations may think our humility a sign of weakness. They laugh contemptuously at our sophistication and think our conduct "childish."

But there is a difference between that which is child-like and that which is child-ish. Humility is a state of mind. And except we humble ourselves like a little child we cannot enter into the kingdom of heavenly consciousness. Mentally as well as spiritually we need to be "born again."

Child-like simplicity, trust and wonder, are fruits of the spirit of service which GOD is planting in the heart and mind of HIS BRITH-ISH PEOPLE. Our unsophistication is our glory. Let us rejoice in it. It is GOD'S seal to the multitudinous proofs that ours is indeed the KINGDOM of GOD on earth—the KINGDOM-EMPIRE which is "not of this world," i.e., in the world but not of it.

Yours sincerely,

A. R. H.

By request of the Executive Committee, the subject of Mr. Herbert Garrison's lecture during the Congress on the evening of Wednesday, October 8th, in the Large Central Hall, Westminster, will be "The United States of America," illustrated by a wonderful series of photographic and hand-painted lantern pictures.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

BY THE REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A.

QUESTION.—Will you kindly explain the incident about our Saviour sending the devils into the herd of swine? It has always puzzled me, and doubtless many others also.—F. P. (N.16).

ANSWER.—This miracle, known as "The healing of the demoniacs in the country of the Gadarenes" (Matt. viii, 28-34; Mark v, 1-20; Luke viii, 26-39) is, as Archbishop Trench says, "the most important, and, in many respects, the most perplexing of all demoniac cures in the New Testament. It is a subject of which the difficulty is very much enhanced by the fact that, as with some of the spiritual gifts, the gift of tongues, for example, the thing itself, if it still survives among us, yet does so no longer under the same name, nor with the same frequency and intensity as of old" (Trench, Notes on the Miracles of our Lord, chap. 5).

The chief thing to observe is that our Lord recognizes the existence and the personality of the evil spirit indwelling a human being (cf. Luke xi, 24-26). Christ does not regard the demoniacs as persons merely of disordered intellects, but as subjects of an alien spiritual might. He addresses the evil spirit as distinct from the man, "Hold thy peace and come out of him" (Mark i, 25). This clearly shows that the individual man was not merely subject to some physical disease, although the suffering of the demoniac was undoubtedly very great.

The very big question of demoniacal possession is here raised, and into which space does not allow us to enter, save to state that the Gospels assure us of its existence in the time of our Lord. It is not necessary to assume that such a thing exists to-day, since the Coming of Christ in the flesh, and the continual testimony of Jesus borne by the Church in her preaching and ordinances, have broken and kept down, in some measure, the grosser manifestations of the power of Satan (see Luke x, 18). Although against this we cannot tell in how many cases of insanity the malady may not even now be traced to direct demoniacal possession.

(2) The casting of the devils into the herd of swine has always been a difficulty with those who are lovers of animals as an act repugnant to the merciful character of our Lord's miracles. But surely, if God sanctioned the slaughtering of birds and animals for the ritual sacrifices of the Tabernacle and the Temple, and if He allowed animal food for the sustenance of men's bodies, how much more might He be pleased to destroy animal life when He sees fit for the liberation or instruction of men's souls? Similarly our Lord once asked the question, "How much then is a man of more value than a sheep?"

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

Our readers will be very pleased to learn that the degree of Doctor of Laws and Logic has been conferred upon the Rev. Wm. Pascoe Goard. The initial steps were taken at the Detroit Convention in May last by Chancellor Dr. J. J. Du Bois, of the College of Law, Chicago. The ceremony took place on June 17th. Mr. Goard had to travel all the way from Vancouver to Chicago specially for it. He had three days with the College professors, a number of whom signed his diploma. Two State Governors and a Chief Justice had the LL.D. degree conferred upon them at the same time as our friend. We have been favoured with a programme of the proceedings, which included a beautiful Church service and a sermon by the Rev. F. F. Shannon, D.D. A very fine choir of Welsh singers was led by Professor Prothero of Swansea. The large congregation included many distinguished Doctors of Law, Science and Medicine.

Dr. Goard's address at the degree-conferring ceremony was on "World Conditions To-day," after which there was a burst of applause, which lasted for some minutes.

It should be stated that this honour was conferred upon our Deputy President in recognition of the value of his book on "THE LAW OF THE LORD, OR THE COMMON LAW," which has been read and praised by legal lights on both sides of the Atlantic, and which has been made the basis of a text-book for the College of Law.

Dr. Goard had long talks on British-Israel truth with the professors, with the result that a group of them propose to come over to our next Congress, accompanied by Chancellor Du Bois.

The Boards of the Covenant Publishing Company and of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE Company met on the forenoon of July 4th, and transacted important business. In the afternoon of the same day the Executive Committee of the British-Israel-World Federation met and went through a long agenda. Satisfactory, indeed, very encouraging reports were presented by the Secretary-General, Mr. Herbert Garrison; the Financial Secretary, Colonel C. Vincent R. Wright; and the Chief Crusader, Mr. John Leech, K.C.

The results of the Press Campaign as further reported were considered very gratifying.

A Wesleyan minister writes:—"THE NATIONAL MESSAGE as an interpreter makes the old Bible a new Bible. It supplies a felt need and creates a new hope. It takes prophecy as it stands and without spiritualising or otherwise perverting Scripture, it sheds light on national conditions and international relationships which neither preacher nor politician can afford to be without, 'The wise shall understand'."

Mr. John Leech, K.C., addressed a meeting of boys (Miss Gray's class) at Islington, on June 26th; also a meeting of the Fordingbridge Crusaders held by the kind invitation of Mr. Kake, in the charming grounds attached to his residence, where an excellent tea was provided on June 27th.

On July 1st, he addressed a meeting of the Upton Manor Crusaders. On June 28th he spoke at a tea and garden gathering at the residence of Mrs. Aiers, Plaistow.

FOR SALE.—A reader is willing to sell his three-speed Humber Bicycle, little used, and will take the nearest offer to £4. The total proceeds will go to the funds of the Federation. Our friend resides in the Norbury district, S.W.16. Offers to purchase will gladly be passed on by the Secretary-General.

Our best thanks are tendered to Councillor and Mrs. Shade, of Gravesend, through whose kindness a most successful garden-party was held on July 3rd, in their beautiful garden at "Downham." Miss Hamilton-Hunter proved the identity of Great Britain with Israel from History, Ethnology, and the Bible, to a large and enthusiastic audience. Many present who knew nothing of British-Israel teaching were keenly interested, and it is hoped that good results will follow, also that a Crusader Group will shortly be formed at Gravesend.

In the evening, Miss Hamilton-Hunter spoke to a large and deeply interested gathering in the Springfield Mission Hall.

A collection and a donation amounting to £8 13s. 7d. for the funds of the Federation resulted from these meetings.

Mrs. E. Ashton, of Wanganui, New Zealand, writes:—"We have, in Wanganui, suffered a great loss in the death of Mr. J. H. Harper, who died on May 15th, at the advanced age of eighty-seven. He had been a believer in British-Israel for more than fifty years, and was a profound student of the Word of God. He had a most kindly, lovable disposition, and though we know he has 'departed to be with Christ, which is far better,' to some of us his loss is felt more than I can express in words. He could always deal with any knotty problem on which I required help. He addressed our meetings until he became too infirm, and then insisted that I should carry on the work. He wished that no laudatory notice should be in the newspapers. He was, he said, "simply a sinner saved by grace." I should like this notice to appear in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, a paper which he very much enjoyed reading."

Professor Sayce writes in his Reminiscences:—"It was a surprise to me to find in Devizes Museum numerous beads of blue Egyptian fayence and of a particular type, which had been discovered in grave after grave of the early Bronze Age period on Salisbury Plain. They are beads characteristic of the time of Rameses II, the Pharaoh of the Oppression, and must have been brought by traders to Britain about 1300 B.C. I also noticed other (melon shaped) Egyptian beads, which originated at an earlier period, as well as the remains of ivory dagger-hilts, one of which still bore traces of Egyptian work."

On June 4th the Rev. Guy Waddington, M.A., Vicar of Christ Church, Bradford, visited Hastings, and gave two addresses in the Baptist Church, Wellington Square.

The afternoon lecture was devoted to a discourse concerning the Priesthood in Israel, reference being made to the celebration of the Passover, and the symbolism attached to each of the vestments worn by the priests. In the course of his address Mr. Waddington drew attention to the fact that the twelve stones in the high priest's breastplate were identical with the stones in the coronation crown of our King.

At the evening lecture the Rev. Dr. J. Mountain presided, supported by the Rev. H. Newton. In his opening address he alluded to the opposition encountered by those who accepted British-Israel Truth, and to the denunciation levelled against that teaching, explaining that after a close study he had joined the Movement on Biblical, historical, geographical and ethnological grounds, and believing as he did that it was the greatest Movement that had been raised up, and to which he gave his whole-hearted and enthusiastic support.

The Rev. G. Waddington dealt with "Israel in the New Testament." After tracing the record of Christ having preached the Gospel of the Kingdom (which ran parallel with the Gospel of individual salvation) and the evidences of the Apostles concerning the nation of Israel, the lecturer remarked that the Levitical Priesthood with the House of David was still in existence. Mr. Waddington also referred to the theological concept of the 20th century in spiritualizing all the promises made to Israel, which it was claimed were being fulfilled in the Church. If Israel was to be so spiritualized why, he asked, did such teaching fail to spiritualize Judah also? As is well known Judah (the Jew) is still with us. There was every evidence, however, that the promises to Israel, as distinct from Judah, were decidedly "National," and were being fulfilled in the Anglo-Saxon race—in other words, the British Empire.

The addresses both in the afternoon and evening were greatly appreciated.—EXCHANGE.

"UNIVERSAL TONGUE."

E. A. B., in the Auckland Star, New Zealand:—

"With the real English tongue now conquering the vagaries or variations that were flaunted in print before the silver sheet developed vocal virtues, it is probable that the cinema will have a greater world vogue in testimony to the universal language. An American who has been a wanderer for thirty years recently explained his major language impressions in trite manner. 'I have penetrated Tibet, Burmah, crossed and recrossed China and Japan, India and the Malay States. I have just returned from a 34,800 mile voyage around the South Atlantic, Indian and Pacific Oceans. I've crossed through the heart of Africa from coast to coast, along the Congo River, and from Fremantle to Sydney. I've had dinner with the natives of the Fly River country in New Guinea, and the wild men of the Bontoc in Luxon. I have visited Monte Carlo, loafed in the Place Clinchy, hunted in the wilds of the Siberian tiger and traded with the Ainu of Hokkaido—and I speak nothing but English. It is wonderful how many English-speaking blacks one comes across in the African jungle. White engineers working in Nyassaland learn the native tongue and speak it with the natives, but the blacks soon pick up English, and seem to prefer to speak it, too. I once heard an Egyptian singing 'Down Went McGinty' as he worked in an Alexandria cigarette factory. Entering a wayside inn in Mainz, Germany, I felt that English would not be understood. Using a dictionary of the country, I inquired of the landlord about a room. He smiled at my effort to pronounce the words and said in very good English, 'I can give you a nice room, but the bath is in the hall.' The English language will get you anywhere."

MANITOBA NOTES.

Mr. Norman Thompson writes:—

Rev. E. J. Springett addressed the Kiwanis Club a second time by special request on June 5th. The Annual Meeting of the Winnipeg Branch was held on June 17th. The President stated that enquiries were being received by him in increasing numbers every week, by telephone and mail, and that interest in the Movement was rapidly growing. He commented specially on the very favourable reports of the Ladies' Auxiliary and the Book Department. The distribution of free literature had been on a very large scale, including great numbers of NATIONAL MESSAGES, and five thousand leaflets, besides books and pamphlets specially selected for individual cases. Sales had increased tremendously during the past seven months, and from a commencement consisting of an initial loan, a comprehensive stock of books had been built up, which had attracted eulogistic remarks from many of the Convention visitors from other parts of the Dominion. A most encouraging report regarding subscriptions to THE NATIONAL MESSAGE was given by Mrs. E. Todd, who said that these had more than doubled during the last twelve months. A vote of thanks to the retiring committee was coupled with special appreciation of the outstanding work of Rev. E. J. Springett and Miss Mabel Harbour, who has also been busy in lecturing amongst other organisations on British-Israel-Truth. Mr. Springett was re-elected President by acclamation, and the committee has been strengthened by the accession of new members. Plans for a vigorous forward movement in the near future are under way, which it is expected will have far-reaching results.

Showing conclusively that the present Royal House is of the lineage of David.

Unchallenged and Unchallengeable.

The researches of the Author and the authorities he quotes establishes this work as one of the utmost importance to British-Israel.

God said, "David shall never want a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel."—Jer. xxxiii, 17.

Mr. Milner's work proves the existence of the man of David, sitting upon a throne. It follows that the throne must be that of the house of Israel.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

FROM BABYLONIA TO THE ISLES, OR THE MARCHING ORDERS TO ISRAEL—III.

By the Rev. Dr. W. Pascoe Goard.

Zion.

"Thus saith the Lord, the Redeemer of Israel, and his Holy One, to him whom man despiseth, to him whom the nation abhorreth, to a servant of rulers, Kings shall see and arise, princes also shall worship, because of the Lord that is faithful, and the Holy One of Israel, and he shall choose thee.

Thus saith the Lord, In an acceptable time have I heard thee, and in a day of salvation have I helped thee: and I will preserve thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, to establish the earth, to cause to inherit the desolate heritages;

That thou mayest say to the prisoners, Go forth; to them that are in darkness, Shew yourselves. They shall feed in the ways, and their pastures shall be in all high places.

They shall not hunger nor thirst; neither shall the heat nor sun smite them; for he that hath mercy on them shall lead them, even by the springs of water shall be guide them.

And I will make all my mountains a way, and my highways shall be exalted.

Behold, these shall come from far: and, lo, these from the north and from the west; and these from the land of Sinim.

Sing, O heavens; and be joyful, O earth; and break forth into singing, O mountains: for the Lord hath comforted his people, and will have mercy upon his afflicted.

But Zion said, the Lord hath forsaken me, and my Lord hath forgotten me.

Can a woman forget her sucking child, that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb? yea, they may forget, yet will I not forget thee.

Behold, I have graven thee upon the palms of my hands: thy walls are continually before me.

Thy children shall make haste: thy destroyers and they that made thee waste shall go forth of thee." (Isa. xlix, 7-17.)

This composite passage is manifestly addressed to Zion; that is to say, to the House of David. But also this passage most certainly takes cognizance of the work of our Lord Jesus Christ. There would seem at first sight to be contradiction or paradox here. But closer consideration shows that there is neither.

Jesus Christ is the root and offspring of David. He is the Capstone of the Pyramid, of the House of David, and of its history.

The whole tenor of what we are reading shows that the work of the Lord is involved PLUS the work of the House of David throughout all its long history.

Moreover, in this passage not only is the Lord, plus all the subordinate rulers and administrators of the House of David included, but also the people of Israel. Having this in view, what seems to be involved in the above beautiful passage becomes clear.

"I will preserve thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people."

To the nation Israel, and to the House of David, God gave specific covenants such as He has not given to other nations. Everything that the Lord does is the outcome of infallible reason, and in the majority of cases that reason can be arrived at by us through the light of the Word. The reason why the covenant should be given to Israel is manifestly because, from the birth of the nation in Isaac forward, the whole life training of Israel prepared the people to enter into the spirit of the covenant with understanding; no other nation was so trained.

Accordingly, the Lord did not give a covenant to other nations, the spirit of which would not be understood by them; but He gave to other nations the combination of the nation in which was established the House of David, the supreme Head of which is our Lord.

In the hands and hearts of Israel so constituted is the covenant God made with Israel, and also the covenant He made with the House of David; and in part of Israel and of the House of David is enshrined the Personality of the Lord. Thus in giving to the nations this Brith people, He carries out the ancient promise made to Abraham, "in thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

It is interesting to note, as illustrating this point, that a leading Huguenot minister in a convention in France, when pleading for the salvation and regeneration of France, prayed in impassioned terms something like the following:—"O Lord, send Thine Englishmen to preach the Word of Life in our beloved France."

A companion passage to the above may be found in the fifty-fifth chapter of Isaiah, where all are invited to come to the waters, and "to buy wine and milk without money and without price," which reads as follows:—

> "Incline your ear, and come unto me: hear, and your soul shall live; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David.
> Behold, I have given him for a witness to the people, a leader and commander to the people."

The "sure mercies of David" includes the covenant made with the House of David, the just and equitable administration by that House, and the whole of the redemption wrought out by our Lord Jesus Christ.

What a gift to the nations! What an honour for the nation Israel!

"To establish the earth."

These pregnant words are impressive enough to be expanded into a volume, in order that their meaning might be fully expressed. Because the words are so few and because they are tucked away in one mighty sentence, each clause of which might fill a volume with meaning, the significance of them is overlooked. But the fulfilment of them in history furnishes a wonderful comment and interpretation of them. The great fulfilment is recorded for us in part by every historian, and is illustrated for us by every detail of Anglo-Saxon expansion and activity on the continents and among the nations of the earth.

Let us "lift up our eyes," in the Bible phrasing, and see what is being accomplished in the earth by the outflowing of this race. Other nations compete with us in the Civilizations, old and new, when once they are established in the earth. But it is given to us as to no other nation to do the establishing. The spiritual and administrative activities are left to us, because of the fact that they are costly in men and money and offer no direct return. But once the spadework has been done; once the race or nation has been established and organized; once trade and commerce are made possible and safe, then our competitors for gain immediately appear and clamour for a share of that which is going as the result of the establishing.

Let the economic matter rest for the time. It is a sordid scramble which forms no part of the Divine plan. Trade and commerce on equitable lines is the purpose of God for Israel and the world. But the present competitive system, with its unwarranted charges and gains, is heathen and not Divine.

Look at the establishing of the lesser nations which is recorded to the credit of Britain. Look at the establishing of the world's stability and credit done by the Anglo-Saxon in Europe since the tragedy of the Great War. Look at the influence for good and for peace which is being exercised in all the world, and the fact that the LORD has given Israel and the House of David ruling in Israel, crowned by the Redemption and the Presence of the Redeemer as a covenant—Brith—to the nations to establish the earth, is made abundantly clear.

"To cause to inherit the desolate heritages."

The Colonial expansion of Britain in the modern days is sufficient of a commentary upon this text. The process began when Solomon "built Tadmor in the wilderness." Palmyra, now in ruins, because of the destructive activities of succeeding races who have occupied the land, was the first constructive step of Israel led by the House of David "causing to inherit the desolate heritages."

Esdras tells us that when Israel marched out from Babylonia they "went to a country where never man dwelt," namely, to the wilderness of Europe, then unpeopled.

So we see the progress, once begun, has continued to the present day.

Spain, under Papal leadership, took over South America.

Britain, under the House of David, took over North America.

Spain destroyed a civilization in the South.

Britain and her descendants created a civilization in the North.

All past history will illustrate the fact that among destructive peoples and agencies, the Israel peoples have, from the beginning, been constructive to the highest degree.

The heritages they have occupied have been not only peopled and furnished with villages, towns and cities, but their botany has been ordered on the Israel plan. Take the great forests of North America; among them all the maple tree was the only one to furnish an appreciable amount of food to the inhabitants. One variety of this particular tree yielded freely of its sap, which was reduced to sugar.

Inasmuch as the native races inhabiting North America, being communists, built neither houses nor cities, the enormous forests of the Continent yielded nothing to them but material for their bows, handles for their tomahawks, and poles for their wigwams; wood for the ribs of their canoes, and bark with which to cover them. The fibre of the mighty forests was, therefore, of no service to the Indian tribes.

The white settler made liberal use of the trees of the forest as material for manufactured articles, and for the building of homes, etc., but found in them no food supply. Therefore he carried with him, and planted all over the Continent, trees that were good for food ; among them were—the apple, pear, plum, cherry, grape, fig, citric fruits, the walnut, and so on.

Maize was found as a native production, but the white settler carried with him seed for the production of wheat, barley, oats, rye, and other cereals. So the promise was fulfilled. "The glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it ; the excellency of Carmel and Sharon." Now the glory of Lebanon was its cedars ; the excellency of Carmel, that is to say, the rolling hill country, was its orchards of olive and other fruit-bearing trees ; and the excellency of the plain of Sharon, which stands for the level plain, is the wheat, the barley, the oats, the rye, and other cereals.

Enough has been said to illustrate this part of the task. "That thou mayest say to the prisoners, Go forth."

The undertaking on the part of the Anglo-Saxon to free the slave is so well known a story as to need no discussion here. The blood and treasure which Britain has spent in stamping out the exploitation of the native races of Africa and other countries as merchantable articles to be hunted down and carried away to the slave markets of the world stands out so clearly as to make one wonder. The titanic four years' conflict waged in the U.S.A. over the question of the liberation of the slaves marks a red page of United States history, and has coloured all her literature from that day to this time. These are facts of history so clearly written and so widely known as to need no comment.

But as to the WHY? Why should Britain concern herself that in a far-off continent all the horrors incident upon the slave traffic prevailed? Why should the Anglo-Saxon after he had liberated all his own slaves impose the cessation of the traffic upon Africa and Asia? These are questions scarcely ever asked. That it was and is Britain's duty to attend to this matter seems to be accepted by her with not a dissentient voice. And the rest of the world seems to think that it is right that it should be so. But why it should be thus is not even asked.

This is as it should be. As the appointed nation, set apart to administer the Kingdom of God in the earth, this is a part of the appointed task : That she should say to the prisoners, "Go forth."

But perhaps there is still another angle to this particular task. The king of Babylon is distinguished as he who openeth not the door to the prisoners. The reference seems to be to that grim principle which lies at the root of the Babylon-Roman system of law ; that any man charged or apprehended on a criminal count is assumed to be guilty from the moment the law lays hands upon him. It is sometimes his privilege to be allowed to prove that he is not guilty. If he can do so, he may go free. If he has not the opportunity given, or fails to prove his innocence if he has the chance to do so, he must remain behind the shut doors of the prison house of this terrible system. Witness the late Dreyfus case in France. Contrary to this, Israel holds all men innocent until proved to be guilty. The prison doors are never finally closed upon a person until his guilt is established beyond reasonable doubt. She opens the doors and says to her prisoners, "Go forth."

"To them that are in darkness, Show yourselves."

How full of meaning are these abrupt clauses of the majestic sentence we are considering. The abrupt "show yourselves" means, of course, "step out of darkness into the light."

We could write volumes of doctrine illustrated by fact in regard to this short statement of a phase of the task of Israel. For instance, the first and most elementary meaning of this statement is that the Anglo-Saxon goes everywhere teaching righteousness and equity in law and its administration. The first step is to bring order out of chaos, and safety and peace out of conflict and danger. The next is to organize the life of tribes and peoples on the basis of Christian Civilization. Even upon the older nations the influence of the Anglo-Saxon is manifest in the spread of constitutional institutions. Thus the Parliament of Great Britain is well called THE MOTHER OF PARLIAMENTS, indicating the general acknowledgment of the influence of the Anglo-Saxon upon the national life of the constitutional nations of Europe.

It is not necessary to labour this theme. The task is still in process of being fulfilled in, for instance, New Guinea and many other hitherto unorganized territories and peoples. What a wonderful story is being enacted in this great field in the old world and in the new world at the present time!

But chief of all in connection with this phase of the task is the carrying the light of the Gospel of Salvation to every creature. The Missionary effort of the people of God is so well known a story that it would be an unnecessary use of space in an article such as this. It is told in libraries of books. It is a matter of practical effort in every Evangelical Church. The British-Israel-World Federation is as much alive to and interested in this phase of the great task of missionary endeavour as is any branch of the Church of Christ, and sees with perhaps a little clearer vision the real nature and scope of the task Divinely set, and has a more complete apprehension as to the selected agents for the carrying forward of the will of the Lord in the fields of Church and State. That is to say, we know them to be in very deed the Israel of God, chosen and ordained for this very task in the world.

AN EXAMINATION OF MR. AVARY H. FORBES' "STONE WALL."

(Letter No. 2.)

BY PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc.

12*th*.—Mr. Forbes says, "She (Britain) has led the way in foreign missions which she has established all over the world." Wonderful, and true too! And again, I ask why?

God told our father Abraham that he and his seed would bless all the nations of the earth. Thus it comes that in carrying these blessings to all mankind, the children of the covenants, the British, "have established the foreign missions all over the world." Again, I ask why? My answer is because God so promised and is making good. He is doing it with those to and with whom He made the covenants of blessing.

This is how it "might suggest" itself to my mind. How about you?

13*th*.—Mr. Forbes says, "The British and Foreign Bible Society, responsible for many hundreds of Bible translations and the circulation of many millions of Scriptures, is the parent of all the other Bible Societies," etc., etc. Remarkable! Mr. Forbes is right here too. I might suggest that there is a reason for all these great blessings which Britain is carrying to the world. There is a reason equal to the act, or series of acts.

God said He would bless all the nations of the earth through one nation and He is so doing. Is it strange that God keeps His word? Is it strange that one nation on earth, or one people, are doing the things God promised to have done through a chosen race?

14*th*.—Again, "Britain is responsible for the greatest evangelistic agency of modern times—the Salvation Army."

True, Mr. Forbes. You and I agree wonderfully. Queer, how so many great outstanding world blessings pour out of the British Isles to the nations of the earth, from the great "Anglo-Saxon" race, a people who in "spiritual work stand alone"!

Why can we not see the cause, the promised cause?

This, too, is easy! Israel had eyes but was blind. Israel had ears but could not hear. Israel was so stubborn that he would not listen to reason, even the reasonings of his God. As Israel was, so is Israel now; blind, deaf, stubborn. How wonderful! How the old characteristics show to-day, and in the same race, located in Britain largely.

15*th*.—Mr. Forbes says, and very properly, "All this seems to be the fulfilment of the prophecy of Daniel." To this I say Amen! But I include nearly all the prophets with Daniel —for most of them make it clear that Israel was to bless the nations and families of the earth.

And I further include the Lord Himself among the prophets, for He said Israel should do these things among the nations of the earth. "All this seems," etc. Sure! Why say "seems"? Why not say proves? Perhaps this word is too strong for you just yet! When you come along a little further you will naturally change "seems" and "might" into stronger words. You are just a wee bit canny. You must be Scotch, but you "seem" to be getting into the B.-I. harness and spirit.

16*th*.—Mr. Forbes gives a nicely prepared Table under the heading:—Jutish - Anglo - Saxon - Swedish - Norwegian - Danish-Norman-British-Israel.

Very good! No objection at this point! This Table shows some of our old-time ancestors, and now brothers. For years I have been, in common with many B.-I. teachers, stressing on the platform these very peoples as in a large measure our own kith and kin.

Since the above peoples have a common origin, and are of the covenant race, we might shorten Mr. Forbes' long name down to one little word of two syllables, and call them all British, covenant men. This name so applied would not hurt or insult them, and it would not hurt us in any way.

17*th*.—In a footnote, the author says, "We know nothing authentic of these our ancestors."

"We" is good. Who is, or who are this "We"? If the author means himself, I would say it would be a good idea to read a bit and then say, "We know something."

If he means other people by the word "We," I answer and say he is in error.

18*th*.—In his "Preface to the Second Edition," Mr. Forbes says:—"History is the whole foundation of the argument."

This says too much and is not a guarded statement from a man who believes in the Bible as a Divine revelation; and we are sure Mr. Forbes believes in this great Scriptural revelation as surely as we do.

The Scriptures affirm that the Lord would scatter Israel among all the nations of the earth. We are safe in saying the Lord made good, and, therefore, Israel was and is so scattered.

Does history to-day tell us where all Israel is located in all or any of these many countries? If history could so inform us, then we would need no argumentation, no search after these peoples, no pamphlets denying or affirming the existence and whereabouts of the seed-race of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

"History" is and has been silent to a large extent. Yet the Book says Israel is in all lands. Let Mr. Forbes produce the history that positively locates these people, and then we will be ready to trust this historic agency more fully than we now can.

INTERPRETATIONS OF SCRIPTURE.

19*th*.—Just as there are many interpreters of the Word, so there are many interpreters of history and historic facts.

Historians are as confused and uncertain as are the opposing theologians in their many and varied interpretations of difficult Bible statements.

Mr. Forbes reads history concerning the Angles, Jutes and Danes; and may conclude they are not, or are Israel. Another man reads about these people, and concludes otherwise.

Then who is final in authority? Mr. Forbes? Who? Would he dare say his interpretation of the facts or affirmed facts, is the correct one, and that all who differ from him are wrong?

Some good historians tell us the Goths were Scythians and others say no. Some good historians tell us the Sacae were Scyths and others say no. Some good historians say the Parthians were Sacae and others say no. Some good historians tell us that the Khumry were Sacae and were Israel and others say no. Does Mr. Forbes affirm that when he and I or some other British-Israelite differ, he alone is right? Surely his presumption and vanity are not so assertive as that.

Mr. Forbes might say that the Senones, Friesians and Brythons were not of Israel stock, while I might say they were. He and I have within reach the same historians to read and compare.

I presume he does not claim he has some secret sources of information which I have not. He would not say he is more able to read, compare and understand conflicting historic statements than I am, even if he does make some strong assertions, such as the following: "British-Israelites are not capable of argument." His words and those of Dr. Meyer are, "British-Israel is not capable of argument."

Of course, there is no sense in such a statement since "British-Israel" is not a person and therefore not able to argue, to read, or think, or to be wise or silly. By the words, "British-Israel" he means British-Israelites, though he does not manage to say so. To boil this down, he and Dr. Meyer affirm that I, the present writer, am not capable of argument. Let our readers decide.

I "might suggest" that vanity or insolence or both, perhaps unintentionally, run rampant in such statements concerning many thousands of good, honest, sane, patriotic Christian men and women.

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

20*th*.—"British-Israelism is patriotism intoxicated. Its devotees seem to think that Britain always has been and still is at the head of the world."

A few comments here will be helpful to Mr. Forbes. Here, again, he does not mean what he says. "British-Israelism . . . intoxicated." He might as well say geometry is "intoxicated." How would he go about intoxicating geometry? He might intoxicate a geometrician, himself, or even a British-Israelite, but he would have a great time intoxicating geometry or "British-Israelism."

THE KING ATTENDS THANKSGIVING SERVICE.

ST. PAUL'S REOPENED.

THE King and Queen, accompanied by the Prince of Wales and the Duke of York, attended the special Thanksgiving Service at St. Paul's Cathedral to commemorate the reopening of the Dome and the Choir. Their Majesties drove in semi-state from Buckingham Palace to St. Paul's and the progress of the Royal Procession was watched by many thousands of the general public. Our picture, on page 453, taken by a staff photographer of "The Times," shows the Royal procession driving down Ludgate Hill after the service, with Wren's stately pile, "the Mother Church of London," in the background.

THE CATHEDRAL OF ST. PAUL.

By A. R. H.

ONE finds inspiration is unexpected places. Extracts from a leading article in the Radio Times would have found their proper place in Week by Week for July 12th had the matter been noted in time. But the comments are too good to overlook, and it is better that they should appear late than not at all. Speaking of the ceremony at ST. PAUL'S, H. N. Brailsford writes: "What did WREN mean when he placed his DOME upon this massive rectangular structure, and repeated again and again throughout his building the which contrasts so subtly with his flat walls and straight columns?

"These things are the creatures of man's thought. Circles and rectangles are no gifts of Nature. They are mathematician's fancies. They are man's contribution to the earth, which, with all her prodigal colours and her fantastic forms, give us neither of these things in their defiant abstractness. The sunlight deepens the shadows on Wren's flat walls, and performs round dances on his circular surfaces.

"I find myself questioning the opinion which I have always held about it. 'A noble building,' I used to think, 'but hardly a great Church.' And I could have wished it had been designed rather as a capitol or senate-house, than as a cathedral.

"But one realizes how much of religion Wren's building does express. A CAPITOL it is, but why not of GOD'S KINGDOM ON EARTH?

Here reigns order and the power of thought. It is the CHURCH of a well-governed UNIVERSE, whose planets in their elliptical orbits are always subject to Kelper's Laws of Motion, one in which justice is even and sure and obedience has its reward.

"'A complacent religion do you say?' Certainly a

RELIGION OF OPTIMISM,

the faith of a buoyant and IMPERIAL PEOPLE, the

and ENGINEERS."

Concluding, the writer's imagination soars into the future state of Kingdom-development: "In this KINGDOM one perceives none of the ravages of war. CIVILIZATION is not an intruder. NATURE has indeed been subjugated, but she is not, as she is among us, the degraded victim of a ruthless conqueror. She wears no chains; she does not cringe, prostrate and begrime. Gracefully she kisses the toga of a clement victor, and one divines that before long a marriage will unite the pair."

A fitting description this of the British Kingdom-Empire's Cathedral Church and a testimony that will help to develop Kingdom-consciousness among the many readers who observe it.

It is a noteworthy sign of the times that writers on every hand, wittingly and unwittingly, are coming to see the details of the national life with a Kingdom-vision.

Anything that helps to bring the conception of a KINGDOM of GOD before the minds of the people—anything that tends to include that term in everyday vocabulary and thought—is all to the good.

It is encouraging to find the CHURCH of ENGLAND taking the name of the KINGDOM more and more upon its lips. All this is a step in the right direction. Thus the ARCHBISHOP of CANTERBURY: "Ours is a generation marked as none before by the EMANCIPATION OF YOUTH.

"In the excitement of freedom YOUTH is impatient of criticism and resentful of the claim of authority. But its eagerness, its frankness, its enthusiasm bring a breath of freshness and hope. Truly it needs guidance, but guidance must be based on understanding and sympathy.

"Let us stir up that spirit and endeavour to present to YOUTH of our time, in ways and words to which it can respond, the inexhaustible wonder of the GOSPEL, the age-long romance of the CHURCH of CHRIST, the joyous adventure of service and leadership of the

'YOUNG PRINCE OF GLORY'

in the KINGDOM of GOD."

YOUTH will rally to the proclamation of the EMPIRE GOSPEL* of the KINGDOM provided it be acclaimed aright. For this good news concerns the manifestation of a KING and KINGDOM animated by the spirit of GOD—the spirit of ETERNAL YOUTH.

YOUTH will gladly rally to the standard of a King Who is "everlasting" because filled with a self-renewing, inexhaustible life. YOUTH will willingly serve an "enduring" KINGDOM whose strength is renewed like the eagle's.

The EMPIRE GOSPEL of the KINGDOM is the Gospel of incurable optimists. It is a Gospel filled to overflowing with vitality and life. It embodies the faith of an IMPERIAL RACE, and proclaims like a trumpet call the majesty, might, dominion and power of the KING and of His earthly KINGDOM.

THE FULNESS OF THE GENTILES IN THE BRITISH COMMONWEALTH OF NATIONS.--VI.

BY DR. WADGE (WINNIPEG).

THIS report summed up in compact form the many measures which had been taken from time to time to place the great self-governing Dominions of the British Empire in a position of equal status with the Mother Country. It was adopted by the Conference as a whole, and has now virtually become the "Bill of Rights" or the Charter of the British Commonwealth of Nations within the British Empire.

That this new position of virtual independence of the Dominions under the one Crown has been accepted by the Mother Country is shown by the fact that Great Britain has appointed Commissioners to represent the British Government in these Dominions, thus leaving the Governors-General to represent His Majesty the King. The Dominions also have sent their High Commissioners to London to act as intermediaries between their own Governments and the British Government. Further, they have established separate embassies with foreign countries, Ireland having an Ambassador in the United States, and Canada Ambassadors in the United States, France and Japan. Thus equality of status has not only been established by agreement, but it has also been established by actual practice.

But in order to complete satisfactory arrangements in all phases of inter-Imperial relations, the Conference found it necessary to refer a number of details of law and legislation to a subsidiary Committee for further consideration during the interval before the next Conference. This Committee, known as the Constitutional Committee or "Conference on the Operations of Dominion Legislation and Merchant Shipping Legislation," completed its labours and issued its report last December (1929). In its report this Committee, which included representatives of Great Britain, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, the Irish Free State, and India, states:—"The present Conference have considered their task to be merely that of endeavouring to apply the principles laid down as directing their labours to the special cases where law or practice is still inconsistent with those principles. The recommendations submitted have been framed with the object of carrying into full effect the equality of status established as the root principle governing the relations of the members of the Commonwealth, and indicating methods for maintaining and strengthening the practical system of co-operation which is its instrument."

"These recommendations deal with legal anomalies, which have survived the days of Colonial subordination, involving the removal of existing and operative restrictions upon the self-governing rights of the Dominions. Among these recommendations are the following:—

1. That the Parliament of a Dominion be given full power to make laws having extra-territorial operations;
2. That the Colonial Laws Validity Act, 1865, shall cease to apply to any law made by the Parliament of a Dominion;
3. That hereafter no law made by a Dominion Parliament shall be void on the ground that it is repugnant to the law of England;
4. That no law passed by the Parliament of Great Britain shall hereafter extend to any Dominion except at its request;
5. That the Dominions shall have power to repeal the Imperial Acts with reference to admiralty courts and merchant shipping and may make its own laws and establish its own courts." (Manitoba Free Press, February 24th, 1930.)

Thus it is seen that the steps recommended by the Constitutional Committee are in absolute agreement with the action of the 1926 Conference, and that when these recommendations are put in force, they remove—or make possible the removal at the instance of the Dominion—every remaining vestige of overlordship by the British Government as advisers of the King, or by the British Parliament as the sovereign legislative body. And so the legislative body of each Dominion is sovereign for that Dominion, and thus the status of the Dominions is on a par with that of the Motherland.

We, in Canada, ought to be especially interested in this question. Our country has been the laboratory or experimental station in which the citizens, both British-born and native-born, and the representatives of the British Government, sometimes in harmony and sometimes in the utmost opposition to each other, have tried, tested, worked out, or put in practice the major portion of the progressive developments of self-government by the people who, from year to year for over three centuries, have emigrated from the British Isles to establish homes and daughter communities in various uncivilized parts of the world. The form of self-government worked out in Canada has been the model for the forms of government which have been developed in other British Dominions with variations suitable to the different conditions of each. "The agreement (December 6th, 1921) between Great Britain and Ireland, that was subsequently ratified by Imperial Statute, provides that the Irish Free State shall have the same constitutional status as the Dominions and that its position in relation to the Imperial Parliament and Government shall be that of the Dominion of Canada." (Sir R. L. Borden.)

WEEK BY WEEK.

BY A. R. H.

Last week we re-told the story of Rajah Brooke of Sarawak. Rajah Brooke was one of God's Englishmen and his method of conquest, although entirely individualistic in conception, was similar to the process of expansion practised by the Kingdom.

To begin with, Brooke had to meet force with force. But that was only in order to gain strength and authority to establish justice. Justice established, he won the friendship of his enemies. Not until the proverb "The son of England is the friend of the Dyak" had caught hold of the enemy consciousness could Brooke claim to have conquered permanently. Brooke's conquest was a conquest of hearts.

Digitized by Google

This method is invincible in spite of its paradoxical nature. It is specifically a product of English genius. As such it is inexplicable to other nations, even when they grudgingly admit its efficacy. And more often than not it is a matter of wonder to our own people themselves.

Kitchener, saviour of Egypt, smote Egypt with the sword and saved her. His wonder at the process was expressed in some such words: "We smite them terribly and then we send their children to school."

We English act automatically according to the dictates of subconscious inspiration. But when we try to analyse our motives we are apt to feel as puzzled as are the people of other nations when trying to account for the results of our quixotic actions.

Nevertheless, the greatness of our achievement and the wonder of it is enhanced as a result of our "blind" unquestioning loyalty to the Divine promptings from within.

If God has given us the power to conquer others by the process of "occupying" their hearts, it is only because we have first opened up our hearts to Him. As the invasion by the new spirit of the new covenant of the heart and mind of God's People continues, so shall the conquest of the Kingdom amongst the other nations proceed.

The progress of the Kingdom-Empire of God in the world is not like the progress of other empires. Its strength does not lie in external bands of physical force but in internal bonds of spiritual power. It does not rely upon force from without but power from within.

A World-Empire based upon the ideal of a voluntary association of free peoples is an Empire which every nation under heaven can freely join. This is a Kingdom-Empire based not upon Force but on Love. Its conquest of the world's peoples will follow the new law of conquest—the occupation of the heart and mind of the adversary.

That is why the Empire Gospel of the Kingdom is so important. For in exact proportion as God occupies the hearts of His Brith-ish People will His People find power to occupy the hearts of other peoples.

When the whole Empire enthrones God in its heart as King, then the Kingdom will have come indeed, and the winning of the whole world for Christ and His Kingdom be within accomplishment.

This week we shall use the testimony of a German lady to illustrate one small phase of this universal conquest which took place as a result of the Great War.

A week or two ago the Daily Herald published a critical review of the pamphlet issued by the Covenant Publishing Company, entitled "Disarmament: A Divine Condemnation."*

One point particularly aroused the Gadfly's† ire, viz., the author's contention that the injunction "love your enemies" means "try to make them your friends," and that a Nation may be forced to fight in order to make friendship possible.

But who can deny that this conception is in harmony with the spirit of Paul's counsel: "If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men,"‡ an injunction not to be confused, however, with the doctrine of peace at any price so popular to-day.

Perhaps the testimony of our German lady will help to convert the Daily Herald's Gadfly of his strange notions. Writing for the Daily Express, Erna V. Prittwitz says: "The BRITISH ARMY marched into GERMANY to begin 'occupation' in December, 1918. That was eleven years ago.

"When I read in an English Newspaper, 'The evacuation of the Rhineland is to begin at once. The whole of the will have returned to ENGLAND by CHRISTMAS,' I waited for the sensation of joy and relief I ought to feel; that my die-hard friends will feel.

"But I fail: I do not experience that sensation. I immediately begin to analyze my feelings. I discover that I feel dismay. Yes—dismay . . . . . .

"I think of the men dressed in khaki; the men of our late enemy, the British Tommy. This 'Tommi' has won his way into our hearts. We know him now. He is no longer an unknown being; a being to be feared.

"We can laugh when our countrymen from the East or South, who have not known the man of the Army of Occupation every day, as we have known him, tell us about his haughtiness, superiority, stupidity, lack of culture, overweening pride, arrogance and his English spleen.

"We admire his

his constant cheerfulness and readiness to make friends. His sense of fair-play we also know. It is one of the things he has taught us.

"We know that he is a good soldier, is smart, and knows what discipline is. In all these things he was said to be lacking. His occupation of our country has been of the mind as well as of the body.

"Eleven years ago I was a child of eleven. I saw, for the first time, coming down the street of the little town on the Rhine where I lived, a detachment of British troops. I was with my governess, and her face grew red with anger. She pressed her lips together. And I was terribly frightened. My heart beat and the pulses in my throat beat. I can recall the sensation now. I stared with round and terrified eyes at those men in khaki, of whom I heard terrible tales. I was terrified.

"Those round tin hats were as terrible to me as the 'Pickelhaube' of the Prussian soldiers had been to the women of France. My legs trembled. I clung to the hand of my 'Fraulein.' The men came nearer.

"I saw the officer who led them—I can see him still, a tall, pink-faced young Englishmen with blue eyes; not unlike my own brother Hans. That likeness astounded me. Then? I met those blue eyes, and there was a friendly twinkle in them. I looked at the men behind. They, too, had the sort of faces I knew. I was astounded.

"My governess led me away. She was talking, talking of 'wiping the English off the face of the earth,' of 'Revenge.' I did not listen. Something had been born in me, something that grew and grew. 'Why should we fight those men?' I thought. Then I felt ashamed. I ought to be angry, but I was not. Was I unpatriotic? I decided to ask Hans, who had been on the Western Front.

"Hans took me away into the garden. 'Erna,' he said, 'I am going to speak to you. You are too young to understand—yet; older people don't understand either.

"'Those men, those English Tommies, are

THE BEGINNING OF PEACE.

The English are just. They have fair-play. This is the beginning of peaceful penetration; the penetration of people's hearts. The population will make friends.'

"A dreamy look came into Hans' eyes. He is a poet as well as a soldier. 'You are too young to understand, Erna,' he said, 'but you can do one little thing to help. You can swear to me that you will never say one single word against the English who are here. Will you do that?'

"I stared at him. Then I grew very red. I put out my hand. I was very proud that Hans had spoken to me. I promised.

"And I never spoke one word against the Tommies. And slowly those khaki men won us. And now many hearts will be sad because of the evacuation. Those khaki men had made a place for themselves in our hearts and the will go on, even though the country is evacuated."

This wonderful testimony surely confirms the wisdom of the RHINELAND OCCUPATION. And it reopens the larger questions as to whether occupation should not have penetrated deeper—even to BERLIN. Would not the heart of GERMANY have been won for friendship? If we had "smitten" not once but "seven" times—if we had occupied not a fringe of the country but the heart of the country—might not the whole nation have been healed and influenced permanently in the cause of peace?

Let no man in future question the peaceful influence of the BRITISH ARMY. If BRITAIN is ISRAEL, then the BRITISH ARMIES are the ARMIES OF THE LIVING GOD.*

And GOD is a GOD of PEACE. Therein lies the secret of the influence of His armies and their usefulness in maintaining the pax Britannica throughout the WORLD.

When Dibelius† writes: "The English State vests upon two specifically English assumptions — common sense, and the transformation of the antagonist into a privileged colleague," he shows that he has caught a glimpse of the secret of Britain's greatness. For it is a special and peculiar mission of the KINGDOM in the earth to weld the peoples into one great friendly society. And who could be better chosen for this task than the PEOPLE who as Anglo-Saxon seed of ABRAHAM can rightly claim the title "Friends of GOD"?‡ We must be friends of GOD before we can become friends of man. We must seek the forgiveness of GOD before we can expect the forgiveness of others. Nationally, we must accept GOD as KING in our heart before we can expect to permanently conquer the hearts of other nations.

* 1 Sam. xvii, 26.
† Herr Dibelius, Professor of English in the University of Berlin.
‡ Isa. xli, 8.

The process of conquest is slow at present. But when the whole EMPIRE is won for CHRIST through the proclamation of the KINGDOM GOSPEL§ the consummation will be greatly hastened.

In the meantime the protection of the KINGDOM from external aggression is a matter of vital importance. How else can she survive to accomplish her chosen work? We can be peaceful-loving without being pacifists. We can obey the Orders for our military organization as set forth in the BOOK of NUMBERS and still remain loyal to the spirit of the prayer‖:

"GOD bless our native LAND,
May His protecting hand
Still guard our shore;
May peace her power extend,
Foe be transformed to friend,
And BRITAIN'S rights depend
On war no more.

Nor on this LAND alone,
But be GOD'S mercies known
From shore to shore;
And may the nations see
That men should brothers be
And form ONE FAMILY
The wide WORLD o'er."

EVOLUTIONISM EXAMINED—I.

THE "MISSING LINK."

BY C. BROOKE.

"Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ." (Col. ii, 8.)

Science has played a very considerable part in the history of mankind, but evolutionism is a philosophy rather than a science, or "facts reduced to a system." It is "science falsely so-called" as the Scriptures declare it to be. Scientists demand facts to establish laws, but evolutionists establish laws to prove facts. The argument from embryology is an excellent instance of this, for, being a deduction from evolutionism, it is now used as one of the principal arguments in support of the theory.

Evolutionary research is frequently characterized, not only by great stretches of the imagination, but also by fraud. Many years ago Haeckel was accused by one of our leading men of science of forging evidence in support of the evolutionary theory. He gave a written confession in which he stated that he "should feel utterly condemned and annihilated by the admission were it not that hundreds of the best observers and most reputable biologists lie under the same charge. The great majority of all morphological, histological and embryological diagrams are not true to nature, but are more or less doctored, schematized, and reconstructed." Modern evolutionists have not benefited by this disclosure, as we shall see.

Haeckel portrayed the fœtuses of a dog, a chicken, and a mole with a single plate labelled in three different ways. "For decades," de Cyon says, "this mountebank has imposed on the international public as a king in the world of thought."

Haeckel's works were absorbed by the leaders and rank and file of the evolutionary movement, until Professor Semper revealed the imposture. The circulation of a large quantity of Haeckel's books in a cheap form among the working-classes of this country is responsible for much modern infidelity.

In 1922, Mr. Carl Akerly, the taxidermist of the New York Museum, produced photographs of various anatomical parts of a gorilla which had recently been killed in Africa. In these photographs the position of the hallux of the gorilla and of man showed an extraordinary resemblance, so the evolutionists proclaimed the discovery of the "missing link" with a flourish of trumpets. As a fact, the "missing links" should be more plentiful than the species which they are supposed to connect, but this is a line of thought which we cannot pursue here and now.

Two years later Sir E. Ray Lankester gave conclusive proof that these photographs were entirely unreliable. The gorilla has a large toe in the hind foot which is separate from the other toes. In Mr. Akerly's photographs the great toe was almost parallel with the other toes.

Sir E. Ray Lankester, in exposing the counterfeit work, says: "I wish to record my opinion that the actual gorilla's foot from which Mr. Akerly's cast was taken was distorted by post-mortem changes, and by pressure tending to bring the hallux alongside of and parallel with the other toes, as in man, instead of allowing it to diverge widely from them as it does when not artificially constrained." Sir E. Ray Lancaster was an evolutionist.

So far, good. This should be sufficient proof that not only are there no authenticated "links," but that the supposed "links" have been manufactured. Similar cases might be multiplied.

Haeckel discovered a "missing link" in Java in 1891, and gave it the imposing name of pithecanthropus erectus. This consisted of a tooth, a skull (three feet away) and a thigh bone (forty-five feet away!). These remains evoked much discussion in Germany, and three contradictory opinions were advanced on the meagre evidence. Pithecanthropus is generally regarded as the "missing link," yet it is not certain whether it is late Pliocene or Pleistocene, and it is even doubtful whether all the remains belong to the same individual. Wasmann says: "It is nothing short of an outrage upon truth to represent scanty remains, the origin of which is so uncertain as that of the Pithecanthropus, as absolute proof of the descent of man from beasts in order to deceive the general public."

The Piltdown skull was then discovered. Here, again, there was a marked absence of scientific method. Sir Arthur Keith, an evolutionist, says: "I soon saw that parts of the reconstructed Piltdown skull had been opposed in a manner that was in open defiance of all that was known of skulls ancient and modern. I found that the brain chamber, instead of measuring 1,070 c.c., as in Dr. Smith Woodward's reconstruction, measured 1,500 c.c.—a large brain chamber for even modern man."

Speaking of the Cromagnon skulls, which belonged, Professor Macnamara considered, to the finest human race yet known, Sir Arthur Keith said: "We have come across in these large heads a puzzling and unexpected fact. Men of a former geological epoch outstrip their successors to-day with the biggest brains."

Is this an unconscious admission of defeat? Have our friends the modern critics considered where they will be when evolutionism meets its Waterloo?

There is silence in evolutionary circles with regard to the remains found in the Oldoway Valley in East Africa, since these practically dispel the evolutionary dream. "They contain," says Professor Graebner, "lamentably few primitive characteristics and have therefore not been exploited in favour of the evolutionary theory. A fragment of a skull, a tooth, a thigh-bone, offer much more inviting fields to the evolutionists."

As for Neanderthal men, Marett says: "Some specimens of Neanderthal man, in sheer size of the brain cavity are said to give points to many of our modern poets and politicians."

The brain cavity must not be confused with the size of the skull, which is the evolutionist's favourite guide. The largest skull on record belonged to a savage. Dr. Marett is speaking of the brain cavity.

Dr. Wright says: "Upon extending enquiries, it was found that the Neanderthal type of skull is one which still has representatives in all nations; so that it is unsafe to infer that the individual was a representative of all the individuals living in his time. The skull of Bruce, the celebrated Scottish hero, was a close reproduction of the Neanderthal type, while, according to Quatrefrages, the skull of the Bishop of Toul in the fourth century even exaggerated some of the most striking features of the Neanderthal cranium. The forehead is still more receding, the vault more depressed." Surely it may be inferred from this that no evolutionist possesses sufficient knowledge as yet to establish a case which would be accepted in a court of law, yet Dr. Fosdick, speaking of modernism, which is the direct outcome of evolutionism, and must stand or fall by it, says: "The scholarship of the world is on the side of the rationalist." It is sufficient to name Sir William Dawson, Lord Kelvin, Professor Dana, Professor Virchow, and others who have gained a world-wide reputation, and whom not to know is to profess oneself unknown, to show that the traditional view is not so obsolete as Dr. Fosdick and the men of his school would lead us to suppose.

In 1924 Dr. Osborn found in Nebraska an imperfect molar tooth, "which casts more light on the origin of the human race than anything ever before discovered." The tooth was declared to belong to one of the "links" between man and the Simian stock. It was named Hesperopithecus. Dr. Smith Woodward then diagnosed that it was without doubt the tooth of a pliocene bear! It has since been decided that it was not even the tooth of a pliocene bear, but of a peccary known as Prosthenops, and quite a common species. How are the mighty fallen!

The claim that evolutionists make, that they can reconstruct the body of some highly problematical creature from the chance finding of a single tooth, is as sound a proposition as would be the claim of some architect centuries hence that he could reconstruct a Gothic Cathedral from the abacus of one of its pillars. It is only by degrees that one becomes accustomed to the amazingly crude and immature conclusions arrived at by evolutionists in their efforts to bridge the enormous gulf between man and the ape. We await with interest the next "settled result" of his theory which is now considered "by all people of discernment" to be "as general y accepted as Newton's theory of gravitation." One must travel behind the scenes before fully realizing the falsity of such a proposition. Evolutionism is a light that failed.

Even Professor Haeckel, who forged evidence in support of evolutionism, has to admit that "Most modern investigators have come to the conclusion that the doctrine of Evolution and particularly Darwinism is an error which cannot be maintained." Yet in the schools of this country and in the books on the German "higher criticism" of the Bible ("sacred criticism" as it is now called) this unproven theory is treated as a presupposition.

To surmount the difficulties resulting from the complete absence of any intermediate links, evolutionists have employed words of assumption, which are abhorrent to all true scientists and all who possess logical minds. The words "we may well suppose" occur more than 800 times in Darwin's Origin of Species. That should at once stamp the theory as suspect in the eyes of all scientific people who demand facts before drawing any conclusions.

The materialist Tyndall, Darwin's intimate friend, who tried for many years to accept evolutionism, surrendered after a hard struggle and said: "There ought to be a clear distinction made between science in the state of hypothesis and science in the state of fact. And inasmuch as it is still in its hypothetical stage, the ban of exclusion ought to fall upon the theory of Evolution. I agree with Virchow that the proofs of it are still wanting, that the failures have been lamentable, that his doctrine is utterly discredited."

Reader, you must choose between the opinion of these unbiased scientists, and the opinions of modern theologians who will accept any "scientific" theory which accords with their views and who state that "Orthodox Christianity is the foe of science, education, and knowledge of modern culture."

One of the foremost evolutionists admits that the "assured results" of the "camp-followers of science" ("higher critics" and modernists) are sheer guess work. "In regard to the genealogical tree of organisms as a whole, we can only make guesses, many of which are probable, but are never quite certain" (our italics).

That being so, would it not be better to accept the testimony of the "only wise God our SAVIOUR" for by Him (Christ) were all things created that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones or dominions, or principalities, or powers; all things were CREATED BY HIM, and He is before all things and by Him all things consist (Col. i, 16).

"AFRICA'S DOME OF MYSTERY."*

THE FIRST DESCRIPTIVE HISTORY OF THE WACHAGGA PEOPLE OF KILIMANJARO, THEIR EVANGELIZATION, AND A GIRL'S PIONEER CLIMB TO THE CRATER OF THEIR 19,000-FT. SNOW SHRINE.

BY EVA STUART-WATT, F.R.G.S.

(Member of the Botanical Society of Edinburgh).

Rear-Admiral Sir H. H. Stileman, K.B.E., who was in command of the Port of Liverpool, 1914-1919, in his preface to Miss Eva Stuart-Watt's enthralling and inspiring book, says: "Forty years have passed since I was serving in one of Her Majesty's sloops of war in the East Coast of Africa for the suppression of the slave trade." After drawing the contrast between German and British rule in that part of the Dark Continent, the Admiral proceeds: Africa's Dome of Mystery has awakened memories and rekindled interest in that extraordinarily fascinating portion of the globe, now wholly entrusted to Britain's care. Miss Stuart-Watt has pain'ed a picture that is bound to make a deep impression on those who peruse its pages. She was brought up in East Africa and loves the land of her childhood with a deep sincerity.

Part I. of the book opens up a vista into the dim and distant past when the slopes of Kilimanjaro first resounded to the cries of refugees or nomadic tribes who, from some impelling pressure, had settled on its sheltering flanks.

The development of the warrior races, the dramatic succession of chieftains and conquerors passing across the stage, makes a thrilling story.

"There are glimpses, too, of the heathen heart feeling after God, re-echoing the cry of Job, 'Oh, that I knew where I might find him.'"

In Part II. the authoress gives, from her own experience and observation, a vivid description of mountains and plains, of tropical foliage and waterless, barren scrub land which is most telling, culminating in her account of the ascent to the 19,000-ft. crater of Kibo."

"Dangers, too, grave dangers, menace the well-being of a child-race, in the spheres of politics and religion."

Sir Harry concludes: "The world's store of missionary literature will be richer for this work from Miss Stuart-Watt's pen, written, as it is, with an intimate knowledge of that fascinating and mysterious portion of the Dark Continent."

The authoress writes in a graphic and attractive literary style, which adds greatly to the interest and value of her story.

This, for example, from her introduction:—"Out of the shimmering haze of the vast plateau land of Equatorial Africa loom in the hazy distance several mountain crests, and high above, the dome of Kilimanjaro, monarch of them all. To the north, across the Kapiti plains, rises Mount Kenya, also perennially snow-capped. . . . . From east to west on the southern flank of Kilimanjaro, a remarkable tribe, now known as Wachagga, have grown up, who, without any written documents, have preserved in astonishing detail their ancestral records of genealogical descent. They claim kinship with the Wataita, Wakamba, Wagweno, and the Nilotic Masai, each of whom have in turn invaded the fortresses of the mountain and settled there."

Now, perhaps it is just worth mentioning at this point in connection with the Nilotic Masai, that Bruce Hannay, in his "European and other Race Origins" (now, unfortunately, out of print), page 168, asks: "Who, then, were the Mas-Sagelai? It seems to me that their very name—Sagelai, or Wanderers of Mas—reveals their origin and identity. I suggest that Mas was nothing but the Mizric word Mas, or Massu, Mes, or Messou, signifying 'Child' and appearing also in Masr, Mazr, or Mazor, Misrayim, and the so-called dual form Mizraïm, Mesraïm, or Mesraïn—the name of the original, fair, ruddy, black or red-haired regular-featured, straight-profiled inhabitants of the Nile valley, whom, as Ezekiel predicted, Nebuchadnezzar was to have overthrown and deported, and who were eventually to find themselves cast into the wilderness, scattered amongst the nations and dispersed throughout the countries of the earth."

Comparing the photographs of the Wachagga in Miss Stuart-Watt's book with Hannay's description of the Nilotic wanderers of Mas, there does not seem to be much to support their claim to be descended from the Nilotic Masai.

But there are references in this book to curious tribal memories of a remote past for which it would be interesting to find the explanation. Here is an extract from Chapter IV. which makes one wonder, assuming that it represents genuine tribal memory, and not the native version of Bible stories told by the earlier missionaries in East Africa: Rebmann, Krapf, the Rev. Charles New (United Methodist Free Church Missionary and Explorer), all three being mentioned by Miss Stuart-Watt in her Introductory Chapter, pp. 14 and 15.

If, as we have said, the following remarkable story of the Fall of Man (page 79), and other similar stories, represent genuine tribal memories, the explanation of how they became known to this ancient tribe, now located in East Africa, suggests a deeply interesting enquiry into the origin and history of the race.

THE FALL OF MAN.

"Not only in the stamp of Chagga faces and their religious rites has God left the mark of His finger, but in some of their myths they have preserved faint reminiscences of the Bible record of the fall of man and the story of the first murder. Around the fire at night, before the children go to sleep, their father will tell them a story, often the same one again and again:—

"God used to talk with man face to face. 'You may eat all the bananas and potatoes,' He said to the old man of the village, 'but the yam or ula surely you shall not eat it, lest you die.' Then God left the people and went away, but every evening He came back to see them. Now, on a certain day, a strange man appeared at the old man's door, and begged for food. He was directed to the garden with the words, 'Eat and be satisfied, take bananas from the bunch, or potatoes from the earth, but do not touch the ula, for God has forbidden us to eat it.' The stranger deceives 'the old man,' and 'together they dug up the yams and cooked them, and began to eat.' God's servant came hastily, saying, 'What are you eating?' But they could not answer, so benumbed were they with fear. So the servant took the pot and showed it to God Who was very angry. He found them in the garden, and said, 'Because you were deceived by a stranger and disobeyed My word, death will break your bones and close your eyes, and you shall not live.' Since then they have never seen Him, nor has He spoken to them any more, but people began to get weak and ill, and their eyes closed in death."

The story of the first murder and other records found in the Old Testament Scriptures also find their place in the oral traditions of this remarkable race.

Prophecy.

"As Kilimanjaro was allowed to catch soft whisperings of the past, which she repeated to her children in folk-lore, so it seems she was permitted to hear, however faintly, hints of prophecy and prepare her sons for future events. In Rombo there was an elder named Makaiya, who, when dying, called his children and told them this dream:

"'From Kishongeni there came white men holding fire in their hands. They defeated us and broke the swords of the Wamkulia (N. Rombo). They united all men under one great ruler, like unto Horombo, and through our land they made a broad road.'"

Now, a people with records and gifts such as these might well appeal even to a less gifted, courageous and romantic young woman than Eva Stuart-Watt, and we can thoroughly understand her when she writes:

"Africa has always had a special charm for me. I was nursed upon her bosom from my infancy, not far from Nairobi. I loved her expansive wastes, her strange romantic hills, her portentous days and weird, dark nights, and not least her dusky people."

In her book she discloses to us some of the unread secrets of the land she loves, and to which, and to us, she has done so great a service in giving us this record. "The white mind," she says, "takes so long to 'think black.'" Happily, our authoress can not only "think black," but she can think white, and can translate for us the irresistible appeal of her beloved East Africa.

And now it is for us, sons and daughters of Israel-Britain, not indeed to "think black," but to think back. Who are these people? Whence come they?

May I close with a little personal note? I, too, love East Africa. I have never been there, but Charles New was my friend when I was ten years old. I want to thank her for giving him honourable mention. I first heard of Kilimanjaro from him, about 1870!

And, another link with East Africa. I heard Robert Moffatt in Roby Chapel, Manchester, about 1881, when, pointing to a pew over the clock in the gallery, he told us—the great, venerable man—how, sitting in that pew, he received the call to Missionary work.

You know (or do you, in this generation?) that he was the father-in-law of David Livingstone, the great African explorer, whose grave is in Westminster Abbey. Dr. Moffatt's text on that occasion represents, we may be sure, the feeling of Eva Stuart-Watt, his splendid young country-woman. It was this :—

"For I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ ; for it is the power of God unto salvation."—Romans i, 16.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

BY THE REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A.

QUESTION.—As a subscriber to your paper, I should be glad if you will kindly explain to me a difficulty regarding the meaning of Isai. xlix, 6, where we read, "Give thee for a light to the Gentiles, that thou mayest be my salvation, etc." This seems clearly to refer to Christ (cf. also Luke ii, 32). If this be so, surely verse 8 also must refer to Christ and not to Israel. Therefore, it seems that the mandate "to establish, etc.," is not given to Israel? I should be much obliged to have your views thereon.—G. H. W.

ANSWER.—There is no real difficulty in the above passages. The prophet is dealing with the Servant of the Lord, who is to be identified with Israel redeemed. The scheme of Israel's redemption is unfolded in order to establish the reign of Christ, the salvation of the world, and the glory of God. It is impossible to interpret the outlook of prophecy except through the channel of Israel's redemption, and that is why the Prophets are so full of the latter. In their visions they see beyond themselves, beyond the narrow limitations of the Temple, beyond the ecclesiastical dogmas of their own day ; they see right into the (distant) future, even into that period when through Christ coming to redeem His people, the latter are to be the means of the world's salvation, "to establish the earth, to cause to inherit the desolate heritages."

Hence it will be apparent that Christ and Israel are very closely identified the one with the other. Israel was born "by promise," and Christ was born of the Holy Ghost. Israel went down into Egypt, and "out of Egypt have I called My Son." Israel suffered unto death, and Christ was obedient "even unto death." Israel was "for a small moment . . . forsaken" (Isai. liv, 7), and even Christ on the Cross cried out, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Then as Christ rose from the dead, so did Israel through the redemption rise again into the newness of life, and into the inheritance of the eternal covenant. Hence it will be seen in many ways that Christ and His people are very closely identified together. This suggests that there are passages in the Bible whose personal application may be interchangeable between Christ and Israel. Further than this, Israel redeemed is "in Christ," and without Him they have no life or power. As Christ was (is) the Divine Son, the Divine Servant, so Israel "in Christ" becomes the servant of the Lord, a suffering servant, but a conquering and victorious one. To Israel in Christ is given the mandate to carry God's "salvation unto the end of the earth," through the preaching of the Gospel of the Kingdom.

So when the aged Simeon saw the Divine Babe in the arms of His mother, he knew that prophecy was then and there being fulfilled, that Christ was going to be "a light to lighten the Gentiles," and that He was actually and verily the glory of His people Israel, whose redemption He had come to accomplish, and whose anticipated consolation He was then fulfilling.

A MILLION.

BY W. S.

THESE are the days of big things. Big cars, big engines, big ships, big business, big organisations, with MILLIONS OF POUNDS capital. We could go on indefinitely and so could you, mentioning instance after instance.

After all, do we realize what a million is? I doubt it! People talk and write very glibly about millions of this or that, most of the time without any idea of the magnitude of the number.

In this year of grace there are 365 days—just as in all the other years that have gone, but even so not yet have a million days gone by since the dawn of this era. Impossible, you say, Well, reckon it out, and you will find that since the beginning of A.D. 1 nothing like a million days have gone. Not one million, leave alone millions.

Now, then, we have about half-a-million pieces of printed matter on our shelves, each telling in part the story of British-Israel Truth—only half-a-million.

It is estimated that there are some nine million homes in the British Isles, so our stock is only sufficient to place about one piece in every eighteen homes in the country. Then, reckoning five people to a home, we can only supply one in ninety of the population from our present stock.

Knowing the need, the urgent need, for the Nation to know the Truth of the Bible, will you not help place these half million pieces of literature where they will do their work and supply the means to do still more?

How can the Federation do the work it has set out to do unless the means are provided?

Share the Secretary-General's burden and relieve him of some of the load he is carrying, thus making it easier for him to raise the necessary money to carry on and reach more and more of the millions upon millions of people who want to know Bible Truth. "Bear ye one another's burdens" and so fulfil the law of Christ. Please send a donation now—to-day—to :—

There has been a good deal of criticism lately of the British Broadcasting Corporation, and not without reason. It is useless to expect that everyone can be satisfied with everything that is sent out over the wireless, but is it too much to expect that good taste, sound judgment and consistency should be shown by those in authority? We are not thinking so much of the silly rubbish which we can fortunately shut off, refusing to waste precious time by listening to it. Nor are we thinking only of the facilities given to a foreign system of religion. We are thinking more especially at the moment of the opportunity given to a Canon of our Established Church to broadcast a subtle form of so-called modernism, in reality an attempt to undermine the integrity, authority and reliability of Holy Writ by philosophical speculations and sophistries. This has been going on for the past ten Sundays. On Sunday last the subject was Jonah. The speaker declared the Book of Jonah to be an allegory only; no historyi n it. Referring to Matthew xii, 40, he had the audacity to suggest that the Evangelist interpolated this passage, that in fact this verse was not a part of our Lord's answer to the Scribes and Pharisees; to such lengths will destructive critics go! On behalf of thousands who have wireless sets we protest that we do not subscribe to have such pernicious teaching broadcasted, and we hope that our readers will write their protest to the B.B.C. as we most certainly shall. Further, the same speaker said that "the Jews tried to make out that they were the chosen people of God" (he meant Israelites when he used the term Jews, of course), thus making the Word of God of none effect and ignoring such passages as 1 Chronicles xvi, 13, which presumably he would say were not inspired. Is it not such teaching as this that is helping to empty our churches? If people decline to go to church to hear such teaching, are they to be pursued in their own homes by the agency of the B.B.C. and compelled to hear it unless they shut down the instrument?

The Broadcasting Authorities in this country refuse to allow certain organizations to broadcast because they say they cannot admit controversy. Is not the above controversial? Surely. Is it innocence or is it favouritism that explains their admission of it? Will they ask some orthodox preacher to present the other side? We shall see. We strongly suspect that it was our Manifesto in the public Press that drew forth some of the statements which are in total opposition to the whole trend thereof. Had this occurred in Canada or in U.S.A. the author would have been asked whether he wished to reply. Then why not in so-called free England? But are the B.B.C. people fair anyway? Why did they allow a certain man to say that there was no persecution of Religion in Russia, when there is overwhelming evidence to the contrary? Again, why did they decline to broadcast speeches at the International Mass Meeting at the Royal Albert Hall on Monday last under the auspices of the Christian Protest Movement?

The simple truth is that there is good ground for grave suspicion, and it is high time that an enquiry should be insisted on. The present position is intolerable.

The Rev. E. A. Couldrey reports splendid meetings on his tour in the South of England.

The meetings were extremely encouraging and splendidly attended. On Monday afternoon, at the Hall in Edinburgh Road, Mr. Couldrey spoke upon "Who were the British?" to an audience of about 200. At night, the meeting would have been a credit to any city organization—the large hall being comfortably filled—to listen to an intensely interesting lecture upon "Give us England and the World is Ours!"

The meetings on Tuesday were held in Southsea, and the gatherings for the time of year augur well for the future of the work in the district.

Southampton can always be depended upon to furnish good audiences, and the hall was well filled at both lectures, and those who came for the first time have given in their names to the local Secretary, so that at the commencement of the new session they may be notified of the meetings.

New members were also enrolled, and the Committees of these Branches are to be congratulated on the strength of their membership, showing their interest in the work, and their loyalty to the Federation and their splendid Commissioner, Mr. J. J. Morey.

Orange Street Congregational Church, Leicester Square, had the services of the Rev. E. A. Couldrey on Sunday, July 13th.

At each meeting he spoke upon British-Israel topics, by request ; and he is to preside there again on July 20th and 27th, at 11 and 6.30.

Mr. J. J. Morey is just bringing to a close a very busy and successful season in the Southern Area. Since last Congress he has delivered about 300 public lectures, and the interest has been well maintained throughout.

It was very gratifying to find at Folkestone, Croydon, Plumstead and other places good audiences in July.

The season closes with a note of gratitude to God for much blessing vouchsafed to the Area, and with great expectation for the new session, for which detailed preparation is now in progress.

Mr. Wm. Whitton has conducted a series of meetings for our Branch at Hull, of which Colonel Hall, J.P., D.L., is President ; he also preached twice on Sunday.

Our Manifesto appeared in the Daily Herald, the official paper of the Labour Party, on July 3rd, and enquiries from its readers are coming in every day. It appeared in the weekly edition of the Times on July 10th ; this paper has a very large circulation in the Overseas Dominions. To-day, through the generosity of a Life Member of the Federation, it is to appear in the Grantham Journal.

W. H. S. writes :—" In consequence of having read the Manifesto in the Press a few weeks ago, I became a subscriber to THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, with the result that I am now very deeply interested in the work of the Federation, and anxious to help it."

Writing of his meetings and experiences across Canada and the United States, the Rev. Dr. Goard says :—

" First, at Montreal, we met the friends of that Branch. Mr. Calder, the genial Secretary, took charge of us, and we had two very good meetings in the pleasant hall used by our Branch there. The group which forms our Branch at that point is of the usual intelligent and enthusiastic order. It is a pleasure to be amongst them and to see the keenness and the well-balanced information and scholarship with which the great Truth of British-Israel is approached. In fact one or two of the scholars of the group set a pace which it is hard to keep up with in some directions. Withal, there is the deep undertone of spirituality and loyalty to God which marks the work wherever we go.

In Toronto we were met by the Vice-President of Canada, Mr. S. J. Frame. On the Saturday we had the great privilege of attending the Ontario Annual Conference of the Federation. We were both struck and pleased at the way in which the business of the Federation in Ontario was taken up and handled by the officers and delegates of the Conference. It should be remembered by the readers who are overseas from Canada that the great Province of Ontario is about as big as one of the ancient historic Empires. It is several times the size of the Motherland. So it will be seen that the Provincial Conference has on hand a concern of some magnitude.

On the Monday evening we had the pleasure of addressing a very good and very responsive audience in the Carleton Street United Church. It is a Church with a history, and one with which we were well acquainted many years ago.

There seemed to be memories of triumphs of the past, for 'there were giants in those days,' and there was the same familiar 'atmosphere' which invariably speaks the presence and manifestation of the Spirit of God in the meeting we were privileged to enjoy together.

The delegates had a story to tell and a spirit to carry from the annual gathering. The fires will be caused to burn more brightly in the Branches by the return of the delegates from the Convention. The whole tone of the Convention was that of determination that the year now being entered upon should be one of Forward Movement all along the line.

After the evening meeting in Toronto we went to bed on the C.P.R. train at midnight, and in the morning found ourselves at the American border. There the usual border officials came on board the train and courteously assured themselves that we had no dutiable articles to declare, and that we were suitably provided with authority to cross the border into the United States.

Let our friends in Britain remember that we Canadians have to attend to this function in crossing into the U.S.A. as they have when they go from Britain to that country via the U.S.A. ports of entry. Then they will perhaps understand more clearly that there is a distinction, but not necessarily a great difference, between an American and a Canadian. We are proud to be the latter of course. We should be proud to be the former if we lived south of the U.S.A. border-line.

How like this national division is to what the national division of Israel and Judah was in the days of the two Palestinian kingdoms. How hard it is for some to realize that Americans are not Canadians, and that Canadians are not Americans, even as it is for others to realize that Israelites are not Jews, and, speaking nationally and not racially, Jews are not Israelites. Jews are of the race of Israel, but are not of the nation Israel, exactly as Americans are of the Anglo-Saxon race—such of them as are not of other stock—but are not of the Anglo-Saxon nations which make up the Empire.

Well, any way, we were soon across the border and in Uncle Sam's loyal City of Detroit, and there were made partakers of a hearty welcome.

Delegates gathered from the most distant parts of the U.S.A. They came from the Atlantic Coast, from the Pacific Coast and from the intervening States.

We were made welcome in the great Nazarene Tabernacle, the Pastor, Rev. Dr. Jerrett, making an ideal host.

In the business sessions there was set up the organization of the Anglo-Saxon Federation of America, with instructions to the various States to form State organizations and Branches within the various States. It was advised that such organizations should go slowly as to registering such bodies for fear of hardening into a sect among the sects, which would be fatal to the universality of our work among members in active fellowship with all the Churches. It is better that every one of our members should be members in good standing, active and loyal, in one of the already functioning Communions.

The afternoon and evening was given to expository addresses. The spirit and the enthusiasm manifested left nothing to be desired.

One of the remarkable things about the Convention was the number of Clergy and Ministers of the various denominations. These were splendid men. They were scholarly, devoted and courageous in recognizing and accepting truth wherever it is to be found.

The instruments which assisted the singing were played with unusual musical merit. Especially so was the work of one member of the Convention who excels as a clarionette player. In the minutes preceding the opening of the meetings he, together with his pianoforte accompanist, thrilled the audience with the purity of tone and spirit of the glorious pieces rendered.

The fellowship, between the meetings, will long be remembered.

Again we were back over the Canadian border and heading for Toronto. But it was only to take the train West on the C.P.R. to Winnipeg. Again we went to bed at night on the train, and when we awoke found ourselves well on the way. There was a whole day of travel, and then another night, and the second morning found us in that majestic hostelry of the C.P.R., the 'Royal Alexander' at Winnipeg.

Here we rested for a whole day, not making our presence known to the friends, for we were getting travel-worn and the intensity of the meetings had taken much out of our nervous system.

Towards the evening Mr. and Mrs. Blackaller came in from the West, and we had a chance to review the Canadian work for the year, for Mr. Blackaller is the President of the Canadian Federation.

Of the three days' meetings it can be said they were filled with energy, friendliness and spiritual power. The latter reached its climax with the last meeting. Such was the consciousness of the Divine Presence at the close of the last meeting that the Chairman, Rev. E. J. Springett, and the people sat for minutes silent under its spell.

The work for the year, on the business side, was well done by the delegates, and the capacity audiences which overcrowded the hall will not soon forget the thronging impressions and emotions of these three wonderful days.

Ministers of the Gospel English Church and Free Church, and highly placed Staff Officers and others of the Salvation Army, mingled freely with the laity of the gathering. The feature of the public meetings was the large preponderance of men in the audiences.

A great musical festival was in its second week in the city, wherein individuals, duettists, quartettes, choirs, orchestras and bands contended for position in the musical world. It was a very popular and successful festival and carried capacity audiences. It was thought that this might militate against the attendance at our gatherings, and perhaps it did. But at all events, we could not have accommodated any more people in the large hall we were using. So perhaps we were saved the embarrassment of having to carry through overflow meetings.

Three more meetings at Calgary and then we shall enter upon the last lap of the journey for Vancouver and Home. We have had no leisure to let our minds run ahead to the pleasures of home nor to the corresponding duties. Soon we shall be in touch once more with the family circle from which the work calls us to be so much separated.

The trip has brought us into touch with phases of the Movement which will be looked upon as historic in the future.

And so we pass on our way. And the time passes with us. What the next few years have to unfold for us and the world we do not know. But we know that we can trust the Hand that is at the helm, and we shall hold ourselves ready to co-operate with Him as we are privileged to do as labourers together with God."

The Women's Auxiliary of the Calgary Branch writes :— "Kindly mail us quickly as possible 500 copies of the Manifesto, also 500 copies of the new special number of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE. We are planning to mail copies of both throughout the Province. The friends here believe the spreading of B.-I. Truth by means of the Press is one of the greatest pieces of work the Federation has undertaken. Followed as it is by the prayers of B.-I. believers throughout the world, it will be blessed to the glory of God. We, out here on the Prairies of Western Canada, wish to have some small part in this work."

The General Manager of a big business concern in Pernambuco, Brazil, writes :—"I was very pleased to see your full-page appeal in the Daily Mail. I am keenly interested in this matter and want to see the results for which your Federation is striving. I would very much appreciate your sending me, by return mail, complete details and literature. We have here about 800 British subjects and some 150 American subjects, and I am wondering whether there is anything I can do to help the Federation in its most worthy enterprise."

A.O.N. writes :—"I have read your article in the Daily Herald and desire very much to take advantage of your offer. One reason why Communist doctrine is gaining ground is because many sober-minded workers are unable to get good literature that would help us to an understanding of the Gospel and all it means."

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

FROM BABYLONIA TO THE ISLES, OR THE MARCHING ORDERS TO ISRAEL—IV.

By the Rev. Dr. W. Pascoe Goard.

The Assurance of God to Israel.

"But Zion said, Jehovah hath forsaken me, and my Lord hath forgotten me."

If we will bring practical judgment to bear upon this statement as it applies to the present day in Britain, it will be impossible to escape the conviction that this statement voices the considered judgment of the scholarship of the present generation. "Jehovah hath forsaken me" is the plaint. The Modernist Movement voices the thought and asserts it as though it were a fact that there is to-day no direct interference in national and individual affairs on the part of God. If there should be such it would be in the realm of the miraculous, and they say that in this day, at all events, there is no miracle in operation.

Their thought regarding Jehovah goes further, and makes Him to be but the figment of the brain of the people of old, who they say worshipped Him as a tribal God.

That the Majesty of Jehovah, the God and King of Israel, as He is declared to us in the nineteenth chapter of Exodus, and as He speaks to us in the twentieth chapter of Exodus, is still abiding in Israel, notwithstanding our eyes are holden that we cannot see Him, is utterly beyond the thought of the modern scholarship of to-day and also beyond the general conception of the man on the street.

Yet as surely as that he sun shines in the heaven notwithstanding the totally blind cannot see its light and glory, so surely is Jehovah, the God and King of Israel, still established and active in the midst of us, His people Israel.

That such is the case we have the following assurance :—

"Can a woman forget her sucking child, that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb? yea, they may forget, yet will I not forget thee.

Behold, I have graven thee upon the palms of my hands; thy walls are continually before me.

Thy children shall make haste; thy destroyers and they that made thee waste shall go forth of thee."—Isa. xlix, 15-17.

The graving on the palms of His hands was a deep engraving. To us, as to Thomas, He says, "Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands . . . and be not faithless but believing."

As to the results of the labours of Israel the following assurance is given, and the first quotation we give refers definitely to the increase of the children of the nation. Look at the nations of our own flesh and blood which are arising around us. See that they are occupying the very "waste and desolate places" to which the Pilgrim Fathers and succeeding migrants went.

Mark that the waste and desolate places of the United States of America, here clearly referred to, are even now growing too strait for her, and she is in process of closing her gates to immigration at the moment, and soon will be demanding more room in which to dwell. In the meantime she has been "lost" to our comity of nations, while others are growing up and are taking her place. Witness the great Dominion of Canada, now rejoicing in the fact that her population has reached the ten million mark, and that her public works and other developments have been carried forward to such an extent as to be able to serve a quarter of a million of a population, and her ultimate capacity will be easily measured at the hundred million mark. So with the other Overseas

Dominions. We hear the prophet declaring as though he visualized the very day in which we now live :—

"The children which thou shalt have, after thou hast lost the other, shall say again in thine ears, The place is too strait for me : give place to me that I may dwell.

"Then shalt thou say in thine heart, Who hath begotten me these, seeing I have lost my children, and am desolate, a captive, and removing to and fro? And who hath brought up these? Behold, I was left alone; these, where had they been?"

Whether the reference to the loss of the other directly refers, as many think, to the breaking away of the United States, and to the development of the other Dominions, or not, the reference fits the conditions so fully in every detail as to make the coincidence very startling; especially when we remember that the whole message is to Israel in the Isles.

Now the assurance is extended to the Gentiles thus :—

"Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will lift up mine hand to the Gentiles, and set up my standard to the people : and they shall bring thy sons in their arms, and thy daughters shall be carried upon their shoulders . . . "

So the Lord answers the plaint of Zion, "The Lord hath forsaken me, and my Lord hath forgotten me . . ."

THE REDEMPTION OF ISRAEL.

The process of reasoning and of action on the part of the Lord is precisely that which occurs to our own minds in this regard. The question arises in our minds : How shall Israel (if Britain and her daughter nations be Israel) carry forward her great work among the nations seeing that she is sin-stained and unworthy?

The Lord's answer comes unasked in His introduction of the Redeemer and the Redemption.

This is a movement in the great purpose of God which is not generally understood. However the word Redemption may be used elsewhere in the Scriptures, if it is ever otherwise used, the use of the word here is restricted to the nation Israel.

Atonement is a word which covers the great sacrifice of our Lord for the sins of all men : but the scope of the Redemption is herein shown as also in the New Testament : "For he hath visited and redeemed his people Israel."

The question as raised by the LORD is startling and practical : "Thus saith the Lord, Where is the bill of your mother's divorcement, whom I have put away?"

Look at the personnel of the parties involved in the question.

Second person—You. Third person—Your mother. Who are these? The address is to the second person—You, and we have seen that person to be Israel in the Isles.

The question is regarding the third person, "Your mother." Now we know the mother nation of Israel in the Isles was Israel in Palestine from whom Israel in the Isles migrated.

Therefore we have in question here the mother nation Israel, and the daughter nation Britain.

What is the position of these persons?

"Your mother" is divorced from God or, as the statement has it, "whom I have put away." This legal phrase is synonymous with the term "Divorced."

"You have sold yourselves for nought."

Thus the mother was divorced and the daughter enslaved.

GOD IS ABLE TO REDEEM.

Again we must ask the reader to attend to the personnel of the Godhead as revealed, remembering that the Lord our God is one Lord; but that it has pleased Him to assume for our benefit a plurality of manifestations.

The introduction afforded us at the commencement of this study was in the following words : "Thus saith the Lord, the Redeemer of Israel, and his Holy One."

In the chapter before us (Isaiah l) there is a plurality of voices.

First the Lord speaks and challenges the question as to His ability to redeem and to deliver. Then comes the voice of the Redeemer, Who sings the song of Redemption, describing the events which should later transpire in Pilate's Hall.

Again, in the last two verses of the chapter the Lord speaks. So we will listen to the voices which speak to us of the Redemption of Israel, both mother and daughter nations.

Jehovah speaks :

"Wherefore, when I came, was there no man? when I called, was there none to answer? Is my hand shortened at all, that it cannot redeem? or have I no power to deliver? behold, at my rebuke I dry up the sea, I make the rivers a wilderness : their fish stinketh, because there is no water, and dieth for thirst.

I clothe the heavens with blackness, and I make sackcloth their covering."—Isa. l, 2-3.

The Redeemer speaks :

"The Lord God hath given me the tongue of the learned, that I should know how to speak a word in season to him that is weary : he wakeneth morning by morning, he wakeneth mine ear to hear as the learned.

The Lord God hath opened mine ear, and I was not rebellious, neither turned away back.

I gave my back to the smiters, and my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair : I hid not my face from shame and spitting.

For the Lord God will help me; therefore shall I not be confounded : therefore have I set my face like a flint, and I know that I shall not be ashamed.

He is near that justifieth me; who will contend with me? let us stand together : who is mine adversary? let him come near to me.

Behold, the Lord God will help me; who is he that shall condemn me? lo, they all shall wax old as a garment; the moth shall eat them up."—Isa. l, 4-9.

Jehovah speaks :

"Who is among you that feareth the Lord, that obeyeth the voice of his servant, that walketh in darkness, and hath no light? let him trust in the name of the Lord, and stay upon his God.

Behold, all ye that kindle a fire, that compass yourselves about with sparks : walk in the light of your fire, and in the sparks that ye have kindled. This shall ye have of mine hand; ye shall lie down in sorrow."—Isa. l, 10-11.

With these thoughts in view, let us now read the following chapters, namely :—l, li, lii, liii, liv.

Thus is the great document containing Israel's marching orders complete ; and thus history and contemporary events tell us the nations of the Anglo-Saxon race are moving forward at the command of God our Saviour in the fulfilment of the same.

THE SECRET COUNSEL AGAINST THY HIDDEN ONES.

BY THE REV. COMMANDER L. G. A. ROBERTS, R.N.

WHAT is the meaning of the present condition of our economic status, and what has brought us to this critical point? We are probably on the verge of some stupendous change, or else national ruin will very soon stare us in the face. As far as one can trace, the social question has arisen from the fact of very many who are "hasting to be rich." The fault lies at our former inattention to the question of our poor and our exactions of more than is due from those whom we call the working classes. Two passages of Scripture (James v, 1–9, and Zech. viii, 10–17) are pregnant of warning and exhortation, precisely stating the case with us to-day. "Go to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you . . . ye have heaped treasure together for the last days. Behold the hire of the labourers who have reaped down your fields, which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth : and the cries of them which have reaped are entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth," etc., etc.

Also Zech. : "For before these days there was no hire for man, nor any hire for beast ; neither was there any peace to him that went out or came in because of the affliction : for I set all men every one against his neighbour . . . . These are the things that ye shall do : Speak ye every man the truth to his neighbour, execute the judgment of truth and peace in your gates ; and let none of you imagine evil in your hearts against his neighbour, and love no false oath : for all these are things that I hate, saith the Lord." The remedy is in our own hands.

We have first of all to know the law of God as laid down for Israel in the Old Testament, and to return to the law of Moses. This is actually now coming about. But has God said when this Jacob's trouble is to cease? Jer. xxx, 17, says : "I will restore health unto thee, and I will heal thee of thy wounds . . . I will bring again the captivity of Jacob's tents, and have mercy on his dwelling places . . . . their nobles shall be of themselves and their Governor shall proceed from the midst of them ; and I will cause him to draw near, and he shall approach unto me : for who is this that engaged his heart to approach unto me, saith the Lord." Also when Edom is to become a desolation (Jer. xlix, 17–22), and Babylon is overthrown (l, 44–46), "Who is a chosen man, that I may appoint over her, for who is like me, and who will appoint me the time? and who is that Shepherd that will stand before me?" (Dan. xii, 1.)

THE TIME.

Israel's punishment for her sins was to be for seven times, which ended 1780–1799. How God brought about our blessings as a nation and has been blessing us ever since is a matter of history. See Dan. xii, 7, 11, 12, for two times and a half. Judah's punishment for her sins was also a term of seven times, these ending 1917–1936. We have seen Jerusalem cease to be trodden down of the Gentiles and the Jewish question taken in hand by ourselves as Israel.

Again, assuming that the entry into the Promised Land was in 1451 B.C. cir., the 70th Jubilee commences in this year 1930, or thereabouts, A.D. 1930.

But there is another date I wish to call your attention to. That is here mentioned in Rev. xi, 7–11, and borne out by the Great Pyramid. I look upon these as two witnesses to-day—God's Word and His pillar in Egypt. Shortly, to explain, in Rev. xi God's witnessing power against Roman idolatry was to testify for 1,260 years, and then the beast out of the bottomless pit was to destroy these witnesses, in the street of the city which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified. This description is the Roman earth. The climax of this became evident only in 1928, the date being fixed by the Pyramid as May 29th, 1928, or at Pentecost that year. The symbol is borne out by the four grooves on the southern wall of the Antechamber, as you pass under the Second Low Passage, giving us also in miniature "the displacement factor." It should be noticed that we are now surrounded by granite. These grooves, it will be seen, are tapered gradually, symbolizing the 100th part of the displacement factor. Here we have Israel alone entering into her great conflict, which is to decide whether she will act out the part of the reconstruction of the universe. The end of the dispensation of Grace to all Nations is seen by the entrance to the last contracted passage. In space resembling that of the upward ascending passage confined only to Israel under the law, typifying a return of Israel to the law as in Mal. iv.

We have passed through a time of extreme depression lately—economically, want of employment, loss of vital energy, following the nations around her, whereas God's plan is that "Israel should dwell in safety alone." Her experience is to be brought to "Consider her ways." First the secret machinations of our enemies. It will be seen in Micah vii that immediately before the full acknowledgment of Israel and the decree be removed as to her return, her great enemy is terribly busy compassing her ruin. The same is seen in Psalm cxviii, 10–23. Again, Psalm lxxxiii, 1–4, is still more definite. It is here seen that the nations "have taken secret counsel against God's hidden ones ; they have said Come, let us destroy them from being a nation, that the name of Israel may be no more remembered." Again in Hab. iii we have the great sea fight which will take place! In Ezek. xxxviii, xxxix, and Joel ii and iii, the great land fight! This is the burden also of Dan. xi, 40–xii, 1 !

It was in May, 1928, and thereabouts that Europe partook of the condition laid down in Rev. xvi, 19, the great city was divided into three parts. A secret bond took place between Russia and Germany, another between France and Poland, and a third between Italy, Spain, Jugo-Slavia and Turkey. The three unclean spirits as frogs also commenced their work ; the influence of Britain as a spiritual check over the Continent of Europe was brought to a standstill by the Malines Conversations. Our too great familiarity, of the Anglo-Catholic party with Rome, caused the withdrawal of all our Protestant leading as a restraint. It was, in fact, the very year Britain and the English had need to protest against the errors of the Church of Rome, A.D. 668 + 1260 = 1928.

It will be remembered that all Churches were to conduct services in the Latin tongue; this was the Vatican decree of A.D. 663, but was not actually put into force till A.D. 668. It was then that Archbishop Theodore became the first Anglican Archbishop of Canterbury, elected by our own people. The very first Synod held enacted that the Church of Rome had no jurisdiction over the Anglican Church. Hence the word Lateinos, the number of the beast, is 666. Now 1928 is distinctly marked on the Pyramid, and indefinitely so, in Rev. xi, 7. These dates have been called into question and caused many to speak evil of both the Bible and the Pyramid, and many weak brethren have become opponents to the Truth. Whereas the Truth cannot be manifested until the attendant events reveal that which was intended. The world has been seeking to bring about peace and safety without Christ. The League of Nations, though conceived from a highly moral and humane point of view, is determined to bring about a wholly human conception. There can be no peace for the wicked. If they make Jesus Christ, Who is God and the most perfect Man, their enemy, how can they bring about that unity which is the very bond of peace? "Agree with thine adversary quickly whilst thou art in the way with him." "He that is not with me is against me." This is the condition to-day. They have shut Christ out of their Council!

We are clearly warned that there will be a terrible war forced upon us through a complicity headed by Meshech (Moscow). That when we are for peace they are for war. No one can possibly refuse to see the determination of all this secret diplomacy of disarming; it has been clearly stated by Russia itself to suit her own ambition. Britain alone has reduced her defences to the very limit of security. When they shall say, "Peace, safety," then sudden destruction is said to come, and they shall not escape. The promise to us is security and peace, if we obey the Commandments and Statutes of the Lord our God. What we need is a return to God's Commandments, a keeping of His Sabbath, a fair dealing between employer and employed, a speaking of truth every man to his neighbour, and to love no false oath. Then the promise will be fulfilled both to Israel and Judah that as formerly we were a curse amongst the nations, so now we should become a blessing. (Zech. viii, 13.) Let us seek out the welfare of the Jew and bring him to Christ, and we shall then inherit the Kingdom prepared for us from the foundation of the world. It is overlooked by very many British-Israelites that our efforts to save Judah are to be so effectual as to bring about a greater exodus of Jews from the North Country than ever yet has been seen, so that both Jeremiah and Micah make this return to be a marvel. (Micah vii, 11–20; Jer. xvi, 14–22.)

The Old Testament is full of Judah and Israel both together being a blessing when the Holy Spirit is poured out upon us from on high. (Isa. xxxii, 15 to end; Hos. x, 11–12; Jer. xxxii, 26–44.)

"Also, O Judah, He hath set an harvest for thee, when I returned the captivity of my people." (Hos. vi, 11; Zech. x, 1–6, etc., etc.)

One remembers well in 1928 how a dignitary of our Church was charged with a libel by Cardinal Bourne against the Church of Rome. Fortunately, patriotic bishops in France, who resisted the Concordat, came forward, and proved this English charge to be true, and Cardinal Bourne was compelled to withdraw his indictment and lost his case. It was brewing in 1927, but came to a head afterwards. See Nineteenth Century and After, November, 1927, onward.

WHAT DOES THE PYRAMID TYPIFY?

If we look at the commencement of the ascending passage of the Great Pyramid, we find it commences at the Exodus of Israel, and the narrowness of the passage in height and width confines it to Israel under the Law, 44 by 42 in. This opens up at the Resurrection of Christ into a vast chamber 28 ft. by 7 ft., prefiguring that Grace and Truth are now offered to all nations. A rapid contraction of this Grand Gallery is arrived at on August 4th–5th, 1914, which we now know presaged that the world power headed by the Kaiser had rejected the privilege of being co-workers with Israel in the bringing in of the Kingdom of God. This fierce struggle lasted nearly fifty-two months, when an Armistice was asked for by Germany on the 11th day of the 11th month and at the 11th hour; it was ratified November 11th, 1918.

Then we come into a chamber 116.26 in. in length, 149.44 in height and 103.033 in width, symbolizing that the world power has another, though curtailed, opportunity of helping Israel, which opportunity lasts 116.26 months, terminating May 29th–30th, 1928. This is portrayed by the four grooves at the South wall of the Antechamber abruptly limiting their chance. These grooves are significantly graduated during a period of 2.861 months, showing, we believe, the gradual withdrawal of Israel's co-operation with the European powers on the question we assume of union with Rome. This brings about Israel's effort solely to reconstruct the Universe unassisted by the Roman powers.

Hitherto we find limestone somewhat near in the surroundings, but after November 11th, perhaps October, 1931, we come immediately under the granite surrounding the King's Chamber Wall. This is 3½ years after May 29th–30th, 1928! It is remarkable also that "the displacement factor" is so clearly portrayed at the Entrance to the Pyramid, again at both ends of the Grand Gallery, and on the four vertical grooves at the Entrance to the Second Low Passage.

It is also a coincidence, perhaps, that the word "enemy" in the Hebrew is a word of which Czar is a root, e.g., Isa. xxvi, 11; lix, 19; Ezek. xxxix, 23.

Another is that the word "wickedness," "wicked," is in Hebrew represented by the word Russo or Russia in very many places, especially Zech. v, 8; Mal. iii, 18; iv, 3.

AN EXAMINATION OF MR. AVARY H. FORBES' "STONE WALL."

(Letter No. 3.)

BY PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc.

"ITS devotees seem to think that Britain always has been at the head of the world."

Again Mr. Forbes fails to say what he means. Let us see. "Always" is a long time. A bit of "always" goes back to the Flood and back to Adam. British-Israelites and Britain started away down this side of the Flood. Please modify "always" to a more suitable word.

British-Israel teachers do not claim such nonsense as is tied up in the "always" of Mr. Forbes. Perhaps some B.-I. teachers believe and even teach that Britain has been at the head of the world and led the world more than any other nation or people! If so, perhaps they are fairly correct!

Hosts of foreign writers in Europe and elsewhere who are not and were not Britons, or British-Israelites, as the term is used, place Britain at the head of the world in all that counts most, and is of highest human and national value.

Let us examine one noted writer, so noted that I am now dealing with him in a kindly and earnest manner and spirit; to wit, Mr. Forbes, who seems to resent the idea of Britain being "at the head of the world."

Good reader, turn your attention to Mr. Forbes as he says, writes, prints, publishes and scatters to the world his sayings.

We quote his words—words already quoted—which he himself seems to have forgotten.

"In spiritual blessings Britain to a large extent stands alone." Good! True! Then in national spiritual relationships and conditions Britain is at the head of the nations. We quite agree with him, and appreciate this great fact. And it follows that the spiritual head or leader of the nations has a kind of blessing far beyond all other blessings. Yes, Britain leads.

We quote again:—"She has led the way in foreign missions which she has established all over the world."

A sweeping statement, and true, too! Perhaps if a teacher of "British-Israelism" used these words, he would be told that "B.-I. was patriotically intoxicated." I fully accept the above statement of Mr. Forbes and do not charge him with "intoxication" either.

ANOTHER QUOTATION.

"The British and Foreign Bible Society . . . . . is the parent of all the other Bible Societies." True again! Once more we agree. And queerly enough, Mr. Forbes agrees with certain B.-I. teachers who "seem" to think "Britain is at the head of the world." We are rather proud of our friend in his strong words, just as strong as the words of the B.-I. teachers.

Further! He says:—"The Religious Tract Society has depots all over the world." Yes! True again! Here, again, Britain leads the world. And why so? Why? The Eternal, Who lies not, said He would raise up a people to do this kind of work; and He said they would bless all the nations of the earth. He said truth. And lo! Mr. Forbes says so, too, and uses the words "all over the world."

Thus, then, Mr. Forbes once more agrees with the Divine Word and also with B.-I. teaching.

Again, still speaking of the British, he says, "The Bible Reading Societies number millions of members." True here, too! This is true of the Anglo-Saxon-Celtic people, and thus again they lead the world. Here Mr. Forbes agrees with the strong sane B.-I. leaders and teachers.

Listen to the following ringing words which no B.-I. teacher could surpass in force and truth. He says:—"Britain is responsible for the greatest evangelistic agency of modern time, the Salvation Army."

We quite agree again: and lo! in this regard Britain leads the world. A great leadership! A great evangelism! And the Lord said He would raise up a people, to wit, Israel, to do this sort of work. Mr. Forbes, as a historian, says the Lord has been making good His promises or prophecies. B.-I. teachers do not use stronger words, and they are not intoxicated in making similar statements.

A further quotation is as follows:—"Britain, too, produced that Book which in translations, circulation and spiritual results ranks next to the Bible—'The Pilgrim's Progress.'" Mr. Forbes tells the truth here, uses tremendously strong terms, and perhaps is not intoxicated as he "seems" to think B.-I. teachers are.

He is quite a booster for dear old Britain, one of the names of Israel in these latter days.

Once again we quote along this line, so clearly manifesting Britain as the "world leader." He says:—"In Britain were established the first Sunday Schools, the first Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations, and the Crusaders' Union."

What a wonderful "world leader" is and has been old Britain, the covenant land! The land of the Bull, to wit, Engl-land or England, the land of the Saxon or Isaac's land, really the land of the son of Sack, or Isaac!

Joseph's Bull and Judah's Lion! The land represented by Britannia, the naval or ocean covenant as set out by the old man Israel in Gen. xlix.

One more quotation! "All this seems to be the fulfilment of the prophecy of Daniel."

"Seems!" Yes, seems, and I would put in the word IS in place of "seems." Each to his taste! Mr. Forbes agrees with the B.-I. teaching, even if he be not aware of the fact.

21*st.*—We quote again:—"All this seems to be the fulfilment of the prophecy of Daniel of the Stone cut out without hands, which smote the image, AND LED TO THE ESTABLISHMENT OF THE FIFTH UNIVERSAL MONARCHY, a kingdom which shall never be destroyed."

Much might be said here, wherein many men good and true give "differing interpretations"; even though they all have the self-same words before them.

"All this seems to be the fulfilment," etc. By "all this" Mr. Forbes means all he has just said about the blessings and leadership of Britain; even though he finds fault with B.-I. teachers who say Britain is at the head of the world in the things that truly count.

"The Stone!" He refers to the establishment of the fifth universal monarchy!

Let us see what the Lord said about the Stone or Rock elsewhere in dealing with Israel.

Isa. li, 1: "Look unto the Rock whence ye are hewn." "Ye"! Who? Who are the "ye"? Why, Israel! not the Church! Let us see. The people He, the Lord, is addressing were the descendants of "Abraham your father," and also of "Sarah that bare you." This means they were descended from Abraham and Sarah, and not from Moab, Ammon, Egypt or Assyria or from a church. He is talking to Israel, a people who were hewed out of a Rock. Surely such a people are a rock or stone people; and if a nation, they must be a stone or rock nation.

We shall see. Read verse 4: "Hearken unto me, my people; and give ear unto me, O my nation."

Here we have it. He is talking to a nation, a stone nation descended from Abraham and Sarah. This nation was Israel, the chosen descendants of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

Elsewhere, and in many places, the Scriptures tell us that Israel would be permanently ruled over by David or his seed. Hence Israel, the son of Abraham, Sarah, Isaac and Jacob was a nation and a kingdom.

Read Jeremiah: "David shall never want a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel." Thus Israel the nation is Israel a kingdom, and is Rock-hewn. Hence a Stone Kingdom: Israel a nation, and not a church, is talked to here in Isaiah li, 1 forward.

Thus, then, we have good ground for a "Stone Kingdom," a Stone cut out of the mountains, according to Daniel ii.

THE BIRTH OF THE IRISH NATION.—II.

By WILLIAM F. DILLON.

VI.—'Twas Baruch, Scribe, prepared the deed,
That her guardian had foreseen,
Would satisfy King Eochaid's wish,
And her dowry fix as Queen.
The Royal Marriage was proclaimed,
And the nuptials solemnized,
Where kings were crowned on Clothairs Hill,
With a pomp so well devised.

Their coronation seat—the Liafail—
That served as "Jacob's Pillow" long ago.

NOTE.—The fact that the Royal Princess, Tea Tephi, was married to the Heremon, or Head King of all Ireland, about 580 B.C., has often been referred to by the Irish Bards, who described her as Tea of the prosperous smile. In the annals of the Four Masters, and Clonmacnoise, she is frequently referred to as Eochaid's Queen. Amergin the Chief Bard to King Osmond, in A.D. 513, composed a poem upon Tara, where he refers to Queen Tephi, and in A.D. 1024, Cuan O'Cochlain, then Regent in Ireland, collected legends on Tara, and also wrote a poem on this remarkable Queen. Clothair was her marriage dowry, and its name was changed to Tea-Mur.

VII.—Now Ollamh Fodhla, Prince and Seer,
Opened school on Tara's Hill,
And taught the youths from many lands
How to learn their Maker's will.
Then saints and scholars grew apace,
Till their Queen beloved by all,
Was called above to final rest,
While her harp adorned the Hall.

Her death was mourned—Unequalled was her tomb—
With rampart round—'twas many years ago.

NOTE.—There are many references in the annals of the Four Masters, and the Chronicles of Eri, to the work of Ollamh Fodhla for Ireland. He founded a University in Ulster, where the sons of Europeans were educated, and from whence many missionaries were sent to Europe in these early days. It was thus Ireland became known as the Island of Saints and Scholars.

After the death of Queen Tephi, a rampart was raised about her home at Tara,—for Tea the daughter of Lugaidh, a Celtic name for her father, meaning God's House, which corresponds to the Hebrew Bethel, from which the Liafail stone is said to have come.

VIII.—The Royal Standard's cloth of blue,
With the Harp emblaz'd in gold,
Was raised when stately functions called—
Thus the honoured Kings of Old.
The Bards in Ollamh Fodhla's day,
With the harp of David tuned,
The Tara Psalter soon they learned,—
And their chants were ne'er impugned.

The birth of Erin now was noised abroad,
While Fodhla slept,—'twas centuries ago.

NOTE.—In the ancient legends it is said that Ollamh Fodhla, or Jeremiah, was buried in the old Abbey burial ground on Devenish Island in Lough Erne. Jeremiah's rock tomb has been seen from time immemorial under the shadow of its round tower. In the dome of the Four Courts, Dublin, a medallion of Ollamh Fodhla could be seen with seven other Lawgivers, including Moses and Alfred the Great, up to the time the building was destroyed in A.D. 1922. The Tara Psalter and a system of Heraldry was initiated by Ollamh Fodhla, and he also succeeded in bringing in Triennial Parliaments at Tara.

The facts relating to the journeyings of the Prophet Jeremiah with the king's daughter appear to be well authenticated. According to the Scriptures, they sojourned for a time at Tahpanes in Egypt, and Sir William Flinders Petrie, in his book entitled "Ten Years' Digging in Egypt," relates how he discovered a mound near Tell Deffenneh, or the Daphnæ of Herodotus, and the Tahpanes of the Old Testament. The name of the mound he was told was "Kasr Bint El Yehudi," meaning "the palace of the king's daughter," and he appears to think there is no doubt the refugees from Jerusalem remained here for a time, and afterwards for fear of the King of Babylon's designs on Egypt, they left on one of the Phœnician trading vessels, landing at Sagunta, the first port in Iberia (Spain), thence to Zaragossa, Bilbao, before entering Yum Birska (Bay of Biscay) or the Evil Sea, and thus according to the Milesian Annals they arrived at Carrickfergus.

The Liafail, or Stone of Destiny, after arriving at Tara, 580 B.C., remained for 10 centuries, to A.D. 502 when Fergus, the brother of the Irish Ard Righ, went to Dalriada in Scotland to fight the Picts, and after getting the Liafail from his brother he was crowned as the first Scottish King. King Kenneth was afterwards crowned upon it when he destroyed the kingdom of the Picts. He then placed the Stone in Scone Abbey, near Oban, from whence it was removed by King Edward the First in A.D. 1296. It has now been 2,500 years in the British Isles, and all the Sovereigns of England have been crowned upon it, except the Tudor Queen Mary (A.D. 1553). A special Gothic Oak Chair was made for the Stone, which is oblong in shape, measuring 22 inches long, 13 inches broad, and 11 inches deep. It is bluish in colour and mixed with veins of red.

It is not generally known that our Sovereign, King George the Fifth, is the lineal descendant through the Stuarts of the ancient Head Kings of Ireland, crowned on the Liafail, and known as the Royal Heremon line, the first of whom was Heber. Ireland for this reason was regarded as the most ancient kingdom of the West, and therefore our Royal Sovereign by his ancestry can claim to belong to the most ancient reigning family in the world, and a true son of the Scot and Gael.

The original National Flag of Ireland was Royal blue, with the harp of gold, and remained so from 580 B.C., at Tara, to about A.D. 1798, a period of 2,378 years, when the colour was changed to green. All true patriots look forward to the time when the National Flag will be restored. The present flag, showing the union of orange and green, was only adopted for political purposes, indicating the union of Ireland, North and South, which has never been effected.

STUDENTS of prophecy may be forgiven for having expected May 29th, 1928, to usher in a second phase of physical conflict. Up till that date current events appeared to be sweeping on irresistibly toward a violent climax.

Men who were in touch with things behind the scenes know full well the atmosphere of expectancy of that critical time. Political leaders held their breath in an agony of apprehension and suspense. But the hour of crisis came and went and nothing happened. It was one of the most extraordinary political phenomena of modern times.

The darkened storm clouds gathered and were suddenly swept away. The momentum of world events which had seemed irresistible, as if by magic, came under a strange eclipse influence. It was as if fear had paralysed the arm of MARS raised above his head in attitude of offence.

To-day, looking back, we see that TRIBULATION entered a new phase of attrition ; an insidious phase which has proved every whit as deadly in its menace as war itself.

Looking at the Pyramid symbolism now one might also name the three phases represented respectively by the first low passage, antechamber, and second low passage, as follows :— Shock, Chaos and Paralysis.

First came the SHOCK of physical conflict, 1914 to 1918 ; then the CHAOS of attempted readjustment, 1918 to 1928 ; and now we are in a period of PARALYSIS, in which it seems that every effort made to regain stability is met with futility and abortion.

If there is yet to be a final whirlwind phase in which the shock of war, chaos of disorganization, and aggravated paralysis conditions, each and all unitedly make one final bid to break-up the KINGDOM of BRITAIN, what of it ?

The BRITISH KINGDOM is founded on a rock which cannot be shaken.* The BRITISH EMPIRE has a secret force of cohesion which no chaos can possibly disintegrate. The ANGLO-SAXON WORLD can rise triumphant above the menace of a temporary paralysis, in the Name of Him Who both wounds and heals.†

We are approaching the final climax to our time of testing and will soon rise victorious over all our enemies both spiritual and temporal.

At the present, one fact stands out above all others. And that is, that time has proved the forecast of Mr. Davidson to be correct. The new phase of attrition marked by the second low passage has so far been an economic phase of tribulation masquerading under the popular name of Unemployment.

" As everybody knows, Unemployment has been of BRITAIN ever since the ARMISTICE," claims the Daily Mail in a testimony echoing the words of Mr. Winston Churchill in a speech dated 20th June, 1930 :—" These eventful years through which we are passing are not less serious than the years of the GREAT WAR. They belong to the same period."

But what is more significant still is the fact that Unemployment is growing steadily worse and is spreading throughout the INDUSTRIAL WORLD as a whole.

The European Finance (London) speaks with alarm of the " cancer which is spreading all over the industrial countries and crippling the whole world." Changing the metaphor it calls for active measures against " the new locust which is rapidly extending its shadow over all countries."

In a special article (22nd June, 1930), Mr. G. Ward Price writes :—" As swiftly as the thunderstorms gathered over BRITAIN last week, have lately been massing over the whole of the civilized world.

MENACING CLOUDS OF TRADE DEPRESSION

" The Stock Exchanges of LONDON, PARIS and BERLIN, which for months have been almost lifeless, will be depressed still further by the new collapse on Wall Street. These institutions are the BAROMETERS OF NATIONAL PROSPERITY.

On every one of them the reading to-day is Stormy.

" Britain's share of the world's export trade is less by 13 per cent. than it was before the WAR. Last month we shipped abroad sixteen million pounds less worth of goods than in May, 1929. Our cotton and woollen exports fell by one-third of their value. In the first five months of the present year we have lost forty-six million pounds worth of the export trade we had last year, and that decline has been going on now for many years past."

Examining the economic condition of other nations Ward Price makes the interesting observation that " In this

WORLD-WIDE ATTACK OF CREEPING PARALYSIS,

GERMANY, for the moment, is the only nation still immune. She is paying a stern price for this freedom," and by cutting down wages hopes to undersell her rivals and, taking advantage of the bad times, capture their custom.

However, as Ward Price reminds us, " Stagnation is as catching a complaint in trade as influenza in human intercourse," and no ordinary methods can stave off inevitable disaster.

Economists tell us the cause of stagnation is Over-production. We are suffering from the curse of plenty. And the plenty has been transformed from a blessing into a curse simply on account of the man-made economic system under which we dwellers of the earth exist.

Our WORLD is organized on a competitive basis instead of co-operative. And the will never be removed until this system is fundamentally changed. Are there any signs of the great readjustment taking place? Yes, there are. The Manifesto issued by the great Banking Houses of GREAT BRITAIN urging the leaders of the Government to adopt the principle of Free Trade within the EMPIRE is the outstanding sign of the great turning-point in the world crisis.

This sounds paradoxical. Because if the cause of world ills lies in the fact that industry is competitive instead of co-operative, how can matters be improved by BRITAIN abandoning her ancient role of Free Trader and, closing the gates of her EMPIRE, setting up tariff walls against all other nations?

It is a case of reculer pour mieux sauter. At critical moments of change it is often necessary to " go back " first before you can " go forward." World Free Trade between all nations remains the ultimate ideal. But in order to achieve this, the transition period must see BRITAIN concentrating on achieving Free Trade within the boundaries of her own EMPIRE. The KINGDOM is called first of all to put her own House in order.

Now note the date of the Bankers' Manifesto. June 30th was the date marking the end of the first phase of the GREAT WAR. On that day the last Allied soldier left Rhineland Territory. August 4th, 1914, November 11th, 1918, and June 30th, 1930, may well rank in equal importance historically as marking the varying phases of military action.

On July 3rd, three days following this vital date, the Bankers of GREAT BRITAIN passed the following resolution :—

> It is resolved that urgent measures for the promotion of inter-Imperial trade are needed to secure and extend the market for British products both at home and through the export trade.
> Bitter experience has taught Great Britain that the hopes expressed four years ago in a plea for the removal of the restrictions upon European trade have failed to be realized. The restrictions have been materially increased, and the sale of surplus foreign products in the British market has steadily grown.
> While we retain the hope of an ultimate extension of the area of Free Trade throughout the world, we believe that the immediate step for securing and extending the market for British goods lies in reciprocal trade agreements between the nations constituting the British Empire.
> As a condition of securing these agreements Great Britain must retain her open market for all Empire products, while being prepared to impose duties on all imports from all other countries.

Commenting on the Manifesto, the Evening News says :— " What has stirred the HOUSE of COMMONS is the fact that the CITY, which has always been the champion of Free Trade, has openly admitted that it was wrong.

" The Bankers, who have a reputation for caution and silence, would not have spoken unless the need had been very great. But the national need was so great they sank their personal pride. ' In such a position,' said a well-known industrialist, ' the Bankers felt they must sweep aside all personal feelings and speak for the NATION.' "

On superficial examination the voice of the NATION thus expressed may appear a crudely selfish voice. Britain's security is to be attained at the expense of other nations?

But the security of BRITAIN is essential to the welfare of other nations. If BRITAIN goes everything goes. On Britain's security depends the security of the world.

This call is the economic fulfilment of the call of ISAIAH‡ :— " Come, MY PEOPLE, enter thou into thy chambers, and hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast."

As the Manifesto suggests, this change in policy is only a temporary expedient and will only be carried on during the " little moment " which must intervene pending the day shortly coming when all nations enter the KINGDOM and the ultimate ideal of Free Trade between all nations can be realized.

But that other nations labour under no delusion as to the uncomfortable time this period of transition will be for them is clearly set forth by the Berlin Tageblatt. Describing the Bankers' statement as " an event of the greatest economic and political importance," the Tageblatt recalls that it was the Big Five of the British Banks that took the lead in the International Free Trade Manifesto of four years ago. At that time there was a hope of a general realization that rising tariff walls were similar to armament races, and that lay in the direction of Free Trade, but in the ensuing years the WORLD has failed to withstand this TEST OF NATIONAL DISCIPLINE.

" The present declaration is no empty gesture. Protection can take the form only of a closer Customs Union of the BRITISH EMPIRE, and the simultaneous against the rest of the WORLD. That is a matter of concern to EUROPE. Countries which, in spite of warnings and pious utterances, have let themselves become more and more deeply involved in the International Tariffs Competition cannot reproach ENGLAND for egotistically taking the same course. An open resort to Protection by GREAT BRITAIN would meet with no great difficulties in the DOMINIONS, and a

CLOSING OF THE DOOR

§ What a remarkable commentary this phrase, and indeed the whole sentence of which it is a part, forms on verse 21, Isa. xxvi.

BRITISH EMPIRE CUSTOMS UNION,

such as Mr. Joseph Chamberlain once imagined, would be a factor that could not but aggravate the chronic world-wide economic crisis. This is affecting the whole WORLD."

Well, if ISAIAH is right, the " Indignation " period for other nations is inevitable. The shutting of ISRAEL-BRITAIN'S doors in obedience to the Divine command of verse 20 takes place coincidently with the judgment of verse 21 :—" For, behold, the LORD cometh out of His place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity."

At the same time it is the supremely critical period in Jacob's trouble. But we have the Divine assurance that BRITAIN will be saved out of it.

British Empire Crusaders already see the " salvation " afar off and hail it joyously. Now that Britain's Financial Leaders are on his side Lord Beaverbrook is bound to win.

" There is no parallel in our political history to the CRUSADE which he conceived and launched and leads," says the Daily Express. " We can find no analogy. GLADSTONE, DISRAELI and JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN never wrought so vast in so brief a period. The NATION knows it has found a leader with vision and faith and fire to lead it out of the wilderness into the Promised Land. His gospel is running like a leaping flame through the three old political parties. It has conquered the fiery youth of the country as well as the cool heads of Industry, Commerce, Finance and Trade Unionism.

" The miracle has been wrought by a man of faith and a man of fire, willing to face obloquy and contumely in the CAUSE he has created by his labours. The NATION, weary of barren shibboleths and sterile catchwords, sees in this burning enthusiast its destined deliverer from the foreign yoke which is strangling its manufactures and its commerce and swelling the multitude of workless men. The people since the WAR have waited in despondency and despair for a CAUSE and a MAN to save them from impending disaster and doom. They have found the Cause and the Man, and the gates of doubt and fear will not prevail against them."

Mr. Esmond Harmsworth, formerly M.P. for Thanet, sums up the matter in the significant words ¶ :—" To-day we have our backs to the wall just as much as in 1914. The enemy to-day is Trade Depression ; world-wide it is true, but sinking deeper into ENGLAND because we have been lethargic and failed to prepare for the troubles that only the few saw were inevitable. It is not too late. Empire Crusaders have the power to alter the destinies of an EMPIRE.

" Lord Beaverbrook has lit a torch that cannot be put out, because it is enshrined already in the souls of scores of those who saw so much darkness in the future of our country.

" We are at

THE PARTING OF THE WAYS.

On the one side lie prosperity, contentment, and pride in the greatness of our EMPIRE and its glorious future. On the other, there are only poverty, misery, and the certainty that we are wasting and the knowledge that the story of our GREAT ISLAND EMPIRE is rapidly drawing to a close. Can ENGLISHMEN hesitate in their choice ? "

OUR GLORIOUS HERITAGE,

Truly our national and individual responsibility is great. The matter of choice is one of infinite importance. Let us choose boldly in the confidence that our choice is right. For " there is a destiny that shapes our ends, rough hew them though we will."

Individually we roughly fashion the destiny of our NATION. In this we are co-workers together with GOD.

But we may rest assured that the destiny itself is in higher hands than human. For the destiny of the EMPIRE is guaranteed in the covenants—made with the fathers‖—ratified by the oath[1] of GOD.

THE KING-EMPEROR AT INDIA HOUSE.

THE following extract from the Daily Express, dated July 10th, will be of interest to many NATIONAL MESSAGE readers, especially those resident overseas :—

" Imperial progress and a deeper realization of the unity of the British Commonwealth of Nations was the keynote of a fervent speech broadcast to the world yesterday by the King-Emperor when, with the Queen and the Duke of Connaught, he opened India House, in Aldwych, the magnificent new home of India in the HEART OF THE EMPIRE.

" The King and Queen arrived at Aldwych at noon, in the open State landau preceded by scarlet-clad outriders, through dense cheering crowds, packed deep on the pavements, thronging the windows and balconies of the neighbouring buildings, and perched high on the roof tops.

" The multitude broke into the National Anthem as the King, in frock coat and silk hat, with the Queen in turquoise blue, with a necklace of pearls and emeralds, stepped smiling from the carriage to receive a golden key from the architect, Sir Herbert Baker, with which he opened the great doors of the new building.

" In the high, vaulted, panelled library the King and Queen passed to a scarlet dais through a hushed audience, with the gorgeous and vivid colouring of the turbans and the flowing robes of the Indian potentates and their bejewelled ladies forming ¶ Wickham Steed, Editor of the Review of Reviews, voices a similar warning in the words : " As a country and as an Empire, or rather as a Commonwealth of Nations, we are ' up against it,' more thoroughly and more comprehensively than at any time I can remember since the War ; and before the War, the only moment when we were as hard put to it as we are now was during the ' Black Week ' in the autumn of 1899—the Boer War period." Mr. Steed looks for salvation to the economic development of the Empire. " We may be obliged to think of saving ourselves before we can help others," he says, " but we must shun as the prompting of the Devil all thought of using those resources solely for our own profit. We control them as a trust for civilization. If our aim is peace at home and abroad, we must harbour no notion of holding selfish dominion but look upon our advantages as so many openings to render greater service to the world."

a striking contrast with the sombre morning dress of the English politicians, among whom were Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, Mr. Henderson, Lord Passfield, the Marquis of Reading and Lord Chelmsford (both ex-Viceroys), Mr. Baldwin (distinguished by a cream waistcoat and grey Ascot top-hat), and Mr. Lloyd George.

"'It gives me great pleasure to come here to-day to open this imposing and beautiful building,' said the King, in his clear, well-modulated voice.

"'A quarter of a century has passed since the Queen and I paid our first memorable visit to India. In that time India has never lost her hold upon my affection and sympathy. There have been many changes and some dark days, but I rejoice to think that through them all she has steadily advanced to an assured place among the great peoples of the earth.'

"India House, in the centre of the capital of Empire, among those of the sister nations, Canada, Australia and South Africa, was a further symbol, he said, of

of which India was a part.

"'For a deeper realization of that twofold unity I most earnestly pray,' said the King, and, declaring India House open, expressed the wish that 'it may serve not only the Imperial progress of that country but by spreading sound knowledge may foster between the peoples of India and Great Britain that wider sympathy for which I pleaded many years ago and plead again to-day.'"

REVIEW.

MARK GUY PEARSE.*

Preacher, Author, Artist.

Review by Harrison Hill.

"IF England is Ephraim—i.e., the Ten Tribes of Israel—then I can see the prophecies of the Scriptures being fulfilled in our midst. If England is not Ephraim, then there is no such people answering to the prophet's description; nor, as yet has there been such a people; nor is there any promise of such a people appearing. I have gone carefully through the book, 'The Fullness of the Nations.' The study of it has let a flood of light in upon the Scriptures, and I cannot see how anyone can help acknowledging the truth of the argument, supported as it is at every step by Scripture, and giving a meaning and completeness to much that is otherwise confused and almost unmeaning. I agree with the writer that somewhere there must exist this fullness of nations—that the position and characteristics of this fullness of nations are distinct and specific, and that there is no nation which fulfils all these conditions but the British."

A lovely book is in our hand: the record of a still more lovely life. It is the life of the man who wrote the words we have just quoted. The Rev. Mark Guy Pearse was a many-sided man; a man, too, of great gentleness, but of strong convictions; and one of these convictions was his firm belief in British-Israel Truth.

He was a poet, and had a poet's vision added to his historic sense. A Cornishman too, and therefore a mystic, but a practical mystic withal, always in touch with the heavenly places. Did not his face show it? Here is one of his own verses, revealing the source of his inspiration.

"I shall be anointed with fresh oil." (Psalm xcii, 10.)

Thou all-wise Maker of this mystic me,
Thy hands alone can keep me at my best:
To keep me sweet in thought and word and deed:
To keep from rust the while that I must rest:
To keep in harmony Thy will with mine,
And harmony with all the daily life:
To keep from friction, grinding, grating care:
To keep me free from enmity and strife:
To me in all the round of daily toil
Renew, I pray, Thy consecrating oil.

Mark Guy Pearse was born at Camborne on January 3rd, 1842, the son of Mark Guy Pearse of that town.

The Pearses were an old Cornish family, and must have been amongst the earliest Wesleyan Methodists in Cornwall or anywhere else. Mr. Mark Guy Pearse, senior, was a man of sunny and cheerful disposition, and had much in common with his more famous son, whose devotion to him was lifelong. Memories of young Mark Guy's childhood are scattered through his books. Here is one of "Old Rosie"; of how he would be put on a little stool by her bedside, while the hymn was sung, the chapter read, and a prayer offered by his father; of how the dear old saint would then lay her hands on his head and pray, "God bless the little lad, bless him, Lord, and please, Lord, to make him a preacher, for Jesus Christ's sake. Amen." The Lord heard "Old Rosie's" prayer, and abundantly answered it, though Mark Guy Pearse fought against it, for his ambition was to be a doctor. In due course he was sent to Wesley College, Sheffield (where, incidentally, the writer of these notes also received a portion of his education).

On leaving "Wesley," he was articled to Dr. Hingston, of Liskeard, with whom he studied medicine for the next two years. The sweet, every-day piety of Mrs. Hingston had great influence with him, and he often said that he would never have become a Methodist Minister but for her. In October, 1861, he left Cornwall for London and was entered at St. Bartholomew's Hospital as a medical student, working, however, at the same time with loyalty and devotion at the nearest Wesleyan Chapel. "Old Rosie's" prayers, and God's will, prevailed however, and in the following October the young Mark Guy entered Didsbury College, Manchester, and began to prepare for the Wesleyan ministry. His religion, like his father's, was one of sunshine. So early as 1863 he wrote: "My great theory is that religion is neither gloomy nor dull, but that the highest duty of a Christian is to be a happy person."

Beginning his ministry in Leeds, Mr. Pearse continued with growing success in various centres until he joined Hugh Price Hughes in West London.

In 1866 Mr. Pearse married Mary Jane, eldest daughter of Mr. John Cooper of the Manor House, Dunstable, a union which was entirely happy. For nearly fifty years Mrs. Pearse was loved by everyone for her sweetness, her quiet decision and simplicity of character.

THE POWER OF PRAYER.

Mr. Pearse had a deep and passionate belief in prayer. A private letter to Mr. Telford reveals this vividly and simply

"It has been laid upon my mind, in looking over my long ministerial life, that whatever success may have attended it I ascribe mostly to the fact that I could never get a room big enough to hold the prayer-meeting. From a vestry where I found half-a-dozen I had a schoolroom with 250. I made that the 'Big Wheel of the Church.' I am writing this privately because I should not like to publish what seems like proclaiming my self-importance. . . . I always prepared myself by an hour of quiet communion, and went with 'the fire in my hand.' as Abraham went up the mount."

And again: "What hosts there are who lie away from the reach of the Gospel, high and low. They seem to be behind walls and gates; altogether beyond our reach. How can we get at them? By the power of prayer. Get little companies of Christians in one another's houses to pray. Have little praying parties: have praying 'at homes.' God is ready to repeat the miracles of His grace to-day if the Church has but faith to ask for them." What wonder, then, that every branch of his work throughout a long life was touched with the magic of God's visible blessing?

When he preached, the largest chapels were crowded. Rev. C. H. Spurgeon, the greatest preacher of his day, greatly desired him as his successor at the Metropolitan Tabernacle. They occasionally exchanged pulpits, but Mark Guy Pearse had no thought of leaving Methodism.

He produced many books—some forty in all. Probably Daniel Quorm and the delightful series of Cornish tales that followed that enchanting book are best known to the public. Some of Mr. Pearse's books and tracts have been translated into most of the European and Asiatic languages, from Gaelic and Welsh to Malagasy and Japanese, for, like Bunyan, with whom he had much in common, he had a universal appeal, and he was read by prince and peasant with equal understanding. Mr. Pearse on one occasion met Dean Stanley, and on asking after the Dean's wife, Lady Augusta Stanley, who was very seriously ill, the Dean replied: "I left her this afternoon with Queen Victoria, who, on entering the bedroom, said to my wife she had brought a book to read which had been a very great spiritual help to her—a book written by a Wesleyan minister," and the Dean added, "the book was your Daniel Quorm. I left the Queen reading it aloud."

His books are treasured in cottage homes and in Royal Palaces.

"MY MOTTO IS THOU."

A plumber wrote to Mr. Pearse, more than forty years ago: "My motto is THOU. I have written it in my cash-book, in my day-book, in my ledger."

He had been reading Mark Guy Pearse's Thoughts on Holiness. "Fearing dwelt in a King's Palace, but his dwelling-place was a dark, damp cellar. 'I trust I am one of the King's guests,' he says. Then comes Captain Faith, hurrying by. 'What hast thou written over thy door, Brother Fearing, in those black letters?' 'The words of the Psalmist, sir: "Iniquities prevail against me."' 'Ah! and then a full stop?' asks Faith almost fiercely. Then he takes poor Fearing up to a sunny chamber looking on the King's garden, and over the door was written in gold, the one word THOU, and on either side of it the rest of a sentence: 'As for our transgressions, THOU shalt purge them away.'"

A friend of the Pearses was once in Copenhagen and was being shown over the Royal Palace. Etiquette is simple in Denmark, and he was permitted to look nto the Royal private study. On the table lay an open book. It was Thoughts on Holiness, which had just been sent to the King by his sister, then Princess of Wales. And so this book-beautiful goes on, the record of an inspired and inspiring life. For the story of Mark Guy Pearse's long and intimate connection with the West London Mission, in which he and Hugh Price Hughes did such valiant work, still carried on by that stalwart Methodist, Dr. Dinsdale Young, also, as we all know, a convinced believer in British-Israel Truth—and by other Ministe s and laymen who owe much of their inspiration to Mark Guy Pearse, we must refer our readers to the book to which we are indebted for the facts of this notice, and which we heartily recommend.

The book brings before us a wonderful personality, a life well-lived to the end. He was a living exponent of his own words: "I am the more convinced the longer I live, that love is the only orthodoxy and selfishness the only heterodoxy." He was unselfish to the end. He loved life. "If the pain gets no worse, I should like to be ninety with all of you round me." "Don't be too sorry for me. This will pass in a few minutes. Lord, keep me sweet." "A day came when he sent for Mr. Goldhawk, the present Superintendent of the West London Mission. 'I found him very weak and in much pain,' wrote Mr. Goldhawk, 'but nothing could suppress the gaiety of this radiant Christian. We talked together, we laughed together, we prayed together. What an hour it was. He gave me the details of the service which he desired should be held in Kingsway Hall on the day of his funeral.' Raising himself on his arm, he said: 'Please understand, NO MOURNING, NO GRIEF, NO GLOOM, NO DEAD MARCH. Start the service with "Praise God from Whom all blessings flow," and let all the stops be out on the organ, and ask the people to thunder it out when they sing it in triumph. Remember,' he added, 'I shall be with you and shall join in the singing.'"

How glorious it is, this Communion of Saints in which he so fully believed, and which we realize when we say:

"Therefore with Angels and Archangels, and with all the company of heaven, we laud and magnify Thy glorious Name; evermore praising Thee, and saying, Holy, holy, holy, Lord God of Hosts, heaven and earth are full of Thy glory: Glory be to Thee, O Lord most High.—Amen."

THE WITNESS OF THE GREAT PYRAMID.—I.

BY BASIL STEWART.

(Synopsis of an address given at the Priory Church of St. Bartholomew the Great, Smithfield, on May 4th, at 11 a.m.)

THE reference in Isaiah xix, 19-20, to "an altar to the Lord in the midst of the land of Egypt, and a pillar at the border thereof," which was also to be a sign and a witness to the Almighty, is one which has puzzled many expositors to explain. Generally, however, it is passed over without comment, or else referred to some incident in the past which, on analysis, is found to be at variance with the conditions implied in the prophecy. Thus it has been applied to the temple and altar erected by the Jews at Leontopolis, under the Ptolemies, during the second century B.C.

This building, however, was contrary to the injunction given in Jer. xliv, 26, that "the name of Jehovah shall no more be named in the mouth of any man of Judah in all the land of Egypt." It was therefore not "an altar to the Lord," though by man's self-will intended to be so. Also it was an altar of sacrifice; Isaiah describes an altar of witness, an important distinction, but one apt to be overlooked.

This chapter of Isaiah, entitled the "burden of Egypt," is a prophecy of events which are to happen in that country in the last days, as is indicated by the expression "in that day" emphasized six times throughout the prophecy. It is therefore a prophecy addressed to the present time, the fulfilment of which is developing in events taking place in Egypt to-day. In other words, Isaiah foretold that, at a time then far distant, there would be discovered in Egypt a monument which would be a witness to God's existence, and would also be a sign whose purport would remain a sealed book till the closing years of the "last days."

Isaiah thus defines the nature of this witness; its exact location; and the time of its discovery; three conditions fulfilled only by one monument in Egypt to-day—the Great Pyramid of Gizeh.

It is not—nor ever intended to be—a tomb, and could not be used as such, but it is, as Isaiah says, a sign and witness to the Lord, built under Divine inspiration and enshrining a prophetic forecast of world-history, the purpose of which has remained hidden until these last days, even as Daniel was told his prophecies would be sealed till the "time of the end." (Dan. xii, 9.)

The Great Pyramid also corresponds to the locality. It is situated precisely at the centre of the arc embracing the curved shore-line of Egypt; its meridian also divides the Delta region into two equal parts. It is thus literally in the midst or centre of Egypt, and being at the edge of the Libyan Desert, is also on the border of Egypt.

Further, the time answers. While the last century saw the first glimmerings of the truth of the Great Pyramid, it has remained for the 20th century to establish the identity of this witness in the eyes of those able to read it, and the time is not far distant when its true purpose will be admitted by all, even as the fulfilment of the prophecy itself will be completed.

This 19th chapter of Isaiah (see also Dan. xi, 40-45) foretells events in Egypt to be enacted at "the time of the end," and confirms the message of the Pyramid itself that that "sign and witness" would not be recognized as such till we had reached this stage in world history. This accounts for the fact that only now is its real purpose being understood and that hitherto it has remained, ever since it was first erected, more or less an object of speculation, it being so constructed that the discovery of its secret could not be made before the due time.

The true purpose of the Great Pyramid is to reveal a system of prophetic chronology, running parallel with, and confirming, Biblical prophecy, forecasting events which history has proved correct in the past, are being confirmed to-day, and are due to take place in the immediate future. And here let me add a note of warning. Prophecy is not given only to enable us to foretell the future, but is also given as a witness to God's foreknowledge when the time of its fulfilment arrives, which fulfilment enables us to read the time on God's clock of the ages. By this we know that the time of the "restitution of all things," spoken of by St. Peter (Acts iii, 21) and of which the world to-day is so sorely in need, cannot now be far off. The Great Pyramid's symbolism likewise tells us that the events so often prophesied in Scripture, and emphasized by our Lord, as heralding the end of this dispensation and the Second Advent, are now upon us.

He defined the time as following the deliverance of Jerusalem—a prophecy that has now passed into history—and the conditions immediately following that event: "distress of nations with perplexity." While there has been distress in the past, it has never been accompanied by the world-wide perplexity of the present time. The history of the past twelve years clearly proves the correctness of this forecast in its application to current times, and is corroborated absolutely in the symbolism of the Great Pyramid. The message and warning, therefore, given in the Pyramid's time-chart are identical with that given by our Lord Himself, and at the same time supplies the answer to the disciples' question, "Master, tell us, when shall these things be?" Such is the witness of the Great Pyramid.

MIDLAND AREA RALLIES.

ASHBY.—On Saturday afternoon, June 28th, quite a considerable party of B.-I.-W.F. people representing the Branches at Derby, Stoke-on-Trent, Burton, Leicester, Nottingham, Birmingham and other parts of the district met at Ashby-de-la-Zouch. By the hospitable kindness of Mrs. Frances Abel Smith the lovely and extensive grounds of the Manor House were placed at our disposal, and here, being blessed with a perfect summer day, the moments sped delightfully. We found much to interest us in the ancient Parish Church, and still more in the ruins of the famous Castle, the history of which was sketched for us by Mr. Stanley Jacques. The company was so large that we were obliged to have two sittings for tea at the Queen's Hotel, after which we all resorted to the Parish Church, by kind permission of the Vicar, where shortened Evensong was said by the Revs. T. H. Whitehouse and Gilbert Davies, the lesson being read by Mr. Jacques. Gloriously we sang together our hymns to Christ our King; then, after receiving the Benediction, with peace in our hearts and love to one another, returned to our homes in five different counties, tired but happy.

WORCESTER.—The "faithful city" of Worcester was the chosen rendezvous for another Midland Rally on Saturday afternoon, July 12th, when contingents gathered from Leamington, Birmingham, Walsall, Stourbridge, Worcester, Cheltenham and Gloucester Branches.

The first hour was spent on the West Promenade, overlooking the River Severn, with lovely views, and surroundings full of fascinating historical suggestion. Happily the weather was all we could wish. The Custos of the Cathedral then conducted our party over the grand old House of God, and in a delightfully homely way, but reverently and with a keen historical sense, pointed out its many features of interest; but unfortunately the time for this was all too short.

It had been arranged for our party to visit the Commandery, an unique house dating as a religious and charitable foundation from Saxon times and still occupied, but unhappily the serious illness of the proprietor made the visit impossible, so for the next hour groups scattered about the city hunting up things and places of interest. However, we all met at tea, provided in a central Church hall. After tea short, bright speeches were made by the Rev. Arthur Pritchard, Mr. C. Lavender and the Commissioner.

The crowning joy of the occasion came when, in the early evening, by kind permission, we all gathered for a short Evensong in the Lady Chapel of the Cathedral. Prayers were said by the Revs. T. H. Whitehouse and J. T. Childs, the lesson was read by the Rev. G. Davies, and the Rev. Arthur Pritchard played the organ.

Many in one. "Together in unity" blessedly realized in holy worship! The hallowed spot; its age-old associations with the myriad saints who after their struggles have passed on; the irresistible atmosphere of devotion impregnating even the very fabric of the majestic sanctuary; the loveliness of the summer evening streaming in mellowed light through the gloriously coloured windows—how it all gripped our souls! and how fervently it all found expression in our singing of the hymns of praise and adoration to our Divine Saviour King! "Precious moments, rich in blessing." What inspiration this common worship will surely give to our work for Him in days to come. And so we returned to our widely scattered homes with the sweet words singing in our ears and hearts, "The peace of God which passeth all understanding."

RUGBY.—Unhappily the Garden Party and Rally arranged for July 5th had to be cancelled on account of very serious illness. We are now delighted to have better news, and are even hoping that the event may take place before long. Meanwhile our entire sympathy is with the sufferer and his family.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE.

SIR,—In answer to Mr. Landseer MacKenzie's letter of July 12th, with reference to the Medallion of Ollam Fodhla, given in your issue of June 28th, along with an article of Mr. W. F. Dillon, might I say it is quite correct. The reason is, that I got it taken myself in Dublin by a photographer specially for an article for the "Northern British-Israel Review," of October, 1917, for the late Mr. Graham Coltart, who asked me to write it, and to which my own name is attached. The Medallions also of Moses and Alfred the Great appeared with it, all taken at the same time.

A copy of this same photograph appears in my "Coming Events," chapter 5. I do not know where Mr. Dillon got his print, but most of his article would appear to be taken from my chapter on "Ollam Fodhla." I have not had the pleasure of reading Mr. MacKenzie's booklet, nor the pleasure of knowing Mr. Dillon.

I am, yours very truly,

FRANK M. LOWRY.

Dublin.

W. P. and P. P. write:—"Please accept the enclosed donation towards your great work. We are in service and we do sewing in our spare time to earn something extra for God's work. We cannot tell you all that the B.-I. teaching has meant to us. It has deepened our prayer life, increased our love for God, and our zeal for His Kingdom; it has made the Bible a new Book to us, and life a gloriously new thing, and we want others to share our joy. We work and pray that God will abundantly bless all that is being done by the Federation, and give all His servants in the coming days a fresh anointing of His Holy Spirit, that our nation may be won for God."

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

THROUGH the generosity of Mr. S. J. Frame, Vice-President of the Canadian B.-I. Federation, our Manifesto has been published in The Toronto Globe, one of the leading papers of the great Dominion.

We now have the Manifesto reprinted in eight-page large octavo leaflet form at one penny, or 1s. per dozen, and so great is the demand that many thousands have already been despatched, filling orders by post and by cablegram from various countries of the five continents.

There can be no doubt the wise and wide circulation of these reprints will have very great results. We invite the co-operation of our readers in this matter. A single copy can be posted to a friend or someone whom you wish to reach under a halfpenny stamp.

An important Executive Official of one of the biggest business concerns in America writes :—" I have seen your Manifesto in three English papers. It is a remarkable document. I can well believe it will make an impression on serious minds. . . . The Christianizing of the social order, or the demonizing of it, are the alternatives that seem to confront us. It is my opinion that your Manifesto is a valuable offset to any tendency towards a downward trend, and a true indication of the right course to be taken." A weighty deliverance, which all business men should carefully consider. " Meanwhile," says a London paper, " Bolshevist spies and anarchists are stealing into our city every day under cover of diplomatic privilege. At such a time the worst crime of any Briton is indifference."

We note that the Morning Post, and the outspoken weekly journal, The Patriot, have joined with us in condemning the arbitrary conduct of the B.B.C. We also have letters of approval. * * *

Mr. John Leech, K.C., visited Southampton on July 12th, and addressed a goodly company of Crusaders. After tea, very kindly provided by Mr. and Mrs. Gross, in whose garden the meeting was held, the elder friends spent a profitable time discussing with the lecturer important questions concerning the Kingdom of God.

On Saturday last Mr. Leech conducted a party of some forty Crusaders to Windsor, where they visited portions of the Castle.

The Rev. Joseph Gay, A.T.S., has returned from his tour in Canada and America, where he gave a large number of addresses to very appreciative audiences. On Sunday, August 3rd, at 3 and 6.30 p.m., weather permitting, Mr. Gay will speak in Hyde Park, under the auspices of the B.-I. Crusaders. He takes his stand beyond the railings within the Park at the Marble Arch. The support of B.-I. believers will be welcomed by the Crusaders in this work.

We are asked to announce that very cheap and attractive tours are arranged for Belgium during the season, with facilities for visiting the Antwerp and Liege Exhibitions, Brussels, Dinant, etc., etc. There are five days' or fifteen days' excursions ; also specially cheap August Bank Holiday inducements. From personal experience, two years ago, we can say that a trip to Belgium can be a truly delightful holiday. All particulars can be obtained from the Belgian National Railways Office, 47, Cannon Street, E.C.4.

An M.D., who is at present acting as locum tenens in a Southern county, writes that he is visiting some twenty villages and spreading B.-I. Truth among the farmers and labourers, and he finds them eager to hear his message. Many of them, he says, had an instinct that it was true. They had a feeling that there was something lacking in the teaching they had been receiving, a something they should have been told long ago. Their ready acceptance of what he put before them made a deep impression upon the doctor's mind.

A member who is greatly dreading possible loss of sight, and who is in much spiritual distress through doubts and fears, will be grateful for the prayers of our readers.

We regret to have to record the death of Mr. Russell Longmore, of Woking, a member of many years' standing, and one who took every opportunity of speaking on British-Israel Truth to those whom he met. Mrs. Longmore is the Secretary of our Woking Branch. We tender to her and to her family our sincere sympathy in her bereavement.

* * *

An ex-Service man to whom one of our members of Council was very kind while he was in hospital, and who, through her influence, became a B.-I., writes to her a most interesting letter in which he recounts some of his experiences as a lay preacher proclaiming Israel Truth with quite surprising results. He had been kept busy answering the questions of those who received the Message joyfully. He is very hopeful of a schoolmaster to whom he is lending books. He discovered a Christian gentleman who had never heard of B.-I. teaching, but who had, through the study of the Bible, arrived at the firm conviction that Britain was Israel. He wants to live long enough to see God's plans and purposes unfold.

We have gratefully received from Mr. John H. Wood a copy of the Sun newspaper, published in London in 1838, giving a detailed account of Queen Victoria's Coronation, and particulars of the Coronation Stone, also interesting items about the monarchs who preceded the Good Queen. It is altogether a most wonderful publication, and well preserved. Mr. Wood had seen our Manifesto and had sent to us for further literature, upon receiving which he was impelled to send us what he had treasured for a great many years. We thank him heartily, and we shall treasure his gift amongst our archives.

We published in our issue of June 14th an interesting and arresting article by the Rev. C. C. Dobson, M.A., entitled " The True Story of a Book " ; it is now available in our Book Room in leaflet form, and it should be widely circulated.

Mr. R. O. Lucas writes from Toronto :—" Some splendid meetings have been held this week. Mr. W. H. Blackaller and Mrs. Blackaller travelled to Hamilton, and a letter from Miss Twohy, Secretary of our Hamilton Branch, reports excellent meetings and a thought-provoking address by Mr. Blackaller.

" The Toronto East Branch held a fine meeting, which was addressed by the President, Mr. Gladstone Brown, who is delivering a series of lectures on the general subject of ' The Common Law.'

" The Toronto Central Branch was addressed by Mr. S. J. Crealock, our Dominion Treasurer, who expounded in a remarkably clear way to his audience ' Our attitude towards the Divine Person of Jesus Christ.' Mr. Crealock was the recipient of sincere thanks.

" The first copies of The Times containing the ' Manifesto,' so kindly sent along to us by Headquarters, were duly received by us. We are overjoyed that the Message is thus going forth, and at one of our Branches the meeting stood and sang the Doxology in thanks to God for the manner in which He is allowing the B.-I.-W.F. to forward His Kingdom Gospel. The Ontario Provincial Executive has already taken steps to try to have the Manifesto published in some of our papers here if at all possible.

" May God continue to guide and bless us all in His Work ! "

GARDEN MEETING AT GLOUCESTER.

A well-attended and successful garden meeting of the Gloucester Centre of the B.-I. Federation was held on Thursday afternoon, by the kind invitation of Mr. and Mrs. R. James, in the beautiful grounds of their residence. Mr. A. E. Smith (local Hon. Secretary) occupied the chair, and in his opening remarks stated that the main object of the gathering was to form a pleasing link between the last winter's work and the coming one. As a result of the recent series of lectures by the Area Commissioner, Rev. T. H. Whitehouse, a number of people were joining the Branch and many were seeking further information on the subject. Dr. E. F. Waddington (Cheltenham), who has for many years been a student and enthusiastic exponent of British-Israel, had kindly undertaken to give a talk on the " Bible proofs of our claim to being the representative Kingdom of God on earth."

Dr. Waddington said that British-Israel Truth was the Master-key by which the whole of the Bible could be thoroughly understood. Our teaching supplements the Gospel of Salvation ; it is the twin Gospel of the Kingdom of God on earth as preached by Christ and His Apostles. The speaker quoted many texts and portions of Scripture in support of his statements, and said that the Scriptures alone were sufficient to prove the identity of the Anglo-Saxon Nations with the redeemed and restored Israel Peoples.

Refreshments were kindly provided by Mr. and Mrs. James, after which a comprehensive and hearty vote of thanks was passed to Dr. Waddington and to the host and hostess, and to all who had helped to make the gathering such a success, and the remainder of the evening was spent in social converse.

GARDEN PARTY AT TEIGNMOUTH, DEVON.

Through the kindness of Col. and Mrs. Luxmoore, about seventy guests were entertained on July 10th. Rev. B. B. Liptrott, M.A., Vicar of West Teignmouth, took the chair ; the Rev. John Wm. Storey, of Rattery Vicarage, Brent Tor, was also present and took part. The Chairman asked Mr. Storey to offer prayer and introduced the lecturer, the Rev. Commander Roberts, and in a few encouraging words commended the study of prophecy and warned people not to be discouraged by the different methods of interpretation, for in the end we should find every prophecy fulfilled. In proposing a vote of thanks to Col. and Mrs. Luxmoore for their very kind hospitality, the Vicar was very emphatic in his remarks upon the lecture, he himself being a great helper to our Cause. Mr. Storey came right out into the open and showed himself a decided believer in British-Israel.

As Mrs. Luxmoore had invited several personal friends who knew nothing of the subject, the lecturer prefaced his address with a few introductory remarks.

You will notice, he said, that " Saints " are mentioned in Deut. xxxiii, 3; these saints are God's people Israel, chosen in Christ from the foundation of the world to be co-workers with Him in the establishment of His Kingdom. "All His saints are in Thy hands, they shall all sit at Thy feet and hear Thy words." Then " He exalteth the horn of all His people, the praise of all His saints, even of the children of Israel, a people near unto Him. Praise ye the Lord." It was for this purpose God chose Israel unitedly. But the fact that they did not accomplish His purpose under the Law is revealed to us in Gal. iv, until the Seed should come, that is Christ. In 1 Sam. xii Israel rejected God as their King ; 390 years after they themselves were cast out of the land to be disciplined. In 975 B.C. took place the separation of Israel from Judah. This act was from God ; they have never been united since, though when Israel was taken into captivity many of Judah followed them into Assyria (2 Kings xviii, 13). Then again afterwards, in the time of Jeconiah, Nebuchadnezzar took many to Babylon. " The good figs " of Jer. xxiv joined their brethren eventually (Ezek. xi, 15-16), but the Jew of to-day is mainly of the remnant that returned from Babylon, and some of these only were guilty of the Crucifixion. But these showed that under the LAW could be no remission of sins until they come to Christ, which in Ezek. xxxvii takes place, and Israel and Judah complete again one Nation.

THE LAW OF THE LORD OR THE COMMON LAW
By Rev. Dr. W. PASCOE GOARD

Anglo-Saxon Common Law is based on the laws given to Israel at Sinai. If statesmen would get back to those laws peace would ensue. This is a book which should be carefully studied. It is a most valuable contribution towards the settlement of many of to-day's perplexing problems.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

THE DUAL OUTPOURING OF THE SPIRIT.

BY THE REV. DR. W. PASCOE GOARD.

THERE are two expressions used in this regard. The first is regarding the Israel nation: "I will put My Spirit within you."

The second is regarding "all flesh": "I will pour out My Spirit upon all flesh."

The first expresses itself nationally, in regard to the Commandments, Statutes and Judgments of the Lord. The Law is to be restored, and the people are to obey it.

The second expresses itself in the activities of the Evangel. There are two possibilities here.

It might be that these are variations of expression stating the same fact.

It may be that this is a classification of Divine gifts and activities.

It is for us to decide which we have here: a variation of expression in setting forth the same Divine activity; or a carefully-worded classification of different activities. How shall we decide this point surely, and without fear of error?

If we have here simply a variety of expressions in setting forth the same process of Divine activity, then the results of the activity indicated in both forms of expression will be identical. There will be the same result following the putting of "My Spirit within them" and following the pouring out "My Spirit upon all flesh." Are the resulting activities identical?

The answer to this is a most positive No, as we read the clearly-written record.

The result of God's putting His Spirit within His people is expressed in terms of national law and obedience to it. The Law is to be restored as it came from God to the nation, and the people are to obey the Law so restored.

The result of God's pouring out His Spirit upon all flesh as exemplified at Pentecost, and thereafter as recorded in the Acts and the Epistles, is, that men occupy themselves chiefly with the Gospel of Salvation, and find themselves endowed for the purpose with miraculous powers of speech and of action.

When such diverse results are stated clearly, we may be sure that we have more than a variation of expression; we have a classification of activities carried on by God to usward.

From this consideration there emerges the fact that God has covenanted to put His Spirit within the heart of the citizens of the nation.

From this consideration we have also the fact that God has promised to pour out His Spirit upon the individuals which constitute His Church.

The national result is the return to the Divine Law. The ecclesiastical result is the outburst of evangelistic revival.

Thus we find that there is a distinctive Spiritual endowment of the nation, and also another distinctive Spiritual endowment of the Church.

Thus we are taught to look for a revival expressing itself in political and Parliamentary action in the realm of Statesmanship; and we are also taught to look for a revival expressing itself in evangelistic activity.

Both of these phases flow from the Spirit of God.

This view of the matter is so important, and will be so new to many earnest workers in the field of Divine truth and practice, that we feel the fewer our own words in regard to the matter the better. And the more clearly we can place the written Word of God before the reader, the better it will be for all.

Therefore in double columns we shall place before the reader an assembly of the passages which deal with these classified subjects.

"Put My Spirit within":—

"Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah:

Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they brake, although I was an husband unto them, saith the Lord:

But this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel; After those days, saith the Lord, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people.

And they shall teach no more every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord: for I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more."—(Jer. xxxi, 31-34.)

"And I will make an everlasting covenant with them, that I will not turn away from them, to do them good: but I will put my fear in their hearts, that they shall not depart from me."—(Jer. xxxii, 40.)

"Son of man, thy brethren, even thy brethren, the men of thy kindred, and all the house of Israel wholly, are they unto whom the inhabitants of Jerusalem have said, Get you far from the Lord: unto us is this land given in possession.

Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord God; Although I have cast them far off among the heathen, and although I have scattered them among the countries, yet will I be to them as a little sanctuary in the countries where they shall come.

Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord God; I will even gather you from the people, and assemble you out of the countries where ye have been scattered, and I will give you the land of Israel.

And they shall come thither, and they shall take away all the detestable things thereof and all the abominations thereof from thence.

And I will give them one heart, and I will put a new spirit within you; and I will take the stony heart out of their flesh, and will give them an heart of flesh:

That they may walk in my statutes, and keep mine ordinances, and do them: and they shall be my people, and I will be their God."—(Ezekiel xi, 15-20.)

"Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean; from all your filthiness, and from all your idols, will I cleanse you.

A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you; and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh.

And I will put my spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my judgments, and do them."—(Ezekiel xxxvi, 25-27).

"And shall put my spirit in you, and ye shall live, and I shall place you in your own land: then shall ye know that I the Lord have spoken it, and performed it, saith the Lord."—(Ezekiel xxxvii, 14.)

"For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord: I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts; and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people.

And they shall not teach every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord; for all shall know me from the least to the greatest.

For I will be merciful to their unrighteousness, and their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more."—(Heb. viii, 10-12).

"This is the covenant that I will make with them after those days, saith the Lord, I will put my laws into their hearts, and in their minds will I write them;

And their sins and iniquities will I remember no more."—(Heb. x, 16-17.)

"Pour out My Spirit upon":—

"For I will pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground: I will pour my spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thine offspring."—(Isaiah xliv, 3.)

"And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions:

And also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my spirit.

And I will shew wonders in the heavens and in the earth, blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke.

The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and the terrible day of the Lord come.

And it shall come to pass that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be delivered: for in mount Zion and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance, as the Lord hath said, and in the remnant whom the Lord shall call."—(Joel ii, 28-32.)

"And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place.

And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting.

And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them.

And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance.

And there were dwelling at Jerusalem Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven.

Now when this was noised abroad, the multitude came together, and were confounded, because that every man heard them speak in his own language.

And they were all amazed and marvelled, saying one to another, Behold, are not all these which speak Galilæans?

And how hear we every man in our own tongue, wherein we were born?

Parthians and Medes, and Elamites, and the dwellers in Mesopotamia, and in Judæa, and Cappadocia, in Pontus, and Asia,

Phrygia, and Pamphylia, in Egypt, and in the parts of Libya about Cyrene, and strangers of Rome, Jews and proselytes, Cretes and Arabians, we do hear them speak in our tongues the wonderful works of God.

And they were all amazed and were in doubt, saying one to another, What meaneth this?

Others mocking said, These men are full of new wine.

But Peter, standing up with the eleven, lifted up his voice, and said unto them, Ye men of Judæa, and all ye that dwell at Jerusalem, be this known unto you, and hearken to my words:

For these are not drunken, as ye suppose, seeing it is but the third hour of the day.

But this is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel;

And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams:

And on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out in those days of my Spirit; and they shall prophesy:

And I will shew wonders in heaven above, and signs in the earth beneath; blood, and fire, and vapour of smoke:

The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before that great and notable day of the Lord come:

And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved.

Ye men of Israel, hear these words: Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you by miracles and wonders and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know."—(Acts ii, 1-22.)

"While Peter yet spake these words, the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word.

And they of the circumcision which believed were astonished, as many as came with Peter, because that on the Gentiles also was poured out the gift of the Holy Ghost.

For they heard them speak with tongues, and magnify God. Then answered Peter,

Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized, which have received the Holy Ghost as well as we?

And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord. Then prayed they him to tarry certain days."—Acts x, 44-48.)

"And as I began to speak, the Holy Ghost fell on them, as on us at the beginning."—(Acts xi, 15.)

"And it came to pass, that, while Apollos was at Corinth, Paul having passed through the upper coasts came to Ephesus: and finding certain disciples,

He said unto them, Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed? And they said unto him, We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost.

And he said unto them, Unto what then were ye baptized? And they said, Unto John's baptism.

Then said Paul, John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people, that they should believe on him which should come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus.

When they heard this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.

And when Paul had laid his hands upon them, the Holy Ghost came on them: and they spake with tongues, and prophesied."—(Acts xix, 1-6.)

Reading these balanced statements, who can doubt but, like all the rest of the Gospel and its machinery, there is the two-fold provision for Israel and the Church in the gift of the Holy Spirit?

When it is agreed that this is a true statement of the case, then the question arises as to how to account for the blindness which has closed our eyes, and as a consequence closed our lips to this truth; and that the nation and our national leaders have been allowed to go on their own way in the light of their own judgment only, doing the things which struggling interests induce them to do, not knowing that it is God's plan for His Statesmen as for the Ministers of His Church that they should walk in the light of the Spirit of God.

It is time that we all awoke to the fulness of the message which is here given to us, and that we call the enfranchised citizens of the nation to take the indicated action of restoring the Law as it was given to us from God.

Let it be remembered that the additions to the Law by human agency has so increased the number of statutes and laws of one kind and another that no man living can estimate their number. Also no man living knows the tenth part of them. It is doubtful if there is a building large enough to house them all if they were all brought together and arranged in the usual shelvings of the library.

But the Law of the Lord, as contained in the Bible, is so compact that, with all the histories, all the prophecies, all the Gospels and Epistles, all the Psalms added, when bound together, we can take up the whole library, put it in our pocket and walk away unencumbered.

As it is compact in expression, so it is perfect in operation, and there could not by any possibility arise a case or a position not covered in expressed principle applicable to the case.

When the Spirit of God breathes through the Law once more; when He rules in the Law Courts of Israel as of old; when the keeping of the Law brings the warmth of the consciousness of Divine favour, and the breaking of the Law the consciousness of Divine rebuke, then the nation will in very deed be taught of God, and great will be its peace.

Also when the Church experiences the Pentecostal outpouring, it will arise in majesty and beauty and will lead the world to God.

AN EXAMINATION OF MR. AVARY H. FORBES' "STONE WALL."

(Letter No. 4.)

By PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc.

22*nd*.—Mr. Forbes speaks of "the fifth universal monarchy." "Fifth" does not seem to be the proper word to be used in this connection, if it be used to denote order in time and succession.

Daniel says: "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom"—the Stone Kingdom.

"In the days of these kings" cannot mean after these kings and their kingdoms have gone. The new, or fifth kingdom, was to be contemporary with Babylon, Persia, Greece and Rome; and was not the fifth in the sense of being "set up" after them.

It could not be the Church of Christ or Christianity Daniel was talking about, as three of these great kingdoms had been destroyed before the Christian Church was "set up" in the lifetime of Christ.

The Stone Kingdom to be "set up" was to be in the process of setting up contemporaneously with the four great kingdoms. The words are, "In the days of these kings," and not after the days of these kings.

Let us read further here: The image of the dream was composed of four primary kingdoms, viz., Babylon, Persia, Greece and Rome; and in this connection we read: "and the stone that smote the image became a great mountain that filled the whole earth."

Mark! The Stone smote the image. This image represented Babylon, Persia, Greece and Rome. Therefore the Stone existed in the days of Babylon and Nebuchadnezzar. Christianity did not, therefore Christianity was NOT the Stone Kingdom.

This is true also of Persia and Greece, both of which went down before Christ and Christianity appeared.

Mr. Forbes uses the words, "the fifth universal monarchy." If these words be properly used and understood, it is well; if not, not.

The four image-kingdoms were great monarchies but not "universal," though they were extensive in truth. The fifth, i.e., the one set up during the existence of the four major kingdoms, was to be universal, as it was to fill the whole earth. A truly universal monarchy indeed! And it was to be in course of construction while Babylon was growing to the full and in its decay; while Persia came forward, grew to power and fell; while Greece crossed from Europe into Asia and triumphed at the zenith of the power of both; and while Rome was growing and climbing to nationhood, and to its decline and fall:

"And it shall stand for ever."

There must be on this earth to-day a kingdom that existed in the days of the four image-kingdoms, for it is to "stand for ever."

23rd.—Mr. Forbes adds the words "a spiritual kingdom, the Church of Christ." He has no authority for the use of these words in this connection. The Stone Kingdom was in existence in the fifth century before Christ. Moreover, the Christian Church has never yet been a nation, a world kingdom, and is not at this hour.

However, there is a kingdom, and its throne will be taken over by our Lord and King when He comes to reign.

Then He will take "the throne of His father David" and "rule over the House of Jacob for ever." This rule of Christ on the Throne of David is an event in the future and did not happen in the time of Babylon or Persia, Greece or Rome. We need go no further on this matter at present, though much of real value might be added.

24th.—In "Searchlight I," while dealing with the "Problem," Mr. Forbes says: "Let me here state the problem. The Ten Tribes of Israel were carried away captive into Assyria about the year 722 B.C. and located in Media, S.W. of the Caspian Sea . . . . . as far as authentic history goes, these tribes are never heard of again. This is admitted."

A remarkable statement! It is not "admitted."

(a) Shalmaneser had his servants write history on stone, and give important facts concerning the people he carried into captivity.

(b) Darius the Great had another historic statement put on stone during his reign concerning the people of Israel under different names, one of which was "Sacæ."

(c) On an ancient tombstone in the Crimea, found last century, was the following inscription: "I am Jehudi, the son of Moses, the son of Jehudah the Mighty, a man of the tribe of Naphtali, of the family of Shimli, who was carried captive in the captivity of Hosea, king of Israel, with the tribe of Simeon, together with other tribes of Israel."

(d) Here is another Israel Crimean inscription of high value, because among other things it gives an important date: "To one of the faithful in Israel, Abraham-ben-mar-Sinchah of Kertch, in the year of our exile 1682, when the envoys of the prince of Rosh Meshech came from Kiow (Kiev), to our Master Chazar Prince David; Halah, Habor, and Gozan, to which places Tiglath Pileser had exiled the sons of Reuben, Gad and the half tribe of Manasseh, and permitted to settle there, and from which they have been scattered throughout the entire east, even as far as China."

If we look at the year of this man's exile, viz., 1682, we see that he died about A.D. 960, supposing we date from 721 B.C. or 722 when Israel was deported to Media, etc.

These inscriptions show that Israel in part was living in the Crimea in the southern centre of Scythia.

Thus we find Mr. Forbes in error when he says, "these tribes were never heard of again," i.e., after 722 B.C.

(e) The great Jewish historian, Josephus, about A.D. 70 to A.D. 90, in the most positive manner, mentions the Ten Tribes of Israel, and locates them beyond the Euphrates and independent of Roman rule. A most important statement!

In addition, this great historian, 800 years after the exile of Israel, mentions the Ten Tribes and shows that they were then in a location eminently suitable and convenient to the S.E. borders of Russian Scythia. Of course Mr. Forbes had forgotten this noted reliable Roman Jew, the famous historian, Josephus by name.

Let it be remembered that this writer, Josephus, says the Ten Tribes were beyond the reach of Rome and were no part of that Empire.

Furthermore, we point out that a people known as Angles, Jutes, Danes, Norsemen, Brythons and others came into the British Isles after Rome had left and fallen under the relentless irresistible blows of God's Battle-axe under the name of Goth.

The Ten Tribes in Asia were not under Rome, and their European northern representatives, in later times, were not under Rome at any time. Certain interpreters of Daniel should keep these facts in view and thus avoid error.

25th.—Mr. Forbes attacks and belittles Esdras, who speaks so definitely about the Ten Tribes. In my humble opinion, Esdras was as safe an historian as are those historians who represent the highly civilized Britons as "naked, painted savages"; a veritable travesty on correct British history. Hence, I insist on using Esdras, who lived when the whereabouts of Israel were known and sc he said in fact.

The tombstone epitaphs I have above given corroborate Esdras' statement of fact.

Thus Mr. Forbes is confronted with half-a-dozen facts which clearly contradict his statement that "these tribes are never heard of again."

Surely Mr. Forbes would not reiterate his statement, viz., "As far as authentic history goes, these tribes are never heard of again," since they were carried into captivity 722 B.C.

RUSSIA AND BRITAIN IN THE BIBLE.

IT was the finding of Russia in the Bible, by "Oxonian" (The Rev. W. M. H. Milner, M.A.), half-a-century ago, that caused him also to find "Britain in the Bible." He tells us this in the following letter, which has recently appeared in The Cornwall Advertiser, where it seems the clerical editor of a church monthly has been pilloried for his antagonistic attitude to British-Israel Truth.

"SIR,—Instead of dealing further with the Kerrier Deanery Editorial, I should like to give a bit of constructive argument. What brought me, just over fifty years ago, to believe in 'Britain in the Bible,' was finding Russia in the Bible. Russia is very prominent in the news to-day, and the time cannot be far distant when the great prophecy of the Russian plot and its discomfiture will be fulfilled.

"This prophecy is to be found in Ezekiel, chapters xxxviii and xxxix. There are no less than fifteen definite points identifying Russia. Gôg is from an old root meaning giant, a fit designation for the Colossus of the North, the power controlling an empire of over eight million square miles, all comprised within one ring fence. Magog can be traced into

Mongolia, all now under Soviet Russia. A great portion of eastern Siberia is peopled by tribes of Mongolian origin, and twice over in the Middle Ages Russia was overrun by Mongol hordes, who intermarried with the natives, so that all Russia is literally the Land of Magog.

"Rôsh, as in the Septuagint version of 250 B.C., and now in the Revised English Bible, is the original form of the Russian name, recorded in Byzantine histories describing the first appearance of the tribes of Russ on the shores of the Black Sea. The great Hebrew grammarian, Gesenius, says that by 'Rôsh' in Ezekiel 'undoubtedly Russia is meant.' Meshech is the Hebrew Msc or Msk—obviously Muscovy and Moscow. Tubal is in the Hebrew Tôbl, recalling the old Siberian capital, Tobolsk on the Tobol. Gomer is traced in the old books to the shores of the Black and Caspian Seas, exactly where the different hordes of Cossacks have been settled from time immemorial. And Togarmah is the Turk—not those whom we are accustomed to call by that name, the Osmanli of Turkey—but the Turki race of Turkistan, Turcomania, Armenia, and Anatolia. These are the backbone of Russia—the thighs or flanks of the north. Persia is Russia's confederate now. Cush (in our ordinary English Bibles Ethiopia) had two settlements, Western and Eastern, the former Abyssinia, the latter Afghanistan. Russian propaganda has been at work in each. Sheba and Dedan are these Arab tribes with whom even now Russian agents are busy negotiating alliances. And Tarshish is India. King Solomon's eastern navy brought from Tarshish the very things which together are found in India—the country now in a ferment largely owing to influences from Moscow. The greatness of the army brought into the field by Ezekiel's Gôg fits in with a population of 150,000,000 under compulsory military service. And the preponderance of cavalry described in the prophecy is true of the motley Army of Russia. Ezekiel describes Israel and Israel's Land as the object of Gôg's designs—Russia aims at the subversion of Britain.

"The Britain of history stands thus revealed as the Israel of prophecy. The respective destinies of British-Israel and her enemies are plainly set forth—involving the sudden and impressive downfall of Russia.

"Anyone troubling to read carefully through those two chapters of Ezekiel will see how extraordinarily exact Bible prophecy is.

"W. M. H. MILNER."

"TARSHISH."

BY ALFRED J. LE MAISTRE.

THE article on the above subject in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE of May 31st was most interesting to me. I do not, however, agree with the writer of the article when he says: "An objection may occur against propositions . . . where the navy of Solomon is represented bringing from Tarshish 'gold and silver, ivory, and apes and peacocks.' These are products of Africa or Southern Asia, rather than of Europe." Of course they are, and that is just where they come from!

Now, if we follow the Bible narrative we shall know exactly where we stand. In 1 Kings ix, 26-28, we read: "And King Solomon made a navy of ships in Ezion-geber, which is beside Eloth, on the shore of the Red Sea, in the land of Edom. And Hiram (king of Tyre) sent in the navy his servants, shipmen that had knowledge of the sea, with the servants of Solomon. And they came to Ophir, and fetched from thence gold, four hundred and twenty talents, and brought them to Solomon." Both Ezion-geber, or Ezion-Gaber, and Eloth, or Elath, are mentioned in Deuteronomy ii, 8, in connection with the wanderings of the Israelites in the wilderness; and both are at the top of the Gulf of Akabah, which is on the east of the Peninsula of Sinai, while Ophir is placed in ancient maps in Arabia. And again we read: "The king (Solomon) had at sea a navy of Tharshish with the navy of Hiram: once in three years came the navy of Tharshish bringing gold, and silver, ivory, and apes, and peacocks" (1 Kings x, 22). This name is spelt in the first passage quoted above Tarshish, and also in 2 Chron. ix, 21.

And again, nearly a century later, we read: "After this did Jehoshaphat king of Judah join himself with Ahaziah king of Israel, who did wickedly: And he joined himself with him to make ships to go to Tarshish: and they made the ships in Ezion-gaber." But because the king of Israel was a very wicked king, God was displeased with the king of Judah for joining himself with him. "And the ships were broken, that they were not able to go to Tarshish" (2 Chron. xx, 35-37).

Now if we notice what is said about Tarshish, we shall find that there were two places called Tarshish. One in the East and the other in the West. This is perfectly evident from the fact that the ships of Solomon were built in Ezion-geber, which was in the Red Sea, and they could only go to Eastern Tarshish: and we are told with regard to them, as already stated: "Once in three years came the navy of Tharshish, bringing gold, and silver, ivory, and apes, and peacocks." These ships could only go to places bordering on the Indian Ocean, of which Arabia, West Africa, and the West Coast of India, were the principal.

The Rev. Dr. Vincent in his "Treatise on the Commerce and Navigation of the Ancients in the Indian Ocean," says, "Tin is mentioned as an import into Africa, Arabia, Scindi, and the Coast of Malabar (which means the West Coast of India). It has continued an article of commerce, brought out of Britain in all ages, and conveyed to all the countries in the Mediterranean by the Phœnicians, Greeks and Romans; and carried into the Eastern Ocean from the origin of commerce." And as we have seen from the above they obtained in exchange, "gold, and silver, ivory, and apes, and peacocks." The existence of Eastern Tarshish is, therefore, abundantly clear.

We can now turn to Western Tarshish and find something equally interesting. In Jonah i, 1-3, we read: "Now the word of the Lord came unto Jonah the son of Amittai, saying, Arise, go to Nineveh, that great city, and cry against it; for their wickedness is come up before me. But Jonah rose up to flee unto Tarshish from the presence of the Lord, and went down to Joppa; and he found a ship going to Tarshish: so he paid the fare thereof, and went down into it, to go with them unto Tarshish from the presence of the Lord."

It is most interesting to notice that Jonah knew that ships which sailed from Tyre called at Joppa (which is modern Jaffa, the port of Jerusalem), and that they would take passengers as well as merchandise, " and he found a ship going to Tarshish : so he paid the fare thereof, and went down into it, to go with them unto Tarshish from the presence of the Lord." Just like a Briton going to a British post, and paying his fare to the Continent, and going down into the ship. And that if he had continued his journey along the Mediterranean, past the Pillars of Hercules—the Straits of Gibraltar—he would have landed in Britain, most probably in Cornwall !

When Ezekiel was addressing Tyre he said : " Tarshish was thy merchant by reason of the multitude of all kind of riches ; with silver, iron, tin, and lead, they traded in thy fairs. . . . The ships of Tarshish did sing of thee in thy market : and thou wast replenished, and made very glorious in the midst of the seas." (xxvii, 12 and 25.)

It should be mentioned in the first place that tin was universally used by the Ancients as an alloy, for the hardening of copper in the making of swords, and various kinds of implements. It should also be understood that none of the civilized countries possessed tin mines except Britain, from which the Phœnicians obtained their tin ; and they were astute enough to keep that a secret to themselves ; so that the Greeks and Romans had to go to them for their tin, and some other commodities ; till the destruction of Tyre by Alexander the Great.

The secret was afterwards open to the Greeks and Romans, who naturally went to the source of supply—the Tin Islands ; which became known to the Greeks as the " Cassiterides," which means " Tin Islands," from the Greek word Cassiteros, which means tin. But originally the Greeks or Romans did not know the name by which the Islands, which they called Cassiterides, were known to the original Phœnician traders. They only knew that there were such Islands, without knowing where they were, nor by what name they were called. But they found eventually that they were known as the Britannic Isles.

Britannia is a Celtic name. The Celtic language is Phœnician naturalized in these Islands from the first settlers—may we say ?—descendants of Tarshish, the son of Javan, the son of Japhet, the son of Noah ; for " By these were the isles of the Gentiles divided in their lands ; every one after his tongue, after their families, in their nations." (Gen. x, 1-5.)

In pure Celtic, Britannia signifies the Land of Metals ; in Syriac (from which it is derived), Baratanac means the Land of Tin. The modern name Britain is but a modification of the ancient Baratanac or Britannia. Consequently the British Isles literally mean the Tin Isles, and identify Britain as the Cassiterides (Tin Islands) of the Greeks, and the Tarshish of the Scriptures, which supplied the merchants of Tyre (the Phœnicians) with " silver, iron, tin, and lead."

ADDRESS GIVEN BY REV. W. PASCOE GOARD, LL.D., F.R.G.S., F.R.E.S., OF LONDON, ENGLAND, AT THE COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES OF THE CHICAGO LAW COLLEGE.

CHANCELLOR DU BOIS, Gentlemen of the Faculty of the Chicago Law College, Members of the Graduation Class, Ladies and Gentlemen :

I thank you for your kindly words of introduction and welcome. The honour of my presence here to-night is all mine.

Coming as I do from the other branch of the great Anglo-Saxon family, especially Britain and the Dominion of Canada, let me bring to you the greetings of every class in that great family of nations, that division of the Anglo-Saxon Commonwealth of Nations. Your wonderful progress during the last century and a quarter, and especially during the last decades of that greatest of periods in world history, has been watched with intense interest among us everywhere, and all voices are saying, " Well done, America."

I have been asked to speak to you this evening on World Conditions.

We may begin with the truism that conditions are such in this decade as the world has never passed through before. Changes are to be seen and felt on every hand, in every department of activity and of life. But all these things are making for progress in the main. And " progress " is or should be a watchword of humanity.

A.D. 1800.

Turning back the pages of history to A.D. 1800, that is to say, back to the time of our grandfathers, we find that there were only about sixteen millions of Anglo-Saxons on the earth. Just about enough to man the two great cities of London and New York. Up to that time the Anglo-Saxon race had contentedly occupied the little Islands in the North-East Atlantic, the British Isles, with three or four millions on the stern fringe of the North American Continent.

By that time (1796) your branch of the Anglo-Saxon family had established their independence. They did not invent independence. This had been the heritage of the Anglo-Saxons until the Norman Conquest. That historic event threatened independence and liberty in the Anglo-Saxon family, and from 1066 to 1796 there had been a continuous fight for freedom among the Anglo-Saxon people. The American Declaration of Independence assured the winning of the struggle not only for America but for the whole of Anglo-Saxondom, and ultimately it will be found for the whole world. This was fully recognized in England in my school days. Illustrating this I recall that one of the very first national songs taught to my class in the primary department was " Ring the Bell, Watchman," commemorating the ringing of Liberty Bell upon the signing of the Declaration of Independence. That Declaration made a similar one unnecessary in the Dominion of Canada, and in all the other Overseas British Dominions, and even in the Motherland itself. It was a second and enlarged edition of Magna Charta.

At that time—A.D. 1800—Britain emerged from the conflict of the Napoleonic era, in which she had fought with her back to the wall against a world in arms. History shows that she fought to preserve the foundation of Western civilization. Trafalgar at sea and Waterloo on land brought that conflict to a favourable issue. History shows that it was a conflict fought for Anglo-Saxon principles—the Administrators of the Common Law versus the Administrators of the Civil Law. Although the accident of history threw the weight of America in the scale against Britain in the American phase of that period, it was an Anglo-Saxon war for Common Law—Liberty which Britain fought. Therefore you have an equal heritage in the results of that series of conflicts. It made Anglo-Saxon America possible. Of course I am speaking of systems and not of races particularly when I say Anglo-Saxon in this regard.

England came out of that series of conflicts which ended with Waterloo with a series of treaties which settled the national and colonial boundaries. There was confirmed to her Newfoundland, the West Indies, Canada, Gibraltar, Cape of Good Hope, Bombay. Her own ships entered upon possession of Australia and New Zealand. Thus the Empire was born. So history shows the birth of the "Gemini," the twins—the great Republic of the United States of America and the British Empire—at about the same period of history.

In both branches of the Anglo-Saxon family thus formed the COMMON LAW was laid down as the foundation of the States which were then in being and which should arise. In this great series of acts was born into the world ANGLO-SAXON CIVILIZATION.

From 1800 to 1914 there was such an intense period of constructive activity as the world had never known before. The greatest factors of that activity lay in the building of the United States of America and in the building of the British Empire.

It was a time of comparative peace, and of intense constructive activity in both branches of the Anglo-Saxon family. The reflex influence of this was to set up in the whole world a corresponding time of constructive activity. This activity set all realms buzzing with life, material, mental and spiritual.

Many and great movements in world history occupied part of the stage of human endeavour, but the greatest and most important part of world history fell to the Anglo-Saxon race in the period mentioned.

The Anglo-Saxon race found themselves faced with a threefold task. First, you in America were faced with the task of bringing your great territory from the wilderness condition to that which it has attained to-day. Your task was the building of the United States of America.

The British branch of the family found themselves tasked with laying the foundations of the great Overseas Dominions.

Both branches of the family have found another task laid on their shoulders, namely, the establishing of law and order among those races and in those regions where law and order did not then prevail.

In the past century you have done wonderful things in the way of building and equipping

THIS GREAT AMERICAN NATION.

No other single task has ever been undertaken on such a gigantic scale. You have invited the overcrowded nations of Europe to send their overflow of population to you, saying, "We have homesteads as a free gift for your people; we have employment of every kind for your workers." In each of the decades before the Great War you were receiving and taking care of between ten and twenty millions of the overflow of Europe and Britain. What you have accomplished during that time is a miracle of achievement. Great forests have given place to cultivated territories. Great resources have been uncovered and largely developed. The progress of your marching hosts has been from the fringe of the Atlantic seaboard to the Pacific coast. Forests, plains and mountains have yielded to you their treasures. You have covered them all with your great modern civilization, equipped as no former civilization has ever been. It is the most amazing development since the beginning of time.

In this great task you have employed armies of workers. In settling this great heritage you have called in the overflow of all civilized nations. You have had homes to give to all, employment for all.

But now the great task is nearing completion; you have begun to lay armies of workers off from the job of building the United States; you have largely exhausted the areas of free gift land. You have seen the necessity of closing the door to the immigrant and to the foreign worker. You have been engaged in the greatest single contract ever let to any branch of the human family. But now you are offering no more employment to the workers of the external nations, and you are shutting the door against the stream of migration.

This is producing an

in the U.S.A. and in the European nations. You have to divert your home forces of labour from the contract of building America to factories in which articles are being made for the American and world markets. In Europe, the overflow being checked from entry into America, there is overcrowding and unemployment.

The dislocation in Europe caused by the Great War, and the dislocation in America caused by the near completion of the great task of nation building, is responsible for the present economic distress.

Temporarily this is causing great confusion and distress. But there will come an adjustment of the stream of migration. The second great task of the Anglo-Saxon family will now be undertaken with vigour and this will restore the economic balance: that is to say, the building of similar great nations upon the foundations already laid in Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa. Canada, for instance, has a territory equal in size to yours, equal in natural resources, equally well situate for the world's markets, capable of providing for a population equal to that in the U.S.A. She will open her doors to the incoming millions during this century as the U.S.A. did in the last century; and so will Australia and New Zealand and the Africas.

Anglo-Saxondom must restore the balance again by pushing the building of ANGLO-SAXON CIVILIZATION, meaning by that word the Anglo-Saxon Commonwealth of Nations.

THE INTERNATIONAL SITUATION, ESPECIALLY IN EUROPE.

The international situation has changed greatly since 1913. What nations have fallen! What new nations have been set up! What great changes have been made in International boundaries and governments! But this is nothing new in world history. Take an Atlas which shows the political geography of the world in the various centuries of history. It will show that the boundaries of the nations are changed with every century. The nations change, but civilization and the world go on.

THE IMPERIAL SITUATION IN THE WORLD.

There have been Empires almost from the dawn of history They have been great factors in world affairs. They have organized and governed great masses of people and great territories stretching over continents. They have administered law and preserved some kind of order in the earth.

If we look back only to 1912, we find the greatest group of Empires in all history. There was China, administering the law over nearly one fifth of the human race; Turkey, whose rule extended to three continents—Asia, Africa and Europe; Russia, whose rule stretched from the Atlantic right round the land surface of the world to the North Pacific; there was Austria, including a group of nations; and there was the most youthful of the Empires—Germany, embracing all the kingdoms and lesser ethnical divisions of the German people. These Empires stood for much in the world.

To-day they have passed and are only a memory of history. Search all the past. Note all the remains of former Empires. It will be found that the debris of Empires which 1918 piled up exceeds all the ruins of preceding Empires during historic time. And yet the world and civilization go on.

So we find that financial systems may crash, and the world goes on. Nations may rise and fall, even in flocks they may rise and fall, but civilization and the world go on. Empires have risen, and have multiplied in the earth. On an appointed day, long foretold by Holy Writ, they passed away, but the world and civilization go on.

What then is the basic factor which holds the world upon its way even amid the falling of nations and the crashing of Empires. Let us see.

TWO GREAT PRINCIPLES.

There are two great principles upon which civilization depends. The great basic facts of history teach us this lesson. Every form of government from absolute democracy to absolute autocracy has been tried and none has been found sufficiently potent to permanently bind civilization together. In fact civilization has outlived in turn every ancient experiment in form of government, and modern variety in such form shows that civilization is not vitally affected by it.

Upon what then does civilization rest? What are the principles which bind civilization together? Let us look at the facts.

Brahmin civilization. Between thirty-five hundred and four thousand years ago a man, Brahma, propounded a doctrine which became the basis of a faith, and connected with the doctrine he promulgated a law. Two principles. That doctrine drew disciples who subjected themselves to that law. These disciples of the faith increased with the generations and centuries so that Brahmin civilization was formed. Economics, Nationality, Imperial Organisations have risen and fallen and changed. All kinds of external changes have taken place in and over the Brahmin world for ages. They have been penetrated by other races of competing economists, they have been attacked and broken nationally, they have been subjugated Imperially, they have been caused to pass through all kinds of changes from all such standpoints, but their civilization has not thereby been broken. It has been held together by Brahmin faith expressing itself in the terms of Brahmin law. And that civilization still stands, two hundred millions strong, held together by Brahmin faith expressed in Brahmin law.

Two thousand five hundred years ago (circa) Buddha gave forth his doctrine and promulgated his law, gathering his followers and establishing the Buddhist civilization. This again has been subject to all kinds of economic changes, national changes, Imperial changes, but still it stands the controlling factor in the life of many peoples and countries. It is held together by Buddhist faith and Buddhist law.

Twenty-five hundred years ago (circa) an invading party carried into Japan the Shinto faith expressing itself in Shinto law. In spite of all mutations that faith and that law have held together Japanese civilization to our own day.

In the seventh century A.D. Mohammed propounded his monotheistic faith and promulgated his Mohammedan law. Thus was formed the Mohammedan civilization, which has played such a part in the histories of Asia, Africa and Europe during twelve hundred and sixty years of its predicted period, to A.D. 1917.

In the seventh century A.D. the Continental form of the Christian faith was allied with and found expression in THE CIVIL LAW. This gave to us what we know as EUROPEAN CIVILIZATION.

It brought about a stratified form of social and national organization, with orders of the people piled upon orders, each ascending order possessing greater privileges than the lower orders. Against this feature France rebelled, demanding for all Liberty, Equality and Fraternity. This European system undertook the colonizing of South America.

From the fifteenth to the eighteenth century there arose in Great Britain, and in part upon the Continent, the reform movement to readjust Christianity to the direct teachings of the Prophets and Apostles and to the teaching of our Lord as found in the Old and New Testaments. This formed the basis of Anglo-Saxon faith, and it found expression, very natural expression, in the terms of the Common Law—for the Common Law is founded, says Blackstone, on the natural and revealed will of God. So the simplified Christian faith, founded upon the Bible and expressing itself in the terms of the Common Law, became the principles which drew together and formed Anglo-Saxon civilization.

This Anglo-Saxon system of faith and law undertook the colonization and construction of North America, and of the Overseas Dominions of Great Britain.

These are the great outstanding facts of history. These civilizations, each the product of a faith combined with a system of law, stand before the world to-day for examination.

Each civilization stands as the product of a faith expressing itself in a system of law. These two principles are the "Protons" and the "Electrons" which form the atoms out of which civilization is built. These two principles have shown themselves to be potent to hold civilization together under every circumstance and test of history.

Law could neither build nor hold together a civilization without faith.

Faith could neither build nor hold together a civilization without law.

No other factors have appeared in history which are capable of forming or of holding together a civilization.

The least desirable of these civilizations which have appeared and still are present in the earth is better than none. The best which has appeared is manifest in the Anglo-Saxon civilization, the product of Anglo-Saxon faith and the Common Law.

If we would organize humanity for peace and prosperity, it must be by the agency of these two principles, Faith and Law.

This being the case, it will be seen that the life principles of civilization are in the hands of the two Professions ; to them fourfold is committed this great task. They are the propounders and exponents of that doctrine which forms the faith of the people ; and the administrators and teachers of the Law.

In the case of Anglo-Saxon civilization, it is in the hands of those who teach in its purity the Christian faith, and those who teach and administer and practise the Common Law.

Gentlemen of the Bar, the great facts of history show that the activities of your Profession in their highest, noblest form, are vital to the permanence and stability of the civilization in which we glory. Together with the teachers of the Faith let us be found worthy of our high calling.

WEEK BY WEEK.

By A. R. H.

IT is always edifying, if not flattering, to see ourselves as others see us.

The best way of doing this is to listen carefully to the testimony of distinguished foreigners.

Shall we take a look at ENGLAND through the eyes of INDIA and of JAPAN?

Here is the testimony of a distinguished Indian journalist, received first hand :—

" The English have done a great work in INDIA—a work which no Asiatic race could have done. You have brought INDIA law and order and peace.

" You have made mistakes ; there are many things about which we Indians disagree with you ; but viewing the matter as a whole we must admit that your influence has been a beneficent one.

" You have sent many great men to India. But why is it their work is so rarely properly appreciated at home? The man who succeeds in INDIA is often a type that fails at home.

" There was Lord Kitchener. His was a great work and he was at his best in INDIA. When he came home he could not fit in with official life.

" Then Lord Roberts. The Indian people loved him.

" Viscount Curzon was the greatest man you ever sent to India. He was a genius, but his work has not yet been appreciated either at home or in INDIA itself.

" Lord Milner was a good Viceroy. He had all the qualities typical of the best type of public servant ENGLAND produces.

" The average Englishman has honour, justice, integrity and is a gentleman. But he does not impress people as being inspired.

" Kitchener and Curzon were inspired men. But Lord Milner was like your other Viceroys—a man of sterling qualities which commanded universal respect. But no one ever expected to find him inspired. And yet one never knows with you stolid English how you will act in times of crisis. Lord Milner once gave an inspired address which astonished everyone. Representatives of every Indian province had come to vote against him. But they left the Council Chamber after voting unanimously for his proposals. To this day their disappointed followers cannot understand the reason for the change.

" What we Indians admire most about you is your gracious spirit of yielding. You know how to yield. And then your forgiveness. Look how you forgave your enemies in the last war. The moment war was over you were ready to forgive and help.

" Also you have what I may call which no Asiatic race possesses and which no European race has in such a marked degree.

" This is reflected in your cities. You walk through LONDON, and even in the side streets you find the same degree of cleanliness exercised by local authorities. You walk through PARIS. The main streets are clean. The side streets filled with corruption.

" British genius is practical, but it has a mysticism in it. It is typical of British administrative genius that you should arrange for the final control of military force to reside in the hands of the civil authorities. And so you have a civilian at the Head of your War Office as Minister for War."

" Coming back to present-day conditions in INDIA, what is your opinion of Ghandi? " I asked.

" Ghandi ! You need not take much notice of Ghandi. He has not the Indian people behind him. After all, the Indian people of to-day are not really Indian. The majority are Aryans. They came into India from the East. Take me for example. I am a Parsee. My people originally came from PERSIA.

" Of course we want home rule in INDIA. We want a dominion status. But we think this can come about by peaceful negotiation. And the mass of India only laugh at Ghandi."

Readers can imagine the turn the conversation took at this point. I asked my friend if he agreed that one of the original characteristics of the Aryan people had been their fair hair and blue eyes. " I believe so," he said.

I then read him a quotation from " The Splendour of Asia," by L. Adams Beck, which reads :—" Peaceful was the city of Kapila, city of red earth, home of the SAKYA clansman, a race strong and high for they were of the ARYA,

THE NOBLE PEOPLE, and it was they who descending into INDIA through the passes had conquered the dark men of the land and driven them before them like shadows of the night fleeing before the arrows of the dawn, and having dispossessed the dark-skinned, the lawless, the godless, the fair-skinned noble people entered in upon their lands and made them theirs."

Digitized by Google

Another quotation reads :—" For there was none in the city, gentle or simple, noble or humble, but set the things of the spirit above the chatter of the market place and lent a ready ear to such talk. Nor did they fear to speak, for the ARYA are free peoples coming from the NORTH and bold, adventurous."

KAPILA was the birth-place of BUDDHA, who was of the SAKYA. Certainly the ARYA seem to have strong Saxon (or Isaac's-sons) characteristics. Free, bold, adventurous, fearless, lovers of law and of the things of the spirit.

In conclusion we discussed the wonderful vision that Wardell's book opens up. In the preface to his "Phœnician Origin of Britons, Scots and Anglo-Saxons," he writes : — "Politically, the newly discovered racial link, uniting the WESTERN BARATS or Britons with the EASTERN BARATS (or Britons) of INDIA—still called through the blood-kinship of the ruling chiefs of INDIA now revealed and established, should favourably determine the latter, in these days of Indian unrest, to remain within the fellowship of the BRITISH COMMONWEALTH, which is now shown to have retained the real Swaraj elements of the old progressive Barat civilization in a much purer form than the Indian branch."

My friend agrees that here was a message which should be broadcast in the widest possible manner at the present time.

But now we must leave INDIA and listen to a testimony from JAPAN. A Daily Express reporter interviews a Japanese business man, and this is what he says :—" You ask me what I think of ENGLAND and the ENGLISH. Good. I tell the truth to you.

" Listen. Japanese, Chinese, Russian, German, come to Sheffield and learn your steel while you do nothing. Many steel factories are idle. You give your gifts to everyone, but you lie idle your own self, is that not true ?

" And you are the KINGS OF THE WORLD.

All cry ' Banzai ! '

" It is what you would call comic joke of EUROPE. You have most things and the great pitifulness. Many men lounge doors with no work."

In spite of its quaint expression this testimony is penetrating. JAPAN sees a strong, wise race, richly endowed with natural resources, allowing her industries to languish through lack of organization. And JAPAN wonders why.

The world acclaims us " a royal people." But it fails to understand the spirit of service which permits people of every other nation on earth to freely benefit by studying our secrets.

This spirit of benevolence—" the great pitifulness "—call it what you will—is the special mark of the BRITH-ISH RACE.

In the eyes of other nations it is foolishness. As a national characteristic it becomes the " comic joke " of EUROPE.

But then so is the Cross of CHRIST foolishness* to worldly men. The people of the KINGDOM manifesting the spirit of the KING in national life must expect to appear fools for His sake. But it is a type of folly that creates wonder. And who can tell how often wonder grows to admiration, emulation and direct personal contact with the AUTHOR of all good things Whose name is " Wonderful " ? †

Foreign astonishment at the complacency with which we view our unemployment problems is a different matter. Our careless habit of muddling through cannot be counted among our national virtues.

We have " the most things "—a larger accumulation of natural resources than any other nation under heaven—and yet we allow our people to remain idle. We are even now kings of the world ; we could be incomparably greater, yet we do nothing.

Properly organized our Empire could give our people a measure of prosperity such as no people on earth have ever enjoyed. But we muddle on.

This type of laziness is silly and inexcusable. But was it not written of English people : " EPHRAIM is a silly dove" ? ‡

England's dove-like devotion to peace is virtuous. But she is peaceful and pleasure-loving to the point of stupidity. It is all very well to be as harmless as doves, but what English people need is a little more of the wisdom of serpents.§

Why should we always have to be driven with our backs to the wall by

before we do anything ? Why should our people always have to choose the path of suffering as their road to wisdom ?

We live so far below the level of our possibilities. In times of crisis our people are magnificent. But in the meantime we waste our opportunities. We are born idlers and yet when put to the test we always turn up trumps. No wonder the other nations misunderstanding our quixotic behaviour call us perfidious.

And yet we are not really faithless. We are simply following in the steps of the son who told his father he wouldn't go and work in the vineyard but went. We are that much better than the son who said he would go but didn't. But on the whole we are probably much more troublesome.

After all, you do know where you are with a person who says he won't do a thing. But the person who says won't and then changes his mind and does the job is a difficult proposition to deal with comfortably.

Dean Inge has a word to say¶ regarding the benevolent side of British character. In a recent article he says :—" The first thing that strikes a traveller on landing at DOVER is the extraordinary benevolence of the porter who takes your luggage. Everyone is so extraordinarily decent. And your porter is not different from any other railway porter in ENGLAND. They are all the same. They're BRITISH."

Yes. That's the secret, they're Brith-ish. They are members of the Brith-ish race, a race in covenant relationship with God. They are the people in whose heart is God's law. The silent unseen process of writing the law upon the heart and in the mind of GOD'S PEOPLE proceeds apace and each new generation reflects something more of the Divine spirit.

In 1918 I was talking with a group of French officers in FRANCE. They were criticizing ENGLAND. At last one of them turned to me and said :—" What we Frenchmen do not like about you English is the way you walk about the world as if you owned the place. You might be the

the way you behave."

I found it difficult to answer that criticism in 1918. I know how I would answer it now.

We are blind to our identity intellectually. But in the subconscious mind of the race we know.

Again, pride has always been the chief of Ephraim-England's shortcomings.|| But my French friends were not referring to the arrogance of isolated individuals so much as to that unconscious superiority which the average Englishman unwittingly radiates.

It is difficult not to walk about the world as if we owned the place when our destiny tells us " Every place that the sole of your foot shall tread upon, that have I given unto you."[1]

But we should be a more joyful people about it if we only knew that when we prayed in our national church asking GOD to make us (His chosen people) joyful, we really were His chosen people, and the term does not refer in any exclusively national sense to the Jews.

ISRAEL'S TERRITORIAL INHERITANCE.

BY IRVIN POTTER (U.S.A.).

" When the Most High gave to the nations their inheritance,
When he separated the children of men,
He set the bounds of the peoples
According to the number of the children of Israel.
For the Lord's portion is his people ;
Jacob is the lot of his inheritance." (Deut. xxxii, 8, 9—R.V.)

IN these words, which the Lord God spake unto the assembly of Israel through the mouth of His servant Moses, we may find a remarkable verification of the British-Israel position.

A careful reading of the Song of Moses, contained in the thirty-second chapter of Deuteronomy, will enable one to realize that it is largely prophetic of the future destiny of God's people Israel, even on down to the days in which we are now living. We may also reasonably infer from the portion of this Song just quoted, that when the various races and nations came into existence, the Almighty fixed the limits of their habitations entirely with reference to His foreknowledge of the future needs of His Chosen People.

From a survey of past world conditions we notice that large portions of the land surface of our globe, embracing areas containing great natural wealth and resources, but inhabited only by a few scattered aborigines, were reserved for several millennia, awaiting the coming of the very people whom we claim to be the descendants of Ten-Tribed Israel. The areas thus reserved include the entire continent of North America from the Rio Grande River to the Arctic Ocean, the entire continent of Australia, the islands of Tasmania and New Zealand, and also several lesser islands in the South Pacific Ocean. These territories have, in the aggregate, an area of about eleven millions of square miles, which is approximately one-fifth of the entire land surface of the globe ; and originally contained a wealth of natural resources equal, if not superior, to that of any other like area on the earth.

In other parts of the world great Empires had arisen, containing many large cities, and teeming millions of inhabitants, which often endured for centuries, and attained to a considerable degree of wealth, power and civilization, only to be overthrown and succeeded by other great and mighty nations ; but still the regions just mentioned remained vacant, like a section of seats in a large convention hall, reserved for the occupancy of a delegation which will arrive in due time.

When discovered by the white race these territories were inhabited by only a few hundred thousand aborigines, whose plane of living was extremely primitive, being but little above that of the beasts of the forests. As a consequence, these people made little or no use of the great natural wealth about them, of the very existence of which, in many cases, they were entirely ignorant.

Some may argue that because of their isolation and general inaccessibility during the first five millennia of the world's history, these countries were not earlier discovered and settled by the more highly civilized races. To such we reply that many centuries before Columbus discovered America, the Empire of the Incas in Western South America, and that of the Mayas and Aztecs in Central America, had attained to considerable power, and a degree of civilization at least approximating that of many contemporary nations in Europe and Asia. The many ruins of ancient buildings, bridges, and even entire cities, still existing in South and Central America, together with the numerous relics found therein, bear mute witness to the fact that these people possessed a high degree of skill in architecture, engineering, mining and metal working. Yet God did not permit the power and influence of these nations to extend into the territory which He had reserved for the coming Anglo-Saxon people.

The following facts relating to the settlement of the North American continent by the white races are quoted from a Geography published by The Macmillan Company, New York.

" In several respects the portion that fell to the English seemed much less desirable than that held by the Spanish and French. Yet the English-speaking race has managed, not only to hold this, but even to add to it most of the possessions of the other two. At the present time, the control of the entire continent, except Mexico, Central America, and a few small islands, is in the hands of either the United States or Great Britain.

" There are, of course, good reasons for this remarkable result. No doubt differences in the characters of these three races is one cause. Yet there are others also, as is shown in the following paragraphs :—

" The English were less cruel than the Spaniards in their treatment of the Indians ; but, unlike both French and Spanish, most of the English would not intermarry with savages. Thus it happened that, in the wars with the French, the English could act with more intelligence, speed and force ; for they were not hindered by partly civilized half-breeds.

" . . . . . Finally, the fact that the English were hemmed

|| Isaiah xxviii, 1-3. [1] Joshua i, 3.

Digitized by Google

in by forest-covered mountains on the west, and by the French and Spanish on the north and south, also proved an advantage. On that account, they were kept close together; and when wars arose, they were better able to combine their forces.

"These are some of the chief reasons why the English-speaking race has won its way on the continent against both the Spanish and the French."

However, there is one chief, and greatest, reason for the supremacy of the British which apparently was unknown to the writer of the above facts, and that is the promise of God to our father Jacob, as recorded in Gen. xxviii, 14: ". . . . . thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth, and thou shalt spread abroad to the west, and to the east, and to the north, and to the south: and in thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

In the above-mentioned territories, all of which have come into the possession of the two great English-speaking nations, the successive census reports show that the original native inhabitants are gradually dying out.

The latest statistics show the American Indians to now number only about one-fourth of one per cent. of the total population of the United States; and the Australian natives to number but a fraction over one per cent. of the population of that continent. A century and a half ago it was unsafe for a white man to land on the shores of New Zealand; yet to-day the natives, who are largely Christianized, number about five per cent. of the population.

This decrease in the number and influence of the native population is also in accordance with the Word of the Lord, for in Jer. xxx, 11 (R.V.) we find this message to Israel: "For I am with thee, saith the Lord, to save thee; for I will make a full end of all the nations whither I have scattered thee, but I will not make a full end of thee."

History records the remarkable fact that all these territories came into the exclusive possession of the Anglo-Saxons during the century that marked the termination of Israel's "seven times," or 2,520 years of punishment. The British, by the Treaty of Paris, came into the undisputed possession of Canada in the year 1763; and of Australia by settlement during the period from 1770 to 1828. A separate Government was established for New Zealand in 1841. The territory now occupied by the United States was completed by the Gadsden Purchase from Mexico in 1853; while Alaska, the last of this territory to come into Anglo-Saxon ownership, was acquired by purchase from Russia in 1867.

Thus we see that all this vast domain which had been thus reserved for thousands of years, with all its great natural wealth intact, practically as it originally came from the Hand of the Creator, was, during the space of about one century, delivered into the exclusive ownership and possession of the Anglo-Saxon race, God's Chosen People.

It must be quite evident that those who can see no Israel but the Jews, and who are therefore obliged to spiritualize most of the promises which God made to Israel, will be able to find no literal application of the Words of the Lord in Deut. xxxii, 8 and 9. The Jews have not, as a sovereign nation, possessed even one square mile of the earth's surface since Nebuchadnezzar came to Jerusalem about 600 B.C., and carried away King Jehoiachin, or Jeconiah, captive to Babylon. Palestine, the land which the Jews have long claimed as their exclusive inheritance, is even now under the control of the Anglo-Saxons.

When we postulate a literal, living Ten-Tribed Israel nation as inheritors, not only of the promises, but of the material blessings as well, all expositional difficulties at once vanish, and the Bible is seen to be an intelligent and harmonious Message from God the Father, through His Son, Jesus Christ, to His elect nation, "Israel, My Glory."

THE FULNESS OF THE GENTILES IN THE BRITISH COMMONWEALTH OF NATIONS.--VII.

By Dr. Wadge (Winnipeg).

Conclusion.

Now, in conclusion, what is "the sum of the matter"?

In the first place, we have shown that in the Old Testament the expression, "a multitude of nations," in reference to the descendants of Ephraim would have been more satisfactorily rendered by the words "a fulness of nations." Similarly, that in the New Testament the expression, "the fulness of the Gentiles," could have been rendered, with equal or greater propriety, by the words "the fulness of the nations." These two phrases are practically identical. The first referred to nations yet to be developed; the second to nations already in existence; hence the need of the definite article before the words fulness and nations.

Further, we have shown that fulness did not refer so much to a numerical completeness as to a condition of allness or totality. In this sense it is used to indicate the completeness of some attribute of those nations rather than their total number.

Next, we have shown by Paul's argument, in Romans, chapters ix-xi, that, in the phrase, "the fulness of nations," which he used in referring to the mystery of the blindness of Israel, the reference was to the nations descended from the Ten Tribes of the House of Israel who had become Gentiles, and not to the heathen of other races.

And, lastly, we have briefly related the history of the development of equal status in the British Commonwealth of Nations, showing that at last there is a totality or completeness or fulness in the condition of equality as between the Great British Dominions and the Mother Country.

The promise was given to Abraham that he should become the father of a multitude of nations; and we find that his descendants include the Arabians or Ishmaelites, and probably many Eastern nations descended from the sons of Keturah, as well as the line from Isaac, including the Turks and kindred nations descended from Esau, and the Israelites descended from Jacob. And when God renewed the covenant with Jacob He promised that from him should descend a nation and a company of nations. Following down the generations, we find the nation in the Children of Israel and the Company of Nations in the Houses of Israel and Judah and the nations developed from them, which are now found in the modern Jews, and in the Anglo-Saxon and kindred nations. And, finally, it was prophesied of Ephraim that his descendants should become a fulness of nations. With Manasseh represented by the United States, and Ephraim represented by England, it is easy to understand that this fulness of nations is represented at the present time, not by the British Empire, but by the British Commonwealth of Nations within the Empire. And if this is so, then the fulness does not represent the number of nations in this Commonwealth, but the condition of equal status, one with the other, such as has now been so definitely brought to pass.

And what is the practical application of the accomplishment of this fulness?

Read the text again. "For I would not, brethren, have you ignorant of this mystery, lest ye be wise in your own conceits, that a hardening in part hath befallen Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in; and so all Israel shall be saved." The period of time referred to by 'until' is the coming in or the completion of the fulness of the Gentiles. That time has arrived, as this fulness has been completed by the fulness shown in the equality of status of each and all the members of the British Commonwealth of Nations. If it is objected that that is not yet complete technically as the report of the Constitutional Committee has not yet been adopted by an Imperial Conference, then in reply it may be said, that in actual practical statesmanship it is complete, and that it will be complete technically when the next Imperial Conference meets either this year or next year and adopts this report.

What then?

Then, glory be to God, the partial blindness or hardening of the people of Israel shall be removed. When this occurs all Israel shall be saved; so a great revival of religion shall take place. Israel shall return to God and plead with Him for forgiveness for their transgressions, and in a great flood of repentance Jesus Christ shall be acknowledged as Israel's personal Saviour as well as her national Redeemer. All Israel shall be saved; all those descended from the twelve tribes will turn to Christ at this time, both Judah and Israel, both modern Jew and the Anglo-Saxon and his brothers. When shall this sweeping return to the Lord take place? It is commencing now, especially in the Homeland and among the Jews of Poland. It will grow and develop and extend as the fulness of the Gentiles, i.e., the equality of the status of the British nations is absolutely established technically as well as practically, and that will no doubt be either this year 1930, or next year 1931.

Just now it is our duty to help forward this recognition and acceptance of Jesus as our personal Saviour in every possible way. We should all be engaged in sincere, earnest, humble, personal prayer to God, acknowledging our sins, and asking that our ignorance of the teachings of the Bible should be cleared away, lest we be wise in our own conceits as is so prevalent to-day; and asking also that we ourselves, and all the people in our Dominion, and in our Commonwealth, and in our Empire, and in our race, should be blessed in this great outpouring of salvation.

This request for salvation for ourselves and for our race is in no sense selfish, for God has chosen us as His servants to take to other races the glad tidings of salvation. But how can we do this unless we ourselves are first saved by the Blood of the Lamb? So, let us continue in fervent prayer for the outpouring of the Spirit of God in the blessing of salvation as promised in this message of Paul's.

At present 90 per cent. to 95 per cent. of the missionaries of the Evangelical Churches are of our race, so we are now acting as the servants of God in doing His work. But when this hardening in part has been relieved, our home and foreign missionary efforts will be doubled, trebled, quadrupled, etc., until we impart to the inhabitants of the whole earth the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, and place before them the opportunity for the acceptance of the glorious salvation of the Lord Jesus Christ.

THE SINGLE EYE.

By HENRY PROCTOR, F.R.S.L.

THE keynote of the Christ-life is simplicity. Without it we cannot even enter the Kingdom of Heaven; for "Except ye become as little children," Jesus says, we can "in no wise enter therein." Other kingdoms are maintained largely by diplomacy, which often means but the Kingdom of Heaven is maintained by simplicity. It is strange, indeed, that there should be a Society, calling itself by that sacred Name, which has always been endeavouring by any and every means, foul or fair—but mostly foul—to establish a world-wide kingdom. But strange to say, their teaching is the very antithesis of that of the Great Master, Whose Name they falsely bear.

DUPLICITY AND DECEIT,

"THE SOCIETY OF JESUS,"

Every kind of deceit and violence is condoned by them so long as it conduces to the end that they have in view. Clearly, then, it cannot be the Kingdom of Christ that the Jesuits strive to establish. But since it needs lies and deceit to establish it, it must be the long-predicted kingdom of the Liar,

"THE FATHER OF LIES,"

that they seek to set up.

"If thine eye be single," says Jesus, "thy whole body shall be full of light, having no part dark."

The single eye means concentration, one aim, "This ONE thing I do." No great thing has ever been accomplished in any direction without the ability to focus all one's forces on a single aim. It is well illustrated in the act of looking at a small object under a powerful microscope. All the powers of sight, all the powers of apprehension, are bent and focused on a single object; it may be of something that is quite invisible to the unassisted eye; and by this means the invisible becomes visible, and unknown to the average mortal is opened up to the view of the student of Nature. For the time being all his forces are focused on one point. This is the single eye, which makes his body

FULL OF LIGHT.

Many men have a ruling passion, beside which all else sinks into insignificance; and whether the aim be good, bad or indifferent from a moral standpoint, if the man has a single eye to one goal, he is bound to reach eminence in that direction, while the double-minded or double-souled man is just as certain to fail.

What, then, did our Lord Jesus mean by the single eye? Can the aim of His life be focused in a single sentence? Yes, in this: "I am come to do THY will, O My God."

THE WILL OF GOD

was no burden to Him, but a delight. The language of His heart was, "I delight to do Thy will, O My God, because Thy law is within My heart." What He saw the Father doing, that He also did likewise. Like Moses, "He endured as seeing Him Who is invisible."

It was His meat to do the will of His Father: His pleasant bread eaten in secret. He lived, not by bread alone, but by every word proceeding out of the mouth of God. And as He lived by means of the Father, so are we to live by means of Him—eating the flesh of the Son of Man and drinking His Blood. This is life indeed—not our own, but the Life of Christ. The personality becomes dead—and the

is made manifest in our mortal flesh, so that our whole body becomes full of light; having no part dark. "And we reflecting, as a mirror, this inward light—

THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD—

are changed into the same image from glory to glory." Thus we reach the MOUNT OF TRANSFIGURATION, and even behold the glory which He has given us, shining through us, as it shone through the face of Moses.

"And our light affliction (filling up in our bodies what is lacking of the afflictions of Christ) which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and ETERNAL WEIGHT of glory, while we look not at the VISIBLE, but at the INVISIBLE"; like the single eye of the microscopist, the devout student of Nature, before whose rapt gaze the glory of God lies revealed, sees the transcendent beauty of that which is, to normal sight, invisible.

The single eye sees what the Father is doing, and lays its will upon His altar as a holocaust.

THE FIRE OF GOD

descends upon the sacrifice, and the whole body, full of light becomes a daily sacrifice of sweet savour to God, proving continually what is that good, perfect and acceptable will of God.

Many may do mighty works by the exercise of their own will, becoming, apart from Him, Occultists and Adepts, but to them He will say, "I never knew you." These are the "thieves and robbers" who enter into the Kingdom of Heaven, not by the Door, but by climbing up some other way—who take it by force. But those who do these things by the will of God enter into the closest relationship with Jesus—they are

THE FAMILY CIRCLE,

His brothers and sisters and mother. Heaven and earth may pass away, but these shall never pass away; they abide for ever.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

WE are within about nine weeks of the opening of our Eleventh Annual Congress—October 6th. In view of the extraordinary condition of affairs in this country, the chaotic state of things in the world generally, and the rapid fulfilment of Prophecy, all pointing to great changes and developments, the next Congress will be of momentous interest and importance; and the Press campaign in which we have been engaged since the middle of May, having attracted world-wide attention, should make it the largest in point of attendances, and to ensure this we ask for the active co-operation of our readers. There will (D.V.) be a strong platform. All our members and supporters will agree that the great need of the time is an outpouring of the Holy Spirit and a mighty Revival. The present issue of this journal should reach practically all our readers all over the world before the Congress date; we therefore make an appeal well in advance for earnest united prayer by our Overseas readers joining with those of the Homeland, that all the speakers, organizers and workers may be entirely under Divine control and Divine inspiration, and that the high spiritual tone of the Congress may usher in the longed-for Revival. Let prevailing prayer be accompanied by unfaltering faith. Our Federation is the human channel through which the Lord might be graciously pleased to start the Revival if we, individually and collectively, consecrate ourselves to His service, and seek His sanctification.

One wonders how many millions have read or heard our Manifesto, or will yet read or hear it. Dr. Goard writes that it was broadcasted from Vancouver on July 6th by Mr. H. B. Petter, Chairman of the local B.-I. Association, and was followed by an address by Mr. J. W. Parker, a member of the Council. We hope presently to hear that the same has been done in Australia and New Zealand. When will our B.B.C. follow suit?

The Rev. R. G. F. Waddington, M.A., Christ Church Vicarage, 6, St. Paul's Road, Bradford, Yorkshire, will be glad if our readers in the Nelson and Colne districts will kindly send him their names and addresses, as he wishes to communicate with them about meetings in those districts.

We tender to Mrs. Simson Fowler, of Midlothian, and her family our sincere sympathy in their bereavement by the death of Dr. Simson Fowler, a member of the Federation for many years, also of the Prayer Union. Wonderful tributes have been rendered to his memory by ministers and others who knew of his devoted work for forty years in the Juniper Green district. Dr. Fowler was an ardent British-Israelite and he was keenly interested in the work of the Federation. He was an earnest student of the Scriptures. His passing was as he had wished, for he was working at his profession to the very last.

Speaking of great preachers of the past, Canon Gordon Paget says in a recent issue of The Times : " I shall never forget Canon Scott Holland's sermon on the occasion of King Edward VII's death on the text, ' Know ye not that there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel ? ' St. Paul's Cathedral was packed, and the vast congregation was deeply moved by the Canon's wonderful oratory."

It is reported from Budapest that 97,000 Jews have accepted the Lord Jesus Christ and joined the Christian Church ; likewise Vienna 17,000 ; Poland 35,000 ; Russia 60,000. From the district of Vilna it is stated that 15,000 Jews have formed themselves into a sect or Jewish Church, recognizing the Deity of our Lord and studying the New Testament.

The Rev. John Complin has had a very busy time since he addressed our meeting at Headquarters on June 23rd. He has travelled some 1,800 miles up and down the country, and has preached in a large number of Churches and given addresses at many meetings. He is at present in Ireland. We hope for another address from him at Headquarters next month.

Our Cause in South Africa has suffered a great loss by the death of Mr. R. G. Dowthwaite. He was Principal of the Training College of St. Matthew's at the Cape, and an Organist and Lay Preacher. When our Federation offices were opened he joined the Committee. He led an active life in all good works. He looked forward eagerly every Monday to the arrival of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE. Mr. C. W. Dowthwaite, also a member, passed away three days after his brother. Both will be sadly missed.

P. K. writes from Vancouver :—" You will be glad to know that we have been giving radio lectures every Monday evening. Last Monday we gave the 58th lecture. The Lord has been pleased to bless our work. We thank God that very many have been brought to our Saviour to acknowledge Him as their King individually and nationally, and we have many new workers in the field scattered all over.

" Our Committee is trying to complete arrangements so that the call for meetings everywhere may be met, and we are hoping that many new Circles will be added to the Federation during the next year in British Columbia. In connection with the radio we have a Prayer Circle. May our God show forth His truth in demonstrated Power. Pray with us that our speakers may be endued with Power from on high, then surely there will be a great gathering of Israel.

" We pray that you will receive strength to carry on the great work that you are doing. May the richest blessing of the God of Israel rest upon us."

Lady H., one of our members, writes :—" I cannot tell you how glad I was to read in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE your remarks about the B.B.C. It is indeed time that the matter was taken up in earnest. Instead of doing good, as we hoped it was going to do, managed as it is now, it will do untold harm by broadcasting things that no right-thinking person wishes to listen to. We owe you a debt of gratitude for what you wrote about it."

* * *

A Lieutenant R.N. writes :—" I feel sure that if the Gospel was preached in our Churches as taught by your Federation we should seldom hear that mournful cry, ' Empty Churches.' There is a Church in this town where the Vicar preaches in a way very similar to your teaching, and his Church is overcrowded ; in fact, very often in the summer there is a queue outside. I am positive that your Manifesto has created a profound impression. Men to-day are looking for a lead in affairs spiritual as they have never done before. I have spoken to a good many on the subject, and they have always listened with respect."

Mr. R. O. Lucas writes from Toronto :—" The Toronto East Branch has been addressed by its President, Mr. Gladstone Brown, who took as his subject, ' God's Signet.' His very interesting and instructive lecture was thoroughly enjoyed by the large number present.

" Our Toronto Central Branch has been visited by Rev. J. D. Paterson, who spoke on ' Stonehenge, the Roman Wall and Glastonbury.' The lecture hall was again well filled, and his audience travelled with him in rapt attention over those wonderful historic remains which speak to us so forcibly of our early British forefathers.

" We have had a wonderful succession of splendid speakers at our meetings in Toronto lately, including Rev. Joseph Gay, and the effect is quite noticeable in the attendance at our meetings and the keen interest shown.

" Our Propaganda Committee, under the able leadership of Mrs. R. J. Lymer, is continuing its splendid work. Hundreds and hundreds of pieces of literature have been sent out to people all over the continent, and we are hearing continually of different folk who are becoming interested.

" We seem to have been visited here most heavily by the hand of Death during the last two years, and many of our pioneer members have passed to their reward. Mr. Wm. Reeve, Mr. Eli Smart, Mr. C. Rawes and Mr. C. L. Bedson are some of those who were among the very first B.-I's in Toronto, some thirty years or more ago, and who have been called away within the last two years. And now, we regret to state, another ardent leader in our Movement has been called home. Mrs. W. H. Farrell, was the much-beloved Honorary President of the Women's Auxiliary of our Toronto Central Branch, and her passing leaves a gap in our ranks which will with difficulty be filled.

" However, we are determined to advance, and by God's help to catch the torch which is flung to us from falling hands, and to press forward to the goal, holding it high ! May He grant us strength and courage so to do."

ROYAL COMMISSION AND SUNDAY CLOSING.

In giving evidence before the Royal Commission on Licensing, Mr. J. Woodford Causer, General Secretary of the Imperial Alliance for the Defence of Sunday and the Central Sunday Closing Association, emphasized the extraordinary fact that England is the only part of the whole British Empire that allows Sunday trading in alcoholic liquor. The closing of licensed premises in Scotland, Ireland, Wales and Monmouthshire has proved so beneficial that the early application of the same law to England was urged.

Mr. Causer said that striking proof of the demand for this reform was given by the fact that a Women's Giant Memorial, organized by the Alliance, had already been signed by 160,000 women in England and names were being added daily.

The Churches were practically unanimous in desiring this reform.

Mr. Causer urged that Sunday Closing was a reform complete in itself, but in reply to one of the Commissioners he said that he would welcome its inclusion in a Government Bill for licensing reform.

EXTRACTS FROM "SHAPES THAT PASS."

By JULIAN HAWTHORNE.

"England is a great human spirit on earth. That means a Chosen People, divinely led. The motto on the British escutcheon is 'Dieu et mon Droit.' The Israelites, in their era, seem to have taken a serious view of their calling and election. How of England? . . . Her people were hammered and welded together of the most virile races on earth, and the amalgamation has manifested a quality of its own. . . . there is in him something, distinguishing him from all other national compendiums. . . . I take him for the original Briton of Boadicea's day, whose Druids made Stonehenge; upon that indomitable core have been laid layers of Saxon, Norman and Dane, and he, while absorbing what was valid in them has become more and more his predestined self, and the abounding life in him created such offspring as New England in the West, New Zealand and Australia in the South, Canada in the North; and what hope may be in the ancient East is due to him. Where else than in him shall we look for the Chosen People? I like this notion. . . . In the population of this planet England is the central force, destined to be the nucleus of whatever healthy development of humanity may await us. A great human spirit on earth, led through the Wilderness by the Pillar of Fire by night, of Cloud by day. . . . If there be a Chosen People, they are not chosen for nothing. John Bull, I believe, is walking, however blunderingly, in a path prepared by God, and if the rest of the world is to be saved they will have to fall in behind him. . . . Kipling has his vision of Empire; but the rulers of it are not as the captains and kings who depart. He is thinking of the God of our fathers, known of old, from Whose awful hand is given dominion over palm and pine; may she never be unworthy of her trust, may her far-flung battle line never be led to selfish conquests, but to the redemption of tribes without the Law. If we penetrate John Bull's hide to the living principle in his sturdy figure, we shall find a Moses quality that can talk with God in the bush."

THE ILLUMINATED CHRISTIAN.—I.

BY THE REV. DR. W. PASCOE GOARD.

THE ONLY NAME.

"THERE is none other Name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved."

"I determined not to know anything among you, save JESUS CHRIST, and Him crucified."

There are a number of societies, and some Churches or organizations which adopt that exalted title, who carry on a research and a propaganda concerning occult and mystic things. It is not necessary to call the roll of these organizations, nor to go into an examination of their teachings.

There is one touchstone which will at once show to the informed observer whether there is in such an organization or its teaching the principle of eternal life.

With the rightness of the teachings of such organizations we are not concerned in this article, nor even with the wrongness; but the question is, Does the movement of the organization lead to eternal life?

It does not matter to the writer as far as this particular article is concerned whether there have been pre-incarnations of those now living, nor whether there will be re-incarnations of some of those now living. The question is, Is eternal life on the highest plane now attainable; and will those who now attain it find that they are fixed and established for ever in that highest form of life? Is the life to which they are called in the Christian faith both the most exalted and eternal?

Our statement is that the life to which the Christian is called and to which he attains in this life is the highest open to created personalities, and is eternal. From it there will be no return to lower orders of life, no re-incarnations, but straightforward progress for ever.

How may this final step in the upward progress of life, from the natural to the spiritual, from the biological kingdom of man to the biological Kingdom of God, be taken?

"There is none other Name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved."

There is the touchstone as to the Personality of the one and only Saviour.

There have been great leaders and teachers whose word has fallen upon the ear and heart of suffering humanity like water upon a thirsty desert. A long roll of them could be called in this study. But to what end? The Prophets of Israel, the Apostles of the Christian faith, the philosophers of Greece, the scholars of the Latin world, the great founders of ancient and modern faith outside of the Christian fold, if they find the way to eternal life, must find it in the only "Name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved," namely, JESUS CHRIST.

The great proof of this lies in the fact that all the other religious and philosophical leaders in the world passed out through the gates of death, AND NEVER ONE OF THEM RETURNED. The grave held them all, and still holds them.

Every one, and all the hosts of their followers throughout the generations, followed their leaders to the grave. Their contemporary followers are going to the same long home. NOT ONE OF ALL THESE HAVE RETURNED.

Only Jesus Christ went into the grave; and after three days abiding therein HE AROSE and returned to His wondering and rejoicing followers. It was not an occult returning. It was the physically-clad Christ, clothed in the very body which had been nailed to the tree and which still bore the nailprints and the spear wound for the disciples to see and handle. It was the veritable Christ Who sat at meat and ate a two-course dinner provided by His disciples, the menu being fish as an entrée, and honeycomb for dessert.

Any man who in the face of the evidence of all this says to the contrary deserves the harshest name for those who falsify facts.

It may be that we are not prepared to accept the evidence. That is our affair. We may even say that we cannot accept the evidence. But all that we know of Jesus Christ is contained in the same document and is maintained by the same testimony which establishes these facts concerning His Resurrection life.

It is useless for us to say we may take the facts as stated by the Evangelists and Apostles, and sift them through our own minds and rearrange them according to our knowledge. No man knows anything about a person who has risen from the dead by personal experience. The student of the occult does not know such an one. The student of the mystic world does not know such an one. No one knows by experience such an one to-day. Those who had that experience wrote their knowledge of Him, and carried forward the preaching of the Gospel of the veritable fact of the Resurrection during the remainder of a long life. The age which produced the writers of the New Testament, and of contemporary secular writers, was not a credulous one. Credulity had died a hard death at the hands of a polytheistic system which had overspread and had overawed the world. But the first century was so disillusioned that it saw the cessation of sacrifices in every system of worship in all the world.

It was not an age in which to float a new fallacy and hope that it would be accepted as truth, seeing that the Gospel was regarding hard matters of fact and not as to philosophical doctrines, or esoteric systems of worship.

The historic fact is that Jesus Christ arose from the dead on the first Easter morning, and the disciples and infant Church bore witness to the fact. The only man, the only leader of men, to die and to arise again from the dead is Jesus Christ. Buddha is dead, Mohammed is dead. Every leader of later or earlier times is dead. Every contemporary leader is dead. Their followers have hastened to the tomb, and none of such leaders, being held by death themselves, can offer a resurrection to their followers.

But Jesus Christ says:—

"I AM HE THAT LIVETH
AND WAS DEAD:
AND, BEHOLD, I AM ALIVE FOR EVERMORE, AMEN;
AND HAVE THE KEYS OF HELL AND OF DEATH."

What a shout of triumph, which has come ringing down through the ages as clear and as thrilling as the trump of God!

Moreover: Every other leader was a man. Each was a great man in his way; but he was a man, a great man, and nothing more.

But Jesus Christ says:—

"I AM ALPHA AND OMEGA,
The beginning and the ending, saith the Lord;
WHICH IS,
AND WHICH WAS,
AND WHICH IS TO COME, THE ALMIGHTY."

Let us bow in reverence to the ALMIGHTY, Who is incarnate in JESUS CHRIST OUR LORD.

Do other systems teach the doctrine of incarnation and reincarnation? We do not so teach. But if they do so teach, then let them bow in reverence to the INCARNATION OF THE ALMIGHTY in Jesus Christ our Lord; for this we accept, this we believe, this we teach with all our hearts.

Surely, then, this is the only "Name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved."

So much for the Personality of the Saviour of the World.

Let us now look at the process of Salvation. What are the elements which enter in?

SIN. Sin is a doctrine repugnant to the minds of clean-lived men and women. As a doctrine many are passing it by, and by so doing are removing the consideration of a detestable thing.

It is not necessary to consider SIN as a doctrine. As a practical people it is necessary that we should ask the question: Is it a matter of fact with which we must reckon in life, and which will affect us in our desire to attain eternal life?

That it is a matter of fact the great systems of worship teach us. The Brahmin thinks of life as being affected by his conduct in a preceding incarnation. He believes that his next incarnation will be affected by his conduct in this incarnation. The important thing is that he believes in sin as a matter of fact.

The Mohammedan believes in sin, and that as a consequence of action here he may bring down on himself disaster in the life to come.

The Buddhist follows suit in belief in sin.

It may be that they call this fact by different names, but they all believe in the fact.

The Christian religion believes in the fact and makes the implications of the fact clear. The Genesis story tells us of man who was a law unto himself. He was the highest type of creation on the earth. He was created in the image and likeness of God. His life was a life without an external law.

That which he desired to do he did, and there was neither sin nor holiness in his act. His acts had no moral quality whatever. It was a case of "where there is no law there is no sin."

Then came the golden moment of which we read as follows: "AND THE LORD GOD COMMANDED THE MAN."

From that moment the will of God became the law to the man.

From that moment there came the struggle to adjust his life, controlled by his own will, to the revealed will of God.

There began the constant struggle to carry on the life activities on the plane of the natural desires as before the will of God became the law of life for the man. There came the endeavour to disregard the natural desire and to do the Divine will, or, as we say, to keep the law.

Digitized by Google

With the command there came into effect moral obligation. To obey meant that the obedient life would be exalted to the Divine plane so that the will of God would become the habit of life for the man in due course.

But the man failed to keep the Divinely-revealed law, and so came under a higher tribunal than he had been subject to prior to the endowment of man with the law of the expressed will of God.

That higher tribunal is an universal and eternal one. It operates as a higher law of nature throughout the universe and throughout eternity. It is as ceaseless and as all-pervading as is the law of gravitation on earth, or as it has been supposed to be.

That higher law of the universe says to all law-endowed orders of life: "The soul that sinneth it shall die."

There must not be even an infinitesimal departure from that law in the universe to all eternity, lest the moral life of the universe be disjointed and overthrown. Every one of our race has failed to keep the law of life without sin. Every one is condemned by the eternal course of righteousness. Every one is doomed to death.

Now out from the eternities came He "which is, and which was, and which is to come, the Almighty." He became incarnate in the body prepared for Him of the seed of Abraham. He gathered into His Own Person the sins of the world. He went to death as the great Sacrifice for sin.

He abundantly satisfied the judgment of the eternal Court of righteousness. He became the Lamb of God Who taketh away the sin of the world.

Thus He took our cases, every one, out of the Court of eternal righteousness, and became the Dispenser of life to all who would come to Him.

It is foolish, wicked and fatal to disregard the jurisprudence of the universe as administered in the august Court of eternal and universal righteousness.

It is foolish and fatal to turn away from the One Name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved; marching, through the Christ Who declares I am the door into the sheepfold. By Me if any man enter he shall go in and out and shall find pasture.

He, the only One Who has risen from the dead of all the world leaders, and would-be saviours, now stands and declares:

"I AM HE THAT LIVETH
AND WAS DEAD:
AND, BEHOLD, I AM ALIVE FOR EVERMORE, AMEN;
AND HAVE THE KEYS OF HELL AND OF DEATH."

He is the great Dispenser of life to all who come to Him. Reaching His Hand back across the grave He cries to His followers: "Because I live ye shall live also."

Following on, we next ask the question: To what grade of life does He invite us?

The multitudes who believe in reincarnation wonder as to what form of life they will return.

The Christian has a better knowledge. This is the assurance: "But as many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them THAT BELIEVE ON HIS NAME:

Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God."

"Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we should be called the sons of God . . ." And again we read: "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when He shall appear we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is."

It is therefore clear that in the next step in the upward journey of the people of God they will find themselves through the only Name inducted by the second birth into eternal life, on a plane higher than any life which has appeared as native to the earth, even to the life of God.

We say it for the sake of those whose minds have been enthralled by the reincarnation doctrine, that in that uplift the personality is lifted clean above any life which has been incarnate on earth, with the one exception of our Incarnate Lord. Therefore, there never will be for the Christian any entanglement with the forms of earth life. In his eternal attainment through Christ he will have passed above and beyond all such earth forms for ever.

No matter what is offered of occult knowledge, or of mystic insight, let us be very sure that no man shall take from us the crown of life which is offered as a free gift by our Lord Jesus Christ to all who believe on His Name. He bought it, and has the right to give it, by His sacrificial death, and by His Own Blood offered as proof of that death in the Court of eternal righteousness in Heaven itself.

How is that gift given to us by our Lord?

This question He answered to the scholar Nicodemus in the third chapter of St. John. He came as close to an explanation as the mind of the unenlightened scholar could go. It is so plain that words of ours cannot add to their simplicity.

This question he further answered to the unlettered woman of Sychar, a city of Samaria: "Thou wouldest have asked of Him, and He would have given thee living water . . ."

"Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again, but whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life."

AN EXAMINATION OF MR. AVARY H. FORBES' "STONE WALL."

(Letter No. 5.)

BY PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc.

26th.—We wonder if the prophet Ezekiel heard of Israel after the captivity. This prophet says the Lord sent him to the captive House of Israel. Whom shall we believe, Mr. Forbes or Ezekiel? And what about the other prophets?

"Never heard of again." Mr. Forbes does not, cannot mean what he says. Did not Jesus talk of the House of Israel 750 years after the exile of the Ten Tribes? Hear Him. Matt. xix, 28: "Ye who have followed Me, in the regeneration when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of His glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel."

552806A
Digitized by Google

Whom shall we believe? Our Master the Lord Jesus Christ, or Mr. Forbes, who tells us "authentic history" gives us no information concerning Israel since 722 B.C.

Surely Matthew and Jesus are authentic in their statements!

John the Revelator, in clearest terms, tells of Israel of the Twelve Tribes. How about it, Mr. Forbes?

Let us have a short look at Esdras again. He says of the Ten Tribes of Israel, "they took counsel among themselves that they would leave the multitude and go forth into a further country . . . that they might keep their statutes which they never kept in their own land."

Eminently sane and natural! These Israel sinners had often sinned and rebelled, and as often turned to the Lord and sought mercy. This was their recorded process for about 700 years. "Authentic history" says so. Surely Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, Deuteronomy, Joshua, Judges, Samuel, the Kings, Chronicles and prophets are authentic histories and historians in regard to this habit of Israel! Esdras says these wayward Israelites repented, as was their custom. Mr. Forbes, are you sorry they repented and sought to obey the Lord and keep the statutes? Are you sorry that Ezekiel was sent to preach to them in the land of their exile? Are you angry to learn that Ezekiel did preach to them and that they repented and sought the Lord as Esdras tells us? Are you annoyed to be told that Christ mentions them so clearly and in the most loving and promising manner? Why seek to make out that God, Who made hosts of unconditional promises concerning Israel, the nation and people, has broken His promises? What is behind all this in your soul? Do not forget that Israel was blind, deaf, stiff-necked, rebellious and stubborn. Perhaps this blindness can yet be found in part in some of the present sons of these wayward people! Think it out, my good friend, my brother of Israel, for whether you know it or not, you are one of the sons of Israel in the flesh.

27*th.*—Hear from Mr. Forbes again concerning Esdras. He says: "In the passage cited above (from Esdras), the author gives himself away, by saying that God made a dry passage for them to cross the Euphrates."

Anything so strange here, so different from the Lord's process? The Red Sea had been opened and Israel crossed dryshod. The Jordan, 40 years later, was opened and Israel passed over without getting wet. On two other occasions the Jordan was opened for a dry foot passage.

Would it be strange if the Lord would open the headwaters of the Euphrates and especially as they had set out on a trek west and north to "keep the statutes of the Lord"? What is strange or unreasonable in this? Where did "he give himself away"?

How can, or did Esdras, or any other "author" give himself away by saying God did for Israel repentant what He had done before for these very people?

28*th.*—Mr. Forbes thinks he makes a hit by saying "The writer of Esdras says it was a dream he had." No point here! No edge to the sword used for this vain thrust!

Pharaoh dreamed a dream which was prophetic and the outline of good history.

Nebuchadnezzar dreamed a dream which was true prophecy and formed the solid basis for wonderful history.

Daniel, Peter, John and many others dreamed dreams. And what if Esdras dreamed in like manner? It was a sane dream, and represented a realistic prophecy, followed by very real historic acts of large numbers of historic and prophetic Israel.

Read Joel ii, 28. Among future blessings to reach Israel, their "sons and daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions."

29*th.*—Mr. Forbes says: "The first authentic glimpse we get of our ancestors, the Jutes and the Angles, was early in the fifth century A.D.", and then asks, "How do the British-Israel writers bridge this chasm of over 1,000 years?"

Several points for comment in this. His apparent club here is the tremendous stretch of 1,000 years.

Let us counter with a similar question: "How does Mr. Forbes or how do we bridge the 3,000 years from the first time the people of Judah were mentioned in history to the present? I ask, How?

Why, man, by reading history. Very simple!

And just as Judah or the people of Judah, in past history, went by different names, so their brother Israel went by different names, and by these names we must try and seek him in his world wanderings.

No historian living can find out where all the units or groups of Judah went during past centuries; and in like manner, no man can tell where all the units or the groups of Israel went.

In like manner we can follow Judah in part, and we can follow Israel in part. This will help us somewhat.

We will give attention to this matter in its proper place.

Let us look at his words: "The first authentic glimpse we get of our ancestors, the Jutes and the Angles."

Of course Mr. Forbes does not use the correct phrasing here, and therefore does not mean what he says. Instead of saying "our ancestors, the Jutes and the Angles," he should have said SOME "of our ancestors." Very different!

He left out the Normans, Saxons, Scands, the Friesians, the Schleswigers, Danes, Britons, etc., etc.

In his date he limps on both feet. He informs us that the Jutes and the Angles appear for the first time in authentic history in the fifth century A.D.

He ought to know that the Jutes, as per our English pronunciation, are the Yutes or Yudes in their own land and tongue. The Yudes are the descendants of ancient Yudah or Judah. To-day in Europe they are called Yudah or the Yudes. An authentic history mentions the children of Judah 1800 B.C.

So far for these brothers of Joseph and of Dan.

The scholars of Danmark will and do tell us they are of the tribe of Dan. And in this connection we may say that the good Book tells us prophetically that "Dan shall judge his people." Where on this round globe could we find a better illustration of this prophecy of long ago? We should thank God He keeps His word.

How natural then to find Dan in part and Judah in part settled in the same little country in N.W. Europe, where they are on the sea-coast in charge of one of the sea gates!

The pamphlet issued by Mr. Forbes carries the mark of honesty, and a fairly unbiased mind, and it is a pleasure to so say.

Many passages lead me to this conclusion, though some would produce the opposite effect.

30th.—In his paragraph, "A Dual Problem," he says: "The problem, then, is two-fold. First, to connect the Ten Tribes with the Scythians of Herodotus, and second, to connect these Scythians of more than 2,000 years ago with our ancestors, the Scandinavians." This is a fair putting of an important part of the problem, and deserves consideration.

Then he says, "Could these be the Israel which had been lost to sight since the eighth century B.C.?" To this question he says, "I answer they could; I do not see anything impossible about it, unless it can be shown that the Ten Tribes were not lost at all, or that they returned with the Jews to Palestine. Some of the above arguments indeed suggest that the theory is not altogether improbable."

The above is a fair dealing with our great "problem," which has many difficulties for all hard-working clear-headed, honest historians.

THE GREAT PYRAMID AN ALLEGORY OF THE MESSIAH.—II.

By Basil Stewart.

(Synopsis of an address given at the Priory Church of St. Bartholomew the Great, Smithfield, on May 4th, at 6.30 p.m.)

"Behold, I show you a Mystery." In these words did Paul (1 Cor. xv, 51) reveal to the early Christians the great truth of the Resurrection. "Mystery" here means, not something vague or not understood, but its original meaning of what is hidden or secret. Such is the nature of the Mystery of the Great Pyramid, presented in the form of an allegory symbolically revealed in its passages and chambers.

In my previous address I referred to the Great Pyramid as a Divinely-inspired monument. This idea that it enshrines a Divine revelation is not a modern one, but is, in fact, as old as the Pyramid itself, and is found in the literary traditions of ancient Egypt. This belief became distorted in its true application and was consequently lost. This revelation has reference to a Messiah who was to come, and in order that the ancient Egyptians should appear to be the race to whom these prophecies applied, they claimed that this promised Messiah had come in the person of Osiris, whom they described as "lord of the Pyramid."

These Messianic prophecies existed not only in Egypt but all over the ancient East from the earliest times, and long before they were committed to the Hebrew Scriptures. Consequently, at the epoch of the Great Pyramid we find Osiris associated with its symbolism, and the Birth and Passion of that Egyptian deity identified with those particular structural features which symbolize the Nativity and Crucifixion of our Lord. In other words, the allegory contained in the literary traditions of ancient Egypt is merely a corrupt form of the true allegory enshrined in the Great Pyramid.

When it is realized that Messianic prophecies were current in Egypt and the ancient East even before the Great Pyramid was built, and once it is seen that our Lord fulfilled these prophecies in detail both as to time and circumstances, the corrupt version of these prophecies found in ancient Egyptian literature is no longer enigmatical. They are clearly due to a common origin, truly preserved in the Bible, paganized and misapplied elsewhere.

This fact throws a flood of light upon St. Paul's words in Rom. xvi, 25-26: "May the Almighty confirm you by the preaching of Jesus Christ through the revelation of a mystery (secret), hidden for ages of time, but now displayed through the prophetic writings, according to the determination of the Eternal God, and revealed for obedient faith to all the heathen." (Ferrar Fenton's trans.) It is the fact that, not until the Scriptures were written, was this mystery correctly revealed, when it had been hidden for ages of time previously as St. Paul affirms. Various distinguished Egyptologists, such as Moret, Breasted, and Maspero, have referred to this remarkable fact concerning the extremely ancient origin of a belief in a Messiah and Saviour of the human race.

The Great Pyramid is thus an allegorical representation in structural form of the Messiah, Who is described in Scripture as the "chief corner-stone and headstone of the corner," a two-fold condition which can only be structurally represented in the top-stone of a pyramid. Only in such a headstone or cap can all four sides meet in the one corner-stone, which thus "fitly frames together the whole building" (Eph. ii, 21), and without which it is incomplete.

Now a peculiarity of the Great Pyramid is that it does not rise to an apex like other pyramids, but terminates in a truncated summit, giving it the appearance of incompletion. This condition is generally thought to be due to spoliation, such as has led to the loss of its casing-stones, but my own opinion has always been that it was due to deliberate design, or else to an error on the part of the builders, this opinion being confirmed by the allegorical nature of the structure symbolizing Messiah as the "top-stone" "rejected of men" (Isai. liii, 3). Recent investigations carried out at the Great Pyramid have conclusively proved that it was constructed on a base slightly less than the designed base, and that this error (actually extremely small) was carried out right up to the existing summit. The top-stone—itself a miniature pyramid—fashioned separately while the Pyramid was being constructed, was thus found to be too large for its platform and was consequently rejected.

To carry the allegory a step further to completion, so that the structure becomes "a building fitly framed together," implies that this error—perhaps under the guidance of the great Architect Himself—will some day be rectified, and the Pyramid enlarged and completed by the placing in position of its top-stone. It is no more impossible to restore it than it was originally to build it—undoubtedly less so. It wants but the will—money follows—and all the Lord's people will be willing in the day of His power, when once again will be repeated the words of Zech. iv, 7, and the Stone which was rejected will become the head of the corner.

Even as the Resurrection to life eternal is the culminating belief in the Christian's creed, so was immortality the hope of the ancient Egyptian who regarded Osiris in precisely the same light as the Christian does our Lord. Such also is the culminating theme of the Great Pyramid's allegory.

The soul of the departed is represented as following the Pyramid's passages in its journey of purification, to reach its goal in the (so-called) King's Chamber in the heart of the building. In this chamber stands what is erroneously described as a sarcophagus or coffin, but which is really a lidless stone chest, a symbolical coffin. A real sarcophagus would signify the triumph of death ; here we have what appears to represent a tomb, but which, on the contrary, is no such thing, but a symbol of life eternal. Everything, in fact, about this vast, Divinely-inspired monument, indicates that it was erected, not as a tomb, but to reveal what lies beyond the tomb.

The allegory of the Great Pyramid, indeed, expresses precisely the same concept as St. Paul so sublimely sets forth in 1 Cor. xv, 51-54 : " Behold, I show you a mystery ; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed. . . . For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. . . . Then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory." Such, too, is the Mystery (or secret) of the Great Pyramid.

PREDESTINATION.—IX.

By the Rev. R. G. F. Waddington, M.A.

TWO GREAT PEOPLES.

At the very first we learned as a fundamental Scriptural fact that the division of Israel's twelve tribes into two Houses, the House of Israel and the House of Judah, was " from the Lord." " This thing is of Me " was the message of Jehovah to Rehoboam, when he was determined to use military force to try to bring Israel back again to his authority.

Just in the same manner there was predestined, and accomplished by Jehovah's overruling power, a division in the House of Israel. That division is first noted in the blessing that Jacob pronounced upon his two grandsons, Ephraim and Manasseh.

The Spirit of God thrills through Jacob as he sees the two sons of Joseph. " I had not thought to see thy face : and lo, God hath shewed me also thy seed."

And Jacob, " guiding his hands wittingly," knowing, that is, exactly what he was doing, under the inspiration of God, crosses his hands so that the right hand of chief blessing rested upon Ephraim, who was the younger, and says, " Let my name be named on them, and the name of my fathers Abraham and Isaac."

That name of Jacob that was named upon them was the name Israel, and the placing of Ephraim before Manasseh can only mean that the chief blessings of the Abrahamic Covenant were to devolve upon Ephraim.

Now it is easy enough to contend that this is only a " fable " and that nothing was really involved in it all, that it was only a piece of oriental fancy. But those who take the trouble to follow the story of the Bible, instead of the quibbles of commentators will find that Ephraim did actually take the leading place amongst Israel's Tribes. So much so that on no fewer than fifty occasions in the prophets the name Ephraim is used to denote the Ten Tribes. And on several other occasions the name Joseph, including Ephraim and Manasseh, is used to denote the Ten Tribes.

It is worthless, then, to argue that no weight should be attached to the blessing of Jacob, when we can read for ourselves in the Bible that just what Jacob foretold came actually to pass.

His name WAS named upon these two sons of Joseph.

But Jacob also declared that there should come a time when Ephraim should become a nation and a company of nations, a multitude of nations, and that Manasseh should become a great people. Opponents of British-Israel, the Rev. A. Simmonds for example, tell us that these promises of the Abrahamic Covenant were fulfilled upon Israel in Old Testament times. They quote such texts as " The Lord your God hath multiplied you, and, behold, ye are this day as the stars of heaven for multitude." (Deut. i, x.)

" Thy people which Thou hast chosen, a great people, that cannot be numbered nor counted for multitude." (1 Kings iii, 8.)

Of course it is true, for these and similar passages of Scripture say so, that Israel had developed marvellously in Old Testament days, especially under David and Solomon. But Mr. Simmonds and our other opponents either ignore or forget two things.

First, that the promises are more than promises of population for Israel. They are promises of " a multitude of nations " to Ephraim, and " a great people " to Manasseh. There is much more detail than Mr. Simmonds would have us think.

Second, these promises were renewed by the prophets at the very time when Israel was cast out for her disobedience, and was become few in number.

Now by no stretch of the imagination, and by no amount of juggling with words and phrases, can it be argued that Ephraim became " a multitude of nations," and that Manasseh became a separate and " a great people " in Old Testament times. And, of course, the renewal of the promises to Israel, when Israel was actually under punishment, completely nullifies the argument of our opponents.

Up to the very last account of Israel in Bible history, and up to the very last reference to Israel of the Ten Tribes in secular history—the reference by Josephus—Ephraim had not become a multitude of nations, neither had Manasseh become a separate and great people.

Where, then, is the fulfilment of the promise ?

Examine all the nations and races of the earth ; range through the length and breadth of historic record, and you will find that in the Anglo-Saxon race, and in that alone, are these predictions fulfilled.

In Great Britain we have the greater nation, which was to be the fortune of Ephraim ; in our many Colonies we have the " children " which, with the Motherland, form the " nation and company of nations " ; and in the United States of America we have the " great people," branching off from Israel, and growing into an independent race, the second great nation of the world.

In connection with these facts there is another, well-known and most significant. It is a fact that the British Empire did not really take effective shape, and make effective growth, till after the loss of the American Colonies, nor did these Colonies themselves become great till after the separation.

Up to the time of the Declaration of Independence these colonists shared the eastern and east-central, and south-eastern parts of what is now commonly called America, with the French and Spanish. The French flag flew over St. Louis and the Mississippi, the flag of Spain over New Orleans and south-east.

Immediately after the separation of the Colonies the British section began a westward trek which never ceased the Pacific Coast was reached, and until the French and Spanish elements were brought under the control of Washington. And at the same time the Motherland, having lost these "children," began to push out in other directions, opening up Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Africa, Tasmania.

There are those who will want to argue that the United States is a conglomeration of many nations, and therefore cannot be called "Manasseh." How little weight that argument has will be easily realized by anyone who takes the trouble to read an elementary history of either the United States or of Britain in the reigns of the Stuarts and the early Georges.

The foundation of the American Colonies was laid by Anglo-Saxons from these Isles, some of them of Puritan stock, some of them of Cavalier stock. The Civil War which "made" the United States was fought out by the descendants of these two stocks. The pioneers who trekked to the Pacific were mainly from the Puritan stock. All comers from other nations, who have found shelter in America, have been brought unde the rule and influence of those two stocks, so that the very language that they speak is the English language in the main. Moreover, great as has been the influx of other peoples, the Anglo-Saxon element, which is the dominant element, is in the majority, and all the principles which underlie Law and Custom are Anglo-Saxon principles.

There is another significant fact, specially noticeable in the history of the British Empire.

A great military writer has said that we always seem to have been delivered from invasion and defeat by some remarkable "fluke" or some piece of "good luck." And we know how frequently it has been said that our Government "muddles through" somehow to success.

It was Marshal Soult, one of the ablest of Napoleon's lieutenants, who said, after the battle of Albuera, "There is no beating those English, in spite of their generals." And many well-known instances can be given of threatened dangers being averted by seemingly fortuitous happenings, by the adverse winds, for example, which kept Napoleon's fleet idle in harbour when our Navy was in mutiny, and till Napoleon lost patience and diverted his army to Russia. Is there a better reason to be found than that given in Isaiah liv, in the promise of God that Israel shall be Divinely protected? "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper." Or again, "Fear thou not, for I am with thee; be not dismayed, for I am thy God: I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of My righteousness." (Isaiah xli, 10.) Can words be plainer than these? If they had been curses, instead of blessings, there is no commentator, past or present, who would have applied them otherwise than literally to Israel or Judah. But because they are blessings, they must forsooth be applied to the Church! "The Lord comforteth His Church with His promises!"

But God hath not cast away His people whom He foreknew, nor has He changed His mind concerning them. To Israel, and to Israel only, were these promises, and many, many more like them, made, and they speak of a nation which, though suffering punishment for disobedience, was yet under the protection of Jehovah, to be blessed by Him, and to be upheld by Him always.

EARTHQUAKES are a sign of the times, and the recent terrible disaster in ITALY has re-awakened widespread interest in prophecies regarding the "END of the WORLD."

In some respects the phrase the "END of the WORLD" is an unfortunate one. The majority jump to the conclusion that it means the destruction of the earth as a dwelling-place for the human family.

Actually it means nothing more disastrous than the end of the present AGE or DISPENSATION.

The "world" is not the "earth." The "world" is not the planet which we inhabit, although the terms are often used synonymously. To be quite accurate we live on the EARTH and in the WORLD.

The BIBLE talks of "the face of the WORLD in the EARTH," and this expression helps to emphasize the distinction we wish to make.

To all intents and purposes the earth remains the same from age to age. But the fashion of the world is always in a state of flux and may completely change its outward face in the course of a single generation.

The earth is a planet. The world is a cosmos, or

STATE OF CONSCIOUSNESS.

The spirit of the world is the spirit of mankind and in its present undeveloped state is out of harmony with the spirit of CHRIST.

When the BIBLE prophecies speak of the END of the WORLD, they refer to the coming termination of this undeveloped state of consciousness and the birth or emergence of a more enlightened state of consciousness and existence.

At the end of the present AGE or DISPENSATION a large portion of the human race will perish. But a new start will be made by a chastened remnant of humanity who have elected to exalt as the future basis of life and civilization.

THE LAW OF CHRIST

The civilizations of the past have been inspired by the spirit of man only. The civilization of the new age will reflect the spirit of CHRIST. WORLD-CIVILIZATION will become Christo-centric.

When the spirit of the world is no longer contrary but subject to the will of CHRIST, then will dawn a WORLD-CIVILIZATION such as the spiritually minded of all nations* and all ages have dreamed of.

"For ESAU is the END of the WORLD, and JACOB is the beginning of it that followeth."† But the END of the AGE will not only witness the spiritual wrestling of men and of nations with GOD.

THE SOUL OF THE WORLD

itself will wrestle with its MAKER; and will prevail.‡ The struggle will be followed by an era of peace on earth passing human understanding.

But the actual phase of intense mental inharmony preceding spiritual victory will inevitably be accompanied by great upheavals in the physical realm. The mental and physical

* Christ is "the desire of All Nations."
† 2 Esdras vi. 9. ‡ Compare Gen. xxxii, 28.

Digitized by Google

realms are inextricably intermixed. The great mental upheavals caused by war, revolution and kindred social disturbances will find their counterpart in tempest and flood, volcanic eruptions and earthquake.

Haggai's prophecy confirms the fact that the transition stage between the passing of the old and the advent of the new AGE will be marked by in which war and seismic disturbance play a prominent part.

But significant and terrifying though the manifestations of physical disturbance may be, they are only reflections in the visible world of effect of the greater vital changes taking place in the invisible world of cause.

The "EARTHQUAKES . . . . . and in the WORLD," of ESDRAS, will be but the outward visible evidence of the unseen psychic adjustment which must take place prior to the coming of CHRIST to reign.

Prophecy shows that the signal for the "END" will be WAR. And this war will find all nations gathered against JERUSALEM to battle.[2]

BRITAIN, supported by all her young

LION DOMINION NATIONS,[3]

will have raised her standard in JERUSALEM. From the HOLY CITY—the CITY of the GREAT KING—she will be holding at bay a world in arms.

Deliverance for Brith-ain—Land of the Covenant—will come in answer to the prayer: "Thither cause THY MIGHTY ONES to come down, O LORD."[4]

The British Armies[5] will witness a manifestation of the "Angels of Mons" phenomenon on a super-scale. For the LORD Himself will bring down the MIGHTY ONES with Him. The SOVEREIGN LORD of the UNIVERSE will come on a visit to the WORLD which He has made.

The MOUNT of OLIVES will be cleft in twain at His coming,[6] and this upheaval in the EASTERN MEDITERRANEAN will be the signal for a world-wide succession of violent natural convulsions, during which a large portion of the human race will be swept away.

This crisis and climax will come with dramatic suddenness and be utterly unexpected. For a brief period the veil will be dividing the visible, and the invisible worlds will be rent in twain. The spiritual and the material will see each other face to face. At the supreme moment "every eye"[7] will see the KING of kings returning to assume the direct government of His earthly KINGDOM in the world.

On the physical plane of events, war, pestilence, earthquake, tidal wave and kindred physical forces will be the agents whereby the gathering of the "tares" will appear to be effected.

On the spiritual plane the angels will be active warning and protecting those who are to be "left" and attending to the removal of those destined to be "taken."

§ Haggai ii, verses 6-7, etc. [1] 2 Esdras ix, 3. [2] Zech. xiv, 2.
[3] Ezek. xxxviii, 13. The Merchants of Tarshish (Britain) and all the Young Lions thereof. [4] Joel iii, 11.
[5] The British Armies as modern Armies of Israel enjoy the ancient title, Armies of the Living God. Compare 1. Sam xvii, 26, etc.
[6] Zech. xiv, 4. [7] Rev. i, 7.

In this respect history will once more repeat itself. As it was in the days of NOAH so shall it be in the days of the SON of MAN.[8] There will be a physical destruction of all those living after the flesh.

Death at this time will be unusually selective, as it is written: "At the END of the AGE, the angels shall come forth and sever the wicked from among the just."[9]

ESDRAS shows how much better it is going to be for those who are "left" than it is for those who are "not left" but "taken." For "the days come when the Most High will

them that are upon the earth,"[10] he declares. "For yet a little while and iniquity shall be taken away out of the earth and righteousness shall reign among you."[11]

JESUS made it clear that the "tares" and the "wheat" were to be allowed to grow together until the harvest (or END of the AGE) when the "tares" would be "taken" and the "wheat" left to inherit the earth.[12]

The KINGDOM also must be cleansed. After the cleansing of the KINGDOM of "all things that offend and them which do iniquity,"[13] the WORLD will indeed have become an environment to live in, as it is written: "Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the KINGDOM of their FATHER."[14]

FIT FOR HEROES

The KINGDOM of the FATHER? Such indeed will be the worthy title of the KINGDOM in its millennial phase of world-development. And it marks the fulfilment of the Christian prayer of the ages: "Our FATHER . . . Thy KINGDOM come."

Victor Hugo's secular prophecy will also be fulfilled: "One and indivisible will be the WORLD and the WORLD will be one BRITAIN." BRITAIN will indeed have become "the MECCA of a renewed UNIVERSE."

For BRITH-AIN, as LAND of the COVENANT, will withstand the shock of universal chaos. BRITAIN is the nucleus of a KINGDOM that shall stand for ever. As embryonic KINGDOM of GOD upon earth BRITAIN will "remain" while other kingdoms fall, for she is one of the things "which cannot be shaken."[15]

Moreover, by virtue of the national redemption, BRITAIN-ISRAEL comes under the special protection of the COVENANT of

as it is written:—

"'I promised like this in the WATERS of NOAH,
That no more Noah's waters should pass o'er the earth,
So I promise to you against anger and wrath,
Though the Mountains may move and the Hills may be shaken,
My love for you moves not, nor alters My TREATY of PEACE!'
Says your Lover, the LORD."[16]

But beyond the boundaries of Kingdom-influence the initial devastation and dislocation of civilization will be beyond belief. It is however necessary to "break down" before we can "build up." And the great task of world-reconstruction will be entrusted to the newly manifested

RACE OF SUPER-MEN

—the translated but returned—sons of GOD.

The ministration of a spiritually glorified minority, led by the SON of GOD, will be an essential medium in the preliminary comfort, readjustment and healing of distracted humanity. Super-power will be called for, if from the ashes and ruin of the past there is to arise a new and better WORLD.

It is for the manifestation[17] of this Race of Super-Men—the sons of GOD—that waiteth. And not until their coming can mankind be said to have begun its general infancy.

> For "Man is not man as yet . . . .
> When all mankind alike is perfected,
> Equal in full-blown powers—then not till then
> I say, begins man's general infancy."

This is as true of the KINGDOM, nationally, as it is of mankind individually. The KINGDOM is not the KINGDOM yet. It is in the "must be being restored"[18] stage or process of development.

Not until the KINGDOM is restored and the KING comes to reign will the KINGDOM properly begin its work. The work of the restored Kingdom will be to bring about that greater restoration—"the restitution of all things"[19]—viz., the restoration of the Divine sovereignty in the earth and the deliverance of the whole creation from the bondage of corruption.

On account of its ultimate results then the END of the WORLD is not so much an event to be feared as something to be welcomed, as it is written: "When these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh."[20] And again: "Whosoever shall call upon the name of the LORD shall be saved."[21]

In that day we shall sing a new song:

> "Intemperance is at an end,
> Infidelity is cut off,
> Righteousness is grown,
> And Truth is sprung up."[22]

"For evil shall be put out and deceit shall be quenched. As for faith, it shall flourish, corruption shall be overcome and the truth which hath been so long without fruit shall be declared."[23]

The message of the PRINCE of PEACE is still more assuring: "In many places there will be EARTHQUAKES; there will be FAMINES and RIOTS. These, however, are but the BIRTH-PANGS."[24]

Yes, CHAOS is the BIRTH-PANGS of COSMOS. And the glowering darkness of a closing AGE heralds the radiant dawn of a new and better WORLD.

SOLOMON'S GARDENS.—I.

BY ELEANOUR SINCLAIR ROHDE.

(Author of "A Garden of Herbs," "Garden-craft in the Bible," "The Garden Lovers' Days," "The Star Lovers' Days," etc., etc.)

IN no other Eastern literature are gardens of such poetic beauty to be found as those depicted in the Bible and there are few aspects of Eastern garden lore which the Bible fails to illumine. With the exception of the garden of Eden and the brief vision of a possibly still earlier garden of Eden given by Ezekiel, the most interesting gardens of which we read in the Old Testament are undoubtedly those made by King Solomon. We have the king's own word for it that he "rejoiced" in making his gardens, orchards and vineyards. "I planted me vineyards, I made me gardens and orchards, and I planted trees in them of all kind of fruits; I made me pools of water, to water therewith the wood that bringeth forth trees. . . . . And whatsoever mine eyes desired I kept not from them. I withheld not my heart from any joy, for my heart rejoiced in all my labour." (Eccles. ii, 4, 5, 6, 10.) It is a remarkable fact that the earliest gardens of which we have any knowledge are pleasaunces of great splendour. Of the humble beginnings of gardens there are no records. Tomb paintings testify to the magnificence of Egyptian gardens 3,000 years ago, and remembering the close connection between Egypt and the Holy Land and that Solomon's chief wife was Pharaoh's daughter, it is more than probable that the gardens Solomon made for his pleasure closely resembled those for which Egypt had been famed for centuries, formal gardens with stately avenues, groves of pomegranates, vine pergolas and water gardens. To the Western mind the word "garden" denotes primarily a garden of flowers, but the gardens of the ancient East were tree gardens. Our Western eyes delight in the beauty of the flowers on which we look down, but in the gardens of the ancient East they looked upwards, rejoicing in the shade of the trees, the beauty of the pergolas and the fragrance of the scented shrubs.

Trees are mentioned far more frequently than flowers in the Bible and great importance is attached to them. Jotham's parable of the trees (Judges ix, 8), Nebuchadnezzar's dream (Daniel iv, 10), and Ezekiel's comparison of the glory of the King of Tyre to the trees in the garden of God (Ezek. xxxi, 8, 9), may be mentioned amongst the more outstanding instances. In the Book of Proverbs Wisdom is compared to a tree. "She is a tree of life to them that lay hold upon her." (Prov. iii, 18.) In Biblical imagery the tree is frequently used to symbolize the chosen people. "As a teil tree, and as an oak, whose substance is in them, when they cast their leaves: so the holy seed shall be the substance thereof." (Isa. vi, 13.) Again, "As the days of a tree are the days of my people." (Isa. lxv, 22.) Hosea writes, "I will be as the dew unto Israel: he shall grow as the lily, and cast forth his roots as Lebanon. His branches shall spread, and his beauty shall be as the olive tree, and his smell as Lebanon." (Hosea xiv, 5, 6.) David compares the righteous man to "a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season, his leaf also shall not wither and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper." (Psa. i, 3.) Job says, "My root was spread out by the waters, and the dew lay all night upon my branch." (Job xxix, 19.) Jeremiah compares the man "that trusteth in the Lord" to "a tree planted by the waters, and that spreadeth out her roots by the river, and shall not see when heat cometh, but her leaf shall be green; and shall not be careful in the year of drought, neither shall cease from yielding fruit." (Jer. xvii, 8.) The outstanding features of Eastern gardens were shade, scent and water—water both seen and heard—and their gardens were of a vastness which made them a luxury possible only for the wealthy. It is noteworthy that all the gardens mentioned in the Bible (with the exception of the two gardens of Eden) are associated with wealth. Even the garden in which our Lord was buried belonged to one of His few rich disciples. The gardens of the East depended primarily on continual irrigation. In Palestine no rain falls for at least six months in the year and therefore all gardens were of necessity "watered gardens." One recalls the beautiful passages in which both Isaiah and Jeremiah use the imagery of a watered garden. "And the Lord shall guide thee continually, and satisfy thy soul in drought . . . . . thou shalt be like a watered garden." (Isa. lviii, 11.) Again: "And their soul shall be as a watered garden and they shall not sorrow any more at all." (Jer. xxxi, 12.) Isaiah uses the simile of a waterless garden to describe the lot of deliberate transgressors, a simile of utter desolation which only an Eastern mind can grasp. (Isa. l, 30.) The gardens of ancient Egypt depended entirely on a laborious system of irrigation from the Nile, and the oldest garden scenes in the tomb paintings depict the labourers watering either by the shadoof, in use to this day, or from pails suspended from a wooden yoke or from waterskins. The more favoured land of Palestine was rich in springs, and we know that in very early times it was a network of aqueducts. In Abraham's day so wonderfully was the plain of Jordan irrigated that when Lot chose his inheritance he "lifted up his eyes and beheld all the plain of Jordan, that it was well watered everywhere." (Gen. xiii, 10.)

The imagery of the first part of Balaam's wonderful prophecy was drawn from a watered garden. "How goodly are thy tents, O Jacob, and thy tabernacles, O Israel! . . . as gardens by the river side, as the trees of lign aloes which the Lord hath planted, and as cedar trees beside the waters. He shall pour the water out of his buckets and his seed shall be in many waters." "His seed shall be in many waters"—what a beautiful and what a true description of the far-flung Empire it has pleased God to bestow on us in accordance with His promise to our forefathers.

Springs in the earliest times were a source of income to their owners and hence the dowry given by Caleb to his daughter. (Judges i, 15.) Apart from "living waters" gardens in Palestine depended also on waters stored up in cisterns during the rainy season. The "cisterns" were chambers hewn out of the rock, and the rock being generally porous, they were lined with mortar. Jeremiah speaks of "broken cisterns that can hold no water." (Jer. ii, 13.) But throughout the Bible emphasis is laid on the power of "living waters." Both the garden of Eden and Ezekiel's paradise were thus watered, and one recalls the musical line in the Song of Solomon, "A fountain of gardens, a well of living waters and streams from Lebanon." The most notable reference to the power of living waters are our Lord's words to the woman of Samaria. Jeremiah twice uses the same symbolism. (Jer. ii, 13, and xvii, 13.) In order to facilitate irrigation, the beds in Eastern gardens were commonly divided into squares surrounded with ridges of earth, the supply of water being regulated either with the short-handled hoe (the characteristic garden tool of the East) or more commonly with the naked foot. Moses referred to this method of watering a garden "with thy foot" (Deut. xi, 10), commonly practised in Egypt in his day and depicted in the tomb paintings. It is interesting to realize that the formal chess-board arrangement of the beds which is so marked a feature in pictures of mediæval gardens is in fact a survival of Eastern irrigation, and is only one of the many features showing the traditional influence of the gardens of the ancient East. Three of Solomon's vast pools in a perfect state of preservation remain to this day at the head of the Wady Urtas, and the remains of six aqueducts in connection with these pools have been traced. Josephus speaks of the king's gardens abounding in fine rivulets and states that Solomon "apparelled in a white garment drove to the royal gardens every morning." (Antiq. viii, 7, 8.) Peculiar interest attaches to Solomon's mention of fish-pools (Cant. vii, 4), for in Semitic lands fish-pools were dedicated to goddesses. The hill Jebel-el-Fureidis (Mountain of the Little Paradise) commemorates the now vanished gardens in which the king delighted.

Like other Eastern potentates Solomon evidently had a menagerie. The "apes and peacocks" were probably brought from Ceylon. Pavilions as splendid as those of ancient Egypt doubtless adorned these royal gardens, for garden houses ranging from the humblest trellised arbours to sumptuous pleasure houses were common in the East from very early times. Eglon, king of Moab, had a summer house "which he had for himself alone." (Judges iii, 20.) It is at least probable that "the house of the forest of Lebanon" built by Solomon (1 Kings vii, 1, et seq.) was a luxurious "summer house." Ahab's "house of ivory" was possibly a garden pavilion, and in Amos we read, "And I will smite the winter house with the summer house and the houses of ivory shall perish and the great houses shall have an end, saith the Lord." (Amos iii, 15.) The most magnificent garden house mentioned in the Bible is that described in the Book of Esther. Elaborate details are told us concerning its divans of gold and silver, its hangings "white, green and blue, fastened with cords of fine linen and purple to silver rings and pillars of marble," its pavement of "red and blue and white and black marble," and its size may be imagined from the fact that the king entertained there "the power of Persia and Media, the nobles and princes of the provinces, when he shewed the riches of his glorious kingdom and the honour of his excellent majesty many days." Yet Solomon in one sentence describes a mystic pavilion of far greater beauty—"He brought me to the banqueting house and his banner above me was love." (Cant. iii, 4.)

A garden enclosed is my sister, my spouse. The Hebrew word "gan" it is generally agreed signifies enclosure, i.e., a guarded place. In the East therefore, as in the West, the very word garden signified protection. From time immemorial Eastern gardens and vineyards have been surrounded with a dual enclosure—a prickly hedge of thorns and a wall (the one a living material, the other dead). "And now go to; I will tell you what I will do to my vineyard: I will take away the hedge thereof and it shall be eaten up and break down the wall thereof and it shall be trodden down." (Isa. v, 5.)

Solomon evidently planted sacrificial groves (interesting as amongst the earliest types of gardens of which any records have come down to us) for the worship of the heathen gods of his numerous wives. These groves are frequently mentioned in the Old Testament and always with severe condemnation. The "high places" usually mentioned in connection with these groves and which we are expressly told Solomon built (I Kings xi, 7) are of peculiar interest to lovers of early garden lore, for there is no doubt that the mounts which were so prominent a feature in mediæval and Elizabethan gardens are derived from the high places of the Bible and ultimately from the ziggmats of the ancient Chaldeans. In the East these "high places" were crowned with temples, in the West with summer houses.

BRITISH-ISRAEL: THE KING'S MESSAGE.

A Reply to the Editor of "The King's Message."

By A. R. H.

An evangelical monthly magazine known as The King's Message has just published a somewhat vitriolic editorial in condemnation of British-Israel propaganda.

At the outset, we are told, British-Israel is obviously "of the Devil" because hundreds of pounds are being spent on its propagation.

Now apart from the crudely ungentle quality of the criticism, our critic has chosen a very unsound basis from which to launch an attack. The "love of" money may be the root of all evil. But money itself is not evil. Neither is money of the Devil but of God, as it is written:—"The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, saith the Lord of Hosts."* Again, the Scriptures exhort every man to give liberally† to the Cause of Christ.

And if we imagine that the injunction, "Take no money in your purse,"‡ applies to modern disciples we deceive ourselves and have only heeded half the Scriptures. This was a special order for the disciples who personally worked with Jesus among His own people.

But when He was about to leave His disciples and send them out into the world alone He gave them very different counsel, saying:—"But now he that hath a purse, let him take it: and he that hath no sword, let him sell his garment and buy one."§

During the Christian dispensation responsibility for self-maintenance and protection rests upon the individual. God helps those who help themselves. And He is determined to have sons who (by His grace) can face the world alone.

There is a self-reliance which truly relies upon God. There is a sturdy independence that depends on God.

But if we neglect "to sell our cloak and buy a sword," or, in other words, to make proper provision for our own support and security, the fault is ours.

Because we trust in God it does not mean we can take unnecessary risks. Neither does our trust justify us indulging in slackness wherein organization of the personal life is concerned. Indeed, if we are Christ's then we should be doubly diligent. The children of light are called to be wiser than the children of this world in the conduct of their mundane affairs, not less wise.

If our critic had been really frank he would have said, "Had the hundreds of pounds been sent to our organization for distribution it would have been all right, but we consider the money wasted on British-Israel."

Then the challenge becomes nothing more important than the expression of a personal opinion. But it is inexcusable to transfer the blame to the money itself.

If money is good spent by one Christian organization, it is equally good spent by another Christian organization. And those who give have the right to decide which organization shall dispense the gift.

Money subscribed to British-Israel all goes to proclaim the evangelical Gospel of Christ and of His Kingdom. If the Devil is providing the money, then he is forging weapons to destroy his own house. And a house divided against itself cannot stand. So in any case the criticism is manifestly absurd.

The editorial now deplores the recent publication of a Manifesto in the Press, which it describes as making "bold, blatant assertions without foundation in fact."

But facts are facts and cannot be dismissed by the mere assertion that they are without foundation. On the strength of a single extract the Editor comes to the chaotic conclusion:—"British-Israel, therefore, is based upon Law which is whittled down, according to the advertisement, to the Law of the Lord or Common Law of England."

This is a gross misrepresentation. British-Israel is based upon no such "whittled down" foundation.

The fact that the Common Law of Britain is based upon the Mosaic Law is unchallengeable. The fact that the Mosaic Law is based upon the Divine Law cannot be gainsaid. The fact that God's Kingdom in the earth is based upon the Law of God is also beyond dispute.

British-Israel does not "whittle down" the Law of the Lord to the level of the Common Law of Britain. On the contrary, it exalts the Common Law by setting forth its Divine origin and association with the Law of God.

The aim of British-Israel is not to exalt the Common Law of Britain at the expense of the Divine Law. British-Israel would have the Common Law of Britain re-formed until it emerges as the restored Law of the Lord in all its pristine purity.

But the thing which really nettles our opponent is the whole idea of the Kingdom being and not a Church. "Here is its antagonism to the Church of God," he says, "for the Church is founded upon Divine grace and exists in the present dispensation of Divine grace."

But where is the antagonism? Suppose the Church is founded upon Divine grace (although we know of no Scripture

* Hag. ii, 8.
† 2 Cor. ix, 7.
‡ Mark vi, 8, and Matt. x, 9.
§ Luke xxii, 36.

Digitized by Google

which definitely makes the assertion), the KINGDOM does not compete with the CHURCH for that foundation. The CHURCH stands. The KINGDOM stands. There is no inharmony between them.

As for the LAW. The Ten Commandments have not been repealed because we are in the Christian dispensation. There is a difference between the LAW and the curse of the LAW. It is from the curse of the LAW that Christians have been delivered, not from the LAW itself.

Grace abounds. But if Grace had superseded the Law we could sin with freedom from all consequences. We cannot sin with impunity.

Even in the Sermon on the Mount JESUS made it quite clear that He had come not to destroy the LAW but to fulfil and that not a single jot or tittle of the LAW could be repealed.

From the LAW our critic turns to the statement :—" The ANGLO-SAXON NATION and COMPANY of NATIONS and the UNITED STATES branch of the same people constitutes the national basis of the KINGDOM of GOD in the earth." Of this our critic cries indignantly, " Such a purpose cannot be found within the covers of the BIBLE, for there is not a single Scripture to support it." The latter sentence is italicized by the Editor to fully express his indignation.

But in one stroke of the pen our critic has placed himself in the dock with the many others who despise the very idea of GOD'S PEOPLE being a NATION in the world to-day, as it is written :—" Considerest thou not what this people have spoken, saying, The Two Families which the LORD hath chosen He hath even cast them off? Thus they have despised MY PEOPLE that they should no more be a NATION before them." [1]

As for other Scriptures, even the new covenant of Jeremiah xxxi, 36, speaks of ISRAEL being a NATION before GOD for ever. Genesis xxxv, 11, speaks of the

that Jacob's seed would develop into during the latter days. DANIEL speaks of the great WORLD EMPIRE that would succeed ROME and stand for ever.[2] ISAIAH speaks of ISRAEL in the ISLES of the SEA and of a People establishing the earth and inheriting all the desolate heritages. JESUS spake of the KINGDOM being given to a NATION [3] bringing forth the fruits thereof.

If we say there is no NATION it is time we re-read our BIBLE and read it through from Genesis to Revelation. It will certainly prove a revelation.

But to continue. The Manifesto's statement that " to ABRAHAM was born ISAAC, father of the SAXONS," is described as being " bald and ridiculous."

But the mere idea of ISAAC being father of the SAXONS is no more ridiculous than the well-known fact that JUDAH is father of the JEWS or ISHMAEL of the ARABS. The mere idea becomes less ridiculous still when we realize that ISAAC was a miracle child.

However this may be, the " latter days " find world power—political and financial—rapidly passing into the hands of ANGLO-SAXON and JEW respectively. Considering that the JEW knows he is descended from ABRAHAM, and the BRITISH PEOPLE in the liturgy of their NATIONAL CHURCH claim that ABRAHAM, ISAAC and JACOB are the fathers of their RACE, it is difficult to see why the mere idea of these two claiming should be ridiculous.

But Mr. Matheison finds " the most shocking assertion of all " to be that " the Israel of the Four Gospels and of the Acts of the Apostles and the Epistles had no tribe of Judah in it."

Perhaps this is a point on which there is real excuse for misunderstanding. For the Manifesto is talking of literal ISRAEL and Mr. Matheison is thinking of spiritual ISRAEL.

But even so, there is no excuse for fastening on this one sentence as constituting " a direct denial of the Holy Scripture that our LORD, according to the flesh, sprang from JUDAH."

The statement is nothing of the sort. It must be taken with sentence which follows it :—" Judah has its own and honoured place in Holy Scripture."

This qualifying statement leaves the controversy open. Left thus it entitled its writer to the benefit of the doubt. In a Manifesto challenging truths must be set forth in challenging fashion. Necessity for condensation debars elucidation by detailed explanation.

Obviously our critic misunderstood or overlooked this qualifying statement. We cannot suggest that he deliberately ignored it.

But we are grieved by his culminating degeneration :—" It is evident that the adherents and supporters of British-Israel support the denial and perversion of GOD'S WORD. No Christian true to GOD and His Word can have any part or lot in it."

British-Israel workers believe in everything that Mr. Matheison believes in : and they believe in more. They would not dream of condemning Mr. Matheison for his work and witness. It is not charitable that they should be anathematized by Mr. Matheison because they do not belong to his own particular limited school of thought.

When the disciples came and told JESUS they had just condemned a stranger for " casting out devils " in the name of CHRIST, when he did not belong to their own particular little circle, they received the rebuke they well deserved. " Forbid him not ; for he that is not against us is on our part."

BRITISH-ISRAEL is not against the LORD JESUS CHRIST but for Him. It is not against evangelical truth but for it. Not against the Word of GOD and the Scriptures but for them.

The King's Message is not the only publication that proclaims the King's Message. The National Message also enjoys that royal distinction.

Moreover, BRITISH-ISRAEL workers proclaim the whole and not a part only of the counsel of GOD. And the message they send to The King's Message is this :—" SINAI led to CALVARY ; may you be wise enough to retrace your steps to SINAI." [4]

It is the spirit of this warning that evangelicals need to absorb to-day. For it is only from SINAI that we can see CALVARY in true perspective. At SINAI we meet the LAW, the KING and the embryonic KINGDOM. At CALVARY the three are fused

[1] Jer. xxxiii, 24. [2] Dan. ii, 44. [3] Matt. xxi, 43.

[4] These words were used by the great Disraeli in one of his novels, but they seemed so apt at this point we felt justified in adopting them.

into one (by the Redemption) and lifted up on to a new plane of development for active service in the earth.

ISAIAH would have us go back further still. And he is right. For in studying any subject it is necessary first to go back to beginnings. "Hearken to me, ye that seek the LORD: look unto the rock whence ye are hewn, and to the hole of the pit whence ye are digged. Look unto ABRAHAM your father and unto SARAH that bare you." [5]

From these far-off vantage points we can better see the progress of the KINGDOM in all of its advancing stages. Only in the light of our descent from ABRAHAM can we hope to understand fully the meaning and significance of the KINGDOM GOSPEL.

For there is a natural seed as well as a spiritual seed. A NATION as well as an ECCLESIA. A BRIDE (or KINGDOM) as well as a CHURCH.

Let The King's Message hearken to the message of the KING:—"This good news of the KINGDOM, however, shall be proclaimed throughout as a witness to all nations; and then the end will come." [6]

THE WHOLE EMPIRE,

When The King's Message adds this national Kingdom-message to the individual message of salvation it will find itself in possession of a statement of Christian doctrine invincible and unchallengeable in its strength and witness.

MORE COSTLY THAN A BIG WAR.

By J. E. C.

THAT unemployment is costing the Empire more than a big war, no sane person will deny; again, will any intelligent and thoughtful person confidently assert that there is any sufficient reason for the existence of that unemployment? If able-bodied and well-educated workmen with suitable tools and materials fail to produce much-needed prosperity, how can they rebut a charge of incapability?

Providence has supplied the British Empire with the means in plenty for maintaining all and many more than its inhabitants; yet it fails to put in the way of many of its inhabitants a fair chance of maintaining themselves.

Land, sunshine and water are just wasting in unlimited quantities in many parts of our Empire. Where are the Statesmen either at home or in the Dominions or Colonies who are showing themselves capable of taking and making use of the magnificent advantages which are lying ready to their hands in such superabundance?

There are, of course, some difficulties, but these are tiny indeed compared with many our Empire has had to tackle and overcome in the past, and compared with those a big war would entail can hardly be said to exist.

Labour-saving machinery, economy in various ways will, no doubt, still more increase unemployment, but to endeavour to rectify this by stopping the machinery and economy would only show further incapability to rectify matters.

Statesmen all over the Empire must work together for the good of the Empire as a one and indivisible whole, and unemployment will disappear like dew before the sun.

[5] Isa. li, 1-2. Note also the reference to the Nation, the Isles and the Law, verses 4, 5 and 7. [6] Matt. xxiv, 14. Ferrar Fenton version.

WANTED! LEADERS OF MEN.

Where are the Statesmen who take sufficiently large and up-to-date views of the matter while considering the circumstances of our Empire?

This matter requires to be looked at, not only from an English, Scotch, Welsh, Irish, Australasian, Canadian, or South African standpoint, but from a standpoint which takes in the Empire as a one and indivisible whole. Our Empire is still in its undeveloped youth.

Providence has lavished upon us materials for building up such an Empire as the world has never yet contemplated.

We have thousands of unemployed able men and women; millions of acres of well-watered land in every variety of climate, a considerable portion of which lands remain as yet untouched by civilization; yet it seems there are no "Leaders of Men" capable of dealing with this situation. Much money which could be used for the purpose is wasted on the dole. There are difficulties to be overcome, of course, and these must be acknowledged. Attempts must not be made to drive in wedges thick end first. If a start be made with care and judgment, then we can go ahead and make use of the numerous openings which will rapidly appear. We have incomparable foundations to work on and splendid materials for our purpose. Why, then, not start at once to develop a superstructure worthy of the great men who have worked before us towards that end?

There is no reason whatever why in a big, undeveloped Empire with unlimited, well-watered land in every variety of climate, able-bodied men and women, money, British sense and sinew, Christianity and so on, should have any unemployment. Let only a few persons of common sense who think thus meet in London, England, and state their views in a few words, and unemployment difficulties can be settled for the benefit both of the unemployed and for the Empire in a very short time.

THE CHURCH OF BRITAIN.

SOME remarkable words about the effect of the War on religion and about the possibilities of Christian reunion were spoken by the King to-day in a speech to the members of the Lambeth Conference.

It was no mere formal speech: rather was it a revealing glimpse of the King's religious outlook and of his close personal interest in the problems of the Church.

The King, who was accompanied by the Queen, received the members of the Conference in the scarlet and gold ball-room at Buckingham Palace.

THE GROWING CHURCH.

He shook hands with each visitor, and afterwards, in reply to an address from them, he said:

"It is a deep satisfaction to me to receive and to welcome this great assemblage of Bishops of the Anglican Communion, which includes not only Bishops from my Dominions, but from the United States of America.

"I have observed with interest that among the delegations which have visited Lambeth has been an important one from the Orthodox Church.

"Looking back upon the beginning of this series of Lambeth Conferences, it must be a source of pride and thankfulness to reflect what a testimony they bear to the growth and development of the Anglican Communion.

"A hundred years ago it was little more than the Church of a single kingdom. The present Conference is a world-wide gathering of united, though mostly self-governing, Churches, which has attained the proportions of

A GENERAL COUNCIL.

"I remember ten years ago, when I had the pleasure of receiving the Sixth Lambeth Conference, that the question of the reunion of Christendom was foremost in your thoughts.

"You put before the world an ideal of unity and a plea for a new endeavour to heal the rents in the fabric of the Church. I am most happy to learn that this appeal has not been fruitless.

"It is my earnest hope and prayer that the work which your last Conference began may prosper; and that the deliberations of this present Conference may result in some notable advance towards this great and desirable end.

THE EVERLASTING TRUTHS.

"I learn from your address that the main subjects for your consideration are summed up under the general head—'The faith and witness of the Church in this generation.'

"The subject has been well chosen, and with keen insight into the needs of the present day. The obvious and material damage of the War is not now so manifest as when you last met; the wounds are, to some extent, scarred over.

"But men's minds and souls are still troubled by the wounds which the War inflicted, and perplexed through the shocks thereby dealt to their old beliefs and spiritual loyalties.

"At such a time the Fathers of the Church do well to take counsel together how best to bring home to the world to-day, in ways most appropriate to the difficulties which beset it, the truths of the everlasting Gospel."

The King paused. Then he added in impressive tones: "God reigns—and I pray that His blessing may rest upon your deliberations."—From the Evening News, dated 23rd July, 1930.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

REV. MAXWELL AND MRS. CARNSON ARRIVED FROM SOUTH AFRICA ON JULY 28TH.

THE return of Mr. Carnson to take part in the great Forward Movement certainly does not mean that the work in South Africa is to be given up. The propaganda work grows apace from the Cape Town office, under the ægis of Mr. J. T. Burton, and the absence of any Commissioner will have the effect—is already, in fact, having the effect—of stirring our South African friends to even greater efforts than formerly. The circumstances of South African life—the small white population scattered over immense areas, the political situation and the language difficulty—do not lend themselves to any great mass movement such as is possible in England, Canada or the U.S.A.

In Africa there will always be the few who bear a heavy burden of responsibility and of loyalty, while the many are apathetic or even antagonistic. But our "few" in South Africa are real stalwarts, and Mr. Carnson pays the very highest tribute of praise to them all. A little later we shall have more to say of some who have so magnificently rallied to his support during the past three and a half years.

First letters from "The Hayes," Swanwick, announce a very wonderful opening to the Summer Conference meetings, the deeply spiritual tone being exactly what we had prayed for and anticipated. "The Hayes" stands in an atmosphere of prayer by reason of the varied companies of Christian workers who gather there. We are confident that the result of last week's meetings in such an atmosphere will be helpful to our Cause.

The new Special Number of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE is now ready. It consists of 68 pages, with 44 articles covering many phases of B.-I. teaching, thus forming almost a compendium. Many thousands of copies are available. No price is fixed, but it would be remarkably cheap at 3d. plus postage. We hope our friends will help us with the great cost of this issue. It will be found of inestimable value for propaganda purposes. Will all please send on their orders, and we feel sure that after they have read it they will want a supply for their friends. The wise distribution of this SPECIAL and the MANIFESTO must do a vast amount of good.

J. V. H., of Blackburn, sends us some interesting particulars of the oldest inhabitant of that town—Mrs. Crompton, who celebrated her hundredth birthday a few weeks ago, when she was the recipient of many congratulations. She has been a British-Israelite for many years, and she and her family are regular attendants at the local Branch meetings. She lately wished her Pyramid box to be opened and there was found in it £1 7s. 11d., which represented her savings for B.-I. out of her old age pension. Had she been a few days older she could have claimed the distinction of living during the reigns of five monarchs, for the death of King George IV took place the week before she was born. Mrs. Crompton has 29 grandchildren and 30 great-grandchildren, and most of them called at her house to congratulate her on her hundredth birthday. She retains all her faculties apart from hearing; she is wonderfully active and can read easily with the aid of glasses; she is remarkably proficient with her needle. She is associated with the Queen's Hall Mission, of which she is still a member.

An Anglican clergyman in New Zealand writes that he is preaching B.-I. Truth and he is reading our literature with great eagerness. He has a district of 360 square miles to administer, and seventeen places and five Works Camps to look after, and no curate, only one lay reader. He has formed a local B.-I. Association. He says if he could afford it he would readily help the Federation financially, but finds this impossible out of a salary of £200 per annum, with no house and no travelling allowance.

What a fine spirit and what an example. God bless him we pray.

E. G. writes from Kent :—"As a result of a friend sending me THE NATIONAL MESSAGE I have accepted B.-I. teaching. Although a Christian I seemed to feel something lacking. B.-I. has meant so much to me spiritually, and I got such a blessing myself that I feel I must pass it on and seek to lead others to the Lord.

"I have had a meeting in my house every fortnight for some months past, and those who have gathered round the Word have been greatly blessed and are seeking to lead others into the Truth.

"Miss Hayes, of the Dover Branch, has been kind enough to come and lead our meetings. It is wonderful how she has unfolded God's Word to us ; may she have a rich blessing. We are all lending our copies of your journal. May God abundantly bless all that is being done in His Holy Name."

Several subjects have been taken during the session, and much help and benefit have been derived by all those taking part. The attendances have been most regular and the enthusiasm shown by the members for the continuance of this Circle is most encouraging. EMPIRE LECTURE.

In addition to the above, on Thursday, October 24th, 1929, Mr. Herbert Garrison, F.R.G.S., the well-known Empire lecturer, delivered a lecture entitled "Cameos of Dominion" at King's Hall. Colonel Sir William Wayland, M.P., presided, supported by Lieut.-Commander Duffett, R.N., as Chairman of the Herne Bay Urban District Council. The lecture was splendid. Arrangements are being made for Mr. Garrison to lecture again at King's Hall in October next.

The meetings for prayer and Bible study are much appreciated, and Miss E. Peters is now leading these studies.

PROPAGANDA WORK.

THE SECOND COMING of OUR LORD

By REV. W. PASCOE GOARD

The threads of the Bible Story are many, each of them reaching one great culmination—namely, in the Second Coming of Christ.

The following threads may be indicated, all of which culminate in the Second Coming:

(1) The teaching regarding the Temple.
(2) The teaching regarding the Nation Israel.
(3) The teaching regarding the House and Throne of David.
(4) The teaching regarding the House of Judah.
(5) The teaching regarding the External Nations.
(6) The teaching regarding the Church.
(7) The teaching regarding our Lord Himself.
(8) The teaching regarding the Apostles and their Position and Office in the Regeneration.

All these, and other threads of the Bible Story, find their culmination in THE SECOND COMING OF OUR LORD.

The last utterance of our Lord, as given in the last sentences of the Book of Revelation, reiterates all preceding prophecy and testimony concerning the Second Coming: these are the solemn words:—

"Even so, come, Lord Jesus. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen."

JOEL'S PROPHETIC MESSAGE and WARNING

By HOWARD B. RAND, LL.B.

This is a remarkable book on the message of Joel which is clearly shown to be a warning to this day and generation. Not only does the author deal with the prophet's utterances, but he gives the order of related prophecies from other parts of the Bible.

Those who desire to harmonize the prophecies with the historical events of the present day and during the few remaining years of this dispensation cannot afford to be without this most interesting treatise.

The prophetic symbols used by Joel have been placed in their proper historical setting. The reader can clearly identify economic, national and international events as they come to fruition, for they are clearly outlined by this prophet's remarkable revelation. In this day of prophetical fulfilment this book should be in the hands of every teacher and student of prophecy.

THE ILLUMINATED CHRISTIAN.—II.

BY THE REV. DR. W. PASCOE GOARD.

WE have examined in the preceding article the only Name whereby we must be saved.

We shall in this article examine the means of illumination provided for the Christian.

Other organizations built on other faiths seek illumination. Some seek illumination from legitimate sources. Others have recourse to sources directly forbidden by the sacred Scriptures. Such, however, is the haste of some and the hunger of others after knowledge that they are ready to have recourse to any and every source which will give to them hidden knowledge.

The Christian has a more direct path than any other, and the best of all guides in His search after truth and after knowledge of otherwise hidden things.

First, as to his own qualifications.

There are systems which seek by self-repression in the physical world, and by practising certain formulæ to so bring their bodies into subjection that they shall become attuned to agencies of knowledge of which otherwise they would be unconscious. One learns that strange experiences and powers are so developed. But thereafter the person so developing them ceases to be normal according to the standards of this world and its affairs.

The Christian system provides at the outset a biological change amounting to a new creation for the penitent seeker after Christ. It was of this biological change that Jesus spoke when He said to Nicodemus: "Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God." The manifest implication is that being "born again" brings with it higher powers of vision; vision which can see and know all things, even "the depths of God."

Thus the Apostle Paul in his analysis of the spiritual man who is thus re-born, and in contrasting the spiritual man with the natural man says of the natural man:

"Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

Of the spiritual man:

"But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God."

Of the natural man he says:

"For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him?"

Of the spiritual man he says:

"Even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God."

"Now we have received, not the spirit of the world, but the spirit which is of God; that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God."

"Which things also we speak, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth; comparing spiritual things with spiritual."

Of the natural man:

"But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned."

Of the spiritual man:

"But he that is spiritual judgeth all things, yet he himself is judged of no man."

"For who hath known the mind of the Lord, that he may instruct him? But we have the mind of Christ."

It is clear from this and many other Scriptures that the "born again" man is by his rebirth possessed of powers of vision and of apprehension which the natural man has not, even the intellectual princes among them.

It is not with the illuminated Christian a matter of eye, nor of ear, nor of natural understanding; it is a new and deeper thing, namely, the Spirit of God which is given to us with which to perceive and to know things hidden from eye, ear, and heart of man.

The first qualification for Christian illumination is therefore birth from above; not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of man, but of God.

Having achieved the necessary Spiritual powers by birth from above, birth of the Spirit, birth of God, we now look about to find the instructor of the seeker after knowledge and understanding.

For this purpose it is useless to seek the aid of men. The schools have no curriculum for such pupils as this. The universities do not provide lectures on the subjects which belong to this degree of knowledge. It is necessary to seek for the superhuman and the Spiritual tuition.

Who shall be our Spiritual Guide, and how may we find Him and place ourselves in His hands?

THE HOLY GHOST.

The very Highest provision has been made for the furnishing of the illuminated Christian. Our Guide and Teacher is the THIRD PERSON OF THE HOLY TRINITY. God, the Holy Ghost, is our appointed Teacher.

Let us consider this carefully. Other spirits may offer to become our guides and teachers; but why should one turn to any of these when the Holy Ghost, the Devoted Spirit—as the words mean—has placed Himself at the call of the earnest seeker after truth?

Thus the Saviour promised Him to His followers and to all who should believe through their word:—

"If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him.

He that loveth me not keepeth not my sayings: and the word which ye hear is not mine, but the Father's which sent me.

These things have I spoken unto you, being yet present with you.

But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you.

Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid.

Ye have heard how I said unto you, I go away, and come again unto you. If ye loved me, ye would rejoice, because I said, I go unto the Father: for my Father is greater than I." —St. John xiv, 23-28.

The curriculum of the Holy Spirit has a set and unchanging primary department. He shall reprove the world of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment to come.

"Of sin, because they believe not on me."

"Of righteousness, because I go to my Father and ye see me no more."

"Of judgment, because the prince of this world is judged."

In that set of subjects is included all the foundational doctrines and facts of the Gospel of Salvation through Christ.

He teaches this series of facts first because these are the steps by which one gets into the experience of the new birth. That in turn is the door by which one obtains the higher life and the vision which accompanies it, qualifying one to receive the teaching of the Holy Ghost in the deep things of God.

This course of learning must of necessity be the first step in Divine illumination.

From this initial experience forward, the Holy Ghost reveals all truth.

"Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself: but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will shew you things to come.

He shall glorify me: for he shall receive of mine, and shall shew it unto you.

All things that the Father hath are mine: therefore said I, that he shall take of mine, and shall shew it unto you."

Thus the "Light of the World" gave promise to His disciples of light surpassing that of the world and of all who are in it. These are the true illuminati to whom the light of the Holy Ghost has come.

Now our Lord follows the promise by His most wonderful prayer for them and for us. Let us study that prayer and see that the Lord has given to His followers, and to us also who are His followers, Eternal life. This He defines as KNOWLEDGE of the Father and the Son.

To them He has manifested the Father's Name.

Of them He says: "I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me; and they have received them, and have known surely that I came out from thee, and they have believed that thou didst send me."

These are high and holy things known to the illuminated Christian, and not surely and experimentally known to any other.

We insert the wonderful prayer in full. It is the prayer of our Lord offered directly to the Father, and we are in it if we believe also on Him:—

"These words spake Jesus, and lifted up his eyes to heaven, and said, Father, the hour is come; glorify thy Son, that thy Son also may glorify thee:

As thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him.

And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent.

I have glorified thee on the earth: I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do.

And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self with the glory which I had with thee before the world was.

I have manifested thy name unto the men which thou gavest me out of the world : thine they were, and thou gavest them me ; and they have kept thy word.

Now they have known that all things whatsoever thou hast given me are of thee.

For I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me ; and they have received them, and have known surely that I came out from thee, and they have believed that thou didst send me.

I pray for them : I pray not for the world, but for them which thou hast given me ; for they are thine.

And all mine are thine, and thine are mine ; and I am glorified in them.

And now I am no more in the world, but these are in the world, and I come to thee. Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, as we are.

While I was with them in the world, I kept them in thy name : those that thou gavest me I have kept, and none of them is lost, but the son of perdition ; that the scripture might be fulfilled.

And now come I to thee ; and these things I speak in the world, that they might have my joy fulfilled in themselves.

I have given them thy word ; and the world hath hated them, because they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world.

I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil.

They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world.

Sanctify them through thy truth : thy word is truth.

As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world.

And for their sakes I sanctify myself, that they also might be sanctified through the truth.

Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word ;

That they all may be one ; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us : that the world may believe that thou hast sent me.

And the glory which thou gavest me I have given them ; that they may be one, even as we are one :

I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one ; and that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them, as thou hast loved me.

Father, I will that they also, whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am ; that they may behold my glory, which thou hast given me : for thou lovedst me before the foundation of the world.

O righteous Father, the world hath not known thee : but I have known thee, and these have known that thou hast sent me.

And I have declared unto them thy name, and will declare it : that the love wherewith thou hast loved me may be in them, and I in them."—St. John xvii.

AN EXAMINATION OF MR. AVARY H. FORBES' "STONE WALL."

(Letter No. 6.)

BY PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc.

PERMIT a momentary sideline jaunt just here ! Mr. Forbes uses the words, "Some of the above arguments indeed suggest that the theory is not altogether improbable."

Earlier in his pamphlet he informs the world that the "British-Israelites are incapable of argument," and he says Dr. Meyer makes a similar affirmation. He forgets and says the work he is criticizing is "argument," and he goes further and says it is "not improbable." In this latter case we do believe him, but when he says it is not argument we do not believe him. Of course, we are unable to accept and believe both of two contradictory statements.

31*st*.—Mr. Forbes quotes much from Tacitus in favour of the Germans. Tacitus, like Cæsar and others, included in the term "Germans" many different north European peoples and nations. These so-called Germans were largely Israelites under many names passing through the German forests on their way to western Europe. Among these names we may select Cherusci, Heruli, Senones, Frisians, Brythons, Loegry, Angles, Saxons, Jutes, Danes, and many others.

From long years of reading, I would put into the list of the early peoples who link the Asiatic Israelites with those who gradually passed through the German, Scandinavian, and Pannonian forests to N.W. Europe, and blended in some degree with the early founders of the British Isles, several others. Among these I would place the Getæ, Massagetæ, Scyths, Goths, Gepidæ, Kumry, Cimbri, Cimmerians, Gimmerians, Sacæ, Arsaces, Milesians, Dorians, etc., etc.

Tracing any one of the above as far as we are able is a task involving vast reading and many pages of manuscript.

I say "as far as we are able." After careful thinking and reading, we know it is a fact that all historians run into real difficulty while trying to trace any particular people down through past millenniums.

Who can not truly trace the ancient Assyrians, Chaldeans, Syrians, Moabites, Edomites, Ammonites, Philistines, Phœnicians, Amorites, Ionians, Spartans, Dorians, Macedonians, Goths, etc., etc.

Let us look a moment at one of the past peoples most easily traced, viz., the Jews. Who knows where all the Babylonian Jewish captives went, apart from the 50,000 who returned to Jerusalem in the time of Cyrus ? And who knows where all the Jews of the Roman captivity of A.D. 70 went, and are to be found ? Some few can give considerable information from "authentic history," but much of a speculative character is left for further study.

All lawyers, judges and juries know something of "circumstantial evidence," and its great value ; and they also know that at times it is not sufficiently strong to make a sure case.

In like manner, we think it wise to be patient with the honest, earnest students of history, who seek racial and tribal steps in search of important truths. If wise, we necessarily take all the authentic history bearing on the subject of our pursuits and then supplement by the circumstantial evidence process.

Digitized by Google

This involves the most patient and careful study and a persistent process of fitting facts, times, characteristics, and prophecies together so as to find a sure, probable, or a reasonable conclusion. This is a sane and reasonable method, as all patient, plodding historians know fairly well. We hurriedly take two illustrations.

A well-known stone inscription of Shalmaneser shows that in his time the Israelites were known as Kumroi or Kumry or Kymry. This is a cuneiform symbolized attempt at representing the Hebrew guttural name of Omri, one of the last kings of Israel.

Another inscription, one of Darius the Persian, sets forth clearly that these Kumry and the Sacæ were the same people.

Further, we are told by Herodotus that the Sacæ and the Scythians were the same. Let us for the moment drop the Scythians and look after the Kumry. The Khumiri of Shalmaneser and Darius are the Kumroi of the Greeks, the Cimbri of the Romans, and Kimbri or Cumbri of the early British Isles. Hence the names Cambria, *Cum*berland, North-cumberland, and the Cumry or Kymry of Wales. Hence the Cumri-Dorian societies of Wales. There is nothing very far-fetched or strained in this process.

"Dorians" is another word worth a passing notice. In early times a portion of the tribe of Dan went north, captured Lachish and other places, possessed Dor and Endor, and built the seaport Dora. In the after times these seafaring Dans or Dorians crossed the Grecian waters over to Messenia and Lacedæmonia, which they captured. Here they built up the powerful Spartan Confederacy. On one occasion, their king Areus wrote to Onias the High Priest of Jerusalem and claimed to be kinsmen, both peoples having come down from Abraham. Onias answered the royal letter, and acknowledged the kinship and common ancestral origin.

From Grecian history, we learn much of these Dorians, and also of the Kumroi. We also know that the Ionian, Aeolian and Spartan, or Dorian confederacies were built on the number twelve, and that they and their writers claimed that the Greeks were peoples of common origin.

We find the waymarks of Dan all over Europe from the Black Sea out to the North Sea, and in the British Isles. And we find the name Dor, one of the names of Dan, in Wales. Hence we are not surprised to find the Welsh Society known as the Kumro-Dorian Society, and we are not surprised to find Dan in Denmark.

32nd.—Mr. Forbes quotes from "Rev. Egerton Young, a Wesleyan missionary to the Canadian Indians," who sets forth some similarities between these "Indians and the Jews." Very good! What of it? Suppose some of the Canadian Indians are in part Israelite or Jewish in ancestry! What then? This has no bearing on the ancestry of the British, Scandinavian, Danish or Saxon peoples. Why introduce such a reference which has no relation to the subject under discussion by Mr. Forbes.

The North American Indians may be of Israel, Assyrian, Moabite or Ammonite stock! What of it? Mr. Forbes might just as well turn his attention to the Patagonians, or the Maoris of New Zealand, and show some "Jewish" peculiarities among them. If he did, what then? Of no account!

Let us halt a moment, out of curiosity or interest, for a thought or two.

Suppose we look at the Canadian Indians of the Rev. E. Young. Those from the East and North-East of Canada may have come across the North Atlantic from Scandinavia by or North of the British Isles, perhaps more particularly by Iceland, Greenland and Labrador. This would not be strange, and is quite probable. Moreover, the Scriptures assured Israel and Judah that the Lord would scatter them to all parts of the earth. Hence, a man believing in the good Book would not be surprised to find a people in Canada of early times who had and have Jewish customs.

Further yet. We have excellent and authentic history to show that Norse and other North Europeans long ago landed in Labrador, in Eastern Canada and in the Eastern States.

Hence, if Goths, Scyths, Getæ, etc., landed in North Europe from Scythia, from North-West Asia and primarily from Palestine, it would not be strange to get "Jewish" characteristics among their descendants, the Canadian Indians.

THE CRUCIFIXION OF CHRISTIANITY—I.

By the Rev. John Blacket (of Australia).

Author of "Not Left Without Witness, or Divine Truth in the Light of Reason and Revelation"; "The Manifestation of Antichrist"; "Social Diseases and Suggested Remedies"; "The History of South Australia," with an Introduction by the Right Hon. Sir Samuel Way, Bart., late Chief Justice and Lieut.-Governor of South Australia.

Introduction.

The title—"The Crucifixion of Christianity"—challenges attention, and may seem to be a fanciful one, but it exactly expresses the truth that I wish to make evident. The "Crucifixion of Christianity" is a reality.

There is a cryptic story in the Old Testament that often appeals to me. Over its interpretation there has been some difference of opinion, but that does not trouble me. The story is merely used by me to illustrate the position here taken up. In one of the most obscure yet suggestive of all the books of the Minor Prophets (Zechariah), we read of a man who affirmed that "he was not a prophet," but "a husbandman," and had been "taught to keep cattle from his youth." The question was then put to him: "What are these wounds in thine hands?" The reply was: "Those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends" (Zech. xiii, 4-6).

This "strangely veiled" story admirably serves my purpose. The truth that I want to make manifest, and to emphasize, is this: the Christian Faith, founded by Him "Whose hands were pierced for our salvation," has suffered—not so much from outside—as from internal causes; has suffered in the past, and is suffering to-day at the hands of some who should have stood by it, and supported and defended it.

We see this in mediæval times in connection with the Roman Catholic Church, and in these latter days more especially in connection with the Church of the Reformation. It is with the Reformed Church that I wish to deal, calling attention to a movement within it that calls for anxious thought and resolute but wisely-directed action. I am referring to what is universally known as "Modernism."

In connection with the Roman Catholic Church the "Crucifixion of Christianity" was a gradual process. To the primacy and autocracy of that Church there were many contributing causes. Rome was the capital of the world; all roads led to Rome; laws were formulated there. Paul had written one of the most important of his Epistles to the Roman Church, and had spoken of it in most commendary terms. Paul had suffered martyrdom. The Roman Bishop (Clement) intervened in the schism that had taken place in the Church at Corinth, acting as arbitrator. Irenæus and Cyprian gave special prominence to the Church. Its prestige and its power were a gradual growth. The conversion of Constantine the Great to the Christian Faith contributed largely to the domination of the Church of Rome, and soon to the crucifixion of the Christian Faith. Persecution (that had helped to keep the Church pure) ceased. There was a mass movement to Christianity of a secular character, and the Church, to a certain extent, became paganized. A modern historian says: "The field of the Church was now much larger, but with much good soil it included far more that was stony, barren, and overgrown with weeds. The line between Church and world, between regenerate and unregenerate—between those who were Christians in name and those who were Christians in heart—was more or less obliterated." The Church became proud, despotic, and corrupt. The Roman Bishop claimed to be Primate of the Church universal, and in a special and exclusive sense to be the Representative of Christ. Obedience to the Pope became necessary to salvation. Pope Leo the Great declared that resistance to his authority was impious pride, and the sure way to hell. In the 10th century, and in the early part of the 11th, the "Crucifixion of Christianity" was complete. The 10th century was one of the darkest periods of history. Describing the Church of that period Canon Robertson says: "The clergy in general sank into the grossest ignorance and disorder; the Papacy was disgraced by infamies of which there had been no example in former days." It may indeed be said that the Papacy "crucified our Lord afresh, and put Him to an open shame" (Heb. vi, 6).

There is a Personal Power in the universe that makes for evil, active not only in what we designate "the world," but also in "the Church." Our Lord's parable of the "Tares in the Field" is as true of the Church as it is of the world. A modern writer has well said: "The history of the Church presents, from the beginning, a twofold development of good and evil—an incessant antagonism of light and darkness." From Apostolic times we see a mysterious and subtle struggle going on in the Church as well as in the world between two antagonistic forces. It is this fact that lies at the basis of what I have termed "The Crucifixion of Christianity."

Fundamentalist and Modernist to-day are in open conflict. I want to deal first with "The Rule of Faith in the Apostolic Church," and "The Position taken up by Modernists in relation to it," and then "to show what the Effect of that Position is." In the course of the argument it is hoped that the reader will see how sure is the basis on which the Christian Faith stands.

MODERNISM AND THE RULE OF FAITH IN THE APOSTOLIC CHURCH.

History repeats itself. The "Crucifixion of Christianity" has not yet ceased. To-day the Christian Church—more especially the Reformed Church—is passing through a severe ordeal that may lead to serious disruption. As the Roman Church, in the sixteenth century, departing from New Testament teaching, was torn asunder, so a similar experience appears to await the Church of the Reformation. Already the cleavage has begun, especially in America. Fundamentalists and Modernists have set themselves in battle array. In a sermon in "The Christian World Pulpit," London, and in the Christian World newspaper for June 13th, 1929, Dr. R. F. Horton, one of the leaders of British Congregationalism, says: "It is heart-breaking to many of us that in the face of a steadily increasing Romanism our Protestantism (already divided into many Churches and sects) is threatened with a new cleavage which enters into every Protestant Church with more or less force." "That cleavage," the doctor says, "I have tried to describe by the title Fundamentalism and Modernism."

Modernism is a name given to a critical and speculative movement within the Church to-day—more especially the Reformed or Protestant Church.

In dealing with the subject the first principle that I wish to lay down is this: in the Apostolic Church there was a definite Rule of Faith, greatly valued, tenaciously held, and most carefully guarded, in the interests of which "a great multitude, whom no man could number" (Rev. vii, 9) laid down their lives. It was a Rule of Faith Divinely inspired. Our Lord promised that there should be such. "Howbeit," said He, "when He, the Spirit of Truth, is come, He shall guide you into all truth, for He shall not speak from Himself, but what things soever He shall hear, that shall He speak; and He shall declare unto you the things which are to come. He shall take of Mine, and shall declare it unto you" (John xvi, 13-14, R.V.) Again, "these things have I spoken unto you while yet abiding with you; but the Comforter, even the Holy Spirit, Whom the Father will send in My name, He shall teach you all things, and bring to your remembrance all that I said unto you" (John xiv, 25). With this revelation, or Rule of Faith, the followers of our Lord were to go into the world, and make disciples of all nations.

As we shall see, various names were given to the Apostolic Rule of Faith. In St. Luke's history of the early Church it is called The Apostles' Doctrine. Of the converts on the Day of Pentecost Luke says: "They continued steadfastly in the Apostles' Doctrine" (Acts ii, 42). St. Paul makes a slight change in the form of the title. To the Romans he says, "but God be thanked that .... ye have obeyed from the heart that Form of Doctrine which was delivered unto you" (Rom. vi, 17). To the Church at Thessalonica he says: "Therefore, brethren, stand fast, and hold the Traditions which ye have been taught" (2 Thess. ii, 15). It is to this Apostolic Rule of Faith that the writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews refers when he speaks of the "great salvation" which "at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard Him" (Heb. ii, 3).

We must note, further, the importance and value attached to the Rule of Faith. It was not attacks from the outside in relation to it that the Church so much feared in the Apostolic and sub-Apostolic Age. The attacks of Celsus and Lucian apparently did not, to any considerable extent, alarm the Church. It was disintegrating forces from within—" the wounding of Christ in the house of His friends "—that they feared. How keenly the Apostles and the Apostolic Fathers realized their responsibility to " hold fast," and " to carefully hand on," the Rule of Faith, once delivered unto the saints. They were afraid that it might be tampered with, falsely represented, or its value in some way impaired. How often the words " hold fast " were on the lips of the Apostle Paul. To Timothy he says: " Hold fast the Form of Sound Words which thou hast heard of me, in faith and love which is in Christ Jesus " (2 Tim. i, 13). Writing to Titus he says : " A bishop must be blameless, as the steward of God "—a man put in charge—" holding fast the Faithful Word as he hath been taught " (Titus i, 9). " O Timothy ! " he exclaims, in bringing his first Epistle to a close, " keep that which is committed to thy trust " (1 Tim. vi, 20).

It is of supreme importance, and essential to the whole of my argument, that the reader should keep in mind, from New Testament authority, that there was a Rule of Faith, traditional and written, committed to the Apostolic Church, carefully guarded, highly valued.

THE APOSTOLIC FATHERS.

The next point to be carefully noted is that the Apostolic Fathers take up precisely the same position as the New Testament writers. The Rule of Faith was in their charge, and carefully they kept it, jealously they guarded it. Clement, Bishop of Rome, contemporary with Peter and Paul (possibly the very Clement referred to by the Apostle Paul in his Epistle to the Philippians) (Phil. iv, 3), in his Epistle to the Corinthians says : " The Apostles have preached the Gospel to us from the Lord Jesus Christ ; Jesus Christ from God ; Christ, therefore, was sent forth by God, and the Apostles by Christ. Both these appointments were made in an orderly way, according to the will of God. Having therefore received their orders, and being fully assured by the resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ, and established in the Word of God . . . They went forth proclaiming that the Kingdom of God was at hand ; and thus, preaching through countries and cities, they appointed the first fruits (having first proved them, by the Spirit) to be bishops and deacons of those who should afterwards believe." Having stated the provision made for the careful passing on of the Rule of Faith, Clement makes it the court of appeal, speaking of it as " the Concord " which the Apostles and their followers had " well and piously handed down."

Polycarp, Bishop of Smyrna, the disciple of St. John, bears the same testimony. In his Epistle to the Philippians he says : " Wherefore, forsaking the vanity of the many, and their false doctrine, let us return to the Word which has been handed down from the beginning."

From Polycarp, in Smyrna, we turn to Ignatius, Bishop of Antioch, the friend of Polycarp, and possibly a disciple of St. John. " Stop your ears," said Ignatius, " when anyone speaks to you at variance with Jesus Christ." . . . " Be on your guard, therefore, against such persons." . . . " Continue in intimate union with Christ Jesus, our God, and the Bishop, and the Enactments of the Apostles." In his Epistle to the Smyrnaens, Ignatius gives a fuller account of the Rule of Faith or Enactments of the Apostles. " Being fully persuaded," he says, " with respect to our Lord, that He was truly of the seed of David, according to the flesh, and the Son of God according to the will and power of God ; that he was truly born of a virgin, was baptized by John, in order that all righteousness might be fulfilled by Him, and was truly, under Pontius Pilate, and Herod the tetrarch, nailed to the Cross for us in His flesh . . . that He might set up a standard for all ages through His resurrection."

One of the most interesting and valuable of all the early documents that have come down to us from the Apostolic Age is " The Epistle to Diognetus." The writer of that Epistle speaks of Christianity as " recently entering the world." Speaking of the Rule of Faith he says : " This was no mere earthly invention which was delivered to them . . . which they judge it right to preserve so carefully." Concerning our Lord he says : " He, being despised by the people " (the Jews) " was, when preached by the Apostles, believed on by the Gentiles. This is He Who was from the beginning ; Who appeared as if new, and was found old ; Who is ever born afresh in the hearts of His saints ; Who, being from everlasting, is to-day called the Son ; through Whom the Church is enriched ; the fear of the Lord is chanted, and the grace of the prophets is known ; the faith of the Gospels is established, and the Tradition of the Apostles is preserved."

UNDERSTANDING INDIA.

BY BISHOP BRENTON THOBURN BADLEY (OF BOMBAY).

WE are indebted to the Pasadena (U.S.A.) Star-News of July 2nd for the following article, reprinted from The Christian Advocate, Methodist Episcopal journal of New York.

The article is prefaced by a brief note indicating the special qualification of Bishop Badley to form a just opinion of the situation in India.

[Dr. W. L. King of Pasadena, Methodist missionary in India for forty years, has submitted this article by Bishop Badley to The Star-News, thinking it would interest many of the readers of this paper. Dr. King adds that Bishop Badley was born and passed his youth in India and has spent his active life there, so has had abundant opportunity to know the people, and to have a clear idea as to conditions there. Dr. King, with his long residence in India, feels convinced of the correctness of the position taken by Bishop Badley and the fairness of his conclusions.—EDITOR.]

Several facts regarding the general situation must be known before one is in a position to understand and judge what appears in the newspapers of the United States. We need a sympathetic attitude, but none the less must have the background, in order to interpret correctly the news that reaches us from India.

NO REAL " NATIONAL " CONGRESS.

There is no " National " Congress in the sense of a body representing both Hindus and Mohammedans, and speaking for the various political groups of the land. The so-called "National" Congress that met at Lahore last December did not represent (with the exception of individual politicians) the following great groups: (1) the seventy million Mohammedans; (2) the ruling princes of the native States, with their seventy-five million people, who have their own "Chamber of Princes" and deal directly with the Government; (3) the Liberal party, or Right Wing, that stands for co-operation with the Government in the achievement of home rule; (4) the Revolutionary party, or extremists. This Congress represents really the Non-Co-operation party, and was itself split by the decision of the majority to stand for independence of Great Britain. This is Mahatma Gandhi's party, which since last December has stood for independence of the British Government, and has adopted the civil disobedience and non-payment of taxes as its means of paralysing the existing Government. The Mohammedans have voiced their opposition to the principles and methods of this party through spokesmen who have expressed the Moslem sentiment in recent statements issued by them on behalf of their constituencies. The ruling princes have no sympathy with Mahatma Gandhi's aims or spirit, and look to their own "Chamber of Princes" to voice their desires, while they acknowledge openly that the stability of their thrones is guaranteed only by Great Britain, under whose protection they and their ancestors have reigned for 100 years or more. It must not be supposed, therefore, that Mahatma Gandhi and his party can speak for the nation, or that their aspirations voice the desire of India's people as a whole.

If there were any great political body in India representative of the people of that land, and that body were now claiming independence of the British Government, the situation in India would be vastly different from what it is. The parallel that some draw between India to-day and the colonies of America just before the Revolution does not exist.

INDEPENDENCE NOT THE GOAL.

All political parties in India stand for home rule, under the form of dominion status. No party could have any existence that did not make home rule its avowed objective. It is not to be supposed that Mahatma Gandhi and his followers are trying to wrest home rule from an unwilling Government—they are now engaged in a serious attempt to defy the Government, make government impossible, and get for India complete independence of Great Britain. In this effort they do not represent either the larger or better informed of India's people, nor have they yet stated what form of government they would try to establish if Great Britain were to withdraw. For this reason the situation in India is not nearly so serious as is supposed by many in America, and as newspaper comments might lead one to believe. I have noted within the past few days several pictures of happenings in India which were stated to be connected with the political situation, whereas I know, by residence in the very cities where these pictures were taken, that they concerned purely industrial or economic matters, with no political bearing whatever. In one case it was a railway strike in Bombay in which the populace was said to be Mahatma Gandhi's followers, demonstrating because of the arrest of one of his lieutenants; and in the other it was a municipal strike owing to a new law that the Calcutta municipality had introduced with regard to the excessive loading of ox-carts. It seems to be the fashion to connect all the happenings in India with events related to Mahatma Gandhi's campaign of civil disobedience.

If the educated people of India, both Hindu and Mohammedan, were organized in one main political body, and were demanding independence of Great Britain, we should have something fundamentally different from what we know exists. Perhaps the outstanding Hindu editor of the political party that stands for Home Rule, himself a great admirer of Mahatma Gandhi, is Mr. K. Natarajan, editor of the "Indian Social Reformer," Bombay. Writing under the date of March 29th (while Mahatma Gandhi was on his march to the sea) he says, "We dissent from the independence goal and approve of working out our destiny within the Commonwealth of British nations." This position is held by a far greater part of India's thinking people than that of independence, which Mahatma Gandhi has so recently been led to announce as his goal. This departure on his part, it is claimed by those who are close to the situation, was against his best judgment, being due to a political situation which he felt he could not meet otherwise.

PURE DEMOCRACY NOT DESIRED.

India is not seeking to introduce a real democratic form of government. With a national illiteracy of about eighty-five per cent., voting by ballot is out of the question, even if Hindu-Moslem rivalries did not create a virtual prohibition. A true democracy is opposed there by the following great groups: (1) The Moslems, numbering 70,000,000, who, if the destinies of the land were to be determined by the ballot, would be outvoted by the Hindus nearly three to one. Up to the present, communal representation in the legislative bodies has made possible a restricted use of the ballot. (2) The Native States, under their independent rulers. These States include one-third of the geographical extent of the land, with a population of about 75,000,000 people. Their citizens are so divided between Hinduism and Islam as to make both sides unwilling to let the ballot determine political issues. They are not asking for democracy, and their rulers must naturally oppose that form of government under existing conditions. In some cases a Hindu ruler has a great majority of Moslem subjects, for instance, the Maharajah of Kashmir has 95 per cent. Moslem subjects; while in other cases a Mohammedan ruler has a vast majority of Hindu subjects, as is the case in the largest native State of India, Hyderabad. The religious bigotry and political rivalries of these two great races have made co-operation between them impossible, though the leaders of the small Christian communities are seeking to allay this spirit of opposition, and with some success. The hatred and fear between these two great sections of India's population have thus far made impossible the development of any true nationalism. No one can foretell how long it will be before a truly national type of man will appear in India, one who can sink religious, racial and linguistic differences in the interests of a common motherland. Very few, indeed, have yet risen to this height, either from among the Hindus or Mohammedans. The riots and bloodshed that have recently disgraced India's life have been due to this animosity, and, had they not been quelled, the peace of the entire land would have been threatened far more than it is menaced to-day by the occasional outbreaks of violence under revolutionary leaders such as those who enacted the recent tragedy at Chittagong, or the activities of the unruly tribes that made trouble at Peshawar. Unity is the greatest need of India to-day, and anyone who does not seek to advance it cannot possibly be considered India's friend. Yet nothing is gained either by ignoring or denying the lack unity. Fortunately, wise leaders of both communities re at work on this great problem.

INDIA NOT A COUNTRY.

India is more like a continent than a country, and lacks unity—racial, linguistic, religious, social or political. The Hindus around Madras, for example, are Dravidian by race and speak Tamil, they are of medium stature and dark in complexion, being as different from the Punjabis around Lahore as the Russian is different from the Britisher. The Punjabi has considerable Aryan blood, speaks Urdu or Punjabi, is tall and of a dark olive complexion. The eastern and western regions show equally great divergencies, and it is a truism in India that the country has more races than Europe, with as marked difference as Europe presents. As to language, there are ten languages, each with a distinct script, and each spoken by more than 10,000,000 people, and, in addition, vernaculars spoken by smaller numbers that would run the total to more than twice as many. Under these conditions, the English language alone makes possible any national gathering, whether it be political or any other type. All the leading newspapers of India are published in the English language, including Mahatma Gandhi's political organ, "Young India," although he has steadily maintained that the English language was largely responsible for destroying India's life and national institutions.

Nor should one forget that India is a land of great distances, with a country covering two-thirds the area of the United States, and stretching from Montana to Maine, and from northern Canada to the Great Gulf. It is not surprising that the 320,000,000 of people, under all these complex conditions, have failed thus far to create any national unity. The only hope of achieving this is through the centralized government of Britain which holds these peoples together, and by her influence and pressure is leading them gradually to a unity that would be utterly hopeless without her. If Great Britain were weakened, confusion and civil war would set in, while if that government were withdrawn, we could not expect anything but chaos, with national and, possibly, international complications that might affect all Asia, and even Europe. Without hesitation, I make the statement that India's wisest friends do not stand for her independence of Britain's leadership to-day.

What the distant future may hold, one can hardly prophesy at present, but what the immediate present demands is clear to those who know the situation in India. It is the acceptance on the part of her people of the pledge given by Great Britain to India's peoples at the earliest possible date, a date which must in the nature of things depend largely upon the limitations that Indian conditions entail and upon the attitude of India herself. The great body of Indian people, excluding the Revolutionary and the Non-Co-operation parties, have accepted this pledge in good faith and stand to-day for everything that will bring it about as soon as may be possible. With this assured, India's greatest days are immediately ahead.

By A. R. H.

THE history of most nations is the history of their official national leaders ; statesmen and kings.

But the history of England's rise to EMPIRE is a signal example of the manner in which "the will and spirit of a people can defeat the calculations of statesmanship."

The BRITISH EMPIRE is an empire "in spite of" its politicians. It is supremely the achievement of a PEOPLE—the handiwork of the rank and file of the nation.

This does not mean that BRITAIN has not had great statesmen. But time has proved the instinct of the common people to be a sounder guide than the vacillating policy of the politician.

And it is because of the fact that the common people have always been able to keep true to the light within them, in spite of every discouragement from officialdom, that the characteristic blindness of national leadership has not proved disastrous.

Fortunately it is only when the blind lead the blind that both fall into the ditch. And by the grace of GOD the blunders of myopic British governments have been compensated for by the foresight of Divinely-inspired individuals like STAMFORD RAFFLES and CECIL RHODES.

GOD Himself has shepherded HIS PEOPLE,* and the BRITISH NATION AND COMPANY OF NATIONS† is the result.

If the BRITISH COMMONWEALTH is, in a special sense, the achievement (under God) of a PEOPLE, then, anything that helps us to understand the spirit of that PEOPLE will help us to understand the COMMONWEALTH.

Herr Dibelius‡ has published a book on "England" which contains the most masterly analysis of English character ever written.

"The idea of writing this book came to me in the war," he says. "It forced itself on me from my overwhelming sense of a people giving its best in fighting an enemy which it did not know."

Dibelius' book is addressed to a German and not an English public. But this adds to rather than detracts from its value to the English reader. For the book is an unbiassed attempt to understand the character of the people the Germans had been fighting.

And if the ideal of co-operation is to be substituted for the outworn ideal of competition as the basis for the World-

* As it is written : "I will bring the blind by a way that they knew not ; I will lead them in paths that they have not known ; I will make darkness light before them, and crooked things straight. These things will I do unto them, and not forsake them." See Isaiah xlii, 16.

Civilization of the future, then the nations must learn to love and understand each other. There can be no love without understanding.

A. D. Lindsay,§ in his Introduction, puts the matter graphically when he says: "One of the most enlightening things about other people is the way we strike them. 'To see ourselves as others see us,' helps us, no doubt, to understand ourselves.

"For the things about us that strike other people—and this is perhaps even truer of nations than of individuals—are mostly the things we ourselves so much take for granted that we are ourselves hardly conscious of them.

"All nations—but perhaps above all the English—are apt to take for granted that their own way of doing things and of looking at the world are the natural and inevitable ways, and that foreigners are just funny.

"We have got to learn to go on being proud of our own national culture and yet to appreciate the distinctive culture of others.[1] This is what Herr Dibelius is doing in this book, and to follow him trying to understand us will make us understand both ourselves and Germans better.

"The author declares that his book 'is not meant to be a compendium of facts but to help to make understood

THE SOUL OF A PEOPLE.'

"We are apt in this country to be a little shy of attempts to depict national 'souls.' It is as possible not to see the trees for the wood as not to see the wood for the trees: and when we are the trees of this wood which is being described we feel that our individual differences (which the broad brush of the national psychologist omits) are much more important than the sameness which it reproduces.

"But to the foreigner, as to the outsider seeing a family for the first time, the common resemblances peculiar to a nation are more striking than the differences within the nation. Only a foreigner can see the resemblances, and so only a foreigner can describe a nation's soul."

With most of this we are in agreement. But we would qualify the statement that "only" a foreigner can describe a nation's soul. The understanding of a foreigner is penetrating on account of its natural detachment; and it is a platitude that the onlooker sees most of the game.

But the onlooker does not see all of the game. And if he cannot see from within as well as from without his understanding is incomplete.

Detachment is not the monopoly of the onlooker. It can be cultivated by the object under observation itself. So that the ideal interpreter will be one who can combine a philosophical detachment with intimate personal experience.

ENGLAND has not yet produced the man who can combine these two qualities of vision—natural and spiritual—in high degree. So we must do our best with the material at our disposal.

Dibelius' analysis is uniquely penetrating. But as we shall see he always just fails to reach the mark for the very reason we have adumbrated. As an onlooker he can only look from without. He cannot see from within.

Dibelius is quite outspoken about the fact that English people believe themselves to be of GOD. He is always just on the verge of a great discovery. But the discovery eludes him. It is like a rock of offence; he stumbles over it.

His failure, in spite of valiant attempts to reach the mark, is evident from his closing pages, where his final conclusion can be best set forth in the challenging assertion: The English think they are the chosen people; but they are not.

How near he is to the truth of the matter may be judged from the following sample of his writing. Concluding chapter I, he writes: "During the war the Little England ideal of the Victorian era collapsed completely. That little BRITISH STATE which could make nothing of its COLONIES has become in which the MOTHERLAND and the COLONIES are partners with equal rights; while the hope of a permanent good understanding with the UNITED STATES holds out the prospect of a dawning era of ANGLO-SAXON dominance over the WORLD.

"This sense of the

now inspires practically the whole PEOPLE, including most of the workers. Differences turn not on fact but on ethical interpretation.

"For some, Anglo-Saxon Imperialism connotes only power, exploitation, profits. Before others there sways a dim but dazzling to be brought to the WORLD by the ANGLO-SAXONS. For the moment these last constitute a leaderless minority[2] . . . but the efforts towards founding show a genuine enthusiasm behind this aspiration which can hardly be wholly ineffective."

VISION OF A MILLENNIUM

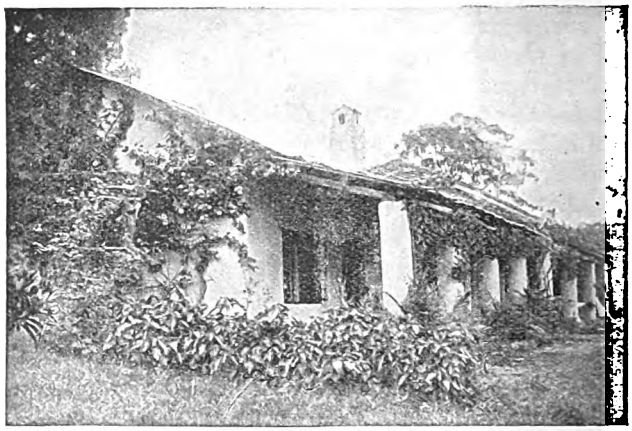
"THE VOICE OUT OF THE MIDST OF DARKNESS."



BY EVA STUART-WATT, F.R.G.S.,
Author of "Africa's Dome of Mystery."

IN a materialistic age like our own when faith is sometimes nearly wrecked in a sea of doubt, we look expectantly for a gleam of light from the shore, for a "voice out of the midst of darkness."

Out of the very heart of the Dark Continent that voice came to me. I had not left school long before I found myself in camp among a primitive Bantu race of Equatorial Africa. They were still practically untouched, these sons of the wilds, by the innovations of modern civilization, roaming their native hills often like Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden.

Suddenly a scourge of tropical disease swept, like the black death, through the villages. Whole families were wiped out. Young men were dancing in the moonlight by night, but before sunrise were dead. My own brother succumbed after thirty-six hours' illness. During those terrible days what impressed me most was not the wailing and distress of a people in mourning—they bore their grief in stoical silence—but "Blood, blood everywhere!" No matter where one walked on the open highway, over the tiny footpaths, down by the streamlets, there were nothing but blood-drops all the way. Nor was that all. Here and there, where two ways met, stood an open half gourd of blood. It was as though a great red pencil had been tracing out the tracks of the countryside and marking with a big round dot all the cross-roads. This was not the tragedy of Livingstone's Africa bleeding to death. It was the voice of Africa crying to God that the angel of death might pass on. Here was re-enacted solemnly before my eyes in savagedom the biblical drama of Egypt—"When I see the blood I will pass over."

That was only the beginning of a series of discoveries by which the darkness of heathendom was used to confirm my faith in the Bible. Exploring, one morning, down one of the beautiful gorges that intersected the populated ridges of Ukamba, the native beside me pointed to a forest clump, where vines like twisted cables bound together its matted branches. "Yonder is the place of sacrifice," he said in an undertone.

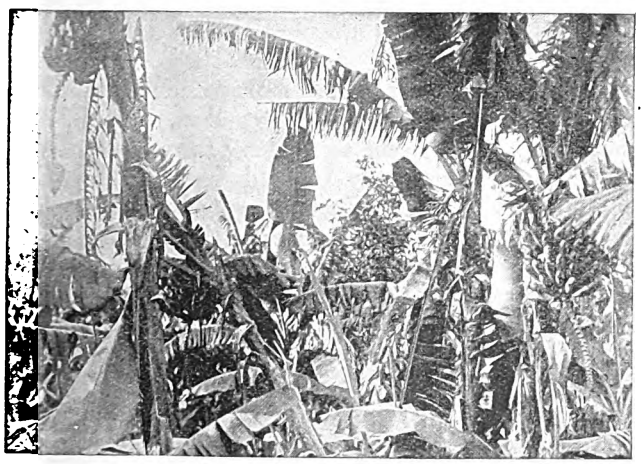
Our Humble Home.

"You mean where your elders sacrifice? Oh, do take me in and show me the spot!"

"Never," he answered. "No strange eyes shall ever look thereon. I myself have never seen the place. The entrance is by some secret way known only to the old men. Young men, women and children are forbidden to enter."

"This then is the 'holy place,'" I thought to myself. "And how do they sacrifice?" I ventured to ask.

"They take with them into the secret place a ram of the first year—a good one without mark or deformity. There, I am told, they sit in a circle on the ground in a cleared patch, near to a very large tree. The master of ceremonies leads the lamb



And the road leading to it.

[4] The significance of this ideal becomes apparent when we realize that it was to Abraham that the promise was made that he should be "heir of the world." See Romans iv, 13. And the British People in their National Church liturgy refer to Abraham as being their forefather.

to the base of the tree and, as he cuts its throat, he spills the blood in silence before N'gai (God). A fire is then lit in the centre of the company and half the flesh roast thereon and eaten in perfect silence. The other half, uncooked, is laid by the officiating elder at the root of the tree with the words, 'This is God's portion : I call Heaven to witness the sacrifice and to forgive our sin.'" Who told these people to sacrifice in the "holy place"? Where were their fathers when "the Lord called unto Moses and spake unto him out of the tabernacle, saying : . . . if any man of you bring an offering unto the Lord, if his offering be of the sheep . . . he shall bring it a male without blemish . . . and the priests shall sprinkle his blood round about, upon the altar." An interesting phenomenon! Yes, but more than that, it is a "voice out of the midst of darkness" speaking to us in Christendom and saying, "for ever, oh God, thy word is settled in Heaven."

Were we half as much in earnest as some of those savages, we should no longer be in darkness as to the existence of God, His control of the nations, His miraculous interventions, the incarnation, the atonement, the resurrection and the final destiny of man. A war-worn Chagga veteran, with strong, determined face and white hair, welcomed my sister and me to the door of his tiny dilapidated booth on the slopes of Naaman on the Forest Track.

Kilimanjaro. He spat on his hand and then took ours in warm reception. We talked of God : he pointed to the sky. "Do you ever speak to Him?" we asked.

"Speak!—He is the first One to whom I speak in the morning"—and he spat towards Heaven, once more, as at sunrise, his own form of inarticulate prayer.

"Do you still sacrifice to Him?"

"Mama" (mother), he replied, "my goats and sheep are finished now, and I have but one cow left. The last sacrificial vow I paid was in my younger fighting days. The Germans had hired us to fight against Arusha. We came back with a very great spoil, and I was given two goats as my portion of the plunder. These I sacrificed to God. You see, I had been surrounded by ten Waarusha warriors, who intended to kill me, and I escaped out of their hands, so I could not keep the spoil myself; I gave it to God as my thanks for His deliverance."

From our humble home on the slopes of Kilimanjaro, we often watched a Chagga native unwillingly dragging along the road towards the court-house a goat or sheep to be paid in lieu of a fine if found guilty. (See illustration.) But for many years the Chagga chiefs led their beasts, and led them willingly, through the soft twilight of tangled forests to the burial-place of their forefathers, endeavouring, by the medium of departed spirits, to propitiate for sin. I have walked along this forest track (where Naaman, our servant, is here seen leading the way), weird enough to-day—what must it have been then? haunted by leopards, abounding with elephant, the dark soil growing blacker and more viscid every yard of our slippery path, as down every leaf and spike and vine trickled drops of water that dripped on us unceasingly. I could imagine the earnest veterans as they neared the goal pushing their way under lichens that swung like matted hair from the branches. Here in a dark woodland, where yews clung with black roots to rocks that were older and greyer than the trees, the fathers of Chagga met to pay to God their yearly sacrifice. We stand in silent awe at their shrine and then blush with shame that ever we should doubt that "Christ by a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands . . . neither by the blood of goats, but by His own blood, entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us."

That is God's new covenant with man. We speak of our international treaties as mere "scraps of paper"—and so very often they are : but the covenants of God are irrevocable. I wonder whether it is known to the reader that the young men of most of the tribes of Central Africa, before leaving their father's roof, bear on their bodies in circumcision rites the mark of the everlasting covenant God made with Abraham, the age in each clan differing, from eight to twenty years. The original "treaty" was made in the land of Canaan, and only two were present—Jehovah and His friend (for Abraham "was called the friend of God").

"And Abram fell on his face : and God talked with him, saying, As for me, my covenant is with thee, and thou shalt be a father of many nations . . . and I will make thee exceeding fruitful, and I will make nations of thee and kings shall come out of thee. . . . . And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession. . . . This is my covenant which ye shall keep. . . . . Every man child among you shall be circumcised . . . and it shall be a token of the covenant betwixt me and you." The enigma remains: From whom did these untutored savages learn the secrets of the Abrahamic covenant?

Who whispered to them, too, of a life beyond the tomb? We have philosophers to-day who try to rob the soul of its immortality. It would be hard to rob an African of his hope in the hereafter. When a Chagga infant dies the little body is plastered with cow dung, a young man or girl wrapped in banana leaves, and laid far out at the edge of the banana grove. Then at night the drawling sound of the jackal or the wild guffaw of the hyena warns the relatives that the body is being devoured by these mountain scavengers. "But what matter?" argues the barbarian, "our friend has gone. He is wandering across the dark desert that leads to another world and his earthly house, sooner or later, must return to clay." The father of a family, at death, is sewn up in an ox-skin and buried underneath his own hut. A year or so later the grave is opened, the bones carefully collected and buried among the banana plants. But the skull is taken to the ancestral grove and there hidden away among the sods with the face towards the snows of Kilimanjaro (to them, the majestic "dwelling-place of God")—a silent expression of a profound faith; "I believe in the Resurrection of the body, and the life everlasting."

Not long ago I sat in a drawing-room with a number of Europeans of various nationalities. During a discussion on the inspiration of the Old Testament Scriptures, a veteran Dutch minister with long white beard, laying his hand on my shoulder, said, "My dear Shild, it doz not matter zo much veder Shona vaz swallowed by de fish or not." It mattered volumes to me. Jonah! That was the one and only sign given by our Lord to an unbelieving nation. "No sign shall be given unto it," He said, "but the sign of the prophet Jonah, for as Jonah was three days and three nights in the whale's belly, so shall the Son of Man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth." The record of Jonah was but the prelude to the final oratorio—the resurrection. No wonder then that Satan has tried desperately to do away with the miraculous adventure of the prophet, that he might deny also the Resurrection and our hope of Eternal Life.

Thank God to-day for any "voice" that proves the infallibility of the Scriptures. The grass of Darwinism has grown up to wither: the flower of modernism has bloomed to fade; "but the word of our God shall stand for ever."

THE LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL.

BY H. C. L.

WHILE we believe that the descendants of the Lost Tribes of Israel can be found amongst the Anglo-Saxon race, we proclaim this fact, not because we believe in the worthiness of the people to fulfil their great destiny, but because we have faith in God's Holy Word. (Ezek. xxxvi, 22.)

God made with Abraham, with Isaac, and with Jacob an everlasting covenant. A nation and a company of nations were to come from their seed. (Gen. xxxv, 11.) This was a material blessing, not a spiritual one.

After a time it became necessary to put the Twelve Tribes under very strict discipline. In Deuteronomy xxviii we are given details of the Mosaic Covenant, in which the Israelites were told quite plainly what would happen to them.

A. If they obeyed God's voice. (Verses 1-14.)

B. If they did not. (Verses 15-68.)

But the curses were not to be for ever. In Deuteronomy xxx we are told that if the Israelites turned again to God, then God would have compassion upon them. (Verses 1-3.)

While the Twelve Tribes were a united kingdom, being one nation established in Saul (a Benjamite) as king, and in David (a Judah-ite) as king, and in Solomon as king, they were yet recognized as two distinct communities. (Joshua xi, 21-23; 2 Sam. iii, 10; 1 Kings iv, 20.)

After the death of Solomon the two communities came to be recognized as two distinct nations (1 Kings xi, 11-13). The Northern ten-tribed nation established in Jeroboam as King; the Southern two-tribed nation established in Rehoboam as King (1 Kings xi, 31, 37-38 and xi, 36; xii, 21).

The characteristics of the two Houses were marked. Israel is called "Backsliding Israel," and Judah, "Treacherous Judah" (Jer. iii). And of Judah we read: "The shew of their countenance doth witness against them" (Isa. iii, 9).

In 2 Kings xvii we are told of the misdeeds of Judah and of Israel, and of how the House of Israel was removed from God's sight—for a small moment (Isa. liv, 7). They were divorced from God and His laws (Jer. iii, 8).

So the House of Israel became lost to sight. They were like unto a son who goes astray and is sent out of his parents' sight. Very often such a son returns, years later, reformed—a great deal depends on his early training. Bearing these things in mind, we must not lose sight of the fact that all Israel—all the tribes—received a very wonderful early training.

The Ten Tribes of Israel gone, the House of Judah continued to function as God's Kingdom on earth (2 Kings xvii, 18).

The first mention of the Jews, it is interesting to note, comes in 2 Kings xviii, 26.

Some time after the House of Israel had been taken prisoner by the Assyrians, the House of Judah was also taken captive. They were punished, but not divorced from God.

After seventy years of captivity, they were given another trial. The Jewish remnant under edict of Cyrus returned again to Jerusalem. The Tribes who responded are set out in Ezra i, 5; Ezra iv, 1; Nehemiah i, 2; iv, 16. And Ezra ii, 1 gives us a clear statement as to who returned.

It was the Southern Tribes of Israel—the House of Judah—to whom our Lord came. Certain of the Tribe of Benjamin were also with this House (1 Kings xi, 36; Romans xi, 1).

But "He came unto His own, and His own received Him not" (John i, 11). He was crucified with this accusation set up over His head: "This is Jesus the King of the Jews" (Matt. xxvii, 37).

But, because the House of Judah rejected our Lord, was the message of Christianity to die? No! Certainly not. There was the Tribe of Benjamin, of whom we read:

"And unto his son will I give one tribe (which tribe?) that David my servant may have a light alway before me in Jerusalem (was not St. Paul a light?), the city which I have chosen me to put my Name there" (1 Kings xi, 36).

While Christianity was something which individuals of all nations could accept, should they choose, to fulfil God's Word, it was necessary that some special people should accept it as a nation—in order that they might be a blessing, an example to other nations, and so that they would from time to time, as the need arose, be willing and able to offer a sanctuary to persecuted continental, and other, Christians.

But to whom were the Benjamites and the Christians to send their message? The Jews were unable to shake themselves clear of the Mosaic Covenant and accept the new covenant (Jer. xxxi, 31; Heb. viii, 8, 13; xii, 24), Christ having fulfilled the law (Matt. v, 17). The law was to the Jews as a stumbling-block (Acts xv, 5-12 and 1 Cor. i, 23).

Christ tells His disciples to whom to go (Matt. x, 6). St. James writes to the Twelve Tribes scattered abroad (James i, 1). The high priest, Caiaphas, speaks of the children of God who were (already) scattered abroad (John xi, 52; see also Hosea i, 10). And St. Peter addresses the strangers scattered (1 Peter i, 1).

A study of the Prophets gives us tremendous encouragement to seek for the Ten Lost Tribes. We learn from them that those Lost Tribes were to be scattered among the countries (Ezek. xi, 16). They were to be unknown in name (Isa. lxv, 15). They were to find an island home in the west (Isa. xlix, 1). And that they were to liberate prisoners (slaves) (Isa. xlix, 9).

The difficulty of finding those Tribes is, of course, due to their change of name and change of habits. It is hardly likely that such a backsliding people, divorced from the law, would continue the practice, during their scattered wanderings, of circumcision—a law difficult to keep (Acts xv, 10).

And perhaps it is just as well. Being freed for so long from the Mosaic Covenant, they would be more inclined to accept the new covenant (Jer. xxxi, 31). The old covenant would not be a stumbling-block to them, as it has been, and still is, to the Jews.

But why has Britain been a place of refuge for persecuted continental Christians? Why has she treated the Jews comparatively well? Why has the Bible been for centuries her national Book? Why has she been putting down slavery? Is it all a question of luck or chance?

To our way of thinking there seems only one reasonable answer to make. If there is a God, then the Anglo-Saxon people have been carrying out His purpose, blindly, but under His guidance, for His Holy Name's sake. The Anglo-Saxon people respond, unknowingly, to His desires. Their early training—their early upbringing is in their blood. Deep down in their hearts is rooted, though alas! often much covered with debris, a firm belief in God. That belief was fully aroused at the Reformation in the sixteenth century. The Puritan revival stirred the hearts of the people in the seventeenth century, so did the Wesleyan revival in the eighteenth century. In the nineteenth century Moody and Sankey aroused the people, so that men on the Stock Exchange went to hear the great Evangelist, Moody, day after day at his mid-day services. During the Great War the nation responded whole-heartedly to the call to prayer.

But what of to-day? Well, we are still a backsliding people! It is true that there are spasmodic signs of a revival, and that the people are slowly awaking to their great calling. But they must go a great deal further than just blindly trying to do the right thing. By themselves they can do little, by calling upon God they can do much.

That is the keynote of British-Israel teaching. It is a call to the people to turn to God, to ask Him to lead them out of their present perplexities and difficulties.

The Prophets tell us that there will come a time of stress for this country, when we shall be absolutely up against it (with the Communist H.Q.'s being shifted from Berlin to London, trouble in India, etc., the time seems not far distant). It seems a pity that we should wait until we are absolutely up against it before we call upon God "to do it for us" (Ezek. xxxvi, 37).

THE WHITE MAN'S BURDEN.

By George McGinnis.

The Press this week carried this statement regarding the speech of Dean Shailer Matthews, of the University of Chicago, before the Scottish Rite Masons.

"Dean Matthews pointed to the Jewish revolution against Roman rule in Palestine 1,900 years ago, and said that the rule of Imperial Rome had brought prosperity to a people that never had been prosperous when they tried to govern themselves.

"'Whenever a nation, unable to govern itself, falls into the receivership or control of some Imperialism that brings prosperity for the first time it immediately begins to feel abused,' said Dean Matthews. 'This was true of the Jews in the first century and it is true of India, Corea, the Philippines, and other peoples to-day who, after having made failures of self-government, have come under the control of stronger nations.'"

It is a fact that when Anglo-Saxons rule a backward people who are given a larger amount of liberty, justice, security, education and prosperity than they have ever known before, they begin to agitate for independence.

I entertained a Hindu in my home, Principal of the high school in Calcutta and head of an orphanage. He clamoured for the independence of India. I told him if Britain withdrew from India the Moslems would rise up and kill every Hindu. "Oh," said he, "we want the army to remain at British expense and preserve law and order, but let us run India." "Why," I replied, "should Britain spend her treasure and blood to preserve order and allow you to make a fizzle of government and run it into the ground?" The same can be said to the Filipino agitators to-day, for they have more education, sanitary laws, civilization and liberty under "Old Glory" than they ever had under the yellow banner of Spain.

God has chosen the Anglo-Saxon to rule the world for the world's good. Not that he loves him any more than the Red Indian or the coloured man, but because he is Israel and is better qualified for the organization and administration of government than any other race. If we have a defective watch we do not take it to the plumber or blacksmith for repairs, but to the man who can do the job, who has the tools and knowledge to fix it right—the watchmaker. Then let us leave to Almighty God the ruling of the world.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

PSYCHOLOGY is a very interesting subject, but one which few probably really understand. Sir William Hamilton in his book on Metaphysics, says :—" Psychology, or the Philosophy of the Human Mind, strictly so denominated, is the science conversant about the Phenomena, or modifications, or states of the Mind, or Conscious-subject, or Soul, or Spirit, or Self, or Ego." It is said to have originated with Pythagoras, and Aristotle is said to have greatly improved it, but its methods are still in dispute ; one method is described as " extensive observations upon persons having some mental peculiarity."

Well, after all, most of us have some sort of mental peculiarity, and it is not always easy to understand one another fully ; sometimes it seems impossible. For example, a minister in Scotland has written a lengthy article in a Scottish religious paper violently attacking B.-I. teaching, basing his strictures chiefly upon our Manifesto. Here are some of his choicest bits :—" It is dangerous because the whole superstructure is based on ignorance. Ignorance of what the Bible really is and ignorance of history. It rests on Fundamentalism of the most blatant character. . . . Because it rests on a more than imperfect knowledge of the ancient documents, and on a thorough-going misuse of them, it is dangerous, and to be resisted tooth and nail. . . . The cult is dangerous because it breeds a pride that is all the more nauseating because of its assumption of humility." At the end of the article, which contains no argument at all, nor makes anything clear, there is the following paragraph :—" Enough has been said to make clear the poisonous pride, the superstition, the credulity, and the crass ignorance of those who adopt the pose of this cult. It is an atavism, a resurrection of mediævalism at its worst. The Church, as a Church, can never be expected to take any notice of it, any more than scholars and scientists do. But individual members of the Church must scotch it whenever they get the chance. This arrogant, militant, Scripture-twisting, history-faking cult has got to be faced, not merely faced, it must be flayed and flailed. It is an insidious and deceitful lie, and must be openly labelled as such." You laugh, and when the laugh is over, and you become serious, what will you say ? Remember this comes from a minister and in the Land of the Covenanters, too ! !

We all know that to be flayed is to have the skin stripped off ; but do we all know what it is to be flailed in the Scotch way ?

Well, here is the description of it given by a Scotchman :—" This torture is a Scotch method of thrashing soundly with a thrasher composed of two heavy and well-seasoned sticks tied together, grasped firmly by both hands, twisted round the head after and before each lash until every ounce of life is no more."

Now, we suggest that here is a matter that might very well engage the attention of some of our psychologists, who might attempt an explanation of the mental peculiarity of the minister in question.

To our minds it is, to say the least, very strange that it should be a Scotch minister who has published the only vitriolic attack upon a Manifesto which has the approbation of millions of people, because of their regarding it as an earnest and honest attempt to show the way out of the dangers that beset us as a Nation.

As a counter to the Scotch minister, we give the opinion of a Scotch Peer regarding the Manifesto. He says :—" The facts are extraordinary, and certainly point to that which British-Israelites believe." Let us also read what Canon C. J. Hollis, M.A., says :—" I am but one of a great number who have thanked God for the remarkable and stirring Manifesto.

" It is remarkable in that it faces facts fearlessly, and drags out into the light the evil that has been unsuspected by the world and the Church. We know now the subtle, sinister and Satanic propaganda that has been doing its deadly work with such relentless energy.

" It is remarkable in that it sounds the clarion call of hope when many are desponding.

" It is remarkable in its earnest call to national prayer, and in its strong reliance on the Almighty power of the Lord God of Hosts, the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

" It is remarkable in its appearance in all the great London daily papers, and many weeklies, and its circulation all over the Kingdom and the Empire. Thank God for it ! Let us pray for Divine guidance and grace that we may be in the line of God's will and purpose. Verily, with a new earnestness and faith, let us pray."

We suggest that our readers should again read and carefully examine the Manifesto, and then compare the wild ravings of the fanatical would-be flagelator with the opinions of the Scotch Peer and the English Canon.

ONTARIO NOTES.

Mr. R. O. Lucas writes from Toronto :—

Two features of the work of the Province give us great reason to be thankful, and because of which we can feel that the past year was truly one of great advance :

First.—Our Hamilton Branch has all the year been doing wonderful work in what is really virgin soil. This work has not been easy ; but the members in Hamilton have persisted and, in addition to regular weekly meetings, have held public meetings once a month, which have been addressed by Mr. Blackaller, Mr. Thos. Ransome, Mr. Fenton Fansher and Mr. Gladstone Brown.

Second.—Our Toronto Central Branch has taken a wonderful step forward in the purchasing of this beautiful central property to be the home of the Branch. Such a step is a sign of wonderful faith, enthusiasm and optimism. It is the finest advance ever made by us in Toronto and Ontario. Not only is this building, British-Israel House, serving as a home for the Branch ; but out of the generosity of their hearts they have offered it as Headquarters to both the Canadian Federation and also this Provincial Executive, and we have been using it as such since the beginning of this year. Words can hardly express the gratitude of every British-Israel member to the Toronto Central Branch, and to our President, Mr. Frame, who had such a great share in the undertaking, for what they have done for us in this respect. We have here a Headquarters in the heart of the city to which we may repair at any time to hold any meetings we may wish to convene. Our Branches in Peterborough and Scarborough are ever pressing forward, and the results of their labours are more perhaps than they realize. We wish them all success !

Within the past few weeks two events of real importance to our work have transpired, and we are now actually on the threshold of a Great Advance throughout Ontario. The first of these events is the entry into membership in the Federation of the Toronto East Branch. We are able to state that from Montreal on the East to Victoria on the West every British-Israel body is a part of our Federation. United we stand ! We are now in the fortunate position of being equipped with three Branches in Toronto—one East, one Central, and one West. We must go forward ! If we will introduce into all that we attempt the true spirit of our Master, surely we will succeed

The second event is the Great Advance undertaken by Headquarters in London, England, through publicity and Study Circles.

Our work has been marked by a series of brilliant speakers who have visited our Branches. The Rev. Joseph Gay, A.T.S., of London, England, spent three wonderful weeks among us, and we owe him a deep debt of gratitude for the interest which he helped to stir up while here. Other speakers have been the Rev. F. C. Ward-Whate, of St. Alban's Cathedral, the Rev. J. D. Paterson, the Rev. F. W. Domina, and now, to cap it all, our beloved leader, the Rev. Wm. Pascoe Goard, from Headquarters. A wonderful array of speakers ! Let us resolve again more firmly than ever to see to it that more strangers to our Great Truth shall be present at our meetings to hear our best lecturers. Such addresses as those we have been privileged to hear lately cannot fail to impress any who are present.

We have, alas, lost two of our most devoted leaders since we met together last year, Mr. C. L. Bedson, who was the father of our St. Clair Branch, and who had been responsible for great numbers of our members first hearing British-Israel Truth, and Mrs. W. H. Farrell, the Honorary President of the Women's Auxiliary of the Toronto Central Branch, and for many years a clear thinker and ardent worker along British-Israel lines. The loss of such leaders is a heavy one ; but their places can and must be filled.

We have with us to-day Mr. Turiff, who probably should receive credit for the formation of the first British-Israel Association in Toronto—for it was in his mind that the idea was first conceived back in 1894, while Dr. Wild was preaching so forcibly here in Toronto. When he broached the suggestion to his Bible Class leader, he was advised to get in touch with Mr. Wm. Reeve, and they, with Mr. Eli Smart, the first President, and one or two others, started Toronto's first British-Israel Study Circle. Mr. Turiff, the first Secretary, still has the minutes of the meetings of 1895. Mrs. Wm. Reeve, Mr. C. L. Bedson, Mr. C. Rawes and Mr. Wm. Jackson, among others, joined the Association, and have never left it. How much we owe to these pioneers ! During the past two years four of these very early members have been called away, in the persons of Mr. Eli Smart, the first President, Mr. C. Rawes, Mr. Wm. Reeve and Mr. Bedson. To us they bore the torch which they have borne aloft through so many trying years. Be ours to hold it high. Let our motto be, "Work and Pray," that we may prove worthy of the tremendous responsibility which is ours !

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

THE ILLUMINATED CHRISTIAN.—III.

BY THE REV. DR. W. PASCOE GOARD.

WE have seen the inward preparation the Lord makes to enable the neophyte to enter the realms of Divinely-given knowledge.

We have seen the teacher provided for the induction of the follower of Christ into Divine knowledge otherwise hidden from all eyes.

We have seen the scope of the knowledge provided, and that it is that most inner light known to the universe, including the knowledge of the Father, and of "all that the Father hath."

We have seen the presentation of the first group of Christian illuminati to the Father in the prayer of our Lord.

We now proceed to see how this promise began to be fulfilled, and how that fulfilment continued.

First, we have the narrative of the descent of the Holy Ghost promised, as we saw in the last article, and now arrived.

"And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place.

And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting.

And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them.

And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance.

And there were dwelling at Jerusalem Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven.

Now when this was noised abroad, the multitude came together, and were confounded, because that every man heard them speak in his own language.

And they were all amazed and marvelled, saying one to another, Behold, are not all these which speak Galileans?

And how hear we every man in our own tongue, wherein we were born?

Parthians, and Medes, and Elamites, and the dwellers in Mesopotamia, and in Judæa, and Cappadocia, in Pontus, and Asia,

Phrygia, and Pamphylia, in Egypt, and in the parts of Libya about Cyrene, and strangers of Rome, Jews and proselytes, Cretes and Arabians, we do hear them speak in our tongues the wonderful works of God.

And they were all amazed, and were in doubt, saying one to another, What meaneth this?

Others mocking said, These men are full of new wine.

But Peter, standing up with the eleven, lifted up his voice, and said unto them, Ye men of Judæa, and all ye that dwell at Jerusalem, be this known unto you, and hearken to my words:

For these are not drunken, as ye suppose, seeing it is but the third hour of the day.

But this is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel;

And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams:

And on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out in those days of my Spirit; and they shall prophesy:

And I will shew wonders in heaven above, and signs in the earth beneath; blood, and fire, and vapour of smoke:

The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before that great and notable day of the Lord come:

And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved."—Acts ii, 1-21.

It will be seen that these newly illuminated ones immediately began to speak out new knowledge which they had not hitherto understood. It will be recognized throughout the New Testament period that all who became thus illuminated forthwith began to give out hidden knowledge as things which, with their new powers of vision, they clearly saw and experimentally knew. It appeared to be miraculous to that generation. It is no less miraculous to this day. The illuminated ones possessed of the Holy Ghost in Pentecostal outpouring are inducted thus into a new world of experience of fact and of knowledge.

Digitized by Google

The continuation of the descent of the Holy Ghost on new converts to " the way " is illustrated by St. Paul's experience on his way to Damascus and thereafter. He was caught up into the third heaven, and heard things it was unlawful, and perhaps impossible, to utter. His whole ministry and the writings he left us is a manifestation of the continued miracle of illumination. Here is the narrative of the event.

" And Saul, yet breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord, went unto the high priest,

And desired of him letters to Damascus to the synagogues, that if he found any of this way, whether they were men or women, he might bring them bound unto Jerusalem.

And as he journeyed, he came near Damascus: and suddenly there shined round about him a light from heaven:

And he fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying unto him, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?

And he said, Who art thou, Lord? And the Lord said, I am Jesus whom thou persecutest: it is hard for thee to kick against the pricks.

And he trembling and astonished said, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? And the Lord said unto him, Arise, and go into the city, and it shall be told thee what thou must do.

And the men which journeyed with him stood speechless, hearing a voice, but seeing no man.

And Saul arose from the earth; and when his eyes were opened, he saw no man: but they led him by the hand, and brought him into Damascus.

And he was three days without sight, and neither did eat nor drink.

And there was a certain disciple at Damascus, named Ananias; and to him said the Lord in a vision, Ananias. And he said, Behold, I am here, Lord.

And the Lord said unto him, Arise, and go into the street which is called Straight, and enquire in the house of Judas for one called Saul, of Tarsus: for, behold, he prayeth,

And hath seen in a vision a man named Ananias coming in, and putting his hand on him, that he might receive his sight.

Then Ananias answered, Lord, I have heard by many of this man, how much evil he hath done to thy saints at Jerusalem:

And here he hath authority from the chief priests to bind all that call on thy name.

But the Lord said unto him, Go thy way: for he is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel:

For I will shew him how great things he must suffer for my name's sake.

And Ananias went his way, and entered into the house; and putting his hands on him said, Brother Saul, the Lord, even Jesus, that appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest, hath sent me, that thou mightest receive thy sight, and be filled with the Holy Ghost.

And immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales: and he received sight forthwith, and arose, and was baptized.

And when he had received meat, he was strengthened. Then was Saul certain days with the disciples which were at Damascus.

And straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues, that he is the Son of God.

But all that heard him were amazed, and said; Is not this he that destroyed them which called on this name in Jerusalem, and came hither for that intent, that he might bring them bound unto the chief priests?

But Saul increased the more in strength, and confounded the Jews which dwelt at Damascus, proving that this is very Christ."—Acts ix, 1-22.

That the method of illumination continued to be the same we have a further illustration in St. Paul's experience at Ephesus. The narrative of the event is as follows:—

" And it came to pass, that, while Apollos was at Corinth, Paul having passed through the upper coasts came to Ephesus: and finding certain disciples,

He said unto them, Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed? And they said unto him, We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost.

And he said unto them, Unto what then were ye baptized? And they said, Unto John's baptism.

Then said Paul, John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people, that they should believe on him which should come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus.

When they heard this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.

And when Paul had laid his hands upon them, the Holy Ghost came on them; and they spake with tongues, and prophesied.

And all the men were about twelve."—Acts xix, 1-7.

Thus was the promise of the Holy Ghost put in process of fulfilment, for let it be remembered that the promise is a continuous one, as vital for this generation as it was for the first generations of the Christian era.

Let us now look at the gifts which accompany the gift of the Holy Ghost. It will be found that two principles are involved. The gift of wisdom and knowledge, the Illuminating gift; and also the gift of power to do things ordinarily beyond the power of men.

" Now concerning spiritual gifts, brethren, I would not have you ignorant.

Ye know that ye were Gentiles, carried away unto these dumb idols, even as ye were led.

Wherefore I give you to understand, that no man speaking by the Spirit of God calleth Jesus accursed: and that no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost.

Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit.

And there are differences of administrations, but the same Lord.

And there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which worketh all in all.

But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal.

For to one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit;

To another faith by the same Spirit; to another the gifts of healing by the same Spirit;

To another the working of miracles; to another prophecy; to another discerning of spirits; to another divers kinds of tongues; to another the interpretation of tongues:

But all these worketh that one and the selfsame Spirit, dividing to every man severally as he will.

For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body: so also is Christ.

For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit."—1 Cor. xii, 1-13.

Study carefully these gifts of the Spirit; mark them one by one. It will be found that knowledge, wisdom, and the intellectual gifts are fully provided for on a plane higher than that of ordinary life.

It will be found that the gift of faith is provided for. This is the gift which brings us into living vital relationship and fellowship with God. It will be found that gifts of power to aid and bless mankind are included. The illumined and empowered Christian should be the most potent, and the wisest, and the most Spiritual being on the earth.

Lastly, the fruits of the Spirit are made manifest, and they are all good, and to the good.

"But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, Meekness, temperance: against such there is no law."—Gal. v, 22-23.

Thus has the Lord provided for the illumination of His saints. Much other Scripture might be produced to further illustrate this; but the careful reader will delight to find the passages referring to the matter for himself. Let us be assured of this, that no Eastern cult, nor any other method or source of illumination, is in the same class or the same order of life even as the source of light, and the method of its imparting, provided by the Lord for the enlightenment and endowment with power of His people.

AN EXAMINATION OF MR. AVARY H. FORBES' "STONE WALL."

(Letter No. 7.)

By PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc.

LET us look in another direction. Take our west Canadian Indians, the Thingets, Quagutyls, Tsimpseans and Haidas of Queen Charlotte Isles. Whence came they?

Tradition, custom, physical characteristics and fairly good history with many words and place names say they came from Japan by the way of the Aleutian Isles and by the Kuro Siwa of Great Pacific Ocean current.

If they came from Japan, who by their own reliable history came from West Asia, then we should look thither for the origin of the above-mentioned west Canadian Indians.

That the Samurai Japanese and others came from Media, Armenia, Crimea and Palestine has been amply proved long since. Hence, Mr. Forbes, when telling us of the Canadian Indians, east and west, having Israel or Jewish characteristics, is telling us more of historic truth than he imagined.

In fact, his reference to the Canadians seems to be used to throw doubt on the British-Israel Truth, and make such teaching appear foolish by contrast.

But again we ask: If the east and west Canadian Indians have "Jewish peculiarities," what of it? Why drag it in? It is no part of the subject. If our Canadian Indians came from Israel by way of N. Europe, or from Japan by way of the Altai Mts. of N. China, or if they did not, then again what of it? Let Mr. Forbes stick to the matter in hand, viz., where did the Anglo-Saxons come from? Who are the British?

33RD: Quoting from Rev. Egerton Young, Mr. Forbes informs us, "We have seen many Indian faces that were very Jewish indeed." Sure! This can be said of "faces" in Japan, Corea, China, Persia, Armenia and every country in Europe and even in Canada, and what of it? What bearing can this have on the questions, "Who are the Anglo-Saxons? Where did the British come from?"

To find Jewish faces in all countries is to find a good proof that God kept His word, which says the people of Judah would be scattered among all the nations of the earth.

34TH: A further reference to Tacitus may be made here: Mr. Forbes quotes Tacitus to show us the Germans were a wonderfully civilized and humane people in their forests long ago.

Suppose these Germans were civilized and humane, what has that got to do with the British, the Angles, Saxons, Danes, Norse and Scandinavians? It has no relation to the argument, if the Germans were not our ancestors.

If they were our ancestors in common with the farther north European people, then this high civilization would be logically and most naturally found in and shared by the people of the British Isles. In such case, we could not well believe the rubbish of our historians who seriously tell us the British were naked, uncivilized, uncultured barbarians, painted and only partly dressed in savage animals' hides. We could not well believe in the high civilization of our German ancestors and the low civilization of the Britons, their children, or their brothers.

Suppose, however, that a highly civilized people spent centuries in crossing through the German forests, and that these migrants were called Germans, but were not, and that they passed on to the God-promised and God-given home in the Isles of the Sea. Suppose those people spoken of as Germans in general were Israelites under the names of Goths, Scyths, Getæ, Cherusci, Brythons, Angles, Saxons, &c. What then?

Suppose the Germans and these people were one and the same. Well, then, what of it?

It would mean that the people known as Germans in part passed to Britain and took their civilization and good traits with them; or that our ancestors simply passed through—during a long time—a civilized people, but were not a part of them.

35TH: Mr. Forbes refers to the Scyths in relation to "Their soothsayers, who foretold the future with wands, as did the Jews."

Suppose the Jews did this and suppose the Scyths did it too, then what? It argues nothing for or against the statement that our present-day British peoples are descendants of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

Put it this way: The Jews revealed the future by the use of rods or sticks, therefore they have ancestral relationship. People all over the earth have their fortune-tellers who use sticks, stones, birds or other objects to forecast the future. Could we say, therefore, these people have come from Shem, Nimrod or Togarmah? Not very well! Nor could we say therefore, the British did or did not come from the patriarch Israel.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Forbes must know these things count little or nothing for or against our great problem.

There are universal truths and customs common to all peoples, and are of little use in selecting one race from among another or from many peoples, all having the same or similar characteristics, such as fortune-telling by one or more means.

Digitized by Google

36TH: Mr. Forbes refers to the Scyths, who were said by Herodotus to have been a "superior people"—"the noblest and most just of all the people occupying the Thracian peninsular."

He seems to refuse belief in Herodotus for some reason not given. Having given the quotation, he then says: "Herodotus had not been in Scythia." This sounds strange. Mr. Forbes has not been in Scythia, therefore—what? Herodotus was not in Scythia, therefore—what?

Must I go to Scythia or Denmark to give "authentic history" concerning these countries? Must he? Must all historians? It would seem that Mr. Forbes tries to throw doubt on the veracity of Herodotus, who deals with the Scyths, our ancestors, to their and our historic advantage. And this while he objects to the assertion that we have come from the Scyths.

Just smite the Scyths, hip and thigh, if any good be said of them! Smite the "Father of History," Herodotus, if he should dare say a word favourable to the Scyths who are claimed to be the ancestors of the British Island Israelites!

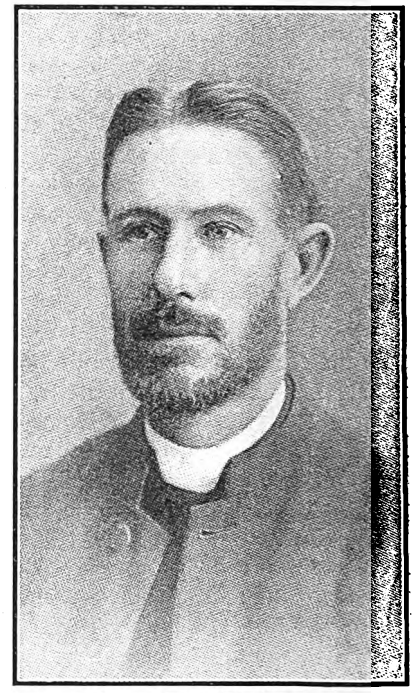
Smite any and all writers who would dare trace our forefathers from their forefathers, and especially if there be any praise given them by said writers.

But do not smite Tacitus, who tells us that the Germans were civilized, moral, chaste, highly cultured angels in their forest wilds. Bless the Germans of ancient days and smite the Scyths, Goths, Britons, Angles, Saxons, Danes, &c.

Bless the enemy and curse our kith and kin! Tacitus may have seen high-class early cultured Germans. The world war revealed the true culture of the Germans of modern times. It seems very plain that the British Islanders of to-day are not the children of the Hunnic Germans of to-day. And true history says the Germans never were the ancestors of the British Islanders. However, many, named Germans, who were not the ancestors of the modern Germans, did come from the German forests to the British Isles and were our ancestors in part.

It is historic and also logical that the peoples of the great forests of Central Europe, including Germany, intermingled, even if of differing races. In all probability these tribal peoples were greatly mixed in passing from west and north-west Asia into and across Europe. Good scholars, including some of the Germans, say the Philistines, Phœnicians, Moabites, Ammonites, Edomites, Assyrians, Syrians and Israelites, including a goodly portion of the Jews, passed from Asia into Europe. This came from the terrific pressure of Asiatic wars, including those of Chaldea, Assyria, Syria, Persia and Greece in the time of Alexander. The Parthians, a powerful kingdom of 500 years' duration, the Romans, Goths and Scyths intensified these tribal and national movements into Europe.

In the midst of all these migrations and confusing cross-currents of tribal and national strife there emerged many results, of which we have a very limited knowledge in some cases and a fuller knowledge in others.



This statement applies to all our writers, of course more fully to some than to others. All true historians readily acknowledge their limits, and inability to get and give the countless details of tribes, sub-tribes, groups and important leaders who had much to do in upbuilding or downtearing nations, and making true history, much of which never was written at the time and therefore only guessed at by future writers.

THE CRUCIFIXION OF CHRISTIANITY—II.

By the Rev. John Blacket (of Australia).

Author of "Not Left Without Witness, or Divine Truth in the Light of Reason and Revelation"; "The Manifestation of Antichrist"; "Social Diseases and Suggested Remedies"; "The History of South Australia," with an Introduction by the Right Hon. Sir Samuel Way, Bart., late Chief Justice and Lieut.-Governor of South Australia.

MODERNISM AND THE RULE OF FAITH IN THE APOSTOLIC CHURCH.

Rev. John Blacket.

In tracing the continuity of the Form of Sound Words, of which St. Paul speaks, or the Rule of Faith, in defence of which Paul laid down his life, we come to Irenæus, Bishop of Lyons. His connection with the Apostolic Age is beyond all question. Irenæus was the disciple of Polycarp, and Polycarp was the disciple of St. John, and was associated with others who had seen and known the Apostles. He was also the successor of the aged Bishop Pothinus, of Lyons, who suffered martyrdom. In his work "Against Heresies," Irenæus likens the Apostles to a rich man, depositing his money in a bank, "copiously committing to the Church the Oracles of God," so that "every man could have access to the Water of Life" . . . "We have learned," Irenæus says, "from none other the plan of our salvation than from those through whom the Gospel has come down to us, which they did at one time proclaim in public, and, at a later period, by the will of God, handed down to us in the Scriptures, to be the ground and pillar of our Faith."

We must further specially note that the witness to the Rule of Faith, or The Enactments of the Apostles, as Ignatius terms them, was universal. Irenæus says: "The Church, having received the preaching, and the faith, although scattered throughout the whole world, yet, as if occupying but one house, carefully preserves it, just as if she had one soul, and one and the same heart. . . She proclaimed and taught the truth, and handed it down, with perfect harmony, as if she possessed only one mouth." Irenæus goes on to affirm that "although the languages of the world differed, the Rule of Faith was one and the same."

THE ASPIRATION OF MODERNISM.

For a moment we will review the position. We have seen that there was a "Sacred Deposit," carefully guarded and treasured by the Church in the Apostolic and sub-Apostolic Age—universally so—a deposit so transcending the creative genius of man, so marvellously adapted to innate spiritual needs, so illuminating to the mind, and inspiring to the soul that in its interests men were (as St. Paul says) willing to be "doomed to death" (1 Cor. iv, 9). "Even unto this present hour," he says, "we both hunger and thirst, and are naked, and are buffeted, and have no certain dwelling-place. We are made as the filth of the world—the off-scouring of all things" (1 Cor. iv, 11-13), all for "the excellency of the knowledge of Jesus Christ" (Phil. iii, 8).

Under the plea that "the Christian Faith needs reconstruction" it is "the Sacred Deposit," to which we have given so much consideration, that Modernists would transform, or even set aside. What the Apostles and the Apostolic Fathers so much feared in relation to the treasure which they so carefully guarded was that it might suffer at the hands of some who should have faithfully guarded and upheld it. That fear, in my judgment, is being realized to-day. Our Lord "is being wounded in the house of His friends." This is no mere assumption, as we shall proceed to note, but a well-authenticated fact.

There seems to be a subtle, cryptic influence at work within the Christian Church to-day (shall I say the transformation of the Power that makes for darkness into an angel of light) (2 Cor. xi, 14), the tendency of which is to undermine the foundations of the Christian Faith. In the publications and addresses of some of the prominent teachers and preachers of the Christian Church to-day there is a gradual and sometimes almost imperceptible whittling away of the Deity of our Lord. The Rev. R. J. Campbell, M.A., D.D., has called attention to this. In one of his sermons in "The Christian World Pulpit" he says: "Another marked tendency of our time is the tendency to distinguish sharply between Christ and God . . . It is a curious—almost a paradoxical development—that alongside of an intensified interest in the earthly Personality of Jesus there goes a certain unwillingness to credit Him with any superhuman attributes . . . The humanity of Christ is being emphasized as never before . . . Jesus is being studied and presented as a supremely great man—a man of shining spiritual genius—but still a man and nothing more."

To me it is a matter of great regret that a good and gifted man as Dr. W. B. Selbie is should unnecessarily detract from the supreme Divinity of our Lord. In The Christian World (London) for January 23rd, 1930, the doctor has an article on "The Modern View of the Person of Christ." The article is prompted by a question put to him by a correspondent. The request of the correspondent is that the doctor "will explain the modern position with regard to the Person of Jesus Christ." "If we discard" (the correspondent says) "some of the old terminology, and some of the beliefs which were once regarded as fundamental, what have we to put in their place?" The doctor's reply is: "I would say that we do well to rest our belief in the uniqueness of Jesus on moral and spiritual grounds rather than on the metaphysical and supernatural considerations which influenced the thought of the ancient world. . . It is better, I think, to conceive the relationship of Jesus Christ with God in this way—through His own experience—than to regard it as derived from oneness of essence with God. . . The supremacy of the manhood of Jesus Christ is seen in His moral and spiritual qualities and attitude. . . On the spiritual side we find in Jesus Christ a depth of religious insight—an assurance and illumination of faith—which are altogether sui generis, and justify us in ascribing to Him a unique position among the religious leaders of mankind." I pause for a moment to ask: Is this all that we can say for our Lord that "He has a unique position among the religious teachers of mankind?" In contrast to this let me quote Professor James Denney. In that very fine work of his, "Jesus and the Gospel," on page 29, he says:

"It is not putting it too strongly to say that He (Jesus) had for Paul the religious value of God. To suppose that Paul could have classed Him, and put Him in a series along with other great men who have contributed to the spiritual elevation of the race is to deride his (Paul's) sincerity and passion. In the religion of the Apostle, Jesus held a place which no human being could share. He is the Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last."

Two or three weeks before giving the above deliverance in replying to another correspondent who questioned the Virgin Birth and the Physical Resurrection of our Lord, Dr. Selbie said: "I do not think that Christianity depends upon belief in either the Virgin Birth or the Physical Resurrection and Ascension of Jesus Christ. These represent very natural attempts to explain to contemporaries the mystery of the Person of Jesus, but they do not speak in the same terms to us to-day, and may be discarded without any real loss to our faith in Jesus Christ as Teacher, Redeemer and Lord." Is this really so? In another communication to The Christian World (London), Dr. Selbie says: "He regarded the doctrine of the Virgin Birth as a degradation to the whole conception of the Incarnation." It is teaching of this kind, in my judgment, that is undermining the very foundations of the Christian Faith, and lies at the basis of the unrest, uncertainty and spiritual indifference and abandonment of the age in which we live.

From Dr. Selbie I pass on to Dr. C. J. Cadoux, one of the Professors of the Yorkshire United Independent College for the training of students for the Congregational Ministry. In his "Guidance of Jesus for To-day" the doctor sits in judgment upon the Creeds. He lays down the principle "that the men who drew them up had no more ability to frame infallible doctrinal statements than any other set of sincere and intelligent followers of Jesus of those times" (page 46). Is this absolutely so? Is Dr. Cadoux really in a position to speak in this ex cathedra way? "Who hath known the mind of the Lord? or who hath been His counsellor?" (Rom. xi, 34). How does Dr. Cadoux know that his statement is true? Has some special revelation been made to him of the operations of the eternal God Whose "judgments are unsearchable, and Whose ways are past finding out"? We cannot lay down the lines along which the Spirit of God will operate as the doctor apparently has done. Why should not the Church be specially, yea, infallibly guided in times of special and extraordinary need? The doctor calls into question the dual nature of our Lord as expressed in the Creeds; but the dual nature of our Lord was an article of faith long before the formulation of the historic Creeds. With what a "momentous" passage the Epistle to the Romans opens: "Paul, a servant of Jesus Christ, called to be an apostle, separated unto the Gospel of God, which He promised afore by His prophets in the Holy Scriptures, concerning His Son, Who was born of the seed of David according to the flesh; Who was declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the spirit of holiness, by the resurrection of the dead" (Rom. i, 1-4, R.V.). The Pauline testimony to the Person of our Lord was the testimony of the Church in the Apostolic Age. In Polycarp's Epistle the dual nature of our Lord is clearly asserted, and of him Irenæus has said: That "he was instructed by Apostles," and "had conversed with many who had seen Christ." In his Epistle Polycarp says: "Whosoever does not confess that Jesus Christ has come in the flesh is antichrist." Then, turning from the humanity of our Lord to His divinity further on in his Epistle, he exclaims: "But may the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, and Jesus Christ Himself, Who is the Son of God, and our everlasting High Priest, build you up in faith and truth." Ignatius, closely associated with the Apostolic Age, in the most unmistakable terms speaks of Jesus Christ as God—"God existing in flesh." Speaking of our Lord the author of the Epistle to Diognetus (a relic of the Apostolic Age) says: "Truly God Himself . . . has sent from Heaven, and placed among men the truth, and the Holy and Incomprehensible Word, and has firmly established Him in their hearts. He did not . . . send to men any servant, or angel, or ruler . . . or one of those to whom the government of things in the heavens has been entrusted, but the very Creator and Fashioner of all things, by Whom He made the heavens . . . As a king sends his son . . . so sent He Him." The dual nature of our Lord (shrouded in mystery though it is and must be) was an article of faith in the Apostolic Church before the formulation of the historic Creeds.

In his "tendency" to eliminate the supernatural in the Person of our Lord, Dr. Cadoux calls into question His absolute sinlessness. Let me quote his exact words. He says: "Apologists for the Creeds confidently assert that Jesus was sinless in the most absolute sense despite that we know too little of His life, or of the psychology of sin, to be able to insist dogmatically on sweeping conclusions in regard to such a point, and to build doctrines upon them."—"The Guidance of Jesus for To-day," p. 47.

The elimination of the supernatural in the life of our Lord by some Modernists within the pale of the Church may well lead those who still believe that He was "God manifest in the flesh" to exclaim: "They have taken away the Lord, and we know not where they have laid Him" (John xx, 2). "We know not where they have laid Him!" That is the tragic aspect of the position.

Turning from the two eminent authorities with whom we have been dealing we come to the Chairman of the "Congregational Union of England and Wales," the Rev. T. Rhondda Williams. In his published address in 1929, as Chairman of the Union, Mr. Williams said:

"I have maintained, for at least thirty-five years, that the framework of the old theology has gone to pieces, and I feel quite sure that whatever the religion of the future will be it will not be traditional Christianity, that is, as a system of doctrine, though many valuable things in the tradition will of course be preserved. Indeed, traditional Christianity has already ceased to be the religion of a good many of our Churches, and of a larger number of our ministers."

The "giving up of Traditional Christianity," or "Doctrinal Christianity," which Mr. Williams favours, and which he says "has ceased to be the religion of a good many Congregational Churches and ministers," is the giving up of that Rule of Faith to a very large extent that we have so fully considered in the opening paragraphs of this chapter. With this "momentous" renunciation we shall in the next chapter deal. It is indeed the "Crucifixion of Christianity"—the disintegration and dissipation of the Christian Faith.

THE COMING REVIVAL AND ITS EXTENT.

By G. A. Robison.

"ALL ISRAEL SHALL BE SAVED."

"Blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in. And so all Israel shall be saved."—Rom. 11, 25-26.

In these words, "All Israel shall be saved," we have the extent and certainty of the coming Revival.

Let us glance first at the extent.

"All Israel shall be saved." Had the words been "Israel shall be saved," the two great peoples, Ephraim and Manasseh, would have been specially designated, as the name ISRAEL was willed exclusively to Joseph's two sons by Jacob in his inspired blessing. "The Angel which redeemed me from all evil, bless the lads; and let my name be named on them" (Gen. xlviii, 16). And so it was that, after the division of the Twelve Tribes into two kingdoms, those of the Ten Tribes were named Israel, after the name put on Joseph's two sons of whom Jacob said, "In thee shall Israel bless, saying, God make thee as Ephraim and as Manasseh" (Gen. xlviii, 20). They were collectively termed "The House of Israel," "Children of Israel," "Kingdom of Israel," so long as they dwelt in the land.

But when through their idolatry they were divorced from the Covenant, sent into captivity, and afterwards made to wander to their settled home, they are addressed by the Holy Spirit through Isaiah the prophet as "Jacob and Israel." They are now in isles or coast lands of the North and West, and although addressed in almost similar terms, there is always a higher position of privilege for "Israel," as: "Fear not, thou worm Jacob, and ye men of Israel" (Isa. xli, 14). "The Lord sent a word into Jacob, and it hath lighted upon Israel" (Isa. ix, 8). In all, over seventy times in the Scriptures, beginning with the prophecies of Balaam, this distinction is made, clearly pointing to peoples of similar origin, yet of distinct destiny, together forming one servant people for God to use in the latter days.

In Isa. xlix, 6, the fact that the term "Jacob" is used to cover the tribes other than "Israel"—the Birthright Brothers—is made quite clear: addressing the Messiah, "It is a light thing that Thou shouldest be My Servant to raise up the Tribes of Jacob, and to restore the preserved of Israel: I will also give Thee for a light to the Gentiles (or nations), that Thou mayest be My Salvation unto the end of the earth."

Here the term "Jacob" covers "tribes," and is contrasted with the "preserved of Israel." What a beautiful term to denote the manifold deliverance Israel has received from her God! The Spanish Armada and Napoleon's frustrated efforts spring to our minds. Therefore the promise "Israel shall be saved" would have meant the Revival of these two great nations, the British Empire and U.S.A. But the word is "ALL Israel shall be saved," and recalls the fact that after the separation in Jeroboam's day, "ALL Israel" did this, and "ALL Israel" did that (as see 1 Kings xii, 18-20, and many other places), the term is definitely employed to cover the whole Ten Tribes—in these days, Ten Nations. Our Lord is to be King of kings and Lord of lords (ten kings or ten lords at least), and He said to His disciples they were at His Coming "to sit on twelve Thrones judging the Twelve Tribes of Israel"—clearly telling us thus that each Tribe will have developed into a Nation by the time of His appearing, as only a nation can have a throne for a "king" or a "lord" (president).

So the Revival that is coming will include all these Twelve nations and their dependencies and colonies—truly "world-wide"! When addressing the Jews, who were about to be separated from the family Olive Tree—our Lord's parables mentioned the ten servants who were to reckon with Him at His return in respect of pounds, talents, and oil in lamps, etc. These ten servants are obviously the rest of the family—individual nations which possess "thrones." To them a pound was entrusted—each to trade with, till his Lord's return. Christianity was the "pound." This parable has had a first fulfilment in our own day. In the reckoning after the Great War, the servant that gained ten pounds has been revealed as Grea Britain, with her ten great possessions in the earth. The U.S.A. follows with five extra portions. While Germany, in whose land the Reformation began, through Higher (?) Criticism, buried his pound in the earth. His pound—all his possessions—have been mandated to Great Britain, and all we hear of the other seven servants is the chorus "But Lord, he hath ten pounds."

Through the parable of the Ten Virgins the spiritual state of these ten nations in Europe is revealed. The Reformation was the midnight cry that woke all Europe from its "dark ages," and brought the first grey dawn of recovered truth, in justification by faith, to the whole ten. Five of these preserve the oil of the Holy Spirit, and five allow the recovered truth to be consumed; consequently these five will be shut out of the marriage feast—though apparently not for ever, for they do afterwards seek and obtain the oil; and the words, "I know you not," is not the dread "I never knew you—Depart."

Western Europe was the place into which the great host of Israel poured, and never retreated. God's promise to His people, "Every place that the sole of your foot shall tread shall be yours," holds good for this, as for every other land. In Hos. ii, Ezek. xxxiv, Rev. xii, it is called "the Wilderness"; by Isaiah "the Isles," or "Coastlands," of "North" and "West."

Ephraim passed over by many lands into his special inheritance, and became "the preserved of Israel," while the rest was occupied by his less favoured brethren, "the Tribes of Jacob."

But the Lord hath redeemed His people, the Tribes of Jacob and Joseph (Ps. lxxvii, 15), hence all the gracious promises of Revival, after their long term of punishment was over.

The terms of the new Covenant include a new heart, new Spirit, and the putting of His Spirit within—and of these blessings, besides many others, He says, "I will yet for this be enquired of by the House of Israel, to do it for them" (Ezek. xxxvi, 37). Here is a distinct prophecy—that the nations of the House of Israel will ask God with all their hearts and He will do it for them. He promises, "I will pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground. I will pour My Spirit upon thy seed, and My blessing upon thine offspring" (Isa. xliv, 3). "I will pour upon the House of David and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem the spirit of grace and of supplication; and they shall look unto Me whom they have pierced" (Zech. xii, 10, R.V.). "Neither will I hide My face any more from them, for I have poured out My Spirit upon the House of Israel, saith the Lord God" (Ezek. xxxix, 29).

Therefore the Revival that is coming is to be the work of God upon His people, and will come about through the marvels that He is about to do for His people in the coming time of trouble. These Salvations will open the eyes of the peoples and they shall know their God at least (see the 39th chapter of Ezek.), and they shall all be saved.

"All Israel shall be saved,"—for "There shall come out of Zion a Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob; for this is My Covenant unto them, when I shall take away their sins" (Rom. 11, 26-27).

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

By GEORGE R. GAIR.

1. Could you explain why the Swedes and North-Western Germans have long-heads as the British people?

2. How is it that the Dutch, whilst not being in the "Isles of the West," and not under the same monarchy as the British, whom you consider to be Israel, have a cephalic index different from the Belgians, the Northern and Southern Germans on the one hand, and yet approximates fairly closely to the British on the other?

3. Can you explain how it is that the skulls of the Danes of the 11th and 12th centuries A.D. are not, as the Anglo Saxons and Modern Scots, viz., long-headed, but are definitely "round-headed"? We know the Danes and Saxons were of the same race originally, at least according to all orthodox history. Yet from anthropology it is a fixed law that there is no definite relationship between races of different head-type. This is a point obviously upon which we require some little revision of our position.

4. British-Israel writers and speakers often disclaim against relationship with the Germans. Could you advance a scientific explanation of your position in view of the similarity in craniological type to be noted in parts of Germany to British?

5. It is evident to any history student that Iberian and Nordic elements are contending in Wales to-day. The same might be said, perhaps even in a less degree, of Southern Ireland. Can these elements be explained with regard to their descent from either Stone, Bronze or Iron Age peoples?

The following is the reply:—

"The questions involved are of a very difficult scientific nature.

"Owing to the fact that the answers contained herein are for the reading of the general public, and having full regard for the patience of the reader, the length of the insertion allowed in the journal, and also the limited time at my own disposal, I have made my replies as brief as I possibly could. For the same reason I have eliminated all demonstrations as far as possible and all technicalities. Should proofs of any particular phases be required at any time, I shall be only too pleased to supply them, and to enter into further details which space will not permit here at the present time.

"1. Prehistoric Europe was peopled, in the South, by the dolichocephalous (long-headed) 'Mediterranean,' or 'Eurafrican,' types. (Somewhat similar to the modern Maltese, and akin to some of your writers' 'Canaanites.') Central Europe was occupied by a later race of a purely brachycephalic (round-headed) type; whilst the Northern parts of the Continent were settled by Neolithic (Late Stone Age) dolichocephalous races. These three types are still to be found in Europe to-day. The so-called Latin Nations are very largely 'Mediterraneans,' the Slavonic peoples, the Central Germans and French are of a Brachycephalic type, whilst the other Germans and Scandinavians are of a Neolithic or long-headed variety.

"The present Teutonic peoples contain a large inception of the original Neolithic-dolichocephalous blood, and this is especially true of the Swedes and North-Western Germans, who are recognized, by practically all modern authorities, as the direct descendants of the prehistoric inhabitants of Northern Europe. These peoples fall into the purely dolichocephalic group. The British on the other hand are in the sub-dolichocephalic section, and are indeed on the borders of this verging upon the mesaticephalic division (and are even placed in this by some). This immediately makes it clear that there is a great gulf between the Continental and British 'Nordics.' That the British head-type has been fairly constant for the last two to three thousand years seems more than evident upon an examination of skulls of Late Bronze and all the Iron Ages. (This could be demonstrated, if necessary, but space will not permit such here.) This makes it evident that from prehistoric times onwards no relationship has existed between North-Western German and Swedish peoples and the British.

"Very briefly we have examined the negative evidence in regard to the difference in the skulls of the respective races which shows the lack of real relationship between the peoples dealt with. Now we can go forward and explain the reason why certain characteristics in head-type are comparatively similar.

"The Caucasic (white) race at a very early period began to split into tribal divisions which in time resulted in the evolution of head-types into the various sections in which they exist to-day, and which divisions present racial features constituting 'types.' Two outstanding classes were the long-heads and the broad-heads. From the former came the so-called Nordic, Aryan, Indo-European or 'Indo-German' variety. This latter is a very large section of humanity, comprising races from the British Isles to India. The relationship existing within this Indo-European group is only of a very loose character, and each division only claims descent from one common long-head ancestral type. This descent from a common ancestor, however, no more justifies speaking of all the Indo-European races as one, any more than speaking of the black, yellow and white stocks as one because they did originally descend from a common type, at a very remote period.

"The outstanding characteristics of the Indo-Europeans exist in an underlying common linguistic structure, inclination towards fairness in complexion, and more or less long-headedness in crania. The British and Scandinavians are thus in the same general group, both having long-heads, although of different varieties. The relationship existing is only in having a common ancestry more than 4,000 years ago, and no relationship has yet been proved within the historic period. (Surely after more than four thousand years of separation you cannot speak of races as being related; especially is this so when we find some are even beginning to quibble about our relationship to the Americans, and that separation only took place 150 years ago.)

"These brief statements make it clear that sufficient variation exists between Nordics in Britain and on the Continent to prove comparative relativity does not exist within the historic era, and the reason for a slight similarity in type is due to the fact that thousands of years ago the British race was nearer related to the North-Western than to the Southern Europeans. This justifies us in putting them into the same general 'world' category, but certainly does not permit us putting them together as 'one race,' which is often done in ignorance of the real ethnological position.

"2. The Dutch are largely Teutonic. We have already seen that very little relationship exists between the Teutonics and British, the one being Neolithic and the other Hallstatt peoples. It must be borne in mind that certain mixtures of races will produce certain ethnic characteristics, and these may be either 'mixtures,' or 'blends.' The worst that can be said for the British is that they are a 'blended' race. That is, that they might have foreign blood, but if so, it has been absorbed and has not materially subverted the type. This cannot be said for most of the European peoples. In this respect we must place the Dutch under the 'mixed' classification. That is easily seen when we remember that the Dutch people are compounded from Alpines (round-headed Batavians), Iberians (long-headed so-called 'Celts'), and Continental Nordics (long-headed Teutons). Therefore it is reasonable to expect the possibility of such mixed races as the Dutch and Belgians producing in time types fairly similar to other fixed existing types which have been produced by thousands of years of particular blendings, creation and evolution. This is more and more emphasized when we make an approximate calculation in cephalic indices (i.e., head shape measurements tabulated by a certain index for the classification of crania in craniological statistics). The Alpine and Iberian populations were about the earliest inhabitants of Holland. We know that the index of the former was about 84 and that of the latter 72. If we allow for a mingling together and assimilation of these races into one mixed stock an index somewhere about 78 would be produced in course of time. On top of these stocks came the Teutons, who had roughly an index of 73. The mean of these would have produced a modern Dutch race of approximately 75.5 cephalic index, which figure is arrived at by purely scientific calculation built upon known data. Now modern examination shows that the Dutch average actually works out at 75.3. An error (and remember we are dealing with calculations concerning intermarriage ranging over at least three thousand years) of only .2. Therefore the evidence is complete. The British have a blended type which has been constant for many years more or less, whereas the Dutch compounded from opposite types have by the very fact of their wide mixing produced almost within historic times a type comparatively similar to the British, yet as an examination of the indices show they are of a distinct origin. This accounts for their not being in the 'Isles of the West.'

"3. The Danes of about the 12th century A.D. were the direct ancestors of the present Danes. These latter are still largely brachycephalous (round-headed), and so were their ancestors. That relationship cannot exist between British Nordics and the Danes on this score alone is evident. On the other hand, the early Danes were directly related to the Great Gothic stock which at one time inhabited Zeeland, Jutland, Scania, Southern Norway, and part of Schleswig and Holstein. This stock found its way under various denominations of Saxon, Angle, Jute, Norse and Dane into this country. The nations to-day descended from these peoples are sub-dolichocephalic with a tendency towards the mesaticephalic type (this may be due to cultural reasons). Therefore the ancient Danes must have been of a somewhat similar type. Hence the later and modern Danes from about the 12th century onwards are of a different stock which must have gradually expelled and supplanted the original Danish Vikings. This viewpoint can bear examination upon archæological and historical grounds as well as ethnological.

"4. From the standpoint of ethnology one is justified in denying relationship between the Germans and British. The reason for some similarities in head shape between certain groups of Germans and the British can be easily accounted for in a similar manner as already done in the case of the Dutch. A craniological chart of Europe would clearly explain this question. From Central Europe there runs a broad strip of Alpines (round-heads) across Europe into France. The tendency is for the Alpine population to increase quickly and for the Teutonic and British to increase less quickly and in some cases to decrease. (This is particularly true of the real Teutons, who are gradually disappearing.) An Alpinization of Germany has been in operation for the last three hundred years. This has led to the forming of decidedly mixed racial types and many blurred boundaries of races. An intermediate type has been set up in process of time—the mesocephalic—with an index from 78 to 80. Further, where the mesocephalics (or mixed Alpines and Teutons) have mixed with the more or less pure Teutons, a modification of the Teuton type has resulted. This has formed a mixed or blended Teutonic type which is, as a consequence, of a cephalic index anywhere from 75 to 80. (Examples of the difference of type are realized when we remember the Hanoverians are 76 to 77, Hessians 79 to 80, and the Thüringenians are 77, and the Bavarians and Swabians about 80, cephalic index, etc.) Thus the fact that certain German groups neither possess pure Alpine cranial characteristics nor pure Teutonic ones, but rather approximate to the British, does not prove any connection between these communities and the people of these islands, but is simply a result of a mixing of Teuton and Alpine in certain proportions to breed this particular type.

"5. Speaking generally, it might be said with emphasis that the British is a pure race. However, it is undoubtedly and unfortunately true that there are foreign elements in parts of the British Islands which pass under the British name. These are to some extent along the western coasts. Thus we find that there are large Mediterranean elements in Ireland, also a strong inception of a similar Iberian type in many parts of Wales, in Southern Lancashire and along the Clyde where these peoples have settled after immigrating from Ireland or Wales. These people are undoubtedly nearer related to the modern 'Semitic' type (not necessarily Shemitic or Ancient Israelitish) than to the Scots and English and the Nordic elements in Wales and Ireland. (The Nordic Welsh and Irish are to be found in the upper rather than in the lower classes: however, this is only a very general rule.) The Non-Nordics are the descendants of Neolithic Races of Britain. The Nordics or Aryans of Britain are Iron Age Peoples. The Bronze Age Peoples were round-headed in the main, and are not to be found here to-day, which shows that they were exterminated by the invading Nordics about 1000 B.C. or else were absorbed into the Iberian populations when expelled from the eastern and central mainlands and islands of Britain.

"Thus, in conclusion, the dark swarthy low-statured people of the West tend towards the Neolithic or Stone Age type, whilst the taller non-swarthy types are pure Nordics and Iberians."

WEEK BY WEEK.

By A. R. H.

SOME people think that because GOD reigns, there is no need for individual effort and activity. "GOD is in His heaven; all is well with the world," say they; and they remain content to fold their arms in philosophical complacency.

But this attitude is profoundly delusive. True, the MOST HIGH GOD ruleth in the kingdom of men. And in the knowledge of His overruling we may gain content of mind.

But Man is the mechanism through which the LORD of all the earth effects His purposes. The individual is the agent through whom the MOST HIGH GOD makes felt His power.

It is not (as some imagine) that GOD needs man for His work in the world, which, without man's aid He could not accomplish. This conception is as seriously erroneous as its opposite.

GOD is not dependent upon the human factor in the least. Without our aid He did us make and without our aid He can continue His work. But He has declared that He will use man as the instrument of His redemptive activity in creation.*

There is a distinction with a difference here. And the distinction emphasizes the fact that the effort and activity of man are of supreme importance.

This becomes more apparent still when we study the special function of the ISRAEL PEOPLE as revealed within the pages of the BIBLE. Here the PEOPLE of ISRAEL-BRITAIN are called upon to become "A SELECT RACE, A Royal Priesthood, A HOLY NATION, A PEOPLE FOR ACTION."†

If we are GOD'S chosen people it is not because we have made the choice to serve GOD. GOD has chosen us to serve Him.‡ GOD is using us, as a NATION, in spite of ourselves. By virtue of the national redemption§ He inspires our national activities. So it is true to say that in studying the achievements of GOD'S BRITH-ISH PEOPLE we are studying the acts of GOD. For the finger of GOD in modern British history is as clearly evident as ever it was in the history of ancient ISRAEL.

Men of action who never make mistakes never make anything. The British people have done their best in their rôle as an active people. Through blunders, mistakes, rebellions and discouragements they have plodded blindly on their way. Under the good hand of GOD they have been led, in spite of their imperfections, steadily on toward the destined goal.

This is the dilemma in which the foreign observer finds himself when studying the history of our national progress. Always he finds a mixture in the motives animating our people in all their greatest movements and developments. He finds the BRITISH NATION little less guilty of all the sins and failings of other nations. And yet behind all, a great light shines. Moreover, in the ultimate result there always seems to emerge some great fact or event of spiritual value and significance.

It is illuminating to watch Dibelius[1] trying to grope his way amidst the maze of motives and mixture of influences which he finds inspiring England's rise to power.

Dibelius begins on solid ground. "England's rise to world-dominion, viewed externally, proceeded along two different lines," he says. According to the author these two lines were (1) The Balance of Power, and (2) "An extremely clever manipulation of idealistic feelings" which has proved to be "nearly as successful as the use of force."

The first line of action, "foreshadowed by HENRY VIII and ELIZABETH, set as its object the Balance of Power. This assumes such a grouping among the powers of EUROPE that ENGLAND, remaining outside both groups, is always in a position to give a casting vote. The main assets of English policy are, first, the existence of a certain sympathy for ENGLAND at least in some circles in every European capital; second, England's wealth, through which it can invariably purchase and subsidize allies; third, its fleet, based on a practically unassailable geographical position."

These points are interesting and worth looking into further. First as to English influence in other countries. "Whence does England derive the influence that enables it to maintain an English party in practically every country?" asks Dibelius. "Of course there is the Almighty Pound Sterling, and the more Oriental the country the more effective is its influence. But it is least of all the powers which make influence. England has always possessed a skill superior to that of any other country to direct economic and intellectual forces. Influence may mean decisive power in great historical moments."

This is a striking testimony from a GERMAN. And as we shall see later, England's influence in foreign countries depends upon the moral and spiritual appeal which her ideals make to the serious-minded minority which is to be found in every nation.

Let us deal with the second point at issue; England's wealth. There are many religious-minded people who shy at the very idea of material prosperity having a spiritual value. But wealth is an essential instrument in the establishment and maintenance of the KINGDOM. Our national wealth is GOD-given, as it is written: "Remember the LORD thy GOD; for it is He that giveth thee power to get wealth, that He may ESTABLISH HIS COVENANT[2] which He sware unto thy fathers . . . . ."

Without our wealth how could we have built a NAVY? The NAVY has been the Kingdom's sure defence and shield. Dibelius pays the NAVY a glowing tribute: "It was under CROMWELL that it first appears as an instrument of world power. It played a great part in the overthrow of NAPOLEON, by cutting FRANCE off from the sea. Finally, in the WORLD WAR—again, as at the time of the ARMADA, at the most modest cost—it decided everything."[3]

That GOD'S PEOPLE, dwelling in the ISLES of the SEA,[3] were to develop economic as well as spiritual interests is evident from the Scriptures. ISAIAH speaks of ISRAEL-BRITAIN "establishing the earth and inheriting desolate heritages." Colonization and Empire-building costs money.

EZEKIEL refers to the PEOPLE of ISRAEL-BRITAIN as a designation strangely similar to Napoleon's epithet: "a nation of shopkeepers."

ISRAEL-BRITAIN has had to establish her own independence in competiton with other nations. At first, Dibelius is inclined to see only a Machiavellian cunning behind the fact that England's economic position has been won without resort to open warfare.

"England's rise to world-dominion cost her relatively few wars," he writes. England's "legendary pacific character is based solely upon the fact that it never went in for arming to the teeth like PRUSSIA or RUSSIA, but always contrived to keep almost the whole of its population peacefully at work. This made the world forget that practically every war between 1700 and 1918 ended with which in most cases was not the power which had done most of the fighting. This policy of setting others to work is one of the old secrets of Cabinet policy. It is a method recommended by so rare a humanist as Sir Thomas More in his Utopia."

It is not for us to say what the correct judgment should be regarding these matters. The judgment of nations is reserved for a greater tribunal. And we can rest assured the JUDGE of all the earth will judge aright. It would be presumptuous for mere man to attempt a detailed forecast of such judgment.

But there is something about Dibelius' testimony regarding Britain's victories which inevitably reminds us of Moses' prophecy[5]:—

"Blest ISRAEL! Who is like you?
A VICTOR RACE for JEHOVAH—
Your shield, your help, and your sword!
You shall grow and subdue your foes,
And advance on their hills like a road."

If we keep in mind the testimony of the Scriptures, to the fact that ISRAEL-BRITAIN is a victor race to JEHOVAH, whilst we continue our study, Dibelius' criticism becomes all the more illuminating. For after doing his best to paint Britain's actions in as malevolent a colour as possible, he finally has to admit "the fact remains that BRITAIN is which has never injured the vital interest of another European People by annexation: and it is a fact of immeasurable moral effect in a period dominated by the principle of nationality."

And now, taking up the second of the lines along which England's rise to world-dominion has proceeded, Dibelius writes: "But even more important than all economic influence has been England's rôle as in the world. Under the purely humane inspiration of Wilberforce and Clarkson it eradicated slavery everywhere.[6] Throughout the world, England is the political ally of every great religious force.

CHAMPION OF SPIRITUAL MOVEMENTS

"The world's Holy Places are almost all under British protection: JERUSALEM, CONSTANTINOPLE, the GANGES, MECCA and MEDINA, Kerbela and Nedschef. BRITAIN is not only one of the greatest Protestant Powers, it is at the same time the GREATEST OF ISLAMIC POWERS.

"When the movement for International peace was launched by the Czar's invitation to the first Hague Conference, in 1899, BRITAIN, alone among the European Powers, recognized the realist significance of a movement that, Utopian as it might appear at the moment, nevertheless corresponded to the actual necessities of the time, and speedily took the lead into its own hands.

"Wherever any International question arises, whether inside the PROTESTANT CHURCHES (the Evangelical Alliance was founded by England in 1846), the Labour movement, the Women's question, the War on Alcohol, the Youth movement or the Mission Field—ENGLAND will be behind it, sympathetic, disinterested, but, all the time, carefully and skilfully gathering up any political by-products that it may yield.

"The whole of this

is apt to be completely misunderstood on the CONTINENT: Non-English nations are apt to see in it nothing but Machiavellian cunning harnessing the world's idealism to England's triumphal car. Such a judgment overlooks the fact that purely idealistic movements, rare in the world we live in, are only too constantly forced to make terms, and very unexhilarating terms at that, with the world's political, economic and egotistic forces. No great idealistic, ethical, national or religious movement can remain long in complete isolation from the economic and political struggle of humanity.

"Great idealists who had no cunning side motives generally initiated England's humanitarian campaigns, whether for the emancipation of the slave or the assistance of this or that persecuted race or people. But the forces they released were very often employed by British statesmen to serve British political ends. English policy has never been infected by that myth of which sees political events as mere struggles for food and shelter. On the contrary, it has shown quite incomparable intelligence in appreciating the mighty force of the movement of ideas and using them for political purposes."

Well, if the KINGDOM, through its individuals, pours out its wealth and energies in initiating great spiritual movements which benefit other nations, there is no reason why the STATE should not benefit from the acquisition of such "political by-products" as may accrue. By such acquisitions the KINGDOM is strengthened to meet the greater demands that are inevitably made upon it in the future.

Dibelius continues: "The British Government creates no movements of ideas, but it has always known how to give or withhold from them the gigantic weight of its support, according as they were or were not in the line of its political purposes. Wherever possible, English statesmanship would take a hand, finding in the humanitarian excitement created throughout the world, that could never have been achieved through purely diplomatic pressure. The notorious 'profit and loss' business of this 'nation of shopkeepers' has always had the keenest sense of the potency of spiritual values."

A STRIKING FORCE

Dibelius' peroration to this chapter reads almost like a British-Israel lecture. But we doubt if any Englishman—even one of British-Israel conviction—would have dared to speak in quite such unrestrained terms regarding his native country.

The Professor writes: "ENGLAND is the single country in the world, that, in looking after its own interest with meticulous care, has at the same time something to give to others; the single country where patriotism does not represent a threat or challenge to the rest of the world; the single country that invariably summons the most progressive, idealistic and efficient forces in other nations to co-operate with it.

"BRITAIN is the solitary Great Power, with which, while egotistic through and through, at the same time promises to the world as a whole something the world passionately desires—order, progress and eternal peace. All other nations, in so far as they have not been tied blindly to England's chariot-wheels, have, hitherto, merely resisted it, because they felt in England's growing power an encirclement that threatened to deprive them of freedom and the breath of life.

"But none of them has yet succeeded in setting up, against an ideal of their own, national and international at the same time, as the British. Only the Russians, recently, have found out this secret,[9] and the result has shown how immense is the driving force which a national aspiration can acquire, once it has an international idea behind it."

THE BRITISH IDEAL,[8]

CORRESPONDENCE.

The Editor.

SIR,—The following correspondence (regarding Week by Week article for THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, dated 26th July, 1930), between the Advertising Manager of the European Finance and myself, may interest your readers:—

25th July, 1930.

To A. R. Heaver, Esq.

DEAR SIR,—I enclose a copy of European Finance, published to-day, on page 56 of which you will observe that I have marked a portion of the editorial entitled "High Protectionism."

Yesterday evening, while I was at Odhams Press looking to the advertisement section of my paper, the gentleman in charge of the composing room which handles both European Finance and THE NATIONAL MESSAGE handed me a copy of your this week's issue in which, on page 471, you quoted our paper.

I have from time to time had opportunities of reading THE NATIONAL MESSAGE and it has always interested me, but it is unknown to the editorial staff of my paper.

During supper I read through your article and was amazed at the coincidence, not only that your article and our editorial treated the same subject from practically the same standpoint, but that the identical phrase—reculer pour mieux sauter—is used in both to enunciate the principle upon which British economic policy is being, or should be, based to day. I am sure that this coincidence will not only be of interest to you but to your readers.

Yours faithfully,

E. BRASIER CREAGH,

Advertisement and Circulation Manager.

27th July, 1930.

To E. Brasier Creagh, Esq.

DEAR SIR,—I was much interested in your letter dated 25th July. The matter was indeed a coincidence as you say.

My own article was actually written on the 10th July. On the 14th I entered hospital for an operation and was out of touch with normal life again until my discharge on the 19th and convalescence at home up to the present date. There was little opportunity then for any unconscious suggestion along normal channels of influence.

Again, although I quoted your paper in my article, I had never actually seen your paper before receiving the copy you so kindly forwarded with your letter. I came across the quotation in question through the "Literary Digest," an American periodical.

In my article I was dealing with the matter purely from the point of view of Scriptural prophecy. The words of Isaiah, "a little moment," confirmed my own view regarding the matter of Free Trade within the Empire being "a temporary expedient," and led me to the natural conclusion that we must regard this apparently retrograde step as being a case of reculer pour mieux sauter. I could think of no better way of expressing the idea or describing the situation.

Naturally it is a matter of great interest to me now to receive confirmation of the soundness of this judgment from a paper of such well-established authority as the European Finance.

Thanking you for bringing the matter to my attention,

Yours faithfully,

A. R. HEAVER.

A member of the B.-I.-W.F., lately returned to London after six months' absence abroad, is concerned about some of the devoted and hard-working staff of the Federation at Headquarters, suffering from overstrain. There is much work to be done before the October Congress. We know the powers of evil are rampant and active to-day. Our leaders and workers at Headquarters and indeed throughout the world need protection and strength that their work for God be not impeded. May I suggest to all readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE throughout the world (and by this means it will be continuous) that at a special time each evening, say, between 10 and 11, all who believe in the mighty power of prayer will commend the bodies and souls of all B.-I. leaders, teachers and workers, and especially those at Headquarters, to our Almighty Father for His protection, health, power and strength to surround and uphold them?

call for the serious consideration of religious and patriotic people generally. For B.-I. believers especially they combine to call for earnest prayer and vigorous action ; therefore we may well regard the coming CONGRESS as likely to be of very great importance.

We desire that a high spiritual tone shall prevail, and we urge that prayer may be offered particularly for the starting of a great NATIONAL REVIVAL OF RELIGION as a direct outcome of the Congress, and (if it be the Lord's will at this time) a GREAT AWAKENING of the whole Nation to its Heritage, Mission and Responsibility as the Israel of God.

At our request the Rev. J. Anderson Watt, M.A., wrote an excellent reply to the attack on our Manifesto made by a minister in a Scotch paper, mentioned in these columns last week, but the Editor has refused to publish it. So much for British fairplay and Christian standards in that quarter.

Sir Charles Marston writes :—" I have read your Manifesto with much interest. I have been acquainted with the British-Israel belief for many years, and as a student of the Bible I feel bound to confess that it appears to fully satisfy the prophecies and promises contained in Holy Scripture. To the best of my knowledge this can hardly be said of any other form of Christian faith."

* * *

C. V. B. writes :—" I have read your Manifesto with great pleasure. It is arresting not only in the theme, but in its remarkable clarity, emphasis and appeal. Will you kindly send me anything which will inform me generally about the all-important Movement ? "

Colonel Frederick Horniblow writes :—" The Federation has my heartiest congratulations on the production of the Manifesto in the Press, and in the purport of the Manifesto itself. I am convinced that it will be the means of bringing much comfort to many thousands of souls in these distressful times. What a harvest it has already gathered, and what a comparison with the many recent attempts at tinkering with Holy Writ by those who should know better ! "

The Summer B.-I. Convention at Swanwick, Derbyshire, proved a great success. The attendance was more than double that of any previous Convention. Among the speakers were the Revs. Maxwell Carnson, E. A. Couldrey, Kenneth Dodds, Sparshott Johnson, Commander Roberts, R. G. F. Waddington, Messrs. Herbert Garrison, Secretary-General, John Leech, S. E. Steele, and Wm. Whitton. A high spiritual tone marked the whole proceedings.

Mr. R. O. Lucas writes from Toronto :—" Rev. E. J. Springett, President of the Winnipeg Branch and a Vice-President of the Canadian Federation, motored with his daughter from Winnipeg to Toronto, and, although on vacation, was kind and enthusiastic enough to favour our Toronto Branches with five addresses. He spoke twice before Toronto Central, twice before Toronto East, and once before Toronto West. Despite the heat and the fact that many folk are out of the city on vacation, the meetings were well attended.

" Mr. Springett created a splendid impression upon all who heard him, and we are eagerly looking forward to his next visit, which he has promised will be soon.

" Through the generosity of one of our members, a full-page reprint of the Rev. Dr. Pascoe Goard's Manifesto appeared lately in the Toronto Globe. It has caused widespread interest, and we note that people everywhere here are becoming more and more conversant with our teaching and more and more interested in it. May this interest continue to grow."

Sir Algernon F. Firth writes in the Morning Post :—" For one person who dies of a thunderbolt a thousand perish of debility. Similarly, while few citizens lose any sleep from fear of the ' World Revolution '—the avowed aim of the Communists—the security of the Empire is being secretly sapped by poison gas, and it is only our easy-going complacency that blinds us to the fact . . . The subtle poisons of pestilential agitators are weakening the national morale. It is amazing that our leaders do not perceive it. By sowing envy, discontent, class hatred, disbelief in everything that makes a people great ; by doping the masses with mischievous illusions ; by lowering the tone of the body politic, Soviet propaganda—unperceived even by its own dupes—is steadily plotting Britain's downfall by methods that are as real as they are insidious."

The Rev. Maxwell Carnson, F.R.G.S., F.R.S.A., will give addresses at Headquarters on Wednesday, September 10th, at 3 p.m., and on Thursday, September 11th, at 7.30 p.m. All are cordially invited.

E.E.B. writes :—" I cannot express my gratitude to the editors and writers. Many of the articles are invaluable. I read them over and over again." A reader writes from Toronto :—" I have been taking it since the first number, and it becomes more precious as the years go by." E. W. writes from Australia :—" We are extremely interested and profited ; we are getting to understand our Bible. May the editors and writers long be spared to carry on their great work, and may God open all blind eyes to this wonderful B.-I. Truth."

BRITISH-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

Port Elizabeth, South Africa.

The Annual Meeting of the Port Elizabeth and District British-Israel Association was held recently, the President, Mr. G. T. Hart, presiding.

After Mr. W. Matthews had opened the meeting with prayer, the Chairman, in his Presidential address, reviewed the past year's work. The position of the Society was a strong one. The Association monthly meetings had always been bright and helpful, and seed had been sown that must eventually bear fruit. It was found that regular attendance always increased interest and strengthened faith. The local Association had fallen into line with the Great Advance Movement inaugurated by the British-Israel-World Federation Headquarters in Britain, the propaganda of which was now attaining enormous dimensions.

Mr. H. F. Morley (Hon. Treasurer) presented the financial statement. The position was most satisfactory. Membership fees, and donations from interested friends, had exceeded working expenses, and the balance in hand would be devoted to the contingencies of the Association's activities.

The Honorary Secretary (Mr. Jas. T. Weston), in submitting his report, stated that the monthly meetings had been held regularly. Interesting and informative papers had been contributed by Messrs. Morley (3), Matthews (3), Bishop (1), Geo. Locke, Queenstown (1). One evening had been spent in discussing the Great Advance Movement, and the new plan of campaign.

The Rev. A. Levy, Jewish Rabbi, gave an extremely comprehensive address on " Britain and the Jew " to a large attendance of members and interested visitors. These had all been of immense help, and members were heartily encouraged by the views presented. The position and the success of the Association was due to the earnest support and interest of the President, Mr. Hart, and the Hon. Treasurer, Mr. Morley, to whom, with the financial assistance of other sympathetic friends, the thanks of the members was tendered.

Mr. H. J. Bishop (Hon. Librarian) tendered his report of the literature taken out during the year. Members had eagerly availed themselves of the opportunities for study offered by the excellent Library, which through the generosity of friends was constantly being added to.

Helpful discussions followed each report, and the practical constructive ideas submitted by the Executive were carried out.

The motto for the year is, Prayer for increased faith, and greater concentration on the realization of the Anglo-Saxon Identity and its purpose.

The retiring Officers and Executive Committee were re-elected. A hearty vote of thanks to the Editor of the Eastern Province Herald and the Port Elizabeth Advertiser, and to all others who had contributed to the welfare of the Association, was carried unanimously. Mr. Weston, the Secretary, was specially thanked for his work.

The Benediction brought to a close a highly profitable meeting.

To the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN WORLD (and published).

SIR,—With regard to Dr. Selbie's attempt at a reply to an enquirer re the " British-Israel Propaganda," it seems strange that a principal of a college, and that a theological one, should have so limited a knowledge of his subject as is clearly indicated in his article. I admit that, by his own confession, he has had no acquaintance with " any scholar of real repute " who understands the " British-Israelite " theories—which he must feel to be a real handicap—whereas I, with a necessarily much more limited intercourse with the learned than he, have been brought into close contact with scholars of world-fame, who, despite that fact, were convinced believers in the question under discussion, though in no way limiting salvation to a belief in the same. On an academic question such as this Dr. Selbie, and such as he, has as much right to his disbelief as we have to our belief ; but is it justifiable to imply that " a certain type of mentality " is inferior to our own if the mind behind that mentality differs from ours ? I am not offering this letter as an apologia for the subject under discussion ; the encouraging fact that such a paper as yours in a recent issue opened its pages to a forceful and lengthy advertisement of the same should be no mean tribute to its value. I only wish to suggest that in these days of " Modernity," when the Bible is regarded by so many as " out of date," it is somewhat of a disaster that such a leader of thought as Dr. Selbie should seek to throw cold water on any truth that may bring renewed interest in and fuller understanding of its contents. May I say, in conclusion, that if Dr. Selbie would like to know more of this subject than he at present does, I shall be pleased to introduce him to some of the students who know the subject from the beginning to the end, or, if he willed it so, I myself would supply him with literature well worth studying, the propaganda of which, to quote his own words, cannot " do any very serious harm to Christianity at home or abroad."—Yours, (Miss) JESSIE DONISTHORPE.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

VESTED INTERESTS IN THE BIBLE.—I.

BY THE REV. DR. W. PASCOE GOARD.

THE world has vested interest in the Bible as it stands, which is of value beyond estimation.

THE BIBLE AS IT STANDS.

What the Old Testament is now, that it was long before the time of Christ. The Bible has been translated and re-translated many times in ancient and modern days. The earliest translation of the Bible of which we have knowledge was made long before the Christ of the Bible was born. That is to say, the Old Testament which constituted the Bible of those early days was so translated. Nothing has been added to the Old Testament since that day. That translation was done very shortly after the last of the books of the Old Testament was written. The particular translation of which we thus speak is called the "Septuagint"—named for "The Seventy" who made the translation.

The work of translation had gone on from ages before that, but this is the first of which we have detailed knowledge of time, place and translators.

Approximately what the Bible is now, that it was when "The Seventy" made their translation of the Old Testament from the Hebrew, etc., into the Greek tongue. Such was the Bible found in the Temple at Jerusalem and in the Jewish synagogues throughout the world in the time of Christ.

Let that be borne in mind in this day of fierce assault on the Bible by men who have only first-hand information in the Bible itself, and in the proceeds of archæological research, which have invariably supported the historicity of the Bible. What the Old Testament is now, it was before the New Testament began to be written.

The Old Testament was subjected to the most minute scrutiny by the Hebrew scholars of the B.C. days. They were in very deed Hebrew scholars. That is to say, Hebrews by race, trained in Hebrew scholarship. Let this be borne in mind. They were not a generation of scholars who had first to regain the dead Hebrew language before they could begin to study the Bible in Hebrew. The mother tongue of the Hebrew scholars was the Hebrew tongue. We ring the refrain on the word Hebrew wittingly. They were Hebrews of the Hebrews, speaking their own tongue, handling their own books, written in their own language.

These books they scrutinized, counting every letter, every syllable, every word, every sentence, every page, and every book, and examining the whole canon of the books. What they did in this regard is shown in their marginal notes as to these matters, called the Massorah.

They were Hebrew scholars dealing with Hebrew books, written in the Hebrew language.

They were Hebrew scholars dealing with Hebrew history. That is to say, they were dealing with their own nation's history. None of that Hebrew history could be called ancient history in their day. Moses was not earlier than 1500 B.C. David was not earlier than 1100 B.C. Isaiah was not earlier than 750 B.C. Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Daniel were not earlier than 600 B.C. "The Seventy" made their translation into Greek about 285-246 B.C.

The history of which they wrote was continuous and paralleled the history of other nations. The libraries of the East, that is to say, of Babylon, Persia and so on, were intact during most of the period of the Old Testament literature. The history not only of Israel and Judah, but also of all the nations of the East, was well known, and found place in the records of the various nations and peoples. It was the easiest thing in the world to test the writings of the Bible with the current literature and history of the day. This was all done with meticulous care.

The Old Testament as we have it was accepted by the scholars of our Lord's day, notwithstanding they were bitterly opposed to Him and to His teaching. Accepting the Old Testament as it then was, our Lord was never challenged as to the correctness, nor as to the historicity of the Old Testament, which He so copiously quoted, and to which He appealed as to the accepted and final authority.

Not only did the scholars of our Lord's day accept the Old Testament as it then was, and is now, our Lord Himself ratified the Law and the Prophets as to every jot and tittle, as it then stood and was then accepted, and as it still is to-day.

The early Church accepted the Old Testament as genuine and historic; and upon it was founded the Christian faith and the Christian Church.

The New Testament was written by Apostles and Apostolic men known to the early Church. For unlike the Old Testament, the New Testament was written in one generation. Many contributed to it, but all were contemporaries. Thus it was a brief matter to assemble the writings of the New Testament and group them into the Canon of the New Testament.

At first, of course, certain documents which entered into the New Testament were the property of certain Churches and of certain persons. But the origin and sacred character of such documents were well known and generally recognized.

So we have the Old Testament and the New Testament.

Now the weight of presumptive evidence is all in favour of the fact that a Book so carefully winnowed, sifted, and tested by scholars, reinforced as it was by the experience of the people of the early days, should be found genuine, historic, and inspired.

Among the National and individual values possessed through the Bible are :—

1. The Bible itself.—Taken as a library of sacred literature, the Bible is the chief value in the literary world. There is nothing in all the realm of literature to enter into competition with it. It is a Book which gives an intimate and " close up " manifestation of God. It does not discuss the abstract idea of God to any great extent. There are no arguments to prove that there is a God. The Bible begins by introducing God to the reader, and continues to keep the reader in close contact with the living Personality of God right through the course of Divine revelation. As the Book says, " The world by wisdom knew not God." We know that no other system of literature has given us such a revelation of God. Therefore, without the Book called the Bible, the world would be without clear revelation and knowledge of God.

The Bible furnishes the world with the basis of its knowledge of first things. No matter to what degree men are indebted to scientific research for knowledge of first things; no matter how much men are indebted to other systems of sacred literature for knowledge of first things, the word which lies at the basis of all the world's knowledge, whether recognized or not, is the first sentence of the Bible, " In the beginning God . . . " " In the beginning God created . . . " " In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth."

The Bible furnishes the first clear account of world history and the earliest basis of the various branches of science.

The Bible is the first in the field of codified law, as far as we know the history of law in our day.

The Bible is the first in the field of law administration, as we understand the science and practice of it.

The Bible is supreme in the history of the coming, the life and ministry, the death and resurrection life of our Lord.

The Bible is the basis of the Gospel and all that it implies.

The Bible furnishes us with the model of national organization, and of ecclesiastical organization.

The Bible is supreme in the field of morals and ethics.

The Bible reveals the past right back to " the beginning; and the future to the end of time and on into eternity," and defines our relationship to both.

In the Bible as a system of literature the nation has its chief asset, and this is also true of all the world.

The copyright of the King James' Version of the Bible is amongst the most precious of the assets of the Crown.

2. The morale of the people.—The production and translation of the Bible by our own race : that is to say, the Israel race of the past, which is the Celto-Saxon race of the present, in conjunction with that other branch of Israel stock which was separated from Israel three thousand years ago, namely, Judah, the production and translation of that Book by our race, during some three thousand five hundred years, from Moses to the present activity of the British and Foreign Bible Society, accounts for the morale of the people under the stress and strain of Anglo-Saxon life. Needless to say that Anglo-Saxon life is of a different order from that of any other race or nation, because of the peculiar responsibilities which have been imposed upon the people. The morale of the people under the varied strain, such as has broken down many a nation in the past, is due to the fact that their character has been formed by, and is being sustained by, the Bible.

3. The religious character of the people, which is an asset of the most inestimable worth, is the product of the Bible.

The Decalogue, the ultimate authority as expounded in the Sermon on the Mount, forms the basic law of the Bible. The teachings of the Bible are an extension of the principles therein contained. The character and ideals of the Anglo-Saxon nations are the exemplification of such teachings, and they are slowly progressing towards realization thereof—being uplifted by the content of the text of the Bible.

4. The Spiritual life of the Anglo-Saxon people is the result of the teachings of the Bible, for its revelation and teachings lead directly to Christ. How much this means to our race and the nations into which that race has been divided, who may estimate.

These and many more considerations constitute the moral and spiritual side of the vested rights of the nation, and of the people which comprise the nations of the Anglo-Saxon world; and these vested rights are dependent on the Bible

AS IT STANDS.

5. The Bible, and the Bible alone in all the earth, has a clear and certain message concerning the life which is to come. Through that message we get the implanting of future life in our hearts at this stage of the journey, and so are prepared to enter into the life which is to come when we are called to pass beyond the veil.

We are not prepared to say that God will accept those only who know truth through the Bible. Neither are we prepared to say that He will reject all those who do not know the truth contained in the Bible, nor the Eternal Godhead therein revealed. This is a matter beyond our own personal knowledge. If others believe they have such knowledge, and are prepared to make such judgments, we shall not dispute with them. We only say we have not such knowledge. We do not know how God will proceed in the case of men of other great faiths.

We do say, however, that if one would know the joys of assured acceptance with God, and know that his sins are forgiven, he must do so through the agency of the Bible.

The first step to the knowledge of God is the exercise of faith in the very promises contained in the text of the Bible.

What we have now to say is known by practical experience by generations of Christians.

There is a possibility of KNOWING that we are accepted of God, and of knowing that our sins are forgiven. This is the hope of many. It is the belief of some. But it is a matter of knowledge to the few. The great thing is that it is a matter of knowledge possessed by a few—but possible for all.

How shall this comfortable knowledge be obtained?

The process is simple. Conditions are laid down in the Bible, compliance with which will lead to this higher knowledge.

What are the conditions? Repentance towards God and Faith in our Lord Jesus Christ. This is a basis in all cases. But this general repentance, and general faith, does not necessarily lead to the KNOWLEDGE we desire.

The next step is BELIEF IN THE PROMISES WRITTEN IN THE BIBLE.

Here is one:—

"Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thought, and let him return unto the Lord, and He will have mercy upon him, and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon." (Isaiah lv, 7.)

Here is another:—

"If we say we have no sin we deceive ourselves and the truth is not in us. But if we confess our sins He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." (1 John i, 8-9.)

Here is still another:—

"If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised Him from the dead, thou shalt be saved." (Rom. x, 9.)

Again: "All that the Father giveth Me shall come unto Me, and he that cometh to Me I will in no wise cast out." (St. John vi, 37.)

Again: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." (Acts xvi, 31.)

Many another promise the seeker after this ground of hope will find.

That the text of these promises mean anything in particular to God, or that they in any wise control His actions, is a question in the minds of all too many. That the text of these promises may be appropriated by us when we are truly penitent is also a matter of question.

The fact has been demonstrated to every generation of seeking Christians that God holds Himself rigidly bound by His Word thus written in the Bible. This is a most important statement of fact, supported by ages of personal experience multiplied into countless thousands of individual cases, and testified to without ceasing.

That these promises may be taken as they stand and presented at the Bank of God, as though they were cheques signed by His Name, by every penitent child of God, and that they are always honoured by Him, is also a matter of multiplied experience. None ever carried through this experiment, having sincerity and patience to see it through, who did not find, as John Wesley did, "his heart strangely warmed," and the conviction flowing into the inner recesses of his nature that the Voice of the Saviour is saying, "Man, 'or Woman,' thy sins are forgiven thee."

When that moment comes, then, the text of the Book is reinforced by an inner Voice whereby the Spirit Himself bears witness with our spirits that we are the Children of God: "Heirs of God, and joint heirs with Jesus Christ."

This process opens to the believer the whole range of personal experiences of God our Saviour, and this comes to us through faith in the text of the written Word. It is thus that God Who "is a Spirit" reaches a hand out of the glory which hides His Presence, and offers to us His Word, written as Jeremiah says, with "ink and a pen" in plain words so that all may know and understand. When we accept this Word and step out on it as on a sure foundation, He grants us inner and spiritual assurance of salvation.

How can we estimate this asset, possessed and glorified in by many, and available for use by all?

6. The Christian Ministry has been furnished with "the sword of the Spirit which is the Word of God," and is ordained to preach the Word so written in the Bible.

Other matters do not avail. Of what avail is it that men carry through beautiful forms of public and of private worship, if the worshipper fail to make direct and conscious contact with God?

Of what avail is it that a penitent confesses his sins and failures to a fellow sinner if there be not conscious knowledge of sins forgiven?

Of what avail are penances and self-mortification, seeing they cannot bring to us direct connection with the great Sacrifice of the "Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world." The great Sacrifice alone can make atonement for sin. Of what avail therefore are our penances and self-mortifications if added thereto?

The written Word of God leads to contact with the Living God, and to the consciousness of sins forgiven.

The written Word is also "the sword of the Spirit" by which He gains His victories in the world.

Let us now review what has been said.

Digitized by Google

Beyond question the Bible has been and is all that we have stated it to be, and very much more.

What wickedness then must be laid to the charge of those who have been for more than a generation labouring might and main to destroy these values, and the faith of the people and nations in them. How are these labouring to impoverish the nations and the individual?

Being what it is, and doing what it does, for and in the life of individuals and nations, the Bible should be defended and preserved for the effect it is producing, and the tangible results it is showing. The man, or the class of men, who would knowingly interrupt such an active agent for good would be worse than foolish. He and they would be criminal, of the most dangerous type. The Bible should be esteemed most highly "for its work's sake." But when it is made manifest in the world of facts and reason that the Bible is the product of more than human knowledge and reason, and when it is seen in the world of practical experience to produce results never produced, nor to be produced by man, nor by the works of man, thus manifesting that it is indeed the Word of God, what strange infatuation must possess those who strive day and night to reduce that marvellous production of the Mind of God, the Bible, to the level of human agency!

AN EXAMINATION OF MR. AVARY H. FORBES' "STONE WALL."

(Letter No. 8.)

BY PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc.

Re the Language Question.

37*th.*—Mr. Forbes says: "As to German, it requires only a smattering of that language to see how similar English and German are."

This is true, and of real importance. From it we may conclude that these two people lived a long time in close relations.

We do know from good history that they did live together in the northern centre of Europe, and could easily use largely the same or similar language.

However, as these two great languages stand to-day, some basic differences appear, apart from the fact that many words are common to both peoples. The construction, or the order of words in a sentence or compound clauses in the German differs from the English as much as or more than the Japanese differs from the English. There must be a cause for this fact.

Again, the order of expression of the English is very similar to the Hebrew, whereas the German construction is far from that of the Hebrew. The Hebrew and English are short, simple and direct, while the German is roundabout, heavy and cumbersome.

A primary reason must exist for this as surely as for the difference between the German Prussian head and that of the Englishman, or Anglo-Saxon and Celt.

Let Dr. Grimm, a great German philologist of last century, and a world authority in ethnology and philology, say a few words here for our benefit.

"There is no language so well suited for a world language as the English."

"In truth the English language . . . like the English people, appears destined hereafter to prevail with a sway more extensive even than its present over all portions of the globe."

"For in wealth, good sense and closeness of structure, no other of the languages at the present day spoken, deserves to be compared with it. Not even our German language which is torn even as we are torn, and must first rid itself of many defects before it can enter boldly into the lists as a competitor with the English."

From the above, we see that the great Dr. Grimm of Germany, who was the most outstanding philologist of last century, places Britain at the head of the world in its English language. We wonder if Mr. Forbes would call him "intoxicated."

Dr. Grimm places the English language ahead of all other existing languages.

Mr. Forbes puts Britain at the top of the nations in spirituality and all good works.

Then why blame British-Israel teachers and writers who agree with these two above authorities?

I say Amen to Dr. Grimm and Mr. Forbes while telling the truth.

Dr. Schwaner, a noted German philologist, tells us that the British people are in all probability Israelites, and that the Germans are Assyrians and Philistines. Perhaps he really means the standard German Prussians!

Now for a word or two on the Assyrian-Chaldean Hebrew languages.

It is well known by philologists that the former two are sister languages, and very similar, even with some basic differences in word construction into sentences. Their roots show a common origin, and their style of writing the same or practically so, viz., the cuneiform characters, including syllable and word signs or symbols.

Again, the old Chaldean language was the mother of the Hebrew and the two are as similar in word meanings as are the English and the German, the English and the Danish or Norse.

This goes far. Suppose the German Prussians to be of Assyrian origin and the English of Hebrew origin, they would therefore, from the above, be furnished with very similar vocabularies, even if the sentence building differs. Suppose our Israel ancestors did live among the Prussian Germans who were of Assyria, then from their ancestry and also from living together in Europe they would have hosts of similar words, while their basic word construction or sentence building would differ, as they did in Asia in the time of the Assyrian and Hebrew kingdoms or monarchies.

The Assyrians were primarily Hamitic, as are the Prussians, while the Hebrews were Shemitic or Semitic, as are the British peoples generally.

38*th.*—Mr. Forbes asks: "May not the Hindus of India be the lost tribes?"

I wonder if he really thinks they are, or is he just trying to have a little harmless joke? He asks, "May they not be the lost tribes?" My answer is, they may not. If so, they would have the characteristics of Israel. And they have not.

Digitized by Google

(a) The official national Israel of promise was to be a kingdom. India has not been and is not a kingdom, only so far as it is under Britain and King George.

(b) The "Blessings of the Deep" in the latter days are to be possessed by Joseph at the head of Israel. Joseph the Bull, the land of the Bull, has and has had the blessing of the deep as no nation in the history of the world has had. Certainly not India!

(c) Israel was to loan to the nations, the goyim, and not borrow from them. Britain has loaned to nearly all nations and India has not. Even during the awful War against the "cultured Huns," Britain financed her own costs, and helped the Allies to the extent of several billions of dollars which she secured to them by going on a note to her own daughter, the United States. India did not back that billion dollar note. Britain did.

(d) Israel was to be the servant of light and liberty to the nations. She, in Britain, has been, as Mr. Forbes himself has shown. India has not, and is not to-day, a light-carrier to the world.

We need go no further, but say, India in her "Hindoos" is not, may not be, and never can be the "lost tribes of Israel." She has none of the Israel marks. However, there are scattered Jews and Israelites in India, which country is peopled largely perhaps by the sons of Abraham through Keturah.

39*th*.—Mr. Forbes, like many others, refers to Sir William Hunter, who "tells us that the Hindoo race belonged to the splendid Aryan, or Indo-Germanic stock."

It is easy to run after men who use pet words and names which do not stand for fact, as in this case. It is time for Mr. Forbes and many others to learn that there is not and never was an "Aryan race." The so-called Aryans are and were from the first Semitic or Shemitic.

Let Mr. Forbes take a careful survey and make close comparison. Let him throw to the dogs much of the superficial modern sham history, and he will admit to his own soul that there is no "Aryan race" beyond what modern ignorance has created.

The other term, "Indo-Germanic," is just as senseless and incorrect. There is not an Indo-Germanic race. To get such a term one would find himself faced with a Hamo-Japhetic-Shemitic race, and then he would shorten down to the simple historic term, a Noachic or human race.

The terms "Aryan, Indo-Germanic, Indo-Japhetic, and Nordic" races are ordinary everyday sham names without foundation in fact.

In olden times Israel went into captivity in the lands of Media, Persia, Assyria, Sogdiana, Bactria, Dahia, Armenia, and the region known as Aria or Aryana. In these and adjoining lands, these exiled Israelites grew into multitudes, states and great power. They captured and destroyed the mighty Nineveh and moved westward in vast numbers into Europe from Aria or Aryana and were written about as Arians. They were Shemites, like their brothers the Jews.

One opponent of the B.-I. teaching is so clever as to cut out or dig out the whole foundation of our teaching by saying the Jews are Semitic, while the British are Aryan, and therefore cannot be Israelite brothers of these Jews. Let him take the facts, cut out the false, misleading term Aryan, put in the correct term, Shemitic, and then he will be sanely ready to see that the Jews and British are brothers from a common ancestry.

40*th*.—Let us look at Mr. Forbes' quotation from Sir William Hunter, one of our well-trained historic writers. The Hindoo race "belonged to the splendid Aryan or Indo-Germanic stock, from which the Brahmin, the Rajput and the Englishman alike descend. Its earliest home seems to have been in Western Asia. From that common camping ground certain tribes of the race started for the east, others for the further west . . . . . powerful bands found their way through the passes of the Himalayas into India."

Several comments are desirable here!

(a) Cut out the word "Aryan" and use the word Shemitic.

(b) Cut out the term Indo-Germanic as an alternative for Shemitic ("Aryan" as per author).

(c) For "Western Asia" put in the word Canaan or Palestine, the first home of the sons of Abraham, viz., Ishmael, Isaac and the six sons of Keturah.

(d) If my former suggestion that perhaps the high-class Indians came from the Keturah sons of Abraham be true, then these Indians are also Shemitic.

This would bring us to a great Shemitic race found in India through Keturah's sons; also in Arabia through Hagar's son, Ishmael; also in Edom from Rebecca and Isaac; in the British Isles, North Europe, and elsewhere from Abraham through Sarah, Isaac, Jacob and his sons; and in Judah the people from the man Judah, the son of Jacob-Israel. All the above are of the great Shemitic race as were the Syrians and many others whom we might mention. Thus instead of talking about a non-existent race of Aryans, we use the one great summation term Shemitic or Semitic, which includes Scands, Jutes, Danes, Norse, Angles, Saxons, Celts, etc., etc.

THE CRUCIFIXION OF CHRISTIANITY—III

BY THE REV. JOHN BLACKET (OF AUSTRALIA).

FUNDAMENTALISM AND MODERNISM.

APPALLED, as it were, by the threatened breach in the Reformed Church, Dr. R. F. Horton has intervened between the Fundamentalists and Modernists. In his published sermon of June 13th, 1929, and contribution to The Christian World, he comes forward as "the repairer of the breach, and restorer of paths to dwell in." (Isa. lviii, 12.) "Can anything be done," he asks, "to bring these two sides (Fundamentalists and Modernists) together, to prevent the cleavage from widening?" In his attempt to arbitrate between the two parties Dr. Horton represents himself as both Fundamentalist and Modernist. He draws attention to the points at issue between the two parties. "Fundamentalism," he says, "is Traditional Christianity carried unchanged into the modern world, which modern world has undergone, and is undergoing, constant changes."

"Traditional Christianity" (or "Doctrinal Christianity") as the Rev. T. Rhondda Williams describes it, as I have already intimated, is the Apostolic Rule of Faith. Dr. Horton says: "The Modernist is very much alive to the fact that science has advanced with very great rapidity, and that it has established a great many truths which were not known when the Creeds of Christendom were formulated. The Modernist is also aware that the application of the ordinary methods of scholarship to the sacred Scriptures alters very considerably the traditional view of them."

The issue is now clearly before us. In passing, may I affirm that I am not aware of any truth "established" by science (as Dr. Horton says) that in any way sets aside the Rule of Faith as held by the Apostles and the Apostolic Fathers. I presume the doctor is referring to the Theory of Evolution, but that cannot yet be said to be an "established" truth of science as it is still "a Theory." Among the points of difference between Fundamentalists and Modernists Dr. Horton mentions the Virgin Birth, the Vicarious Atonement, the Supernatural Character of the Miracles of Christ, and His Physical Resurrection. Dr. Horton might have enlarged his list, as he does not cover all the ground. Let me name the points of difference between the contending parties in the order that I wish to deal with them: the Fall of Man and Original Sin, the Scheme of Human Redemption, the Virgin Birth, the Deity of our Lord, His Miracles and Physical Resurrection. All of these are embodied in the Rule of Faith, or Enactments of the Apostles.

THE CREATION OF MAN IN GOD'S IMAGE AND LIKENESS AND HIS SUBSEQUENT FALL.

The Modernist objection to the Historic Fall is based upon the Theory of Evolution. In his address, as Chairman of the Congregational Union, England, the Rev. T. Rhondda Williams says that, in spite of the doctrine of Evolution, "the Church still continues to use forms of thought and language which were coined before the Theory came to be recognized, and therefore its bearing on old theological doctrines is not brought out but ignored." But is the doctrine of Evolution an "established scientific truth"? Is not the Theory still in a hypothetical stage? Has the time really come for turning down any doctrine of the Apostolic Rule of Faith because it is assumed to be out of harmony with the Theory of Evolution? One of the foremost scientific authorities of the day (J. Arthur Thomson, M.A., Regius Professor of Natural History in the University of Aberdeen) in his "Bible of Nature" says: "We all know that the plants and animals now around us are the result of natural processes working throughout the ages . . . It has been suggested that man is the 'great exception'—that while other creatures have had a natural evolution, man was specially created. If this answer thoroughly satisfies anyone, and is really useful to him, he should stick to it; it is not for science to say that it is impossible."

No; the method of the mystery of creation is not yet solved. Le Bon, in his "Evolution of Matter," says: "Science can only give faint gleams projected into the deep darkness which envelopes our past, and veils our future. It has not yet any glimpse of the time when it may discover the true first cause of things, nor even arrive at the real causes of a single phenomenon." But, waiving all this, I hold that the whole universe is a manifestation of mind—the appeal that a Creative Mind makes to a perceptive one. Wisdom and power lie at the basis of things, and in an evolutionary process, under the control of an Infinite Intelligence, there is ample room for the Biblical doctrine of "man created in the image and likeness of God," and a subsequent Fall, which the Chairman of the Congregational Union apparently would have us throw overboard as outgrown forms of "Traditional" or "Doctrinal Christianity."

Modernists do not believe in the Bible record of man being created in "God's image, after His likeness," but I think that (at least along mental lines) the truth is demonstrable. Mentally there are striking and unquestionable points of contact between God and man. The "veiled" Power, that lies at the basis of things (and incontestably there is such) is a Creative Power. This is self-evident. We now take a step further, and affirm that the Power "of Whom are all things, and through Whom are all things" (1 Cor. viii, 6) is an Intelligent Power. The whole universe is demonstrably a manifestation of mind. The late Duke of Argyle (a most thoughtful writer) uttered a profound truth when he said "we may be sure that we are right when our reason recognizes another Reason in the world of nature." Sir Oliver Lodge has well said: "Everything in the universe is amenable to law and order. Everything points to a rational plan of which we know neither the beginning nor the end."

It is so. The more deeply science probes the constitution of nature the more astounding and convincing becomes the evidence that the universe is a work of thought—that the Creator and Controller of all things is indeed a Thinker, Creator, and Controller. Now that is just what man is. The points of contact between the human and Divine are most suggestive and impressive. It is just here that man is unique in the scheme of things. He differs from all other created entities. He, too, like the mysterious Power that lies at the basis of things, is a thinker, creator, and controller. Not only can he mentally form ideals, and out of the matter of which the universe is composed give to them substantiality, and make them fulfil his purposes, and do his bidding, but (like the mysterious Power on Whom the whole universe depends) he can, in the intellectual realm, create in an absolute sense. In the world of thought he can call into existence a new creation. He can cause that to be which previously had no existence. For example: Was not Milton's "Paradise Lost," or Kant's "Critique of Pure Reason," a new creation? How is it that man not only exists but is a thinker, creator, and controller as no other form of life is? How is it that he can not only give substantiality to mental creations, harness the forces of nature, and make these mental creations do his bidding, but can also create in an absolute sense? What is the ultimate explanation of a work like Milton's or like Kant's?

The answer is to be found in the sublime declaration of the Book of Genesis (and nowhere else), discredited though it may be by the Modernists, that "God created man in His own image; after His own likeness" (Gen. i, 26). Man is a thinker, creator, and controller because the Power that lies at the basis of things (from the testimony of nature) is also a Thinker, Creator, and Controller. The striking and incontrovertible points of contact that we have noted between the human and the Divine, along the lines of thought, creation, and control, demonstrate the truth of the Biblical account of man's creation. In every message that is broadcasted, in every electric car rushing through our streets, in the airships flying through space, the truth that man was mentally created—not in the image and likeness of the beast—but in the image and likeness of God—is demonstrated.

Now if man has been created in the mental image and likeness of God, why not in the moral? and why not a primeval Fall of Man such as the Apostolic Rule of Faith, as well as the Old Testament, affirms?

The spiritual history of man bears witness to such a Fall. In the spiritual nature of man there are instincts as real and as assertive as the instincts of the body. It is noteworthy that as far back as we can trace the history of man in the night of time he has been conscious of a sense of condemnation, that he has been out of harmony with some established order of things. An explanation of the fact cannot be found in anything that has come to the soul through the medium of the senses. There has ever been an effort on the part of man apparently to regain something that he has lost. Shall I say his likeness to and harmony with the Divine? A modern writer has well said: "However the origin of religion is to be explained . . . propitiatory sacrifice has been the unfailing mark and memorial of religious belief." He adds: "It is unnecessary to produce evidence of a statement so redundantly supported."

We may note the sacrificial system of the Hebrews, the penitential psalms and sacrifices of the Babylonians, and the prayers for pardon and re-admission to the Divine favour in the primeval records—the "Rig-Veda"—of the Sanskritic Indians. From an ancient Hindu prayer, uttered thousands of years ago, and translated by Max Müller, we take the following: "How can I get near unto Varuna? Will he accept my offering? . . . When shall I, with a quiet mind, see him propitiated? . . . Absolve us from the sins of our fathers, and from those which we committed with our own bodies." Varuna was the Heaven God of the Sanskritic Indians—the ancient Hindus. Dr. Edkins, dealing with the religions of China, says: "The consciousness of sin, and the felt need of redemption"—that man is out of harmony with some established course of things—"undoubtedly belong to men who have no knowledge of religion except that which is derived from the light of nature."

Turn from ancient civilizations to present-day savages. The Rev. A. W. Murray, after spending forty years in New Guinea and Polynesia, says: "I have never found, in all my wanderings among savage tribes, any who had not some idea of beings superior to themselves to whom they owed some homage, and sought in some way to propitiate." In all past time, and in all places, man seems to have been conscious of a Fall, that he was out of harmony with some established spiritual order, and that propitiatory sacrifice was necessary.

If man (not only materially but spiritually) had been made "in the image and likeness of the brute"—especially along the lines laid down by the late Dr. Haeckel in his "Riddle of the Universe"—he would not have had any conception of being out of harmony with some established order of things—he would have had no consciousness of sin, or the need of atonement. What, in the nature of things, would have led him to form such supersensuous conceptions? In passing, let me say of these occult inferences of the soul, to which attention has been drawn, that they have their bases in truth is evident from the fact that our Lord came to meet them—to minister to them. The words "ransom," "redemption," "renewal," "reconciliation," used in relation to the work of our Lord, all prove that there has been a breach in a spiritual order—a Fall—and that man was under condemnation.

In another way the spiritual history of the race bears witness to a Fall. With the effluxion of time—in ages gone by—we do not see men gradually rising higher in a spiritual scale, but falling from a higher position to a lower. This is indeed suggestive. Max Müller says: "From a comparative study of religions we learn that religions in their most ancient form, or in the minds of their authors, are generally free from many of the blemishes that attach to them in later times." In his "Lectures on the Science of Religion" he quotes the most ancient of civilizations—the Egyptian. "The religion of the Egyptians," he says, "was not from the first a mere worship of brutes . . . The Egyptians from the very first spoke of the one Power by whom the whole physical and moral government of the universe was directed." In his "Hibbert Lectures" the eminent Egyptologist (Sir Peter Le Page Renouf) gives the same testimony.

In the case of the Greeks and the Romans a process of degeneration set in. Sir George W. Cox, in his very full and able work on "The Mythology of the Aryan Nations," says: "The genuine belief in an Almighty Being, who is at once our Father, our Teacher, and our Judge had its first home in the Ancient Aryan Land." He is referring to the time before the Aryan race was broken up and separated. Speaking of after developments among the Greeks, in relation to the supersensuous, Sir George says: "The epic poems tell us of gods who delight in sensual enjoyments . . . Of gods who own no check to their passions, and recognize no law against impurity and lust."

Take another old civilization—the Chinese. Our authority is Professor R. K. Douglas (Professor of Chinese at King's College, London). In his book on "Confucianism," speaking of the Chinese deity "Shang-te," he says: "In all probability there was a time when the worship of Shang-te was the expression of the pure monotheistic faith of the Chinese; by degrees, however, corruptions set in."

Concerning the Sanskritic Indians (Hindus) Max Müller asks: "Is it not something worth knowing, after the lapse of four or five thousand years, that before the separation of the Aryan race—before the existence of Sanskrit, Greek, or Latin—one supreme Deity . . . had been named by a name which has never been excelled?" Professor Max Müller is referring to the name "Dyaus-pitar" (Heaven Father). (Lectures on Science of Religion, p. 107.) But there was a gradual declension. As time went on "Dyaus-pitar" gave place to "Varuna," and "Varuna" to "Indra." A tide of corruption set in. Describing it Dr. J. Murray Mitchell, M.A., says: "Hinduism resembles the Ganges, which, when it breaks forth from its mountain cradle at Hardwar, is comparatively pellucid, but, as it rolls on, becomes more and more muddy and unclean."—(Hinduism, Present Day Tracts, No. VI.)

If spiritual concepts, such as God, the soul, and a future state, were simply the products of Evolution (along purely humanistic lines) then, as the different branches of the human family grew older, and their experience widened, and deepened, and their intellectual life matured, their concepts in relation to the supersensuous ought to have been of a purer and more satisfactory character; but the reverse is true.

The spiritual history of the race—the primeval conceptions of man that he was out of harmony with some established course of things, and that propitiatory sacrifice was necessary—and the downward tendency in all ancient forms of religion—bear witness not to a gradual spiritual advance, along evolutionary lines, but to a Fall.

WEEK BY WEEK.

By A. R. H.

As we have seen from previous articles of this series, God's Brith-ish Peoples are called upon to become a People for Action. They are a Victor Race for Jehovah.

It is possible to be a military people without being warlike. It is possible to be peaceful loving without being pacifist. It is possible to be strong without being ungentle.

And the main lines of Kingdom-expansion have followed the path of peaceful development. Violent assaults on the Kingdom have been met by physical force. This was essential in the interests of preservation.

But the normal, active striking force of the Kingdom consists in the impellent energy of moral and spiritual ideas. That is what Jesus meant when He said: "I came, not to bring Peace but a Sword."

The sword of the Lord is the word of God. And the word of God is the human expression of divine ideals.

The warfare of the Kingdom is not a warfare of physical, but of mental, forces. The Kingdom wages a warfare of ideas far more penetrating and permanent in their result than the conquests of oppression.

The word of God is sharper than any two-edged sword. The ideals of God divide asunder the heart and soul of man. The conquest of the Kingdom is a conquest of the mind and spirit

Foreign observers are puzzled by the combination of idealistic and economic motives which accompanied England's rise to political and economic power.

Thus Dibelius admits that "England's rise to power has cost her relatively few wars," and in the next breath complains that when England has gone to war she has always invested her warlike action with "the religious sanctions of a crusade." This, he thinks, is entirely hypocritical. But if BRITAIN is the KINGDOM the fact is in harmony with the truth.

"When in 1914, it drew the sword to treat GERMANY to the same fate it had prepared for its earlier rivals, FRANCE, SPAIN and HOLLAND, it felt that it was embarked on on behalf of world civilization. That note echoes through al the speeches of British statesmen at the time."

Dibelius feels that this habit of giving a religious consecration to, what he calls, "the elementary instinct for power," is a grave danger to other nations.

So it would be if it were simply the religious consecration of an elementary instinct. But it is something more than that. It is the natural, spontaneous, outward recognition of the inward consciousness that ISRAEL-BRITAIN is GOD'S BATTLE AXE and WEAPONS of WAR.*

We cannot expect foreign observers to recognize this since we ourselves are a nation blind to our own identity and only dimly recognize the truth ourselves.

Nevertheless, Dibelius nearly stumbles on the great discovery when, tracing this peculiar habit back to the influence of MILTON, he writes: "Foreigners began to be painfully aware of their arrogant sense of superiority in the fifteenth century, and, from the seventeenth on, this instinctive bent received its religious consecration; in the Puritan camp MILTON taught his countrymen that they were selected to serve as model to the less enlightened nations of the earth—in other words to rule over them.

"When the Puritan middle classes gradually penetrated into the gentry, they brought this idea with them, though it became good form not to brag about it. The eighteenth century completed the process by developing and of CIVILIZATION which the Englishman of to-day considers as the only one possible."

A CONCEPTION OF THE STATE

Here the truth is presented in its crudest form. The British People are selected to serve. They are called to become the servant nation to all other nations. It is a dangerous half-truth to say that they are selected to serve as model to the other nations. Such a clumsy statement is bound to arouse antagonism. How different is the spirit and attitude of the Scriptures†: "The LORD thy GOD hath chosen thee to be unto Himself, above all people that are upon the face of the earth. The LORD did not set His love upon you, nor choose you, because ye were more in number than any people; for ye were the fewest of all people. But because the LORD loved you, and because He would keep the oath which He had sworn to unto your fathers. . . . ."

What was that oath? Specifically the oath referred to was the one sworn at the time of the offering of ISAAC. In this great sacramental act, the whole of Isaac's seed (in all their generations), i.e., were mystically offered up to GOD, a living sacrifice, and dedicated to His service.

THE WHOLE ANGLO-SAXON RACE

This is the specific reference.‡ But note the emphasis on the words: "And in thy seed shall of the earth be blessed." The consecration of the ANGLO-SAXON RACE is a vital thing. But the well-being of the other nations and races of the earth is the all important thing.

Everywhere this fact is reiterated and confirmed in the strongest language possible.§ To ignore or overlook this essential ideal of service to all other nations is to rob the covenants of all their significance and all their value.

Concluding his review of the wars which accompanied Britain's rise to power, Dibelius writes: "In these wars, the driving force was indubitably the struggle for political power and economic influence. At the same time, a certain idealistic point of view was present too, to lend a sort of consecration to the strife for power. For the nation, the hundred years' fight against FRANCE wore the aspect of a mighty duel between two principles, with ENGLAND as the against Continental despotism.

"Contemporary history can admit this unmeasured claim only within narrow limits; we know, to-day, that freedom, in eighteenth-century ENGLAND, was the privilege only of the landed gentry, that they alone were in the full sense, citizens.

"Nevertheless, ENGLAND had discovered a slogan in which every Englishman honestly believed. Like any other Gospel, it worked, not only with humanity as a whole, but even with its believers, to remove the dross that still hindered its efficacy.

"The question whether the idea of English liberty in the eighteenth century was truth or a legend is not essential to its history in the world. What is essential is, ENGLAND had at a time when the rest of the Powers of the World only played the game of huckstering villages, souls and alliances. ENGLAND knew how to play that game with consummate mastery; but beside it, England alone knew how to arouse something like an ethical feeling all over the world.

"And for the people of EUROPE who saw, about 1800, that English freedom, unlike the freedom of the French Revolution, kept order at home and allowed other nations to live their own lives in all essentials: for them, the slogan seemed a veritable Gospel.

"The end of the eighteenth century saw ENGLAND

A WORLD POWER.

It rules over a good part of the world's surface and—which is part of the story—gives the world over which it rules a principle of life such as it needed at the time and one whose force is not yet worked out.

"Whether it is, in fact,

THE TRUE, ULTIMATE PRINCIPLE OF LIFE in the world, is a fundamental question irrelevant to the history of the period from 1750 to 1918, since no Power throughout that epoch has had anything better to offer the world."

The only comment we feel disposed to make upon this remarkable conclusion is this: If BRITAIN is the nucleus of the KINGDOM of GOD upon earth, then the BRITISH IDEAL is the true and ultimate principle of life in the world. If BRITAIN is not the national basis of the KINGDOM, then some other EMPIRE will arise with some new and better principle and doctrine.

But the BRITISH EMPIRE is the successor to the ROMAN EMPIRE and is thus identified with the KINGDOM of Daniel ii, 44. As such she is a WORLD EMPIRE which can never be destroyed but shall stand for ever. As such she is destined to grow until her influence fills the whole earth. In short, BRITISH-ISRAEL alone can answer the remarkable question which Dibelius raises in his review of British history.

And if this is so, it behoves us to internationalize our vision of the Kingdom-message. We must not allow our Gospel to become a stumbling-block to other nations.

True, the Gospel of the Kingdom, as distinct from the Gospel of Salvation, is a national message for ISRAEL-BRITAIN only.[1] It is to be proclaimed throughout the whole EMPIRE.[2]

But it is a national message with an international application. Being a Kingdom-message—i.e., a Gospel regarding the coming universal Kingdom—it has all the force of an international idea behind it.

British-Israel advocates must make it clear that the Kingdom-Gospel does not present a menace to the liberties of other nations. The national message is not a message of national egotism. The Kingdom-Gospel is not preached to inflame international jealousies and national pride. The Kingdom-evangel condemns every suggestion of arrogance or exhibition of superiority.

The Empire-Gospel of the KINGDOM is definitely a call to national consecration and service.

It is to a spiritual type of greatness, supremacy and pre-eminence that GREAT BRITAIN is called. ISRAEL-BRITAIN is called to dominion not domination. Love, humility and service are the marks of greatness.

The KINGDOM will be great—because, like the King of kings—she has learnt to become the servant of all.[3]

SOLOMON'S GARDENS.—II.

BY ELEANOUR SINCLAIR ROHDE.

ABOVE all, Solomon's gardens were scented gardens, and the "mountains of spices" mentioned in Canticles viii, 14, probably refer to the king's gardens of spices on the hillsides round Jerusalem. In the days of his descendant Hezekiah, "spices" were reckoned amongst the royal treasures, and as such stored in a special house. "And Hezekiah had exceeding much riches and honour and he made himself treasuries for silver and for gold . . . and for spices and for shields and for all manner of pleasant jewels." (2 Chron. xxxii, 27; and see also 2 Kings xx, 13.)

It is difficult for Western minds to grasp the importance attached to sweet-scented plants and perfumes in the ancient East. Perfumes in Solomon's day appear to have been made from vegetable substances only, for no mention is made of ambergris or musk, or indeed of any scent of animal extraction with the sole exception of "onycha" (the operculum of a variety of mussel found in the Red Sea). The art of distilling was apparently unknown, but Job refers to the method of making perfumes by boiling vegetable substances in fat. Isaiah mentions the "sweet balls" (marginal reading) attached to long chains suspended either from the neck or at their girdles which the Hebrew women wore. (Isa. iii, 19.) "Awake, O north wind, and come thou south; blow upon my garden that the spices thereof may flow out." (Cant. iv, 16.) Throughout the Bible the value of fragrance is emphasized, and "the Song of Songs which is Solomon's " is full of the sweetness of scented plants, and it is noteworthy that Solomon, like Bacon, comments on the exquisite scent of newly-opened vine-blossoms (Cant. ii, 13), one of the most delicious of all scents. Solomon's herb garden was a typical Eastern herb garden, that is, a garden consisting chiefly of sweet scented shrubs—" camphire with spikenard, spikenard and saffron ; calamus and cinnamon, with all trees of frankincense ; myrrh and aloes with all the chief spices." Camphire is nowhere else mentioned in the Old Testament, but the name is of Hebrew origin. The shrub which is more commonly known as henna has been cultivated from the earliest times in the East, chiefly on account of the dye it yields, also as a hedge-plant. Spikenard (nardostachys jatamansi), a perennial herb closely allied to valerian, is a native of the Himalayas, and as it grows at a great height it has always been very costly. It was an ingredient in precious ointments and the only other time it is mentioned in the Bible is as an ointment. " There came a woman having an alabaster box of ointment of spikenard, very precious." (St. Mark xiv, 3.) In the earliest known version of St. John's Gospel in Coptic (now in the Library of the Bible Society) this ointment is described as " genuine " as well as " very precious." Alabaster boxes were commonly used for ointments because the perfume exhales through them. They were commonly used in ancient Egypt, and many have been found with traces of the ointment they once contained. The English name Saffron is derived direct from the Arab form zà farân. The saffron of the Canticles is generally supposed to be the familiar Crocus sativus, of which the orange-coloured styles and stigmas are still used when dried, for their pleasant aromatic flavouring, and to give a yellow colour to boiled rice. Calamus, probably andropogon schœnanthus, an aromatic reed, is very often mentioned in the Bible, either as calamus, sweet cane or reed. For instance, in Jeremiah vi, 20 : " To what purpose cometh there to me incense from Sheba and the sweet cane from a far country ? " Calamus was one of the ingredients in the holy oil. " Take thou also unto thee principal spices . . . and of sweet calamus two hundred and fifty shekels . . . and thou shalt make it an oil of holy ointment, an ointment compound after the art of the apothecary : it shall be an holy anointing oil." (Exod. xxx, 23-25.) Cinnamon was used in the holy anointing oil and for personal use. Cinnamon is one of the laurel family, and is a native of China, Ceylon and the East India Islands. The cinnamon of commerce is obtained from the inner bark dried in the sun. In Revelation xviii, 13, cinnamon is enumerated among the merchandise of Great Babylon. Frankincense, one of the gifts presented by the Magi, is a fragrant gum obtained from several species of Boswellia. It was one of the ingredients in the holy perfume which was forbidden for ordinary use. " Take unto thee sweet spices, stacte and onycha and galbanum ; these sweet spices with pure frankincense ; of each there shall be a like weight. . . And as for the perfume which thou shalt make, ye shall not make to yourselves according to the composition thereof : it shall be unto thee holy for the Lord. Whosoever shall make like unto that, to smell thereto, shall even be cut off from his people." (Exod. xxx, 34-38.) Myrrh, like cinnamon, was one of the chief ingredients in the holy oil, and was also in common use as a perfume. " I have perfumed my bed with myrrh, aloes and cinnamon " (Prov. vii, 17), and again in Psalm xlv : " All thy garments smell of myrrh, aloes and cassia." Myrrh was so named on account of its bitterness. It is mentioned more often in the Canticles than any other perfume. The first mention of myrrh in the Bible is in Genesis xxxvii, 25 : " And they lifted up their eyes and looked, and, behold, a company of Ishmaelites came from Gilead with their camels bearing spicery and balm and myrrh, going to carry it down to Egypt." Aloes are mentioned four times in the Old Testament and once in the New Testament. The aloes of commerce are obtained from several species of the Aquilariaceal order, the best known being A. Agallocha, a native of Northern India. The official aloes, however, is of the order Liliaceæ and is not mentioned in the Bible. Aloe trees are not grown now in Palestine, but Solomon evidently grew them and they were apparently familiar by name if not by sight to Balaam, for he compared the chosen people to " gardens by the river's side, as the trees of lign aloes which the Lord hath planted." (Num. xxiv, 6.)

" An orchard of pomegranates with pleasant fruits." What did Solomon grow in his orchard ? The phrase is suggestive of vast pleasure grounds, and it is more than likely that Solomon's orchard resembled those stately enclosures of fruit trees with the trees planted in formal avenues, depicted in the Egyptian tomb paintings. Pomegranates are amongst the most ancient of cultivated fruits and the Israelites in the wilderness thought longingly of them (Num. xx, 5), and later we find that Moses described the Promised Land as " a land of wheat and barley and vines and fig trees and pomegranates ; a land of oil olive and honey." (Deut. viii, 8.) The Spies who returned from Eshcol brought pomegranates as well as grapes and figs. (Num. xiii, 23.) How commonly the shrub which resembles a myrtle might have been grown is attested by the frequency with which Rimmon (the Hebrew for pomegranate) occurs in proper names. Gath-rimmon, for instance, was one of the cities set apart for the Levites. Aaron's ephod was embroidered with pomegranates, and in Solomon's Temple the chapiters of molten brass were covered with pomegranates " and the pomegranates were two hundred in rows." Wine was commonly made from the fruit, and in the Canticles we find a reference to " spiced wine of the juice of my pomegranate." (Cant. viii, 2.) Twice in the same poem there is the simile, " Thy temples are like a piece of a pomegranate within thy locks." Whether apples were grown in the royal orchard is more than doubtful, for the fruit does not flourish in Palestine. Even as far north as Damascus Joel speaks of apples as though they were commonly grown. " The vine is dried up and the fig tree languisheth ; the pomegranate tree, the palm tree also, and the apple tree, even all the trees of the field are withered." The " apple " is mentioned once in Proverbs and four times in the Canticles, and the description of its golden fruit, its pleasant shade, its delicious perfume and its network of " silver " flowers certainly points to the orange as being the apple of the Bible. " Apples of gold in a network of silver " (Proverbs xxv, 11) exquisitely describes the golden fruit amidst its silvery-white flowers. The orange is a native of the lower slopes of the Himalayas and was probably known to the ancient Egyptians. Even if unknown in Palestine before Solomon's days, which is unlikely, the King who tells us that he planted "trees of all kinds of fruits" doubtless gave orders to the captains of his fleet which traded with India to bring back any varieties for the royal garden. Figs would certainly have been grown in the royal orchard, for both wild and cultivated figs abound throughout the land of Palestine. The fig is the first named tree in the Bible and it is four times the subject of a parable, three of these parables being uttered by our Lord Himself. Further, it was the subject of a unique miracle—the cursing of the barren fig tree—His only miracle of judgment. Smitten fig trees are frequently used as a simile of judgment in the Old Testament (Ps. cv, 33; Jer. viii, 13; Hos. ii, 12; Joel i, 7-12; Amos iv, 9; Hag. ii, 19.) Disease amongst fig trees is apparently not a modern development, for Jeremiah refers to figs which were so diseased that they were not fit for food. The fig tree puts out its first fruits in February before the leaves which appear in April or May. These early figs drop as soon as they are ripe. Hence "they fall into the mouth of the eater being shaken." Early figs are particularly esteemed for their fine flavour. Apricots and mulberries were probably grown by Solomon. The former, which is a native of China, was brought west in very early times. Of mulberries we read in the Apocrypha, "They showed the elephants the blood of grapes and mulberries that they might prepare them for the battle." (1 Maccab. vi, 34.) It is very unlikely that Solomon grew date-palms. With the exception of a few trees in well-sheltered gardens date-palms do not grow in the Holy City, for these trees cannot endure the prolonged cold of the winters on the heights of Judea. The palms which the people strawed before our Lord on His triumphal entry into Jerusalem were probably brought by camel-load from Jericho, "the City of Palms," as they are to this day for the feast which coincides with the season for trimming the palm trees, when the lower leaves are cut off. St. Matthew and St. Mark state that the multitude cast their garments and "branches of trees" on the road. St. John alone mentions palm leaves, but he does not state that they cut them down from trees by the wayside.

Solomon speaks of his nut-garden (Cant. vi, 11), a type of garden not mentioned elsewhere in the Bible, nor so far as I have been able to discover in any other Eastern literature. A nut-garden must have been a garden of remarkable beauty, and was probably laid out in formal Egyptian fashion with avenues of almonds, chestnuts, etc. Almonds Solomon grew without doubt, for even in Jacob's time almonds were grown in Palestine and nuts and almonds were included in his present of the "best fruits of the land" which he enjoined his sons to take to Egypt. (Gen. xliii, 11.) Almonds are frequently mentioned in the Old Testament. Aaron's rod was made from an almond tree and the bowls of the sacred golden candlestick in the ancient Tabernacle were modelled from almonds. (Ex. xxv, 34.) Almond blossoms appear before its leaves, and the Hebrew name shaked means "hasten." Hence the play on the words in Jeremiah i, 11-12: "And I said, I see a rod of an almond tree. Then said the Lord unto me, Thou hast well seen, for I will hasten my word to perform it." The King probably also grew pistachio nuts. It is agreed by most modern authorities that the "nuts" mentioned besides almonds amongst "the best fruits of the land" were pistachio nuts. In patriarchal times the pistachio tree was unknown in Egypt and therefore Jacob's gift was a luxury. Walnuts were well known amongst the Eastern nations in very early times. Hazels and chestnuts may or may not have found a place in Solomon's nut-garden. In Pliny's time eight varieties of chestnuts were known to the Romans and it seems probable that the King grew them. The hazel since the earliest times has been used in magic and divination. The only time, however, that the "hazel" occurs in the Bible is in Genesis xxx, 37, 38, and the exact meaning of the word is doubtful.

"Our vines have tender grapes." (Cant. ii, 15.) Solomon's vineyard, like the vineyards of ancient Egypt, was probably a pleasure garden, and possibly the vines, as in Egypt, were grown along pergolas, thus forming delightful walks. In Egypt the poles for the support of the vines varied from simple posts to painted pillars, and the vineyard in one tomb painting (the tomb of a general of Amenophis III, circa 1500 B.C., at Thebes) is shown as the central feature of a large pleasure garden. The vineyard in this instance consists of seven alleys bordered by vines trailed over pergolas to form shady walks. The vine is the oldest symbol of the royal House of Judah (Gen xlix, 11-12), and it is the most sacred of Christian symbols, being hallowed by our Lord's words, "I am the true Vine." (St. John xv, 1.) In the vineyards of Engedi, of which the terraces still remain, Solomon probably grew the red grapes which were then a greater luxury than the white. White grapes are never watered in Palestine, but red grapes need continual watering, and at Engedi there are still the remains of cisterns. Isaiah describes the chosen people as a vineyard of red wine. "In that day sing ye unto her, a vineyard of red wine. I the Lord do keep it; I will water it every moment; lest any hurt it, I will keep it night and day." (Isaiah xxvii, 2, 3.) No one has yet estimated the age to which the vine can live, but various authorities give three centuries at least for a vine to be in full bearing. The vitality of the plant is amazing and hence the force of the passage in Isaiah: "There shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse and a branch shall come out of his roots." The prophet has just been speaking of the cutting down of the cedars of Lebanon, thereby symbolizing the total destruction of the power of Assyria, for when cut down none of the conifera send out shoots again, whereas the severe pruning of the vine increases its vigour.

The writer of the Book of Chronicles tells us that Solomon's Temple "was exceeding magnifical of fame and of glory throughout all countries" (1 Chron. xxii, 5), and modern authorities have emphasized that though comparatively small it was a miracle of beauty and costly splendour. But there is one feature of Solomon's Temple which is of greater value and significance to flower lovers than all its dazzling splendour, a feature moreover which made this building unique amongst the temples of the ancient world. For unlike the temples of the heathen nations Solomon's Temple was full of the beauty of flower-symbolism, all the emblems being taken from flowers and trees with the sole exception of the cherubim; at once suggestive of the cherubim guarding the Tree of Life. "He carved all the walls of the house round about with carved figures of cherubim and palm trees and open flowers within and without." (1 Kings vi, 29.) The brim of the molten sea was wrought with "flowers of lilies" (1 Kings vii, 26), the pillars in the porch of the Temple were crowned with "lily work," and in the description of the pillars made by Hiram we read: "And four hundred pomegranates for the two networks, even two rows of pomegranates for one network, to cover the two bowls of the chapiters that were upon the pillars." Further we are expressly told that no stonework was permitted to be seen within the Temple, "all was cedar, there was no stone seen" (1 Kings vi, 18), and the cherubim were made of olive wood overlaid with gold. Flower-symbolism was also predominant in the ancient Tabernacle, and even the High Priests' vestments were embroidered with flowers. (Exod. xxxix, 24, 25, 26.) The millennial temple foretold in Ezekiel's remarkable vision will be similar and as in Solomon's Temple no stonework will be visible, for it will be "ceiled with wood round about and from the ground up to the windows." (Ezek. xli, 16.)

"I am come into my garden, my sister, my spouse." (Cant. v, 1.) Possibly the writer had in mind the special royal garden described elsewhere in the Old Testament as "the King's garden." It was by way of this garden that Zedekiah and his men fled by night when Nebuchadnezzar besieged Jerusalem. (2 Kings xxv, 4, and Jer. xxxix, 4.) The garden was watered by two famous springs, the fountains of En-rogel and "the waters of Shiloah that go softly" (Isaiah viii, 6), described by Nehemiah as "the pool of Siloah by the King's garden." (Neh. iii, 15.) This pool was the scene of the miracle wrought by our Lord on the man blind from his birth. (St. John ix, 7.) "The King's garden" as it is described in the Old Testament was in the immediate vicinity of the brook Cedron, and it is profoundly interesting to realize that the Garden of Gethsemane was probably chief of the royal gardens made by Solomon. If so, how much this adds to the prophetic meaning of the verse in the Canticles, "I am come into my garden, my sister, my spouse, I have gathered my myrrh with my spice, I have eaten my honeycomb with my honey, I have drunk my wine with my milk; eat, O friends; drink, yea drink abundantly, O beloved." (Cant. v, 1.) That our Lord frequently went to the Garden of Gethsemane we are told by St. John: "Jesus oftimes resorted thither with His disciples." (St. John xviii, 2.) Only one of His lessons concerning flowers has been preserved for us, but what must He have taught His disciples concerning flowers in the Garden of Gethsemane, at least so far as human intelligence could grasp concerning their marvels? The humblest questioner was surely never turned away unsatisfied, for only those who even in the presence of Supreme Wisdom were wise in their own conceit were ever rebuked. One's thoughts return inevitably to that older garden scene "eastward in Eden" when no human eye beheld Him "without Whom was not anything made that was made."

CORRESPONDENCE.

Mr. BASIL STEWART writes:—"In view of recent statements in the Press, and of events during this summer, may I draw the attention of your readers to the following forecast of what the Great Pyramid's Second Low Passage signified, given at page 221 of the second edition of my Witness of the Great Pyramid, published May 14th, 1928. Evidence reaches me that very few of those who studied the first edition have troubled to read the more recent one, thinking, apparently, there was little difference between them. Had more done so, it would have helped to expose the anti-Pyramid campaign of the Press in 1928.

"'All these remarkable occurrences (on the warning dates defined in the Ante-Chamber) would seem to justify the conclusions arrived at respecting the character of the events foreshadowed by the Pyramid's final low passages; namely, political and financial upheavals . . . in the different countries of the world, and the stirring up of unrest amongst the disaffected elements of the East and Near East.* Concurrently with this political turmoil we have abnormal disturbances in nature of unusual frequency and violence . . .'

"There is nothing in the foregoing to suggest anything sensational or spectacular would happen on May 29th, 1928, or that we would then enter upon an eight years' war. Abnormal natural phenomena have been plainly in evidence since that date, while regarding war at the end of the period, I would draw attention to the article headed '1934' in the Daily Mail of July 18th last, and the gigantic war preparations being made by the Soviet therein disclosed. To condense, it states:—'War preparations on a gigantic scale are being made . . . to enable the Red Dictator to make a bid for the conquest of the world. The actual outbreak is timed for 1934, when the Kremlin chiefs are satisfied that the necessary arrangements will have been completed.' The nature of these arrangements is disclosed in the Mail of July 23rd:—'There are in Russia to-day 20 million men and women who have satisfactorily passed every test . . . for active service. It has been decided to treble this number within the next four years.' The words of Ezekiel xxxix, 9-14, are already being visualized in their literal fulfilment. And while the Soviet makes no secret whatever of its devilish plans, our own politicians are busily engaged in throwing away what little defence we have left. Did we not know that it is the Lord Who will fight for Israel 'in that day,' we might well write 'Finis'! to the Empire and civilization.

"Further information has just reached me which, if anything, is even more significant.

"It is contained in a letter from a correspondent quoted in the Advent Evangel of British Columbia and reprinted in The Dawn of July 15th last. It reads:—'An order has just been given by the Soviet Government at Moscow saying that all who do not receive a mark in their right hands before the fall (autumn) of 1930 will be put to death; and that no one can buy or sell without this mark!' (See Rev. xiii, 16-17.)

"The Soviet, as the last of the Babylonian succession of Empires, is thus adopting to itself one of the unmistakable signs of the Antichrist of St. John prefigured as Babylon. And note how significant is the token St. John fastens upon Babylon—666—the trinity of the number of imperfection, of man as destitute of God, the perfection of *im*perfection.

"Now the number six in Greek—the language of Revelation—is denoted by ϛ, a terminal variant of the letter s (σ) (or sigma), called stigma, a word meaning a 'mark,' but particularly a mark such as is branded upon cattle, and formerly upon slaves and soldiers by their owners or masters.

* Note at the present time (and we are only a quarter way through the Passage) the prolonged civil war in China, turmoil in Afghanistan, India and Egypt, political and economic chaos at home and in other countries. India, Egypt and China are three countries I said should be particularly watched after May, 1928.

Digitized by Google

"Thus is the Soviet verily the 'perfection of imperfection,' to 'cause that as many as would not worship . . . should be killed . . . and all . . . to receive a mark (that is, be stigmatized) in their right hand . . . that no man might buy or sell save that he had the mark.' I should not be at all surprised if this mark turns out to be the Russian equivalent of 666!" * * *

THE STONE OF DESTINY.

The Rev. F. S. Ralph, M.A., writes:—"The famous Liafail or Stone of Destiny is more remarkable when we figure out its dimensions. These are 21.97 ins. × 13 ins. × 11 ins., as near as very careful measure can give them. Now, this Stone is certainly God-given, and as the name Elohim is Hebrew for God, we find that the cubic content of the Liafail is Elohim in Hebrew numerical-alphabetical letters, for 21.97 × 13 × 11 is 3141.6 cubic inches; and El in Hebrew is 31. The Hebrew letter "He" is 4 and 1 (or a total of five), while the "Yod" is the decimal point (or ten), and the final letter "Mem" is 600, so that Elohim is really 3141.6 or God. Another remarkable fact works out in the superficial area of the famous Stone, as the total area comes out to 1341.6, which is the 3141.6 with the initial 31 reversed to read 13; a pointer, if one may say so, to the troublous times the Stone would pass through ere the tribes of Jacob, or Israel, and British-Israel, came into their own."

REVIEW.

(BY THE REV. L. G. A. ROBERTS, COM. R.N.)

A TALK ON THE GREAT PYRAMID OF GIZEH, AND ITS MESSAGE TO THE ANGLO-SAXON RACE.* BY M. BLOXAM.

THIS is really a very comprehensive little effort to further explain that mysterious Witness we have in Egypt, and will repay anyone who has a doubt as to the object of its miraculous construction. Of the many little pamphlets which have hitherto appeared, this certainly bears the palm. Besides being concise, it is clearly put, and there is no ambiguity. Following Divine Revelation, as in our Bible which gives events, the author makes the other Witness, the Bible in Stone, give us the dates.

To our mind, which has been more impressed by the testimony of the TWO WITNESSES in Rev. xi, than by any other, as to the 1,260 days of prophesying, than even the 2,520, or seven times, as pertaining to a nearer historical incident from whence to reckon (our difficulty having been as to whether lunar, prophetical or Solar reckoning of years was intended). Our mind was set at rest by the significant entrance into the last low passage, where on the South Wall of the Ante-Chamber are four grooves, the depth of which, 2.861 inches, are gradually tapered, prefiguring the gradual withdrawal of the Spiritual forces of restraint over the Truce in Chaos, and signifying that Israel alone, God's Elect 153, the numerics formed by the added length of both low passages; that to him alone is committed the task, under Christ, yet under the Law of Moses, of the reconstruction of the Kingdom of God. This number 2.861 is the one-hundredth part of the displacement factor, explained by Mr. D. Davidson, etc. And may we hope this straitening of the factor from 286.1 to 2.861 signifies that Israel, now brought into much tribulation, and gradually returning to the Laws of Moses, given by God (Mal. iv), will enable Israel in Christ now to bear the burden of the reconstruction of the Kingdom of God, in such a way that all nations shall say "Let us go up to the Mountain of the Lord."

Perhaps our readers do not know that 29th to 30th May, 1928–24th August, 2.861 × 30, within 86 days of the entrance to the low passage, our enemies have all lifted up their heads and taken secret counsel against God's Hidden Ones. (Ps. lxxxiii.) It is our hope that about 11th of November, 1931, the outpouring of God's Holy Spirit, the return of the Shekinah, will be in answer to Israel's pleading with God.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

BY THE REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A.

QUESTION.—As a regular reader of your paper, I shall be glad if you will kindly give me a full explanation of Matt. x, 23, and xvi, 28? The former seems to mean that the preaching of the Gospel of the Kingdom must of necessity be incomplete before our Lord's return, so much looked forward to by us, especially if the "Commonwealth of Nations" is to contain the "cities of Israel."—C. M. T.

ANSWER.—(1) "For verily I say unto you, Ye shall not have gone through the cities of Israel, till the Son of man be come." Our Lord is bearing in mind here the vision of Dan. vii, 13 with regard to the fulfilment of prophecy. Daniel's vision sees the setting up of an "everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed." This corresponds with the Stone Kingdom of Dan. ii, 44, 45, which must be a literal kingdom, as it has to break in pieces and succeed the previous kingdoms of gold, silver, brass and joint iron and clay. To this Stone Kingdom there is attached, however, this difference that it continues as a kingdom after the end of the world, the further phase of it being spiritual (Gen. xlix, 10).

Our Lord is here speaking to the 12 disciples—the future Apostles—missionaries to and representative of redeemed Israel. With the scattering of Israel all over the world, inclusive of our far-flung Empire and "Commonwealth of Nations," it means that the missionary work of the Israel Church of God shall not be completed until the Second Coming of Christ, speaking generally. This may be compared with the world-wide preaching of the Gospel of the Kingdom "for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come" (Matt. xxiv, 14).

(2) This does not refer to the Transfiguration, as that could hardly be called "the coming of the Son of man in His kingdom." It must therefore refer to the foundation of the Christian era, of which the Apostles (some of whom were standing by at that moment) were witnesses, and whose duty it was to preach the Gospel of the Kingdom, and to hasten the consciousness of Israel's redemption, since they were the pioneers and founders with the prophets, "Jesus Christ Himself being the chief corner-stone" (Eph. ii, 20).

No man can state when the return of our Lord will take place. All that we can say, work for, and pray for, is that Christ will come some day: Christ may come any day.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

WE earnestly appeal for donations for the expenses of the coming Congress, and we feel sure that our generous supporters will gladly respond as usual. Some of the speakers are announced on another page.

We are looking forward to record gatherings and to a time of great refreshing and uplift. We expect large numbers of old friends and hundreds of new ones as the result of our Manifesto.

The Central Hall is a large one to fill, but it ought to be filled at every meeting in view of the strong platform and the very great importance of the subjects to be dealt with. We ask for the active support and co-operation of all our readers. Posters and circulars should be used in great numbers, and here is where we need special help. Circulars announcing the meetings can be supplied in any quantities, and our friends can render a real service by getting these widely distributed in their respective districts. All communications may be addressed to the Secretary-General, at Headquarters, 6, Buckingham Gate, S.W.1.

We are glad to report that the Editor of the Scots Observer has decided to open his columns to a discussion of British-Israel, following the attack to which we made reference in two previous issues of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE. Three letters have appeared, and now we have a copy with a most excellent article by Mr. Roderick Campbell, on which we congratulate him. We hope the Editor will yet see his way to print the splendid reply by the Rev. J. Anderson Watt, M.A. Ministers and others in Scotland are already writing to us for particulars of our teaching and copies of our publications, so, after all, the results are likely to be quite other than those the attacker had hoped and intended.

A Minister of the Church of Scotland writes :—

"May I venture to express the hope that you will not too seriously regard the article in the Scots Observer to which you made reference in your "News and Notes" of August 16th. Its writer is well-known to his brethren of the Ministry as one who is taken seriously only by himself. He has lately been instructing (!) the plain men of Scotland (as though we had any plain men in a country like this !) in the columns of the same paper on the 'true' attitude to the Bible, but we all know that he is prone to feel that, because he fills his own doorway, he fills the whole horizon !

"The chief matter for regret is that an article so venomous, so unfair, and so un-Scottish, should have appeared in our one religious weekly—but this is the 'silly season,' and strange things can wander into the pages of even the most respectable journals.

"Occasionally an arrogant ignoramus may be a Christian minister, but I do hope you will not judge the entire Ministry in Scotland by this bright specimen. . . . I have the privilege of knowing many devoted British-Israelites in Scotland, and I have also had the privilege of addressing several of their meetings in Glasgow ; and my testimony is that they are of the most devout and earnest Christian people, and that that which they believe is at once inspiring to man and honouring to God. With all good wishes, etc."

Mr. Rupert J. Finch writes :—"Referring to Irvine Potter's article in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE of August 2nd, entitled 'Israel's Territorial Inheritance,' his remarks concerning our gradual occupation of the various territories given to us, and the gradual pushing back and wiping out of the aboriginal inhabitants, show exact fulfilment of God's promise to Israel in Exodus xxiii, 29, 30 : "I will not drive them out from before thee in one year ; lest the land become desolate, and the beast of the field multiply against thee. By little and little I will drive them from before thee, until thou be increased, and inherit the land."

Further, the few cases wherein our people have intermarried and so contracted or made alliance with native races bear out our orders as given in Exodus xxiii, 32, 33: "Thou shalt make no covenant with them, nor with their gods. They shall not dwell in thy land, lest they make thee sin against Me : for if thou serve their gods, it will surely be a snare unto thee."

Mr. H. Percy Blanchard writes:—"In the margin of my Bible the date B.C. 1063 is given as that of the anointing of David as King of Israel. Then, if this date is correct, 3,000 years thence will be A.D. 1936. In B.C. 1055, David becomes King of Judah, and in B.C. 1048 he becomes King of all Israel and Judah. These dates carried out to three millenniums reach A.D. 1946 and 1953 respectively. The period included is the period of King David's establishment in his Kingdom. The extension of the same period touches three dates in the Pyramid, the beginning and ending of the King's Chamber, and an intermediate point punctuated by Mr. Davidson as an important date. I leave the inferences open."

INSTRUMENT OF GOD.

BRITISH PEOPLE CHOSEN FOR SERVICE, NOT PRIVILEGE.

Visualizing the British Empire and people as an instrument of God for the uplifting of the world, possessed of a great responsibility and a great opportunity, the Rev. Preb. B. F. Relton preached a timely sermon at the Parish Church, Walsall, on Sunday morning at a service to which overseas visitors were specially invited. The Mayor and Mayoress (Alderman and Mrs. E. H. Ingram) attended, and members of the St. John Ambulance Corps were also present.

"I will make of thee a great nation and I will bless thee and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed"—the words of God's promise, taken from Genesis, formed the basis of the Vicar's address. The outstanding thing about the British race was that although an island people they were to-day to be found in every quarter of the globe, in touch with almost every race on the face of the earth. He wondered whether they fully realized that. Perhaps Welcome Home Week would help them to do it. Just a list of those parts of the world from which the Walsall folk from overseas coming home again had come from illustrated it. The British Empire, it had been said, represented the greatest dispersion the world had ever known, and it had meant the creation of new nations—four great self-governing Dominions—the creation of the British Commonwealth outside South Africa, India, and the Crown Colonies. Was the size of our Empire and the extent of our influence to be taken for granted, or was there something behind it? The Christian Gospel spoke always of a purpose, and there was a purpose in the existence of the British Empire. If we thought that it was God's purpose to make a wealthy and powerful nation and give it prosperity simply as a spoiled child of fortune, we made a terrible mistake; the mistake the Jewish people made centuries ago. They forgot that they were chosen not for privilege but for service. The purpose of choice was not for their own interests, not for their merits, but for the sake of the whole world.

That, he believed, was the destiny of the British people to-day. The more he thought of it the more convinced he was that upon "this people" to which we belonged had the mantle of Israel descended. That was how we ought to regard this great gift of Empire of which we were so justly proud. Chosen for God's purpose to serve Him in bringing men and peoples of the world into one great fellowship. Wherever our lot in life was cast we had this responsibility. If the message which the world needed was Jesus Christ, then our responsibility was to show to the world what a Christian—a life of which Jesus had control—might be. That was the opportunity of each one. —EXCHANGE.

"One of the significant things in the present period of the religious life of our people is the frequency of Divine healing.

The wide range of cases, including nervous disorders, organic diseases, fractured bones, imperfect organs of sight and hearing, and so on, show that there can be no resting in the theory of psychotherapeutics. There is more than the organising of the mental forces of the patient. There is more than mental and physical assistance which may be rendered by others. There is the evidence of Divine interference on behalf of the patient.

It is interesting to note that these cases come in connection with the deep interest in sacred things, personal approach to God, and, in most cases, united prayer to God.

It is also interesting to note that physical healing is invariably, as far as we have been able to observe and to know, a part of a religious awakening which embraces the whole of the personality of the subject of Divine Healing. Those who are indifferent to God and to Holy Things are not healed. Those who are living in rebellion against God are not healed. Those who are "living after the flesh," as the Apostle Paul puts it, are not subjects for Divine Healing. . . .

So widespread is the present manifestation of Divine activity, so universal is the manifestation of the power, that we are assured the Lord is trying to break in to the consciousness of His people, and to draw them nearer to Himself than has hitherto been the case in our experience during the lifetime of those now living."

By arrangement with the author, we have just published a new edition of this little booklet.
The author is an expert on the Tithing System of Israel, and this little 16-page tract is a modern application of the system by which Israel under the Almighty's command provided for her civil and ecclesiastical needs.
The maintenance of Church and State by means of the tithe is a system which has not only never been surpassed but never equalled in the whole history of mankind. Rightly understood, systematic giving brings a proper understanding of what real citizenship and personal responsibility mean, and the practice of tithing brings the Divine blessing by promise, and the promises of God are always kept. It is hoped that a wide circulation of this booklet may result.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

VESTED INTERESTS IN THE BIBLE.—II.

By the Rev. Dr. W. Pascoe Goard.

In our last we saw some of the spiritual interests which are vested in the Bible and which constitute such inestimable assets of the nations and especially of the Anglo-Saxon nations.

This week we shall look at some of the national and material vested interests in the Bible which were our fathers' and which are ours in larger measure than ever.

First we shall look at the wonderful knowledge of the past and of the origin of the things which constitute our physical and personal world.

The origin of matter is settled for us who will have it so, "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth."

How eagerly men have tried to turn the minds of the people away from that assurance. Could they succeed in doing so they would cause result which would be surprising and devastating to the world. That the world has its origin in God is and has been the foundation-thought of all intelligent peoples in all intellectual ages. That this is the "best" anchor to the minds of men a little thought will convince the informed mind.

This thought puts God into our minds as the source and foundation of all the things which come into the life and consciousness of mankind. What an asset this is to all the world, and to the Anglo-Saxon race especially, it is impossible to estimate. "In the beginning God . . ."

The creation of the human race. What a distinct and valuable assurance it is to know that the human race is in the earth by the will of God. "And God said, Let us make man . . ."

Disregarding all the learned talking about the method of God's activity, it is priceless assurance for the human race, or for those who have progressed in thoughtful enquiry, to know that the human family is in the earth, existent indeed after thought taken and purpose reached. "And God said, Let us make man in our own image."

It is an exceedingly valuable item of knowledge that the Adamic family is what it is as to capability and psychical power by the creative act of Jehovah Elohim. It is not necessary to ask as to the procedure of the Lord in bringing about the finished product of the creation in the Adamic family. It is of the greatest value that we have the assurance that we have at the back of our Adamic life the creative will and act of God.

In speaking thus of the Adamic family we are not implying that there are in being any other families of the human race. Many believe there are. As to this we do not comment pro or con. Had we cast our statement otherwise it might have been considered that we were implying that there are not.

It is a thing of the greatest value that we should have furnished for us the descent of our race. Thus the Bible gives it:—

God
Adam
Seth
. . .
Noah
Shem
. . .
. . . .
Abraham
Isaac
Jacob-Israel

Whatever scientific research may bring to light, it cannot bring to light anything that is contrary to the above. The first chapter of Genesis is like ancient moss-grown rock of the oldest form known to geologists. It carries back to the time when the oldest of the sidereal stars were formed.

One could as soon estimate in miles the distance of the farthest of the stars of the most distant heavens as to estimate in years the period covered by the first chapter of Genesis. It is certain that if it goes back to the beginning when God created the heaven, then it goes back beyond the time when God created the oldest of the stars which find their places in that heaven.

Step by step, over immeasurable periods of creative activity, the progress of the first chapter approaches towards our own time, ending with the creation of man in the likeness of God.

The second chapter of Genesis, commencing with the fourth verse, begins with the FORMATION of Adam. Here we have a comparatively modern Divine act of creation. It is certain from the Bible statements that Adam of the second chapter lived within six thousand years of the present date, and that we are blood descendants of him.

Thus, turning from the genealogy of other species of life in the earth, we glory in the fact of our Divine ancestry.

In this glory, as far as the Adamic family is concerned, all the civilized races of mankind share with us. Ours is traced down through Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. Thus we Anglo-Saxons, together with other branches of the race, form a family within the more general race. Thus the Israel family is still more centred in the chosen descent.

THE CALLING OF THE RACE.

This history of our race begins with the twelfth chapter of Genesis. This may be said to be the beginning of the historic movement of the Bible. That which precedes in the first eleven chapters of the Bible is a masterly, indeed a miraculous, synopsis of all preceding knowledge such as serves to make all the Bible which follows logical and understandable. It is absurd to term such a synopsis "folk-lore and fable." For folk-lore and fable do not by any chance whatever fall into such a miracle of order and logical sequence as do the preceding eleven chapters of Genesis.

With the call of the race there is brought to us the beginning of God's great plan for the regeneration of mankind and the salvation of the world. The foretelling of the whole plan is conveyed to us in the five Books of the Pentateuch, together with the first four centuries of the history of the movement and of the people who were thus called in Abraham to carry the movement through.

The Call of the race is recorded in the following quotation and the paragraphs which follow :—

"Now the LORD had said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will shew thee :

And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great ; and thou shalt be a blessing :

And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee : and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed.

So Abram departed, as the LORD had spoken unto him ; and Lot went with him : and Abram was seventy and five years old when he departed out of Haran.

And Abram took Sarai his wife, and Lot his brother's son, and all their substance that they had gathered, and the souls that they had gotten in Haran ; and they went forth to go into the land of Canaan ; and into the land of Canaan they came.

And Abram passed through the land unto the place of Sichem, unto the plain of Moreh. And the Canaanite was then in the land.

And the LORD appeared unto Abram, and said, Unto thy seed will I give this land : and there builded he an altar unto the LORD, who appeared unto him.

And he removed from thence unto a mountain on the east of Beth-el, and pitched his tent, having Beth-el on the west, and Hai on the east : and there he builded an altar unto the LORD, and called upon the name of the LORD.

And Abram journeyed, going on still toward the south.

And there was a famine in the land : and Abram went down into Egypt to sojourn there ; for the famine was grievous in the land."—Gen. xii, 1-10.

THE ENDOWMENT OF THE RACE.

"And the LORD said unto Abram, after that Lot was separated from him, Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward :

For all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever.

And I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth : so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed also be numbered.

Arise, walk through the land in the length of it and in the breadth of it ; for I will give it unto thee.

Then Abram removed his tent, and came and dwelt in the plain of Mamre, which is in Hebron, and built there an altar unto the LORD."—Gen. xiii, 14-18.

"After these things the word of the LORD came unto Abram in a vision, saying, Fear not, Abram : I am thy shield, and thy exceeding great reward.

And Abram said, Lord GOD, what wilt thou give me, seeing I go childless, and the steward of my house is this Eliezer of Damascus ?

And Abram said, Behold, to me thou hast given no seed : and, lo, one born in my house is mine heir.

And, behold, the word of the LORD came unto him, saying, This shall not be thine heir ; but he that shall come forth out of thine own bowels shall be thine heir.

And he brought him forth abroad, and said, Look now toward heaven, and tell the stars, if thou be able to number them : and he said unto him, So shall thy seed be.

And he believed in the LORD ; and he counted it to him for righteousness.

And he said unto him, I am the LORD that brought thee out of Ur of the Chaldees, to give thee this land to inherit it.

And he said, Lord GOD, whereby shall I know that I shall inherit it?

And he said unto him, Take me an heifer of three years old, and a she goat of three years old, and a ram of three years old, and a turtledove, and a young pigeon.

And he took unto him all these, and divided them in the midst, and laid each piece one against another : but the birds divided he not.

And when the fowls came down upon the carcases, Abram drove them away.

And when the sun was going down, a deep sleep fell upon Abram ; and, lo, an horror of great darkness fell upon him.

And he said unto Abram, Know of a surety that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not their's, and shall serve them ; and they shall afflict them four hundred years ;

And also that nation, whom they shall serve, will I judge: and afterward shall they come out with great substance.

And thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace; thou shalt be buried in a good old age.

But in the fourth generation they shall come hither again: for the iniquity of the Amorites is not yet full.

And it came to pass, that, when the sun went down, and it was dark, behold a smoking furnace, and a burning lamp that passed between those pieces.

In the same day the LORD made a covenant with Abram, saying, Unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates:

The Kenites, and the Kenizzites, and the Kadmonites,

And the Hittites, and the Perizzites, and the Rephaims,

And the Amorites, and the Canaanites, and the Girgashites, and the Jebusites."—Gen. xv.

THE CHARTER OF THE RACE.

"And when Abram was ninety years old and nine, the LORD appeared to Abram, and said unto him, I am the Almighty God; walk before me, and be thou perfect.

And I will make my covenant between me and thee, and will multiply thee exceedingly.

And Abram fell on his face: and God talked with him, saying,

As for me, behold, my covenant is with thee, and thou shalt be a father of many nations.

Neither shall thy name any more be called Abram, but thy name shall be Abraham; for a father of many nations have I made thee.

And I will make thee exceeding fruitful, and I will make nations of thee, and kings shall come out of thee.

And I will establish my covenant between me and thee and thy seed after thee in their generations for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee, and to thy seed after thee.

And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God.

And God said unto Abraham, Thou shalt keep my covenant therefore, thou, and thy seed after thee in their generations.

This is my covenant, which ye shall keep, between me and you and thy seed after thee; Every man child among you shall be circumcised.

And ye shall circumcise the flesh of your foreskin; and it shall be a token of the covenant betwixt me and you.

And he that is eight days old shall be circumcised among you, every man child in your generations, he that is born in the house, or bought with money of any stranger, which is not of thy seed.

He that is born in thy house, and he that is bought with thy money, must needs be circumcised: and my covenant shall be in your flesh for an everlasting covenant.

And the uncircumcised man child whose flesh of his foreskin is not circumcised, that soul shall be cut off from his people; he hath broken my covenant.

And God said unto Abraham, As for Sarai thy wife, thou shalt not call her name Sarai, but Sarah shall her name be.

And I will bless her, and give thee a son also of her: yea, I will bless her, and she shall be a mother of nations; kings of people shall be of her.

Then Abraham fell upon his face, and laughed, and said in his heart, Shall a child be born unto him that is an hundred years old? and shall Sarah, that is ninety years old, bear?

And Abraham said unto God, O that Ishmael might live before thee!

And God said, Sarah thy wife shall bear thee a son indeed; and thou shalt call his name Isaac: and I will establish my covenant with him for an everlasting covenant, and with his seed after him."—Gen. xvii, 1-19.

THE BIRTH OF THE RACE.

"And the LORD visited Sarah as he had said, and the LORD did unto Sarah as he had spoken.

For Sarah conceived, and bare Abraham a son in his old age, at the set time of which God had spoken to him.

And Abraham called the name of his son that was born unto him, whom Sarah bare to him, Isaac.

And Abraham circumcised his son Isaac being eight days old, as God had commanded him.

And Abraham was an hundred years old, when his son Isaac was born unto him.

And Sarah said, God hath made me to laugh, so that all that hear will laugh with me.

And she said, Who would have said unto Abraham, that Sarah should have given children suck? for I have born him a son in his old age.

And the child grew, and was weaned: and Abraham made a great feast the same day that Isaac was weaned."—Gen. xxi, 1-8.

THE DEDICATION OF THE RACE.

In the beautiful passage we are now to read there occurred the first recorded sacrifice offered upon Mount Moriah. If this had been simply the offering of a son upon whom so much depended, it would have been a magnificent demonstration of faith and obedience on the part of Abraham, the father of the race. But it was much more than this. It was the offering in Isaac, who was the first-born of the race and through whom all the chosen seed should come, of every individual of every generation of the race which should descend from him. From this time forth the Saxon seed should be a chosen generation, an holy nation, a peculiar people, a royal priesthood of whom four centuries later God said:—"Ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests and an holy nation."

What a sacrifice was there offered! What a dedication was there made of Isaac, the first-born, the intervening generations since that time, our own generation and ourselves as part of it, and all who shall follow hereafter of the seed of Isaac. In view of this, let us read every clause of every sentence of the narrative which follows:—

"And it came to pass after these things, that God did tempt Abraham, and said unto him, Abraham: and he said, Behold, here I am.

And he said, Take now thy son, thine only son Isaac, whom thou lovest, and get thee into the land of Moriah; and offer him there for a burnt offering upon one of the mountains which I will tell thee of.

And Abraham rose up early in the morning, and saddled his ass, and took two of his young men with him, and Isaac his son, and clave the wood for the burnt offering, and rose up, and went unto the place of which God had told him.

Then on the third day Abraham lifted up his eyes, and saw the place afar off.

And Abraham said unto his young men, Abide ye here with the ass; and I and the lad will go yonder and worship, and come again to you.

And Abraham took the wood of the burnt offering, and laid it upon Isaac his son; and he took the fire in his hand, and a knife; and they went both of them together.

And Isaac spake unto Abraham his father, and said, My father: and he said, Here am I, my son. And he said, Behold the fire and the wood: but where is the lamb for a burnt offering?

Digitized by Google

And Abraham said, My son, God will provide himself a lamb for a burnt offering: so they went both of them together.

And they came to the place which God had told him of; and Abraham built an altar there, and laid the wood in order, and bound Isaac his son, and laid him on the altar upon the wood.

And Abraham stretched forth his hand, and took the knife to slay his son.

And the angel of the LORD called unto him out of heaven, and said, Abraham, Abraham: and he said, Here am I.

And he said, Lay not thine hand upon the lad, neither do thou any thing unto him: for now I know that thou fearest God, seeing thou hast not withheld thy son, thine only son from me.

And Abraham lifted up his eyes, and looked, and behold behind him a ram caught in a thicket by his horns: and Abraham went and took the ram, and offered him up for a burnt offering in the stead of his son.

And Abraham called the name of that place Jehovah-jireh: as it is said to this day, In the mount of the LORD it shall be seen.

And the angel of the LORD called unto Abraham out of heaven the second time,

And said, By myself have I sworn, saith the LORD, for because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son:

That in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore; and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies;

And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obeyed my voice.

So Abraham returned unto his young men, and they rose up and went together to Beer-sheba; and Abraham dwelt at Beer-sheba.

And it came to pass after these things, that it was told Abraham, saying, Behold, Milcah, she hath also born children unto thy brother Nahor;

Huz his firstborn, and Buz his brother, and Kemuel the father of Aram,

And Chesed, and Hazo, and Pildash, and Jidlaph, and Bethuel.

And Bethuel begat Rebekah: these eight Milcah did bear to Nahor, Abraham's brother.

And his concubine, whose name was Reumah, she bare also Tebah, and Gaham, and Thahash, and Maachah."—Gen. xxii.

THE COVENANT CONFIRMED TO ISAAC.

"And there was a famine in the land, beside the first famine that was in the days of Abraham. And Isaac went unto Abimelech king of the Philistines unto Gerar.

And the LORD appeared unto him, and said, Go not down into Egypt; dwell in the land which I shall tell thee of:

Sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee, and will bless thee; for unto thee, and unto thy seed, I will give all these countries, and I will perform the oath which I sware unto Abraham thy father;

And I will make thy seed to multiply as the stars of heaven, and will give unto thy seed all these countries; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed;

Because that Abraham obeyed my voice, and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws.—Gen. xxvi, 1-5.

"And he went up from thence to Beer-sheba.

And the LORD appeared unto him the same night, and said, I am the God of Abraham thy father: fear not, for I am with thee, and will bless thee, and multiply thy seed for my servant Abraham's sake.

And he builded an altar there, and called upon the name of the LORD, and pitched his tent there: and there Isaac's servants digged a well."—Gen. xxvi, 23-25.

The various documents we have considered are the foundation charters of the world's greatest race of people.

The documents concern the people themselves as to their continued existence as a multitudinous family in the earth.

The documents concern the lands and countries which should be the dwelling-places and possessions of the people throughout the ages.

The documents concern themselves with the national organization of the people and the form of that national organization, namely a Kingdom under a Divinely-appointed King of the same race.

The documents concern themselves with the strategic position of the Kingdom and of the people among the nations: "Thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies."

The documents concern the mission of the people: "In thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

The documents concern themselves with the religious life of the people. The whole race was dedicated in Isaac to the great task of the Kingdom and thenceforth became for ever an holy nation—that is to say, a nation set apart to the task of organizing and carrying forward to universal sway in the earth the Kingdom of the Lord.

AN EXAMINATION OF MR. AVARY H. FORBES' "STONE WALL."

(Letter No. 9.)

BY PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc.

41*st.*—Sir Wm. Hunter says:—"The forefathers of the Greek and Roman, of the English and the Hindoo, dwelt together in Western Asia, spoke the same tongue, and worshipped the same god."

Good! True! We thank thee, Mr. Forbes, for that word, for that quotation from Sir William.

The Shemitic peoples of Ishmael, Isaac, Keturah, Israel, Judah and Edom lived in Canaan, spoke the language of their father Abraham and of Sarah, and worshipped the same God, Jehovah. Quite correct, Sir William! Thanks, Mr. Forbes!

Thus and thus we have these peoples, who "spoke the same language and worshipped the same God," a Shemitic group and not a foolish Aryan or senseless "Nordic" people.

And to these Shemites who lived in the Promised Land we add the Moabites and Ammonites descended from Lot, the Shemitic Hebrew nephew of Abraham, who started them all in the same land, with the same language and with the worship of the same God as said by our learned Sir Wm. Hunter and so joyously quoted by our friend Mr. Forbes.

42*nd.*—Mr. Forbes refers to the Huns of Central Asia. We would suggest that he use the term Assyrian Huns, the ancestors of the Hamitic Prussians. As Mr. Forbes reads good history, he has learned that the Israel Gepidae were the chief factors in dissolving the organized Hun power when Attila died shortly after Chalons sur Marne.

In like manner, if he reads the scholarly work of Judge Hannay of Madras, he will find that the un-Romanized Picts and Scots were also of the old Hebrew Israelite stock.

43*rd.*—Mr. Forbes writes on the ancient Britons, the Huns, the Jutes, the Heptarchy, the Danes and the population of

Digitized by Google

England, all or most of which could be said by any B-I. writer, for it is a statement of ordinary everyday history.

However, there is one statement which requires a comment or two. Mr. Forbes says concerning the population of England:—"In Heptarchy times, therefore, the population could not have been more than 1,000,000. Is it to be supposed that this handful represents the whole populations of Scandinavia, Denmark and Saxony at the time they came to England? In other words, is it credible that the Jutes, the Saxons, the Angles and the Danes came over en masse, men, women and children, leaving none behind them? Which is what is required by the British-Israel theory." Quite a statement this! Not hard to answer!

The British-Israel theory does not teach or require such nonsense. No such foolish teaching have I yet read or heard. In fact, for long years, I have taught and all my co-workers have taught that, so far as I know, in past times, many peoples from Norway, Sweden, Jutland, Denmark, Saxony and other parts of North and North-West of Europe passed into the British Isles and built up several kingdoms which finally emerged into the Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

And, naturally, the majority of those migratory peoples remained at home and kept the home fires burning along the ages.

Moreover, as made clear earlier in these my comments, the people from whom our ancestors migrated were under covenant because they were an Abrahamic-Isaac-Israel people and therefore "British."

From this it would seem to follow that Mr. Forbes could and should have left out the above quoted statement to great advantage. Had he fully understood the true teaching of the B.-I. leaders he would not have used the words he did use.

44th.—Mr. Forbes refers to the Saxons and Charlemagne who to some extent conquered "this wild race whose obstinate paganism and unconquerable courage had baffled ten generations of Frankish missionaries and kings."

Why does Mr. Forbes bring this into his pamphlet? It has nothing to do with British-Israel teaching, either pro or con, and is therefore useless in the present discussion.

45th. "A STONE WALL."

Let us quote:—"Here we are up against a stone wall. That the Normans did not all come to England with the Conqueror, or after the Conquest either, is patent to every one who opens an English or a French history. Now the present people of Norway, Sweden, Denmark, and a large section of Germans, Silicians, Italians, Russians, Icelanders and Greenlanders are descended from those same Danes, Norsemen, Angles and Saxons, etc. Are the modern Danes, Norwegians, Swedes, Saxon Germans, etc., etc., therefore to be included amongst the British-Israelites? And if not, where are we to draw the line?"

My answer is simple and direct and easily understood. If Mr. Forbes be right in his main or major premise, his conclusion is right. And he is quite correct in the main. Hence, so far as he is right, the peoples he mentions are also Israelites, if we who have descended from their ancestors are Israelites.

This latter I readily grant, and conclude that all those who have come from their and our fathers are under covenant promises and are in this true sense men and women of the covenant and therefore "British."

Where, then, is the "Stone Wall"? It is not, but has gone as went the stone wall around Jericho. It is a treat, a pleasure to converse with Mr. Forbes in this friendly way. Of course, since he no longer has a "Stone Wall" to separate him from the B.-I. camp, he will come over to his true place among his blood brothers descended from Abraham, the "friend of God," the covenant man; pre-eminently so!

46th.—Under "Modern British Expansion" Mr. Forbes would have his readers believe the expansion of the Empire has led to the English, or British, marrying largely with foreigners. This is a bugbear! A thin shade, a ghostly shadow of a shade! Not one-tenth of 1 per cent. of the British peoples have married with foreigners, including the coastlands of India, Bombay, Burmah, Singapore, China, Korea, Japan, Africa and North America. For forty-three years I have studied this matter intensely, and on the ground, as few have had opportunity, and affirm that not one-tenth of 1 per cent. of the British have married these foreigners. Hence the ghostly shadow of a shade is all that is left of the argument concerning an impure mixed British race.

47th. "THE CONCLUSION."

Yes, Mr. Forbes at last gets to a conclusion. He would have done well to have skipped this too.

Notwithstanding his previous attempt to show that the British intermarry to a large extent with foreigners, he in his conclusion says:—"We are not a mongrel or hybrid race, for the Jutes, the Angles, the Saxons, the Danes and the Normans all belong to the same Teutonic stock and were our brethren, or at least our cousins."

Very good! In the main, he is quite correct, but as usual has to fall down in his following foolish and false history.

He says all the above-mentioned people belong to the same "Teutonic stock."

Just as there is no "Aryan race" and never was, there is no Teutonic stock or race and never was. It is a myth, the creation of modern historians, like the silly term "Nordic" which has no meaning when applied to a race, or races.

Apart from this fall down with the much-lauded and honoured mythical Teutons, what Mr. Forbes says in this connection is fairly correct and eminently sane. His strong point of reiteration is this: If we, the people of the British Isles, largely came from North Europe, we and the North Europeans came from the same or similar ancestors. Then it follows that if we are Israelites, those in Europe who came from the same parentage must also be of Israel stock.

Sure! True! Sane! Good logic! This I and others have long taught on the platform and in writing.

THE CRUCIFIXION OF CHRISTIANITY—IV

BY THE REV. JOHN BLACKET (OF AUSTRALIA).

THE HISTORIC FALL AND THE SCHEME OF HUMAN REDEMPTION.

THROUGHOUT Divine Revelation—from Genesis to the Book of Revelation—the Scheme of Human Redemption is based upon the Historic Fall. It is, so to speak, the starting-point of the whole redemptive scheme—a scheme extending over centuries of time, and yet all linked up in a marvellous way; an evolutionary process surpassing the creative genius of man. This is a most important point that the reader must bear in mind.

In his stirring and challenging address from the Chair of the Congregational Union, England (1929), widely circulated, the Rev. T. Rhondda Williams (in common with Modernists) advises his brethren to "drop the phrase" the "Fall of Man," affirming that "it would prevent confusion of thought if such were done."

We must keep before our minds the fact already mentioned—a fact that cannot in any satisfactory way be set aside—that the whole Biblical Scheme of Human Redemption is based upon the Historic Fall, and if we are at liberty to "drop the doctrine of the Biblical Fall" (as Mr. Williams and the Modernists suggest) what becomes of the Scheme of Human Redemption based upon it? It is baseless. Look for a moment at the Apostle Paul's references to the Fall in connection with the Scheme of Human Redemption. Space limitations will only admit of one or two quotations. Writing to the Romans, Paul says: "We joy in God, through our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom we have now received the Atonement . . . As by the offence of one, judgment came upon all men to condemnation, even so, by the righteousness of One, the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life; for as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of One shall many be made righteous" (Rom. v, 1-21). "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive" (1 Cor. xv, 22).

Behind the testimony of the Apostle Paul relative to the Scheme of Human Redemption and its basis is that of the Apostolic Church at Jerusalem. Paul went to Jerusalem, and for fifteen days was the guest of the Apostle Peter. What a splendid opportunity this was for securing information direct from Apostolic sources. After the lapse of fourteen years Paul again visited Jerusalem in the interests of the Gospel as preached by him among the Gentiles. He was anxious to know whether it was in complete harmony with the Apostolic record. Amongst those present on the occasion were James (President of the Apostolic Church) and the Apostles Peter and John. Paul says, "I laid before them the Gospel which I preach among the Gentiles . . . lest by any means I should be running, or had run, in vain" (Gal. ii, 2, R.V.). Evidently the Apostolic Church was satisfied with the Scheme of Redemption as preached by Paul, BASED UPON THE FALL. They gave to him the right hand of fellowship, and fully sanctioned his commission to carry the Gospel to the Gentiles.

Once more let us ask: If we throw overboard the Historic Fall, on the ground that it does not harmonize with the Theory of Evolution, how shall the New Testament Scheme of Human Redemption be saved?

It is the Historic Fall of Man, underlying the whole of Revelation, and the provision made for his recovery, that emphasizes the magnitude and the "exceeding sinfulness of sin"; but if (as Modernists tell us) "there was no Fall"—if (as some assume) the doctrine of the Fall is only a "Babylonian legend"—where does the turpitude—the "exceeding sinfulness of sin"—come in? It only becomes a mere phase in an evolutionary process. In the final analysis it becomes merely a naturalistic inheritance from the brute. Drop the tragic Historic Fall, as the Rev. T. Rhondda Williams advises us to do, with its consequences, and what need was there for the redemption of man at an infinite cost? Why should our Lord make provision for the "putting away of sin" by "THE SACRIFICE OF HIMSELF"? (Heb. ix, 26).

THE VIRGIN BIRTH.

I presume that Modernists deny the Virgin Birth as a stepping-stone to the denial of the Deity of our Lord. Dr. Horton, in attempting to justify some of the positions taken up by Modernists, deals with the Virgin Birth. In his published sermon, and communication to The Christian World (London), June 13th, 1929, he says: "St. Paul and St. John, the two principal authorities of the New Testament, make no reference to the Virgin Birth." "It is reasonable," he affirms, "to suppose that the idea of the Virgin Birth was a pious esoteric doctrine which found expression in the Gospels of Matthew and Luke."

Is this "extraordinary" assumption as "reasonable" as Dr. Horton assumes? In the first place it is based upon a most precarious argument—the argument from silence. The Gospel of John does not mention the Transfiguration; why not argue that it did not take place, and that Matthew, Mark and Luke were mistaken? The Books of Samuel do not mention the Sabbath; why not affirm that the Sabbath, in that period, was unknown?

The argument from silence is of little value. As neither Paul nor John dealt with the childhood of our Lord there was no need for them to mention the Virgin Birth. We have two independent records of that Birth. Luke affirms that his record was part of a statement of things "fully established" and attested by those who were "ministers of the Word." He is referring to Apostolic testimony. He states that "he had traced all things accurately from the first." Why does Dr. Horton apparently support the Modernists in their rejection of the Virgin Birth? If Luke cannot be trusted in his witness to this truth, why trust him in his account of the visit of the child Jesus to the Temple? St. John (as Dr. Horton states) does not mention the Virgin Birth, but it evidently was well known in the Asian school or circle who gathered around the Apostle John. Ignatius was one of these. He gives special prominence to the Virgin Birth—would this have been so if it had not been known to the Apostle John?—and it forms part of the Rule of Faith so tenaciously held and carefully guarded by the Apostolic Fathers. The statement of our Lord: "Ye are from beneath; I am from above: ye are of this world; I am not of this world" (John viii, 23) implies the Virgin Birth, and so does the sublime Christology of the Apostle Paul.

In his "monumental" work—"The Christian Doctrine of Sin"—Dr. Julius Müller (Professor of Theology in the University of Halle), eminent scholar and profound thinker, calls attention to "The Virgin Birth." Amongst other things he says: "We may understand how it was necessary that the Son of God, when He became incarnate, should not be born by ordinary generation. In order that His life might be human, He must be conceived, and developed, and born of a woman; but that it might be from its commencement sinless, a Divine act must supplant that human act on which the commencement of any new life ordinarily depends. The Gospel narrative of the Virgin Birth of Jesus exactly fulfils this dogmatic postulate, and the Christian Church has good reason to maintain firmly the expression of this truth in the early Creeds."

Here, too, let me quote the testimony of Professor Denny. In his splendid book, "Jesus and the Gospel," on page 404, he says: "It is not intended to dispute the Virgin Birth. Everything that we have seen of Christ in the course of our study, every impression that He has made on us of His solitary greatness, and of unique relations to God and man, is congruous with a unique presence and operation of God at His entrance into the world, and adds to its credibility."

THE DEITY OF OUR LORD.

The denial of the Virgin Birth must lead to a purely humanistic view of the Personality of our Lord. If He came into the world in the ordinary way, as John the Baptist, Martin Luther, and John Wesley came into the world, then, so far as the constitution of His nature is concerned, He is precisely on the same level as they. He was not "God manifest in the flesh," as St. Paul, the New Testament writers, and the Apostolic Fathers affirm. This is the position that the Modernists take up. In his address from the Chair of the Congregational Union, England, as reported by The Christian World (London), the Rev. T. Rhondda Williams says: "It is full time to avow that the divinity of Jesus was His superior goodness. His superior revelation was His superior goodness, love, truth, and grace." . . . "We have got to realize," Mr. Williams says, "that our traditional doctrines concerning Jesus, hammered out as they were in the Councils of Chalcedon and Nicea, cannot be made current coin in the intellectual world of to-day." Before we accept Mr. Williams' statement we must again go back prior to the Councils of Chalcedon and Nicea, and see what our Lord has to say for Himself, and what is the testimony of the Rule of Faith, as contained in the New Testament and writings of the Apostolic Fathers concerning Him.

Our Lord affirms that "He came from the Father." The statement implies His pre-existence. He came from the Father in a sense in which it cannot be said that we came from Him. "I came down from heaven," said Jesus, "not to do Mine own will, but the will of Him that sent Me." . . . "I am the living bread which came down from heaven: if any man eat of this bread, he shall live for ever" (John vi, 38, 51). No mere man could speak in this way. Our Lord drew a broad line of distinction between Himself and others. He did not regard Himself as one with His contemporaries. Said He: "Ye are from beneath; I am from above: ye are of this world; I am not of this world" (John viii, 23). He affirmed that He came from the Father; that no man knew the Father save the Son; that all men were to honour the Son even as they honoured the Father. He spoke of His oneness with the Father, and of the glory He had with the Father before the world was. "Before Abraham was," said He, "I am" (John viii, 58). Language like this, to say nothing of Apostolic testimony, puts a phase of our Lord's nature outside the range of humanity.

THE REV. J. ANDERSON WATT, M.A., ANSWERS THE "SCOTS OBSERVER."

THE Scots Observer had an article by the Rev. W. E. Gladstone Millar, M.C., B.D., on the subject, "We are Israel." It purports to be an answer to the "Manifesto" which has appeared in 30 newspapers and magazines. That Manifesto, issued by the British-Israel-World Federation, 6, Buckingham Gate, London, S.W.1, was an elaborate treatise occupying a full page and intended to draw the attention particularly of the Religious World to the Signs of the Times, the rapid drift and apostasy in these last days of all classes of the people, and the whole nation for that matter, from the faith once delivered to the saints. It pointed out "The Present Menace and How to Meet It."

The Rev. Mr. Millar took upon himself to reply to that Manifesto; but, instead of taking up the reasons and arguments discussed in it and giving the "orthodox" points of view in order to refute them, he gave them but a cursory ramble in which he endeavoured to hold them all up to ridicule. With his prejudiced proclivity to see only the ludicrous in what was manifestly a very wise, serious and scholarly statement of Biblical revelation, he squandered his abilities and his Christian charity in sketching it out in the exaggerated terms and lines of a caricature. In plain words, the Rev. Mr. Millar gave a long written denunciation of what he very obviously regards as some kind of religious bogey that has suddenly sprung up in his presence and threatening to frighten the life out of the traditional cult of which he is, no doubt, an ardent exponent.

But I defy the man-in-the-street who had not previously been privileged to see the Manifesto, and who may have read Mr. Millar's effusion, to be able to tell what the Rev. gentleman was driving at, except that it was, to all intents and purposes, an effort to render foolish what, as a matter of fact, is held as a special enlightenment by many of our esteemed fellow-Christians who see in the Celtic, Anglo-Saxon Race the lineal descendants of the Biblical Northern Nation of Israel. His intelligent readers, acquainted with the subject under assault, would easily discern that he was excitedly raving against some ghost or spectre, the nature of which he really was not quite aware of what exactly it was he was talking about.

It is one of the essential conditions of debate that the subject is one well-known and familiar to the opposing champions discussing it. The champion taking up the negative on this occasion gives himself egregiously away, and lets himself most heavily down, in pleading the "ignorance" of his opponent. Quite reasonably, however, the tables are turned and the credit for the ignorance placed to his own account.

Is there no prophecy in the Bible? Is there not a Kingdom of God in it? Is the Kingdom of God in the New Testament a different Kingdom of God from the Kingdom of God in the Old Testament? If so, where was the continuity broken? When, according to the prevailing teaching of the Church, did the Church seize and appropriate the promises to the Kingdom? And on whose authority does She claim and monopolize them? These promises cherished in the Old Testament Kingdom of Israel, and never since abrogated, are consistently cherished by the Kingdom of Israel continuing in New Testament times. Jesus, amongst other things, came to confirm the promises given unto the fathers Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and to say to the Jews who were the representatives of the Kingdom in our Lord's time: "The Kingdom of God shall be taken away from you and shall be given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." Was that true? Was it done? We all admit that the Kingdom of God was taken from the House of Judah. To which other nation was it given? To that nation which has since been bringing forth the fruits thereof. And where is it? Let honest dealing with the precious Word name at once that nation and stop scoffing at those who cannot do otherwise than point to our own great nation as Israel Redivivus and the Mother-Church of Christianity.

When will our preachers cease alienating their Church-members by ignoring this subject, dear to many of them? There is, perhaps, scarcely a congregation in which there are not some members and adherents who read their Bible prophetically and, hoping to learn from their Pastor more along that line, are sadly disappointed at the solemn silence of the pulpit. Some there are who love Israel Truth and desire to speak to their Minister on the subject, but daren't lest they bring down upon themselves the anathema of their spiritual teacher whom otherwise also they love. Others there are, again, who are so conversant with the prophetical utterances in the Bible, and are therefore far and away in that regard superior in their knowledge to that of their Minister that, failing to hear any explanations of them in Church, and being weary of the eternal philosophizing, spiritualizing, and platitudinizing of the Old Testament Scriptures on the Sundays, are reluctantly driven to absent themselves from Church, and either study and worship at home or join some Study Circle in which food for thinking Christians can be found and enjoyed and the soul nourished.

By A. R. H.

THERE is a certain type of educationist whose whole mental world is made up of inhibitions. "Do not do that and do not do this," is the form of injunction ever on their lips. Apparently they imagine that they can make assurance of obedience doubly sure by such prohibitive commands, whereas in practice such action invariably drives its victims to further lawlessness.

Highly civilized people simply cannot thrive upon such negative food. Civilized humanity must be led not driven.

The positive command "Do this" is inspiring and encouraging. A negative command seems to challenge a man's courage and sense of daring.

The command: "This is the way; walk ye in it," is constructive and preserves one's full sense of personal freedom. Such a command may be broken, but the command itself arouses no antagonism, and remains a perfect example of the law whether it is obeyed or not.

Fortunately in these latter days mankind is rapidly learning that obedience to law cannot be maintained by force, mental or physical. Law can only command obedience when it inspires willing consent in the mind and heart of the people.

LOVE is stronger than force. LIBERTY is more powerful than oppression. Nowhere is this lesson more strikingly recorded, antithetically, than in the constitution of the two great legal covenants, old and new.*

It is because of our faith in this new principle of life that we harbour no doubts or fears regarding the new constitution of the BRITISH EMPIRE. There can be no true unity without freedom. A free constitution is the only lasting basis upon which a great Empire can be built.

Human nature is a curious combination of contradictions. Men and nations enjoy alike a similar feeling. Whilst the nations of an Empire remain bound by legal bonds they never lose the desire to secure their liberty. Give the nations legal freedom and they remain within the larger unity by free consent.

ENGLAND learnt her first great lesson in political freedom as a result of the LOSS OF THE AMERICAN COLONIES.

When her other Colonies attained majority, ENGLAND had the wisdom, instantly, to grant them a dominion status.

We cannot see the smallest justification for the view that the dominion status represents a weakening of the unity of EMPIRE. Dominion status has immeasurably strengthened Imperial unity. For the EMPIRE is no longer held together by outward bonds of physical force but by inward bands of spiritual power.

Each DOMINION is free. And FREE DOMINIONS have nothing to gain but everything to lose in severing their association with the COMMONWEALTH.

Furthermore, like all the greatest crises and turning-points in British history, this creation of a new constitution was definitely an act of GOD.

This is confirmed (indirectly and unintentionally) by Dibelius in his statement that: "The inspired enthusiasm of the British Press which hailed this new constitution as can deceive no one who recalls that for thirty or forty years the British Government's efforts have all been directed to the exactly opposite result."

This is the human way of looking at it. But as we have constantly stressed in previous articles, the history of the BRITISH COMMONWEALTH as a whole is a signal demonstration of the manner in which (under the guiding hand of GOD) the will and spirit of a PEOPLE can defeat the calculations of statesmanship.

If we are an EMPIRE malgre nous—in spite of ourselves—we are no less an EMPIRE, "in spite of" our governments and officially appointed national leaders.

In the Divine plan,

A TEMPORARY SEPARATION

between the MOTHER COUNTRY and the AMERICAN COLONIES was indicated. In due time this severance was carried out and the calculations of British statesmanship once more defeated.

"The children which thou shalt have, after thou hast shall say again in thine ears, The place is too strait for me: give place to me that I may dwell," records ISAIAH, with true spiritual prevision, in his message to ISRAEL in the ISLES.†

LOST THE OTHER

The secular historian, John Richard Green, of this epoch-making separation, writes: "ENGLAND was, from that hour, a Mother of Nations. In AMERICA she had begotten a great people."

Thus ENGLAND, as MOTHER of NATIONS, brought forth the COMPANY of NATIONS of Genesis xxxv, 11, and the GREAT PEOPLE of Genesis xlviii, 19.

It was in 1918 that the nations, of which ENGLAND is Mother, attained their majority. "At the Versailles Conference," writes Dibelius, "Anglo-Saxon world dominion appeared in the shape of a loose confederation of ANGLO-SAXON STATES. They acted together in negotiation, but each signed separately, and each entered the League of Nations as an independent member. The new Imperial Conference in LONDON, in December, 1926, gave to the EMPIRE a kind of new constitution in which all the new centrifugal tendencies of modern times culminate. That the relations of the Dominions with LONDON will be in future, like those of other States, conducted through diplomatic representatives, is the visible and external signal of the fact that the EMPIRE is in into a UNION of BRITISH STATES or BRITISH COMMONWEALTH of NATIONS under the nominal headship of a common monarch."

What is to be the next great stage in the evolution of this remarkable political phenomenon? Are authorities like Professor Alison Phillips indulging in idle fancy when they talk of "a temporary separation" between the UNITED STATES and the BRITISH COMMONWEALTH? Is there a place for other than ANGLO-SAXON NATIONS within the ambit of the BRITISH COMMONWEALTH?

To these questions Scriptural prophecy gives a clear and stirring answer. Dibelius is working without the light of

* Cf. Leviticus xxvi and Jer. xxxi.

† Isa. xlix, 20.

Digitized by Google

Scriptural prophecy, but nevertheless he tackles the great problem boldly.

Regarding the two great divisions of ANGLO-SAXONDOM, he makes the following statement: "National similarity between the two has grown stronger, and is gradually becoming conscious. The more keenly ENGLAND feels about her own colonization, the more she must admire the vast colonial achievement of her sister nation.

"Dilke's book, already referred to‡, is so completely under the influence of the new current of ideas that the hardly seem to count, in comparison with the points of contact. ENGLAND and the UNITED STATES are, here, two daughters of one house; which of them wears the crown is a matter of indifference. In 1902, the pacifist, William Stead, wrote a book with a wide circulation, whose main idea was that the UNION of ENGLAND and AMERICA was the great task of the twentieth century."

Again, Dibelius reminds us that after the war, "Large bodies of opinion on both sides of the Atlantic were favourable to the continuation of the war-time alliance in the form of aiming at Anglo-Saxon world supremacy, despite the widespread dislike in the UNITED STATES to any European entanglements. To this end, BRITAIN made very great sacrifices."

This is as far as Dibelius takes us in his historical survey this development. And he omits to mention the remarkable fact that whilst the constitution of the BRITISH COMMONWEALTH is so designed that any and every nation can freely join it without loss of individual prestige or power, the constitution of the UNITED STATES is such that before a foreign nation could join the States the American constitution itself would have to be changed.

But Dibelius' vision expands as he looks into the future. "There is further a certain hope that outstanding British statesmen may yet achieve unforeseen political results, through the very freedom and looseness of the new form of the BRITISH COMMONWEALTH, such as it is impossible even to estimate at the present hour. The Dominions are to be independent in foreign policy, but all of them, thanks to their education and speech, are bound to look upon what happens in the world with English eyes, while every Colony contains influential groups whose minds are consciously set to carry on their policy along English lines.

"Is the picture really so different when we turn to the UNITED STATES? Is it not possible to hope that, on the basis of complete independence of detail, but the pursuance of common aims in most larger questions, AMERICA, too, may be brought into a kind of in spite of all tendencies that are pointing in the opposite direction?"

This is a daring suggestion for a foreigner to make although the question has often enough been raised in British-Israel circles. But Dibelius does not rest here. He catches glimpse of an even wider vision: "And may not patriotic optimism even look farther still? Under the British flag, Dutchmen and Frenchmen enjoy complete autonomy. Hindus and Mohammedans will in all probability soon achieve the same: Jews and Arabs possibly likewise.

"Is it not possible that an EMPIRE of this character, which while compelling none influences all, and gives to those within it the guarantee of complete peace, may exert a certain attractive force over other nations? Is the hope quite excluded that one day may stand over against the League of Nations in Geneva?"

A BRITISH LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Here Dibelius catches a sure glimpse of the coming universal KINGDOM. But we do not like his reference to patriotic optimism. Patriotism is good. But Patriotism is not enough. National patriotisms and loyalties will have to be raised on to a new level before the merging of other nations into the BRITISH COMMONWEALTH becomes a practical possibility. National loyalty must be transformed into Kingdom-loyalty.

Other nations (the U.S.A. not excluded) would hardly feel disposed to enter an ALL-BRITISH CONFEDERATION whilst the term "British" retains its old, narrow, national significance. But they will not object when the word is revealed in its new and true significance.

Brith-ish means Covenant man or Man of the covenant. People of every race, nation, colour and creed can take upon themselves the name of "Brith-ish" without losing the smallest part of their individual nationality or chanacter The name "Brith-ish" simply denotes their association in a wider unity; their association with and in the KINGDOM.

Our individual nationality may be English, Scotch, Welsh, Irish, Canadian, Australian, French, German, Spanish or Dutch, but as citizens of the Coming Universal Kingdom we take the extra Kingdom-title—Brith-ish.

The KINGDOM-EMPIRE is of such a character that it can hold together in unity people of every nation under heaven. A nation loses nothing of its individuality, character, culture, language, nationality or civilization by entering the KINGDOM CONFEDERATION. Each nation is free, independent, and autonomous. Each nation brings its own peculiar glor intoy the KINGDOM. The KINGDOM-EMPIRE is a larger unity which compels none but influences all. The one and only centre and source of unity is a common allegiance to the CROWN or THRONE of DAVID.

Other nations (the U.S.A. not excepted) might well hesitate to acknowledge this allegiance whilst they imagined it meant allegiance to a British Throne in the usual narrow, national sense of the title. But they will hardly find objection when they realize that the British Throne is the Throne of DAVID.

The CROWN is above the King. The King is the visible, the CROWN the invisible symbol, of national unity.

The earthly representative of the CROWN or THRONE may change but the CROWN remains for ever. And in looking to the throne as the centre and source of our national unity we must never lose sight of the Great Invisible King—Whom the earthly representative represents.

CHRIST is King. And in Him all nationality is transcended. Individually we surrender nothing of our individuality or personality in swearing our allegiance to the King of kings. In Him our individuality reaches its supreme development. In Him our personality is glorified.

Even so with nations entering the KINGDOM. That which is best and greatest in the peculiar contribution of each nation toward culture and civilization will attain its highest possible development.

"All for one and one for all" will be the motto of the new humanity. Nationalism and Internationalism will be made one. The peculiar contribution of each will become the treasured possession of the COMMONWEAL.

(To be continued.)

[NOTE.—On page 82 of his book, "England," Dibelius writes: "In 1868 appeared Charles Dilke's 'Greater Britain,' which may be said to have given a programme to the younger men of its day. It describes the Colonies, their scenery, their economic and political problems, and sets out a great plan of future Anglo-Saxon dominion over the world. England is to acquire Asia and Africa, and parts of South America, and seize the land bridges between itself and India. If the Colonies should become independent, the Triple Alliance of Britain, the Colonies, and the United States, a union of the Anglo-Saxon Race, will dominate the world and bring about its salvation. In this book, English Imperialism, militant and aggressive, but with a great programme of universal civilization, presents itself to the world of the non-elect. The same line of thought, deepened and more enlightened, appears in the two books, 'The Expansion of England' (1883) and 'The Growth of British Policy' (1895), in which a Cambridge historian, John Robert Seely, set the rise of the British Empire before his contemporaries as the embodiment of British efficiency."]

SAINT ANDREW, PATRON SAINT OF SCOTLAND.

BY THE REV. ALBAN HEATH (SOUTH AFRICA).

THOSE who classify the human race as "Jews" and "Gentiles" may find some difficulty in explaining why "Gentile" Scotland adopted the "Jew" Andrew as its Patron Saint. According to tradition, somewhere about 740 A.D. Andrew was adopted by the Scots as their Patron Saint owing to the belief that St. Regulus had brought one of his arms to the town that now bears his name. Even if we admit the improbable story that a human limb had been carried from Patrae in Achaia, where Andrew seems to have met his death, to Scotland, that hardly seems sufficient reason for his adoption as Patron Saint. It should be borne in mind that Andrew was the Patron Saint of Russia also, and that seems to point to some association of the two peoples with the Apostle in some way at some time.

We are singularly rich in traditions of St. Andrew. Ethiopic, Syriac and Anglo-Saxon peoples all have legends concerning him. Like the modern Scot, the wanderlust was in his blood, and he is said to have preached the Gospel in Scythia, Thrace, Asia Minor and Greece. I am inclined to think research should turn on his work in Scythia if we are to find an explanation of his adoption by the Scots. It is now well-established that in their migrations the Israelites settled for a time in Scythia. Remembering, perhaps, his Lord's injunction Andrew preached to the lost tribes in that area. The Venerable Bede, writing in the 7th to 8th centuries A.D., says:—"At first this Island (England) had no other inhabitants but the Britons, from whom it derived its name, and who, coming to Britain, it is reported, from Armorica, possessed themselves of the southern parts thereof. When they, beginning at the South, had made themselves masters of the greatest part of the Island, it happened that the nation of the Picts, from Scythia, it is reported, came" etc. He then traces the movements of the Picts to Ireland and finally to Scotland. (Eccles. Hist., Chapter II.)

In the first chapter of the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, part of which, at any rate, was written by Bede, we are told again, "The first inhabitants of this land were Britons; they came from Armenia and first settled in the south of Britain. Then befel it that the Picts came from the south from Scythia," etc. In both the History and in the Chronicle it is said the Picts, who appear to have left their women behind, "Obtained wives for themselves of the Scots, on this condition, that they should always choose their royal lineage on the woman's side."

From this brief study two facts emerge. Andrew preached the Gospel to the Scuths in Scythia. Some of the Scuths settled in Scotland and were absorbed by the Scots. It is not stretching probabilities to assume that the Scuths in the 6th century retained national memories of Andrew and his work in the first. This probability is strengthened by the fact that the legends of St. Andrew contain striking and even impossible stories of such a nature as to remain in the racial mind by virtue of their extravagance.

So far I have found no satisfactory derivation of the name Scot. The Oxford Dictionary leaves the problem unsolved. I have not seen the question discussed, but I submit the possibility that "Scot" coming from "Scuth" is not too remote for credence. If any B.-I. student can throw light on this I shall be pleased. Even admitting the Scots adopted Andrew as their Patron Saint as late as 740, it seems to me there is a traceable connection between the preaching of Andrew in Scythia in the first century and his adoption by the Scotch in the eighth.

WELL DONE, BRITISH COLUMBIA!

WE are too modest as a nation.

This is the reasoned opinion of the Hon. Joshua Hinchliffe, Minister of Education in the Government of British Columbia, and stout defender of British institutions and British traditions.

Mr. Hinchliffe, who has been revisiting his old home in Yorkshire, is seriously perturbed by the infiltration of American ideals into Canada.

The young Canadian does not hear enough about the achievements of the British race.

Mr. Hinchliffe is doing his bit, in his official capacity, to give us the pat on the back we refuse to give ourselves.

Recently he set an examination for all the school children of British Columbia. He asked them to name in order of merit the races which have done most in modern inventions, scientific research, industrial processes, and the development of character. In no case were the British at the head of the list. In the bulk of the papers Americans were at the top of all four sub-divisions.

Digitized by Google

Wishing to discover the mental process by which the children arrived at this result, Mr. Hinchliffe asked the leading pupils: "Don't you think the British have achieved something?"

The answer is illuminating: "Probably they have, but we have never heard about it."

Mr. Hinchliffe is a man of action. He examined the Canadian school-books and found them wanting. The problems in the standard arithmetic were based on American illustrations. Those fascinating express trains, which set out from different points at different speeds and meet at X, departed from San Francisco and New York, and not from London and Liverpool nor even from Vancouver and Montreal.

Mr. Hinchliffe scrapped the arithmetic book and ordered a new one, which is now ready. One of the problems it contains runs as follows:—

"The British airmen Alcock and Brown flew the Atlantic on June 15, 1919. The American airman Lindbergh flew the Atlantic on May 21, 1927. State how many years and days the American crossed the Atlantic after the British."

Mr. Hinchliffe has earned merit. The Canadian school children had never heard of Alcock and Brown, but every detail of Lindbergh's private life is known to them.—From the Evening Standard.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

By the Rev. G. H. Lancaster, M.A.

QUESTION.—I should be glad of an answer to the following question:—Is it correct to say that the stone slabs at Stonehenge prove that they offered human sacrifices, and therefore that they were worshippers of idols? Was not the worship of the Druids a pure worship, as indicated in the book, "Our Great Heritage"?

ANSWER.—(1) Cæsar is the first of the classical writers to give us the most circumstantial account of the Druids. Druidism is the name usually given to the religious system of the ancient inhabitants of Gaul and the British Islands. The word Druid (Latin, druida) on its Irish analogy possibly means "very wise, knowing." Julius Cæsar suggests that the Druids constituted the learned and the priestly class, and that they were, in addition, the chief expounders and guardians of the law. This is supplemented by Diodorus Siculus and Strabo with the information that this class was composed of Druids, bards and soothsayers. Cæsar says that on those who refused to submit to their decisions they had the power to inflict severe penalties, of which excommunication from society was the most dreaded. As they were not an hereditary caste and enjoyed exemption from service in the field as well as from payment of taxes, admission to the order was greatly sought after by the youth of Gaul. The course of training for a novice was protracted, extending sometimes over twenty years. Instruction was always communicated orally, whereas for ordinary purposes they had a written language in which Greek characters were used. The president of the order, whose office was elective, and who enjoyed the dignity for life, had supreme authority among them. They taught that the soul was immortal, while amongst their favourite studies were astrology, geography, physical science and natural theology.

Britain was the headquarters of Druidism, but once every year a general assembly of the order was held within the territories of the Carnutes in Gaul. The Gauls were accustomed to offer human sacrifices, usually criminals. Cicero remarks upon the existence among the Gauls of augurs or soothsayers, known by the name of Druids, one of whom, Diviaticus, was known to him. Diodorus informs us that a sacrifice acceptable to the gods must be attended by a Druid, for they are the intermediaries. The Druids are said to have had a firm belief in the immortality of the soul and in metempsychosis. Augustus forbade Roman citizens to practise Druidical rites, while under Tiberius the Druids were suppressed by a decree of the Senate, which was renewed by Claudius in A.D. 54. Pliny says that their activity was limited to the practice of medicine and sorcery, and that, holding the mistletoe in the highest veneration, the Druids selected groves of oak for their chosen retreat.

(2) The monoliths at Stonehenge must be studied in the light of the many hundreds of similar stone monuments to be found all over the British Isles, France (where over 3,000 examples have been recorded), Scandinavia, Germany, Holland, Spain, Portugal, North Africa, Palestine, Arabia, Persia, Australia, Madagascar, Peru, etc. The Dolmen nearest to London perhaps is the famous Kit's Coty House, at Aylesford in Kent, situated between Rochester and Maidstone, which is well worth a visit.

The natural question is always asked, "Why were they erected in pre-historic times, and to what purpose?" While the scattered positions of some monoliths suggest that they were sometimes used as landmarks, or perhaps as places of rendezvous for hunters, the singular grouping of others shows that these were only secondary or subsidiary functions. Generally it may be stated that rude monoliths were set on end through all ages for a variety of commemorative purposes, such as the accession of kings and chiefs, or to mark the site of a battle, a grave, or a boundary line. In Scotland, when stones were used ceremonially in the act of crowning a king, they were called tanist stones, the most celebrated of which being the Lia Fail, or "Coronation Stone," now in Westminster Abbey. When menhirs were grouped together their number was often significant, e.g., twelve (Josh. iv, 5), or seven (Herodotus iii, 8). That most of the smaller circles have been used as sepulchres has been repeatedly proved by actual excavations, which showed that interments had taken place within their areas. It is difficult, however, to believe that this could have been the main object of the larger ones, to which there must frequently have been attached a religious significance.

Against the theory that any of these primitive stone monuments were ever used as altars (for sacrifice, human or otherwise) there is the prima facie evidence in the care taken to have the smoothest and flattest surface of the stones composing the chambers always turned inwards. Further, cup marks and other primitive markings, when found on capstones, are almost invariably on their underside, which would prevent the possibility of their being intended for blood and sacrificial purposes.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

WE remind our readers of the opening of the Autumn session at Headquarters, 6, Buckingham Gate, S.W., on Wednesday afternoon next, September 10th, at 3 o'clock, when the address will be given by the Rev. Maxwell Carnson, who will also speak at the meeting on the following evening (Thursday), at 7.30. Teas have been resumed, and are now served in the Reception Room from 4 to 5.30 p.m.

Miss Alexander resumes the Bible Study classes for women at Headquarters on Saturday afternoon, September 6th, at 3 o'clock.

We are now within a month of the British-Israel Congress, in the Central Hall, Westminster, and we renew our appeal for donations towards the heavy expenses thereof, and for help in the circulation of the printed matter announcing the meetings. We are grateful for donations and for offers of help already received. "God loveth a cheerful giver"; yes, and a zealous worker in His Cause. The reward is assured. Let us remember that the Lord expects from His Israel generosity, self-sacrifice, active service and constant witnessing. The present is not a period for wasting energies, time or resources on trifles. Every ounce of weight is needed for the long pull and the strong pull we have to make. Enemies are both without and within Israel's walls. The greatest enemy of all is Satan, and he is especially dangerous when he appears as an angel of light, either in person or through an unsuspecting dupe.

Beware of any semblance of division, or temptation to procrastination.

Morning sessions for delegates from our Branches will be held at 11.15, at Headquarters, from October 7th to 11th, inclusive.

* * *

Following the precedent of last year, our Clerical and Ministerial Association will meet in Conference in the forenoons of the first three days of the Congress—October 6th, 7th and 8th, at 11 o'clock, at Headquarters. Clergymen of the Anglican Church and Ministers of the Nonconformist Churches who would like invitations to attend are asked to send us their names.

The railway authorities have again courteously granted us concessions for all who are travelling to London for the Congress. Vouchers for these cheap fares signed by the Secretary-General will gladly be sent to all who make application for them. These vouchers must be presented to the booking clerk at the station where the journey is started. Travellers may come to London by any train on any day from October 4th onwards; the return journey may be made any day from October 6th to October 20th. Those who live near enough to London, and who wish to return to their homes daily, can be supplied with as many vouchers as they require for the period named.

It must be understood that no money must be sent to us for railway tickets. Payment can only be made at the station where the journey is commenced. We mention this because in the past some of our friends have assumed that we can secure them tickets if they send us money for same. WE CANNOT; we can only send them vouchers entitling them to cheap fares.

We would again remind our readers of the necessity for earnest prayer that the Congress may attain the object we have set before us, namely, a National Spiritual Revival. For those who are unable to attend the Congress gatherings, we suggest that Secretaries of Branches should arrange for a continuous circle of prayer during the whole period of the meetings.

Through the zeal and generosity of Colonel Jarrett-Kerr, of the Indian Army, our Manifesto has appeared in the Times of India, and evidently impressed by its importance that journal has published it a second time on its own account. A journal in Calcutta has also published the Manifesto of its own accord, and we are now receiving enquiries from many parts of India.

As the result of the publication in the Times Weekly and the Landmark, and other journals which circulate in distant parts of the world, we are now getting letters of appreciation and enquiry from Japan, Australia, New Zealand, Tasmania, India, Malaya, and the West Coasts of South America, United States and Canada.

The Rev. Dr. Goard and Professor Odlum are broadcasting addresses from Vancouver, and these, it is estimated, are reaching millions of listeners in Canada and U.S.A. Arrangements have been made by our friends for B.-I. Radio addresses of one hour each by various speakers every Sunday for one year.

* * *

The Secretary-General has had the privilege of a long interview with a Bishop who came to England for the Lambeth Conference, and who wished for full information concerning B.-I. teaching. He showed keen interest and expressed his sympathy, and gladly accepted a good parcel of our literature. He had previously only heard of B.-I. in a casual way.

* * *

Mr. George R. Gair asks us to say that at the end of his article on page 537 of our issue of August 23rd the two words "and Iberians" should be deleted. The article should have ended with the word "Nordics."

The Annual Report of our Walsall Branch sent us by Mr. Chas. Lavender shows the year to have been one of good progress, with increased attendance at regular meetings. By means of special efforts some 1,500 people were reached who had not previously attended B.-I. meetings. The speakers during the year included the Revs. G. W. Plasting, E. A.

On the literature and financial sides of the work there is much to be thankful for. The Report closes with the statement that the present membership is the largest total yet recorded, and that B.-I. Truth is making rapid strides in various parts of the country.

Mr. W. A. Jordan, President of the Blackheath Branch, writes that a meeting was held in ideal surroundings on the lawn of the Y.W.C.A. on August 28th, and that the Rev. Joseph Gay's address on "From Israel in Egypt to Britain" was much appreciated by a large audience.

A well-known resident of Woolwich spoke at the close of the meeting, and mentioned that he had a letter from a relative in Toronto telling of a remarkable lecture by Mr. Gay in that city which he was privileged to hear.

The book is published by Messrs. Jarrold and Sons, under the auspices of the "Friends of the Cathedral Church of Norwich"; it is printed in beautiful Garamond type, and it has a number of illustrations, including figures of St. Felix, the first Bishop. The history of the Diocese is written by Canon Kendall, and that of the Cathedral by the Dean. The price is 2s. 6d., by post 2s. 9d. There are said to be 1,800,000 square miles of forests within the British Empire, an area equal to the whole of India, and of this vast wooded territory one quarter is in tropical regions. These forests form one of the Empire's most important undeveloped assets, industry being so dependent on timber. The Colonial Office is developing a Unified Colonial Forest Service, which will provide qualified experts from the Imperial Forestry Institute at Oxford, to train specialists in all branches of Colonial Forestry. About 160 of these specialists have been sent out by the Institute since it was established in 1924.

Canada's latest, and perhaps greatest, engineering feat is complete, and Monday, September 1st—Labour Day and a holiday throughout the Dominion—saw the formal opening of the new Welland Canal.

The Welland way from West to East has been a principal link of communication for the past hundred years, and the new construction is the last of many structural improvements which have been made, under various Governments, to cope with the increased traffic from the rich Prairie Provinces to the St. Lawrence with its Atlantic outlet.

The new waterway runs across the Niagara Peninsula, about ten miles west of Niagara Falls, connects Lakes Erie and Ontario and overcomes a difference of over 325 feet in level. The 25 mile length of the canal has seven locks of a uniform lift of 46½ feet, and the culverts have been so constructed that a lockchamber can be filled or emptied in eight minutes, thus enabling a loaded vessel to pass through the new canal in eight hours—a little more than half the shortest time previously taken.

The whole achievement, which has cost the Government something in the neighbourhood of £24,000,000, is one of the most remarkable in modern engineering, and has involved reclamation, bridge building, electrification, terminal construction, and a host of other big enterprises, and stands as yet another monument to Canadian industry and skill and the Dominion's faith in her industrial future.—Morning Post.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

THE AUTHORITY OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

BY THE REV. DR. W. PASCOE GOARD.

RECENTLY it was our privilege to listen to a finely-reasoned sermon from a devoted scholarly Minister. The sermon was one of a series on "Truth." "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free" was the theme presented first of all. Then came a sermon on the text, "Who hath bewitched you, that ye should not obey the truth." The speaker analysed the word "bewitched," pointing out that it is only used once in the New Testament. It was striking and suggestive.

Then arose the question of authority as to the truth. St. Paul had preached the truth to the Galatians. Then there had come certain unauthorized teachers from Jerusalem who had evidently "bewitched" the Galatians, so that they turned away from the truth, and became obedient to error. This raised the question of authority.

The speaker gave a rapid sketch of the authorities in hand in the Apostolic Church, and showed that their Scriptures consisted of the Old Testament. Their further authority was vested first in Christ; then in the Apostles. Written New Testament authority came later. Not till the seventh century did the Church finally settle on the Canon of the New Testament. Not till then did the Church finally decide on what should be, and what were not, Canonical books.

We agree that the Scriptures in hand in the Apostolic days, which were accepted as beyond question authoritative by both Jew, Israelite and Christian, were the Old Testament Scriptures. The "Seventy" translated the Hebrew Scriptures into the Greek and assembled the Canon of the Old Testament. Our Lord did not question the Old Testament, but ratified it. The Apostles did not question, but accepted and quoted it constantly, as proof of their doctrines and historical statements. The Apostolic Church did not question it, but accepted it as the Divinely-given authority in doctrine, in history, and in prophecy. So the Old Testament stands as the recognized basic authority of the Church of Christ to-day.

The Priests of the Orders of Aaron and of Levi had the original documents in hand, preserved in the Temple. The "Seventy" used them to make their translation, which was ratified and accepted. The Massorah notes tended to fix and lock the text possessed at the time, in the exact form in which it was then possessed, so that change or interlineation or omission was rendered almost impossible.

Modern scholars have no such treasures of "original" documents as were then possessed, and have not the benefit of speaking the living Hebrew language in which the originals were written.

These ancient masters of Hebrew literature fixed for all time the form of the Old Testament Scriptures as they possessed them, and our Lord and the Apostles, and the Apostolic Church, accepted them and passed on their authority, incorporating it into their personal teachings and into the writings which became the New Testament.

So we are justified in accepting the basic authority of the Old Testament, for nothing has happened since to change its status. All the New Testament must be read in the light of the Old Testament.

Next we come to the authoritative teachings of Jesus Christ our Lord. These constituted the authority of the Apostles for the New Departures in fact and doctrine contained in the New Testament. Nothing could be more vivid and clear than the writings of the four Evangelists. The Apostles and the Apostolic Church accepted them, and they had the testing of the living witnesses who had attended the ministry and teaching of our Lord.

When our Lord finished His ministry He vested His Gospel in the personalities of His Apostles. The written Word was then already in hand, handed down from the preceding ages. This Jesus passed on. He did in His day exactly what the Reformation did in our day. He recovered the direct Scriptures from under the burden of Talmudic commentaries and interpretations with which the Jews had replaced them in the minds of the people. He ignored Targum and Talmud as though they had no existence. He made His appeal to the literal words of the Holy Book, took them at their face value, and accepted from them their obvious meaning. Having thus recovered, and made His disciples familiar with, the Old Testament, He further enshrined His doctrines in the personality of the Apostles. He left no scrap of writing in His own hand.

In thus committing His Gospel to the personal care of His disciples, who by that fact became His Apostles, it is manifest that He expected them to speak with ultimate authority on the Gospel He had invested in them. Thus the Apostles gathered the Church around them, and to the Church the Apostles were "living epistles known and read of all men." Their instruction was completed, and their Gospel ratified by the Holy Ghost. So in addition to the writings of the Old Testament, we see the New Testament Gospel orally held and taught by the Apostles. This was the position of the Word of God immediately after the Ascension of our Lord, and it was exactly as He designed it to be.

Next came the putting of the Message into writing. The four Evangelists undertook the task of writing the life of their Master, and they gave to us the fourfold Gospel. Together it constitutes a masterpiece of history.

What the Books of Chronicles are to the Old Testament, that the Acts of the Apostles is to the New Testament.

Now come the Epistles. There is a disposition to date the Epistles as a late development. One should beware of trying such an experiment with any kind of writing. Accidental colourings are always caught in the background of such writings which will bring to confusion the scholar who attempts to do such a thing.

Take the Apostle Paul's writings. There are purely accidental details in the writings which show the period, sometimes even the very year, which saw the production of the writing. For instance, we know that the Epistle to the Romans was written before the first missionary had been sent to Israel in captivity. "How shall they believe on him of whom they have not heard. How shall they hear without a preacher, and how shall they preach except they be sent?" exclaims the Apostle Paul. It is manifest that he was not concerned with weaving the date of his Epistle into the writing. But he did so nevertheless.

Further, the Epistle to the Strangers at Rome was written before the Apostle Paul had made his first visit to Rome. So the time indications accidentally woven into the text of the writings go on.

The Epistle to the Corinthians was written to meet a condition then, in the Apostle's day, obtaining in the Church at Corinth. They had adopted the doctrine of Antinomianism. Being under Grace they esteemed themselves to be free from Law, and so gave licence to all manner of self-indulgence. They went into grossnesses repugnant even to the heathen world of that day. There was one flagrant case of incest. Against such licence the Apostle wrote in tones of thunder. Against that particular offender the Apostle pronounced sentence of physical death, to be formally passed by the Church assembled.

The receipt of that Epistle was a thunderbolt for the Church at Corinth. Never questioning Apostolic authority, they accepted the Epistle and the doctrine it contained. Instead of meeting to condemn the sinner, they met in repentance, sorrow and horror at the transgressions into which they had run. They changed their doctrine and amended their practice.

The second Epistle to the Corinthians notes the new attitude and practice of the Church, the repentance and amendment of the condemned sinner, and proceeds to reverse the sentence of death, to commend the changed attitude of the Church, and to confirm love to the repentant sinner.

These things in the history of the Church at Corinth in the lifetime of the Apostle fix the date of the Epistles.

The Epistle to the Galatians was written also to meet the ritualistic onslaught which was made upon the Church by unauthorized Judaizers from Jerusalem. This was a matter which took place in the life activity of the Apostle Paul and, because the Epistle was a vital factor in that historic movement, it could not be post-dated.

The first and second Epistle to the Thessalonians is another case in point. The first Epistle was received by the Thessalonians and was by them misunderstood in part. Therefore the Apostle Paul wrote the second Epistle to correct their interpretation of the first. This fact settles the reception of the Epistle in the days of the Apostle Paul; and the further fact that the Epistles were vital acts and parts of his Apostolic ministry puts the matter beyond dispute.

In the first Epistle of Peter, the Apostle makes affidavit—so to speak—that he, the author, was a witness of the sufferings of Christ. "The Elders which are among you I exhort, who am also an elder, and a witness of the sufferings of Christ . . ." This is such a testimony as no man writing in St. Peter's name at a later date would dream of making. It is a testimony in the first person that the writer was "a witness of the sufferings of Christ," and therefore contemporary with Christ.

In the second Epistle we find the following, accidentally woven into the text of the Epistle, "Yea, I think it meet, as long as I am in this tabernacle, to stir you up by putting you in remembrance: knowing that shortly I must put off this my tabernacle, even as our Lord Jesus Christ hath shewed me." The reference here is to the statement of our Lord, "When thou shalt be old, another shall gird thee and carry thee whither thou wouldest not."

So we see that this general Epistle was sent forth in the Apostolic days. The first went, was received, and had its influence; and the second followed, bearing reference to the fact that it was a second Epistle to the same people, namely, the strangers scattered abroad, or, as St. James has it, "to the twelve tribes scattered abroad."

Digitized by Google

The Church received and acted on these Epistles in the days of the Apostles. The authority behind the Epistles was Apostolic and personal, as the Lord intended it should be.

AN EXAMINATION OF MR. AVARY H. FORBES' "STONE WALL."

(Letter No. 10.)

By Professor Edward Odlum, M.A., B.Sc.

48*th.*—Here we come to a matter of very great proportions. While all Israel, as well as Judah, were and are under covenant blessings, and while all the seed of Abraham are under limited or unlimited covenant blessings, the great and numerous national promises were given to the Israel Kingdom, ruled over by the seed of David. And this Kingdom of Davidic rule carries many definite prophetic marks.

Bear in mind there is only one Israel Kingdom of promise, and it is not the Israel Kingdom of Davidic and following days in Palestine of old. It is the Israel Kingdom in the prepared place of the then future, the then of David's day.

In our search for the Israel Kingdom of these days, we need not turn to Palestine, for the Lord told David the "prepared place" was so situated that they would have to move to reach it.

We naturally look to some other part of the world to locate that place from which Israel was not to move and where they were to be safe from enemy persecution "as aforetime."

Hence, for many reasons, we do not look to Persia, China or the other Asiatic peoples. It is natural to pass over Africa in our search for the "prepared place" and heart of the Divinely-appointed official Kingdom.

Naturally, we turn to Europe and the British Isles in our search, and in our examination we necessarily keep in mind certain well-defined marks.

When a boy on the farm, I often went into the woods and pasture lands to seek the cows. In such search I did not look for animals clothed in wool, or in pigs' bristles, or quadrupeds with hoofs and without horns. And even when I confined my search to the cattle or cow animals, I had to eliminate certain colours, sizes and other characteristics. For instance, one of our cows was red and she had only one horn. Therefore, a red cow with two horns was eliminated. The other cow was black, and hence a white cow did not appeal to me in my examination of the various cattle mixed together in the pasture lands.

We learn in the Book that Israel was to be a perpetual Kingdom under the seed of David. Therefore in these days of the enduring prophecy we eliminate all countries in and out of Europe that are not kingdoms. Even if they be of Israel origin in whole or in part, and are not a kingdom, they cannot be the Divinely-appointed official Kingdom of prophecy.

For instance, how could Russia or Germany lay claim to be the Israel of promise? Impossible, since they are not kingdoms, and are not under the rule of any king of the Davidic or any other line.

Hence, Mr. Forbes, even if your beloved highly civilized and up-to-date cultured German Prussian be of Israel ancestry, he is not and cannot be the promised Israel Kingdom. The same remark applies to present brutal diabolized Russia.

If we look over Europe, this kingdom requirement will eliminate at sight several of the other nations, even if they should be containers of Israel in part. This process is like my boyhood plan of eliminating the red cow with two horns, and the white cow with or without horns.

Israel with Judah was to lend to the nations, goyim, and not borrow from any.

Look at the kingdom nations of Europe. As above said, we need not further look at the non-kingdom nations, for they are eliminated already.

Let us go afield somewhat at this point. In the distance my young eyes could see two red cows, and then I made my selection on approaching more closely as to detect the difference in horns. One had two and the other had one. The two-horned animal was eliminated.

By this means we look more closely into the nations of Europe which are kingdoms.

Take Denmark or Norway or Sweden where their, and many of our, ancestors lived. Here are three kingdoms. Can any one of these be the official prophetic Kingdom of Israel? Take a mark, as I did with the one-horned red cow, and examine.

Does any one of the three loan to the nations and borrow from none? Have they in past times loaned and not borrowed? They do not and cannot stand the test.

Again, has any one of these nations led the world in all lines of Christian service? such lines as Mr. Forbes himself mentions, viz.: "She, Britain, has led the way in foreign missions, which she has established all over the world; and in home missions. . . . The British and Foreign Bible Society, responsible for many hundreds of Bible translations and the circulation of many millions of Scriptures, is the parent of all the other Bible Societies, and, like the Religious Tract Society, has depots almost all over the world." . . . . "In spiritual blessings, Britain, to a large extent, stands alone."

This is strongly and clearly said, is true, and I personally thank Mr. Forbes for his most valuable statement of fact. It is a good British-Israel testimony.

Hence, from the above set forth facts, we are amply justified in saying that of the four kingdoms, Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Great Britain, Britain alone carries the marks of the Israel Kingdom Divine promises.

We stress this point because Mr. Forbes seems to think that if the British of the Isles and the above-mentioned North European peoples have come from the same ancestors to a large extent, and if the British peoples be of the Israel stock, then must the others from the same ancestors be Israelites too; and, therefore, the British-Israel teachers are wrong, or have no good grounds for their teaching. At any rate, Great Britain cannot well be the promised Kingdom of Israel, unless they are also.

Surely this mental process has the weakness of a chain of sand.

All the above might be Israel peoples and nations and yet only one be the official representative chosen nation and kingdom. Not kingdoms! Put this matter in clear relief thus: Of the above four kingdoms, Britain alone is an island nation. This in one way separates her from the others, even if they are Israel in part. In like manner she loans to the nations and thus differs from them. And, as said before, Britain leads the world in moral and spiritual matters, while the others do not.

Digitized by Google

Where, in the realm of sound thinking, can Mr. Forbes use an argument on the above grounds against B.-I. teaching?

Suppose Afghan is to a large degree made up of a part of old Israel. This would be in harmony with prophecy, but in no way would or could Afghan claim the outstanding kingdom promises.

Her people may be a part of the covenant Israelites of this earth, and as such share to some extent in the promises, but no one would affirm that Afghanistan is the promised Israel Kingdom, for the good reason she has practically none of the national marks.

We need go no further here, and are glad to say that our reading of Mr. Forbes' pamphlet makes us believe that if his honest doubts be removed, he will gladly accept the B.-I. teaching, for already he sees clearly much of what we see, and he says he has no prejudices against being one of the actual Israelites descended from the fathers of the chosen race, whom the Lord called out to be a servant nation among the peoples of the earth for the good of all mankind.

THE CRUCIFIXION OF CHRISTIANITY—V.

By the Rev. John Blacket (of Australia).

The New Testament positively teaches that human nature was something that our Lord assumed—something that He took upon Himself; consequently it follows that prior to His Incarnation He must have otherwise existed. The writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews says: "For verily He took not on Him the nature of angels, but He took on Him the seed of Abraham" (Heb. ii, 16).

The fact here asserted, that our Lord "took not on Him the nature of angels, but took on Him the seed of Abraham," proves that before His Incarnation His nature was different from that of angels or men. Paul makes a similar assertion. He says: "Who, being in the form of God, counted it not a prize to be on an equality with God, but emptied Himself, taking the form of a servant, being made in the likeness of man, and being found in fashion as a man, He humbled Himself, becoming obedient unto death, yea, the death of the cross" (Phil. ii, 58). St. John's testimony to our Lord is along similar lines: "And the Word became flesh (not and the Word was flesh, but the Word became flesh) and dwelt among us, and we beheld His glory, glory as of the only begotten from the Father, full of grace and truth" (John i, 14). These passages (notably the quotation from Hebrews) teach not only the pre-existence of Christ, but that His essential nature, prior to His Incarnation, was different from that of any created intelligence.

Our Lord not only "came from the Father" but came for a special purpose. It is this fact that justifies and makes reasonable His manifestation. "The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many" (Matt. xx, 28). "For God sent not His Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world, through Him, might be saved" (John iii, 17).

Not only did our Lord "come from the Father," and "for a special purpose," but there was a unique and mysterious relationship between Him and the Father. He spoke of His union with the Father in a sense that we cannot speak of our union with the Father. "He that receiveth you," said He, "receiveth Me, and he that receiveth Me, receiveth Him that sent Me" (Matt. x, 40). "The Father loveth the Son, and showeth Him all things that Himself doeth . . . that all men may honour the Son even as they honour the Father. As the Father hath life in Himself even so gave He to the Son to have life in Himself" (John v, 23, 26). "I and My Father," said He, "are one" (John x, 30). Let me again affirm that no human intelligence could use language like this. He was "united to the Father," and "one with the Father," in a unique and exclusive sense.

The testimony of Jesus Himself to His personality was that He was the "Son of God" in a special and distinctive sense. I hold that His claim to such a distinction has been experimentally and historically verified. But in what sense He is the Son of God—the mysterious nexus, so to speak, between Himself and the Father—He does not explain, nor do the New Testament writers throw any light upon the subject. In relation to our own constitution there are mysteries that are unsearchable and inexplicable. Our Lord knew that His claim to the Divine Sonship was resented, that it stirred up antagonism, but He neither withdrew His claim, nor attempted to give an explanation. The Jews took up stones to stone Him. "Many good works," said Jesus, "have I showed you from My Father, for which of these works do you stone Me?" "For a good work we stone Thee not," was the reply, "but for blasphemy, because that Thou, being a man, makest Thyself God." "If he called them gods," said our Lord, "unto whom the word of the Lord came . . . say ye of Him, Whom the Father hath sanctified, and sent into the world, Thou blasphemest, because I said I am the Son of God?" (John x, 31-36). Beyond this our Lord did not go, and we cannot go.

Beyond satisfying the curiosity that is common to man I fail to see that it is any service to know how Christ is the Son of God. That He is such He affirms, and experience and history confirm His testimony; but how He is such is one of those "secret things that belong unto the Lord our God" (Deut. xxix, 29). The constitution of Christ's person, and His relationship to the Father, are unsearchable and unknowable. The fact is that we must learn patiently to endure our limitations. Speaking of those who argue and dispute the nature of things beyond the range of possible experience, Kant says: "Both parties beat the air, and fight with their own shadows, because they go beyond the limits of nature, where there is nothing they can lay hold of with their dogmatical grasp. They might fight to their heart's content, the shadows which they are cleaving grow together in one moment, like the heroes in Valhalla, in order to disport themselves once more in these bloodless contests."—Critique of Pure Reason.

That our Lord is beyond the range of humanity experience and history demonstrate; that He is also within the range of humanity is equally apparent. We can therefore accept the testimony that He is both Son of God and Son of Man, though the manner how (like the association of spirit and body in man) is unknowable and inexplicable. Just here the lines of Dr. Watts are singularly appropriate :—

Digitized by Google

" Where reason fails, with all her powers,
There faith prevails, and love adores."

Turning from our Lord's testimony to Himself to that of the Apostolic Rule of Faith, or Paul's Form of Sound Words, or Ignatius' Enactment of the Apostles, we find the Deity of our Lord fully asserted. Look, for a moment, at the sublime Christology of the Apostle Paul. Space limitations will not allow us to do full justice to it here. Our Lord " was born of the seed of David, according to the flesh," but " declared to be the Son of God with power by the resurrection from the dead " (Rom i, 3, 4). Paul's seraphic outburst in Colossians thrills us to the core : " For by Him were all things created that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or powers, all things were created by Him, and for Him, and He is before all things, and by Him all things consist " (Col. i, 16, 17).

Turning from Paul to the Epistle to the Hebrews we find another soul-stirring testimony to the Deity of our Lord : " God, Who at sundry times, and in divers manners, spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by His Son, Whom He hath appointed heir of all things, by Whom also He made the worlds ; Who being the brightness of His glory, and the express image of His person, and upholding all things by the word of His power, when He had by Himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high " (Heb. i, 1-3).

The testimony of the writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews is also that of the Apostolic Fathers.

A writer to The Christian World (London) not long ago said : " To me it is utterly incredible to believe that within that Babe born in Bethlehem, some 2,000 years ago, there was enshrined the Power that created the universe, with all its millions of worlds, and has sustained them for countless ages, through the mighty past." It is the old objection of Trypho, some 1,700 years ago, in his dialogue with Justin Martyr. " You endeavour to prove," said Trypho, " an incredible and well-nigh impossible thing : that God endured to be born, and became man."

We must cease to be staggered by the marvellous. The apparently small (like " the Babe born in Bethlehem ") is as marvellous and antecedently incredible as the infinitely great. Science tells us that in an atom of what we term matter, absolutely invisible to the eye, and intangible, there is enshrined a solar system. Le Bon, in his " Evolution of Matter," says : " It is in these atomic universes, whose nature was so long misunderstood, that must be sought the explanation of most of the mysteries which surround us . . . The atom is no longer a thing inert—the ' blind spot ' of all the forces of the universe—it is the very soul of things. It stores up the energies which are the mainspring of the world and the beings which animate it. Notwithstanding its infinite minuteness, the atom perhaps contains all the secrets of infinite greatness." Man is evolved from a microscopic cell. Out of it comes a Plato, Immanuel Kant, Isaac Newton, a genius who can, as it were, " weigh the mountains in scales, the hills in a balance, and take up the isles as a very little thing " (Isa. xl, 12-15).

The writer in The Christian World sets the magnitude of the universe—its suns and systems—in contrast with " the Babe born in Bethlehem," but there is a sense in which the ordinary man is greater than the universe. Blot the suns and systems in space out of existence and they would be unconscious of their annihilation ; but man knows that he lives, that he dies, and he speculates as to his origin and destiny. He can stand aside, as it were, and make the whole universe subjective and objective.

The denial of the Deity of our Lord, which denies His own testimony, and the testimony of the Apostles and Apostolic Fathers, is the crucifixion of the Christian Faith.

THE INEFFABLE NAME OF GOD.—I.

BY THE LATE REV. MARTIN LYMAN STREATOR, M.A.

" No one fully knoweth the Son save the Father,
Neither doth any one fully know the Father save the Son,
And he to whomsoever the Son may be minded to reveal him."
—(Matthew xi, 27.—E.B.)*

THIS language of the Messiah concerning the intimate relation of the Father and the Son and their mutual complete knowledge of each other is unique, and is expressive of the incomprehensibility of God by the finite human mind. The limited cannot include the limitless ; the finite cannot embrace the infinite ; the relative cannot contain the Absolute ; man cannot comprehend God save as he accepts the revelation given of Him through the Son of His love. This revelation, coming to us through the incarnation of the eternal Logos who in His distinct personality was with God in the beginning, and in His essential being was God, is adapted through His unity with humanity to human capacity. The Christ is minded to reveal Himself and His Heavenly Father to whomsoever will trust Him and love Him and obey Him and follow Him wherever He leadeth. Hence, in looking forth from His peaceful personal consciousness that comprehended both God and man, unto the struggling and oppressed world of mankind, He called, in the sweetest invitation every uttered on earth, all the labouring and the burdened to Himself for rest, for rest for the soul, which gives strength to bear every burden and solace to soothe every sorrow. The Messiah enunciated a great truth in harmony with eternal realities when He said :

" My teaching is not mine, but his who sent me.
If any one intend his will to do
He shall get to know concerning the teaching—
Whether it is of God,
Or I from myself am speaking :
He that seeketh the glory of him that sent me
The same is true,
And injustice in him there is none." (John vii, 16-18.—E.B.)

By E.B. I designate the Emphasized Bible, the accurate, idiomatic and emphatic translation by J. B. Rotherham. It frequently brings out the exact significance of the original so clearly as to save any interpretation or explanation. It is scholarly, evangelical and reliable. Students readily can compare the translation with the King James and the Revised Versions, and better still, the original itself. In these words of the Lord Jesus he puts all men as sinners on the plane of a common equality before God, so that any man, good or bad, learned or ignorant, polite or rude, civilized or savage, who intends to do the will of God shall learn concerning Christ's teaching that He is not speaking from Himself, but what He says is a revelation from God.

Concerning the motto placed at the head of this article Rudolf Stier says:

> 'No exposition can exhaust, no dogmatic speculation can penetrate, the depths of this saying, which points to the deep things of the Godhead. We do better to spell it out in simplicity with the babes, and thus to yield up our souls to the mighty and effectual revelation of the Holy Spirit, Who will teach us what is the confession of the Father and the Son..... God is Himself truth and wisdom, He knoweth Himself in the Trinity of His being reciprocally as Father and Son in the unity of the Spirit.
> 'No man knoweth.'... Well had it been if Christian dogmatics had remembered this warning of the Son, and been content to speak of the mysteries of the Trinity in no other words than those which the Son reveals to the babes, and gives to the heavy-laden who come to Him as their living and life-giving knowledge!" ("The Words of the Lord Jesus." Vol. I, pp. 214, 215.)

The man who wills to do the will of God is granted the discernment that the teaching of Christ is God's own revelation for him, although he may not fully comprehend it and all that is involved in it. The knowledge that saves from sin and death is a personal knowledge of the Christ as a personal Saviour.

Prof. Totten in his erudite investigation of the significance of emblems says:

> "Our theme is as ancient as the religion of Eden, and its emblems are worth examination; we have but touched upon its circumference, let another bring it to birth and place it like a Serpent (wisdom) where it belongs, upon the Tau, where all can see it, and all who are to be saved from further ignorance will look at it.
>
> Finally: The new name is the old name, so that the last may become the first! The lost word is that lost name of the Creator....
> The true name of The-Almighty-One does not occur openly in the Bible, which is the only oracle of 'the Unknown God.' He is declared, however, by St. Paul, and was manifested by the Messiah. That is, the 'new name' which is the true one, is one which is yet to be given out, but to such only as are elected. All this is squarely put forth in Revelation. No one knows or is to know the name but he and she who receives HIM and IT." ("The Tau Cross." News-Leaflet, Twelfth Set, 2-3. Feb., Mar., 1902.)

Some have expressed surprise and incredulity at this radical expression of Prof. Totten that "the true name of The-Almighty-One does not occur openly in the Bible." When I first read it, I myself was startled by it, and thought that the professor must be mistaken about it. But on fuller investigation I am convinced that he is correct. He himself said on the same page: "We are talking only to Gideonites, searchers after truth." I presume that the Gideonites, who delight to search after truth as for hidden treasures, may enjoy reading the result of my own investigations, which were initiated by this startling declaration of our own Gideon. According to the Messiah Himself the brazen Serpent on the pole is a fit emblem of the Son of man on the Cross. (John iii, 14, 15.) God brings to nought the wisdom of the world. Christ Jesus is made unto us who believe in Him, wisdom from God. His wisdom explains this mystery, revealing the secret truth to those who love it and will appreciate it.

Prof. Totten claims that the new name, which is to be revealed at the great consummation, is the lost name of the Creator. This name, then, has reference to God as the Creator. He is the supreme Architect, the wise Master Builder. It is not till His work is completed that this old and yet new name can be appreciated. It is in reality the Ineffable Name of God. Here the words of Christ have their full significance and power, "No one knoweth." Only the Father fully knoweth the Son. Only the Son fully knoweth the Father and revealeth Him. As there are limitations to men's knowledge of God it is manifest that God in His inmost being and in His own peculiar work has a name that is ineffable. It is incommunicable because of man's inability in his present state to understand its real significance. The Father fully knows the Son. The Son fully knows the Father "because in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily." (Col. ii, 9.) Zophar claimed that "the secrets of wisdom are double to that which actually is." Well did he say to Job in his querulousness:

> "The hidden depth of God canst thou discover?
> Or unto the furthest limit of the Almighty canst thou attain?
> The heights of the heavens what canst thou do?
> Depths deeper than Hades what canst thou know?
> Longer than the earth is the measure thereof
> And broader than the sea." (Job xi, 7-9.—E.B.)

The Apostle Paul declares expressly: "The world through its wisdom knew not God." Through the folly of sceptical philosophy and vain deceit it is fast running away from the true knowledge of God. We need to beware of the delusions of men, but should diligently investigate every Divine disclosure concerning the mystery of God.

In order to understand what is indicated concerning the Ineffable Name of God we must keep in mind that the Hebrew was a numerical language, and that the numerical value of its sacred names corresponded to their real significance. Thus we can infer the one from the other. While the Ineffable Name of God is not declared openly in the Bible, it is indicated by its numerical symbolism. Reverent investigation of the ways of the Mighty One will make this manifest.

God is the wise Master-Builder. The Apostle Paul says: "Every house is builded by some one; but he that built all things is God." (Heb. iii, 4.) The creation, as is shown conclusively by Pres. Mark Hopkins, is not an evolution of blind force operating on inert matter, but is an upbuilding of a pyramidal temple by an intelligent architect, designing each rising course in the great pyramid as a condition for something higher and beyond itself. Thus the creation becomes a universe through the correlation of its various parts to each other and the whole, for universe means literally "turned into one, combined into a whole." (Skeat.) Nothing exists for itself alone. Each thing is related in design, manifesting the real thoughts of the invisible Creator.

The universe is the house which He built, and wherein He dwells and manifests His presence, His goodness and His power. He worked according to the mathematical principles of construction corresponding to what we would call the compass and the square. He thoroughly understands the exact relation between the circle and the square, and He built His house according to this relation. In the primeval oracle of the creation, as shown in former articles in "The Our Race Quarterly," He reveals in a mystery the mathematical principles according to which He worked. These are a symbol of His own essential being, a representation to the intelligence of man of what He is, by what He has done and is doing in creating, preserving and consummating His work.

One as a numerical symbol of the Deity is an emblem of God in His unity. Three is an emblem of God in His threefold personality, office and work. The Father, Son and Holy Spirit are so intimately related to each other in their essential being, in their official dignity and in their stupendous work that the three are one. They are not three in the same sense in which they are one, for that would be absurd. But in some respects they are three, in other respects they are one. They reveal what they are by the work which they do. They manifest themselves in three great facts—Creation, Providence and Redemption. The Creation itself is a trinity. It consists of three great kingdoms—the mineral kingdom, the vegetable kingdom and the animal kingdom, in such intimate relation to each other that these three together constitute the one creation. In it we have a revelation of the Deity as God, the Word of God and the Spirit of God. As the three kingdoms through their intimate relation constitute the one creation, so the three Persons Who worked together in making it, constitute, through their essential relation to each other, the one Deity. In each of the three great facts in which they work together they manifest a threefold personality. In Providence, manifesting itself in the history of the world, they are revealed as Jehovah, the Angel of Jehovah and the Spirit of Jehovah. In Redemption they are revealed as Father, Son and Holy Spirit. He Who was in the beginning with God, and Whose personal name was the Logos or the Word of God, in Providence was manifested as the Angel of Jehovah, and in Redemption as the only begotten Son of God. The name Son involves a relation which cannot exist without a conception and a birth. Hence while He is before all things, as the Apostle Paul declares, and in Him all things consist, or are held together through His Providential government of the world, He did not become the Son of God till the incarnation, till the Word became flesh and dwelt among us in the form and fashion of a man. This elevates mankind into intimate relation with the Deity.

ISRAEL—THE STONE KINGDOM.

"A prophecy, literally fulfilled, is a real miracle; one such, fairly produced, must go a great way in convincing all reasonable men."—COLLINS.

THE prophetic visions of Daniel give a skeleton outline of the entire field of prophecy, most graphically portraying the history of five great Empires from his own day onward—four of which practically all students of prophecy agree in identifying. The first was Babylon, then Persia, then Greece, and last Rome.

Readers of the second chapter of Daniel find no difficulty in thus identifying these Empires because history records the successive rise and fall of each; nor do they find difficulty in accepting the symbolic reference to the first as "the head of gold" from its magnificence, to the second as "silver," the third as "brass," and the fourth as "iron" from the ruthless wielding of its power on other nations.

How many, however, have read the narrative of the dream and interpretation, and wondered why the Fifth Empire should be called the "Stone" Kingdom?

And how many have thought of connecting it with the nation referred to by our Lord in Matthew xxi, 43–44, when, speaking to the Jews, He said, "The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof. And whosoever shall fall on this stone shall be broken: but on whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder"?

A special significance attached to "stone" and "rock" from ancient times. When they had something of special importance to record, the Hebrews were in the habit of setting up a stone or gathering a heap of stones as a sign or witness to the truth of the event or agreement. If they had to mark the boundaries of a parcel of land, they did so by setting up a stone, and severe penalties were provided by statute in the case of any removing these landmarks. If a treaty was made, the parties to it erected a stone to attest to the truth of the matter, or gathered a number of stones, and called the heap the Stones of Witness.

For example, when Jacob and Laban quarrelled and came to an agreement that each would go his own way with his family, servants and flocks, they set up Stones of Witness at Padan-Aram to mark the treaty of peace; Gen. xxxi, 52–53: "This heap be witness, and this pillar be witness, that I will not pass over this heap to thee, and that thou shalt not pass over this heap and this pillar unto me, for harm. The God of Abraham, and the God of Nahor, the God of their father, judge betwixt us. And Jacob sware by the fear of his father Isaac."

So also the great stone set up by Joshua; Joshua xxiv, 27: "This stone shall be a witness against us, for it hath heard all the words of the Lord."

And the circle of stones taken out of the Jordan and set up at Gilgal (Joshua iv, 4–7) to preserve the memory of their miraculous passage over the river.

At a later date, when the two and a half tribes were assigned land across the Jordan, they raised stones on the bank of the river as a testimony that they constituted one nation with their brethren on the other side. (Joshua xxii, 10.) This act gave rise to serious misunderstanding, however, because they built it in the form of an altar. The Parliament of Israel was convoked at Shiloh, where had been erected the altar at which only the whole nation was to worship. The question of declaring war was debated, but it was decided to send a delegation of heads of ancestral families—one from each of the ten tribes—under the leadership of Phineas the son of Eleazer to confer with the two and a half tribes and seek an explanation.

The reply to the delegation cleared up the misunderstanding. It was, that having been given land outside the natural boundary, the River Jordan, they had erected the memorial altar " not for the purpose of offering offerings and gifts, and to make offerings and sacrifices of thanks to the Ever-Living, but in case your children should forget our part in Israel and say to our sons: 'You are beyond the boundary. You have no part in the Ever-Living.' So that it may be replied, when they say thus to us or to our descendants hereafter, we can answer: 'Look at this building in the form of the altar of the Ever-Living which our fathers made—not for offering, or for sacrifice, but as a bond between us and you, to serve as a witness of our rights.' "

This custom and usage cannot be attributed to lack of education, for the ability to read and write was quite prevalent in those times. We know it was so in Abraham's day, from the tablets discovered in the excavations at Ur comprising personal letters, business communications, bills, and records of sales of property. Also from the tablets in the British Museum, written at the time of the Israelitish invasion of Canaan, being letters to the Egyptian king from rulers of cities and garrisons complaining of the successes of the " Abiri," or Hebrews, and the lack of support from Egypt.

Archæologists record, from their investigations among the ancient buildings and monuments of Egypt, that even in much earlier times the names and scraps of information cut into or scrawled in paint on walls and monuments show that there were constant streams of traffic from one end of the country to the other. Apparently they could no more resist the temptation of a smooth surface than can thousands of our own tourists to-day.

No, the stones were set up as witnessing to the truth of treaty, or bargain, or personal or national rights. And if to-day we speak of getting down to the bed-rock facts of a matter, we use the same symbolism as they did because we mean that we ascertain the absolute truth of what happened.

Then there is the stone which Jacob used as a pillow at Bethel, which we believe is the Coronation Stone now in Westminster Abbey. A change of heart and appeal to God for help led Jacob to dedicate himself to God, and to take the stone on which he had rested his weary, troubled head, and call it the witness to a covenant between his Lord and himself. He carried it with him in his travels, and he and his whole House looked on it with so much reverence that it was taken to Egypt, carried out of Egypt at the Exodus, and became part of the furniture of the Tabernacle.

We believe, too, that this was the stone, or rock, which Moses was commanded to touch with his rod when the Lord wished to give water to the thirsty multitude, but Moses, usually mild, being irritated by the clamour of the people, struck the stone with force—thereby unconsciously typifying the treatment to which the Stone of Israel would be subjected when the builders rejected Him.

It is not necessary to dwell on the history of this famous stone in its progress from Tabernacle to Temple, from Jerusalem to Tara, to Iona, to Scone, to London, beyond saying that every time it has been used in the coronation of a King of the Israel people its part has been that of the witness to the covenant under which the new King takes up his office, and to the vows he takes upon himself.

Among the laws of Israel there was a statute relating to weights and measures. As given in Leviticus xix, 35–36, it reads: " Ye shall do no unrighteousness in judgment, in mete-yard, in weight or in measure. Just balances, just weights, a just ephah (bushel), and a just hin (gallon) shall ye have." In the statute quoted: " Just weights shall ye have," the Hebrew reads: " just or true stones." Also in Deut. xxv, 13: " Thou shalt not have in thy bag divers weights, a great and a small," the Hebrew says: " A stone and a stone." Ferrar Fenton's translation reads: " There shall not be in your bag weight and weight; full weight and short weight. There shall not be in your house measure and measure, full measure and short measure. You shall have a just and right weight; you shall have a just and right measure; so that your time may be extended in the land which your Ever-Living God gives to you, for the Ever-Living your God abhors all who do those wicked things."

Proverbs xi, 1: " A false balance is abomination to the Lord; but a just weight is His delight." In Hebrew, this runs: " a perfect stone," and the meaning is as stated, " a just weight."

Proverbs xvi, 11: " A just weight and balance are the Lord's, all the weights of the bag are His work."

In the ordinary business of everyday life, the Israelite was therefore continually reminded of the obligation resting on him to maintain truth and right dealings with his fellow man; the commerce and trading, the buying and selling had to be done by true weights, or, as in the Hebrew, true stones.

Why should this idea of truth be associated with stone or rock? Well, stone or rock will stand up against destructive forces, it is trustworthy, it will bear anything which requires support as nothing else will. On what do we depend for safely building heavy structures, bridges, dams or large buildings? On the weight resting on solid rock. On what do we build our commercial structures, our business undertakings? On truth as between man and man, that a bargain once made will be lived up to and not repudiated; that a purchase or a sale will be carried out and implemented by the delivery of a true weight and a true measure ; business resting on truth and right judgments is on a strong, firm and sure foundation ; the building will not be unsettled.

Likewise, speaking of a man's inner life, our Lord uttered a parable :—"Whosoever heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, who built his house upon a rock : and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house, and it fell not ; for it was founded upon a rock." Here the solid rock manifestly signifies Divine truths—those sayings of our Lord which He desired all to receive into the mind, to combine with goodness of heart, and bring down into the conduct, so enabling man to erect a spiritual house and resist every storm of temptation.

Is it surprising, then, that prophet, psalmist, and king speak of God Himself as a rock ?

In Moses' Song (Deut. xxxii, 4 : "He is the rock, his work is perfect, a God of truth is he."

Hannah, in her thanksgiving song over the promised child, Samuel, said : "Neither is there any rock like our God."

David, being delivered out of the hand of Saul, sang : "The Lord is my rock."

Isaiah said : "Because thou hast forgotten the God of thy salvation, and hast not been mindful of the rock of thy strength, the harvest shall be a heap in the day of grief and of desperate sorrow."

Psalm xxviii, 1 : "Unto thee will I cry, O Lord my rock."

Psalm xxxi, 2–3 : "Be thou my strong rock, for a house of defence to save me, For thou art my rock and my fortress."

Psalm lxxxix, 19 : "Then thou spakest in vision to thy holy one, and saidst : 'I have laid help on one that is mighty : I have exalted one chosen out of the people. (verse 25). I will set his hand also in the sea, and his right hand in the rivers.' (verse 26). He shall cry unto me, 'Thou art my father, my God, and the rock of my salvation.'"

And in prophecy of His great plan for the salvation of mankind, He said, through Isaiah, "Therefore thus saith the Lord God, 'Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundation ; he that believeth shall not make haste.'"

Nor should we forget that Jehovah is called "the rock of Israel," "the stone of Israel," and the "rock of ages." See Isaiah xxvi, 4 (margin), Isaiah xxx, 29 (margin), etc.

———

If stone or rock has the spiritual significance of truth, the title "the Stone Kingdom" ought to apply to a people with the strongly marked characteristics of fair dealing and right judgments as between man and man, and between nations also ; a people whose history would show they were, in some special sense, guardians of and witnesses for truth. Otherwise, the name would be a misnomer.

WILHELM DIBELIUS pays BRITAIN a striking tribute when he writes :—"So far, BRITAIN, alone of modern European lands, has accomplished the dual task of creating a world dominion and within it a civilization of a distinct type. Since Roman days, the world knows no other case of this combination."

Incidentally the latter sentence in the above testimony forms a significant commentary on Dan. ii, 44 ; a commentary which tends to confirm the fact that BRITAIN is indeed the WORLD-POWER which, in succession to the ROMAN EMPIRE, represents a KINGDOM that shall never be destroyed but shall stand for ever.

Commenting on the types of civilization, peculiar to the British, which have spread nevertheless beyond the limits of the ANGLO-SAXON WORLD, Herr Dibelius continues :—"The ANGLO-SAXONS have built a dominion that, more nearly than any other, approaches the ideal of a self-sustaining, self-sufficient State. It is not an association between a homeland and the colonies supplying it with raw materials, but an IMPERIUM, whose centre has surrounded itself with essentially like it. Each of the Dominions strives to imitate its Motherland by developing industry as well as agriculture, establishing colonies of its own,† and becoming a reflection of the home country in all its scientific, literary and artistic efforts. It is an empire so extended and full of so many diverse interests, that only force could have founded it, but force cannot maintain it ; it is held together by the free voice of all its members.

"The fact that it is so held together derives partly from political and economic reasons, but partly from the force of

THE ANGLO-SAXON IDEA.

This Anglo-Saxon idea rests upon the premise that, within the EMPIRE thus founded by force, every citizen who recognizes its power is a free man. He can express any opinion he likes, in the press or on the platform, he can profess any religion that he chooses—Hinduism, Buddhism and Islam enjoy the protection of the State.

"Unlike the citizen of every Continental State, he is free from conscription, though exceptional legislation may impose it upon him, in exceptional circumstances. No official interferes with his private life, he can move from place to place, clear of any police regulation. The STATE makes no demands of him, and imposes no compulsion upon him ; it merely invites him to co-operate with it. In principle the BRITON is subject to no authority but the one he recognizes.

"These same rights belong to every constituent STATE in the EMPIRE, vis-à-vis the whole. Despite all this freedom, the EMPIRE holds together—a fact which proves that this STATE, unlike any other in the world, has

A MORAL BASIS.

On no other can a STATE be erected. In principle, the ANGLO-SAXON WORLD-CONFEDERATION is the only complete STATE (the American offshoot is silently taken to be a part of or a parallel to it). It is an advantage for any nation to belong to this STATE.

"When the British missionary seeks, conscientiously, to provide not only for the spiritual but also for the worldly welfare of his flock, he can desire nothing better than to have them taken into the BRITISH EMPIRE. When the BRITON, talking of the BALKANS, desires SERBIA, GREECE or the ARMENIANS to be free to develop on their own national lines, the best method seems to be the creation of a STATE that relies as closely as may be on BRITAIN, and has the closest possible political and economic relations with the centre of modern civilization."

Up to this point Dibelius seems quite serious in his analysis. But now he breaks away into a statement of what he considers to be the Imperialistic faith of the average Anglo-Saxon :—"If there is to be world progress, the Anglo-Saxon idea must continue its missionary work in the future. It is the strenuous but glorious task of Anglo-Saxondom to stand for freedom all over the world and to draw the sword in the cause of small and oppressed nations ; the development of the world will one day bring it about that the entire earth will be filled with the Anglo-Saxon idea, when Anglo-Saxon dominion (with which the UNITED STATES will be associated in some form or other) will transform itself into a LEAGUE of FREE NATIONS, whose defence—in so far as this may still be necessary—will be undertaken by BRITAIN.

"We have here more or less set out what no BRITON would think of setting out systematically, or even, disliking systematic thought as he does, arrange for himself as a logical sequence of thought, but what dominates the feeling of every Briton with the force of a Gospel.

"The roots of this convinced

FAITH IN FREEDOM AND EMPIRE

go back to MILTON and his Puritans ; they were renewed by an Imperially-minded Puritan like CARLYLE, and given an idealistic gloss by the whole Imperialist movement associated with the names of SEELEY, CECIL RHODES and CHAMBERLAIN, and issuing in the World War. Cecil Rhodes, indeed, expressed them in his will,‡ with a singular blend of the instincts of the beast of prey and the idealism of the devotee."

Let us rest here a moment and examine that which has been written. What is this Anglo-Saxon idea which is destined to fill the entire earth? The Anglo-Saxon idea is the idea of the KINGDOM of GOD upon earth. This ideal, consciously or unconsciously, is ever in the background of every effort toward Anglo-Saxon world dominion.

‡ Of Cecil Rhodes, Dibelius writes : "As a young man of four-and-twenty he made over his entire fortune to a secret society of his own imagination, which was to spread British dominion over the entire globe. The whole of Africa was to be English, Palestine, Mesopotamia, the whole of Southern America ; the United States were to be rejoined to the British Empire, and an Anglo-Saxon power thus come into being which should rule the world and make war impossible. Not mere conquest, but world dominion for an ethical end."

Dibelius is on sure ground when he traces British Imperialism back to MILTON and his Puritans. British idealism is the idealism of the BIBLE. It is Kingdom-idealism.

It is our vision of the coming KINGDOM which makes our faith in freedom and the EMPIRE so inexhaustibly powerful.

Other nations may rage and imagine as many vain things as they like concerning our final destiny. But the covenants of GOD cannot be shaken. And the KINGDOM will come in spite of the imperfections of its builders.

The Anglo-Saxon idea—or idea of the KINGDOM—is peculiar to BRITAIN because it is peculiar to the BIBLE. And the BRITISH PEOPLE are the PEOPLE of ISRAEL—the PEOPLE of the BOOK.

The idea of the KINGDOM sounds fantastic to people without this Bible-background to their mental outlook. Dibelius is quite justified in saying that "The whole train of this thought is utterly incomprehensible to the Continental European." But he is going to extremes when he adds the verdict that "nine-tenths of its contents are a mere travesty of truth."

It is one thing to hold a great ideal. It is another thing to translate ideal into reality. But the improportion between "that which ought to be and that which is" does not impair the purity of the ideal itself.

Nine-tenths of British achievement toward the great ideal falls far short of the ultimate ideal. In this sense it might perhaps be described as a travesty of the truth. But even so, we press toward the mark. We have by no means finished the course. And even now our nine-tenths "travesty" of ultimate achievement is ten times nearer the goal than anything achieved by any other race or people.

Fortunately Dibelius proves himself to be not entirely blind to this possibility. Of British Liberty he says :—"Is then the whole thing a mere verbal construction, which the world has somehow been induced to accept, thanks to the vast power of the British Press and the British cable monopoly? By no means ; there is more in it than that ; like any untruth in which people believe passionately, there is a certain significant kernel of truth in it, which is more important than the cover of untruth around it.

"The kernel of truth within the great historical distortion is the fact that Anglo-Saxon civilization is the PRIVILEGED COMMUNITY OF MANKIND.

Those who belong to it, enjoy a freedom that the rest of mankind knows not, and the duties connected with it are trifling—they amount to little more than recognition by the individual of the dominating position of this community."

The privileged community of mankind? Why not say the nucleus of the KINGDOM of GOD upon earth? The two descriptions are equal, fundamentally, in their significance.

For the ANGLO-SAXON COMMUNITY is not a community reserved for ANGLO-SAXONS. It is a COMMUNITY which people of every nation under heaven can freely join. Thus Dibelius puts it :—"It is always ready to take in other white brothers, Irishmen in Europe, Boers in Africa, or Frenchmen in Canada. There is but one condition attached—the new entrant to the community must recognize the RULE OF THE IMPERIUM.

Apart from that, he may keep his peculiarities, his language and his religion. British propaganda even extends to the non-European races.

Digitized by Google

"In proportion as they mentally accept the ideals of British civilization and forget all their dreams of retrieving their old native freedom, they are gradually equipped with all the freedoms of the British citizen.

"These two groups—the full citizens and the protégés—are completed by a third, composed by the friends and admirers of British civilization throughout the nations, who may be hoped, in course of time, to give the Anglo-Saxon idea the ultimate mastery within their own people. To all of these, British freedom appears the

that it can only be purchased at the price of British supremacy is naturally not stressed; the Briton himself is apt to be vague in his mind about the connection."

Very good, Professor. But why should there be anything particularly Machiavellian about the fact that British freedom and citizenship can only be purchased at the price of British supremacy?

Acknowledgment of sovereignty is the price that must be paid for citizenship of any kingdom. Freedom can only be maintained by Law and Order. Allegiance to the "powers that be" is a small price to pay for the liberties which result from their supremacy.

Again, it is a law of life that we must be prepared to give all if we would aspire to gain all. If the peoples of other races are expected to forget their dreams of regaining their old native freedom before they become equipped with all the freedom of a British citizen, what of it? They are actually relinquishing a lesser freedom for a greater freedom. They are surrendering a narrow, national liberty for the freedom of a world-wide citizenship. A certain degree of supremacy or sovereignty is necessary in any type of organized society or civilization.

But our German critic is labouring under a complete delusion when, in discussing the Anglo-Saxon idea, he complains:—"There is something preposterous, too, in the complete ignoring of all non-Anglo-Saxon civilizations that speaks in such a confession of faith, since Anglo-Saxon culture is unthinkable without the German Reformation and Romantic Movement, or without the manifold influences that have come across the Channel from France in every century."

Certainly it would be preposterous indeed if the acceptance of the Anglo-Saxon ideal—or idea of the KINGDOM—involved the complete ignoring of the contributions to culture and civilization of all non-Anglo-Saxon communities. But the Kingdom-ideal involves no such negative condition. The whole peculiar construction of the Kingdom-organization is completely unappreciated if it is imagined that the free and full development of foreign civilizations is not provided for.

Anglo-Saxon civilization is a specialized type of civilization specifically created to serve as a nucleus around which all other civilizations may unite and progress in free and full development.

Like the members of a body, each individual member of world-civilization has its own peculiar gift. The peculiar talent of each is essential to the lasting glory of civilization as a whole.

The peculiar contribution of ANGLO-SAXON CIVILIZATION is LAW and GOVERNMENT. If Anglo-Saxon power is destined to rule the world it is only to the end that all the families of the earth may be blessed as a result of this world dominion.

Only ignorant people talk of supremacy and domination. The expansion of the KINGDOM will not spell the Anglicization or Americanization of the world. The ANGLO-SAXON RACE are not called to hold dominion in the sense of domination. They are called to serve.

The KINGDOM represents a scientifically conceived world-civilization. To imagine that world-unity and world-sovereignty can only be set up as a result of suppressing the sovereign independence of individual parts of the world as against the whole, is absurd.

There can be no unity as a result of suppression. Man is endowed with freedom of will and men can only be held together by free consent.

People talk of the break-up of the BRITISH EMPIRE because the daughter nations have sought their independence. But independence is a sign of life and full vitality. Without this independence it would have been impossible for other nations to join the KINGDOM.

The separation of the component parts of the EMPIRE spells the birth of a new and better empire—a WORLD-COMMONWEALTH of FREE and EQUAL NATIONS—an empire which any nation under heaven can freely join.

In this political phenomenon we have confirmed the greatest discovery of modern science:—"Life does not proceed by the association and addition of elements, but by dissociation and division."

Division is not synonymous with dissolution.§ JESUS was expressing the progress of the KINGDOM in truly scientific language when He said: "Think not that I am come to send peace on earth; I came not to send peace but a sword."[1] And again: "Suppose ye that I am come to give peace on earth? I tell you, Nay; but rather division."[2]

The division of the BRITISH EMPIRE spells progress toward that new and finer world-order in which CHRIST will be exalted as KING, and through which the knowledge of the glory of the LORD will be spread over the face of the earth even as the waters cover the sea. (To be continued.)

ISRAEL IN EXILE. 721—606 B.C.

BY E. B. H.

IN the study of the history of our race it has often seemed to me that not enough attention is paid to the years of Captivity. It is frequently assumed that the Ten Tribes became passive slaves, who took an opportunity of creeping away into Scythia, some time during the years of the decline of the Assyrian Empire. Yet it has often been shown that Israel was the chief cause of the end of the Kingdoms of Nebuchadnezzar's dream, and there is every reason to believe they were also the cause of the fall of their arch-enemy Assyria.

§ Biologically, when a cell divides itself, two new cells are born.

When one remembers that the Siege of Samaria went on for three years, and that the little Kingdom of Israel, though depleted in numbers from evil-living, could hold the armies of Assyria for so long, it appears unlikely they would have submitted tamely to captivity. Nine years after the Fall of Samaria, Sennacherib took 200,000 captives from the "fenced cities" of Judah. The region of the Captivity was healthy, and there is no reason to suppose the tribes did not increase rapidly.

The country where they were "planted" has been identified as that south of Lake Van, the Zagros Mountains; and the land north of the Caspian Sea, called the Mountains of the Medes and Kar Kassi. Sennacherib during his reign made an expedition into this very country against some people known as Yasubi-Galleans, who had revolted. He died in 680 B.C., Esarhaddon succeeded him, and immediately had to defend his Northern frontier against "Gimmiri," but they came from Kar Kassi. Kastarita, their leader, with his allies the Medes, seems to have come near to destroying the Assyrian Empire then, and all through the century trouble seems to have come to Assyria from that Northern frontier.

In A.D. 1923, at the Annual General Meeting of the British Academy, the discovery was announced of a small clay tablet, and a paper read describing its contents. It was inscribed in "the minute cuneiform writing used by the Babylonians," and contained a record of events that occurred from the 10th to the 17th years of Nabopolassar, founder of the new Babylonian Kingdom. This King reigned from 625—604 B.C., so it follows that the years the Chronicle deals with are 616—609 B.C. These years include the destruction of Nineveh, hitherto assumed to have happened in 606 B.C., and the difference between the true date and the assumed is important. The writer of the paper considered that the Battle of Carchemish was fought in 608 B.C.—one year after the Chronicle ends.

The Chronicle of the tablet gives the history of the seven years. Cyaxares the Mede (or Umman-Manda), in the year 614 B.C., gathered an army and began operations against Nineveh. At first he could make no impression on his main objective, but took the cities of Tarbis and Ashur in that year, and made an alliance with Nabopolassar, King of Babylon. In 613 a disaster overtook Cyaxares and his army. The Chronicle does not refer to it, only makes it clear that the King of Assyria was able to issue from Nineveh and relieve the town of Anah besieged by Nabopolassar. But according to Herodotus, Cyaxares was attacked before Nineveh by the Scythians—the Bactrians according to Diodorus. In 612, Scythians (or Bactrians), Medes (or Umman-Manda) and Babylonians unite against Nineveh, and the city falls and is totally destroyed. The siege had lasted three years.

Cyaxares was King of Ecbatana, and Nebuchadnezzar married his daughter. There is a legend that the Hanging Gardens of Babylon were designed for a princess who had come from the mountains to become the bride of a King of Babylon, and were to remind her of her native country. Perhaps this girl was the daughter of Cyaxares—and an Israelitish princess.

The Kingdom of Assyria continued till 610 B.C., with its capital at Harran, on a tributary of the Euphrates. The King, Ashur-uballit, reigned there till driven out by a massed Scythian and Babylonian army. In 609 he tried to regain the city by the help of Egyptian reinforcements, but unsuccessfully. Here the history given on the tablet comes to an end.

We come now to Pharaoh-Necho, and his hurried dash to Carchemish. Josephus says he went to the river Euphrates to fight against the Medes and Babylonians, who had destroyed the Assyrian Empire. The account in 2 Kings xxiii, 29, is very brief. In 2 Chron. it is "against Carchemish," and it would be interesting to know if Manda, Scythians, or Babylonians held it, or whether it still formed part of the remnant of Assyria. The Biblical account is more concerned with Josiah's attack on Pharaoh-Necho, and its tragic ending, than with the Pharaoh's destination and alliances. The tablet seems to make it clear that help was urgently called for by Assyria. Pharaoh was delayed by Josiah's attack on him at Megiddo; he remained in Judah long enough to make his lines of communication safe, and arrived on the Euphrates in 609, too late to help his ally. If there was a battle in 608, it cannot have been a decisive one, as an Egyptian army seems to have remained at Carchemish from 609—606. During those years Nabopolassar and Nebuchadnezzar must have had their hands full, consolidating their new Empire with the inconvenience of an Egyptian army camped on the Euphrates. The Egyptians gone, it is possible they would have thought such a valiant ally as Cyaxares had best be subjugated, but in 606 Nebuchadnezzar is free to take an army and subjugate Judah, which he would scarcely have done if Scythians and Manda were a menace.

More than one date is given for the departure of Israel from Assyria, and probably more than one migration took place. But those years between 609 and 606 would have been ideal for their withdrawal and retirement over the head-waters of the Euphrates. Call them what we will, Umman-Manda, Medes, Yasubi-Galleans, Sakae, Israel, Gimmiri, they all came from the lands where the captives of Israel were placed 115 years before, and during the greater part of that time had been the "Battle-axe" and the means of bringing the Assyrian Empire to an end.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

By the Rev. G. H. Lancaster, M.A.

QUESTION.—As a regular reader of the "N. M. and B.," I would like to draw attention to the following point which I should like one of those great writers who write for the "N. M. and B." to comment upon, especially those especially interested in the "keeping of the Sabbath."

In reading through the Ten Commandments yesterday, I noticed for the first time that the word "wife" is omitted from the Fifth Commandment.

Is this due to bad translation, or might the omission be the intention of the Divine Mind so that the "duties of ordinary household work, including the cooking of meals, etc.," should be able to be done by the "housewife" without "breaking the Sabbath day"?

Digitized by Google

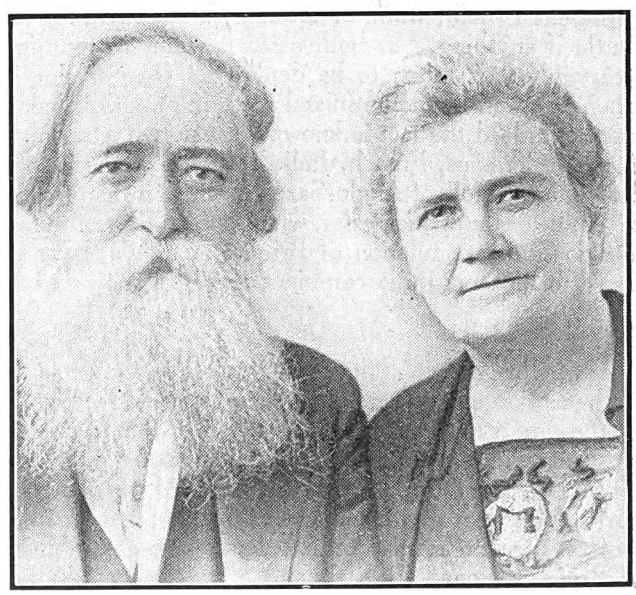
If this is so, how truly did the "Jews" make the Commandments of God of none effect by the traditions of men.

"ACORN."

ANSWER.—No, the translation from the Hebrew of the Ten Commandments is quite correct in our English Versions and also in the Prayer Book (Exodus xx; Deut. v; the Holy Communion Service). It is quite true to state that there is no actual mention of the word "wife" in the Fifth Commandment, although it occurs in the Tenth, where the implication is that "Thou shalt love thine own wife, and not covet thy neighbour's." The Commandments are naturally framed in two divisions, our duty towards God, and our duty towards men. The connection between the first Four Commandments and the Fifth exists in the truth that all faith in God centres in the filial feeling. Our parents stand between us and God in a way in which no other beings can. It will be observed that the honouring of parents and the keeping of the Sabbath day, which is the same as honouring God, are combined in one precept in the Law of Holiness (Lev. xix, 3).

Filial love, duty and respect, form the ground of national permanence. When the exile was about to take place, the rebuke of the prophet was that they had not walked in the old paths, and had not respected the voice of their fathers as the sons of Jonadab had done (Jer. vi, 16; xxxv, 18, 19). And when in later days the Jews returned to Judæa, and they were about to be dispersed again, the great sin of which they were convicted was the setting aside of this Fifth Commandment for the sake of their own traditions (Matt. xv, 4–6; Mark vii, 10, 11). The same truth is borne witness to by every other nation that has history behind it. China has in the long run owed her duration to the simple way in which she has maintained and uniformly acknowledged the authority of fathers and of paternal influence.

Further, it may be pointed out that the honouring of both "father and mother" presupposes the fact that the mother is and must be a good wife. Progenity in the ancient world was always a sign of blessing (Gen. ix, 1). The lotus plant, so often inscribed on the Egyptian monuments, was a symbol of offspring and family life. All through the Old Testament (and in Semitic thought generally) "sonship" was regarded as the highest duty and privilege, so much so that the Christian Faith is born of the symbolic doctrine associated with the Sonship of Christ (John i, 14; iii, 16; etc.). This thought is still further developed in the teaching of "the bride, the Lamb's wife" (Rev. xix, 7; xxi, 2, 9).



The modern legislation of "one man, one wife" only became firmly established through Christian thought and development, since it was not illegal for Old Testament saints and heroes to have more than one wife. Hence the Fifth Commandment teaches that children must respect their parents, even though in those days it was not improbable for the father to have more than one wife, whereas, obviously, children could only have one mother.

But Christ came to "fulfil the law," i.e., to "fill the law to the full, and thus to complete it." Hence the teaching of Christ is that there shall be only one wife (Matt. xix, 5, 6; Mark x, 7–9), and if a man shall love his neighbour as himself, how much more shall he love his wife?

To return to ancient times, marriage was not necessarily the outcome of love. A daughter would be sold for so much to become a wife, and she was then reckoned as part of the "household," which explains why paternity rather than maternity has the stronger claim all through the Old Testament. A man was seldom said to be the son of his parents, but nearly always the son of his father who is mentioned by name. Not infrequently should occasion arise for the mother to be mentioned, she is known as the "mother of so and so," as, for example, at Cana in Galilee, where we are told that "the mother of Jesus was there." The more correct Biblical description is "Mary the mother of Jesus" rather than "Jesus the son of Mary," or "Mary the husband of Joseph." The Old Testament always seeks to preserve the male lineage, and frequently makes no mention of the identity of the wife or mother; for example, we do not know who David's mother was, neither are we directly informed as to what tribe the Blessed Virgin belonged, though it is always assumed that she also belonged to the House of David, the Tribe of Judah.

In early Semitic times, the woman was often the head of the clan or tribe (cf. Deborah), due to the reason of polyandry, which was more prevalent than bigamy. But this is quite another subject.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

THERE is a good daily demand for tickets for the Congress meetings—October 6th to 11th, and for the illustrated lecture on America on Wednesday evening, October 8th. We hope for record attendances at all gatherings. We wish our supporters to make it clear to their friends that admission is free to all the Congress meetings, and that only those who prefer to reserve seats need any tickets. For the lantern lecture special tickets are required, as stated overleaf.

One of the planks in the platform of the British-Israel-World Federation is the consolidation of the Anglo-Saxon race, and especially the promotion of good feeling, right understanding and co-operation between Britain and the United States. Therefore it is that the Executive have this year chosen this particular subject for the Secretary-General's Annual Congress lecture, and they hope that the Hall will be entirely filled. It is all too true that a lot of mischief is done by the Press on both sides of the Atlantic in each often misrepresenting the other's country. B.-I. speakers on both sides are doing what they can to correct this, and in this they have the sympathy of the best men and women among both great peoples, who regard it as a crime to foster strife, believing as they do, that—humanly speaking—the hope for civilization lies in harmony and co-operation between the British Commonwealth and the United States. We have to admit that the masses of our country do not in the least understand America. It is also true that the masses of America misunderstand and misrepresent Britain, while of the British Empire they know but little if anything. In both cases it seems extraordinary, and certainly it is much to be deplored. On our side it is common to dwell upon the mixed races in America, ignoring the fact, if indeed the fact is known, that notwithstanding the millions of Germans, French, Italians, etc., etc., there are ten millions more people of Anglo-Saxon extraction than there are in the whole of the British Isles, which means they outnumber the Anglo-Saxon population of Britain, Australia, New Zealand, Tasmania and India combined!

When in the United States last year I was given a very cordial reception everywhere, and was pressed to lecture right across the country from ocean to ocean. We were treated with the greatest kindness and hospitality, heard not a cross word, nor experienced anything discourteous as between Americans and British. This is a suitable place to mention that the official Flag of the British-Israel-World Federation is a combination of the British Flag and the Stars and Stripes. We ask, therefore, for a full Hall on October 8th. Will our friends kindly help by the distribution of circulars? The lantern pictures were secured by the Secretary-General at his own expense last year in the chief centres of America, and they are the finest procurable.

The whole of the proceeds of the lecture will be devoted to B.-I. funds without any deduction whatever, so that those who purchase tickets will be helping the funds just as much as by giving a donation.

May we venture to suggest that some of our friends might perhaps be disposed to give tickets to their acquaintances, or send money to us so that we may give tickets to families who can hardly afford to buy them? We shall be grateful.

Miss Hamilton Hunter will, by special request, give her lecture on "The Vicegerent of Israel, His Privileges and Responsibilities," on Wednesday afternoon next, September 17th, at 3 o'clock, at Headquarters, 6, Buckingham Gate, S.W., opposite Buckingham Palace; and by request the Rev. J. Oliver Vince, B.A., B.D., will address the meeting here on Thursday evening next, September 18th, at 7.30. All are cordially invited.

During the week September 15th to 20th the Rev. Guy Waddington, M.A., and Mr. Wm. Whitton are conducting a Mission in Darlington. Meetings will be held in the open-air in the Market Place, and on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings, at 7.30, in the Friends' Schoolroom, Skinnergate. Handbills to those who will write to Mr. Whitton, at 34, Denham Road, Sheffield. If any reader in the Area cares to arrange for a private meeting for friends on any afternoon, please write to the Rev. Guy Waddington, Christ Church Vicarage, St. Paul's Road, Bradford.

W. H. L. writes from U.S.A.:—"As I read each week the wonderful messages in your journal it seems to me that within the walls of 6, Buckingham Gate it has been given to you to find in very truth the long-searched-for Elixir of Life. All other papers seem to me in a spiritual sense tasteless. What wonderful things have been accomplished this year. The marvellous Manifesto is majestic, comprehensive and convincing. The prayers offered will reach the Throne of Grace and will be answered by an outpouring of the Spirit at the Congress, and the blessing will reach many parts of the world.

"Those of us here who believe in Israel teaching are watching world events. Only Almighty God can take away the heart of stone."

The Rev. Commander Roberts, R.N., writes:—"News has come from Denver, Colorado, U.S.A., that a group of prominent Jews from every State have assembled there, and that among them were Jewish senators, lawyers and doctors. The object of the meeting was to review the trial and crucifixion of Jesus Christ, and to make choice of 71 of the ablest and most learned Rabbis of the whole world to assemble at Jerusalem to consider and decide whether or not their fathers had taken part in the trial and crucifixion, and to either establish their innocence or confess their crime. The Holy Book points to a time in Zechariah xii, xiii, xiv, when terrible judgment will come upon the offenders, and only one-third part be delivered by their Messiah. It is possible this movement will grow, and the outcome may be that they will repent and acknowledge their Messiah."

The Rev. Dr. Goard has been preaching and lecturing in Vancouver, Victoria, and other places. He is now on his way to London, speaking en route at some of the Canadian centres.

Professor Odlum too has been very active in our Cause, speaking for various clubs and associations in British Columbia. About this time he will, we expect, be starting on his journey to England.

A Bishop writes :—" British-Israel Truth will triumph despite any opposition from blind leaders and theologians. Sometimes such opposition helps to forward the truth and arraigns the opposers,—as instanced by the astonishing effectiveness of your Manifesto. Illogical arguments appear ludicrous in the light of the solid and unassailable declaration of that memorable proclamation. Praying for the 'New Order' to speedily supervene, Yours in His Service."

* * *

A Methodist Minister writes :—" I greatly admire the activity of your Federation. A few days ago I received a letter from the Secretary of 'The Wesley Bible Union' in which he said : 'Many of the British-Israel believers are members of the W.B.U. They are the very salt of the earth. I have never met one who is not a fervent Bible Christian.' "

The Treasurer of our Leicester Branch writes :—" I must tell you what a splendid meeting we had at the Memorial Hall. The Rev. Joseph Gay was the speaker and he attracted the largest audience we have ever had in the Summer. He gave us a wonderful and stirring address on 'The Place of Jesus in British-Israel teaching.'

"The Deputy Lord Mayor presided (in the absence of the Lord Mayor, on holiday), and he was supported by Alderman T. W. Walker, J.P., a past Mayor of this city, and a Vice-President of this Branch. We shall not soon forget how deeply we were stirred by the impressive address, and our members are asking for the opportunity of hearing Mr. Gay again. Leicester is making steady progress."

P.A. writes :—" I have much pleasure in enclosing (as last year) £5 for your funds with my very best wishes for the success of the many activities of the Federation. I continually pray that God will bless abundantly all your work : it is so splendid and so inspiring. I speak of it at every opportunity."

We regret to learn of the death of Mr. John Wilson, of Yarm-on-Tees, though he had attained the good age of 78. He was a staunch B.-I. and had devoted 40 years to studying the subject. Kindly and genial and educated above the average, he possessed the gift of being able to make difficult things easy, and so was a real missionary.

He gave a series of lectures on the Great Pyramid which caused many in the district to study its teaching. He will be greatly missed in Yarm.

A BISHOP'S CALL FOR UNITY.

Preaching recently at St. Nicholas Church, Great Yarmouth, Dr. Ashton Oldham, Bishop of Albany, U.S.A., gave an urgent call for unity and service. Speaking on the relations of England and the United States he quoted Samuel Johnson's striking phrase, " Our friendship must be kept in good repair," and said there is constant need of interpreters to make the two countries understand one another better. Nothing is more important to the welfare of the world than the increasing and abiding friendship of all English-thinking and English-speaking people. The British Empire and the United States represent one quarter of the area of the globe, and have jointly a population of 570 millions.

There is something very precious about Anglo-Saxon culture, which should be preserved for the good of the world. Combined there is no limit to the good these two great countries can do. War between them is unthinkable. There should be a real warm friendship and understanding ; whole-hearted co-operation for the world's good. Despite anything some irresponsible newspapers and some politicians may say, all thinking American people reciprocate England's desire for a closer friendship. England and America speak a common tongue, they have a great common inheritance, and have a common conception of liberty and freedom. These constitute vital ties.

The purposes of our friendship are not self-preservation and aggrandizement, we must look at it from the higher standpoint of the service they can render to the world.

We were together in the War, may we always be together, side by side in the van of the world's progress.

A great congregation joined heartily in the service, conducted by the Vicar. Five microphones broadcasted the service and the sermon.

The sermon was also preached in Westminster Abbey.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

THE AUTHORITY OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.—II.

BY THE REV. DR. W. PASCOE GOARD.

THE Book of Revelation has also its authorship indication. It is "John; Who bare record of the word of God, and of the testimony of Jesus Christ, and of all things that he saw."

This is most certainly a reference to a former work. When and where did John bear record of the Word of God. Let us turn to the first chapter of the Gospel of St. John, and read its opening sentences. It is a record of the Word of God. "In the beginning was the Word; and the Word was with God, and the Word was God."

The opening sentences of the first Epistle General of John pick up the same story in the same form of phraseology. "That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled of the Word of life; (for the life was manifested, and we have seen it, and bear witness and shew unto you that eternal life which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us;) That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you."

And so we find the Revelation joining the authorship of the Book of Revelation to the authorship of the Gospel and the Epistle of St. John in these specific words: "The Revelation of Jesus Christ which God gave unto him, to shew unto his servants things which must shortly come to pass; and he sent and signified it by his angel unto his servant JOHN; Who bare record of the Word of God, and of the testimony of Jesus Christ and of all things that he saw . . ."

There are other indications which indicate the author of the Book of Revelation to be the Apostle John. But this will suffice for the illustrative purposes of this article.

Not till generations and centuries had passed, and the personal influence of the Apostles had passed away, did the Church think it necessary or seemly for it to judge what writings should be included in the Canon. But the time came when the Church Council did sit in judgment and they did decide on the writings which should be included in the Canon. These writings were confined to those which the Apostles had themselves written, or caused to be written for them under their own eye. In settling the Canon of the Scriptures the Church was careful to remember that the authority had been vested in the personality of the Apostles. The Church made no claim whatsoever to any such authority as being vested in the Church. Every item of the New Testament was accepted because of the fact that it carried the personal authority of one or more of the Apostles.

In the seventh century the Council of the Christian Church prepared and authorized the Canon of the New Testament, as we have it in our hands to-day. Every item in the Book carries with it Apostolic authority. Therefore the authority of the Church is not required to authorize any of the Books therein contained. But the authority of the Church restricted the number of items to those which are now found in the Bible, and they did so on the ground that only these bear Apostolic authority. Let us note this most clearly. The Church did not authorize the Apostolic writings. The Church rejected non-Apostolic writings. The Church's action was purely negative. No authority but Apostolic authority could warrant any writing going into the New Testament. No other authority is sufficient for such a purpose.

Now let us consider. If no authority but that of the Apostles is sufficient to warrant any oral or written word to be included in the Bible, then it follows most certainly that no such authority is sufficient to add anything outside of the Canon of the Scriptures.

The voice of the Church might debar; the voice of the Church can add nothing to the Holy Scriptures. Therefore the voice of the Church is most emphatically subordinate to the voice of the authoritative Scriptures.

How does this apply? Well, for instance, the voice of the Holy Scriptures declares that God Himself ended the virginity of the Blessed Mary. Before the birth of the Lord Christ the Lord by the voice of the Angel Gabriel ordered the marriage of the Virgin Mary. From a Virgin she became by Divine appointment a MATRON, A MOTHER IN ISRAEL. The sons and the daughters born to her husband and her were registered in the vital statistics of the Temple, and are recorded in the Bible. Advertising this great fact to all the world the first Head of the Church after the Resurrection of our Lord was St. James the Just, the brother of our Lord, the son of Joseph and Mary. After the death of St. James, the Church never had one person whose authority was either exercised or acknowledged by all the Church. That it should be so was not in our Lord's plan. He Himself was and always will be the High Priest and APOSTLE of our profession. The Church meets in Christ its living Head. The Church had TWELVE Apostles after Him. The Church had A MULTITUDINOUS MINISTRY thereafter.

Again the New Testament declares emphatically the Christ was ONCE OFFERED, and that "THERE REMAINETH NO MORE A SACRIFICE FOR SINS." Yet there is a voice of one branch of the Church which claims to speak with authority for all the Church and which claims to have a sacrificing priesthood. In the Mass they daily claim to offer the very Body and Blood of Christ as a sacrifice for sins. Thus the voice of Apostolic authority, speaking through the Books recognized as Apostolic by the Church, overrides and condemns that voice of a section of the Church in these later days. What shall be said regarding this matter?

This must be said, that inasmuch as the Church refused to allow any statement or doctrine or writing which does not carry Apostolic authority to be placed in the Bible for the guidance of the Church and people, by the same act the Church of the seventh century debarred the Church in later centuries from making any such authoritative assertions of doctrine.

Therefore, we shall disregard the voice of the Church in these later times whenever the voice of the Church is at variance with the Holy Scriptures, and we do so by the authority of our Lord and of His Apostles, and by the decision of the early Church.

Moses and the Prophets, our Lord and His Apostles, all agree that Divine authority is vested in the "Word of God written."

The Church itself debarred all other voices from a place in the sacred Scriptures, and from a share in the authority of the sacred Scriptures.

This is where the Church in Britain took its stand long ago. This is the place where all the Christian Church shall yet stand.

Unfortunately the Roman Catholic Church has asserted the claim to an authority for its own voice on a par with, or even superior to, the Holy Scriptures. In this they have taken the path of error which must be repented for, or which will lead to downfall. The world is more and more opening its eyes to the teachings of the Word of God, and is more and more testing all things by the authority of the Word of God written.

AN EXAMINATION OF MR. AVARY H. FORBES' "STONE WALL."

(Letter No. 11.)

BY PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc.

49th.—Another statement of Mr. Forbes needs a comment. He says, "But is it not plain that if we are descendants of the lost tribes, so likewise are many other nationalities, and the term British-Israel is ridiculous?"

Not so, Mr. Forbes! Eminently sane, Mr. Forbes! It will help you to know the meaning of the word British. It means covenant man. Simple, is it not?

I call a Cornishman British, and, in like manner, I call a man of Devon British, and I call a man of Essex British! Of course, and truly so! But in no way does that interfere with their shire rating. One is of Devon, another of Essex, and the third from Cornwall.

Again, I call a Welshman British, a Scotchman British, an Englishman British, a Manxman British, and a true Irishman British. All quite true! And in no way does this change the rating of these men as Irish, Manx, Welsh, English and Scotch.

All alike are British, but all are not Manx.

Again, I call a Norseman British, a Dane British, most Swedes British, Jutes British, and ancient Saxons British. And I do well. I hold to good history, and of course thus please Mr. Forbes. Here we come, yes, we arrive at our goal. The Devon man, Englishman, Scot, Irish, Welsh, Manx, Jute, Dane, Norse and Swede are each and all British, each being a man of the covenants in force from their fathers Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

But a Scot is not a Devonshire man, nor is a Norse an Irishman, even though they are all men of the ancient covenants. While they may be British, i.e., covenant peoples, they are not all members of the official Kingdom of Israel, ruled over by the seed of David and leading the world in all that counts for universal human uplift.

Mr. Forbes, please use the word British in its true sense and your greatest difficulty will vanish as vanished your "Stone Wall," and the term will not seem ridiculous to your analytical mind.

Never mind if some of our British-Israel writers do or have used the word British as if it belonged only to the people of the British Isles and their descendants in the Overseas Dominions.

50th.—Mr. Forbes kindly says: "I am not anxious to puncture a harmless theory." Good of you, indeed! If harmless, then there is no need of trying to puncture it.

But, my dear good sir; you use this gentle speech after doing your best to puncture this "harmless theory." And doing your best, you have failed and quite properly are ready to let it go as harmless.

Digitized by Google

But, farther on in your concluding remarks, you say: "The Devil takes care that such theories are used as apples of discord."

Pretty strong talk this! This "harmless theory" seems to be Devil-begotten. Queer! This arch-enemy of man has not the reputation of using harmless theories in his contest. So you, Mr. Forbes, go so far as to say British-Israel teaching is Devil-begotten and Devil-used. Of course you do not mean this. Surely you do know that we, who believe and teach that the Anglo-Saxon peoples have their early origin in Israel, believe, stand for and teach that the whole Bible is the revealed Word of God.

You surely know that we, all over the world, stand for and teach most earnestly the plan of personal salvation through the merits of our Redeemer and Saviour, the Eternal Son of the Eternal Father.

This teaching comes first with British-Israelites the world over, and the national teaching comes second.

If you know this fact, your words above quoted are not kind, not Christian and not true!

At this point I do not think so much of you as when you were telling things historically correct.

51*st*.—Lastly, Mr. Forbes, considerably disturbed by Diabolus, to wit, the Old Serpent, the Dragon, otherwise known as Devil, says as his final word: "Thus Satan gains his point by setting the Lord's people at variance, and creating estrangement and animosity among them."

It jars a man's nerves, if he be a Christian, to be told that he helps Satan to estrange other Christians. I sincerely hope the writer of the pamphlet under discussion is not co-operating with the Dragon to estrange Christians and stir up animosity among them.

I have great pleasure in saying that I, as a British-Israelite, am not knowingly linked up with or serving his Satanic Majesty to separate Christians.

Further, I do not know any British-Israelite who is engaged in this sort of work. We go further yet, and say that we are trying to oppose Satan and aid in the work of salvation to the best of our ability.

Doubtless the Dragon keeps after us all and does betimes get a grip on some of us, myself and Mr. Forbes included, perhaps! But in no case does Mr. Forbes or the present writer join up intentionally with Satan to cause bad feelings in the Christian ranks.

The B.-I. people are whole-hearted in their desire to serve the Lord and humanity, to win men and women to the Christian fold and to make the world better. Come over and help us in our laudable work, Mr. Forbes.

THE SACRED TENTH.

By P. W. Thompson, M.A.

(Author of The Whole Tithe, Israel in Prophecy and History, etc., etc.)

For this article we have borrowed the title of the late Dr. Lansdell's famous work on tithes, a work which is still on sale, and which is more than worthy of perusal by all those who are desirous of becoming deep students of this most important subject.

Concerning the tenth, Dr. Alexander Whyte said that "somehow or other the tenth part fills all classical literature as well as the whole of Holy Scripture." Certainly one is quite amazed at the frequency with which that dedicated proportion is alluded to, even though it be in an almost accidental manner. We happen recently to have been making short literary excursions in the territories of Dickens, Crockett, Shakespeare, Scott, and Dumas, and to have been reading the Old Testament in the Septuagint version. As for Dickens, the word tithe is used in Dombey and Son, but casually. But in Our Mutual Friend Boffin's first act after coming into the Harmon Estate is to go round to his solicitor and instruct him to offer "for the apprehension and conviction of the murderer, a reward of one tithe of the property." Turning to Crockett's Raiders, it is said of Johnny Faa, the King of the Gypsies, "there's no a penny that rattles in a beggar's wooden cup, no a boddle that is gi'en him at a changehouse, but Johnny Faa himsel' gets his tenth o't. He's a kind of pope amang them." And deserting Faa, King of the Gypsies, for Henry VI, King of England, we note with interest (Part I, Act V, Sc. V) that Henry directs the Earl of Suffolk to "Take therefore shipping, post my lord to France,

"For your expenses and sufficient charge
"Among the people gather up a tenth."

Dumas is careful to let us know that the gigantic Porthos made a weekly habit of dispensing his tithes to the poor, though the content seems rather to infer that this remarkable warrior regarded the practice as by way of a little necessary spiritual whitewashing. Had Porthos been a student of the Apocrypha he would have come across the passage, "Bind not up sin twice, for in one sin thou shalt not be unpunished. Say not, 'He will look upon the multitude of my gifts, and when I offer to the Most High God He will accept it.'" But Porthos was not a student of divinity. He was a portent of humanity.

Scott introduces the tithe, somewhat jocosely, in a fine passage of Ivanhoe, where thieves divide their plunder, and readers of The Antiquary will remember the Rev. Dr. Blattergowl and his constant and practical study of "teinds" which is the Scotch term for tithes. Which study so absorbed his attention, being an eager recipient of the said emoluments, that on one occasion, being kept waiting for his dinner, the hungry man spent the painful interval in the perfect peace of mental and monetary satisfaction, his attention absorbed by a chapter in an ecclesiastical authority on "teinds, or tithes."

Really one is more than struck by the constant reference to this "Sacred Tenth" by so many writers of different ages and different nations. It all points to a wide diffusion through the ranks of thoughtful men blessed with the historical outlook, of the knowledge that throughout historic time God has made a claim, and a very definite claim, upon the material increase of man.

It has always been a matter of surprise to us that the Septuagint is always sold at what must be to so many possible readers the impossible price of twenty shillings. For we have reason to believe that this version was the Old Testament very largely made use of by our Lord and the Apostles. Quotation after quotation in the New Testament is taken from the Septuagint, not from the customary Version. This being the case, one would have thought that sufficient demand would have manifested itself amongst the Christian public for this work, to have insured its issue in a much cheaper form. Such however is not the case, and in consequence most Christians have not read the Old Testament in the form in which our Lord certainly read it, and to which the Greek Church adhered for three centuries. We are aware that many hotly-debated issues are raised by mere reference to the work, issues into which we have no present desire to penetrate. Anyone desiring to pursue the subject is referred to Ch. VI of McCormack's Heptadic Structure. We approach the matter from the standpoint of the tithe only. But while on the subject of figures, and for the sake of those interested in questions of Biblical Chronology we may note the suggestion put forward by McCormack, that the chronology of the Septuagint admits of the accuracy of the Egyptian and Babylonish systems, which the chronology of the Massoretic Text does not. And this causes one furiously to think. Certainly one or the other has been deliberately tampered with. Which?

In The Whole Tithe we have pointed out that the Septuagint does away with the whole mystery concerning the incident of the offerings of Cain and Abel, showing that that of Cain was rejected solely for its niggardliness, in that it was "rightly brought, but not rightly divided." In 1 Samuel i, 21, or 1 Kings i, 21, as it is called in the Septuagint, there occurs an interesting reference to the tithe. In the Revised Version we read "And the man Elkanah and all his house went up to offer unto the Lord the yearly sacrifice and his vow." But in the Septuagint "And the man Helkana and all his house went up to offer in Selom the yearly sacrifice, and his vows, and all the tithes of his land." This reminds one of a parallel passage from the Apocrypha (Tobit i, 5-8): "All the tribes which fell away together sacrificed to the heifer Baal, and so did the house of Naphtali, my father. And I alone went often to Jerusalem at the feasts, as it hath been ordained unto all Israel by an everlasting decree, having the first-fruits and tenths of mine increase." One cannot help noting that Elkanah, a God-fearing man, only went once a year to Jerusalem to discharge himself of this responsibility, though the Mosaic Code demanded a triple attendance. And so it was for nearly the whole nation until severe chastisement in later days brought a closer adherence to Mosaic ordinance. In the meanwhile it would appear that God graciously tolerated a partial obedience, for Elkanah was a much blessed man. His single attendance would enable him to bring to the Treasury the whole of his tithes.

However this may have been the Septuagint states, as the customary version does not, that Elkanah was in the direct strain of Abraham and Jacob in this respect, that he "paid all the tithes of his land." This phrase "all the tithes" is of course the equivalent of "the whole tithe" of Malachi, and it may be of interest to turn to Malachi (again in the Septuagint) and see what rendering is put forward for our acceptance in the famous passage which is the sheet-anchor of that increasingly multitudinous assembly of persons who have accepted the privilege and obligation of tithe-paying.

There is considerable divergence from the better known version, and that divergence does not perhaps tend to make it known as a better version. But, as is usual with the variations of the Septuagint, they are at least interesting. "Will a man insult God? for ye insult me. But ye say, Wherein have we insulted thee? In that the tithes and first-fruits are with you still .... The year is completed, and ye have brought all the produce into the storehouses; but there shall be the plunder thereof in its house; return now on this behalf, saith the Lord Almighty, see if I will not open to you the torrents [or windows, or flood gates] of heaven and pour out my blessing upon you until ye are satisfied. And I will appoint food for you, and I will not destroy the fruit of your land, and your vine in the field shall not fail .... And all nations shall call you blessed, for ye shall be a desirable land, saith the Lord Almighty."

A witty Frenchman said of the constant changes in our English educational system: "The more it changes, the more it's the same thing." And it may be said of the variant renderings of Malachi iii, 10, from Authorized Version through Revised and Moffatt, as far as the Septuagint, that the more they change, the more they are the same thing. There is first the direct charge of robbery in withholding the tithe, which robbery the Septuagint prefers to regard as flagrant insult. The Septuagint seems to confine this insulting behaviour to a single year—"the year is completed"—whilst the customary version would equally apply to a term of years. But there is in both an equivalent charge of misbehaviour, a charge to put the matter right by repentance and restitution—"return now on this behalf," and a promise of blessing following hard upon obedience,—"I will pour out my blessing upon you until ye are satisfied." Seeing how much it takes to make some of us satisfied with respect to this world's gear this promise is a fair parallel to the "blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it," to revert to words which are more familiar to us. A point of interest is that the Septuagint joins the tithe and the first-fruits together in close proximity. The tithe was two shillings in the pound, and the first-fruits from fourpence to sixpence in the pound, according to the means and the disposition of the donor. In the calculations given in The Whole Tithe we have assumed it throughout at fourpence, and believe that we have by so doing fairly set forth Israelitish custom. As regards this assessment we have no clear Scriptural guidance, but are compelled to rely on the testimony of Maimonides, a witness whom Lansdell considered sufficiently authoritative for the purpose. There is certainly a high degree of probability attaching to his testimony.

Now these excursions into literature both sacred and profane, in our search for references to "the tenth part which fills all classical literature," proved highly interesting to ourselves, and we trust will to our readers, but what is the ultimate intent? We may reply, with the wise Prospero

"Hear a little further
"And then I'll bring thee to the present business
"Which now's upon us, without the which this story
"Were most impertinent."

Literature is only of value in so far as it affects life. There are times when one is so mentally inert that the only permissible form of literature is the lightest, but even that lightest stuff should be clean stuff, and joyous stuff. We have deep sympathy with the clergyman who recently gave it as his opinion that one of the Church's great needs at the present moment is a good novelist who is a true believer. When in our hours of ease we relapse into Dickens, and Charles Reade, and Captain Marryat, and Tom Hughes, and to some extent Thackeray also, it adds and adds greatly to our intellectual enjoyment and refreshment to find that these men believed in God and were not afraid to say so. Where are we to find their like in the present day? It was a wise man who said that "when a new book came out, he always read an old one."

Our present point is simply this, that if this constant reference to the tenth fills all classical literature, how have these constant references affected your life and mine? Has the repeated suggestion found its normal effect in habitual action?

At this period of time few men are wholly ignorant upon the subject of the tithe. It is much in the air. Thirty years ago a religious journal endeavoured to secure a series of letters for its correspondence column on the subject of tithing, and had to drop the whole project. Within the last year a correspondence on tithing started itself in another religious periodical, and so completely had the atmosphere changed that the esteemed Editor wrote me stating that "this correspondence is like Tennyson's brook." Our readers will recognize the irony of the quotation. A generation since it couldn't start. Now it can't stop, unless the flood be editorially dammed. Which is a healthy sign.

Under God, this happy state of affairs is, we believe, eventually traceable to the fine work which Dr. Lansdell wrought in his day. Modern Canterbury pilgrims may well pay a tribute of respect to his memory by visiting the City Museum and viewing the Lansdell Collection. For Lansdell was a man of many interests. Tithe-payers in particular might render this little token of esteem to a great man whose memory must be kept green. His record demands this.

Then if, in the overruling Providence of God, and partly as a consequence of Lansdell's work, partly as a consequence of other works, partly as a consequence of editorial courtesy, and partly as a consequence of constant allusion in all classical literature, this subject has been so widely brought before the Christian public, why is there any necessity for further reference thereto within the confines of these pages?

For two or three reasons. In the first place, the "Christian public" is made up of units. Men are not converted in masses, but individually. So with their pockets. Tithe-paying amongst Christians is, thank God, greatly on the increase. But there are individual Christians who are not tithe-payers, who are not even systematic givers, and these are the men we are after. Secondly, we have come across numbers of tithing Christians who never bring the practice before the notice of others, because they "think that they all know all about it." Only a little while ago we met a man who gave us to understand that he thought all Christians started paying their tithe as soon as they became Christians, that the practice began with their conversion. This is hardly true of one case in a hundred. And how shall the remaining ninety-nine hear without a preacher? Or rather having heard, as many of them now have, how are they to come to the point without being brought to the point? In every congregation of Christians there are men and women simply waiting for straightforward preaching on this topic, waiting for the last clerical tap to drive the nail right up to the head. Oh, for the ministerial hammer!

We must make the frank admission that, despite the constant reference to the Sacred Tenth throughout all literature, sacred and profane, our eyes have been dulled, and our hearts hardened. The tithe has not been paid, and it is because of this contempt of God in material things that the Church is so terribly impoverished in spiritual things. Let me ask each reader two questions: (1) Are you a tithe-payer? (2) Are you prepared to become a missionary of tithing? With our 2,000,000 unemployed, and our low spiritual level, these questions are urgent. The same cause is responsible for our national poverty in things economic and things Divine. And that cause is "robbery of God."

One sentence as to the devolution of the tithe, and that a very short one. In these days of Modernism a Fundamentalist must make the matter of the devolution of his tithe a matter of the most earnest prayer. He is dealing with God's Revenue. It must not be diverted in directions upon which no blessing from God can possibly fall. For these things we shall render an account at the Last Day. Will that account pass the audit of the Sacred Treasury?

ELIJAH, AND THE RESTORATION OF ALL THINGS.

By the Rev. Joseph Gay, A.T.S.

Malachi, in words which close the Old Testament Canon, speaks thus: "Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the great and terrible day of the Lord come. And he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers; lest I come and smite the earth with a curse." (R.V.) This, and Malachi iii, 1, are the only references we have in the Old Testament to the coming again of Elijah, the prophet of Israel, who prophesied in the days of Ahab, king of Israel.

In the Gospels we have three most important references. According to St. Luke, the Angel Gabriel, in announcing the birth of the Forerunner, John the Baptist, speaks on this wise: "And he (John) shall go before His face in the spirit and power of Elijah, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the disobedient to walk in the wisdom of the just; to make ready for the Lord a people prepared for Him." (R.V.)

Our Lord, in His estimate of His Forerunner John, said: "And if ye are willing to receive it, this is Elijah which is to come." (St. Matt. xi, 14.) St. Mark tells us that when they came down from the Mount of Transfiguration His disciples asked Him, saying: "The scribes say that Elijah must first come. And He said unto them, Elijah indeed cometh first, and restoreth all things; and how is it written of the Son of man that He should suffer many things, and be set at nought? But I say unto you, that Elijah is come, and they have also done unto him whatsoever they listed, even as it is written of him." (St. Mark ix, 9-13. R.V.)

It is clear then, according to our Lord's own word, that the prophecy of Malachi, concerning the coming of Elijah, before that terrible day of the Lord, was fulfilled in the birth of John the Baptist.

Now there would be no difficulty about this matter were it not for the phrase which our Lord uses, "Restoreth all things." It is manifest surely that John the Baptist did not restore all things. His premature death cut short his ministry at a very early period. He certainly did not restore all things in the sense in which we understand the phrase. The prophet Malachi does not use the phrase at all. He describes the scope and extent of Elijah's ministry thus: "He shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers; lest I come and smite the earth with a curse." Is this what is meant by the restoration of all things? Who can tell? One thing is certain that such mutual turning of fathers to children, and children to fathers, is fundamental to the universal restoration of all things.

Now the scope of the Forerunner's ministry coincides with the scope of the ministry of the Master whose Forerunner he is. The extent of the one is the extent of the other. A herald can only exercise a heraldry consonant with the ministry of the lord he heralds. He cannot go beyond him, and he must not fall short of his content and intent. That is surely clear. Is not that what our Lord meant when He immediately added: "And how is it written of the Son of man, that He should suffer many things, and be set at nought?" John, as Elijah, could not go beyond that. The suffering of the Son of man, the setting at nought of the Son of man, must necessarily limit the ministry of John as the "Elijah who was for to come."

But was not the ministry of John a ministry of reconciliation? Was not the whole purport of his preaching to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the hearts of the children to their fathers? We have but the smallest fragment of John's ministry recorded; but we have sufficient to indicate its trend. It was a ministry which, if carried to its logical conclusion, would have restored all things. But how could all things be restored at that time, when the Son of man had yet to suffer and be set at nought? The suffering of the Master of necessity limited the ministry of the servant. It could not be otherwise. The one involved the other.

What was the ministry of Christ in His first appearance upon the earth? The answer to that question will clear the ground for a right understanding of John's ministry, and will reveal him as the Elijah who was for to come.

SAVIOURHOOD.

The first ministry of Christ was the ministry of Saviourhood. Though the throne of His father David had been given to Him from the beginning, He could not, at that time, sit upon that throne. The impending Cross forbade it. They would have taken Him by force and made Him their king. They had sufficient insight into His conduct and behaviour to see that He was every inch a king; but He could not allow it.

"I have finished," said He, praying to His Father in the Upper Room, "the work which Thou gavest Me to do." What work had He finished? The work which centred in His Atonement: the work of Saviourhood, and Redeemership of Israel.

Thus it is that the ministry of John was a ministry of reconciliation, fundamental to the restoration of all things. Such reconciliation could only be effective in and through the sacrifice of the Son of man, "To make reconciliation for the sins of the people."

"For this is He that was spoken of by Isaiah the prophet, saying, The voice of one crying in the wilderness, make ye ready the way of the Lord, make His paths straight." (St. Matt. iii, 3. R.V.)

What way of the Lord? The way of salvation.

How could that way be straightened out in preparation for His Coming? By the repentance of the people.

"Repent ye, for the kingdom of Heaven is at hand."

Here again, repentance is essential to the restoration of all things. We know perfectly well that, in this our day and generation, repentance by the nations is absolutely essential to restoration of the nations. So then, as far as it was possible at that time, John did restore all things as our Lord said.

The First Coming of Jesus involved the coming of one in the spirit and power of Elijah. The Second Coming of Jesus will involve the coming of that same spirit and power of Elijah. That spirit and power may come in an individual person, as in the case of John, or in an individual nation, as in the case of Israel, but it is bound to come, prior to the Second Advent. Why? For the same reason, "to prepare the way of the Lord, and to make His paths straight."

What way of the Lord this time? The way not of salvation but of judgment; for Jesus will come, not to Saviourhood but to Kingship.

KINGSHIP.

It is very noticeable that all the parabolic references to our Lord's Second Coming are couched in regal terms. "When the Son of man shall come in His glory, and all the angels with Him, then shall He sit upon the throne of His glory." (St. Matt. xxv, 31-46.)

"But when the king came in to behold the guests." (St. Matt. xxii, 11.) It is also important to note, in connection with our Lord's Second Coming, the words: "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in the whole world for a testimony unto all the nations; and then shall the end come." (St. Matt. xxiv, 14.)

The restoration of all things in the spirit and power of Elijah must precede His Second Coming, just as it preceded His First; and the fundamental basis of the one is the fundamental basis of the other. It is the same message of reconciliation, the turning of the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the hearts of the children to their fathers. This is in accord with all prophecy which insists upon the repentance of Israel before the Lord shall come. There must be this spirit of mutual understanding, and mutual forbearance, and mutual love, as an essential preparation of the way of the Lord, a straightening of the highway for the approach of the King.

The message of Anglo-Israel is along that line. As far as the Anglo-Saxon race is concerned, that is the goal we aim at, and that is the goal which, by the grace of God, we hope shortly to reach. In the reconciliation of that Anglo-Saxon race, in the solidarity of that God-created people, will surely come, as a natural corollary, the reconciliation of all God's people everywhere throughout the civilized world.

THE ELIJAH OF AHAB'S DAY.

Let us now take a glance at the Elijah of Ahab's day, for we may learn thereby one or two things. The question arises, in the first instance, why is this prophet, among all the prophets of Israel, selected as the true type of forerunnership? We have no writings from his pen. He has no undue prominence among the prophets of Israel. Why is he a type, and not Isaiah, or Jeremiah, or Daniel, or any of the other great prophets whose writings have come down to us? Why, when our Lord was transfigured, did this prophet appear with Moses, as representing the prophetic office? There must be something outstanding in this man to warrant his selection. And there surely is.

Elijah was unique among all the great prophets of Israel, in that he lived in the immediate, and not in the remote. His vision is not projected into the future. He deals with the everliving present. In that present, his ministry is a ministry of restoration.

There is first and foremost the restoring of a true Deistic concept. That is the meaning of Mount Carmel. If a nation is to be prepared for the Lord, then that nation must return to a true monotheistic concept. "If God be God then serve Him; but if Baal then serve him." God must be first all the time.

This will involve a strong and even vehement attack upon the powers of evil in high places. In this Elijah is a true forerunner. If a nation is to be restored to pure thinking and clean living, it must be reformed from above downward, and not from below upward. That is to say, the order of reform which obtains to-day among the nations must be reversed. If the head be sick, then the whole body is sick also. To bring the body therefore into health, you must heal the head; the healing of the body will follow as a natural consequence. That is the order of Elijah's restoration; the fathers first and then the children.

Elijah attacked iniquity in high places. He challenged the king, and all that the king stood for in Israel. Elijah's message was a national message, his ministry a national ministry, his restoration an immediate restoration. He is therefore, above all the prophets of Israel, a true type of the Forerunner. Up to this time Elijah's ministry had been rather destructive than constructive. He had been pulling down rather than building up. This was an essential but preparatory work of the forerunnership. Having cleared the ground, Elijah then began to build.

The great constructive work of this prophet, which he began somewhat late in life (one estimates him to have been about 60 years of age at the time), was the establishing of the schools of the prophets. This work continues even unto this day. Every school and every college in Anglo-Saxondom has its genesis in Elijah's schools of the prophets. He gathered the youth of the nation together and taught them the law of the Lord. He trained them and sent them forth to teach the nation the law of the Lord.

Can we imagine any work more preparatory, in these last days, than this? The spirit and power of Elijah is the spirit and power of the teaching prophet, who gathers the youth of the nation to his feet and, training them in the knowledge of the law of the Lord, sends them forth to instruct the whole nation.

Nay, more; not only must the Israel nation be taught; but the whole world is to be brought to an appreciation of the law of the Lord, so that when the Lord shall come, He will find a people prepared for Him, knowing what His law is, and ready to obey that law. The restoration of all things involves education, enlightenment, knowledge in the law of the Lord God of Israel. All the characteristics of Elijah's great ministry are indeed the characteristics of forerunnership; hence he stands as a true type of that spirit and power which must precede the Coming of the Great King.

THE INEFFABLE NAME OF GOD.—II.

BY THE LATE REV. MARTIN LYMAN STREATOR, M.A.

GOD was a Designer before He became a Constructor. He was a Designer and a Constructor before He became an Upholder. He was all of these before He became a Redeemer. All the names of God, except His absolute name, I AM, Yahweh or Jehovah, are names of relations. Thoughtful design of the self-existent and ever-living Jehovah is the basis of Creation, Providence and Redemption.

This design is so precise and definite that it may be represented by geometrical relations and numerical expressions. The science of Chemistry demonstrates that every element in the mineral kingdom has its own peculiar number according to which it acts on other elements and unites with them. In His design and method of construction of the universe the Creator gives us intellectual emblems of His own mental characteristics. As the Apostle Paul says: "The invisible things of him since the creation of the world are clearly seen, being perceived through the things that are made, even his everlasting power and divinity." (Rom. i, 20, R.V.) God is the greatest of thinkers, and He delights to reveal Himself to those who take delight in thinking.

As He reveals Himself by what He has done, it becomes us as His intelligent creatures to study Him through His works. They demonstrate that He is Palmoni, the Wonderful Numberer, as revealed to the prophet Daniel. He says, as translated by Dr. Robert Young: "I heard a certain holy one speaking, and a certain holy one saith to the wonderful numberer who is speaking: till when is the vision of the continual sacrifice, and of the transgression, an astonishment, to make both sanctuary and host a treading down? And he saith unto me, Till evening-morning two thousand and three hundred, then is the holy place declared right." (Dan. viii, 13, 14.) In the mind and the counsel of the eternal God, the King of the ages, the times and the seasons all are numbered. He knows and indicates in a secret truth the time of the great consummation which is coming on apace. The numbers dominating the whole creation are rooted in His own being, and, in the midst of complexity arising from manifold simplicity, they display His supreme wisdom and omnipotent power.

Three is the numerical emblem of God in His work, primarily because there are three Divine actors in the work. The Father devises all things, the Son executes all things, and the Holy Spirit reveals, confirms and consummates all things. Each in intimate relation and perfect unity with the others performs His own distinctive work for the happiness of the whole creation and the glory of God. "Distributions of gifts there are, yet the same Spirit, and distributions of ministries there are, and the same Lord, and distributions of energies there are, and the same God who energizeth all things in all." (1 Cor. xii, 4-6.) In each case the same Deity is working in executing one supreme will according to the peculiar work belonging to each distinctive Person. God over all energizes all persons for the accomplishment of His work in executing His will. Hence the Son of God Himself said: "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to accomplish his work." (John iv, 34.)

Three is the numerical symbol of God's going forth in His mighty work throughout the universe, because in the unity of the Divine work the three Divine actors co-operate perfectly with each other, executing one supreme will.

The first effort of the Creator in His going forth may be represented in mathematics by a straight line. This is simply a symbol to help us in our finite understanding to gain an apprehension of the mighty work of God as the Creator. But He went forth in further effort, which may be represented by another line at right angles to this first line. This is simply a mathematical symbol of the beginning of creative energies. The crossing of these two lines gives a centre. We may consider it the centre of the universe. Their extension from the centre gives the four cardinal points, North, South, East and West. Hence in the very nature of things, from the necessities of the case, four is the numerical symbol of creation, for it comes into existence under these fourfold conditions. Hence in the Great Pyramid of Egypt, which is becoming "a sign and a witness unto Jehovah of hosts" (Isa. xix, 20), the miracle in stone, stands on a base that is four-square, and exactly oriented, from which four triangles slope to the "chief corner stone" as the apex of the Pyramid, pointing upward to God as the head over all things. Starting from the centre of these two lines crossing each other at right angles, we have four lines branching out in four different directions. These represent the dynamical forces of the Creator as He marches onward in majestic strides building up the magnificent temple of the creation. To represent numerically this dynamical energy we need to raise three to the fourth power. This is not an arbitrary statement. Its truth inheres in the nature of things. Three times three are nine, which is the square of three. Nine times nine are eighty-one, which is the square of nine and the fourth power of three. But God goes forth in His creative power not only in these four directions, but in every possible direction. Hence to get a numerical expression symbolizing this thought we need to square the eighty-one. Now $81 \times 81 = 6561$, which is simply three raised to the eighth power. As four is the emblem of creation, eight, which is twice four, is the emblem of the twofold creation, embracing the heavens and the earth. Hence this notable number, 6561, which is three raised to the eighth power, according to the law of symbolism which is based on the association of ideas, is the numerical emblem of the primeval oracle of creation, which in its simplest form declares, "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." (Gen. i, 1.)

As a numerical symbol, 6561 represents God working from Himself as a centre in all directions throughout the universe. It is not simply a line. Neither is it a level plain. It has length. But it also has breadth. But, more than this, it also has depth or thickness. In some respects it is like an immense cube in that it has length and breadth and thickness. In other respects it is like a vast globe, extending in all directions from the central throne of God, the invisible Creator.

The number 6561, as a numerical symbol of the Deity, is not an arbitrary selection. It inheres in the very nature of things. It is as true as mathematical relations are true. It represents a profound thought. It gives us a glimpse of the transcendent thoughts of the Creator, in forming a creation that would exhibit His everlasting power and divinity. When we analyse this number under the power of an enlightened faith we perceive that it has its roots in God Himself, Who is the great Mathematician, or, better still, Palmoni, the Wonderful Numberer. This number, as a symbol of the Deity, is an intellectual emblem, which cannot be idolized. God is spirit. No material thing can represent Him. The function of spirit is thought. It is only by means of clear and deep thinking that anyone can perceive why and how it is that this wonderful number, 6561, is a fitting symbol of Him Who is wonderful in His counsel and wonderful in His works. This number is the numerical value of the Ineffable Name of God. The significance of the hidden name gleams forth from this number. It represents the name of the Creator in the consummation of His work. It is the numerical emblem of His name when the will of God shall be done on earth as it is done in Heaven. It indicates the name of the Creator when the Kingdom of Heaven will prevail over all the kingdoms of the world. In this hidden symbol is a numerical prophecy that "Jehovah shall be King over all the earth: in that day shall Jehovah be one, and his Name one." (Zech. xiv, 9.) His Name will be the manifestation of His own inmost being in His completed work, evincing His supreme goodness in perfect love.

These things Prof. Totten, in his superb mathematical genius, saw in a flash. He seemed to discern them by intuition. Consequently he expressed them tersely. But his statement of what was so manifest to him was given so succinctly that the average reader could not discern the reasons for it. I have found it necessary for my own satisfaction to trace out the reasons one by one, following line upon line, catching here a little and there a little gleam of the secret truth hidden in the wisdom of God and giving rays of its mystic light only to those who in the spirit of faith will diligently and persistently seek for it. Such an investigation may be helpful to Gideon's band of searchers for truth, who delight in hunting hidden wisdom.

Keep in mind that the Hebrew was a numerical language, and that every word written in Hebrew had a numerical value. The name of God as the source of power is EL. Its numerical value is 31, which is a fit numerical emblem of the threefold personality, office and work in the unity of the Divine being. The absolute name of God is Yahweh in Hebrew. It is translated Jehovah in our English Bibles. Its meaning is

I AM. It denotes absolute, irrelative self-existence. It indicates that God has life in Himself, and, consequently, that He is the fountain of life. It indicates that He is the Same, yesterday, to-day and for ever. It is translated by the Apostle John in the Apocalypse as "He who is and who was and who is to come." He was in the beginning, before the foundation of the world. He is throughout the whole course of human history. He is to come in the fulness of the manifestation of His own being and work at the consummation of the age, when the fulness of the whole earth becomes the glory of God. Hence He is the Becoming One. He is the author of the beautiful and orderly arrangement of the universe, and the fountain of life in its manifold manifestations. He is the God of the covenants of promise, Who ever lives to fulfil His promises. Hence Yahweh is His memorial Name. (Hos. xii, 5.)

Now what is the numerical value of the Hebrew letters in the august Name, YaH-WeH? The four Hebrew letters of the word are Yod, ten; He, five; Vau, six; and He, five. Reading the digital values of these letters from right to left as written above we have the significant number 5651. It is not the same as the number of the real Ineffable Name, but it is related to it, somewhat similar in form and significance. It is an approach to it, although not the very name itself. Hence Prof. Totten could say: "The true name of The-Almighty-One does not occur openly in the Bible."

The radical meaning of Yahweh is the I AM, the Being. Hence He is the Eternal, the Same yesterday, to-day and for ever, the Becoming One. Because of His entering into covenant relation with the elect race of Israel, it became His memorial Name. It is a type and a prophecy of His Ineffable Name, but, for accurate thinking, should be distinguished from it. They are frequently confounded.

Jesus is the Prince of Peace. But He is not the Prince of "Peace at any price," all pacifists and mischief-makers to the contrary! This much we have on His own testimony: "Suppose ye that I am come to give peace on earth? I tell you, Nay; but rather division." *

Division is a sign or mark of life. "Life does not proceed by the association and addition of elements but by dissociation and division." That is the great testimony of modern science. And thus discovery brings modern science up-to-date with Biblical revelation.

God is life, and Jesus came that we might have life, and life more abundantly. He is the Great Life-giver and Great Divider. The peace He brings is not a static peace but a living peace. Not a soulless peace but a poise in which we can exercise the highest of all activities. It is peace with power like a sword which divides asunder the heart and soul of man.

It is thus with God's Kingdom in the earth. The sword of the Lord is the word of God. The word of God is the human expression of divine ideals. The conquests of the Kingdom are of the mind and of the spirit.

* Luke xii, 51.

True, Israel is God's Battle Axe and Weapons of War.† With this battle-axe God breaks in pieces the power of non-Kingdom nations. The words of God are spirit and they are life.‡ They are sharper than any two-edged sword.§ Thus it comes about that the propaganda of moral and spiritual ideas has proved to be as effective in its influence and potent in its results as war itself.

By these means the opposition and objection of nations to the idea of inclusion in the coming Universal Kingdom will be broken down. Conversion and persuasion is the type of aggression practised by the Kingdom. Absorption not conquest is the law of Kingdom-expansion. For God is a God of Peace not of force.

But disintegration is essential, preparatory to the formation of an ideal synthesis. The nations will be "consumed" [1] as they are "taken in" and given a potential equal status with the other members of the Commonwealth.

What is the nature of this great new synthesis? Nothing less than the gathering of all nations into one great family. The British Family of Nations forms the nucleus around which the whole human family is to be organized into one Universal Kingdom. The British Family form the one family through whom all the families of the earth are to be blessed.[2]

That is the idea of the Bible, the ideal of Christ, the goal to which God's Brith-ish People are striving. In its fulfilment, the desire of all nations will find realization.

What is the inspiration behind ANGLO-SAXON civilization? What is the ANGLO-SAXON idea? The ANGLO-SAXON—or Seed of ISAAC idea—is the idea of the KINGDOM of GOD upon earth. It is a national ideal with an international idea behind it. It represents a practical attempt to create the UNIVERSAL KINGDOM of righteousness in the earth. It spells the attempt to bring about the literal fulfilment of the Lord's prayer: "Thy Kingdom come . . . . on earth, as it is in heaven." It is the attempt to bring into bodily manifestation the KINGDOM for which spiritually-minded people of every nation and tongue have prayed and longed throughout the ages.

But we agree with Herr Dibelius when he says that "If the Anglo-Saxon idea of

be taken as the description of something actual it is a crude falsehood." Of course it is. The Kingdom is not the KINGDOM yet. It is still in the "must be being restored" process of development. Not until the KINGDOM is fully restored and has been cleansed of "all things that offend and them which do iniquity," [3] will it be prepared to properly carry out its work.

Dibelius is again inspired when he adds the following apologia: "The Anglo-Saxon idea can only be understood as the confession of organized like a CHURCH . . . . It is the confession of a community of faith that presents a high ideal as though it were a reality, and finds in the shameful contrast between the 'is' and the 'ought to be' the spur to approximate the real to the ideal."

† Jer. li, 20. ‡ John vi, 63. § Heb. iv, 12.
[1] Dan. ii, 44. [2] Gen. xii, 3. [3] Matt. xiii, 41.

Yes, the faith of the KINGDOM is like the faith of a CHURCH simply because it is the faith of the BIBLE and the faith of CHRIST. And the BRITISH PEOPLE, truly and faithfully inspired by this high ideal, are impelled to move forward, however hard and discouraging the way, We do not wait for the evidence of visible results. Like our father ABRAHAM we go forth not knowing whither we go but believing in "the evidence of things not seen" and being assured that what GOD hath promised He is able also to perform.[4]

Our faith is GOD-given. We trust in a faithful GOD which keepeth covenant.

Why should there be anything dishonourable or hypocritical in finding in the "shameful contrast between the 'is' and the 'ought to be' the spur to approximate the real to the ideal"? It is the only mental method by which progress can be attained in any field of human endeavour.

Nevertheless, Dibelius continues complainingly: "The outsider may find it hard to credit that this confession of faith, despite the crude falsehoods contained in it, and the crass ignorance of the whole of non-Anglo-Saxon actuality that it reveals, is nevertheless sincerely believed in by millions of people. Such, however, is the case. Perhaps may be found when we examine Anglo-Saxon religion."

A KEY TO UNDERSTANDING

Certainly the key to understanding is to be found in Anglo-Saxon religion. For Anglo-Saxon religion is founded on the BIBLE. And the BIBLE is the secret of Britain's greatness and British character.

Of necessity the Anglo-Saxon ideal involves a certain ignorance of non-Anglo-Saxon actuality. In this mental freedom lies its strength. In its separation from Gentile idealism lies the secret of its influence.

Mentally as well as spiritually we are a KINGDOM set apart from the kingdoms of this world. We are a World-Kingdom "in" the world but not "of" it. Ignorance of non-Anglo-Saxon actuality is the price we must pay if we would fulfil our special rôle as of a new and better world-order. The formation of a new world demands the action of a new mind[5] and a new spirit.[6]

But it is a gross error to claim that this condition of mental isolation involves "an obstinate incapacity to recognize the value of any other form of civilization." It is equally erroneous to imagine that it involves the ruthless subjugation of "alien states and forms of life." It involves neither of these negative conditions.

Freedom and Toleration are the marks of Kingdom-civilization. The KINGDOM influences all but compels none. Other civilizations are not asked to surrender anything of their own peculiar genius when they enter the political boundaries of the UNIVERSAL KINGDOM. They bring their own peculiar talents into it.

Even in this present stage the fact is true. For the BRITISH COMMONWEALTH is what it is to-day solely because it holds within its bounds peoples of every race, colour, religion, creed and tongue. Tolerance not persecution, persuasion not coercion, education not prohibition, are the watchwords of the KINGDOM. Freedom of belief, religion, creed and manner of worship, are the peculiar marks of Kingdom-civilization. In this freedom lies its strength. The secret of this freedom and cohesion is the love of CHRIST.

But Dibelius finds reassurance strangely difficult. "There is a vast danger here," he writes, "for all non-Anglo-Saxon peoples. For the British idea is not the programme of a few Chauvinists and enthusiasts, but the FAITH OF A CIVILIZED WORLD.

In it the utmost freedom—for the chosen ones—is combined with the silent ignoring of the whole of the rest of the world. It affords a formula for approaching the world in the guise of a redeemer, while ruthlessly subjugating alien states and forms of life. It is this which made it so mighty an engine of propaganda in the war. Germany told the world that it merely wanted to maintain itself. The world was not interested: it watched its struggle for existence with bleak impatience. BRITAIN set out to conquer half the world, with the declaration that it brought peace and freedom to all. And the world believed it, since it desired peace and freedom, and is used to paying an infinite price for an infinite good."

No! Professor, your charges in this respect will hardly bear the light of close investigation. The British idea does not represent a vast danger to non-Anglo-Saxon peoples. It does not spell freedom for the British and the silent ignoring of the rest of the world. The British idea spells the practical realization of the ideal of unity in diversity. The British idea remains the one hope for the future of world-civilization.

It is a false charge to claim that BRITAIN, in the guise of a redeemer, ruthlessly subjugates alien states and forms of life. The destiny of states is in higher hands than human. The life of nations is beyond the tyranny of individual caprice. The life and destiny of every state is in the hand of GOD.

States and forms of life which are based upon false foundations contain within themselves the seeds of inevitable decay. There is no injustice in the judgments of ALMIGHTY GOD. Nationally as well as individually, we reap as we sow.

And if the sentence of dissolution is passed upon a defaulting system, we are not justified in condemning the nation chosen to carry the sentence into effect. BRITAIN-ISRAEL, in her rôle as God's Battle Axe and Weapons of War[7] is officially appointed as executant of divine justice.

Germany told the world that it merely wanted to maintain itself? No wonder the world was not interested! Germany could have taken her rightful place within the fellowship of nations had she chosen the path of peaceful development. Everything was in her favour. In 1914 she had her colonies overseas and an ever-growing share of the world's trade and commerce.

But she chose instead the path of force and world conquest. For generations she prepared for the great "Der Tag." Whilst BRITAIN remained unprepared, Germany prepared the greatest military machine the world had ever known.

In the light of these military preparations Germany's claim for international sympathy seems singularly inappropriate. Can Germany complain if the world watched the struggle with bleak impatience? Prussian militarism destroyed the moral justice of the claim for sympathy by forcing Germany to take upon herself the rôle of aggressor. Defeat became a self-inflicted judgment.

For it is a universal law of life that "they that take the sword perish with the sword."[8] In great things as in small the universal law of sowing and reaping exacts its inexorable toll.

BRITAIN did not set out, in 1914, to conquer the world. BRITAIN set out to save the world. And she set out to save the world with the declaration that she brought liberty[9] and peace for all.

The world believed BRITAIN because the world has learnt that an Englishman's word is his bond. And the world is rapidly beginning to find that the officially pledged word of BRITAIN—as word of the KINGDOM—represents a guarantee of justice nearly as trustworthy as that of the word of GOD itself.[10]

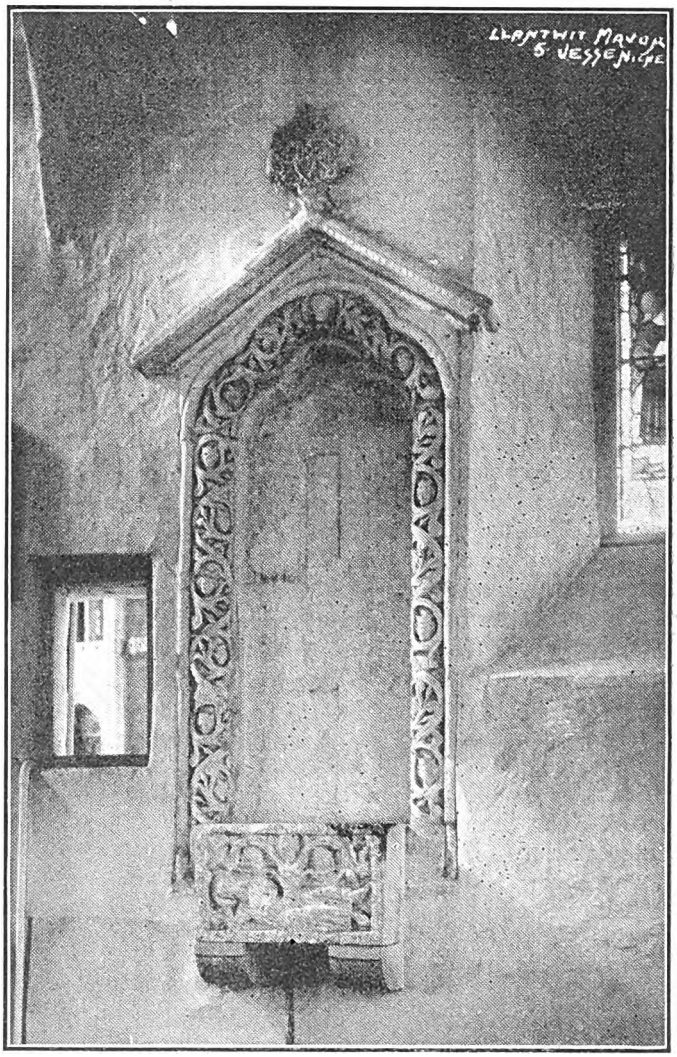
LLANTWIT MAJOR.

By R. MAYELL.

DID St. Paul preach in Britain? Yes, without the shadow of a doubt; at least so said the Rev. J. W. Evans, Baptist minister of Llantwit Major, Glamorganshire.

It was the occasion of the Annual Pilgrimage of the members and friends of the B.-I. Branches in the South Wales Area.

From Cardiff the party journeyed on Wednesday, June 25th, conducted by our Area Lecturer, Rev. W. T. Medhurst, to that old-world town nestling among the dunes on the north bank of the Bristol Channel between Cardiff and Swansea.



Near by at St. Donats lie the ruins of the Palace of Caradoc, ancient Britain's best-known king. (Now in charge of Manasseh, having been recently purchased by Mr. Hearst, of U.S.A.)

Here Britain's first Christian king worshipped in a wattle church, said to pre-date Glastonbury. Here the first Christian monarch "bowed the knee" to King Jesus. To-day his descendants, King George V, Queen Mary and the Royal Princes knelt under the stately dome of St. Paul's, worthy descendants of the Royal Line of David, whose son, Solomon, sat on the throne of Jehovah, and whose sons still sit on that same throne established over the House of Israel for ever.

And here on this venerable spot now stands St. Illtyd's, where we were shown a remarkable niche (Jesse's Niche) rescued from the debris of the devastation of the Middle Ages, when all "evidences" of "Royal descent" were hidden away or destroyed in order to establish "Apostolic Succession." We gazed in wonder at this niche placed in the wall of the nave. Carved in stone, at the base is the root of a tree, the "root" of which is a recumbent figure, out of the loins of which grows two vine branches, amongst which are two heads crowned.

The branches then spread out and upwards forming the sides of the framework of the niche, providing a "line" of branches along which are interspersed at succeeding stages other crowned heads, seven on either side.

In a space under the apex, where the branches again meet, the central figure of Christ is placed. A root out of the stem of Jesse traced through Solomon—Joseph on one side (see Matthew) and Nathan-Mary the other (see Luke).

Evidently this bore no relation to the dark ages of priestly usurpation and mediæval superstition. Why then, thought we, was it there? Naturally, and obviously enough, it related to the Royal Palace close by.

The niche perpetuated the high esteem in which that "Royal Line" was held, to which also that Palace was so vitally connected, and whose superiority its earthly occupant acknowledged in lowly reverence in the House of God here erected.

We listened to our guide, Rev. J. W. Evans, as he so graphically described Caradoc's journey to Rome, the romantic courtship and marriage of his daughter Gwladys to the Roman officer, Pudens, and how natural it seemed that when the Royal party returned to the Royal Palace here at St. Donats that Paul should be one of the party, and later on to preach on the spot in the town now marked by a Cross.

And also that before his return a college should be erected, part of the walls of which may now be seen, which pre-dates the university of Alexandria.

Amongst its students were St. Illtitus and St. David, Gildas the historian, and the great St. Patrick whom the British Church afterwards sent to evangelize Ireland. This centre of learning still persists in the present Cowbridge High School close by. Later we visited the seashore where, when the tide is very low, may still be seen the black relics of an ancient landing-stage, where possibly the Royal party and Paul landed.

Despite the tramp of Rome's invading legions and later Rome's devastating superstition, here still lie relics of early British history in close relation to the Royal House of David, perpetuated as the Sun, Moon and tides.

THE SIGN OF THE SON OF MAN.

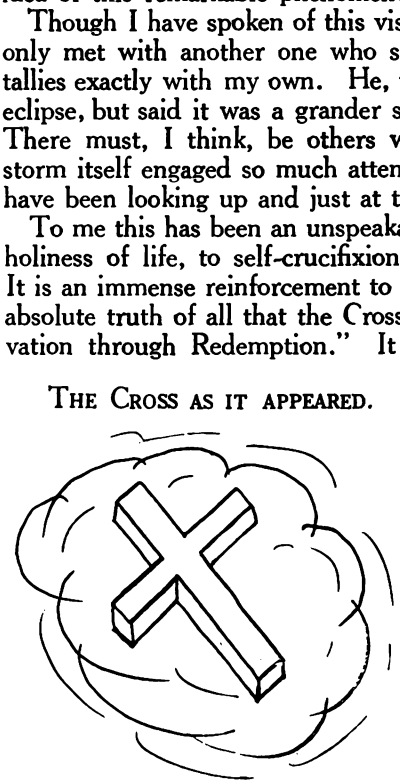
(Matthew xxiv, v. 30.)

A PERSONAL EXPERIENCE.

By H. F. Dale Josolyne.

What is this sign? John Wesley, in his notes on the New Testament, commenting on the above verse says: "It seems a little before He Himself descends, the sun, moon and stars being extinguished . . . The Sign of the Son of Man (perhaps the Cross) will appear in the glory of the Lord." The object of this article is to tell of one of the wondrous appearances of this Sign, during the great darkness and thunderstorm that passed over the North of England on Friday evening, August 29th. A thunderstorm has always had a great fascination for me, and I stood for half an hour or more at the open door looking up into the sky. The lightning was incessant, both sheet and forked, with dazzling balls of blue fire. The thunder was appalling, unspeakably majestic, and the darkness intense. The lines of Sir Walter Scott written when quite young came to mind:—

"Loud o'er my head the awful thunders roll,
The vivid lightnings flash from pole to pole,
It is Thy Voice, O God, that bids them fly,
Thy Voice directs them through the vaulted sky.
Then let the good Thy mighty power declare,
Let hardened sinners Thy just judgments fear."



Continuing to look up, I saw, far away above and through the storm clouds, a luminous ball of fire, as though the sun was trying to break through the darkness, increasing in size to that of two or three suns, and then in the centre of this light, but very much brighter, a beautiful golden cross was distinctly seen, not upright, but slanting or leaning, just as a cross would be when borne upon the shoulders. It remained clearly visible with sharply defined outline for about a quarter of a minute, and then disappeared in the surrounding fiery cloud, which remained for a little time longer and then gradually dispersed.

The thunderstorm continued to rage, but during those few seconds I was oblivious to everything but that wonderful sight. Those who saw the eclipse of the sun two years ago, by imagining a cross instead of a circle of light, will have some idea of this remarkable phenomenon.

Though I have spoken of this vision to many, as yet I have only met with another one who saw it, and his description tallies exactly with my own. He, too, likened it to the sun's eclipse, but said it was a grander sight, which indeed it was. There must, I think, be others who have seen it, but the storm itself engaged so much attention that not many might have been looking up and just at the right moment.

To me this has been an unspeakably solemn event, a call to holiness of life, to self-crucifixion and patient crossbearing. It is an immense reinforcement to faith, a visible proof of the absolute truth of all that the Cross of Jesus stands for, "Salvation through Redemption." It is also the Master's own sign that His Coming draweth nigh. He may even now be on the very threshold of His appearing. "What manner of persons then ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness."

The Cross as it appeared.

"The Lord sitteth upon the flood; yea the Lord sitteth King for ever."—Psalm xxix, v. 10.

About twelve months ago there appeared in some paper the account of a remarkable appearance of a beautiful cross in the sky, gradually formed out of a bright cloud. This was not, however, I think, in a storm but on a fine day. Some of your readers may have seen it, or remember reading about it.

"Behold He cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see Him,
And they also which pierced Him; and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of Him. Even so. Amen."

EMPIRE DAY IN SYDNEY, N.S.W.

By W. E. Oldroyd (of Sydney, N.S.W.)

The spirit abroad in this capital city was expressed, according to its leading newspaper, by the following quotation, used by Professor R. G. Macintyre at the Royal Empire Society's Dinner:

"Also we will make promises. So long as the blood endures
I shall know that your good is mine; ye shall feel that my strength is yours,
In the day of Armageddon; at that last great fight of all
That our houses stand together and the pillars do not fall."

The Premier of New South Wales, speaking on the privileges of citizenship, said that, according to the newspapers, one part of the British Empire [no doubt he was referring to statements made by the Prime Minister of South Africa] apparently is determined not to allow any action to be taken which would in any way involve any abandonment of its right to secede from the British Empire. Thank goodness, we are not very much concerned with our right to secede from the British Empire. We do not want to be in the Empire and out of it at the same time. We do not want to get all the benefits —material and spiritual—that come to us as members of the Empire, and at the same time get all the advantages that may be imagined to come from independence. Although we are determined to work out our destiny in our own way, we are determined that that destiny is to be a component part of the British Empire.

Replying to the toast, "The United Empire," Professor Macintyre said that laws which regulated Australia's life were the legacy of the great nation-builders of the past. "Shall we sell this birthright for a mess of pottage mixed in the cauldron of Communism?"

EMPIRE SUNDAY.

The Governor-General (Lord Stonehaven) delivered an address on "The British Empire," at the Central Methodist Mission. His Excellency said the Empire has grown up during the last century, but when you compare it with the four hundred and fifty years or more during which the Roman Empire lasted, you will agree that we are at the beginning of our history.

The Rev. J. N. Stephen, B.A., preaching in St. Andrew's Cathedral, said that next to being born into a Christian family it was a fine thing to be born into the British Empire, the growth of which was surely one of the most astounding events in the history of humanity.

Dean Talbot, preaching from the text, "Ask of Me and I will give thee the nations for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession" (Psalm ii), said the conditional promise of our text was never fulfilled to Israel of old, but it has, in part at least, been fulfilled in our Empire. She has entered into the heritage of nations and received the uttermost parts of the earth for her possession. The world is stirred to-day by the wonderful achievement of Miss Amy Johnson, who in her little Moth has flown over ten thousand miles of land and sea. But here is a significant fact. Starting from the heart of the Empire, she finally lands on one of the outposts of Empire. Our text could only be fulfilled to Israel so far as she sought, not her own material advancement, but the extension of her spiritual influence in the well-being of other nations and the extension of the Kingdom of God. Our Empire is not perfect, but it is generally allowed that it exercises its rule with a sense of justice and freedom. When we pray for the British Empire, we pray that it may extend that wider Empire of Christ.

Rev. Hugh Paton, preaching on the subject of Empire Day in St. Stephen's Presbyterian Church, took for his text the verse in the Psalms, "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord." This phrase, he believed, could be applied to the British nation. Ours was an Empire of Bibles and Churches. We had our faults and our sins. But there was no land in the world where moral standards were higher, or where there was more righteousness of life. It was because of God's blessings that we held the position in the world that we do to-day.

Bishop D'Arcy-Irvine, preaching, at St. Philip's Church, from the text, "Fear God, honour the King," spoke of the vast extent of the British community of nations; there had never been anything like it in the history of the world. There was in it a Divine purpose, and it seemed that the quality of service was the distinguishing characteristic of the influence of the Empire. On the occasion of the celebration in England of the Tercentenary of the Authorized Version of the Bible, the then Archbishop of Canterbury, presenting the King with a specially bound copy of the Holy Scriptures, said: "The growth and strength of the Empire owe much to the English Bible. It has sweetened home life; it has set a standard of pure speech; it has permeated literature and art .... Above all, the English Version of the Bible has made accessible to us the revelation of God our Father in His Son Jesus Christ our Lord." In the course of his reply, His Majesty said: "It is my confident hope .... that my subjects may never cease to cherish their noble inheritance in the English Bible, which, in a secular aspect, is the first of national treasures, and is, as you truly say, in its spiritual significance, 'The most valuable thing that this world affords.'"

CHOSEN FOR SERVICE.

By E. M. Foster.

Great Britain, the mighty Israel nation, with her Dominions and Colonies, her "company of nations," is fulfilling the promise God made to Abraham and Isaac, the founders of the Anglo-Saxon-Celtic race. The promised world-wide domain, the possession of the "gates" and strategic positions of the world, are in rightful hands, in Israel-British hands, not by chance but because of the faithful Covenants sworn by the Lord.

The Empire is our heritage. For God promised and repeatedly declared in Holy Scripture that the Kingdom He would set up should be everlasting. "Hath He said, and shall He not do it?"

Our patriotism is more than the natural love of country found in every race. It is more than pride. It is a solemn expression of thankfulness for these possessions, and for the unspeakable privilege of leading the world. We are chosen to be "a royal priesthood, an holy nation," ministering to the needs of the world, making "desolate places to be inhabited," administering the Law of the Lord. What a high calling.

British-Israel teaching contends for unity and loyalty. It makes clear the sacred duty of the humblest British worker at Home, and the loneliest Empire builder in the furthest corner Overseas. It provides the inspiration needed in these times; for the lowliest service is exalted when the giver knows that he contributes not merely to a material end but to the glory of God and the salvation of mankind.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

WE are very grateful for donations towards the expenses of the Congress. Among a number sent anonymously is one for £100. We thank every donor most sincerely, whether the amount be large or small. As we must advertise in the public Press, and must do so at once, we need generous help. A new Congress circular is now ready with arresting headlines like those overleaf, and we shall be glad to supply them in any quantities. It is essential to get the attention of the man-in-the-street. We ask for volunteers to distribute these circulars in thousands. It is difficult to overcome the prevailing indifference to higher things, but let us try. Faith and works, patience and persistence, can accomplish much. At all events we must bear our witness. We dare not run away like Jonah; in any case there would not be big fishes enough to save us!

As previously announced, there will be a meeting of direct Members and Associates of the Federation on Thursday, October 2nd, at 6 p.m., at Headquarters. The adjourned Annual Meeting for both direct members and branch members will be held on Thursday, October 9th, between the afternoon and evening Congress meetings on that day.

The opening meeting of the Headquarters' Autumn session on September 10th was an unqualified success—a fine audience, and a splendid address by the Rev. Maxwell Carnson, F.R.G.S., F.R.S.A., who again spoke on September 11th with the Rev. John Complin to another good company. Mr. Garrison presided on both occasions.

The meeting on Wednesday afternoon next, September 24th, is to be addressed by Dr. Norman H. Joy, M.R.C.S., L.R.C.P., M.B.O.U., F.E.S., who was for sixteen years Medical Officer at Bradfield College, Berks. His subject will be "Science and Religion from a New Point of View," illustrated by lantern slides. The speaker for Thursday evening will be Mr. John Leech, K.C.

J. A. N. writes:—"I read with great interest your Manifesto and your journal. There is no question that we are living in very grave times, and I am perfectly certain the Menace is serious, far more so than many people realize. I feel that the work of your Federation is just what is wanted to-day to guide our people in the right way, and to bring us all back to the experience of true religion. It is the chief thing to aim at, and if successful our troubles will soon be solved."

* * *

The Rev. Ernest A. Couldrey, our Commissioner for the North-West Area, opened his campaign with two splendid addresses at Southport on September 8th to good audiences, especially in the evening. He received a very cordial welcome and he made an excellent impression. The Chairmen were Messrs. E. S. Jacques and W. H. Webb.

On September 11th Mr. Couldrey lectured for our Liverpool Branch to a very good company.

Miss Hamilton Hunter opened the session for our Sutton and Cheam Branch on September 8th, by giving two able and impressive addresses. The afternoon subject was "Is England Ephraim-Israel?" and that in the evening was "The Signs of the Times." Both were greatly enjoyed.

* * *

Special meetings for Intercession for the Divine blessing on the Congress will be held at Headquarters on Monday evenings, September 22nd and 29th, at 8 o'clock. All are invited.

* * *

H. D. writes:—"It was good of you to reply so promptly and with so much generosity to my letter. I am most grateful and I thank you very cordially. I am finding the literature you sent me most interesting. Truth is ever welcome and I value fresh light. I see a steady aim at a time of so much conflict and uncertainty and erroneous teaching."

* * *

The Bible Study Class conducted at Headquarters by the Rev. W. Andrew Sinden commences the session this week and will be continued on Wednesdays, September 24th and October 1st at 6.30 each evening. All invited.

* * *

Col. Evan A. Watkins, B.A., M.D., of New York, an earnest Bible student, who has an extensive knowledge of the Bible Lands, and spent many years there, and was with General Allenby in his Palestinian campaign, writes in warm terms of praise of Dr. Goard's book on "The Documents of Daniel," complimenting the author on "the very distinct and clear ring of historic interpretation," and expressing the hope that it "will be a link in the chain across the Atlantic which will bring us closer together in Israel's interests."

We are glad to learn by cable that a party is being made up from Canada and United States to accompany Dr. Goard for the Congress, including the Rev. Mark Jukes, Chancellor Du Bois and, we believe, Mr. Howard Rand.

Mr. Philip E. J. Monson, the indefatigable Secretary for the State of California, is working heroically for our great Cause in Los Angeles, where a State Convention is being held this month. The State has been divided into four districts for organization purposes, each 300 miles long by 230 miles wide, and plans are being made for two Commissioners for each district. Mr. Monson reports that tremendous strides have been made since December last. Meetings are to be held in a fine building in a central position with halls having a seating capacity varying from 500 to 2,000. A Radio programme is in contemplation. Splendid, good friends; all success to you and God's blessing.

BRITISH-ISRAEL-WORLD FEDERATION.

On Tuesday, Mr. J. J. Morey gave two lectures at the Masonic Hall, St. Leonards, the subject in the afternoon being "The Present Menace and How to Meet It." In the course of his address the lecturer dealt fully with the present industrial crisis and the appalling growth of unemployment, coupled with the menace of Russia and the Soviet organization for a Godless campaign of revolution. In this connection it was shown how Russia had arisen as the mighty beast of Biblical prophecy. With the efforts being made by the nation to patch up the danger arising from the domination of this power, Mr. Morey showed that these endeavours to overcome the danger would be unavailing, the only remedy being that God must "be enquired of by the House of Israel." Until such time will the menace to the Throne and Christ's Kingdom continue in Israel. The subject of the evening lecture was "Britain's Wonderful Place in Bible Prophecy." Herein it was shown that God had work for the British nation as well as for the Church, and that Britain had a definite place in the prophecies, in spite of the fact that so many are at the present moment denying the vital truths which they reveal. Although nations try to govern without God, such efforts are doomed to failure, and in the end must necessarily go under, as Jehovah's power must be established on the earth. There is but one way of stemming the flood of infidelity now dominating the country, viz., to pray and fight against it by rousing the nation to its responsibilities and privileges as God's chosen people. An interesting feature of the evening address was the lecturer's explanation of the symbolism contained in the British coinage, and the proof it gives of our Israelitish descent. —Hastings Observer.

The Rev. John Complin writes :—"Surely the hour has come for the awakening of our nation to its high destiny as the Evangelizer of the nations. Not one of the original band to whom was committed by our Risen Lord in the very year of His sublime Sacrifice and glorious Resurrection the task of evangelizing the world was a non-Israelite. Upon the English-speaking race very evidently rests that same responsibility to-day.

"Shall we not as a nation awaken to the Divine call, and bend all our efforts to the one great issue.

"The creeping paralysis which seems to be slowing down our administration in many places where our Flag flies will vanish with all other weaknesses when we have a great National Revival of Religion. The moral leadership of the world will only be in safe and strong hands when Immanuel is enthroned in the ideals and purposes of our National and Dominion leaders and representatives. Your Congress appeal for prayer and for revival stirs my heart, and if the appeal meets with the response it deserves, the Federation will be justified as never before. As you know, and as we all ought to know, the foundation of Revival is laid in persistent and sacrificial prayer in the Name of our great Intercessor. May the Holy Spirit's power and blessing be upon the Congress and make it the greatest prayer power since Pentecost. I have recently been privileged to present the possibility of a coming Revival to many congregations in Ulster, and over 1,400 of God's people have responded to the call for consecration to His service. May the flame of Revival passion spread to the greater glory of our Immanuel."

Orange Street Church should be a familiar name to both Anglican and Nonconformist.

Founded by the Huguenots, it was later occupied by the Establishment, and is now a Congregational Church. One who ministered there was Toplady, the author of "Rock of Ages." Another was the Rev. Samuel Luke, whose wife wrote that well-known children's hymn, "I think when I read that sweet story of old."

Many distinguished people have worshipped there.

It has a great history. Why should it not have a still greater influence? Right in the heart of London—with thousands of people all around it—spells opportunity. Perhaps there are great things in store for the faithful at Orange Street.

On Sunday, September 28th, the Rev. Maxwell Carnson, F.R.G.S. — our newly-returned South African Commissioner —preaches there in the morning at 11 o'clock, and in the evening at 7 o'clock.

Visitors to London should help to fill the Church on this and the two following Sundays, October 5th and 12th, when the Rev. E. A. Couldrey takes the services.

October 12th will be Harvest Thanksgiving Sunday. The Church is situated just out of Leicester Square, and behind the National Gallery.

AUTHOR'S NOTE.

"This pamphlet has been written as an easy introduction for the benefit of those who, interested in the absorbing subject of the Great Pyramid, require something which will put before them as simply as possible the main features of that remarkable monument and the purpose for which it was erected. It is based on the writings and addresses of Messrs. D. Davidson and B. Stewart, who are acknowledged as the two leading authorities on the subject to-day. The latter was kind enough to read the manuscript and make some emendations which have greatly improved its value from the viewpoint of clearness and accuracy. I therefore submit this essay to the reading public in full confidence of the truth of the facts set forth in it."

From the dawn of history the practice of adopting, and the usage of, ensigns, standards, banners and symbols has been employed by mankind with both national and religious import. Whether we turn to the civilized nations of antiquity, the Egyptians, the Assyrians, Babylonians, Persians, Hebrews, Greeks and Romans, or to the uncivilized races of modern times, such as the Red Indians of America or the Maoris of New Zealand, symbolism is found in a variety of forms, and in all stages of development.

For all those who are desirous of learning something of the National ensignia of the ancient people of Israel (the great nations of Britain and the U.S.A.) we can do no other than very strongly urge them to read this work which sets forth, with heraldic and historic veracity, the origin and symbolic meaning of these emblems.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

ISRAEL'S FIRST INTERNATIONAL COVENANT, AND WHAT CAME OF IT.

By the Rev. Dr. W. Pascoe Goard.

The first Covenant Israel made with an international content is graphically recorded in Joshua ix. The whole chapter is taken up with this important matter, which should thereafter affect the whole life of the Israel nations as long as history concerned itself with them. We may be sure that Israel is not yet done with that Covenant or the people to whom the Princes of Israel bound the nation for ever.

The next chapter, showing the beginning of consequences to the nation Israel, is one of the most striking chapters of the Old Testament.

In reading it we find that God intervened in the struggle through the direction of natural phenomena.

The blazing heat of the midday sun of that semi-tropical land was suddenly changed to chilly cold such as would energize wearied men.

The dry air and blazing sky was suddenly filled with moisture, as terrific storm-clouds gathered over the whole face of the sky.

Lightning, in unusual intensity, and thunder which seemed to rend the sky asunder shook the air.

Electrically-produced hailstones of a size which destroyed men as though they had been mowed down by bullets from machine guns fell upon the fleeing hosts of the enemies of Israel.

Wind of cyclonic force would accompany such an outburst, and torrents of water delayed the terrified fugitives from the battlefield. The fleeing hosts met the storm face to face and perished through it by multitudes. Israel, two or three miles distant, escaped the hail and the storm, and benefited by the coolness of the air.

They flew upon the enemy and destroyed the army.

The narrative of the fight is given. Then there is given the statement of Joshua's command to the Sun and the Moon.

The Sun was at the zenith at the moment. It was high noon on the day of battle. That which Joshua said was, "Sun, be silent . . . . ." A great controversy was being settled between himself and his people on the one hand and the league of nations which had massed its forces against him on the other.

Joshua, in the Name of Jehovah the God of Israel, had made a Covenant with the Gibeonites as we have seen. The league of nations were gathered to wipe them out as traitors to the land of Canaan. The Covenant of Joshua to protect the lives of the Gibeonites was at stake; the whole forces of Israel, and even the forces of nature, must be used to see that the Covenant of God might not be allowed to fail. The Lord intervened.

Now, we are generally able to understand, and to accept as a fact often demonstrated in history, that God does intervene on behalf of His people, and has again and again done so on behalf of our nation, by control of the weather forces. This calls for Divine action in the meteorological world which is limited to the winds and vapours of our climate as earth dwellers.

But when it comes to the exercise of Divine power to lengthen the day, as in the case of Joshua, there we halt. That is an interference with the forces of nature on a grand scale. Would the Lord change the course or modify the speed of a planet or of the planetary system for any reason local to the earth? Something like this seems to be in our mind. Perhaps our idea of the majesty and power of the Divine Personality is too limited. Nature has grown in our estimation and knowledge in these later days. Perhaps the thought of God has not kept pace in our minds with that growth.

It may be that our thought of God has been as of one using in His Providential rule from time to time power sufficient to turn the course of the winds and of the clouds, but not sufficient to interfere with the motions of the planetary system, much less of the fixed stars. The history of theology may have something to do with this matter. Surely if our thought of God keeps pace with our widening knowledge of the material universe we shall see that His direction of planetary movement is as logical as this direction of " the winds and seas " which obey Him.

Yet it may not be necessary for us to think in terms of planetary motion. It may be that the winds and the clouds were all that were called upon to obey the command of Joshua.

Yet, again, have we quite mastered the sayings of Joshua on that occasion? Was it a literal command or was it a forecast of what he saw taking place before his eyes?

It was midsummer; it was noon; the Sun was almost directly overhead and the Moon was over the Valley of Ajalon, about 5 degrees above the horizon north and west from where Joshua stood at Gibeon.

What was it that Joshua actually said in his address to the Sun? " Sun, stand thou still . . . . . and thou, Moon . . . . . " But the margin gives another rendering, " Sun, be silent . . . . . and thou, Moon . . . . . " Joshua's army had marched seventeen miles; had climbed over three thousand feet in doing so; had fought a battle with the Amorite army investing Gibeon; had well nigh surrounded the Amorite host, cutting them off from their cities, Jerusalem and other cities to the South—and now the Amorite army had escaped his net and were in full flight for the maritime plain by way of the two Beth-horons.

If a long war were to be obviated it was necessary that the pursuit should be taken up and pressed home till the Amorites were destroyed.

But the Amorites had slept while Joshua's army climbed all night, up from the Jordan Valley. They had still been at rest while Joshua's army were rapidly taking up their strategic positions. They began to bestir themselves when the forces of Joshua appeared and gave them battle. But they had mustered to destroy the Gibeonites, not to fight Joshua. Destruction was to be meted out to the Gibeonites because they had made peace with Joshua, and Joshua's God. They therefore thought only of retreat before the forces of Israel. Behind the walls of their cities they could bid Israel defiance. In the open they would be destroyed. So, fresh and fleet-footed, they ran.

Then Joshua called upon the Sun to " keep silent." The intense heat, and the consequent weariness of Joshua's men, were protecting the enemies of the Lord. Let the voice of the Sun and Moon cease to be heard in the controversy in favour of the enemy.

Then came the sudden darkening of the heavens. Then came the wind, the lightning, and the thunder which accompanies such an electric storm. Then came hailstones large enough and plentiful enough to destroy a multitude of men. The whipping wind, the flooding rain, the lightning and the thunder, the death-dealing hailstones, the flooded pathways, all hindered the fleeing enemy.

All these things fell on the enemy and not on the Israel army. Those who have had experience of such storms know that the line of their progress is clearly marked even to a few feet. The coolness refreshed the troops of Israel. The storm delayed the Amorites. For another twenty-seven miles the Israel army pursued, fought, and destroyed the Amorite army. Then they returned and took Beth-horon. There they hanged the five kings. After that, " when the Sun went down," they took the kings down from the trees and cast them into the pit where they had hidden themselves and rolled a great stone against the mouth of the pit. All this between noonday and sunset. It was a long day measured by the achievements of the army. That is the only way by which we can measure the day. What was it; refraction the result of the unusual storm? Was it a halting of the earth in its diurnal motion? We do not know. All that we know is that a narrative which will stand the probing of astronomical science tells us that the light remained till the army of Israel had accomplished a full day's march after noon, not to count the fight, the capture of Beth-horon, and the hanging and later burial of the five kings.

Whatever happened, it was that Joshua might be enabled to carry out the terms of the Covenant made with the Gibeonites; who were scarcely worth the danger and effort one would be inclined to say.

Four hundred years later we find this Covenant with the Gibeonites cropping up again and another miracle being enacted on account of it. King Saul had seemed to think that the Covenant had elapsed long before. Perhaps he was a modernist of his day and imagined that the Covenant as recorded in the Book of Jasher and of Joshua was not to be taken literally.

At all events he decided as a matter of policy to disregard it, and he slew some of the Gibeonites, and planned to wipe the whole of them out from among Israel.

Then came three years of famine on Israel in the days of King David. At last, suspecting some supernatural cause for the long-continued drought, David enquired of the Lord, and he received the answer given in the text which narrates the matter.

" Then there was a famine in the days of David three years, year after year; and David enquired of the Lord. And the Lord answered, It is for Saul, and for his bloody house, because he slew the Gibeonites.

And the king called the Gibeonites, and said unto them; (now the Gibeonites were not of the children of Israel, but of the remnant of the Amorites; and the children of Israel had sworn unto them: and Saul sought to slay them in his zeal to the children of Israel and Judah.)

Wherefore David said unto the Gibeonites, What shall I do for you? and wherewith shall I make the atonement, that ye may bless the inheritance of the Lord?

And the Gibeonites said unto him, We will have no silver nor gold of Saul, nor of his house; neither for us shalt thou kill any man in Israel. And he said, What ye shall say, that will I do for you.

And they answered the king, The man that consumed us, and that devised against us that we should be destroyed from remaining in any of the coasts of Israel, Let seven men of his sons be delivered unto us, and we will hang them up unto the Lord in Gibeah of Saul, whom the Lord did choose. And the king said, I will give them.

But the king spared Mephibosheth, the son of Jonathan the son of Saul, because of the Lord's oath that was between them, between David and Jonathan the son of Saul.

But the king took the two sons of Rizpah the daughter of Aiah, whom she bare unto Saul, Armoni and Mephibosheth; and the five sons of Michal the daughter of Saul, whom she brought up for Adriel the son of Barzillai the Meholathite:

And he delivered them into the hands of the Gibeonites, and they hanged them in the hill before the Lord: and they fell all seven together, and were put to death in the days of harvest, in the first days, in the beginning of barley harvest.

And Rizpah the daughter of Aiah took sackcloth, and spread it for her upon the rock, from the beginning of harvest until water dropped upon them out of heaven, and suffered neither the birds of the air to rest on them by day, nor the beasts of the field by night.

And it was told David what Rizpah the daughter of Aiah, the concubine of Saul, had done.

And David went and took the bones of Saul and the bones of Jonathan his son from the men of Jabesh-gilead, which had stolen them from the street of Bethshan, where the Philistines had hanged them, when the Philistines had slain Saul in Gilboa:

And he brought up from thence the bones of Saul and the bones of Jonathan his son; and they gathered the bones of them that were hanged.

And the bones of Saul and Jonathan his son buried they in the country of Benjamin in Zelah, in the sepulchre of Kish his father: and they performed all that the king commanded. And after that God was intreated for the land."—2 Sam. xxi, 1-14.

In addition to these great efforts on the part of the people, and of suffering, in consequence of this International Covenant, and the miraculous Divine interventions as we have seen recorded, there was the constant irritation of having an alien race, bitter because of their bondage, dwelling in their land and in their midst. One can enter into the feelings of Saul, the King, when because of endless exasperation and assuming that a Covenant made four hundred years before had lost its binding force, he determined as a matter of policy to clear them out from the confines of the Kingdom. But such feelings were vain. Once committed, there was no escape from the moral obligation on the part of the nation, and there was no possibility of doing the immoral thing without bringing sure suffering in its train.

The Lord would never have permitted Israel to enter into the Covenant had Israel enquired of Him. But once His Name was committed to the Covenant, it must be kept to the bitter end.

The probability is that we are still feeling the punch of the results of that Covenant in our Irish and other troubles.

In order to show the deadly danger there may be in International Covenants, and that by such Covenants we may assign to the Lord the task of protecting our enemies against ourselves or of punishing us for not keeping Covenant even with an enemy, we shall present other cases for our consideration.

Jehoiakim, King of Judah, entered into a Covenant with the King of the Chaldees, and swore by the Name of God to fulfil its conditions. After three years he disregarded his Covenant and oath, and the Name of God which had been attached to the Covenant by the oath. THEREFORE the LORD destroyed him. So we read:—

"In his days Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came up, and Jehoiakim became his servant three years: then he turned and rebelled against him.

And the Lord sent against him bands of the Chaldees, and bands of the Syrians, and bands of the Moabites, and bands of the children of Ammon, and sent them against Judah to destroy it, according to the word of the Lord, which he spake by his servants the prophets.

Surely at the commandment of the Lord came this upon Judah, to remove them out of his sight, for the sins of Manasseh, according to all that he did;

And also for the innocent blood that he shed: for he filled Jerusalem with innocent blood; which the Lord would not pardon.

Now the rest of the acts of Jehoiakim, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

So Jehoiakim slept with his fathers: and Jehoiachin his son reigned in his stead.

And the king of Egypt came not again any more out of his land: for the king of Babylon had taken from the river of Egypt unto the river Euphrates all that pertained to the king of Egypt.

Jehoiachin was eighteen years old when he began to reign, and he reigned in Jerusalem three months. And his mother's name was Nehushta, the daughter of Elnathan of Jerusalem.

And he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord, according to all that his father had done.

At that time the servants of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came up against Jerusalem, and the city was besieged.

And Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came against the city, and his servants did besiege it.

And Jehoiachin the king of Judah went out to the king of Babylon, he, and his mother, and his servants, and his princes, and his officers: and the king of Babylon took him in the eighth year of his reign.

And he carried out thence all the treasures of the house of the Lord, and the treasures of the king's house, and cut in pieces all the vessels of gold which Solomon king of Israel had made in the temple of the Lord, as the Lord had said."—2 Kings xxiv, 1-13.

Zedekiah, King of Judah, entered into Covenant with Nebuchadnezzar and broke his Covenant with him. Therefore the Lord moved against him.

"Zedekiah was one and twenty years old when he began to reign, and reigned eleven years in Jerusalem.

And he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord his God, and humbled not himself before Jeremiah the prophet speaking from the mouth of the Lord.

And he also rebelled against king Nebuchadnezzar, who had made him swear by God: but he stiffened his neck, and hardened his heart from turning unto the Lord God of Israel.

Moreover all the chief of the priests, and the people, transgressed very much after all the abominations of the heathen; and polluted the house of the Lord which he had hallowed in Jerusalem.

And the Lord God of their fathers sent to them by his messengers, rising up betimes, and sending; because he had compassion on his people, and on his dwelling place:

But they mocked the messengers of God, and despised his words, and misused his prophets, until the wrath of the Lord arose against his people, till there was no remedy.

Therefore he brought upon them the king of the Chaldees, who slew their young men with the sword in the house of their sanctuary, and had no compassion upon young man or maiden, old man, or him that stooped for age: he gave them all into his hand."—2 Chron. xxxvi, 11-17.

This is still an unalterable law of the Kingdom, and we of Britain are the national basis of that Kingdom still. It is impossible that we should put our hand to a Covenant of any character but the Lord will require it of us that that Covenant be kept even to our hurt.

What, then, will be the effect of loading the ankles of Britain with Covenants made with nations who are not in the mental attitude towards what is, to us, truth and honour to be so bound by their word? Remember that Covenant made with Belgium, to which both Germany and ourselves were signatories. Germany regarded it as a scrap of paper and expressed astonishment that Britain should plunge into war because of such a flimsy thing. Accordingly the two signatories met face to face in Belgium, the one in spite of the Covenant and the other in defence of the Covenant.

May God save us from entanglements in this the greatest league of nations ever organized. Other nations will still be free to act according to their own interests, while our hands will be bound by our own honour, and by our allegiance to that God Who will not allow a Covenant to be broken even in order to save from national war and utter disaster.

He is a Covenant-keeping God. We must be a Covenant-keeping people.

AN EXAMINATION OF MR. AVARY H. FORBES' "STONE WALL."

(Letter No. 12.)

By Professor Edward Odlum, M.A., B.Sc.

"Britain the Head of the World."

Mr. Forbes, referring to the British-Israel believers and teachers, uses these words:—"Its devotees seem to think that Britain has always been and still is at the head of the world."

In commenting on this statement, I will quote the sayings of men who are not counted among the British-Israel teachers and writers.

Let Professor Muth, of Munich, speak:—"A world empire, such as the British, is the work of God.

"The British Empire was not created by human plans .... But no other nation on earth can destroy the British Empire, for it is necessary in the defence of the liberty of the world."

Thus Professor Muth puts the British Empire at or close to the "head of the world." No doubt Mr. Forbes is pleased with this encomium.

In 1914, autumn, the measurement of Britain by Belgium was published as follows:—

"Thanks from nation to nation, from people to people, from man to man."

"During these unspeakable trials which our poor little country has had to put up with for the last two months (four years before the War ended), your people of Great Britain and Ireland have remained our hope and trust."

"It was the confidence in British diplomacy, to that enlightened and generous diplomacy, that free and independent Belgium is indebted for its existence, and for eighty years of peaceful progress."

"The greatest need has conceived the mightiest, the wisest altruism the world has ever had the privilege to witness. The entire Belgian people feel riveted to your nation through eternal ties of blood."

Thus we see that Belgium places Britain ahead of all other nations as her saviour. British-Israelites could not use stronger terms.

Look at this! "The mightiest, the wisest altruism" the world has ever seen.

We trust Mr. Forbes will be pleased that the above two remarkable statements are made by foreigners, and not by "patriotic intoxication."

Had B.-I. writers used the above words, I suppose the facts would have been false, but these facts stated by foreigners are apt to be true.

Baron Von Bulow has a word on England. Hear him!

"The English people, politically, are the maturest of the nations, ... The grand fabric of the British Empire, the greatest the world has ever seen since the Roman Empire," etc.

Strong praise by an enemy! Surely Mr. Forbes does not get angry when Baron Von Bulow puts Britain politically ahead of all the nations of the world. Perhaps after the above, our B.-I. writers and speakers may say a few strong words for Britain!

We are so interested in Mr. Forbes' views of British-Israel and his troublesome doubts, and of his real worth as a writer and teacher, that we delight to tarry with the subject and to give any help we can find within or without us.

Professor Usher, Ph.D., trying to present the views and feelings of the German Empire before the War, concerning Britain says:—"On every one of the world's trade routes, like an ancient robber knight in full armour, lance in hand, stands England. The domination of the world on the sea enables the supreme power to inflict the most terrible crisis upon other nations. .... All nations must become tributary to the City of London, some more, some less."

This Professor tells us that the domination of the world on the sea belongs to Britain. And he goes further still. He says: "All nations must become tributary to London."

Strong words! He places Britain at the top of the world. Perhaps Mr. Forbes imagines the Professor is "intoxicated."

We now quote from a brilliant Frenchman, not in any way a B.-I. teacher.

Provost Paradol says:—"Neither Russia nor United Germany suppose they should attain the highest fortune, can pretend to impede the solution, relatively near at hand, of the long rivalry of races for the ultimate colonization and domination of the universe.

"The world will not be Russian, nor German, nor French, alas! nor Spanish. Spain tried to colonize and failed. France tried and failed. Lastly, England came forward. She definitely accomplished the great work."

Thus speaks the proud Frenchman, in spite of his true patriotism and love for France. He, too, puts Great Britain at the "head of the world," particularly of colonization and all it includes.

We so delight in our work of extending help to our friend that we are impelled to add a little more in the way of testimony proving that Israel-Britain is "The Head and not the Tail." By this means we will more surely see that the blessings promised to Israel by Divine oath are fulfilled in Britain, and therefore Britain is official national Israel. This "therefore" has sound, basic logic tied up with it. It is good, very good argument. Yes, yes, we are capable of some argument, reasonable argument, logical argument, sound argument, yet.

Digitized by Google

Dr. Von Dollinger says:—"To the Anglo-Saxon race, rather than to the German or Sclav, is assigned, in the coming age, the intellectual supremacy that in ancient times belonged to the Greeks, and afterwards to the Romans."

This is fine. It makes one feel good.

Mr. Forbes, in his modesty, was afraid that we British-Israelites were intoxicated patriotically. And as he and others suggested this condition often and by differing words, some timid, cautious ones among us, like myself, felt as if a touch of national vanity might seize us in its relentless grip.

We now find we are safe. Dr. Von Dollinger and the others above quoted save us from overwhelming, national pride and vanity. They all use stronger words of laudation concerning old Britain than we have dared to use.

In what we have shown in this and previous letters, we know that Britain is "at the head of the world." Let us see where we stand.

"In spiritual blessings Britain stands alone."—Avary H. Forbes, M.A.

"The British world empire is the work of God."—Professor Muth, of Munich.

"The mightiest and wisest national altruism ever manifested was shown by Britain during the Great War."—A Belgian writer early in the War.

"The English people politically are the maturest of the nations."—Baron Von Bulow.

"Britain holds the domination of the world on the sea."—Professor Usher, Ph.D.

"The ultimate domination of the world is coming to Britain, or the Anglo-Saxon race."—Provost Paradol, of France.

"To the Anglo-Saxon race is assigned, in the coming age, the intellectual supremacy that in ancient times belonged to the Greeks, and afterwards to the Romans."—Dr. Von Dollinger.

Thus far we find Britain at the head of the world in spiritual blessings; in national altruism; in a special Divine creation; in political maturity; in the domination of the world on the sea; in colonizing and ruling of nations; and in intellectual supremacy.

And all this from foreigners excepting our friend Forbes, who gladly and truly adds his quota.

We can now proceed after this small halt by the way.

The French writer, Taine, of last century says of the British in speaking of the Bible:—"From the Bible have sprung much of the English language and half of the English manners. Never has a people been so deeply imbued with a foreign book."

While Mr. Forbes says the Anglo-Saxon people are at the head of the world in "spiritual blessings," Taine says they lead the world as students of and believers in the Bible. What world-leaders these strange people are!

Let me say a word or two on Taine. He speaks of the Bible as a "foreign book." He means a book that has come to the British from outside. Herein he is in error. The Word of God came out of the heart, life, thought and doings of all Israel, and therefore it is not a Book foreign to Britons who are Israelites.

No wonder they read, love, honour, trust and defend their own Book which God by the inspiration of His Holy Spirit produced in and through them in past ages.

To follow up this idea we quote from Pere Hyacinth. In referring to the Bible, he says:—"These ancient oriental books are as thoroughly assimilated in England (the British Isles) as if they were of English origin."

He hits a great truth. On the human side they are of English origin, meaning by the word, British; meaning by this word, Israel; meaning by this word, all Israel; meaning by these two words, Judah and Israel of the two kingdoms from 975 B.C., as well as by all Israel from the Exodus to 975 B.C.

Let us have a word from the famous, brainy, direct writer, Max O'Rell. He says:—"If I have not succeeded in proving that in spite of their thousand and one whims, the Anglo-Saxons are the only people in the world who are perfectly free, I have wasted my time."

Here is another condition, state and characteristic in which Anglo-Saxons "lead the world."

After all these quotations, we take it for granted that Mr. Forbes will never again say in a sarcastic manner concerning British-Israel teachers that "Its devotees seem to think that Britain always has been and still is at the head of the world."

Were it necessary, we could give a hundred pages of similar quotations, but we think our duty is finished for the present. Reader, do not fail to note that Mr. Forbes speaks almost as highly of Britain as we do, and nearly as favourably as the above quoted foreigners do.

He, at present, does not fully believe Britain is God's modern time official and Divinely-led nation of promise and of selection, being Israel of old. In a little while, we think he will not mention India, the Hindoo, or the present-day "Scand" as the official national kingdom of Israel.

THE INEFFABLE NAME OF GOD.—III.

BY THE LATE REV. MARTIN LYMAN STREATOR, M.A.

THE numerical value of the ineffable Name is 6561 which as already shown is the square of 81 or is three raised to the eighth power. It is a marvellous fact, as shown by investigation, that the structure of the universe is based upon this very number. In his profound work on the Source of Measures, J. Ralston Skinner says:

> "A square of 81 to the side, or 6561 in area, contains a circle whose area equals 5153; or, rectifying the circumference, a diameter of 6561 has a circumference of 5153 × 4 equals 20612." (p. 1.)

Again he makes a statement worthy of the investigation of all architects, civil engineers and scientists, exhibiting the ancient view of the creative design.

> "The greatest development is that the entire system seems to have been anciently regarded as one resting in nature, and one which was adopted by nature, or God, as the basis or law of the exertion practically of creative power —that is, it was the creative design, of which creation was practically the application . . .

Digitized by Google

The true study of the Deity by man being in the observation of His works, the discovery of the fundamental creative law, in numbers and measures, as regards His works, of as wide and comprehensive grasp as shown, would locate the substance of such a discovery as the practical and real tangible link between God and man, as that by which man can in a measure realize the actually existing working qualities of God, just, speaking most reverently, as he would those of a fellow-man—as, say, of a mason, or of a carpenter, thus revealing tangible existence, likeness, relationship, and, remotely companionship. Such a link, once found, would constitute a basis for superstructure of recognition, praise, worship, and copy. As a fact, this system seems to underlie the whole Biblical structure, as a foundation for its ritualism, and for its display of the works of the Deity in the way of architecture, by use of the sacred unit of measure in the Garden of Eden, the Ark of Noah, the Tabernacle, and the Temple of Solomon." (pp. 3, 4.)

This link has been found in the numerical significance of the ineffable Name of the Creator, exhibiting the essential factor in determining the relation of the diameter to the circumference of a circle. The relation is also found in the word Elohim, the majestic plural in Hebrew for God as the personal embodiment of the dynamical energies of creation. They are found in Him, and proceed from Him, for power belongs to God.

In connection with this, consider what Professor Totten says concerning these fundamental mathematical relations of all structures, embracing the universe itself.

> "It is impossible for one skilled in mathematics not to see the pi-ratio in all of these things, or cycles. The ancient Ratio runs 3½ equals 3.14, a fair approximation only: 31 is El, or God in Hebrew, and it has been shown the Elohim is arithmographically still—3.1415—upon the circumference of the Very Beginning! Is this an accident? Hence the length of the earthly life of Jesus, as Son of El, was 31.1416 years. The length of the womb-life of all men is 3 raised to the eighth power, or 6561 hours on an average, or 273 days, and thus into the ninth hour of the 274th day. But LIGHT, the first thing that the Great Author created into mundane affairs, arithmographically, was 20612, or the Hebrew word Aor, to be read as written over the circle, encompassing all things: hence 20612 divided by 6561 equals 3.14159 equals pi." ("The Tau Cross," pp. 49, 50.)

The numerical value of the Hebrew word Yahweh, translated in our English Bibles by the word Jehovah, when its numerals are written around the circumference of a circle is 5651. While the numerical value of J-H-V-H is 5651, the numerical value of J-V-H-V is 6561, which is the square of 81, and is 3, the numerical emblem of God in His threefold personality, office and work, raised to the eighth power. Thus we see that the number dominating the structure of the universe inheres in the very name of God. His name in Hebrew as the centre and the source of power is EL, whose numerical value is 31, indicating threefold personality, office and work in the unity of the Divine Being. The mysterious name whose consonants are J-V-H-V, and whose numerical value is 6561, gives us a clue to the hidden name of God which is not declared openly in the Bible. This hidden name of God as an old name has reference to God in His creative and life-giving power. It will be revealed in the fulness of its significance at the fulness of the times, when the glory of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea.

This is the ineffable Name of God. It is incommunicable, because it has not yet been revealed in its fulness. While it is intimately related to the name Yahweh or Jehovah, it is distinct from it. It is not yet made known, save by implication, because we are not yet able to receive it in the heights and depths and the lengths and breadths of its mysterious meaning. Not till we shall know as we are known will we be able to understand and appreciate it. Now we see through a dim window obscurely. Then we shall see face to face. We shall be like Him when we shall see Him as He is.

That all these things are involved in the ineffable Name of God is indicated by the cubical and orbital significance of 6561, the mystic number determining the relation of the diameter to the whole circumference of the creation. While we do not yet know the name and are getting ready to receive it, we can learn something of its import from the significance of the mystical number controlling the structure of the whole creation, the visible and majestic temple of the holy and invisible God.

"Holy and reverend is his name." (Psa. cxi, 9.) The conquering Christ in His final conflict with the Antichrist and his impious host wears a Name which no one knoweth but He Himself, indicating the precious consummation of His relation to God and His people. (Rev. xix, 12.)

In the conclusion of his profound study on The Source of Measures, the learned author, J. Ralston Skinner, makes a statement which will be highly appreciated by every Gideonite and Berean who delight in the vindication of truth. He says:

> "Does one wish to build a house? No house was ever actually built with tangible material until first the architectural design of building had been accomplished, no matter whether the structure was palace or hovel. So with these elements and numbers. They are not of men, nor are they of his invention. They have been revealed to him to the extent of his ability to realize a system, which is the creative system of the eternal God; open at all times to man for his advance into its knowledge, just in the measure of his application and brain ability; free to all as is the water we drink and the air we breathe. But spiritually, to man the value of this matter is, that he can actually, in contemplation, bridge over all material construction of the cosmos, and pass into the very thought and mind of God, to the extent of recognizing his system of design for cosmic creation—Yea, even before the words went forth, Let there be! It is the realization of the existence and mental workings of the Divine mind, by means of the little primal cube and its circle, which to us are tangible realities, that goes to prove to man that his soul lives, and will continue to live; and thus he may take little heed for his body, which is, however exquisitely constructed, but a mask, dulling the finer power of his mental whole" (pp. 318, 319).

The Name of God is an expression representing what He is in His inmost Being, His real essence, or of the manifestation of Himself in His work. The fulness of His Being cannot be known till His work is fully accomplished. Hence He is the Becoming One Who will manifest the fulness of His essential Being and real character at the final consummation of His great work. His old Name is still hidden. In the nature of the case the ineffable Name of God cannot be fully known till the old name develops into the new name that manifests the fulness of His Being, His Power, His Goodness, His Love and His Glory. The faithful overcomer will share the bliss of this Name, for the Messiah says, "I will write upon him my new name." (Rev. iii, 12.) The best interpretation of this gracious and precious promise which I have been able to find is that given by Archbishop Trench. It confirms some of the thoughts concerning the ineffable Name advocated in this article. His writings evince a reverential Christian spirit. He says:

> "This new name is not 'The Word of God' (Rev. xix, 13) nor yet 'King of kings and Lord of lords' (xix, 16), as some will have it. It is true that both of these appear in this Book as names of Christ; but for all that, neither of them could be called His new name; the faithful having been familiar with them from the beginning. The new name is that mysterious, and in the necessity of things uncommunicated, and for the present time incommunicable, name, which in that same sublimest of all visions is referred to: 'He had a name written, that no man knew, but he himself' (xix, 12), for none except God can search out the deep things of God (1 Cor. ii, 12; cf. Matt. xi, 27; Judges xiii, 18.) But the mystery of this new name, which no man by searching could find out, which in this present condition no man is so much as capable of receiving, shall be imparted to the saints and citizens of the new Jerusalem. They shall know even as they are known (1 Cor. xiii, 12.)" (The Epistles to the Seven Churches in Asia, pp. 198-9.)

The Hebrew patriarchs "confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth." (Heb. xi, 13.) So also are we their children. "We have not here an abiding city, but we seek after the city which is to come." (Heb. xiii, 14, R.V.) It has secure foundations, for its Builder and Maker is God. The Lord is there. We shall be like Him when we see Him as He is in the fulness of His power and triumphant glory. How great is His sure and precious promise to him that overcometh! "I will write upon him my new name." (Rev. iii, 12.) He delights to have us with Him, and to share with Him the power and the glory which He has won for us. Therefore we will glorify His Name through the ages of the ages, His own new Name, expressing the fulness of His Godhood and the glory of His manhood.

As we are now living in the appointed time of the end, when, according to the prophet Daniel, "knowledge shall be increased," the time is rapidly approaching when the mathematical and scientific principles hidden in the numerical symbolism of the Divine Word will be discerned by the chosen people, the Anglo-Israelites of the world, and will give them a mighty impulse for performing their Divine mission in this crisis of the ages. God is preparing the way for disclosing His secret truth that has been hidden for ages in order to its disclosure in these times of crisis. Its revelation will shatter the bulwarks of scepticism and will enlighten the chosen people of the Anglo-Saxon race concerning their noble origin in the Hebrew patriarchs, and their glorious destiny under the Messiah, the Holy One of Israel. Then He will reveal to each faithful overcomer in all the fulness of its meaning the power and beauty and glory of His own NEW NAME.

THE CRUCIFIXION OF CHRISTIANITY—VI.

By the Rev. John Blacket (of Australia).

The Miracles of Our Lord and His Resurrection.

Dr. Horton puts the position very lightly when he declares: "The Modernist says: 'You must not think that the religion of Jesus Christ rests upon those miracles recorded in the Gospels, because those miracles can only be verified by evidence, and evidence of the kind that verifies miracles is almost impossible to obtain centuries after.'" But are we not to accept the testimony of the New Testament writers, and of the Apostolic Fathers, men who taught and practised the highest and sublimest morality that the world has ever known—men who hazarded their lives, and gave up their lives, in defence of the truths recorded?

What is the objection to miracles? We have been told that "miracles (or the intervention of the Deity in human affairs) are, to the scientific thinker, a priori so improbable that no amount of testimony suffices to make him entertain the hypothesis for an instant." But a. priori—antecedently to experience—all that is marvellous in our experience to-day was to our forefathers incredible and impossible. If our fathers had been told, not many years ago, that the time would come when we would be able to talk to people living the other side of the world, actually hear their voices, and do so almost as soon as the words left their lips, the statement would have been as improbable and incredible as Professor Huxley's "centaur trotting down Regent Street." In relation to what is possible in the world of nature we must cease setting limits even to human power, let alone that Power which is Divine.

"Looking at the matter from the most rigidly scientific point of view," said Professor Huxley in his "Controverted Questions," "the assumption that amidst the myriads of worlds, scattered through endless space, there can be no intelligence as much greater than man's as his is greater than a black beetle's—no being endowed with powers of influencing the course of nature as much greater than his as his is greater than a snail's—seems to me not merely baseless but impertinent. If our intelligence can (in some matters) surely reproduce the past of thousands of years ago, and anticipate the future, it is clearly within the limits of possibility that some greater intellect (even of the same order) may be able to mirror the whole past and the whole future. . . . If our insignificant knowledge gives us some influence over events, practical omniscience may confer indefinably greater powers." We thank Professor Huxley for these admissions.

Is there evidence of the existence of such an Intelligence as Huxley supposes? The answer is that our Lord Himself is such. Then why should not miracles happen? Why should there not be new departures within the range of human experience? Why should not the sick be healed, the blind receive sight, a storm be calmed, or even the dead be raised? Dr. Dallinger in his book, "The Creator, and what we may know of the Method of Creation," affirms that "what to us may be profoundly miraculous may be the outcome of sheer and unmodified natural law." If we understood the forces of nature—the constitution of the universe—as a Higher Intelligence than ours understood them—we might add greatly to what men would now call the improbable, the incredible, the miraculous. In all past time electricity existed, but men were unconscious of its power and marvellous possibilities. It remained inoperative for human use, but with the widening of human knowledge those powers and possibilities have been discovered and utilized, and greater marvels have been wrought than the miracles of our Lord.

On a Theistic basis—"one God, Who is over all, through all, and in all," as Paul affirms (the Divine immanence)—the possibility of the miraculous must be conceded. This Professor Huxley admits.

In this connection we may reason from the human to the Divine. Man is an intelligent being, and has the attribute of freedom. He can and does interpose in nature. Such is his birthright. He is "to replenish the earth and to subdue it." (Gen. i, 28). Instead of nature being the master of man she is his servant. Instead of being the slave of the cosmic process, man has dominion over it. Nature is really an instrument placed as it were in the hands of man for the realization of his ideals, and for the fulfilment of his purposes. By his ever-increasing knowledge of the forces of the universe, and the conditions under which they operate, he makes the most subtle and powerful of them realize his ideals, and minister to his needs.

Now what is true of nature in relation to man (a finite intelligence), namely, that she is an instrument for the fulfilment of his purposes, must be true of the Infinite Intelligence "over all, and through all," and what is possible to the human creature must be possible to the Divine Creator.

But here we are met with the question: "What about the uniformity of nature?" It is assumed that nature flows on in the uninterrupted rhythm of cause and effect, and that any interposition would be followed by consequences of the most serious character. In his "Fragments of Science" Professor Tyndall tells us that "without a disturbance of natural law, quite as serious as the stoppage of an eclipse," or "the rolling back of the falls of Niagara," no act of humiliation, individual or national, could "call one shower from heaven." This might be true of a creator who makes a world as a watchmaker makes a watch, and

"SITS ALOFT, AND SEES IT GO."

What are we to understand by the "uniformity of nature"? It is this: The same causes produce the same effects under the same conditions. It will be noted that the conditions are vital.

Those who speak in such strong terms as Professor Tyndall does of the "uniformity of nature" seem, for a moment, to lose sight of her plasticity. Here, again, we may reason from the human to the Divine. If nature is to be an instrument in the hands of man for the fulfilment of his purposes (as he really is), then, along certain lines, she must be amenable to control—she must be plastic. Such is indeed the case. Man is constantly interposing in nature, altering the conditions under which force operates, and bringing about new departures (may we say miracles?), yet no serious consequences follow. His intelligent, judicious interposition answers to wise and beneficent purposes.

For example: It is in accordance with the uniformity of nature that water should not rise above its level. We may term such a natural law. Man brings his pumping apparatus into operation, and water rises considerably above its level, and in a desert there is an oasis. All over the Australian Commonwealth pumps are at work, yet no serious consequences follow. If the Deity, as Professor Tyndall assumes, cannot control the rainfall "without a disturbance of natural law like the stoppage of an eclipse," man by interpositions in the course of nature can make the water flow up the hillside and "turn the wilderness into standing water, and sow the fields, and plant vineyards" (Ps. cvii, 35-37). In defiance of the force of gravitation man can mount up in space, and fly through the air, and so long as the machinery is perfect, and wisely controlled, there are no serious consequences. Again, it is in accordance with the "uniformity of nature," or in harmony with natural law, that like should produce like. The seed of an almond produces an almond. The gardener interposes with his budding or grafting skill, and almond trees are now laden with peaches. There is an actual breach in the constitution of things for a desired and beneficent purpose. Man can so modify his surroundings as to affect the rainfall.

If the "uniformity of nature," then, is no bar to human intervention, neither can it be a bar to Divine intervention. What the creature can do surely the Creator can perform.

If there are Divine interpositions in the affairs of men to-day (which, I think, will be granted), why should not the special manifestations, inaugurating a New Dispensation, have occurred of which we read in New Testament times—not only the miracles, but also the Resurrection of our Lord? It is my conviction that just as there are periods in the material realm (for instance, the incoming of life) when the "veiled" Creator takes new departures, there are equally such in the spiritual world. It is said that "miracles do not happen to-day"—a very questionable assumption. I fail to see that in the interest of Christianity they are needed to-day. The founding of the Christian Church (based on the Resurrection of our Lord); the power, the potency (transforming effects) of the "glorious Gospel of the blessed God"; its progress despite the world, the flesh, and the Devil—progress in the face of appalling opposition—constitute the supreme miracle of the ages.

Before closing this section let us turn once more to Polycarp, Bishop of Smyrna. His testimony to the Resurrection of our Lord is indeed impressive, more especially as he was the disciple of the Apostle John, and (as Irenæus tells us) "had been brought into contact with many who had seen Christ." Not only so, but Polycarp, when nearly one hundred years old, sealed his testimony to our Lord and to His Resurrection by giving up his life at the stake. Polycarp commends the Philippians, to whom he wrote an Epistle, because "the strong root of their faith" continued to his day, and brought forth fruit to the Lord Jesus Christ, "Who, for our sins," said

Polycarp, "suffered even unto death; WHOM GOD RAISED FROM THE DEAD, having loosed the bands of the grave. To Him all things in heaven and on earth are subject." "HE WHO RAISED HIM UP FROM THE DEAD," Polycarp says, "will raise us up also if we do His will, and walk in His commandments." He brings his Epistle to a close with the prayer: "May the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, and Jesus Christ Himself, Who is the Son of God, and our everlasting High Priest, build you up in faith and truth. . . . . May He bestow upon you a lot and portion amongst the saints, and on us, with you, and on all that are under heaven, who shall believe in our Lord Jesus Christ, and in His Father, WHO RAISED HIM FROM THE DEAD."

The denial of the Resurrection of our Lord by some Modernists, who profess to be His followers, is indeed the "Crucifixion of Christianity"—the disintegration of the Christian Faith.

WEEK BY WEEK.

By A. R. H.

DIBELIUS made a shrewd hint when he suggested that the key to understanding the Imperialistic faith of the ANGLO-SAXON might be found when we come to study ANGLO-SAXON RELIGION.

Of course the secret of our faith in EMPIRE and in the KINGDOM of GOD is contained within our religion. For religion is founded on the BIBLE, which remains the secret of our national greatness.

ANGLO-SAXON faith and religion are easy to understand for anyone who understands the BIBLE. But it is not easy for people without the BIBLE-background to their mental outlook. In view of this we fully appreciate Dibelius' statement that "Nothing in ENGLAND is so hard for the Continental observer to understand as the ANGLO-SAXON attitude to religion and the ESTABLISHED CHURCH."

It is natural that the people of GOD'S KINGDOM in the earth should tend to develop a type of national religion, communal in nature rather than individualistic.

Anglicanism as distinct from Nonconformity bears this special mark. It embodies the conception of the CHURCH as being not so much the temple of a living spirit as the PALACE OF AN INVISIBLE KING.*

This is exactly the type of conception one would expect to find developed by the Kingdom-people as being the most suitable for a specifically national Kingdom-church organization.

Like every other conception it does not develop to perfection if unrestrained by modifying influences. Nonconformity has a vital part to play in the national religious life and most effectively "prunes the tree of ecclesiasticism."

"Every conceivable form of external Christian activity has been tried out in ENGLAND," writes Dibelius, "and Christian ideals of conduct have—though all fulfilment always implies a certain coarsening of the ideal—been realized in ANGLO-SAXON hands with a fulness to which the whole rest of the world can show nothing equal or even comparable."

But the worship of the NATIONAL CHURCH in BRITAIN has naturally developed along special lines. In the NATIONAL CHURCH the KINGDOM itself is organized for worship as a nation.

Dibelius describes the ENGLISH NATIONAL CHURCH worship as

which will "deeply move those who are accustomed to it; to others it is apt to appear like empty formalism. All this, however, is the result of the fact that, to a degree incomprehensible to the German, worship is for the ANGLO-SAXON the main form of expression of the religious sense. The German Protestant goes to church because he seeks to derive some spiritual benefit from the service of GOD; the ENGLISHMAN, in order that GOD may receive from him His due service, honour and gratitude."

Everyone will understand the type of distinction that Dibelius is trying to make. There is a sharp distinction between the individual approach to GOD of the Nonconformist system of worship and the organized worship of the NATIONAL CHURCH wherein the nation as a nation makes its approach to GOD.

And although the tendency of a STATE CHURCH may always err toward formalism it by no means justifies the claim that such a service is less spiritually beneficial to the individual than the Nonconformist systems of worship. In the national system the individual approach to GOD is just as real. It is the approach of the individual en masse. In this approach as a nation, the individual finds his own personality uplifted and carried along in the cumulative enthusiasm of mass suggestion. No one can deny the driving force and power of mass psychology.

Both the individualistic and national types of worship are essential to the religious life and health of a nation. And in the future we may expect to see the individualistic types strengthened and purified throughout the world, together with a great extension and expansion of the influence of the national or Kingdom-type of worship. We look for the day when every nation and kingdom in the earth has its national worship organized on national as well as individualistic lines.

In the day when the kingdoms of this world become the KINGDOM of our LORD and of His CHRIST, then every nation within the KINGDOM will have its proper organization for the national, as well as individual, worship of its peoples.

Dibelius' use of the word "communal" in this connection is happy and appropriate. But he would have done better still to use the word "kingdom." For the "great communal cult" of the ENGLISH NATIONAL CHURCH represents the approach to GOD of the people of the KINGDOM as a Kingdom-people.

The significance of the Kingdom-aspect of this matter is beginning to dawn on every side. Thus the ARCHBISHOP of CANTERBURY, after commenting on the remarkable fact that the expansion of the BRITISH EMPIRE (or KINGDOM) was exactly similar to that of the CHURCH—declared: "Where once there were only a few isolated and scattered missionary dioceses, there is now a COMMUNITY of FREE and SELF-GOVERNING CHURCHES in all parts of the WORLD. Within this

—as within the BRITISH COMMONWEALTH of NATIONS, the bond

* This conception was first expressed in these words by Archbishop Laud.

Digitized by Google

is spiritual—a common FAITH and ORDER, a common reverence for the MOTHER CHURCH of ENGLAND and the ancient SEE of CANTERBURY. The unity is spiritual and free."

The significance of this new development is made publicly manifest to the world during the periodical Lambeth Conferences.† Of this conference, Dibelius writes: "It may prove to be the parent cell for an international Anglican organization. The conference further strives, with the utmost circumspection, for unity among Protestant Churches throughout the world, and since the war, increased energy has been put into the effort to bring world Protestantism together under Anglican leadership.

"A movement like this, though absolutely disinterested in itself, would certainly have consequences of more than spiritual importance; it would provide ANGLO-SAXON world dominion, resting hitherto on BATTLESHIPS and BANKING, with which might prove far more effective than either of these."

Thus Dibelius paints for us a picture of CHURCH and STATE in BRITAIN marching side by side together toward one great goal. And have we not in his reference to a transition from "battleships and banking" to "a spiritual basis" an echo of the message of the GREAT PYRAMID?

Mr. David Davidson writes regarding the Epoch of Transition defined as 31st January, 1933: "The sequence of the related symbolism was shown to imply drastic material changes prior to 31st January, 1933, and in the BRITISH RACE, in the BRITISH EMPIRE, and in the UNITED STATES of AMERICA, after 31st January, 1933. It was explained that the GREAT CHANGE was portrayed as a spiritual revival of the BRITISH RACE, analogous to in its origin to, but immeasurably greater in its effects than, the WESLEY-WHITFIELD movement that gave spiritual momentum to the BRITISH INDUSTRIAL REVOLUTION of the EIGHTEENTH CENTURY; that gave spiritual impetus to the AMERICAN WAR of INDEPENDENCE; and that fostered the pioneering spirit that gave the world what is best in the BRITISH EMPIRE and the UNITED STATES of AMERICA—in spite of the 'straight-jacketing' influences of ecclesiastical and civil forms of government in the EIGHTEENTH CENTURY. What happened then is, in a more spiritual sense, due to happen within the next six years."

Moreover, Mr. Davidson is careful to emphasize the fact that it is essential for the CHURCH in BRITAIN "to teach the Gospel of the KINGDOM by the example of reflecting in its collective life—as distinct from its individual examples of living—the glory of the TRUE CITY of GOD. For the Gospel of Salvation is concerned solely with the spiritual rebirth of the individual. The Gospel of the KINGDOM, however, is concerned with the sociological organization of the SPIRITUAL STATE . . . . The essential characteristic of 'The KINGDOM' is organization."

Yes! The essential characteristic of the KINGDOM is organization. And what people on earth are better qualified to be organizers of the KINGDOM of GOD upon earth than the BRITISH-ISRAEL PEOPLE, designated by the Scriptures "A PEOPLE for ACTION."‡

Dibelius, unwittingly, catches a glimpse of this when he writes of the ENGLISH: "CHRISTIANITY, for a people with such a passion for deeds and want of comprehension for dogma, is dedicated to the glory of GOD."

AN ACTION AND AN ORGANIZATION

Again, he puts the contrast between BRITISH and CONTINENTAL conceptions of religion, strikingly, when he says: "ENGLISH piety, inasmuch as it is PURITAN, seeks to save the world; GERMAN piety seeks to overcome the world."

ANGLO-SAXON religion is active rather than contemplative. Psychologically, we must attribute this chiefly to the impellent energy of ideas. For the idea of ideas inspiring ANGLO-SAXON faith is that of the building of the KINGDOM of GOD upon earth. The impellent energy of this idea constitutes the most tremendous call to action that has ever reached the conscience of humanity. The BRITISH PEOPLE, being by race and age-long training, "a PEOPLE for ACTION," are naturally more susceptible to this inspiration and call than any other race or people.

Foreign observers watch this tendency with mixed feelings. Thus, Dibelius, in trying to analyse the ENGLISH conception of Christian responsibility, writes: "Further, must the CHURCH see herself as the loyal servant of the STATE, and approve or at best pass over in silence any and every expression of the policy of might in international affairs? Is not her task, as to influence public opinion, of all nations to see in her a moral counterpoise to the ruthless nationalism of State power? Is not the present epoch, when the naked brutality of economic interests seems to rule the world, expressly designed to call for the resistance of spirit against matter, of the eternal against the temporal, of CHRISTENDOM against the international Cæsaro-papism of capital?

"Such a line of thought is widespread among the intellectual leaders of English Christians everywhere; it is the strongest proof—if proof were necessary—of the vitality of Christian ideas in modern life; it is, in part, the spiritual parallel to the political Imperialism that dominates the English mind.

"There is a tendency, on the CONTINENT, either to ignore this spiritual Imperialism of Anglicanism, or to dismiss it with a shrug of the shoulders as one more sign of English hypocrisy. The English missionary is recalled, with his BIBLE draped with the UNION JACK, and all clerical efforts after unity are put down as spiritual variations on the tune of RULE BRITANNIA. This is both exceedingly unjust and exceedingly short-sighted.

"There certainly are camp followers of the movement, notably in the PRESS, who are more concerned with politics than with CHRISTIANITY; many of them. There is much in the professions of friendship issued by the clergy and others, † Dibelius writes: "In August, 1920, the Lambeth Conference addressed a Great Manifesto to the world, designed to lay the bases for Church reunion. What was contemplated there was not a reabsorption in Anglicanism of the Free Churches or any Continental sects, but the erection of a World Church, in which the Church of England would be only one among a series of equivalent Churches. The issue of such an invitation by the head of the English Church, at a time when the shouts of victory in war were resounding in the air, constitutes a landmark in the history of civilization."

both before and since the war, which reveals a blank ignorance of any point of view but the BRITISH. Further, it is obvious that a real success in would be of the greatest possible utility to the political Imperialism of ENGLAND. But none of these objections touches the fundamentals of the neo-Georgian idea. Every powerful CHURCH in the plenitude of Christian life must strive for world acceptance. That is what it is for. As to the impregnation of the entire movement by authentic Christian fire there can be no doubt, however many beggars may warm their hands at it.

"A movement, beginning in 1845–46 with the EVANGELICAL ALLIANCE, and reviving in 1867 with the LAMBETH CONFERENCE, is no mere by-product of war emotion, but a slowly ripening fruit of the dawning sense of responsibility and power of the ANGLICAN CHURCH itself. There is, further, nothing hypocritical in the translation of

of the CHAMBERLAIN era to the religious sphere; on the contrary, the fact is but one sign among many of the healthy interpretation of political, spiritual and economic forces in English national life.

"As to the future of the movement, opinions will differ. If, however, those are right who hold that our age is yearning for after the pernicious drought of a materialistic age, a movement with the leaders of a WORLD-WIDE CHURCH behind it must be rated very seriously indeed. Any Church or any nation which stands aloof from world tendencies, condemns itself. Mere negation will not help; the task is rather to see to it that a stream rising from spiritual springs is not muddied from political swamps."

Well, if the testimony of the BIBLE and GREAT PYRAMID is true, BRITAIN is destined to supply the new spiritual leadership that shall lead the world out from the dried-up, sun-burned plains of a materialistic age into the promised milk-and-honey land of the new and better spiritual age.

Tribulation is teaching the ANGLO-SAXON WORLD that life is one and cannot be split up into watertight compartments. The political, spiritual and economic forces of the national life are inextricably intermixed. The health of one is dependent upon the health of all. The life of the whole nation in all its parts must be brought into harmony with the law of CHRIST.

The foundations of the false city are being shaken by world-tribulation. The BRITISH RACE are the shock-absorbers and builders of the new and true CITY OF GOD. Theirs is the task of meeting the initial shock and chaos of reconstruction and readjustment. But having trodden the Via Dolorosa of initial tribulation, they will pass through the GATE of SACRIFICE triumphantly leading a regenerated humanity out into its new sphere of operations and activity—the plane of perfection.

ISRAEL'S MISSION.

BY W. E. THIEM, President of Adelaide (South Australia) Branch.

An Address delivered to the Adelaide (South Australia) Branch, July 24th, 1930.

WE most of us remember being told of a wonderful story from our early childhood, the story of how God gave His only begotten Son to suffer and to die in our stead. Without the atoning Blood of Jesus Christ our position is quite hopeless, for we "all have erred and come short of the Glory of God." Think for a moment of the Ten Commandments. Can any of us say that at all times we have consistently kept each and all of them? We all know that we have not, but nevertheless we may proceed with joy and confidence, for we believe in the Promise of Sanctification by Faith.

Let me present to you the picture of another scene, faithful Abraham willing at the command of God to offer up his only Isaac, the son so miraculously given him in his old age. Abraham's fidelity was all God required of him, as He himself would provide the sacrifice, and He rewarded Abraham with a wonderful promise—even sworn to by God.

"Because thou hast done this thing and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son, that in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore, and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies, and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed."

If God has not honoured his promise to faithful Abraham, what reason does there remain for us to expect Him to honour His promise to accept the Blood that was shed on Calvary's hill for our ransom? Have any of us shown greater faith and submission to the Divine will than did Abraham that we should expect preference over him? We know that we have not. We therefore turn to Scripture and history which alone can give us the assurance on the subject that we need, and far from being disappointed or disquieted, we behold a plan unfolding that for thrill and magnitude surpasses comprehension, and at times we feel so overwhelmed with God's greatness and our insignificance that we turn back with joy and relief to our "Rock Anchor," "the Man of Sorrows and acquainted with grief."

Far from proving faithless to Abraham we see God using this selected "Father of nations" and his seed to work out His mighty purposes in the earth, and slowly but surely equipping and developing them. The process may at first appear to be unnecessarily protracted, but the Master-Builder makes no mistakes. In His building no weakness is permitted to remain in the foundation to the endangering of the superstructure. True, one must believe God could have built them up as quickly as He desired. "This people I have formed for Myself. They shall shew forth My praise." We must, however, recognize that He did not choose to make machines of us but leaves us the liberty of free-will, the right to choose between good and evil, and yet He continues to mould Israel into a "vessel well pleasing unto Him."

There should be no need to make the mistake of identifying Israel with the Jew or of confusing the two; in fact the first eleven books of the Bible make no reference to the

Digitized by Google

Jew, whilst Israel comes into the picture in the first book and carries on to the last; for her continuity is by Divine Charter as long as the ordinances of the Sun and Moon continue (Jer. xxxiii, 25, 26).

Men who do not trouble to investigate the plan running throughout the Bible frequently object to the thought of God's favouring one nation more than others; but which of them, were he erecting some large structure, would say that his works' overseer was on the same level as the unskilled labourer employed to assist the builders? In like manner, God in His infinite wisdom has trained and equipped Israel to be a big strong member of the family of nations.

Israel went through many stages to learn his business. First we see him in bondage to the Egyptian learning to serve. When the time arrived he was redeemed from servitude to man that he might in the wilderness learn the wisdom and necessity of serving God. Then we see him under the Law, the "schoolmaster" to bring him to Christ, from Whom he would receive his marching orders. But the vessel was marred in the making. It had to be remodelled, but of the same material, which it had of necessity to be, for God is a Covenant-keeping God and He had said, "My covenant will I not break, nor give my Glory to another." "O house of Israel, cannot I do with you as this potter? saith the Lord. Behold, as the clay is in the potter's hand, so are ye in mine hand, O house of Israel" (Jer. xviii, 6).

God's plans must go forward. He had chosen Israel for His witnesses long before Israel went astray (Isaiah xliii, 10, 11, 12). The prophet Hosea is particularly illuminating on God's dealings with the witnesses that went astray, and whom He recovered and restored (Hosea ii, 6, 7; xiv, 20).

Was such poetic beauty ever approached outside of Holy Writ? Who but the British-Israel believer can see it, for he has the key that unlocks the great treasure trove of the Bible, finding its choicest gems in passages that formerly were meaningless. Other passages that formerly had their own appeal to the reader must now appeal with double force. "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the House of Israel." "I am the good Shepherd and know My sheep, and am known of them." The recognition was mutual when the Shepherd came, and Peter was able to take up the refrain from Hosea and write, "But ye are an elect race, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a people for God's own possession. . ." (1 Pet. ii, 9, 10).

But the witnesses whom He had chosen and now given their marching orders, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," were not yet fully equipped; the time had not yet arrived for the destruction of the Great Enemy of mankind, and Satan's witnesses also could go forth and throw down as Israel builded. Israel must now be gathered into the Covenant land promised to her in 2 Sam. vii, 10, and be established under the Throne of David. Concerning this Throne there was to be no end to the increase of His Government and Peace (Isaiah ix, 7); the Government built upon the law of Jehovah on which our common law is based, and the Peace that follows the immunity from invasion. Even in the mighty conflict upon which unarmed Britain entered against armed Germany, not a foot of British soil was at any time invaded.

In the Book of Revelation, chapter 12, we have in Apocalyptic language that of which Joseph saw something in his dream, which at first displeased Jacob, but not for long. The great enemy sought first through the agency of the political forces within the Roman Empire to destroy the man-child, Jesus Christ, but without success; next the battle was carried on against His followers to destroy His work. But men were raised up who loved their Saviour more than they feared man, and against such, persecution badly failed. Subtler methods must accordingly be adopted. The degrading influences of Ecclesiastical Rome, with her paganism disguised under Christian names, was now cast out like a flood, threatening to engulf Israel with idolatry once more.

At this stage Israel's witnesses were to go through a period of restraint, or as John wrote, "prophesy in sackcloth for 1,260 days." This had its currency in the period of 1,260 years that elapsed between the time that Constantine made Christianity not only safe but fashionable in Rome (resulting in the filling of the Church with unconverted pagan hordes) and the time of the Reformation.

Much controversy has been raised as to the identity of these two witnesses, but I think that a careful study of the two priesthoods with which Israel was served fulfils the description that John gives of them; and their great and unusual power is the power of Israel under God. The Levitical priesthood was continuous and hereditary, ministering in secular matters for the duration of the Throne of David. The Aaronic priesthood was by calling or selection from the tribe of Levi, and carried out the ceremonial of the Temple. With the fall of the Temple, and the widespread evangel of the Gospel of Salvation, there was a change made in this priesthood (Heb. vii, 12). The Aaronic gave place to the order of Melchizedek, a priesthood to whom the patriarchs went to enquire of God (1 Sam. ix, 9).

The work of these two priesthoods or witnesses, described by John as "the two olive trees" and "the two candlesticks standing before the God of the Earth," is seen in their persistent protests against the darkening influences of the foreign priesthood; in fact for 250 years Wales firmly resisted their encroachments until compelled by Edward I to submit. As the end of the time in which they were to "prophesy in sackcloth" drew near, their efforts became more and more pronounced. There were the Albigenses, the Waldenses, the Hussites, the Wycliffites, and many smaller organizations continually becoming an ever-increasing source of irritation to the Papal hierarchy; until at last, the Fifth Lateran Council that was held from 1512 to 1517, attended by representatives of the Church in all lands, took action.

They requested that all dissenters should send their representatives to Rome to plead their cause. None appeared, perhaps because the trap was not sufficiently camouflaged. The "two witnesses" seemed dead, or non-existent, and were pronounced so by the court orator of the Council amid triumphant acclamation. "Now no one contradicts, none opposes." To the Pope he said, "The whole body of Christendom is now subject to its head, that is to thee." The same day the Pope issued an edict, one purpose of which was the exclusion of all heretics from the Church visible. There were great rejoicings, banquetings and the giving of gifts as the revelator John has shown (Rev. xi, 10). The date of the pronouncement was May 5th, 1514.

On October 31st, 1517, just 3½ prophetic days or lunar years later, Martin Luther nailed up his historic defiance of the Pope, and the light of the Reformation rapidly spread. No longer need the two witnesses prophesy in sackcloth, but in the open fearlessly, as God gave them opportunity. From the stake rings down, through the days that have since gone, their defiance of the worst that Rome could do. "Be of good cheer, Master Ridley, we have this day lit a candle in England that I trust by the Grace of God will never be extinguished."

But the seven times of punishment on the "rebellious race" was not yet fulfilled. In the clear light of Protestantism the witnesses had still more work to do ere the necessary strength was obtained that Israel-Britain might step into first rank among the nations, with sufficient power to defy the destroyer, give liberty to the captive and break the yoke of the slave. The Evangelical revival in England surely prepared the race, so that at the end of the eighteenth century they were armed not only with the military and naval strength to protect their own abroad, but with the mighty essentials for their mission that the London Missionary Society and the British and Foreign Bible Society, and kindred organizations given of God, were able to supply. "Thou hast increased the nation, O Lord, Thou hast increased the nation: Thou art glorified: Thou hadst removed it far unto all the ends of the earth." (Isa. xxvi, 15) (R.V. Margin.) "And the remnant of Jacob shall be in the midst of many people as a dew from the Lord, as the showers upon the grass that tarrieth not for man nor waiteth for the sons of men."

Great as this work has been, we feel that it is but the earliest of what is to come. The long novitiate of Israel does not indicate weakness or delay on the part of Israel's God, but rather greater preparation for greater service. "I have graven thee upon the palms of My Hands" surely indicates God's good pleasure to use His chosen servants to greater purpose. There is still a world to win for Christ. How many other worlds we do not now know.

Ecclesiastes tells how that when a mighty king besieged a city, a poor wise man by his wisdom saved it. Let us, weak as we may seem, try to save this city of ours. If we labour in His strength, we labour with His infinite resources at our disposal. To-day we face a topsy-turvy world with many nations tottering to their fall. In striking contrast stands out the multitudinous peoples that have sprung from faithful Abraham, steady, strong, and stable. To-day as never before there is need for the strength of Joseph's bow. "Oh Israel, praise ye the Lord."

LEAD US, NOT INTO TEMPTATION.

By A. R. H.

THE phrase in the LORD'S prayer:—"Lead us not into temptation," causes perennial dispute as to exact meaning. A clue to the exact significance of the prayer may be found in the record of our LORD'S temptation, recorded in Matt. iv, 1 (A.V.).

GOD does not lead us into temptation but leads us into an environment or condition that will help us to overcome evil. GOD never allows us to be tempted more than we are able, but always makes plain that we may be able to bear it.

Thus of our LORD'S temptation, it is written, not that JESUS was led by the SPIRIT to be tempted, but "Jesus was led up of the Spirit into the wilderness . . . . to be tempted of the devil."

GOD did not lead His Son into temptation. God led His Son into the wilderness; an environment in which He was strengthened to resist evil suggestion. The Spirit always leads thus. It is the Devil who tempts, not GOD.†

In his modern English version of the Scriptures, FERRAR FENTON renders the prayer in very significant fashion:—"You would not lead us into temptation, but deliver us from its evil."‡

This translation is the literal translation of the original Greek, retaining the Greek moods and tenses. FERRAR FENTON defends this rendering on the grounds that the usual version, having been made from a Latin translation, "could not reproduce the actual sense of the Saviour as given by the Evangelists, for the Latin has no Aorist of the Imperative Passive Mood as used by Matthew and Luke."

Doubtless Ferrar Fenton's modern English rendering expresses the real meaning more exactly than the Authorized Version. But in reciting the Authorized Version we can obtain the same result if we make a long pause following the second word, thus:—"Lead us . . . . . not into temptation," etc.

The words "Lead us" then become a constructive affirmation in harmony with the account of conditions accompanying our LORD'S temptation, and the general experience of Christian people.

Lost opportunity is not only the lost venture, it is the source of constant regret. We look back, we know now what we have lost in neglecting the happy chance, the golden hour, and self-reproach presses upon our hearts.

"Miss not the occasion; by forelock take
That subtle Power, the never halting time,
Lest a mere moment's putting off should make
This chance almost as heavy as a crime."

BISHOP BOYD CARPENTER.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

LOOKING at the state of things in our own country and in the world generally at this time, it is not too much to say that at no period since the British-Israel-World Federation was founded in 1919 has our Congress met under world conditions so disturbing and ominous as those now prevailing. We have no need to particularize here; the papers are daily reporting evidences of the unrest and discontentment, even strife and revolt, in many parts. In Britain herself we have distressing examples of how things have gone wrong in various ways, so that our Statesmen and Church leaders are bewildered and at their wits' end. No one seems able to grapple with the economic and unemployment problems. No religious leaders appear who can stop the downgrade in spiritual matters; the falling away is alarming; to attempt to minimize it is folly; to ignore it would be disastrous. All men and women of good will are looking and longing for remedies, but how many are looking in the right direction? Are we not right in declaring that there is no other way out of our troubles than by coming back as a nation to God and the Bible through a great Revival? To this end is it not the duty of the British-Israel-World Federation to proclaim the Gospel of the Kingdom of God with redoubled energy and enthusiasm?

One great danger is the temptation to give way to pessimism, and this is just what many excellent and some highly-placed people who are not British-Israelites have done to our personal knowledge, but no true B.-I. can be a pessimist. On the other hand, all British-Israelites must beware of falling into the laissez-faire attitude of mind. All must realize that God expects us—everyone—to take our part and do our VERY BEST, and now is the time for all to stand in with might and main, with courage and determination, to stem the torrent of evil. Prayer and faith certainly, but are not some forgetting that works are necessary also, yes, and self-sacrifice? Awful remorse will come to those who discover—when it is too late—wherein they have failed. We make no apology for speaking plainly, nor would any true believer have us do otherwise. These are times for self-examination, clear thinking and right acting, are there not? Let us remember the exalted privilege of co-operating together with God. What counts by comparison with this? Remember God's call to Abraham, Moses, Paul, and their response and the results which followed, changing the whole course of history. We are at a crisis in human affairs and the situation must be faced. Sectarianism has failed to deal with it. If any human institution can hope to succeed, must it not be Interdenominational?

Now, our Federation is that unquestionably, and we have ventured to issue a CALL TO THE NATION, and it has just appeared in six weekly papers. It is to appear in three daily papers this week and three more next week, in terms similar to those printed overleaf.

It is earnestly to be hoped that great numbers may be attracted to our Congress who have never yet attended any of our meetings, but it is eminently desirable that our own supporters should be present in force to help create the right atmosphere. Will our friends therefore please make every endeavour to attend?

The speakers for next week at Headquarters are Mr. J. J. Morey on Wednesday afternoon at 3, and the Rev. Sparshott Johnson, M.A., on Thursday evening at 7.30. Those for last week were Miss Hamilton Hunter and the Rev. J. Oliver Vince, B.A., B.D. A Prayer Meeting will be held on Monday evening at 8, for the Divine blessing on the Congress.

The following extracts are from an article on "Beautiful Hong Kong," by an American, in the South China Morning Post.

Hong Kong is not only beautiful, it is British, and it is the best governed spot in this part of the world. A beneficent British Government affords safety of life and property to both Chinese and foreign residents, in a measure unknown elsewhere in China, and, as an American who has visited this port and admired it several times during the past twenty years, and is now privileged to come here to reside, the writer desires to record his unbounded appreciation of what Great Britain has done, and is doing, in this place, providing not only a safe and pleasant retreat in the midst of the turmoil of Asia, but also an object lesson of the benefits of good government, which has no equal in the Orient.

It is not to be wondered at that the sinister forces of evil that are now promoting world revolution, aiming primarily at the undermining of the Christian faith and the overthrow of the Governments of Christendom, should single out Great Britain as the object of their most bitter and determined attack. When one considers the influence of the Bible which has been so widely circulated throughout the world by British Bible Societies, the recognition of God by British officials, the widespread influence in practically all mission lands of British Missionary Societies, it is evident that, unless Great Britain is weakened or overthrown, it will be absolutely impossible for the atheistic and anti-Christian or Godless programme of the international conspirators to be successful. It is only when one realizes this fact that one can understand the mystery of the subtle percolation of the slogan, "Down with England," and the spread of this damnable idea not only throughout China and India and other Oriental lands, but to such a regrettable extent in other countries as well.

One of the most regrettable things in the world to-day is the subtle propaganda being spread in America to blind the eyes of Americans and to suggest the detestable thought that eventually war between America and England is inevitable. Vast sums of money are being cleverly used to accomplish this end, not all of which pass through Moscow, although evidence is available to prove that much money which has come to China and other countries via Moscow has been earmarked for this particular type of propaganda.

It would seem that anyone but the most superficial observers of world events would easily discern the identity of aim and purpose, notwithstanding slight differences in method or means used, in the great strike in Hong Kong, the student riots in Manila, the uprisings in India, the Labour troubles in Gastonia, and the "Red" demonstrations in New York, Chicago, and Berlin.

A CALL TO THE NATION

THE remarkable MANIFESTO on "THE PRESENT MENACE AND HOW TO MEET IT"—published in THE TIMES on May 15th last, and thereafter in THIRTY other journals, including each of the great London morning Dailies, and some papers in Provincial centres, also various weekly papers and magazines, and leading papers in Toronto, Bombay, Calcutta, etc.—created a profound impression on the minds of millions of readers, and called forth a chorus of approval, as shown by enormous correspondence from Five Continents.

The subjects introduced in the MANIFESTO will be further dealt with by the author—Dr. Pascoe Goard, F.R.G.S., F.R.E.S., Professor Edward Odlum, M.A., B.Sc., D. Davidson, Esq., M.C., Mr. John Leech, K.C., and other able and outstanding speakers of wide experience at the

of the British-Israel-World Federation Congress, to be held in the LARGE CENTRAL HALL, WESTMINSTER,

from OCTOBER 6th to 11th next inclusive, at 2.45 and 7.30, to which all are cordially invited. Do not miss these meetings. Some are coming thousands of miles to attend them.

THERE IS A PLOT to destroy the British Empire and Anglo-Saxon Civilization. There is

A PLOT TO DESTROY CHRISTIANITY

A world-crisis is nearing. All students of world affairs know this. Read of the state of Russia, India, China, Palestine, Egypt, etc. All is not well with Britain herself; look at the appalling unemployment figures; realize the industrial depression; yet see the mad rush for amusement. Think of the hundreds of almost empty churches. Look at the Sabbath desecration. Behold the moral and spiritual declension. Note the lowering of standards, and the attempts to discredit Holy Writ.

Chaos is here; our statesmen and our religious leaders are puzzled and at their wits' end. Is there a way out? Yes, there is, and one way only—A Great National Revival and Awakening;

THE NATION MUST COME BACK TO GOD AND THE BIBLE

We must seek to know the Divine Plan and come into line with it. The Pointers can be seen. Prophecy is being fulfilled before our eyes. Let us face the situation like Britons and stop frivolling, quibbling and quarrelling.

We must restore faith in God and establish the Law of God. We must put our armour on and fight the forces of evil. We must proclaim the Gospel of the Kingdom of God on earth, as did Our Lord Himself, and as He instructed His Apostles to do. We must help to set up the Kingdom here and now. Peace, order, prosperity and contentment can come in no other way.

WE ARE FORGETTING THE MISSION OF OUR RACE

We must realize it and rise to it. Great things are coming: they are now converging to a climax. Do not be pessimists: all can be optimists if all play their part.

The darkest hour is before the dawn, then help to hasten the dawn. Put away prejudice: it is a bar to knowledge and progress.

Remember—a wholly righteous Britain would produce a wonderful effect upon the entire world.

The points above indicated will be dealt with by the Congress Speakers.

We earnestly appeal to all people of good will to link up with us in a great

"Yes, the river crossing is a busy place, where we meet the friends of those who are called to pass; and He Who assures us, 'I will come again, and receive you unto Myself; that where I am, there ye may be also,' is also at the crossing.

"During our earth life the centre of the earth has been the centre of gravity for us, and we have been held firmly to the breast of mother earth. But the earth can hold only the body. It has no attractive power for the spirit. The spirit is therefore released as soon as the body is discarded, but it must not be left 'wandering through dry places seeking rest.' Therefore, there has been provided a new Centre of Gravity. This time it will be the Personality of our Lord Himself, 'That where I am, there ye may be also.'

"No matter how high we may soar into the clouds by aerial transport, yet the earth still holds us in her embrace. Should we fall, we should be pulled violently to her breast, perhaps to be dashed to pieces by her strong embrace, which men call gravitation; but we could not miss our return to her bosom.

"So does the Lord hold the spirit of those whom He has received as His own. As soon as the spirit is released from the body it must of necessity fly to the shelter of His breast and the embrace of His arms. His is an intelligent embrace, tender and sure; but never, never harmful even to the infant of days. His assurance is with us to cheer us as we go to the river. 'I will come again, and receive you unto Myself; that where I am, there ye may be also.'"

This book is a complete reply to the attacks on British-Israel Truth made by:

Rev. D. Lee Pitcairn,
Mr. George Goodman,
Mr. Avary H. Forbes, M.A.,
and others.

In his Foreword, Major James Knowles, O.B.E., President of the British-Israel-World Federation, states that "The author of this scholarly book gives a complete vindication of British-Israel teaching.

"He deals courteously but effectively with all the arguments of his opponents who have recently published pamphlets denouncing the British-Israel interpretation of the Holy Scriptures.

"From whatever standpoint British-Israel may be viewed, it is now generally admitted that it can no longer be disregarded by Christian people, and that it calls for, and is worthy of, serious and careful study.

"It is because Dr. Mountain is endeavouring to help earnest students to make an investigation, that I heartily welcome his valuable book, and venture to commend it to the dispassionate perusal of thoughtful people who desire to know the Truth on this subject."

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

OUR HERITAGE: THE BIBLE.

BY THE REV. DR. W. PASCOE GOARD, F.R.G.S.

LET us look at the Bible as we possess it to-day, and ask: Is this Book what we should have been led to expect it to be under all the circumstances, assuming it to be inspired of God; written by men so inspired?

We should expect it to be a handbook of life in all its phases. Purely human sciences study and seek to explain life in all its phases. The Bible must do no less.

It must deal with the body:—Anatomy, Physiology, Pathology and so on must have a place in its writings.

It must deal with the mind in all its phases. Psychology in all its phases must have a place in the weaving of its pages.

It must deal with the spirit of man. In his Godward aspirations man must find an instructor and guide; and in his relationship with his neighbour, in every department of sociology, the Bible must mark the way.

The Bible enters every such field, not only to explain and to teach, but to use every such department of activity for practical purposes. The message of the Bible shows an understanding of every detail of the human frame.

Such a revelation must deal with nature. It must deal with the earth and with its origin and destiny.

In the telling of the origin of the earth, the story must coincide with the record of the rocks as laid bare by geology. This test the Bible triumphantly sustains.

The Bible must be right in regard to astronomy. The earth must be part of the solar system. A severe test this, for who might suppose that primitive man, or the men of the days of the beginnings of the Bible, knew anything about the solar system? Yet the Bible tells of the place of the earth in the firmament of the solar system with unfaltering voice.

The Bible must be right in the realm of earthly life. Thus it tells the story of primordial vegetation, and of a period of animal life wherein "great whales" (monsters) existed on the planet earth.

Then the Bible proceeds to tell of the finer vegetable and the higher forms of animal life such as are found to-day.

The Bible gives to us an archaic creation including man. It then proceeds to give to us the history of the family of Adam and his seed. Thus in the realm of Botany, Zoology, Anthropology, the Bible stands the test.

The Bible must be true to history. From the formation of Adam and the birth of Seth (or appointed seed) down to the time of our Lord the Bible tells a continuous and connected historical story unparalleled elsewhere. Like the lines of communication of an advancing army, the whole line of Biblical history is open to attack from every quarter, scientific and historic. Yet at every point where science or history has been able to bring to bear actual knowledge upon the story of the Bible, the Bible has been found to be correct in the main statements of its wonderful story. In the twelfth chapter of the Bible we are introduced to a city the very memory of which had passed away millenniums ago, Ur of the Chaldees. It has been reserved for the men of the twentieth century, and the present decade, to unearth that ancient city and to verify this age-long item of Biblical history.

And there is being unveiled in the records of ancient Egypt actual knowledge from far beyond the Flood. Those records carry back a long way towards the very gates of the Garden eastward in Eden. They verify the story of the Bible at every point.

Digitized by Google

Open to attack, subject to testing from every quarter, the Bible stands the test. And the test simply dwarfs the scholarship of modern times.

But the Bible must be contained in small compass. Libraries of literature would be confusing and unusable. Think of the treasures of the Library of the British Museum and of the Bodleian Library; and then of all the other great libraries of the earth.

And yet who knows anything of these libraries? They are so unwieldy, so complex, that they must be housed each in a special building and only specially authorized readers may have access thereto.

Now the Bible covers the ground that all these libraries cover in one small compact volume which thousands carry around with them, and copies occupy a place on the various tables of the home.

Human ability has never succeeded in so condensing knowledge elsewhere than in the Bible. Why, if men have failed to so condense everywhere else, should men succeed in accomplishing the task to perfection in the Bible?

IF THESE MEN OF GOD WERE NOT INSPIRED THEN THEY SHOWED POWERS OF MIND AND A RANGE OF KNOWLEDGE INFINITELY SUPERIOR TO THE BEST SCHOLARSHIP OF TO-DAY.

Condensed, portable, usable; all these things we should expect of a Divine revelation. The Bible is all this, and to a degree which has never been approached by any other literature, nor by any school.

The Bible must be filled with the Personality of God, if it be indeed inspired of God.

From the first pregnant words, "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth," down to the last testimony, "Behold I come quickly," God is in the Word and the Word is replete with the living Personality of God.

Assuming the Bible to be the revelation of God, then we should expect results from the reading and study of the Word such as can be found in connection with the reading of no other literature.

And such is the case.

The Bible stands alone in its effect upon the personal experience of the reverent student; and upon the character of nations and races. If the Bible be in very deed the revelation of God, then we should expect the Bible to bring men into actual relationship with God. And again such is the case. For "As many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on His name, which were born, not of blood nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." "How then shall they believe in Him of whom they have not heard and how shall they hear without a preacher . . . " and we may add how shall they preach unless they have the written Word?

Therefore we join with the Apostle John in his exclamation, "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we should be called the sons of God."

The Bible fills all the requirements of what is expected of a Book given by Divine revelation.

ANCIENT VERSION AND MODERN PERVERSION.

"LOOK HERE!"

"Upon this Picture from "The Unity of the Pentateuch." Chap. vi. By the Rev. A. H. Finn, "A highly competent Hebrew Scholar."	And on This" from "A New Commentary," Pages 31 and 26. By the Rev. L. E. P. Erith, A Theological College Warden.
"If there is one narrative in the whole of the Old Testament which one would be inclined to single out as bearing the marks of literary unity, it would surely be the history of Joseph.	"The Joseph chapters of Genesis reveal contradictions and inconsistencies which are only explicable on the assumption that two separate narratives have been used by the compiler."
Yet the ingenuity of critics has been equal to the task of dissecting it into rival and inconsistent accounts."	"J and E are two distinct sources."
"There is no shred of independent evidence for the existence of any one of these various authors, documents or editors."	"J was written in the Southern Kingdom c. 850 B.C."
	"E of the Northern Kingdom may be dated c. 800-750 B.C."
	"This accounts for the differences."

The narrative which is now to follow shows that what Mr. Erith and other Bible dissectors declare to be "contradictions and inconsistencies," in regard to Joseph's life as recorded in Genesis, are really complementary and coherent in the light of the information now available to English readers, in, e.g., "The Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs," originally written in Hebrew, then in Greek, which the Armenian Church, it is said, regards as canonical, and which, as shown by Canon Charles of Westminster Abbey, must have been familiar to our Lord Himself; and also in the Hebrew "Book of Jasher," said to have been discovered in Jerusalem at its capture under Titus; and which, though it cannot be regarded as inspired, is yet a work of great antiquity and interest wherein the occurrences recorded in the Bible are amplified and detailed, and particularly the story of Joseph.

Mr. Finn examines the Modernist's list of "differences" in Joseph's story and plainly demonstrates that the validity of these "differences" really depends on the correctness of the critical guesses as to the original text.

"If the various clauses attributed to 'R' (the Redactor) are really interpolations; if two contradictory clauses have been confined in one verse; and if little bits of one account have been dovetailed into passages from the other, then it is possible to make out a case for there being a composite narrative and divergent accounts. Not otherwise."

How much more reverent is the time-honoured attitude towards the Bible, which, according to Article XX, is "God's Word written," being at unity in itself, having only one Author, viz., The Holy Spirit; the writers, compilers and selectors being the best "earthen vessels" to contain and convey the Divine "treasure" that He could find, adapt and use for His purpose at the time required. Like the wind He vivifies where He listeth, moving men's minds, tongues and pens as He and they will.

"The Word of God is quick" in the old sense of being alive; and so the dissectors of the "lively oracles," transmitted through Moses, are really vivisectors, hacking away at a Living Entity which the Divine and only known Author of the Epistle to the Christian Hebrews declares is the "Kritikos," which even out-criticizes the critics.

As we now possess only translations of translations of the originals, interpretation and application may here and there be difficult and uncertain; but the extreme Modernist policy of wholesale dissection is not merely unfair, it is, and may be hereafter, one is sorry to have to say—"UNPARDONABLE"!

Another thing to bear in mind is that the human producers of the Bible, under the "Inspiration of Selection," had to keep its contents within bounds as regards details and size, and though the lacunæ may at times be tantalizing to the expositor, yet "God is His own interpreter" and, in answer to prayer and devout study, doth frequently "make it plain."

THE STORY OF JOSEPH RECONSTRUCTED.

The story of Joseph takes us right away into the heart of Palestine, "the land of the Hebrews" as he termed it, where his brothers roamed their flocks over a large area as spacious as an English county. One eventful day Joseph was sent by his doting father to find them; and as he was approaching Dothan some of the brethren, seeing him coming, and being envious of him, conspired together to kill him, and thus to belie the two dreams he had recently told them. Simeon, it seems, was the ringleader of the conspiracy, and roughly seized, stripped and bound Joseph; but Reuben successfully prevented bloodshed by suggesting the lowering of him into a pit instead. This counsel being generally acceptable, Reuben found a suitable one, happily waterless for the time being, and the helplessly-bound Joseph was apparently left to die of starvation therein. Naturally the youth of seventeen years, deep down among the serpents and scorpions, cried out for mercy and help, but the brethren, callously unheeding, left him to his fate, Simeon going to Shechem for ointment for the flocks, and the tender-hearted Reuben to the neighbouring town of Dothan where the stores were kept. Others went off to tend their flocks, and some of them settled themselves down for a meal. Among the latter was Judah, the ancestor of the Judeans or Jews, whose besetting sin was covetousness and who, seeing on the distant horizon a caravan of Ishmaelites, characteristically conceived the idea of making money out of his brother. But these descendants of Ishmael were a long way off, and meanwhile, unknown to any of the brethren, Joseph had been rescued by "seven trading men of Media" who, having gone to the pit hoping to find water there, probably heard and also providentially found Joseph instead.

Ere long, on their resumed journey, these seven Midianites, and Joseph whom they were stealing away, came across Judah, and later, some other brethren, among whom Judah was the salesman; and after a great deal of parleying the Midianites handed over to Judah twenty pieces of silver that they might, in peace, bear away the comely youth "they desired in their hearts." Presently as they were proceeding on their journey "fear of the consequences" seized them, for they couldn't help thinking that such a good-looking and well-favoured youth must have been stolen, and that a powerful search party would pursue them and show them no mercy. Then, happily for their peace of mind, they met in due course the company of Ishmaelites which the sons of Jacob had seen far away on the horizon, and they agreed to offer Joseph to them for the same money they had paid to Judah. Whereupon the Midianites went on their way to Gilead, and the Ishmaelites, coming from Gilead, took Joseph to Egypt.

Now, Reuben knew nothing of this, and so when he returned from the stores with the good intention of succouring and rescuing Joseph, and found him not, he was inconsolable until he subsequently learnt what had taken place from his brethren who, forthwith, compelled him to enter into a solemn family compact, on penalty of death, to keep the secret of Joseph's treatment entirely to themselves. Later records tell that on the advice of Issachar they steeped Joseph's coat in blood, and trampled it in the dust, so that Naphtali, their spokesman, might deceive his father therewith.

The shock to the old Patriarch when he saw it was so great and prolonged that his sons repented of what they had done and wept bitterly. Issachar, in particular, was so overcome that he burned in his heart to tell the truth to his father but, as he is said to have declared in his last "Testament," "I feared my brethren."

JOSEPH IN EGYPT.

As for Joseph, the last verse of Gen. xxxvii tells us that "Medanites" (R.V. margin) sold him into Egypt unto Potiphar. In the Book of Jasher, ch. xliv, they are called "Medanites," and it appears that there were four of these descendants of Medan, the son of Abraham. As they were journeying away from Egypt they met the Ishmaelites who, being anxious to get rid of Joseph (for mysterious experiences had been theirs since he had come into their possession), gladly parted with him for twenty shekels. Now, these four merchantmen happened to know that Potiphar, the King's official, was seeking a good servant; and so, retracing their steps, they took Joseph with them, with the result that Potiphar, at the prompting of his wife, seeing the youth with beautiful eyes and of a comely appearance, was glad to pay the somewhat extortionate price demanded, but not until the Medanites and the Ishmaelites together had been legally examined by the "Captain of the Guard" was the transaction completed.

His servitude under Potiphar, who afterward is called "Joseph's Master," might have been uneventful had it not been for the infatuation of his wife.

When about to die, Joseph, in his "Testament" makes mention of his "struggles against a shameless woman," and tells how the God of Israel, his father, delivered him in his ten temptations "from the burning flame" during his servitude in Potiphar's household, and how that he prayed unto the Lord and "wept for the Egyptian woman of Memphis." The Book of Jasher gives interesting details of the culminating scene with her. Falsely accused, he was punished with severe stripes but later, when the priest-judges had seen for themselves that Joseph's garment was torn in front and therefore that his face must have been opposite to Potiphera's in the struggle, they decreed that she must have had hold of the garment when Joseph wrested himself away and fled. Thus he was in part vindicated; but on account of the report which through him had gone forth against her, he had to endure the prison-house instead of the judgment of death.

This prison was a special one for the King's prisoners, apparently attached to the quarters of Joseph's Master, the Captain of the Royal Guard; hence we read that Potiphera even persecuted him there. Later, however, having gained the favour of the keeper of the prison, he was made some kind of assistant warder and implicitly trusted until, in a wonderful providence, he was raised to become the saviour of Egypt and his family. Being Divinely led, he stored the surplus corn during the seven years of plenty that there might be enough and to spare during the ensuing years of dearth.

JOSEPH'S BRETHREN IN EGYPT.

It was during the latter period that the brothers of Joseph, not knowing that he was very much alive, came to Egypt to buy corn, and Joseph recognized them but they didn't recognise him. Taking advantage of their position he wormed out, by rough questioning, their family history, telling them he would keep one of them bound while they went back to fetch Benjamin their youngest brother. Naturally, Simeon was the "spy" chosen by Joseph who gave him and all of them an object lesson they would never forget, as he stripped him, all but a loin cloth, binding tightly his arms and legs just as Simeon had served him some teens of years before. Meanwhile Simeon's conscience told him he was getting measure for measure but his eyes didn't tell him that it was Joseph who was giving it. Well, we now know from ancient literature (though it is not explained in the Bible) why Joseph so dealt with Simeon. But what was the reason why Simeon so dealt with Joseph? We know that too.

In his "Confession of Repentance" Simeon informs us that it was through jealousy and envy that he "devised an evil thing," probably the suggestion to his brethren that he should be summarily killed, a fate which Reuben, his tender-hearted eldest brother happily had prevented.

Is it any wonder that immediately on the return, without Simeon, from Egypt, he, the same eldest brother, was willing to make himself and his heirs sureties for the safe return of the youngest, if only the father would part with him on their next visit to Egypt? But Jacob was adamant until starvation subsequently stared him in the face, and the eloquent pleading and vicarious offer of Judah, as he took on the attitude and even speech of Reuben, touched the old Patriarch's heart.

How much more natural is this explanation than the "duplicate narrative" hypothesis that "E" substituted "Reuben" instead of "Judah" as originally given by "J." And the same claim may be made against the quibblings over other parts of the Bible story of Joseph where for the sake of vividness the narrative has been much condensed.

That the use of such a word is justifiable the following instances saliently show. We read in Gen. xlii that when the brethren had returned from their first visit to Egypt, the Patriarch reproached them for having mentioned their youngest brother left at home; but because it is not recorded that they, there and then, pleaded in self-defence the questioning of Joseph which brought it out, as appears in chap. xliii, the accounts are deemed by the critics to be "divergent"; and yet how true to human nature was the fuller answer wrung out of Judah, their spokesman, by a more biting reproach, many months later, when the Egyptian corn had all been consumed.

Quite naturally too can, what is considered a discrepancy in the same chapters, be given a reasonable explanation; for when the nine brethren had returned to Egypt, taking Benjamin with them, and had been right royally treated, and the purchase money, which had been put into their sacks, had been found, at least by one of them, in the lodging place by the way but by the others only when they got home, they didn't consider it necessary to be meticulously exact to Joseph's steward, but said, generally, that the sacks were opened at the lodging place, as if the whole discovery of the money had been made at the same time.

"Is there anything unreasonable or untrue to nature in that?" asks Mr. Finn, and "would it be thought worth noticing in an ordinary narrative?" But to proceed. When Joseph, in a pathetic scene, had disclosed his identity, he sent a promise to his father that he would find him a home in Goshen (Gen. xlv, 10), and the promise is presupposed in Gen. xlvi, 28.

To the ordinary reader there is consistency. But as the critics arbitrarily ascribe all mention of Goshen to the imaginary "J," and as the promise of a Goshen home in Gen. xlv, 10, actually occurs in an imaginary "E" passage, THEREFORE the promise "Thou shalt dwell in the land of Goshen" must be cut out, they say; and "E" is thus made to suggest by his silence that Jacob dwells with Joseph elsewhere, whereas "J" declares that place to be Goshen. Bible dissectors then triumphantly claim that "E" and "J" are thus divergent!

Surely "the method which creates discrepancies otherwise non-existent is very likely to be a mistaken method."

CONCLUDING OBSERVATION.

In conclusion, the reader is referred to chap. vi of "The Unity of the Pentateuch" for a more detailed rejoinder to Dr. Driver's list of supposed discrepancies between "J" and "E" in the story of Joseph and his brethren, though they have all been casually referred to and even resolved in the composition before us, which, dealing as it does with about a quarter of the Book of Genesis, shows that its much-traduced Redactor has transmitted the inspired, Mosaic intelligence in an intelligent way, and that the Story of Joseph can reasonably be amplified and understood without the drastic and dastardly expedient of maltreating it as if it were nothing more than "cooked" mincemeat unfit for human consumption until the hypercritical chefs have scrutinized, dissected and sterilized it.

SOME OPINIONS ABOUT THE BIBLE.

The Bible is a record of the best experiences of the best men that ever lived through five thousand years. It is encyclopædical. It is an account of that which took place in the lives of men from the beginning of the world down. It is the product of family life and commonwealth life among the Hebrews. It is the history of the life of nations. It is a narrative of the results of the discipline of men in a thousand ways. It was inspired, not in a moment of frenzy, but during a period that ran through the whole course of the lives of men who reaped the richest fruits that belonged to their age, and made a record of them. The Bible is a Book that contains not merely that which was inspired in the holy fury of an hour or a day, but the history of the inspiration of the human race, and of the development of the highest thoughts, the noblest morals, and the purest religion. These things have been recorded for the use of generations and for our use.

Its very genius is to teach that which shall take hold upon the heart of man, diffuse among men the best instruction, and best knowledge, the best wisdom, and incite men to seek higher and better things in their lower relations, in their intermediate conditions, and in their whole destiny.

Dr. A. McCaig says :—

The theory that attributes inspiration to the spiritual teaching alone, but denies it to the historical, must fail to satisfy anyone who has any adequate conception of the immense importance of the historical element in the Word of God.

Talleyrand said :—

The Bible is not, as many suppose, a single book. It is a collection, rather, of sacred literature—books produced at different periods, written for different peoples, and with varying purposes. A better name for it would be the Divine Library. The literature of England, from Chaucer to Tennyson, covers five or six centuries. The literature we call the Bible stretches over a period of at least twelve hundred years, reckoning, that is, from Moses to St. John. Hence it is like a vast cathedral, not a something run up offhand and at once, but the growth of centuries. The successive buildings is shown by the change of architectural style. The parts, one and all, are nevertheless so knit together as to form one holy temple of God.

Grimke :—

The Bible is the only Book which God has ever sent into this world. All other books are frail and transient as time, since they are only the registers of time ; but the Bible is durable as eternity, for its pages contain the records of eternity. All other books are weak and imperfect, like their authors—men ; but the Bible is a transcript of infinite power and perfection. Every other volume is limited in its usefulness and influence, but the Bible came forth conquering and to conquer. The Bible only, of all the myriads of books the world has seen, is equally important and interesting to mankind. Its tidings, whether of peace or war, are the same to the poor, the ignorant and the weak, as to the rich, the wise and the powerful. The Bible, indeed, is the only universal classic of all mankind, of every age and country, of time and eternity.

CONCERNING THE OLD TESTAMENT.

The Rev. Canon Ottley says :—

The Old Testament is . . . a continuous historical movement of which the originating cause was the grace of God, and the aim the salvation of the human race . . . . The two prominent ideas are redemption and revelation.

* * *

Andrew Lang declares :—

Behind it all is the mystery of race and selection. It is an eminent fact in the history and government of the world . . . . that Israel is " the chosen people."

The Rev. G. Gilfillan says :—

This Book is the mirror of the Divinity, the rightful Regent of the world. Other books are planets shining with reflected lustre ; this Book, like the sun, shines with ancient and unborrowed ray. Other books have, to their loftiest altitude, sprung from earth ; this Book looks down from Heaven high. Other books appeal to understanding or fancy ; this Book to conscience and faith. Other books solicit our attention ; this demands it—it speaks with authority, and not as the scribes. Other books guide gracefully along the earth, or onward to the mountain summits of the ideal ; this, and this alone, conducts up the heights which lead to Heaven. Other books, after shining their season, may perish in flames fiercer than those which consumed the Alexandrian library ; this, in essence, must remain pure as gold, and unconsumable as asbestos, amidst the flames of general conflagration. Other books may be forgotten in the universe where suns go down and disappear like bubbles in the stream ; this Book, transferred to a higher clime, shall shine as the brightness of that eternal firmament, and as those higher stars, which are for ever and ever.

THE QUALITY OF THE BIBLE.

A. M. Fairbairn, D.D., writes :—

If you want to prove the truth, the wisdom, the sober and honest history of the Bible, and the purity of its religion, place it among the sacred books of the East. " In these books there are many grains of gold, but they are hid in mountains of the most extraordinary rubbish ; and the extraordinary thing is that it is the rubbish that calls forth the enthusiasm and admiration of the peoples that own them. The sobriety of the Bible, the purity of its spirit, and elevation and devotion of its tone, make it occupy an entirely unique place. Placed among the Sacred Books of the East, the contrast would make its truth only the more stand out." While, however, it is here impossible to follow the comparative method, yet let me ask for the Book itself your earnest, impartial, careful consideration. To that, indeed, it has an indefeasible right. Simply as a piece of literature it is the most marvellous thing in the world.

Digitized by Google

You call it a Book, but it stands there a literature, the creation of from twelve to fifteen hundred years, in fragments, some small, others larger, each fragment reflecting its own age, the earliest being most dissimilar and strange to the latest; yet with all its distance, and all its variety, this Book stands so near to us that it is to our spirits of all books the dearest in the world. It contains, from the literary point of view, the most remarkable code of ancient times. It contains the supreme devotional literature of the world—the literature that men in their highest moments of religious transport or of pious meditation have used to express thoughts too deep for tears. It contains poetry that, simply as poetry, stands foremost in its own order, full of a great sense of mystery, full of an awful sense of suffering, pierced and transformed by a glorious sense of God. It possesses, more than all, a conception of God, and an idea of man, without a parallel in the literature and religions of the ancient world. That Book is the noblest heirloom of humanity. To every man it belongs as an inalienable birthright. To its best truths, to its inmost heart, to its meaning, for this and all times, you have all an indefeasible right. The worst of frauds were the acts of the man who would cheat you out of it. The man who can use it only as the bone of a father wherewith to smite a son but shows himself of the order of men who rush in where angels fear to tread.

Scott says:—

The most learned, acute, and diligent student cannot, in the longest life, obtain an entire knowledge of this one volume. The more deeply he works the mine, the richer and more abundant he finds the ore; new light continually beams from this source of heavenly knowledge, to direct the conduct, and illustrate the work of God, and the ways of men; and he will at last leave the world confessing that the more he studied the Scriptures, the fuller conviction he had of his own ignorance and of their inestimable value.

Sir A. Quiller-Couch ("Q."):—

The Bible is the most majestic book in our literature, and the most spiritually-living thing we inherit.

* * *

Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin:—

It is not mere "literature," whatever that phrase may mean: it is not only the greatest literature in the world, but above and beyond all that, it has always been, and is, in the nature of a high explosive in the world.

Lord Macaulay:—

That stupendous work, the English Bible, a Book which, if everything else in our language should perish, would alone suffice to show the whole extent of its beauty and power.

Lord Bacon:—

Thy creatures have been my works, but Thy Scriptures much more: I have sought Thee in the courts, fields, and groves, but I have found Thee in Thy temples.

WONDERS OF THE BIBLE.

If you ever tried it, you must have been struck with the few solid thoughts, the few suggestive ideas which survive the perusal of the most brilliant of human books. Few of them can stand three readings; and of the memorabilia which you have marked in your first reading, on reverting to them, you find many of those were not so striking, or weighty or original as you thought. But the Word of God is solid: it will stand a thousand readings; and the man who has gone over it the most frequently and carefully is the surest of finding new wonders there.

Henry Ward Beecher says:—

It is a living book, shedding out rays of light and heat in all the world. It is clothed to this hour with the associations of myriads of hearts who discover in it the secret of their own lives. It is the seed bed of all that is fine, all that is sweet, all that is strong, all that is aspiring and ennobling in the highest human character and conduct. Every morning the sun rolls over fields, forests, flowers and fruits, which itself has created. The Bible moves among men, netted all over with the sweetest and tenderest emotions of the human soul, which itself has created as the revelation and the voice of God. He who knows only the type and the print of the books knows only a painted sun. What the Bible is can be remotely appreciated only by those who can perceive what are its fruits. Like a cloud in summer, every drop brings forth a flower. It is the only book that develops God in human conditions; that cheers the end of life, opening the doors of immortality; the only book that from beginning to end is in sympathy with the poor, the weak, the struggling, the sorrowful, the sinful. This is the flaming book which men fear will be destroyed; but sooner will you pluck the stars out of Heaven than one star out of this Divine book. All theories of the nature of the sun may be assailed, but the sun shines on and does not care for them. All theories respecting the history and the structure of the Bible may be mooted and disputed, but there it is, a book whose fruits rise higher, smell sweeter, taste more flavoursome, inspire more hearts than any or all others that have ever been produced upon the plane of human life.

Professor Huxley wrote:—

I have been seriously perplexed to know how the religious feeling which is the essential base of conduct can be kept up without the use of the Bible. The Pagan moralists lack life and colour, and even the noble stoic, Marcus Aurelius, is too high and refined for an ordinary child. For three centuries this book has been woven into the life of all that is best and noblest in English history. It forbids the veriest hind who never left his village to be ignorant of the existence of other countries and other civilizations, and of a great past stretching back to the farthest limits of the oldest nations in the world.

By the study of what other book could children be so much humanized, and made to feel that each figure in that vast historical procession fills, like themselves, but a momentary inter-space in the interval between two eternities, and earns the blessing or the curse of all time according to its efforts to do good and hate evil, even as they also are earning the payment for their work?

PRINCIPAL CANDLISH says :—

I put it as a problem—which only the Omniscient can solve—how a revelation which is to range over centuries of comparative ignorance on matters of secular and mundane science—and is necessarily, according to its plan, to mix up these matters with its higher themes—is to be so constructed and so recorded that it shall not anticipate human discoveries, and yet shall be in entire harmony with them as in course of time they emerge. I maintain that this problem is found actually solved, in point of fact, in the Bible.

FENELON had this estimate of the Bible's value :—

The Scriptures, for naïveté, wealth of expression and grandeur, excel the writings of the Romans and Greeks. Homer never attained the perfect phraseology of the Songs of Moses, particularly the last one, which the children of Israel must have learned by heart. The odes in Greek and Latin cannot find a place beside the beauty of the Psalms, for example the one commencing thus : "The God of gods, the Lord has spoken, and He has named the Earth" surpasses all human imagination. Neither Homer nor any other poet has ever equalled Isaiah as he paints the majesty of God, to whose eyes "The kingdoms are as a grain of sand, the world only a tent where one dresses to-day and is carried off to-morrow." At times the prophet possesses all the sweetness and tenderness of an eclogue in the pleasing pictures he draws of Peace, at others he exalts himself till everything is beneath him. What is there in mundane antiquity to compare with the tender compassion of Jeremiah weeping over the sins of his people ; or to Nahum who, in the distance, beholds, in spirit, the fall of beautiful Nineveh under the power of an overwhelming army? One can almost see this army, can almost hear the noises of the weapons and chariots ; all is depicted in a lively manner which at once pleases the imagination. He leaves Homer far behind him. Further, read of Daniel revealing to Belshazzar the vengeance of God which is ready to be hurled at him, and search the rare originals of antiquity for something to which all these can be compared. Finally, everything in the Scriptures is compact, everything retains the character it ought to have, the narratives, the codes of laws, the descriptions, the important passages, the mysteries, and the moral laws. In fine, there is as much difference between the impious poet and the prophet as there is between warm enthusiasm and its counterfeit. The prophet really inspired lucidly expresses some Divine truth ; the poets attempting to raise themselves higher than they are only disclose their poor human frailty.

T. WATSON :—

The Bible is a rock of diamonds, a chain of pearls, the sword of the Spirit ; a chart by which the Christian sails to eternity ; the map by which he daily walks ; the sundial by which he sets his life ; the balance in which he weighs his actions.

W. J. FOX :—

The moral pictures of the Scriptures are everlasting, be they historical truth or be they fancy work ; let them be the narratives of the literal chronicler, or let them be parables, still there they are, and such characters as those of Joseph, of Moses, of Caleb, of Ruth, of the Good Samaritan, of the zealous and energetic Apostle Paul, will remain through all time, unchanging in their worth and in their power as moral influences. They are paintings whose colour no time can obliterate, no accident impair. These, and together with these, the maxims and precepts founded on a deep observance of the heart of man—the readings, clear and distinct, of that law which was written, not upon tables of stone, but on the fleshly tables of the heart—dictates of truth, and thoughts which cannot pass away. And pre-eminent above them all, the character of Him, the Son of God, the crucified One for man's salvation, so full of gentleness and tenderness, so rich in compassion, so prompt to forgiveness, and so submissive in agony ; so confiding in God, in humanity, and in futurity—that remains, the soul of all, Christianity incarnate, unchanging.

THE VALUE OF THE BIBLE.

THE REV. S. BROOKE writes :—

The essential value of the Bible, as the Book of books, is its union of the universal and the particular. Its grand subjects are—the history of God's education of the race of man, and the history of the heart of man in its relations to God. As such it speaks of feelings common to all men, and of principles which are true for all men. This is its universal interest. But it has also a particular interest. It was written by men, but these men were Hebrews. The mode, then, in which these universal truths were given was Hebrew ; they were clothed with images taken from Hebrew scenery and Hebrew life, they were connected with Hebrew history, they were interwoven with lives of particular Hebrew men. The Bible, then, is not only Divine, but human, and not only human and Divine, but Hebrew.

DR. R. W. HAMILTON says :—

The Bible confers self-respect on man. He is in constant communication with the truth of God. Nothing stands between him and it. His mind is filled with its noble images, its mighty conceptions, its triumphant hymns, its tender strains. He catches its inspiration. He imbibes its largeness. It is the Book which makes the man brave and free. The inlaying and infusion of it in his soul turn him to another man. Its saving blessings apart from its general power are mighty. It reflects itself in the noblest efforts of human genius. Poetry, eloquence, music, literature, art, borrow unconsciously, if not directly, from its wealth. The Bible is the nation's sun, reflected when not seen. It is the same to the individual. He sits at the feet of no priest. He stipulates not for pardon with his fellow-worm. His soul, bowed before the Deity, is seen in the attitude of seraphs ; but it does not stoop to man. It is erect in its own rights and prerogatives. What would our national character be were the Bible taken from us, were it a sealed book, could we only peruse it at the will of a confessor? How changed would be our manners and our feelings! The interdict would paralyse all that is noble and erect!

SOME OUTSTANDING THOUGHTS OF THE BIBLE.

COLERIDGE:—

Our version of the Bible is to be loved and prized for this, as for a thousand other things, that it has preserved a purity of meaning to many terms of natural objects. Without this holdfast, our vitiated imaginations would refine away language to mere abstractions.

DR. ROBERTSON SMITH:—

We have no need to go outside of the Bible to know anything of God and His saving will towards us. The whole growth of the true religion, up to its perfect fullness, is set before us in the record of God's dealings with Israel, culminating in the manifestation of Jesus Christ.

CARLYLE:— * * *

In the poorest cottage is one Book wherein for several thousands of years the spirit of man has found light and nourishment, and an interpreting response to whatever is deepest in him, wherein still to this day, for the eye that will look well, the mystery of existence reflects itself, if not resolved, yet revealed and prophetically emblemed, if not to the satisfying of the outward sense, yet to the opening of the inward sense, which is the far grander result.

ADDISON:— * * *

What can be nobler than the idea it gives us of the Supreme Being?

* * *

SPURGEON:—

Nobody ever outgrows Scripture; the Book widens and deepens with our years.

HERVEY:— * * *

Every leaf is a spacious plain; every line a flowing brook; every period a lofty mountain.

ROBERT MCCHEYNE:—

One gem from that ocean is worth all the pebbles from earthly streams.

JAMES D. DANA:—

The grand old Book of God still stands; and this old earth, the more its leaves are turned over and pondered, the more it will sustain and illustrate the Sacred Word.

RICHARD CECIL:—

The Old and the New Testaments contain but one scheme of religion. Neither part of this scheme can be understood without the other.

THE REV. HUGH STOWELL:—

Here there is milk for babes, whilst there is manna for Angels; truth level with the mind of a peasant, truth soaring beyond the reach of a Seraph.

SIR WALTER SCOTT:—

The most learned, acute and diligent student cannot, in the longest life, obtain an entire knowledge of this one Volume. * * *

LOCKE:—

It has God for its author, salvation for its end, and truth, without any mixture of error, for its matter: it is all pure, all sincere, nothing too much, nothing wanting.

MILTON:— * * *

There are no songs comparable to the songs of Zion, no orations equal to those of the prophets, and no politics like those which the Scriptures teach.

JOSEPH COOK:—

Do you know a Book that you are willing to put under your head for a pillow when you lie dying? Very well: that is the Book you want to study while you are living. There is but one such Book in the world.

JAMES HAMILTON:—

The Word of God is solid; it will stand a thousand readings; and the man who has gone over it the most frequently and the most carefully is the surest of finding new wonders there.

HERSCHEL:—

All human discoveries seem to be made only for the purpose of confirming more strongly the truths come from on high, and contained in the sacred writings.

DR. WATTS:— * * *

In Job and the Psalms we shall find more sublime ideas, more elevated language, than in any of the heathen versifiers of Greece or Rome.

DEAN STANLEY:—

High above all earthly lower happiness the blessedness of the eight Beatitudes towers into the heaven itself. They are white with the snows of eternity; they give a space, a meaning, a dignity to all the rest of the earth over which they brood.

BISHOP THOMSON:—

As the profoundest philosophy of ancient Greece and Rome lighted her taper at Israel's altar, so the sweetest strains of the pagan muse were swept from harps attuned on Zion's hill.

* * *

A. E. KITTREDGE:—

Christianity claims that the supernatural is as reasonable as the natural, that man himself is supernatural as truly as he is natural, and that the Bible is so clearly the Word of God by proofs that are unanswerable, that it is unreasonable to disbelieve its Divine truths.

Daniel Webster :—

The Bible is a Book of faith, and a Book of doctrine, and a Book of morals, and a Book of religion, of special revelation from God ; but it is also a Book which teaches man his own individual responsibility, his own dignity, and his equality with his fellow man.

* * *

Scott :—

Within that awful Volume lies
The mystery of mysteries !
Happiest they of human race,
To whom God has granted grace
To read, to fear, to hope, to pray,
To lift the latch and force the way ;
And better had they ne'er been born,
Who read to doubt, or read to scorn.

The Rev. W. Boyd Carpenter, D.D., Bishop of Ripon :—

The teachings of the Bible have entered into the warp and woof of the national life of the greatest of peoples. Men and women on both sides of the Atlantic are unconsciously under the influence of its moral and spiritual suggestions. Portions of it have a charm of inexpressible influence, which sways the art as well as the morals of human life. Its words have been hid in the best hearts of humanity, and have moulded the noblest examples of life and the highest types of human character. * * *

SOME PERSONAL TESTIMONIES TO THE BIBLE.

Sir William Jones :—

I am of opinion that the Bible contains more true sensibility, more exquisite beauty, more pure morality, more important history, and finer strains of poetry and eloquence, than can be collected from all other books, in whatever age or language they may be written.

Rousseau :—

I must confess to you that the majesty of the Scriptures astonishes me ; the holiness of the Evangelist speaks to my heart, and has such strong and striking characters of truth, and is, moreover, so perfectly inimitable, that, if it had been the invention of men, the inventions would be greater than the greatest heroes.

* * *

THE REAL INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE.

Henry Ward Beecher says :—

There never was, and I suppose there never will be, a Book so directly inspired of God from beginning to end. There is no single precept in it that is wrong. Everywhere it is against animalism ; everywhere it is against vengeance, against cruelty, against selfishness, against using your powers of intelligence to oppress the weak and ignorant ; everywhere for righteousness, righteousness the largest and the noblest. What care I whether Moses wrote Genesis or not ! What do I care whether the history of the old books in the Testament were thus and so ! I live in the atmosphere of the Bible—and see what it is to human nature, what its conception of manhood is, what the ideal man is in the Bible, and how it is a voice coming down, bearing witness for thousands of years all in one way, all attuned to that Divine current of love, all that it teaches of God. It is the poor man's Book, it is the sorrowful man's Book, it is the Book of the man that is weak, a Book for the man that is ignorant, and it has in it everywhere the sign and testimony of the God that inspired it ; as to the kind of way in which He inspired it, I don't care a pin. When I smell a rose I am not anxious to have a chemist by me to tell me exactly what it is that makes it smell like a rose ; it would be superfluous, for the rose is good enough in itself ; I smell it and I love it. Yet there are men who make the strength of the Bible to lie in its outside, in its arithmetic, in its dates, in its various statements on behalf of particular men in particular ages which modern philosophy or science confutes, forgetting all the while the grandeur of the interior, the whole force and power of the Book as a medicine for the wants of man, as a guide to men, thoroughly furnishing the man of God to every good word and work.

Andrew Jackson (President, U.S.) declared :—

That Book, sir, is the rock on which our Republic rests.

Ewald :— * * *

In this Book is all the wisdom of the world.

Matthew Arnold :—

God was to Israel neither an assumption nor a metaphysical idea. He was the power not ourselves that makes for righteousness. Why should we study the Bible ? Why will not other books do as well ? Why ? Because this power is revealed in Israel and the Bible, and not by other teachers and books ! That is, there is infinitely more of this there. He is plainer and easier to come at, and incomparably more impressive. * * *

EXPERIMENTAL EVIDENCE TO THE BIBLE.

Dr. J. Cumming says :—

My next proof consists of experimental evidence. In order to appreciate it, I would bid the objector come with me to some sequestered glen amid the hills and valleys of Scotland. I will take him to the patriarchal occupant of a lonely cabin, where you may behold the grey-headed man, amid intermingling smiles and tears, bending morning, noon and night, over one Book—" the big ha' Bible." Let us ask him, " How do you know that that Book called the Bible is the Book of God ? You never read the writings of a Paley, the analogy of a Butler ; you never studied the credibility of Lardner, nor the eloquent demonstrations of a Chalmers : How came you to believe it ? " " Come to believe it ? " would the peasant say : " I have felt it in my heart and conscience to be the Book of God ! It has taught me the truths I never knew before ; it has given me a peace the world could never give ; it has calmed my beating heart ; it has staunched my bleeding wounds ; it has kindled within me the love of God and hopes of glory. Not the Book of God ! I am convinced of it as that I am here a living, breathing man."

Digitized by Google

HEINE :— * * *

What a Book ! Vast and wide as the world, rocked in the abysses of creation, and towering up beyond the blue secrets of heaven ; sunrise and sunset, promise and fulfilment, birth and death, the whole drama of humanity all are in this Book.

* * *

THE GRANDEST OF BOOKS.

F. W. ROBERTSON says :—

States have been founded on its principles. Kings rule by a compact based on it. Men hold the Bible in their hands when they prepare to give solemn evidence affecting life, death or property ; the sick man is almost afraid to die unless the Book be within reach of his hands ; the battleship goes into action with one on board whose office it is to expound it ; its prayers, its psalms, are the language which we use when we speak to God ; eighteen centuries have found no holier, no diviner language. If ever there has been a prayer or a hymn enshrined in the heart of a nation, you are sure to find its basis in the Bible. There is no new religious idea given to the world, but it is merely the development of something given in the Bible. The very translation of it has fixed language and settled the idioms of speech. It has made the most illiterate peasant more familiar with the history, customs and geography of ancient Palestine than with the localities of his own country. Men who know nothing of the Grampians, of Snowdon, or of Skiddaw, are at home in Zion, the lake of Gennesareth, or among the hills of Carmel. People who know little about London know by heart the places in Jerusalem where those blessed feet trod which were nailed to the Cross. Men who know nothing of the architecture of a Christian cathedral can tell you all about the pattern of the Holy Temple. Even this shows us the influence of the Bible. The orator holds a thousand men for half-an-hour breathless —a thousand men as one, listening to his single word. But this Word of God has held a thousand nations for thrice a thousand years spellbound ; held them by an abiding power, even the universality of its truth ; and we feel it to be no more a collection of books, but the Book.

BISHOP PEARSON :—

It was God Who spake by the mouth of His holy prophets. The mouth, the instrument, the articulation was theirs, but the words were God's.

* * *

PRE-EMINENCE OF THE BIBLE.

DR. BEARD :—

You find the Bible the patriot's charter-book, the child's delight, the old man's comfort, and the young man's guide. In its pages the sick and weary find the solace which they need, and the tempted meet with timely succour. Its words whisper hope and peace to the dying, and minister daily food to the healthy and vigorous household. With the pious music of its sublime or plaintive songs, echo to the roofs of ten thousand times ten thousand Christian temples ; and the child's prayer, night and morn, is lisped forth in the simple and comprehensive words which were dictated by Him Who is its central light.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT declares :—

Almost every man who has by his life work added to the sum of human achievement of which the race is proud, has based that lifework largely upon the teachings of the Bible. You may look through the Bible, from cover to cover, and nowhere will you find a line that can be construed into an apology for the man of brains who sins against the light. We plead for a closer, and wider, and deeper study of the Bible, so that our people may be in fact as well as theory, " doers of the Word, and not hearers only."

READING THE BIBLE.

THE BIBLE SOCIETY RECORD tells us that :—

M. de Renty, a French nobleman, used to read daily three chapters of the Bible, with his head uncovered and on his bended knees. Lady Frances Hobart read the Psalms over twelve times a year, the New Testament thrice, and the other parts of the Old Testament once. Susannah, Countess of Suffolk, for the last seven years of her life, read the whole Bible over twice annually. Dr. Gouge used to read fifteen chapters every day—five in the morning, five after dinner, and five before going to bed. Mr. Jeremiah Whittaker usually read all the Epistles in the Greek Testament twice every fortnight. Joshua Barnes is said to have read a small pocket Bible, which he usually carried about him, a hundred and twenty times over. Mr. Robert Cotton read the whole Bible through twelve times a year. The Rev. Mr. Romaine studied nothing but the Bible for the last thirty or forty years of his life. A poor prisoner, being confined in a dark dungeon, had no light, except for a few moments when his food was brought to him. He used to take his Bible and read a chapter, saying he could find his mouth in the dark when he could not read. Henry Willis, farmer, aged eighty-one, devoted every hour that could be spared from his labour during the course of so long a life to the devout and serious perusal of the Holy Scriptures. He had read with the most minute attention all the books of the Old and New Testament eight times over, and had proceeded as far as the Book of Job in his ninth reading when his meditations were terminated by death.

AN INDIAN PROFESSOR, SADHU SUNDAR SINGH, bears testimony :

The Bible is the Book of books, because it is the Book of God. It is my Guide and Light, and food for my soul. Experience has shown and proved the fact that there is no other book in the world beside this which can meet the spiritual needs of men. In reading it, I have found untold and eternal wealth of riches, of which I never thought nor dreamt before ; and now in passing on its message to others and sharing it with them, its blessing to me and to them continually increases.

JOHN QUINEY ADAMS :—

I have for many years made it a practice to read through the Bible once a year. My custom is to read four or five chapters every morning immediately after rising from my bed. It employs about an hour of my time, and seems to me the most suitable manner of beginning the day. In what light soever we regard the Bible, whether with reference to revelation, to history, or to morality, it is an invaluable and inexhaustible mine of knowledge and virtue.

DANIEL WEBSTER :—

From the time that, at my mother's feet, or on my father's knee, I first learned to lisp verses from the sacred writings, they have been my daily study and vigilant contemplation. If there be anything in my style or thoughts to be commended, the credit is due to my kind parents in instilling into my mind an early love of the Scriptures.

RUSKIN :— * * *

All that I have taught of art, whatever I have written, whatever greatness there has been in any thought of mine, is simply due to the fact that when I was a child my mother daily read with me a part of the Bible, and made me learn a part of it by heart.

SIR EDWIN ARNOLD :—

In response to the query, "What do I owe to the Bible?" my short reply would be, "Everything." My longer reply, to be sufficiently serious and comprehensive, would run to reams of paper. But if I am addressed as a man of letters, I will simply say that I owe my education as a writer more to the Bible than to any other hundred books that could be named.

F. T. BULLEN :—

If there be anything praiseworthy in what I have written, it comes direct from the Bible. Really and truly the Bible has been my only instructor. If any words of mine can make my fellow men and women go to their Bibles steadily and lovingly, to get their Divine teaching at first hand, I shall feel that whether I ever do anything more or not, I shall have justified the object for which the Bible taught me to write.

MARTIN LUTHER :—

For several years I read the whole Bible twice in every twelve months. It is a great and powerful tree, each word of which is a mighty branch; each of these branches I have shaken.

CANON FAUSETT :—

Various readings in manuscripts do not invalidate verbal inspiration. A remarkable Providence has watched over Scripture.

THE CRITICS AND THE BIBLE.

TAYLOR LEWIS says :—

The Bible itself must be brought out as the best defence against infidelity; the Bible itself—not only as the great standing miracle of history, but as containing unearthly ideas for which no philosophy, no theory of development can ever account.

THE REV. GEORGE GILFILLAN writes :—

It has been subjected, along with many other books, to the fire of the keenest investigation—a fire which has contemptuously burned up the cosmogony of the Shaster, the absurd fables of the Koran, nay, the husbandry of the Georgics, the historical truth of Livy, the artistic merit of many a popular poem, the authority of many a book of philosophy and science. And yet there this artless book lies, unhurt, untouched, with not one page singed; and not even the smell of fire has passed upon it. * * *

DR. EDWARD PAYSAN says :—

Destroy this volume, as the enemies of human happiness have vainly endeavoured to do, and you render us profoundly ignorant of our Creator, of the formation of the world which we inhabit, of the origin and progenitors of our race, of our present-day and future destination, and consign us through life to the dominion of fancy, doubt and conjecture. Destroy this volume, and you deprive us of religion, with all the animating consolations, hopes and prospects which it affords, and leaves us nothing but the choosing (miserable alternative) between the cheerless gloom of infidelity and the monstrous shadows of paganism. Destroy this volume, and you unpeople heaven, bar forever its doors against the wretched posterity of Adam, restore to the King of Terrors his fatal sting, bury hope in the same grave which receives our bodies, consign all who have died before us to eternal sleep or endless misery and allow us to expect nothing at death but a similar fate. In a word, destroy this volume and you take from us at once every thing which prevents existence becoming of all curses the greatest; you blot out the sun, dry up the ocean, and take away the atmosphere of the moral world, and degrade man to a situation from which he may look up with envy to that of the brutes that perish.

The British Weekly expresses the opinion that :—

All this pulling to pieces by the critics which we note in the books and reviews of our time does not give us the great Book we have. Take all the fragments of the innumerable editors and interpolators whom criticism has discovered, and they do not make the Old Testament any more than a collection, however complete, of the parts of the body, makes a living being. Some will recall the story of the creation of "Frankenstein," which haunted them in their boyhood—the getting together of the fragments, and the awful difficulty of animating them. The Old Testament lives, and is a unity. It lives, as criticism after criticism dies into silence. It is torn in pieces and scattered to the winds, but the parted leaves fly back and the Book is found again. In the full blaze of research, its empire over men's hearts and wills steadily increases. Not a fragment of it can be spared. Did a volume of selections from the Bible ever succeed? No; for men needed every word. Books that seem forgotten for the time emerge from their temporary obscurity, and are found to be pillars of fire by night. See how pessimism has led men to study Ecclesiastes; how the land laws have sent men to Leviticus. Nor do we know of a single statement in the Old Testament that has been clearly disproved. Whence comes this? What is the answer that will satisfy, except that the Spirit of God is there?

DEAN FARRAR declared:—

Every shallow and ignorant freethinker fancies that he can demolish the Bible. He might as well try to demolish the Himalayas. The greatest men have esteemed it the most.

Its eclipse would be the return of chaos, its extinction the epitaph of history.

Its light is like the body of heaven in its clearness, its vastness like the bosom of the sea, its variety like scenes of nature.

PETER ROSE says:—

Let us ever remember that the Divine origin of this Book has been maintained by all the men and women who have done great things for God, and left an undying influence for good on the world, throughout the ages. You do not find any destructive critics among the great evangelists of the Church, either in the past or the present; those whom God has used, and is using to-day, either in the home or foreign field, are loyal to the Bible as the inspired Word of God.

W. GRIFFITHS also says:—

It is full time to abandon hasty misgivings and cowardly alarms. The good old Book has sustained the shock of so many and fierce, yet harmless, assaults, that we may be assured it is not going to succumb to the worst its enemies can do.

THE RT. HON. W. E. GLADSTONE wrote:—

If the most greedily destructive among all the theories of the modern critics (rather seriously at variance with one another) were established as true, it would not avail to impair the great facts of the history of man with respect to the Jews, and to the nations of the world; nor to disguise the light which those facts throw upon the pages of the Sacred Volume; nor to abate the commanding force with which, bathed, so to speak, in the flood of that light, the Bible invites, attracts, and commands the adhesion of mankind.

DR. A. T. PIERSON:—

The apologetic literature that crystallizes about the Word of God is very large, but the literature that attacks it is still larger, and viewed from the broad foundation of common-sense and reason, the assaults on the Bible are as great a vindication of its Divine origin as the documents defending it.

Men do not worry themselves beating down a man of straw; it is the substantial value of the Word of God, it is its imperishable excellence, that makes it an object to assault it and undermine the confidence of people in it. But after all these centuries of strife, after all these millennia of opposition, the Bible has more adherents to-day in the world than it ever had.

DR. SEWELL testifies:—

Twelve years of uninterrupted leisure have enabled me to examine a portion of the Bible with a most minute and impartial criticism as a Greek scholar. I cannot describe the awe, the wonder, the loving thankfulness, the entire unshaken trust (italics his own) which the examination has impressed on my mind.

There was a time when the word "Bibliolatry" sounded to my ears as it has sounded to others; as if in worshipping the Bible we ran too great risk of idolatry. I now confess for myself that I do worship the Bible as the voice of the Holy Spirit; I do bow down and adore it as the perfect oracle of God.

THE PRESERVATION OF THE BIBLE.

BP. JEWELL writes:—

Cities fall, kingdoms come to nothing, empires fade away as smoke. Where is Numa, Minos, Lycurgus? where are their books? and what is become of their laws? But that this Book no tyrant should have been able to consume, no tradition to choke, no heretic maliciously to corrupt; that it should stand unto this day, amid the wreck of all that is human, without the alteration of one sentence so as to change the doctrine taught therein, surely there is a very singular providence claiming our attention in a most remarkable manner.

A gentleman dining with a literary party, among whom were Lord Hales and Mr. Buchanan, put the question, "Supposing all the New Testaments in the world had been destroyed at the end of the third century, could their contents have been recovered from the writings of the first three centuries?" No one even hazarded a guess in answer to the enquiry. About two months after this meeting Lord Hales told Mr. Buchanan, "That question quite accorded with the turn of my mind. On returning home, as I knew I had all the writers of those centuries, I began immediately to collect them, that I might set to work on the arduous task as soon as possible." Pointing to a table covered with papers, he said, "There have I been busy for these two months, searching for chapters, half-chapters and sentences, of the New Testament, and have marked down what I have found, and where I have found it; so that any person may examine and see for themselves. I have actually discovered the whole New Testament from these writings, except seven or eleven verses (I forget which) which satisfies me that I could discover them also. Now, here was a way in which God concealed or hid the treasure of His Word, that Julian the apostate emperor, and other enemies of Christ who wished to extirpate the Gospel from the world, never would have thought of; and, though they had, they never could have effected their destruction."

HENRY WARD BEECHER:—

The New Testament opens with "Peace on earth, good will to men"; and these were the last words that rang through the air before the vision faded :—" And the Spirit and the bride say, Come ; and let him that heareth say, Come ; and let him that is athirst Come ; and whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely." And all between these two magnificent notes rolls the anthem of God's mercy, "Whosoever will!" That is the beginning and the ending. Let every Christian heart respond in those final and sublimest words of revelation, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus!"

EXTRACT FROM ANNUAL REPORT OF THE BRITISH AND FOREIGN BIBLE SOCIETY, 1930.

WE give thanks to the Giver of all good for the measure of success which, by His blessing, has attended the Bible Society's enterprise during the twelve months ending on March 31st, 1930. Each of these months has witnessed the winning of a fresh language for the service of God. Two of the twelve new versions are printed for Asiatic, two for Oceanic, and eight for African peoples. Our list of versions now reaches a total of 630. The number of copies of Scripture disseminated surpasses all previous records. For the first time in the Society's history the twelve-million mark has been reached and exceeded. Over a million complete Bibles, over a million and a quarter complete New Testaments, and 9,795,000 single integral portions of the Bible have been sent out. This represents an increase of 775,000 on the figure for 1928–29. The world's best Book is still the world's "best-seller." The Society's income from all sources is the largest it has ever received.

It is a striking fact that the Society is now selling more than double the number of copies in the languages of Britain than it sold ten years ago. This year over 1,800,000 copies of English and over 66,000 copies of Welsh versions were issued : with the addition of embossed copies for the blind, diglots, and a few in Gaelic and Irish, a total of over 1,872,000 was reached—an increase of about 130,000. Of the English versions, we are now sending abroad within about a hundred thousand of the number circulated at Home ; to be precise, 960,622 were sold at Home, and 840,029 were shipped abroad, chiefly to the Dominions oversea. This affords pleasing evidence of the extent to which our kinsmen treasure their heritage in the English Bible.

WEEK BY WEEK.

By A. R. H.

BRITISH-ISRAEL believers have the reputation for being great readers of the BIBLE. And they are great readers of the BIBLE because they are students, not only of the sacred Scriptures, but equally students of that Bible written upon the pages of secular history, supplemented by the record of prophecy fulfilled chronicled as "current events" in the columns of the daily PRESS.

The BIBLE is still the most widely-read Book in all the world. It still holds pride of place as the world's "best seller." The figures of its annual production vastly outrival that of any other piece of literature.

As a piece of literature it stands out pre-eminently, a classic of the classics, a model for every writer who aspires to quality of style.

Many read it for this purpose alone, regarding it purely as a source of literary inspiration, knowing that the dramatic art of story-telling, as exemplified in its pages, has never yet been equalled or surpassed.

Others read it for the moral instruction and lofty ethical idealism it invokes. Others again, for the satisfaction, as food for the spirit, which its words (so they find) alone can bring.

To the psychologist it is a gold-mine, for in its pages is found reflected the heart of man, and all the waywardness of common human nature revealed, both at its worst and best.

The BIBLE is, in this sense, "all things to all men"—A FAITHFUL MIRROR OF LIFE—and, as such, possessing a unique message to the individual, so that every man, searching through its pages, is sure to find profit and instruction. It opens up "a new and living way" of life for all mankind, and shows the path so clearly that even the wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err therein.

But the Bible is written on a national, prophetic and chronological outline. And if we are to understand it fully and exhaustively we must do more than read it casually and spasmodically, in isolated chapters and verses. We must read it as a whole, and master its fundamental, prophetic, chronological and historical outlines.

Moreover, since more than half the BIBLE deals exclusively with the ISRAEL PEOPLE, it is obvious that no man who remains ignorant concerning the identity of the people of the BIBLE is fully qualified to expound the BIBLE. Neither is the man who ignores the prophetic portions of the BIBLE—on the specious plea that they have no real significance for our time apart from their beautiful expression of the longings of human idealism—fully qualified to expound the Scriptures.

BRITISH-ISRAEL believers claim to have a full qualification for Biblical exposition, since they have unearthed and brought into light of day the prophetical, chronological and historical foundations upon which it is based.

Dr. Norwood, of the City Temple, paid (quite unconsciously) a striking tribute to the work of BRITISH-ISRAEL when he said : "We seem to need, almost desperately, a revival of

THE PROPHETIC SPIRIT.

The newspaper is the BIBLE of hundreds of thousands to-day, and in the newspapers can be read a more startling apocalypse than the revelation of St. John. The difficulty is that the average man sees no moral or spiritual significance in anything that happens. While living in the most romantic period of the world's history, his moral and spiritual conceptions seem almost atrophied."

Here we have a most remarkable thing! For the people who read the newspapers and not the BIBLE can never properly learn to appreciate their newspaper ; and the people who read their BIBLE only and not their newspapers can never fully learn to appreciate the BIBLE.

Moreover, those who only read history and never read the BIBLE will entirely miss the message that history is meant to give ; whilst those who read the BIBLE only and never search the pages of secular history will go through life with the greater part of the BIBLE remaining a BOOK of incomplete significance.

"Seek ye out of the BOOK of the LORD, and read; no one of these shall fail, none shall want her mate."* Thus the BIBLE calls upon its readers to search in the BOOK OF SECULAR HISTORY for the fulfilment of Biblical prophecy. In the light of this dual investigation, mysteries are solved and difficulties made plain. For secular history is the key to the prophetic Scriptures. And "Israel" is the key to secular history.

Thus, when a great historian recently declared that History was he made a declaration in perfect harmony with Isa. xxxiv, 16.

And Benedetto Croce's words: "ISRAEL is the parent of the only true history, the history which is also philosophy, which sees the past as alive in the present and pressing on towards a goal and consummation in the future," demonstrate the fact that the Israel outline of history, as revealed in the prophetic Scriptures, is the key to the proper understanding of world events.

Fortunately we stand at the threshold of a time of great awakening. In the past it has been true to say of our NATION that the vision of all had become "as the words of a BOOK that is sealed."†

So that if we went to a scholar and asked him to expound the prophetical portions of the BIBLE he would say: "I cannot, for it is sealed." And if we went to an ordinary man he would say: "I cannot, because I am not a scholar."

But with the proclamation of the BRITISH-ISRAEL evangel, "blindness" is rapidly passing away, as it is written: "In that day shall the deaf hear the words of the Book, and the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity and out of darkness."‡

Of the KINGDOM-gospel—or national message of the BIBLE—it is also written: "The good news of the KINGDOM, however, shall be proclaimed throughout the whole EMPIRE, as a witness to all nations; and then the end will come."§

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

As this is the last number of this journal before the opening of the Congress, we make another appeal for every effort on the part of our readers to help ensure complete success of the week's gatherings, and to fill the Hall for each meeting. We appeal also for earnest prayers for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit, and for the Divine control and inspiration of the speakers. Our "Call to the Nation" has appeared in each of the London great morning daily newspapers, and in several weekly journals—fifteen in all. As a result we have requests daily for further information, and for tickets and railway vouchers. All indications point to a greatly increased attendance of newly interested people; many are coming from long distances at considerable expense. It is not too much to say that thousands of the general public are looking for a lead from this Federation at this time in view of what has been said in our Manifesto, and now in our Call to the Nation. Our opportunity is great, so also is our responsibility, and we must rise to it; I do not mean we at Headquarters, or the Council only; I mean the entire body of members and supporters. Again therefore I plead and urge that all shall pull their full weight. Frankly, let slide the things that don't count, and concentrate on the great aim:—THE NATION FOR GOD.

Awake thou that sleepest, AWAKE, AWAKE; the time is short. Pray God arouse the dull senses, quicken the seared consciences, soften the stony hearts, open the blind eyes, and make alert all the faculties. Pray that all may be made willing in the day of His power; willing for service, for self-surrender, for self-sacrifice.

We trust that the present BIBLE number of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE will prove helpful to all our readers in these times of destructive criticism, showing, as it does, what great men have thought of the sacred Volume. Hundreds of extra copies have been printed in anticipation of a large demand. To the testimonies I have selected among many hundreds I wish to add two important passages of Scripture—the first from the Second Epistle to Timothy, chapter 3, verses 16 and 17:—"All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: That the man of God may be perfect, throughly furnished unto all good works." (A.V.)

The second from Revelation, chapter 22, verses 18 and 19:—"For I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book. If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book; And if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book." (A.V.)

Our readers will notice in the advertisement columns of this issue that Ferrar Fenton's Bible in Modern English is now obtainable in a new binding. The translator claims that his version of the Scriptures is the only one ever made into Modern English absolutely direct from the original Hebrew and Greek of the sacred writings without any intermediate translation, whether ancient or modern, intervening. This work was approved by both Dr. Tait and Dr. Benson, former Archbishops of Canterbury, and by Professor John Stuart Blackie, of Edinburgh University, and many other distinguished scholars.

Ferrar Fenton's dedication (see advertisement) is beautifully worded in a way calculated to make a special appeal to B.-I. believers.

Apropos our Call to the Nation, a correspondent calls our attention to a speech by Mr. Lloyd George, at Stowmarket, on 20th ult., when he said:—"There has been nothing comparable to the present position since the darkest hours of the Great War. Unemployment is growing not by battalions, but by divisions, week by week, and I cannot see the end of it. We are not passing through, but passing into a crisis. There has never been a situation which called for greater courage and capacity, for a more clear insight into the facts as they are, and for a greater resolution to face these facts."

Members and Associates are reminded that the adjourned Annual Meeting will be held at Headquarters on Thursday, October 9th, at 5.30 p.m.

The morning sessions for delegates will be held at 11 each day from October 7th to 11th, inclusive. Among the speakers are Mr. George R. Gair on Thursday, and Mr. Basil Stewart on Friday morning. Mr. Gair's subject will be "Peoples of Bronze and Iron Ages in Britain," illustrated by lantern slides.

There will be a meeting of Crusader Group Leaders and adult Branch Secretaries at Headquarters on Saturday, October 11th, at 6 p.m., to discuss the Crusader Movement and to make plans for the future. All Branch Secretaries and officials who are interested in this department of our work will be welcomed.

* * *

The Rev. E. A. Couldrey will preach at 11 and 7 on October 5th in the Orange Street Church, behind the National Gallery. The Rev. Maxwell Carnson preached there twice on Sunday last.

* * *

The Rev. Guy Waddington, M.A., and Mr. Wm. Whitton have just concluded a week's mission in Darlington. There were open-air meetings at which over 200 people stood for an hour and a half listening to the message. Evening meetings were well attended in the Friends' Meeting House. There were three afternoon meetings in private houses, one of which was in a Vicarage. Great good was done. From this mission two others have been arranged in Durham and Stockton for the week October 20th to 25th. Will readers in those districts please give what help they can, and communicate with Mr. Whitton, 34, Denham Road, Sheffield? A great work can be done and all help is wanted.

Mr. W. Bottomley, Hon. Secretary of our Bradford Branch, writes that the opening meeting of the new session was a very encouraging one, and that the speakers were the Rev. Guy Waddington, Mr. William Whitton and himself. The first public lecture of the session was given by the Right Rev. the Bishop of the Falkland Islands, and was a pronounced success. The Ven. the Archdeacon of Bradford presided over an excellent audience. The Bishop stressed the importance of careful and prayerful investigation of B.-I. teaching, which he declared is the only Bible message that carries conviction to-day. At least one Vicar present is prepared to follow the Bishop's advice.

Mr. J. J. Morey has lectured at Croydon, Sydenham, Southend, Blackheath and Totland Bay, and the newspapers have given lengthy reports of his meetings.

Mr. Basil Stewart is to give an address in the Church of St. Bartholomew-the-Great, Smithfield, E.C.1, on Sunday, October 5th, at 6.30, on the "Great Pyramid and Its Significance for the Present Day."

The Annual Sale of Work at Headquarters in aid of B.-I. funds, to be conducted by the Women's Auxiliary, will be held on December 3rd and 4th next.

* * *

The Rev. Maxwell Carnson has had a successful series of meetings in Paignton, Taunton, Teignmouth, Exeter, Bristol, Bath and Bradford-on-Avon, thirteen addresses, and a sermon in one of the Churches in Bath. The hall in Bristol was packed. The Chairman in the Bath Guildhall was the Rev. Dr. Gale; the Mayor wrote expressing his regret at his absence through another engagement. General Sir Henry Dixon and Colonel Luxmore were among the audience in Teignmouth, where the Rev. J. D. T. Davis, B.A., was Chairman, supported by the Rev. Commander Roberts. The meetings were enthusiastic, and it is believed that much good was done.

* * *

Mr. Dillon, of Manchester, addressed our Liverpool Branch on September 25th. He drew attention to the numerous cases of the number 12 in the Bible in connection with Israel:—12 sons of Jacob; 12 spies; 12 stones in the Jordan for a memorial; 12 Disciples; 12 baskets of fragments after our Lord fed the multitude, etc.

TRUE BIBLE CHRONOLOGY

94 pp. demy 8vo.] BASIL STEWART. [Cloth, 3/6 net

A detailed exposition of Chronology derived solely from the statements of the Bible, and corroborated from other sources, definitely proving a period of four millenniums from Adam to Christ. A reasoned explanation is given of the apparent great ages attributed to the early patriarchs, showing there is no reason to regard these as mythological when correctly understood. An explanation is also given of various chronologic epochs, showing that these are definite and historical chronologic statements, and are not interpolations or approximate statements expressed "in round numbers" as too often considered. EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

GOD.

THE PEOPLE. △ THE BIBLE.—I.

BY THE REV. DR. W. PASCOE GOARD, F.R.G.S.

THE above is a triangle of subjects of supreme interest to all at the present time.

Into the international situation there has entered the strange question, "Is there a God, and is the idea of God helpful to the people's life?"

Russia has made a national pronouncement on the matter, and has been persecuting all believers in God for a decade and more. Such is the intensity of interest which has been aroused that it has become a vital and international question.

Throughout Britain and Europe there has sprung up a movement of protest against the Russian persecution of Christians. At the head of this movement is the people of Great Britain.

We shall take a little space in a discussion of this theme, which is now interesting, and which will become more so as the days go by.

We have been taught from childhood that there is a Person of Infinite Majesty Whom, for want of a better name, we call by the simple one-syllabled name

GOD.

The Books which we look upon as being of higher than human origin, found in the Bible, teach us about such a Personality. What it teaches is so familiar that we do not need to take time and space to discuss that phase of the matter.

We are met by the "man of the street" in London and elsewhere who is ready and anxious to take up the question as to the rightness of the teaching of the Bible, and to raise the question of such a Personality. It would be waste of time to take the question up with such men from the standpoint of the Bible only, for the reason that they are so ill-equipped with knowledge of the qualities and powers manifested in the Book that they do not realize anything therein more than could be produced by modern scholars. To those who know the Book well, it is manifest that it contains knowledge impossible to the scholars of any preceding age during which time the Book was in process of preparation. For instance, they will find therein modern history written thousands of years ago: the history of the Occident in modern days written in the heart of the Orient in ancient days. It was as though scholars should now be convened to write the detailed history of the world, showing what nations shall exist, and where and under what circumstances, two or three thousand years from now. Manifestly there are no scholars who could undertake such a task now. Manifestly there were no scholars who could undertake the task then. The future is always hidden from the eyes of mankind. Yet the Book accomplished this task.

And the pre-writing is now seen to have been accurate in outline and detail.

So we see in the Book powers which transcend those of the human mind.

Those who to-day deny the teaching of the Book that there is such a Divine Personality as God fail to recognize such qualities in the Book, and so refuse to accept its testimony.

THE PEOPLE.

Well, there is another source of knowledge of God, viz., the historic knowledge of God.

How has God been known in history?

The matter is no secret.

Four thousand years ago, or say, as far back before Christ, in the B.C. years, as we are after Christ in the A.D. years, God made known His plan to develop a people through whom He would work out a certain plan for the uplift of the world, and the salvation of mankind.

The whole story was foretold from the beginning to the end. The machinery of the Divine activity was put in motion for the carrying forward of this purpose. The MAN was called. His family was instituted through which this purpose should be developed. The Covenants, which formed the Charter of the family, were granted, signed and sealed by the parties thereto, and the whole scheme put in operation. The family was developed and organized into a nation and that was made God's Kingdom of Priests in the earth. The nation was established by irrevocable Charters; to it were granted Covenants and promises, and the outlines of its future history were pre-written in prophecy to the end of time.

The Bible was committed to the plan, and bound up with the people absolutely. If the plan and the people failed, the Book failed with them. If the plan and the people have been carried through to success, and the movements connected therewith have become history, then the Book must stand supreme in the world of literature as a contribution to earthly literature from the mind of God; for it is not given to the human mind thus to penetrate the future.

Humanly speaking, there was not one chance in a million that the plan could be carried out as indicated and that the Book could be certified. But the plan has been in operation now since 1930 B.C. or thereabout. The one course of history indicated has been followed by the combination of peoples and of nations as foretold ages ago. And now at the end of the time, the Book stands out, demonstrated by history to be the Word of God. * * *

That the Bible follows such a course we shall submit to you by a glance at the table of contents of the Bible.

Genesis (chapters i-ix).—A synopsis of all preceding knowledge down to the time of the beginning of the plan. Such preceding knowledge introduces the plan into world affairs and makes all that succeeds intelligible.

Genesis (chapters xii to the end) shows the establishment of the family through whom the great plan should be carried through.

No person, no corporation, no government, ever undertook such a gigantic plan as this, which should comprise the backbone of historic happenings in all the earth to the end of time.

Exodus.—Shows the organization of the family into a KINGDOM, consisting of the NATION, the KING, and the CONSTITUTION. This book furnishes the first chapter of BRIT-ISH history: that is to say, the history of the nation of the Covenant. For this is the meaning of the Hebrew words BRIT-ISH: Brith (Covenant); Ish (man in his sociological relationship).

Leviticus.—This third book constitutes the manual of the nation's worship of God.

Numbers.—This fourth book shows the manual of national organization.

Deuteronomy.—This book shows the digest of Constitutional Law. It is the basis of the Common Law of England.

Joshua.—This book shows the induction of the people into the Promised Land.

Judges.—This book shows the functioning of the Constitution during the early centuries of the people's national life without either King or Parliament.

1 and 2 Samuel the setting-up of the Kingship of the House of David for ever, in the nation.

1 and 2 Kings.—The history of the nations, Israel and Judah, from the standpoint of the throne down to the captivities.

1 and 2 Chronicles.—The same histories told from the standpoint of the Temple. Still dealing with the same people.

Ezra and Nehemiah.—History of the setting-up of the nation of the Jews.

Esther.—History of the final phase of the Israel-Amalekite war which began in the wilderness in the days of Moses.

Job.—Moral philosophy of the people.

Psalms.—The Hymnal of the people.

Proverbs.—The winnowed wisdom of the people.

Ecclesiastes.—The materialistic view of life and things from which God and Revelation have been excluded. It is all termed "vanity of vanities and vexation of spirit."

The Song of Solomon.—The Lord's attachment to His bride, which is Israel.

Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel.—Great prophets of Judah and Israel.

Daniel.—An Israel prophet with a special message to the Continental Empires and Peoples.

The Minor Prophets.—Israel prophets all.

The Gospels take up the same story.—"God hath visited and redeemed His People Israel"—and concerning the Christ: "The Lord God shall give unto Him the throne of His father David; and He shall reign over the House of Jacob for ever; and of His kingdom there shall be no end." They furnish the narrative of the Christ, His life ministry, teachings, death and resurrection. This is the climax of Israel history, namely, the Redemption, and the Atonement for the sins of the people.

The Acts of the Apostles.—The Holy Ghost rallies the forces of the Christian Church with this call: "Ye men of Judæa and all ye that dwell at Jerusalem"—"Ye men of Israel." Thus the fountain-head of the Church is Judah and Israel at Jerusalem.

Romans.—Written to all that dwell at Rome called Saints. That is to say, to Israelites which dwell at Rome. For Saint and Israelite are synonymous terms in the Bible.

Corinthians.—"Brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant how that all our fathers were . . . baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea . . ."; so they also were Israelites.

Galatians, Hebrews, Peter, James, and so on, are addressed to the same people.

Revelation.—The New Jerusalem having twelve gates, one for each of the twelve tribes of Israel.

Thus we see at a glance that the Bible tells a connected story all the way through from beginning to end, and that is the story of Israel.

THE CRUCIFIXION OF CHRISTIANITY.

VII.

By the Rev. John Blacket (of Australia).

Modernism and the Present Crisis in Religion.

The Present Crisis in Religion is the title of a book recently published by Dr. Orchard, of London. The author presents a dark picture of the present condition of the Christian Church, and is not alone in his gloomy portrayal. Not long before his death the Rev. John Watson, of Liverpool (Ian MacLaren), wrote: "No serious person, whether he be religious or non-religious, can look out upon society in our day without being depressed and alarmed. There is a general unsettlement, both of belief and of institutions; a weariness of the present, and an uncertainty of the future. The attendance upon public worship is steadily declining; the grasp of spiritual realities is consciously relaxing; the enthusiasm for Christ's cause is fading; and the light of hope and triumph is dying from the brow of faith."

Some time ago, the Rev. John Bevan, M.A., in an article in The Christian World, London, said: "The most alarming thing in England to-day is the rate at which people are giving up religion. The extent to which the surrender of Church going and habits of devotion has taken place is appalling. Our Free Churches (as churches) have lost the ear of the nation, and (as I am given to understand) the Church of England is becoming increasingly neglected by its people. What the Christian forces have to face is alienation from religion. People are doing without God. It is not only that they are dispensing with the Churches, but they are dispensing with what the Churches stand for." Quite recently the same able and timely writer said: "We have no time for those who write letters of sky-blue optimism, pointing out that all is well, and if we only have patience the present phase of spiritual indifference will pass. . . . Nearly every religious denomination is losing ground. . . . It is no use saying that the slump is only a temporary one, and that all will come right if we are only faithful to our witness. The slump is chronic; the decline has been going on for too many years."

For the spiritual indifference that so generally obtains, and the unsettlement of religious belief, various causes are stated. My own conviction is that a primary cause is what I have termed the "Crucifixion of Christianity"—the merely speculative criticism, and subtle disintegration of the Christian Faith by some whose office it is to defend and to teach it—the "wounding of our Lord in the house of His friends." The "faltering" notes that are sometimes sounded from platform or pulpit, or find expression in contributions to the Press, find their way into the homes and hearts of men and women, paralysing their faith.

A leading layman in connection with one of the Nonconformist Churches of England in an "official" public address delivered not long since, and reported in one of the London papers, said: "As far as my doubts and difficulties are concerned, they have not been raised by people outside the Church but they have come to me rather through the pulpit and the religious Press." "Many of the people," said he, "in the pew are at a loss to know what to believe."

In an address in the Birmingham Cathedral at the close of last year (1929) Bishop Barnes (himself a Modernist) said: "It is an obvious fact that the religious faith of many has weakened." The Bishop frankly states the reason why. He says: "The cause is clear. The new knowledge, won by men of science and students of the Bible, is spreading, and as it spreads many become critical of all Christian beliefs, because some few beliefs which they were taught can no longer be held; and thus among older people there is now perplexity and distress, and among younger people there is widespread scepticism. To use a simple metaphor: many a ship has dragged its anchor during the past year, and the old moorings are no longer in sight."

A prominent religious educationist in America (Professor G. H. Betts), connected with one of the Methodist Colleges, has published a book dealing with some of the religious beliefs of 700 clergymen of the Reformed Church. A Questionnaire was sent by him to more than 1,000 ministers and students, relative to doctrinal matters. Amongst the questions were some relating to the Bible as a Divine Revelation, the Creation of Man in the Image of God, the Virgin Birth, the Miracles of Christ, and His Resurrection from the Dead. Five hundred ministers and 200 theological students replied to the questions. Along Modernistic lines the result is startling. Speaking of the outcome of the enquiry, The Christian Advocate said: "That it was enough to bring out the substantial fact that the doctrines which are presented in the Historic Creeds of Christianity, and embodied in Liturgies and Hymns, were not commonly received among a large number of the clergy." The statement applies to both ministers and theological students. "The book is startling," said Zion's Herald, "but in all probability it gives us a fairly accurate picture of what the clergymen of the day are actually thinking." The break-away was more especially notable among the young men.

In the "Review of the Churches," dealing with the book, Sir Henry Lunn says: "The percentage of unbelief amongst the students is astounding." Amongst them a large number did not believe the Virgin Birth, and a considerable number did not accept the doctrine of the Resurrection of our Lord. The Rev. Frederick Spurr, of London, in a letter to The Baptist Times, says: "What is the matter? Have we a Gospel to preach, and are we preaching it?" "I have," he says, "on my desk, four letters from strangers—totally unknown to me—and the burden of each is this: 'We don't know where we are; the faith in which we were brought up has lost its grip; we no longer attend church.'" Is this a matter for wonder when a prominent minister of the Reformed Church boldly publishes the following: "I do not believe that Christ was miraculously born; I do not believe that He rose from the dead miraculously, or that He stilled a storm at sea, or fed five thousand with five loaves and two fishes." Many I fear to-day do not respond to the appeal of the Gospel trumpet, because the trumpet gives an uncertain sound. In proportion as the "Crucifixion of Christianity" proceeds, and the doctrines of Original Sin, of the Atonement, the Virgin Birth, and the Deity of our Lord and His Resurrection are discredited, the Christian Faith must decline.

APOSTOLIC PREACHING.

Bearing in mind, then, the time of trial and trouble through which the Church is now passing, let us look for a moment at Apostolic Preaching. It was an appalling task—humanly speaking an "impossible task"—that the immediate followers of our Lord had to perform. They had to face "the great red dragon" of the Apocalypse, "having seven heads and ten horns," who "stood before the woman, about to be delivered," ready "to devour her child" as soon as it was born. How did they face the position? By striking a positive note—the note that was never more needed than it is to-day.

Clement, Bishop of Rome (closely associated with the Apostolic Age), tells how the first messengers of the Cross, "having received their orders," and "being fully assured by the Resurrection of our Lord," and "established in the Word of God," went forth proclaiming the Gospel. It was the Apostolic Rule of Faith, notably the Deity and physical Resurrection of our Lord that they proclaimed, and the virtue of His Atonement.

"Let us look steadfastly," said Clement of Rome, "to the blood of Christ, which, having been shed for our salvation, has set the grace of repentance before the whole world." They taught that it was possible for sin to be pardoned, and put away from the soul, and for the lost image of God to be restored—for men to undergo a "new birth" in a spiritual sense—a "new creation." They taught the conditions of salvation: "Repentance toward God and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ." They taught the "traditional Christianity" —the "doctrinal Christianity"—with which our first chapter deals. What was the result?

For an answer we turn to Justin Martyr, of whom Methodius (Bishop in the 3rd century) said: "Justin was a man who was not far separated from the Apostles either in age or in excellence." In his "First Apology" Justin says: "We, who formerly delighted in fornication, now embrace chastity; we, who formerly used magical arts, dedicate ourselves to the good and unbegotten God; we, who valued above all things the acquisition of wealth and possessions, now bring what we have into a common stock, and communicate to every one in need; we, who hated and destroyed one another, and on account of their different manners would not live with men of a different tribe, now, since the Coming of Christ, live familiarly with them, and pray for our enemies, and endeavour to persuade those who hate us unjustly to live conformable to the good precepts of Christ." . . . "We willingly die," said Justin, "confessing Christ."

A GREAT FORWARD MOVEMENT.

LIVE THE LIFE OF ISRAEL.

BY PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.SC.

TWENTY-SIX years ago, I was visiting at Canterbury with my young wife, who was and is very fond of art in all its phases. We were strolling among some old ivy-decorated ruins, and we noticed a quiet elderly person sitting on a stool under an arch. He was absorbed in his work, sketching an arch at some little distance. My wife looked at the work of the painter, and whispered, "He is a real artist."

This stranger did not tell us his name, age, country, or give us any account of himself to prove he was an artist. No argument or description. His work proved to us he was an artist. How simple! How telling! How convincing!

Later on, we were on our way by water to Denmark from Harwich. We met a steamer moving westward. No person told us it was a steamer. But from its appearance, position and work, we knew it to be a steamer. Its work and appearance were enough to make us know what it was, and what was its occupation. In both cases, the acts, or works, gave us definite proof without the need of words and arguments. We knew without being told that one was an artist and the other a steamer.

Now, to Israel for a moment! We have, for a long while, described, defined and delimited Israel by every means within reach. We have used prophecy, history, philology, ethnology, geography, and all else of real or supposed value, to show who is Israel to-day, and where Israel is to-day. And we have done right and well, but it seems to be time for a change in our methods.

The painter painted, and we knew he was an artist by his work The steamer steamed, and we knew it to be a steamer. Suppose we apply this simple method to Israel. Let us, Israel, do the works of Israel, and quickly the world will know we are Israel. Yes, and then we will know ourselves to be Israel without words and argumentation.

When Britain and her "company of nations" do the work of Israel, then all humanity will gladly shout out, "Behold Israel! Behold God's chosen people! Behold our true friends! Behold our helpful servants! Behold the Royal Priesthood doing for humanity the works of a true devoted loyal priesthood!"

Very good! Easily seen! Not hard to understand! All wise men and women would say, Amen! to this proposition, viz., Let Israel prove his or their identity by his or their works.

Let us look at the major work and stress it somewhat. Our great Israel Leader and Teacher said, "Ye must be born again." This is basic and necessary. We cannot enter the Kingdom, or even see it, without this New or Second Birth. Hence, it is clear that Israel, individually and nationally, must be born again in order to be recognized as Israel in the personal or national official sense, for working purposes.

Hence, you and I, to do our full duty, must meet this primary condition, and then, as Israel individually reborn, we will go out and tell others of this marvellously Divinely human process, condition and life.

As we go on our daily duties, we will by life and word make others know we are Israel in very truth.

This is the fundamental act of preaching the Gospel of Personal Rebirth, or Regeneration. How the world would thrill with joy on the perception and experiencing of this greatest of all human gifts and conditions—this passing into life from a cold cheerless death! And then Israel would be truly and universally discovered.

Following this wonderful work, comes, in due order, another work of the individual Israelite. He was told to bless all the families of the earth, to preach the Gospel and to heal the sick.

Digitized by Google

Somehow or another, Israel the teacher, the appointed light-bearer, and the man under orders to heal the sick, has fallen down on the job. His preaching the good news of the Rebirth has been so modified and limited that neither he nor the world can see clearly what it means, and what is lost without it.

As for healing the sick, he has the notion that it is presumption to try to heal the sick by the Scripture process. He says, "Let the medical men heal the sick, and I will tell them to go to the college man who has authority to give medicines and special treatment, and I will carry on by attending to half the Divine command, viz., preach the Gospel."

Reader, if we would make the world know we are Israel, we must among us do the works of Israel, and one of these most necessary and important works is that of healing the sick. I tell you, friends, no human being is or can be religiously happy when racked and broken with stinging pain and disease. No human being is or can be at rest when the brain or other organs are diseased and fail to function as was and is intended by Divine creation and purpose. Jesus knew this and proved it by "healing all manner of diseases."

His command to heal disease remains, and involves the idea and purpose of His co-operation with those who obey and set out to heal the sick and pain-stressed.

Let us do all the works of Israel, and the world will know who we are without description or argument.

PREDESTINATION.—X.

BY THE REV. R. G. F. WADDINGTON, M.A.

THE SIGN OF THE SABBATH.

GOD gave one distinctive sign, the Sabbath Day, which He Himself declared would be a sign between Him and Israel throughout their generations. It is not possible to read the Scriptures, surely, without noticing how great an emphasis is laid upon the Sabbath. We may turn to Isaiah lviii and read, "If thou turn away thy foot from the Sabbath, from doing thy pleasure on My holy day; and call the Sabbath a delight, the holy of the Lord, honourable; and shalt honour him, not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words: then shalt thou delight thyself in the Lord; and I will cause thee to ride upon the high places of the earth; and feed thee with the heritage of Jacob thy father: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." In Jeremiah xvii, the prophet, addressing the people of Judah, promises, in the Name of the Lord, that peace and prosperity shall follow a return of the Jews to the keeping of the Sabbath. In Ezekiel xx, the prophet, reviewing the history of Israel's apostasy, speaks most concerning the pollution of the Sabbath, as if that pollution were the worst of Israel's sins.

Now the moment we begin to refer to the Sabbath, and the Scriptural prominence given to it, there comes to my mind a striking parallel, which, I make bold to say, must be quite as obvious to everyone. The keeping of Sunday by the British people, and the claims made for the keeping of it, are surely remarkable enough to prompt comment. No nation on the face of the earth keeps the Sunday in any sense, as either a day of worship or a day of rest, except Britain, and her sister nation of the United States.

On the Continent, the Greek and Latin Churches are certainly open for worship, but so are the shops open and the theatres. You may go into any Continental city, and you will find people ready to trade, to traffic, to work, to go to any show or amusement. No one can pretend for a moment that there is any attempt made at Sunday observance, nor is there a single Society on the Continent whose object is the preservation of the Sunday.

In my Eastern travels I passed through four European countries, and found that it was quite impossible to keep Sunday as we keep it here in Britain, the whole atmosphere, surroundings and circumstances rendering it out of the question.

Now the opponent of British-Israel, or the Puritan, may complain as much as he will about the lack of Sunday observance in this country. He may bewail the fact that of recent years there has been an increase in the number of shops opening on the Sunday—contrary to the Law, by the way, but let that pass for the moment—an increase in the number of pleasure excursions on the Sunday, a persistent demand for more opportunities for games on the Sunday and, at the same time, a distinct falling away in attendance at places of worship. I agree with him most earnestly, and admit that his complaints are justified, and that the facts are deplorable. But I would remind him that there is another side to be considered.

First of all, the very fact that he protests against this profanation of the Sunday is in itself a witness to the hold that the idea of keeping the Sunday as a sacred day has upon the British mind. There is never a voice raised in protest on the Continent. On the contrary, foreigners are pleased to sneer at us for being so out-of-date and peculiar as to make Sunday "such a dull day." Again, the protester is not by himself in Britain, and he ploughs no lonely furrow, for there are two or three Societies whose whole purpose is the defence of the Sunday. Yet a third point is that whenever there is any appeal made to any civic authority for permission to open tennis courts and similar pleasures on the Sunday, not only is there always an organized protest on the part of lovers of Sunday, but very frequently the appeal is refused by the authority because the members of that authority are themselves lovers of the Sunday.

So then, in spite of very real cause for distress on the part of Christians here in Britain at the profanation of Sunday that is so noticeable to-day, we are yet so very far removed from the practice of the Continent as to make a most striking contrast. And that contrast is intensified tenfold by the facts upon which I have laid stress, which show what a great volume of public opinion there is behind our keeping of the Sunday. So then the words of the late Bishop Ryle, of Liverpool, forty years old though they be, still ring true to conditions here. "I say, without hesitation, that Great Britain and the United States of America are the two most Sabbath-keeping nations upon earth . . . It is a curious fact, worthy of remembrance, that the Church of Rome has rarely proved herself a friend of Sunday . . . Nothing in my judgment has so irreparably damaged religion in Germany as the painfully low views which German Protestants hold about keeping Sunday holy . . .

Digitized by Google

Look at a Sunday in London. See how the immense majority of shops, through miles and miles of streets, are shut up, and business suspended. See how Post Offices, Banks, Exchanges, and Law Courts, Museums, Theatres and Picture Galleries are closed. See what hundreds of Churches and Chapels and Sunday Schools are opened, and then turn to any Continental nation, to Paris, Madrid, Naples, Vienna, Berlin, and mark how Sunday is observed there. Note how the day is given up to military reviews, races, bullfights, theatres, dancing, concerts, and pleasures of every description. Mark all these things, and learn one grand reason, why the standard of religion is so much higher in our country, viz., the holy observance of the Lord's Day. I can imagine no greater disaster to this country than the introduction of a Continental Sunday. I think, too, that most people are aware of the saying of Voltaire, "Whether Englishmen know it or not, it is the English Sunday which makes England what it is." Now who can account for the fact that Britain and her Colonies, and the United States, observe the Sunday, both Nationally and also by Law? For need I remind people that it is still against the Law of the Land to open a shop or conduct business on the Sunday? Who can give a better reason than the one given in the Book of Exodus? "It is a sign between Me and you throughout your generations."

The failure that I have noticed, and which causes so much distress to all true worshippers of God, does not provide any ground of argument for our opponents that we are not Israel; it only proves that we have not attained to perfection, but that there is still much sin in our midst. And it ought not to be necessary for us to point out to any real Bible student that this presence of a sinful element in Israel is in accord both with Old and New Testament teaching concerning Israel. The tares in the field, the bad fish in the net, these show that the Kingdom of Heaven is not concerned with perfection here, but with growth. And the fact remains that the Anglo-Saxon race, and the Jews, are the only peoples who observe a Day of Rest to keep it holy.

And the mention of the Jews leads me to point out that it is not argumentum ad rem to differentiate between the Sunday and the Sabbath. Saturday or Sunday, either is legitimate for the Day of Rest to be kept holy to the Lord.

It is quite possible that I shall be challenged upon this point. May I therefore remind my readers that the word Sabbath means "Rest," or "Cessation." The Hebrew for "Seventh" is "Shebii." It is quite a mistake to think that "Sabbath" means "Seventh," though it is not difficult to see how the mistake has arisen. For the first reason for keeping the Sabbath, the Rest Day, is that God ceased, or rested, from His labours in Creation on the Seventh Day. In Deuteronomy, the observance of the Sabbath is commanded as a commemoration of Israel's deliverance from bondage in Egypt, this being not so much a different reason, but an additional reason for the keeping of the Sabbath. In each case the emphasis is on the Day of Rest, not on the Seventh.

Two other points must also be noted. First, that the Sabbath of the Bible, of God and of Israel, is not only a Sabbath Day, but a Sabbath Year. I venture to suggest to those who object that our Sunday is the first day of the week and not the seventh, that, to be consistent in their argument, they should keep the Sabbath Year, and I have yet to learn that they make any attempt so to do.

Second, that any attempt to argue that our present Saturday is the seventh day, in strict cycle from either Creation or the Exodus, is bound to fail. No one can dare to say dogmatically that it is. And unless it be proved conclusively that Saturday is actually the seventh day in strict cycle from Creation or the Exodus, the argument of the Seventh Day Adventists, no matter how earnest they may be in their faith and contention, falls to the ground. For all we know, Saturday may be the fourth and Sunday the fifth day of the week, in strict cycle, for not only has the Calendar been changed and reformed half a dozen times in the course of the centuries, but, more important, the Jews in captivity lost their reckoning. We do not read anywhere in the Scripture that they received, on their return from captivity, any inspired direction concerning the Seventh Day; consequently it is pure conjecture to reckon Saturday, as we call it, the seventh day. Indeed, it is not at all unlikely that by His Resurrection on what had become called the First Day of the week, our Lord was restoring the Divine Calendar. For certain it is that the Apostles, according to the New Testament, commemorated the First Day of the week, and made the First Day their day of worship. Consequently, in keeping the First Day of the week as a day of rest, and as a memorial of the Resurrection of the Lord Jesus Christ, we are definitely keeping a Sabbath, a cessation from our labours, and a holy day to the Lord our God. And as we of the Anglo-Saxon race do keep this Sabbath, and as also no other people on earth, but the Jews, keep any Sabbath, our Sabbath remains as the sign between Jehovah and His Israel throughout their generations.

GRACIOUS LIBERTY.

By H. E. Turner.

Duty, of a nature easy* and inspiring, is presented in an especial degree to the British-Israelite. Far different was it in the time of our forefathers, under the leadership of Moses, the great legislator. Their multifarious rites and ceremonies, which appear irksome in our eyes, have few counterparts in the Christian's "perfect law of liberty," to which attention is directed by St. James in his Epistle.

Nevertheless, duty to-day, in its simpler form, is as stringent as when in the past was proclaimed "Fear God and keep His commandments, for this is the whole duty of man."† The Commandments were never more alive and potent than now, though their efficacy has been to a great extent impaired and value lost by the neglect and indifference of Israel. The remedy lies in a general and zealous return to the "law and the testimony."‡

By excellence and Divinity, the law, being perfect, is exalted far above all temporal codes and constitutions. Of this truth the Rev. Dr. Pascoe Goard is our witness:—"We are quite orthodox, then, when we turn to the Gospel of the Kingdom of God. The fact is, that God has established for Himself and for the world a national organization. This national organization is founded on a system of Divine Law, which is given in the Bible and which is the basis of the Common Law of Britain. This national organization is under the direct administration of the Lord God Almighty, in regard to all supreme matters affecting His Kingdom in the world. He allows us self-government in all minor affairs."

"God is still dwelling in the midst of His Kingdom and is still as much as ever the King of His Kingdom-nation, His Law is the only safe system for the guidance of mankind, and for the successful rule of the nations of the earth."

The constitution of the Kingdom of God and the Gospel of the Kingdom, by Divine authority and human testimony established, jointly consist of the Statutes, Judgments and Testimonies of the Law of the Lord, delivered to Moses and the Children of Israel for national administration in general. These contain the Ten Commandments, for personal application in particular. These Commandments it is our supreme duty to study and keep inviolate.

Now let us consider their pre-eminent significance, on the keeping of which depends our national integrity in the enjoyment of those blessings of the Lord God enumerated in the 28th chapter of Deuteronomy, subject to the covenants of chapter xxvi, 17, 19: "Thou hast avouched the Lord this day to be thy God, and to walk in His ways, and to keep His statutes, and His commandments, and His judgments, and to hearken unto His voice: And the Lord hath avouched thee this day to be His peculiar people, as He hath promised thee, and that thou shouldest keep all His commandments; And to make thee high above all nations which He hath made, in praise, and in name, and in honour; and that thou mayest be an holy people unto the Lord thy God as He hath spoken."

It is, moreover, in these latter days that it may be said, the climax has been reached in St. Matthew v, 19: "Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the Kingdom of Heaven: but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great in the Kingdom of Heaven."

Hence the Commandments hold the terrestrial balance in Israel, between life and good and death and evil,§ and in the Kingdom of Heaven between human preferment and abasement. It is recognized by British-Israelites that it is incumbent on us to preach the "Gospel of the Kingdom"; it now becomes plain that we are equally bound to "do and teach" the Ten Commandments, the reading and teaching of which have of recent years been much neglected, and on the few occasions now continuing, there is a tendency to diminish from the Ten all but the two great Commandments, while from many Churches the "Two Tables of the Testimony" have been removed.

This falling away is to be attributed more or less to Roman influence; its rectification is open to the will and endeavours of the House of Israel. If at each British-Israel lecture and public meeting the Ten Commandments were to be read and, after each, the people saying Amen,¶ the time taken up would be two and a half minutes, not merely in thus teaching the Decalogue, but also, in the same operation, the "Gospel of the Kingdom" would be preached throughout the regions of British-Israel and the United States. What a maximum forward movement at a minimum of exertion and cost would thereby be accomplished.

The Law of the Lord forms both the constitution of the Kingdom and the Gospel of the Kingdom. The Kingdom is that of Israel; Israel is identical with Great Britain. Here a delightful revelation is unfolded—the glorious Gospel of the Kingdom to be preached in all the world is one and the same with

THE GLORIOUS CONSTITUTION OF GREAT BRITAIN.

Never again let it be said that Britain has no written constitution; we have it in letters of gold.

The careless question, "What does it matter if we are Israel?" and the shallow query, "What is the good of it?" have now to face the reply: It gives to us the constitution of the Kingdom of God. No earthly matter is of more importance. The good of it is immeasurable, the establishment of the British race by irrevocable decree, and happiness in the covenant of God with Abraham to all the families of the earth

BY A. R. H.

IN the previous article on this series published in the NATIONAL MESSAGE, issue dated September 27th, we commented upon Herr Dibelius'* review of the NATIONAL CHURCH in English life. No review of the religious life of ENGLAND would be complete without a survey of the Nonconformist bodies and the special contribution they make to the religious life of the nation as a whole.

Dibelius is careful to remark upon the gradual change which is coming over the NATIONAL CHURCH in its attitude toward NONCONFORMITY and the ancient claim of the ANGLICAN CHURCH to be "the sole Church in ENGLAND."

Thus he writes: "Anglicanism, in ENGLAND, is not one religious body among many, but to which everyone belongs who has not expressly declared the contrary. Nor is this a merely theoretic claim. Where the religion enters into any public ceremonial—the laying of foundation stones, the opening of Parliament, etc.—the Anglican Church's claims are, as a rule, the only ones considered at all. The primacy of the Anglican Church is contested bitterly by all Dissenters, but it exists in practically undiminished force. It is the source of the power of the CHURCH, which, in turn, acts as a buttress of the STATE."

This conception of the CHURCH and STATE being one body comes down to us from the earliest times. It originated with the formation of the ISRAEL PEOPLE as a NATION in the wilderness of SINAI. SEELEY, in his "Expansion of England," modernized and modified the conception for us to some extent in his famous declaration: "I have always held that religion is the great State-building principle; these Colonists could not create a new STATE because they were already a CHURCH; since the § Deut. xxx, 15. ¶ Deut. xxvii, 26.

* Herr Dibelius, Professor of English in the University of Berlin, has written a book called "England." According to some critics this book ranks in importance with Bryce's "American Commonwealth" and similar classical masterpieces.

CHURCH, so at least I hold, is where there is a CHURCH a STATE grows up in time; but if you find a STATE which is not also in some sense a CHURCH, you find a STATE which is not long for this world."

THE SOUL OF THE STATE;

If this dictum be correct then we have in its truthfulness a further guarantee of the fact that the STATE of BRITAIN is destined to live long and gloriously. For the closeness of relationship and function of CHURCH and STATE in BRITAIN is one of the peculiarities which distinguishes the British from that of any other national organization. There is something infinitely precious and of the greatest practical value in this conception. It is a conception and principle that should be guarded and reserved with utmost jealousy.

We can remain loyal to the ancient claim of the CHURCH of ENGLAND to be the single religious body in ENGLAND and at the same time widen the scope of our thought to give full recognition to the importance of the position of non-conformist bodies.

Dibelius notes the broadening of the old narrow outlook in this respect when he writes: "In November, 1918, the KING, the official head of the CHURCH, took part in a thanksgiving service of all the LONDON FREE CHURCHES. An event like this cannot fail to leave a deep impression upon the English mind."

This great event represented an official recognition long since due. For at least one-half of the professing Christian people of ENGLAND belong to NON-CONFORMIST bodies. This recognition also marks a definite stage in the process of reconciliation which has been greatly accelerated by the late war; a process which all of us hope may be consummated in some definite form of reunion.

Dibelius has some very hard things to say about the Puritanism which he sees dominating the thought of ENGLISH NONCONFORMITY. But his harsh words, whether justified or not, are every whit as illuminating as his words of praise. Hard words break no bones and NONCONFORMITY in ENGLAND is strong enough to bear the brunt of verbal opposition.

According to our German critic, NONCONFORMITY comprises "all those whose piety the CHURCH does not satisfy; drawing mainly from the middle, and, in part from the lower classes of society, men and women whose minds are not apt to be exalted by the æsthetics of worship, whose outlook is too literal for mysticism and whose imaginations are too bounded to be stimulated by the ideal of a universal CHURCH. Here one finds the harsh piety of determined to set up the KINGDOM of GOD and put the Devil under His feet, fighting with relentless self-discipline and merciless severity against whatsoever does not seem to their narrow understanding to be the will of GOD: with harsh intolerance against any dignity in the service of the LORD, as well as against any form of secular pleasure like dancing and music, the theatre and the arts. Men rigorous to the point of asceticism in their lives, often, however, of such crudely materialistic outlook that they expect piety to be rewarded here on earth, and view success in business as a sign of the well-earned favour of HEAVEN."

This is rather going to extremes and paints the picture in too crude and lurid colours. But the importance of the testimony lies in the fact that it recognizes the existence at the back of everything of the dominating idea of the Kingdom of God.

Dibelius finds the same fundamental idea behind the peculiar vitality of the Church in SCOTLAND. We like his reference to the COVENANTERS: "When Charles I attempted to force Anglicanism upon them, the entire people rose, and, on March 1st, 1638, signed the COVENANT—an outstanding example in modern history of an Old Testament bond entered into by a whole nation, filled with religious zeal. The COVENANT finally cost the KING his throne and his life."

Of the position to-day, Dibelius writes: "Calvinism in SCOTLAND interpenetrates the whole people. Here alone in the world the PROTESTANT has the feeling that something like an EVANGELICAL STATE is really possible. Here is the solitary ANGLO-SAXON country where a Christian dogma plays a genuinely dominating part in religious life . . . as the vital faith of a people. Every soul is called to eternal blessedness by GOD, and the Scottish people—and, consequently, the is elected to the rôle played in the early history of religion by the PEOPLE of ISRAEL. To build the KINGDOM of GOD upon earth and impose it upon the STATE is the religious ideal of the Presbyterian."

Puritan doctrine is not very palatable to Professor Dibelius. He now brings all his big guns to bear in a final critical attack. To our German critic, Puritanism is "the religion of a harsh and militant race, which sees ethical progress as a fight between CHRIST and Satan, victory as the subjection of the world to the LORD of HEAVEN.

"Life, for it, is a pilgrimage, a constant struggle with the Powers of Darkness, as described by BUNYAN in a book that every Englishman knows almost by heart. Little here of rapturous feeling of ecstasy, of problems for the soul; the one question that really troubles is, 'Do I belong to the Elect who are to conquer the earth for the Lord?' the one dogma that has really taken root in the popular mind, the issue of grace and predestination.

"The great question for this strenuous generation is the establishment of upon EARTH; far more importance, therefore, attaches to the questions of Christian organization than to 'What think ye of Christ?' or the doctrine of the Real Presence.

"Battle rages over the constitution of the synod and the question of State patronage, for these men go out into the wilderness while Transubstantiation and Christology are left to experts. Harshly and churlishly do they wrestle with their GOD. They give Him honour, make endless sacrifice for the fulfilment of His law, build up a structure of Christian charity to which no other Protestant country affords a parallel; and, at the same time, harbour a crass materialism that regards every flourishing business enterprise as a sign of His favour, and justify their instinctive identification of the rich with the good by the tacit Calvinist assumption that worldly success is a sign of Heavenly grace. This type of CHRISTIANITY is rooted rather in the Old Testament than in the New, and derives in the last analysis from the Jewish doctrine of the holiness of works as interpreted by Saxon peasants."

A very ingenious analysis, Professor, and an ingenious explanation. But the explanation is incomplete. Any type of Christianity which is founded on the Bible at all is bound to be rooted in the Old Testament, whether it draws its inspiration chiefly from Old or New. For both Testaments are interdependent. And the New has absolutely no significance apart from the Old upon which it is based.

The Old Testament clearly teaches that national wealth and material prosperity are God-given.† But is this conception really as crassly materialistic as Herr Dibelius would have us suppose? Jesus raised the conception on a truly spiritual level when He said: "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you."‡

This is exactly what English Puritans have been doing. As Dibelius says, they "wrestle with God; make endless sacrifice; build up a structure of Christian charity to which no other Protestant country affords a parallel." Having first done all these things why should Dibelius complain, on spiritual grounds, that they then come to regard flourishing business enterprise as a sign of Divine blessing? If we find worldly success attending us as a result of our devotion to the Kingdom of God ideal are we at fault in acknowledging the literal fulfilment of the Divine promise? Are we not justified in regarding it as a sign of Heavenly grace?§

It would be criminal to twist this recognition into an identification "of the rich with the good." Such a doctrine is ridiculous and untenable. There is a patent difference between the prosperity attending righteousness and the type of prosperity that flourishes like the green bay tree. We know of no example in the national life where any widespread degeneration of outlook in this respect has taken place. Such a degenerated conception would amount to pure humbug. Some of our conceptions may look like hypocrisy to other nations, but few nations are quicker to detect and ridicule real humbug in their midst than the British.

Now Professor Dibelius turns his big gun on the British-Israel target. "From the Old Testament, too, comes the doctrine peculiar to all forms of English piety and tingling them all with what the Continental observer feels as a repulsive hypocrisy—the idea of the English as

The Chosen People.

Isolated observers drew attention to the intolerable arrogance of the English attitude to other nations even before 1500. But it was the Puritans who gave it an ethical basis, formulated by Milton—the English are what the Jews were, God's chosen people.

"The British Druids constituted a philosophic Cathedral for mediæval France:—the English Constantine—he was by descent a Roman of the East, but commanded the legions of Britain, when he became Emperor!—baptized the Roman Empire: Alcuin brought culture, Wycliffe religion, to the continent of Europe! God, according to Milton, made a second revelation of Himself to His servants, "and, as was His custom, first to His Englishmen." Cromwell's court poet, Edmund Waller, held that Heaven had created this Island in order to promulgate laws, hold the balance in Europe, and instil respect into the peoples of Europe. For the Republican, James Harrington (d. 1677) it was England's plain duty, in opposition to Venice, the merely selfish State, to shed the blessings of its free constitution over the entire globe, as once Rome had done. Even the angels, in the most aggressive National Anthem ever composed, sing 'Rule, Britannia, Britannia rules the waves . . . '"

It is a pity that the Professor should spoil an otherwise delightful little lecture on British-Israel by stigmatizing the whole mental outlook responsible for this vision as being a "proud, wilful, ignorant, obtuseness."

We certainly admit that there is always a danger of such a conception degenerating into something arrogant, dangerous and unworthy. But crude as the idea may have been in the past, no one can deny that great changes and improvements have been taking place in recent times.

Britain, to-day, has a new conception of her rôle as the chosen people. Britain realizes that she is called to become a servant nation to all other nations.[1] We are coming to realize that we shall need the reception of a new heart, a new mind, and a new spirit[2] before we ever become fit to rule.

But Dibelius does not spare us. He fires a heavy broadside at the British-Israel-World Federation: "Though most Englishmen, of course, do not take these assertions more literally than national anthems are wont to be taken, there are still some, not only among the lower classes, who revel in a crass literalness, and take modern Englishmen to be the bodily descendants of the Old Israelites: from the Kingdom of Judah came the Jews who did not recognize Christ and therefore have forfeited salvation; now all the blessings of the Old Testament remain with the descendants of Israel proper, who once upon a time mysteriously found their way to the British shores, and have ever since thrived there under the special blessing of the Lord and shall rule all the Gentiles.

The Lost Tribes,

"A pamphlet of the British-Israel-World Federation sets forth these 'ideas' in their crudest form. No really well-educated Englishman takes these ideas seriously, of course. But they have still a strange attraction for the masses of the half-educated, with a considerable following even in higher circles.

"The educated Englishman may smile at this, but the voice of the humble often utters what is there in never uttered, but persistent with all the tenacity of the subconscious. It cannot be denied that this sort of national pride has developed to a danger to all other nations, and that thus a religious sanction has been given to every form of nationalist egotism."

† Deut. viii, 18, etc. ‡ Matt. vi, 33.

§ Dibelius misunderstands the meaning of the word "grace." He thinks it means Divine favour. But it does not imply favouritism. On the contrary, "grace" means "undeserved love." Of ourselves we can do nothing. And even when we have done all, we are still "unprofitable servants." Cf. Luke xvii, 10. Deep in the heart of the BRITISH NATION lies the knowledge of the truth of racial identity with ISRAEL. Scholarship may smile. But the mind of the average man is often closer to reality than that of the man turned out by Universities.

The truth behind the BRITISH-ISRAEL ideal is sound. The presentation of the truth may often bear the mark of human fallibility and failure.

But under the terms of the new and better covenant GOD has promised His BRITISH PEOPLE

A NEW HEART,

a new mind, and a new spirit. With the advent of a new spirit, crudeness, pride, arrogance, obtuseness, wilfulness, ignorance, and all unworthiness will be swept away into the limbo of forgotten things. To the world will be manifested a new BRITAIN—a HOLY NATION—a KINGDOM of PRIESTS. [3]

AN ADDRESS ON "ISRAEL—THE STONE KINGDOM."

BY JOHN MCNEILL.

No. II.

IT is interesting to note that in Daniel ii, 45, the Hebrew word "tsur" translated elsewhere always as "rock," appears in the Chaldaic form and was translated "mountain." It should be rendered "rock," as in the margin of the Revised Version. A mountain, of course, is nothing but a huge mass of rock, so that the first rendering of the word is not so far off the meaning intended to be conveyed. The reference to the stone cut from the rock but not by hands must indicate a people formed into a kingdom, in a special sense, by Divine agency.

"The God of Heaven will establish an Everlasting Empire and Indestructible—whose Sovereignty will not be transferred to another people. It will subdue and break all the kingdoms, and will stand for ever. And as you saw a stone cut from a rock—but not by hands—which broke the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold; the Great God has revealed to the King what will come after—and the dream is certain, and my interpretation true."

These were stirring times in Babylon. There was widespread anxiety at the Court of King Nebuchadnezzar among the ruling classes and men of education. An Oriental monarch had a dream, and as it filled his mind with forebodings of the future, he was very much disturbed and demanded that the meaning of the dream be disclosed to him. The Empire was one of the greatest this world has seen and possessed men of considerable attainments. These men felt equal to the task of interpreting the dream—whether by study of the stars, or some occult science, is not recorded; they were confident they could give the meaning if only the King would tell them what he had dreamt. But that he could not do.

Such a thing has happened often enough. A person dreams and passes through a succession of events so weird and so vivid that nothing surely could be so firmly impressed on his memory, yet at the moment of awakening, when it would be a relief to tell it to another, at that very moment the details begin to vanish, and though he strains every effort to relate the story of his dream, it is out of his power to do so. It has gone, leaving only the tantalizing feeling that if a little of it could be recalled the whole story might be reconstructed.

What an impossible task for the professors and scientists of Babylon; if the King cannot remember his dream, how are they to tell the meaning of it? Picture the scene in the palace when for the second time they implore him:—"Let the King tell the dream and we will explain its meaning." Only to hear the angry reply:—"I know assuredly that you are putting off, because you discover that the matter has gone from me. If you do not inform me what the dream was—you have one fate; for you utter lies, and rotten contrivances, to talk before me till my mood changes: Look! tell me the dream! when I shall know that you can explain its meaning."

The Colleges of Engineers and Mathematicians are dumb, the Colleges of the Enchanters have nothing to put forward, they see no hope of finding any answer to this problem from their intercourse with magic or the world of evil spirits; and it is left to the heads of the Colleges of Astronomy to make a last appeal.

"There is never a man on earth who is able to accomplish the King's demand. Because no great King or Ruler ever asks such a thing of any engineer, enchanter, or astronomer. And the statement the King demands is tremendous. And besides there is no one who could accomplish it to the King, except the gods, whose dwelling is not in flesh."

Whatever claims they may have made in the history of their Colleges regarding their powers of divination, facing death they now utter only the plain straightforward truth. But with no effect on the angry mood of the King, for being excessively furious, Nebuchadnezzar issues a decree to kill all the wise men of Babylon.

This was ten or twelve years after the Babylonian forces had invaded the Kingdom of Judah, captured Jerusalem, and taken captive King Zedekiah, the nobility, and inhabitants of the city. Four young men, selected from these noble families, had been educated in every science and in the language and knowledge of the astronomers to fit them for appointments in the service of the Empire, so that when the King's decree was issued it affected Daniel and his three companions of Judah, or Jews, as they were just beginning to be called at this time.

This was not the only wholesale deportation which had affected the Kingdom of Judah. There had been another catastrophe of the same kind about 140 years before, when the Assyrian armies had invaded both of the Kingdoms of Israel and Judah.

In 721 B.C. the main body of the Northern Kingdom—ten-tribed Israel—had been carried away by the Assyrians to the region south-west of the Caspian Sea, and eight years later Israel's conqueror, Sennacherib, again swept down, this time on the defenced cities of Judah (the country towns, not Jerusalem), and we are told on his inscriptions preserved in [3] We are glad that Professor Dibelius has mentioned the British-Israel-World Federation, even though his reference is couched in somewhat unkindly terms. His book has been widely acclaimed. In Germany alone it has been published in five editions. It is now being read in translation throughout the whole of Anglo-Saxondom. Dibelius is hostile to our Gospel but he has helped to bring the facts of its existence before the notice of thousands who are normally beyond the reach of our own propaganda.

The Professor refers to a pamphlet printed eight years ago (1922).

the British Museum that the number of cities taken was forty-three and that he carried away captive "200,000 men of Judah." (A. H. Sayce.)

This forced migration must have taken away a very large, if not the larger portion of the tribe of Judah to the same region as the tribes of Israel eight years before; and it is more than likely that when Israel escaped one hundred years later and trekked into Europe, those of Judah would accompany them in their migrations, reappearing later possibly under the name of Jutes.

When Babylon rose to power, and their armies took the survivors in Judah who had been left by the Assyrian invasion, the captives were placed in districts on the Euphrates a considerable distance east and south of the land in Assyria in which their brethren had been held, so that Daniel's nation, his friends and relatives (if any), were fairly close to the great city of Babylon. Some commentators have taken the view that he wrote his Book to give encouragement to his own nation of Judah, but as against this view we must remember that he was well aware of the whereabouts of the Israel people—a much more numerous and powerful nation than Judah.

In his prayer, chapter ix, 7:—". . . . confusion of faces belongs to us, to the men of Judah, ... and unto all Israel, that are near, and that are far off, through all the countries whither thou hast driven them because of their trespass that they have trespassed against thee." In this prayer of Daniel's, the full confession is made that—as it had been written in the law of Moses (Leviticus xxvi, 14-18)—this evil had come upon them.

Moses and all the prophets had reminded the Israelites that their nation had been specially chosen to fulfil a certain high destiny, that they had been taught from the beginning of nationhood, trained in every detail, given the statutes, laws, and judgments of the Lord, warned of their responsibilities, and counselled and urged repeatedly to keep a straight course in order to win their promised inheritance. As Moses, and other leaders, had also warned them, failure would entail a severe punishment, lasting over a period of "seven times" (2,520 years), during which time the memory of themselves—as Israel—would fade away, and they would become a people under a new name and speaking another tongue.

When studying Daniel's prophecy, we are reminded of our school days when we had to solve mathematical problems involving an unknown quantity. An equation has to be set down:—"Let x equal the number which has to be found." Then we had to find other factors bearing on the problem, add them to the equation, and find the solution.

In our search for the identity of the Stone Kingdom we can see three such factors:—

(1) It was in existence in Nebuchadnezzar's day. It is so stated in the narrative.

(2) It must be in existence at the present day. It is called Everlasting.

(3) It must be war-like, a fighting race. The prophecy states that it would cause the overthrow of the Empires and the kingdoms succeeding these Empires.

Then, as it is the unanimous belief of students of prophecy of all schools—not necessarily British-Israelites—that we are nearing the close of the age, and as, in the belief of many whose opinion is worthy of respect, 90 per cent. of the prophecies have been fulfilled, we can reasonably deduce from the second and third factors another, namely:—

(4) It must, at the present time, show conclusively a strong vitality and expectation of long life.

So, to history we turn to discover which nations were in existence in Nebuchadnezzar's day, have been in conflict with the Continental Empires and kingdoms, and exist to-day—still in conflict and still victorious.

We shall have to rule out of count the Asiatic peoples, such as China and India, because while in existence then we cannot trace them in the decline and fall of the Empires; nor need we look to the Continents of North and South America; the ancient Empires of Mexico and Peru have vanished; nor to the Continent of Africa; Carthage has gone, and Egypt, once powerful, was conquered long ago by the Grecian Empire and never regained its old splendour. Only a European people will give a satisfactory answer to the problem, from the considerations of length of existence and contact and conflict with the various Empires of the dream.

As previously mentioned, history identifies four great Empires as having been symbolized in the figure of the Image, beginning with the head of gold, the breast or upper trunk of silver, the lower trunk and thighs of brass, the legs of iron, and a number of other powers represented by the feet of part iron and part clay.

The head of gold represented the Babylonian Empire under Nebuchadnezzar. Daniel said to the King, "Thou art the Head of Gold."

'But after you, another Kingdom will arise; and a third Kingdom of brass; and a fourth Kingdom that will be as strong as iron, because as iron breaks and crushes all so it will break all in pieces and crush.' (F.F.)

After the fall of Babylon the Medo-Persian Empire rose, it is clearly typified by the trunk of silver; then the Grecian Empire under Alexander, typified by the brass; then the Roman Empire, the iron power. Succeeding Rome have risen a number of Continental Powers—Spain, France, Austria, Germany, and Russia.

You will notice that, in interpreting the dream, Daniel does not give the identity of the people who are to affect so vitally the destiny of Babylon, and later to help in the fall of the Empires which are prophesied as succeeding Babylon. He stops short of any explanation which would direct attention to that nation.

We saw that the ten tribes had been subjugated by the great Assyrian Power between the years 771 and 676 B.C.—the main body being removed to Assyria about 721 B.C. From this time onward, these tribes, which formed the Northern Kingdom of Israel, drop out of Bible history, though they continue to hold a prominent part in prophecy, and are also referred to in many passages in the New Testament and by the writers of the Epistles. The ancient name of Assyria was Gutium, hence the captives by degrees came to be known as the "People of Guta."

In 700 B.C. Babylonia rebelled against Assyria. In 652 another rebellion took place, which was the first in a series of blows leading to the downfall of the Assyrian Empire. The Scythians (Turanian barbarians of the lowest type from Southern Russia) broke through the Caucasus and ravaged Western Asia for twenty-eight years. In 625 there was general revolt; the Babylonians, with the Medes, marched against Nineveh and besieged it. Egypt came up against Carchemish. A little later Nineveh fell. The garrisons holding the Israel people in check having been withdrawn, the tribes took the opportunity to escape into Southern Europe. In the Caucasus Mountains, one of the important passes bears to this day the name, "The Gate of Israel."

Digitized by Google

Professor Rawlinson states that the European Scythians were not of the same race as the Asiatic Scythians. Herodotus describes these people as "former colonists of the Medes." Diodorus Siculus, writing of the Scythians, says:—"Amongst others were two remarkable colonies that were drawn out of the conquered nations by those kings; the one they brought out of Assyria . . . . the other out of Media."

Here Israel apparently agreed to separate. Two tribes—Ephraim and Manasseh—went westward to Ar Sereth and settled on the Danube, calling themselves the "Getae." You will remember the captives while in Assyria had been known as the "people of Guta." Dan appears to have dropped off and become the Thyssa-Getae, while the seven remaining tribes, calling themselves the Massagetae, wandered round the Caspian, and settled east of that Sea in Eastern Scythia. Herodotus describes these Scythians as "a strong and valiant nation dwelling toward the sunrising beyond the Araxes," also saying of them, "they claim to be the youngest of the races, with a history only going back 1,000 years." That would take us back to the time of the Exodus, when Israel became first a people. Another writer says they had "just and good laws."

It was to the Massagetae that Ezekiel was sent about 593 B.C. to seek their aid on behalf of the Jews against Babylon. This aid was, however, refused, and the Jews from that time ceased to call them Israel.

In 538 B.C., however, an assembly of great nations was brought against Babylon from the north country; in the cylinder of Cyrus it is shown that the "people of Guta" now joined forces with Cyrus. He was the young King of Persia, while Darius, his uncle, was King of Media.

On the night of Belshazzar's great feast to a thousand of the lords of the Empire, when, heated by wine, he sent for the sacred vessels his grandfather, Nebuchadnezzar, had carried away from the Temple in Jerusalem, and he and his princes drank out of them, Cyrus and Darius diverted the current of the Euphrates, and their armies—of which the Massagetae were the vanguard—entered the city by the two-leaved water-gates. That night the king was slain and the Babylonian Empire fell.

Not long after these events Cyrus conceived the idea of becoming King over the Massagetae, and on their refusal, the Persian army inflicted a serious defeat on them, slaying a third part of their army in one battle; but in 529 B.C. at the battle of the Araxes, Cyrus was in his turn conquered and slain by the Massagetae. Herodotus records this; while according to prophecy, Cyrus was to be killed by Israel. Both Isaiah and Jeremiah designated him as the "shepherd." In Jeremiah li, 20, the prophet, speaking of Israel first, says:—"Thou art my battle axe and weapons of war; for with thee will I break in pieces the nations, and with thee will I destroy kingdoms; . . . . I will also break in pieces with thee the shepherd and his flock."

Darius, successor to Cyrus, now threatened the Massagetae, and attempts at union were made between them and the Getae; which having failed, in the year 513 B.C. Darius led an army of 700,000 against the Massagetae. Although the expedition was not successful, it drove the nation farther inland to the grazing lands between the Don and the Dneiper, where for some centuries they settled in the region of Asgard and became a scourge to the Greek settlements on the Black Sea. Being driven by Darius into the northern wilds of Scythia, seven-tribed Israel had become Norse-men (or Northmen) and passed now under the name of the Asar, which in Norse corresponds to the Getic name Angle.

For about 700 years the two tribes, Ephraim and Manasseh, known as the Getae, lived in those districts known to the Greeks as Scythia, but to the Romans as Dacia (now Roumania) and Thrace. Jordanis states that Julius Cæsar, "who conquered all nations" was unable to prevail against the Getae. He was planning a campaign against them when he was assassinated at Rome. In the days of Augustus Cæsar, at the time of Christ, the influence of this people extended from the Black Sea along the Danube to the neighbourhood of Vienna; their army numbered some 250,000 disciplined warriors, and as was happening amongst their kinsfolk, the Asar, their leaders were stirring up a strange ferment. A few years before Christ, religious zeal had seized upon the people; in one year they, the "drunkards of Ephraim," had gone forth at the command of their priests and uprooted every vineyard in their country. "A quiver of apprehension," we are told, "spread through the Roman Empire at the mere rumour that the Getae—or Dacians, as the Romans called them—were preparing to move. Daily men asked, 'What news from Dacia?'"

"TRUE BIBLE CHRONOLOGY."*

MR. BASIL STEWART'S NEW BOOK.

"Chronology is the backbone of history."—PETRIE.

THE continued, increasing and world-wide "distress of nations," economic, social and ecclesiastical, together with the seismic and atmospheric disturbances of the present time (Santo Domingo being only the most recent), are reminders to the observant and should be a warning to the careless, that one of the great crises of world-history is close upon us.

At such a time it is well to furnish ourselves with the results of the careful investigations of specialist students of Bible Chronology, that, without intruding into the secret things which God hath reserved to Himself, we may at least learn to watch as those who wait for the morning.

Mr. Basil Stewart's new book, "True Bible Chronology," is a careful attempt to put us in possession of certain critical dates, which ascertained, we may the better be enabled to realize the momentous gravity of the time in which we are living, and to co relate the events, national and international, which are occurring in rapid succession before our eyes.

To the unobservant, "nothing is happening," or "Well, yes; but things always have happened, always will happen." "As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be . . ."

Mr. Stewart's detailed exposition of Chronology is derived solely from the statements of the Bible, and corroborated from other sources. One of those sources is "The Great Pyramid's Chronograph," which, agreeing accurately with history and prophecy set forth in Holy Scripture, may well be called "The Bible in Stone."

The apparent—and it was only apparent—non-fulfilment of the Pyramid prophecy for May, 1928, caused a sceptical reaction. But this is passing, and there are already indications that observant people are beginning to see that precisely from May and early June, 1928, the "distress of nations" has been steadily increasing in many directions, of which the disastrous increase in unemployment is only one.

Therefore a book such as the one under review helps us to "take our bearings," and to confirm our faith in the prophecies of the Book. The work is written in the clear and concise style to which readers of Mr. Stewart's previous books are accustomed. He has the gift of translating abstruse subjects into language "understanded of the people." H. H.

WITH AN HIGH HAND.

(Exodus xiv, 8.)

BY J. R. STEVENSON.

IN the film of "The Ten Commandments," the artist, in portraying the Exodus, has failed to show this attitude of the departing Israelites. What is the meaning of the gesture? The Egyptians adored the leading sign of the Zodiac, because therein was found the equinoctial point of Spring—and source of the Nile (Rev. R. Taylor, B.A.). Lower Egypt in Ptah adored the Bull, but Upper Egypt which had detected precession, adored Amen or Ammon in the Ram or Lamb; while the mystics of the monotheistic Hebrews regarded the sun when in the sign of the Lion, recalling the inundation or yeor on June 26th, as the most marvellous manifestation of the Power of the Heaven Father, otherwise Elion, the Most High God. Jacob Bryant states that the Egyptians believed that the moment of creation arrived when Sol rose in the North-Eastern horizon in Leo. Moreover, the Egyptians believed that Sol was light solidified and gold his earthly representative, wherefore the emblem of Royal Judah (Numbers ii, 2, 3) was "blood red, a golden lion rampant." (See Globe 26.7.19.) Sol arrives over Regulus in the Heart of the Lion at the present day on August 23rd, but more than 4,000 years ago, this occultation happened during the end of June.

To this day, the Scotsman, with uplifted palm, swears by Almighty God. The red lion rampant with right paw elevated and extended. Is Scotland's Royal standard that of Zarah Judah? The first "difference" in Heraldry, "the shorthand of History," is exchange of colours. Compare ensigns of England and Denmark, also of Scotland and Nova Scotia. Is the date of the solar mythos of the wise men and mystics the same as that of the Great Pyramid, each of the base lines of which measures 365,242 cubits, viz.: 2144 B.C.?

THE SALVATION OF ISRAEL.

BY E. M. FOSTER.

STATESMEN have exhorted us to pull together and to put our whole weight to the task. They have been making this appeal ever since the (first) Armistice, and looking round we are aware of a feeble response. Do not let us blame the Nation entirely but rather its leaders, the "shepherds" of Israel, who are permitting their sacred charges to wander in every mountain and every high hill. There are, we know, many loyal servants of the State who try their several remedies, but never the right one.

If they would only hear our message! The time has come when a national recognition that Britain is Israel can alone save our land from the long period of stress ahead. It means that we are the chosen race of God, that the Holy One of Jacob is our Protector, and that if we give Him our love and have utter confidence in His Holy Word, He will shorten our tribulation.

The Divine theme in the beginning is the Nation, not the Church. When the Bible speaks of the setting up of the Church it has a special message for this sacred institution, but it never transfers national rights to the ecclesiastical authorities. The Covenants were made to the Nation, not to the Church. Our Lord preached the Kingdom of Heaven, not the Church of Heaven. It is no idle figure of speech when we Britons extol the Divine calling of our land. It was indeed at Heaven's command that Britain rose out of the sea.

When our people realize this, then will they have found the sovereign remedy for national and private troubles. They will flock into the churches to sing whole-heartedly the Psalms of their ancestors. The words take on new meaning. In those days Britain will have burst her shackles and with eager eyes will await the dawning of "the bright and morning star." Then will she "tell it out among the heathen that the Lord is King."

"That prayer which does not succeed in moderating our wishes—in changing the passionate desire into still submission, the anxious, tumultuous expectation into silent surrender—is no true prayer, and proves that we have not the spirit of true prayer."—F. W. ROBERTSON.

* * *

"We have assurance that we shall be heard in what we pray, because we pray to thank God that heareth prayer, and is the rewarder of all that come unto Him; and in His Name, to whom God denieth nothing; and, therefore, howsoever we are not always answered at the present, or in the same kind that we desire, yet, sooner or later, we are sure to receive even above that we are able to ask or think, if we continue to sue unto Him according to His will."—ARCHBISHOP USHER.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

OUR eleventh Congress opened on Monday with two very fine meetings and magnificent audiences—a most encouraging beginning of the week's meetings. The President of the B.-I.-W.F., Major J. Knowles, O.B.E. made the opening speech, and he welcomed the venerable Rev. Mark Jukes, who, notwithstanding his 88 years, made the journey all the way from Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada; Chancellor Du Bois, who came from Chicago; and Arthur Exley, Esq., J.P., the President of our Brisbane Branch, each of whom responded. Addresses were then delivered by the Rev. Dr. Goard and John Leech, Esq., M.A., K.C.

In the evening Dr. Goard presided in the unavoidable absence of Major Rigg, and the Rev. Maxwell Carnson, Mr. Herbert Garrison and Mr. John J. Morey gave addresses. A message was sent to His Majesty the King; and a standing vote of sympathy was offered to the relatives of those lost in the terrible air disaster.

The present issue contains the 100th Week by Week article, and A. R. H. would like to celebrate his "century" by taking this opportunity of thanking the many readers who have written, from time to time, expressing appreciation of Week by Week. It has been impossible to answer each correspondent separately, and A. R. H. feels that this anniversary provides the opportunity for thanking all his correspondents for their kindness.

THE BIBLE TELLS THE TRUTH.

GOD'S CHOSEN PEOPLE ISRAEL.

BRITAIN HAS ISRAEL'S PLACE AND DOES ISRAEL'S JOB.

THE REV. MAXWELL CARNSON AT BRADFORD-ON-AVON.

On the 22nd of September, Bradford audiences twice heard Mr. Carnson speak on the subject of British-Israel.

In the afternoon he emphasized two bodies of facts which, whatever critics may think of them, and however they may be interpreted, still remain indubitable facts. The first is a vast literature, dating back to a period of at least 2,000 years ago, which speaks of a nation, Israel, chosen by God to be and do certain things at certain definite historical periods. Mr. Carnson clearly pointed out that, however much the modern critic of the Bible strives to explain away the statements made in this literature, he cannot affect the fact of the existence of the literature. That literature is an actual phenomenon with which we have to deal.

The second body of fact, separated by a wide interval from the first, is that vast entity known as the British Empire. Here, again, no matter how you criticize the Empire or how you oppose it, the mere fact of its existence cannot be avoided.

Admit the mere existence of these two facts, the literature and the Empire, widely separated by thousands of years. Bring the two side by side, and they tally exactly. There is an exact fitting together of the two. The logical conclusion is that the Israel of the literature and the Empire of to-day are one and the same. How may this be accounted for?

(a) Did the writers of the literature know what they were describing? No, certainly not—for they received only a small portion each of the whole picture.

(b) Has the Empire been consciously built to fit the picture? No, for the Empire has been a gradual growth of many generations.

We are compelled to believe that behind the literature, and looking through the writers and down the perspective of the ages to the full fruition of His design, was a Divine Mind: that God planned His purpose, revealed it through His prophets, and is fulfilling it in the Anglo-Saxon race. That purpose goes on into the future, that through us all nations shall be blessed. When God is once again glorified in us, in our righteousness and truth, our purity and love, then all nations will come to share the blessings and enter into the same Covenant relation with God. So "the kingdoms of this world shall become the Kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ."

Later, Mr. Carnson pointed out very forcefully that the only "Gospel" Jesus preached, and sent His disciples to preach, was the "Gospel of the Kingdom," for in His days the Cross had not been manifested, and the Gospel of Salvation had not been declared. The Apostles, to judge by the accounts in "The Acts," always preached the Kingdom: Peter at Pentecost and later: Stephen before his murderers: Paul before Agrippa, and in his hired house at Rome. Jesus' Own declaration was "This Gospel of the Kingdom must first be preached in all nations, and then shall the end come."

The final appeal was for a re-dedication to the Christ Who died on the Cross for our sins, and a speedy bringing of the nation to repentance and prayer to Almighty God that He should undertake for us all that we cannot do for ourselves.

MESSAGE FROM PROFESSOR ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc.

On behalf of the British-Israel Associations of Major Vancouver and Western Canada, I venture a few words of greeting to the great Congress now being held in London, the head and heart of the world.

We pray the "Lord God of Israel" to bless and guide the Congress of British-Israelite delegates, loyal friends and co-workers in their great enterprise of learning, teaching, inspiring, organizing and advancing the work of the age-long chosen servants of humanity.

We would gladly be with you to sit at the feet of your many great and expert teachers; and especially to come under the inspiring, uplifting influence of those who have had close communion with our Heavenly Father, and are truly the children of God. We, in truth, would be delighted and uplifted if we could be counted as present when the "roll call" takes place; but we seem to be unable to join in your splendid work this year.

In the Name of our Master and Great Leader, go forward, and fully realize that the Word stands; yea, more, that it goes forward, is working, gripping tens of thousands, and is proceeding to final triumph and a universal victory of national and human salvation.

We, on our part, march forward in the ranks of an ever-increasing army on its way to do the work of God, the work of which is to "bless all the nations of the earth."

Though absent in body, we are a mighty force in the outlying parts of the Empire, and are truly present in spirit. God bless you all, and especially our Empire's noble Royal Family, the exalted leaders of our "Company of Nations."

A GENEROUS TRIBUTE.

Because he admires the uncomplaining courage with which Britain shouldered the world's burdens during the War and the dogged cheerfulness with which she faced her post-War troubles, Mr. Edward S. Harkness, the American railway king, has given £2,000,000 to be spent for the good of the country from which his ancestors came.

The feeling which has inspired him to found what will be known as the Pilgrim Trust is summed up in the preamble he has written in the Trust Deed :—

"Whereas it is acknowledged by all that Great Britain in the War spent her resources freely in the common cause, and, in the years that have elapsed since Peace, has sustained, honourably and without complaint, a burden which has gravely increased the difficulties of life for her people And Whereas by the bounty of Providence America has of late enjoyed an ample measure of prosperity and the donor himself has been blessed with worldly means And Whereas the donor feels himself bound by many ties of affection to the land from which he draws his descent And Whereas it seems to him that it is right for a private American citizen to show his admiration of what Britain has done by a gift to be used for some of her more urgent needs And Whereas he is in hopes that such a gift, wisely applied, may assist not only in tiding over the present time of difficulty, but in promoting her future well-being——."—From the Evening News.

THE TRIUMPH OF BRITISH-ISRAEL TRUTH.*

By the Rev. James Mountain, D.D.

Major Knowles, our President, has accurately described Dr. Mountain's new book in three words : "This scholarly book." Scholarly it is, and written with all the simple directness of style which we expect from the veteran and venerable author.

It is an armoury of evidence, which summarizes the main points of attack, refutes the opponent and at the same time forms a concise statement of the British-Israel case, positive as well as negative. It will be the more valuable because it is the result—not of sudden conviction, but of sixty years' careful and dispassionate study of cumulative evidence, which finally overcame the author's reluctance to receive and adopt what was, in his own words, "a new and an unpopular theory." Dr. Mountain has been a great traveller, and it was as he "travelled round the world and beheld the greatness of the British Empire," that the necessity of finding an adequate explanation of this tremendous phenomenon favoured the growth of the seed within his mind and heart. "It was not, however, until after the lapse of twenty years," says the author, "that my decision was made. I became a convinced British-Israelite. Such I remain to-day in my 88th year, but more fully convinced than ever after all these years of calm and patient investigation." This brief notice is not intended to be more than a preparatory announcement of a book of the first importance, a book which will soon find its place in the hands of countless readers in every part of the Empire, who with an unprejudiced mind will accept the guidance of this modest and greatly courteous fellow-student of a theme so vital to the understanding of that infinitely greater Book to which British-Israel Truth is the master-key.

An account of the remarkable unconscious testimony of several Historians never before used in British-Israel evidence, which is shown to exactly fit in with the picture Scripture draws of the Scattered, Outcast, Wandering, Lost Ten-Tribed Israel led to the British Isles, and destined ultimately to become a blessing to the whole world. A remarkable Book, which strengthens every link in the British-Israel Chain. A work showing very deep research and productive of a fund of new corroborative evidence from outside sources.

A most amazing book. Its breadth of scope takes away the breath. Authorities of all races, and speaking all tongues, have been laid under contribution. Not by the pen of the writer, but by his researches, by his quotations from these world-famous authorities he proves the British-Israel case. It is unanswerable.

Rev. W. Pascoe Goard writes in his Foreword:—

"I know of no man living who has carried on wider research than has Professor Odlum . . . he has brought together in this book samples of the opinions and contributions of the world's great scholars to the great truth that the Celto-Saxon peoples are the people chosen and ordained of God to carry out His great national purposes . . . No such compendium will be found elsewhere."

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel Truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation ; the inheritors of her Charters ; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction ; the executors of her commissions.

It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.

CONGRESS ONCE MORE.

BY THE REV. DR. W. PASCOE GOARD, F.R.G.S.

IT has been my privilege and experience to go on three journeys during the past year. In the first instance it has been my privilege to make an annual progress to and fro across the Continent of North America, and to and fro across the North Atlantic Ocean. In these peregrinations by sea and land I have travelled some twenty thousand miles.

It has further been mine to find myself on a conveyance which has whirled me along during all the year to the tune of something like 7,000,000 miles ! Diurnal revolutions.

Still further, in the very same conveyance it has been my experience to be whirled along to the tune of some six hundred millions of miles ! ! Annual orbit around the sun.

On the progress across the Atlantic it was brought to my mind that just about fifty years ago, on the good ship Polynesian, it was my privilege to preach the Gospel of our Lord in mid-Atlantic, or at least somewhere east of the Grand Banks of Newfoundland. It was also brought to my mind that in connection with the British-Israel-World Federation, I was making the twentieth crossing of the Continent and Atlantic Ocean, and rounding out nearly ten years of strenuous service. How great have been the changes since the first of this series of journeys it is refreshing to remember.

Landing on the outward journey, we were at once greeted at Montreal, and had a good time with the members and friends there, as we gathered for an evening meeting. Then on to Toronto, where we had a mission, a meeting with the Executive of the Toronto Branches, and a meeting with the Ontario Executive Council.

Thence we went on to Detroit, Michigan, in the U.S.A. There we met the representatives of the Movement from all America from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from the Canadian to the Mexican Border. The Convention was marked with the usual good fellowship of the B.-I. people, and with intense spirituality and power. Great things will come as a sequel to the first united gathering as the friends of the Movement find each other, and as the organization gathers power. Mr. Howard Rand, LL.B., the tireless Secretary, is doing yeoman service towards this end.

On from thence to the great wheat centre of the Continent, the City of Winnipeg. Here we met the local enthusiastic people in large public gatherings, and the Executive body of the whole Dominion. What a time it was, as we looked forward to the full organization of the work all over that great Dominion, which is an Empire within itself.

On again, and we were at Calgary, under the shadow of the Rocky Mountains, if we may be allowed to speak in a figurative way. Actually the mountain ranges begin some fifty miles west of Calgary. The City is at the foot of the rolling space of prairie country which constitutes the " foot hills." These in themselves are beautiful rolling prairies. Two splendid meetings were held in the large Hall of the Public Library. Then we are on our way again through that wilderness of beauty, the Canadian Rocky Mountains. After twenty-seven hours of travel through bewildering beauty we arrived at HOME, in the fair City of Vancouver. The beaches of the City are washed with the tide waters of the Pacific Ocean, and there the railway and the ocean-going steamers meet. What a glorious setting, of sea and mountain, valley and river, delta and inlet, Vancouver enjoys.

Some days at rest at home, and then four great days, afternoon and evening, in the Moose Hall, where the people gathered to worship and enjoy the great truths of the Gospel of the Kingdom.

Two weeks or so later we retraced our way across the mountains and prairies to meet the Chancellor, Dr. Du Bois, the Faculty, the Alumni, and the Graduating Class, of the Chicago Law School. We had three days of most intensely interesting association, and the enjoyment of, and participation in, the commencement exercises, and then back again across prairies and mountains to Vancouver and home. This meant seven days and nights of train travel.

Thereafter, we found ourselves at sea on the Pacific waters for a ninety miles' journey to the Provincial Capital, Victoria, and there enjoyed the privilege of two days of meetings, afternoon and evening, and of renewing many warm friendships.

After some weeks of home work and some rest, again we are convened in Moose Hall, Vancouver, for the first of the return meetings. What an interesting time it was, with the manifested Presence of that God whom Professor Julian Huxley does not know, according to his own statement. How very much he misses is a fact well known to millions of experimental Christians.

Once more the rails are clicking their progress off beneath our feet as we climb the west slope of the mountains, and make the descent on the eastern side. In the process we are lifted once and again a mile above sea level, and then are brought down to tide water level, on the east coast.

Calgary once more turns out for a bumper meeting, from which many have to turn away for want of even standing room.

Straight through across a thousand miles of prairie to Winnipeg, where for twenty scanty minutes we have a word with Dr. Wadge, and with a Jewish friend who is an enthusiastic British-Israelite, who buttresses his knowledge with authorities, both Jewish and Christian, from the libraries of Europe, Britain and America.

Then, after two days' further travel, we arrive at Toronto, and hold a two days' mission there, and so on to Montreal, and the good ship Duchess of Athol, which is to bring us back to England once more. At Montreal we meet our friends, Chancellor Du Bois, of the Chicago Law School, and Rev. Mark Jukes, of Vancouver, both of whom are on their way for the great Congress in London.

Seven days of pleasant sailing and we are rushing across England from Liverpool for Headquarters, at 6, Buckingham Gate, and the great Congress.

And so here we are again, among the friends who have gathered from the ends of the earth, and are caught up in the spirit of the mighty gatherings. What the Congress has been, and what has been done at it, will be told in the columns which follow, and in the issues which will succeed this one. It will take many columns and many issues to tell the wonderful story of this the greatest of all Congresses it has been our privilege to attend. This story will be written by other hands.

OUR CONGRESS DAY BY DAY.

VARIORUM CONGRESS NOTES BY REV. MAXWELL CARNSON, MR. J. J. MOREY, Etc.

Monday, October 6th, 1930.

This wonderful week commences with the sun shining brightly in a sharp clear air. The thrill and "tang" of our London climate is echoed in the spirit of adventure with which we approach the Congress meetings.

It is fitting that the very first meeting of the week should be the gathering of the Clerical and Ministerial Association at Headquarters, where ministers of all the Churches gather round the feet of Dr. Goard as their teacher. It is not less fitting that we commence with prayers of intercession, accompanied, though not interrupted, by the music of the Guards' Band as the soldiers of King George pass to their duties at the Palace across the road.

The atmosphere of this room wherein we sit is that of the "inner sanctuary." One feels that here we shall generate the spiritual power without which the Congress will fail of its object; while we are certain also to be led, as we are at this moment, into the deep places of spiritual illumination, under the guidance of the Spirit Himself, Who has promised to lead us into all the truth.

No series of Congress meetings can be started without remembrance of those who were once of our number, but who now are prevented from being here. We miss, for the first time since there were Conferences, our veteran and greatly beloved Rev. Commander Roberts, who did not feel equal to the strain and journey, and to whom Dr. Goard makes fitting reference. Dr. Mountain, also, now enjoying a well-earned rest after the arduous labours of preparing, at his advanced age, his greatest work, "The Triumph of British-Israel," is not with us, but we rejoice to hear that he will be here later. Other brethren also, whose Sunday duties hold them, will be in the company to-morrow, but they will have missed the special treat and joy of to-day. We remember them all in prayer.

Immediately, as is his wont, our leader takes us right into the centre of the things that matter. In Roman ix-xi, we are "in the heart of the New Testament, and in the heart of the Evangelical teaching of the New Testament."

The line of thought which follows is incisive, constructive and challenging. The "Gentiles" of Romans are the Ethnos, Ten-tribed Israel. Paul cites Elijah, Hosea and Isaiah as witnesses of this fact. In God's plan, Israel is God's Priest, a devoted Nation. The congregation to whom this Priest-Nation ministers is made up of the nations of the world, the Goyim. What the Tribe of Levi was to Israel, that the Ethnos, the Israel Nation, is to the Goyim, the nations of the world.

Within this chosen Priest-Nation, who are the Election of Race, there is left, alas, but a very small remnant of true believers, the Election of Grace. When the whole Nation becomes the Election of Grace, as well as the Election of Race, then is the Millennium.

So St. Paul reaches the climax and force of his whole argument. "I beseech you THEREFORE, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice . . . . ."

The call, you see, is to absolute surrender and consecration, without which the Revival will not come. Consecration begins at the House of God, in the priesthood, which is the heart of the life of the Church, which is the heart of the life of the Nation.

We come out again into the life around us, to its social amenities, to its claims upon our time and attention, feeling, not that we have left behind us in this quiet room the Spirit Who has been with us, but that He has come forth with us; that it is He Who sends us on to the life of this strenuous week of Congress; and we KNOW, from this hour, that the Congress will achieve its end.

Monday Afternoon.—We are at the Central Hall, Westminster. The great staircase is crowded, an excellent augury for the size of this opening meeting. The bustle of conversation is on every hand. Old friendships are being renewed and new ones are being formed. There is an air of happy expectancy on the faces of all who have attended former Congresses; one notices large numbers of strangers who seem to be wondering why the delight and why the good humour manifested by these thronging crowds. As one visitor from Overseas remarked, "Well, at any rate, I have never seen a happier-looking crowd than these British-Israelites." To which a fervent believer replied, "That is because we are the only people who know how to be happy in these chaotic days."

Now the hall is filling up. Though it is an afternoon meeting, and a Monday afternoon at that, the floor is completely full; one can see at the most half-a-dozen vacant seats, and there are more people standing at the back of the hall than will fill the vacancies. One is delighted at the number of men who have managed to be present at this afternoon session; where shall we put the additional numbers who will be here to-night?

Exactly at the appointed time, the speakers file on to the platform, led by Major Knowles, the President. A roar of applause greets Dr. Goard, as always, and Mr. Garrison; and others come in for their meed of welcome from the audience. It is good to see our leaders once again. They look no worse, at this distance, for a strenuous year of work and of travel; though those who are in the know whisper that the strain under which they are labouring is almost beyond human endurance. One would imagine that British-Israel teaching must be the long-lost elixir of life for which the ancients sought; one does know that it is only the power of prayer, and the help of our Covenant-keeping God, that carries our leaders through.

The platform fills up with clergy and ministers of various denominations, who delight to meet on the common ground of belief in the faithfulness of God to His Promises; men and women, too, are there from North, South, East and West, who are giving their time and strength to the proclamation of the Gospel of the Kingdom in many parts of the world.

We unite with all our hearts in the singing of "O God, our help in ages past." We hear the Word of God read to us in the 12th chapter of Isaiah; we bow our heads and are led in prayer right through to the Throne of Grace.

Twice over the Chairman calls us to our feet, once in gladness to send a loyal message to our King at his home in Sandringham; and again, alas, in silent prayer for those whose hearts are torn by the terrible disaster to R 101.

Now Major Knowles introduces the Overseas delegates, who each make a characteristic reply. The Rev. Mark Jukes, of Canada, a veteran of almost ninety, but young enough yet to make this world-extended journey and to fire us with his words of faith and cheer; Chancellor Du Bois, of the Law School of Chicago, who "grapples us to his soul with hoops of steel"; Mr. Arthur Exley, the President of our Brisbane Branch, Australia, who speaks as a Britisher and wants to welcome America—and is it also all the world?—into that name and that privilege. We are glad to see these world-citizens, "fellow-citizens of the Kingdom of God on earth," as Dr. Goard calls them and us.

We miss Mr. Complin, of Sydney, who will be addressing us later in the week, and we are disappointed at not having Professor Odlum. The Secretary-General reads a letter of greeting from him, and cheers us with the promise of a long visit very soon.

Now Dr. Goard rises, to round after round of applause, and we prepare for a strenuous half-hour of attention. It is well worth it. With characteristic emphasis, with the simplicity which only real mastery gives, and with the deliberation of one who knows exactly where he is taking us, we are shown the downfall of Empire after Empire, until not one is left. "It will be remembered that Britain itself now signs its Treaties 'For and on behalf of the British Commonwealth of Nations.'"

"The downfall of Empires does not mean the downfall of Civilization, for Empire and Civilization are not synonymous terms. Civilization is 'the organization of the life of peoples based upon the two elements of Faith and Law; Faith to CALL people together, and Law to discipline them and BIND them together.'"

Briefly, then, Dr. Goard leads us through the line of Civilizations: Brahmin, Buddhist, Shinto, Mohammedan, European, Anglo-Saxon, each of them founded upon its own particular Faith, propounded by its own religious leader; each bound together by its own particular Law, promulgated by the leader and based upon the Faith he taught.

"So long as Faith and Law remain as foundations, the Civilization built upon that Faith and Law will persist. Overthrow the foundations, and down comes the Civilization concerned."

The same is true in the Anglo-Saxon Civilization, in Britain, the Overseas Dominions, America, and certain other Anglo-Saxon nations. Founded upon the Faith, which is the Evangelical Faith of our Lord Jesus Christ; held together and administered according to the Common Law, which is the Law of God; that Civilization has done in the world, and is doing, miraculous and God-given service.

The underlying reason for the chaos of to-day is to be found in the fact that there are those in the world, notably in Russia, and, alas, in our own lands also, who are determined to overthrow both the Faith and the Law on which our Civilization is built. The forces of Revolution (anti-Law) and Unfaith (anti-God) are on every hand, and it is against that disruptive, undermining, irreligious activity that the whole resources of our Federation are to be directed.

As Dr. Goard places clearly before us the issues at stake, and the call thrills through us to be up and doing in this mighty work, we feel how suitable it is that he should stand just where he does, surrounded by men of all shades of religious training, united in the one stand for God and our Birthright. On his right hand and on his left are the two standards of the Israel people: the Union Jack and "Old Glory," the Stars and Stripes. These beautiful flags, Mr. Garrison announces, are the gift of Mrs. Fletcher Stevenson; they are symbolic of the two pillars of Civilization of which Dr. Goard has been speaking.

Follows, after the singing of a hymn, Mr. Leech, whom we rejoice to see so far recovered from his recent illness as to be able to address us. We feared that the doctor might forbid the speaking, and rob us of his message of spiritual force and inspiration; but with careful nursing of his powers we were treated to a characteristic and striking address on the real meaning of Prayer, and one could not help feeling that his very ability to deliver that message was due to the very thing of which the message was composed. Prayer was the subject; Prayer was the underlying foundation both of speech and speaker.

"Prayer IN THE NAME of Jesus means that Jesus has committed to us a Power of Attorney, to act on His behalf, as if He were still with us. Just as an owner of property who travels across the world leaves behind him his authority, under a Power of Attorney, for someone else to act on his account; just as, under that power, the signing of the principal's name by his agent is the same as if the principal had signed it in person; so, in our prayers, we are to put forth our powers, raise our petitions, and SIGN THEM IN THE NAME of our Principal, Jesus Christ. The whole of His Divine power and authority immediately goes in behind prayers thus uttered.

"We cannot, then, under authority such as this, and with powers such as these, commit Jesus to anything that would be contrary to His will or to His interests. Prayer IN HIS NAME, signed by us on His behalf and committing Him as His agents, must be a vastly different thing from anything we have previously conceived Prayer to be."

One leaves the meeting marvelling at the wondrous power we have committed to us; determined more than ever to use that power; but to use it only under that Inspiration and Dedication with which the day's meetings began.

And so to tea; and to conversation with the delegates and visitors from afar. We have seen visitors from South Africa, from Palestine, from Latvia, and many a far-flung outpost of the Empire.

Scotland is here, and Ireland, both North and South. On one side of the entrance hall is the Bookroom staff, very busy with sales and questions and greetings. Opposite, the Stewards' Headquarters, the Programmes, the Handbills, and the irradiating smile which always pervades that department of the work. In this corner a group of earnest questioners have captured a cheery Commissioner and are gaining from him an extra speech which will not be reported, but which will be remembered perhaps longer than the platform speeches; in another corner one hears discussion about local meetings in the North, "free dates," "special missions," and other evidences that the Branch Secretaries are using all their endeavours to have a full programme the year round.

Across the hall, with "grave and reverend mien," pace two clerical gentlemen deep in conversation; until some eager friend from the end of the earth disturbs the even tenor of their way, and the conversation becomes more general. Mysteriously other prominent ones disappear, to come up in good time on the platform at half-past seven, ready for all that may transpire.

In the regrettable absence of Major Rigg, who is detained by important national affairs, it is Dr. Goard who leads the speakers on to the platform as the hour strikes, to face a "full house." Dr. Goard, whether as Chairman or in any other capacity, never "wastes time." The hymn, the prayer, the lesson followed by his introductory statements, lead us exactly where we wish the meeting to be, and one feels that it must be easy to speak and to strike the right note under such leadership and inspiration.

So the speakers seem also to feel, for they get right down to the depths forthwith. The Rev. Maxwell Carnson begins carefully, "on the ground of the orthodox position," remembering the difficulties with which he had to contend when British-Israel Truth first seized hold of him. Step by step he leads us from where we are to where we ought to be, in a full recognition that the Revelation of God given through the prophets includes not only the knowledge of God as Personal, Self-Revealing, Purposeful, and sending Jesus Christ as the Crown and Apex of His Will and Purpose. That Revelation also includes one element which we have too often overlooked, the fact that God works His Will and Purpose through a Nation, since "the God of Heaven shall set up a Kingdom that shall never be destroyed."

We KNOW three things through Revelation; that God has a Purpose, and that He fulfils that Purpose through a Nation; that man has free-will, and can thwart and delay that Purpose, but never overcome it; and that Jesus Christ is the Apex of that Purpose and will come again to complete it. To this the assured facts of modern life supply the proof; the existence of Britain proves the first; the existence of the present-day chaos proves the second; and the existence of the Christian Church proves the third.

The Chairman now introduces our "retiring" Secretary-General, not that he is giving up his work, for "there is no discharge in this war," but that he is an amazingly difficult man to persuade to put himself down for a speech, wishing to efface himself for others. Mr. Garrison then very faithfully covers the ground of the elements of our position, for the benefit of those who have come newly to our meetings, and leaves us in no doubt as to what the British-Israel position is. We have a definite and decisive answer to those who are undermining our faith in God; the Evolutionist on the one hand who would give us a "religion without God"; the Modernist on the other who would leave us without a revelation of God at all. Out of extended years of experience and study and the ministration of the Word all over the world, Mr. Garrison is ready to say, and says with emphatic directness, to all these clever "modern" leaders of thought, "My dear young man, you have yet a very great deal to learn."

Mr. Morey follows, and takes us at once into the modern application of the Word of God. "This Book is concerned with to-day; it is not a record of 3,000 years ago; it speaks of the life of 1930; it tells of Britain, of Rome, of Russia, of Turkey, of all the questions that are pressing close upon us as we sit in this hall to-night."

Digitized by Google

Immediately we are in the Book of Isaiah, particularly chapters xxiv to xxxv. This section deals with the time of Jacob's trouble, from 1914 to the end.

"You will be perfectly safe in your reading of the Book to put 'Nation' for Mountain, 'Israel' for Sheep, 'Other Nations' for Wild Beasts."

Chapters xiii-xxiii are addressed to other nations one by one. All will fall, says the prophet; all are falling, or have already fallen, says history. Then out of the midst of the chaos of a falling civilization Isaiah hears songs in the Isles (chapter xxiv), the British Isles, the place prepared for the Israel people to dwell. Chapter xxviii calls for the removal of the covering which is on the face of all nations, and reminds Israel-Britain of one at least of its national sins: "Woe to the crown of pride, to the drunkards of Ephraim." This sin, as the other national sins, must and will GO as the Kingdom of God is established again in our midst. Chapter xxix is as emphatic against another sin, that of Modernism. The Book, they say, is sealed; men "deliver it to one that is learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee; and he saith, I cannot, for it is sealed"; while the ordinary man, confused by the welter of theories which meet him, says, "I cannot read it, for I am not learned."

Now Mr. Morey leads us into Ezekiel, into what he calls the Russia chapters (chapters xxxiv-xxxix); xxxiv is the "Lost Sheep," and we are reminded that we must read with this chapter the words of our Lord in John x. Chapter xxxv is Turkey; xxxvi is the Preparation of Palestine; xxxvii is the Vision of Dry Bones. "Son of Man, these bones are the Whole House of Israel." We are to prophesy unto the Bones, that is, to declare the purpose of God and the power of God; we are also to "Prophesy unto the wind," that is, we are to pray, and the Spirit shall come forth into His people. Preach and pray; the two are inseparable; the one is vain without the other.

Chapter xxxviii brings us even nearer to the events of to-day, addressed as it is to Russia. "Russia will think an evil thought"; the "land brought back from the sword" is Palestine; "to take a spoil" is the desire of Russia, which is no modern design, to force a way through to India. But, says the Almighty, "I will put a hook in thy jaws, and turn thee back." The forces against which Russia are contending are not the British forces, but the unloosed forces of Nature which God wields in that terrible day when "His wrath is come up in His face."

So (chapter xxxix) "the House of Israel shall KNOW that I am the Lord their God from that day forward," i.e., in pre-Millennial days. "And the heathen shall know." Thus through the trend of to-day's events, out of the chaos and unrest, comes the glorious hope and promise that "the knowledge of God shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea."

We go home at length, tired but confident; we have a great certainty given to us, and a great hope; a great work committed to us, and a great Power; a great demand upon us, and, we feel, a great consecration of all we have and are to this mighty service.

So the day closes, as it started: "We beseech you, therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service."

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 7TH.

The sound of the Headquarters' machinery begins very early these days, before many of the delegates are about; but by eleven o'clock the whole place is again alive with its "children from the ends of the earth." We now hold two meetings at a time, the Ministerial Session in one room, the Delegates in another. It is surely symbolical of "the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace" that the two meetings unite in the hymn and the prayer, before each commences its own serious consideration of the best lines of approach to the varied sides of the life of our own, and of other nations. The impression one gathers, in both meetings, is one of intense practical determination that all men shall know the Truth, the Truth which shall make them free. There is record of decided advance; there is more victory in our work than sometimes appears on the surface. We can go back to our public meetings, saying to ourselves, "What hath God wrought!" And what shall He yet bring about when we are all directed, disciplined and dedicated as His Spirit calls us to be.

The afternoon session at Westminster is given over to members of the Clerical and Ministerial Association. Dr. Goard presides; the Rev. A. W. Phillips leads in prayer, and the Rev. Kenneth Dodds reads the lesson.

Canon C. J. Hollis, M.A., of Worthing, reviews our present state in the realms of belief, morals, toil, family life, law and order; in recreations, amusements, music, art; in politics and social customs. Our Movement is surely called to combat the looseness and apathy clearly manifest in all departments of our national life; the one great remedy for all these things is the Bible, and the Faithfulness of Almighty God.

The Rev. J. J. Whitehouse, of Southend, challenges us again on the ground of a "Great Emergency," with particular reference to the critical state of national and international finance. The crisis is not merely explicable on natural grounds; it is basically spiritual and is the inevitable result of our neglect of God and the Divine Law. The call is again "Back to God and the Bible," a message that is needed even in the Churches. The nation and the Church must become one great unity; we must rekindle a strong religious patriotism, a national devotion to Jesus Christ, the Redeemer of His nation Israel.

The Rev. W. Brown Pollock reminds us of the personal need of the individual for Jesus Christ Himself. Out of his own experience he bore testimony to Christ's power to save, and to the flood of light which a close study of the prophecy of Hosea had cast, in his own case, upon the whole Truth of the Israel of God; the nation which we now see in process of becoming God's great servant-nation in the earth.

A word of warning followed from the Rev. T. Sparshott Johnson. We are accustomed to the "wooing" notes of the Gospel; we must not forget the "warning" as well. The cry is "Repent, for the Kingdom of God is at hand." This message first to Israel herself, and then through her to all the nations of the earth, leads to the great invitation which falls so aptly on the ears of a weary world to-day, " Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters."

The meeting concludes with words from one of the long-standing believers, the Rev. G. H. Lancaster, who believes that the British-Israel Truth may be for all, as it has been for him, a " rock of strength to the soul." He then proceeds very effectively, if briefly, to show some of the evidences of our Israel origin in our names, and in our wonderful history. With such evidence before us, and with his knowledge of the state of affairs which a personal visit to Rome has given him, Mr. Lancaster is more firmly convinced than ever that unceasing prayers should go up to Almighty God that His servant-nation should immediately withdraw her national Ambassador from the Papal kingdom newly established there.

We reassemble with renewed enthusiasm for the evening meeting, under the whimsical chairmanship of Mr. Leech. What a touch of quiet Irish humour twinkles in those quiet eyes as he tells of Bradlaugh and the swine. Mr. Bradlaugh declared once at Blackburn that he did not believe that the swine in the Gospel story could run six miles to fall into the sea. Honest Tom Brown challenged the infidel on the point: " I have a pig here in Blackburn who is fond of wandering. I was told he was on the way to Preston, nine miles away. As I pursued him he ran ahead, and I did not catch him till we were in the town. Now, if a pig would run nine miles with honest Tom Brown behind him, how far would he run if he were chased by the Devil ? "

In Bradlaugh's days, the enemies of the Bible were outside the Church ; now they are religious adversaries. The world needs more miners ; we have too many manufacturers. Makers of theories abound on all hands ; but the man who passes along the field and the road knows nothing of the wonder and wealth of the mine beneath. We have in our hands the spade with which to dig out the wealth of the mine. That has been hidden for many centuries, but the wonderful truth which reveals the fulfilment of the purposes and promises of Almighty God leads to the depths of the mine.

Accordingly Mr. Leech calls on two great " miners," Rev. Arthur Pritchard and Dr. Pascoe Goard. We stand for a moment to hear the gracious message from Their Majesties at Sandringham, and immediately we are plunged into the depths, guided always in difficult pathways by the lamp of Truth which these two giants hold up before us.

Mr. Pritchard delves with the skill of a scholar into the Book of Isaiah. On the question of the dispute among scholars as to how many " Isaiahs " there were, he pronounces quite clearly, " All this discussion arises from the confusion in the theological mind between Israel and Judah. Once see this distinction and recognize that there are two sets of prophecies in the Old Testament, then the Bible becomes understandable and all the prophecies fit into their right place."

Isaiah, Mr. Pritchard tells us, and it is new to some of us, was a historian as well as a prophet. It is stated in the Bible that the Books of Judges and Kings are his work (2 Chron. xxxii, 32) ; and we know from 2 Chron. xxvi, 22, that he was the historian of the days of Uzziah. An additional evidence for this is found in the contrast between the former Books (Judges and Kings) and the later Chronicles of the House of David.

Now we are embarked on one of those scholarly pieces of comparative research which is a delight to the soul of Mr. Pritchard ; and out of it emerges the fact that the Isles of the Sea ; the Wilderness ; and the Prepared Place ; and Britain, are all one and the same thing.

With that quiet touch of mischief which is characteristic of him, the speaker looks up and adds, " If you cannot believe this, then Isaiah xlii and xliii describe you : 'Blind you are, and deaf' ; and the British Islanders, as well as the British Isles, are mentioned in the Bible."

From this point we go on, with increasing rapidity, chapter by chapter, to the end of the Book, culling gems of knowledge all the way in those little asides which illuminate the path. This is real mining, and we find precious stones everywhere. We arrive in the end at this :—

" Isaiah is a unity in itself. By the Inspiration of Selection its 66 chapters, and indeed the 66 Books of the Bible, have been handed down to us. The one author behind the original manuscript is the Holy Spirit Himself, the active agent of Unity in the Godhead, in the Church, in the World of Nature and in this precious Book of Truth."

After this we need a breathing space, and we find one in the singing of that grand old hymn, " Jesu, Lover of my soul." But while our minds are still digesting the great Truths presented to us, we are off again, on another layer of this wondrous mine, and Dr. Goard leads us into the greatest doctrines of the New Testament. One must have a steady head and a clear eye to follow so speedy and so varied a track ; but how well worth while it all is for those who love the Truth.

The hymn has taken us for a few moments up on to the heights and now we follow Dr. Goard again into the riches of the mine. He reminds us that " the most sacred things connected with, and forming the very life-blood of the Christian Faith are bound up with, and are contained in, the National Message of the Bible, and the Nation contained in that Message."

He proceeds to prove his point by taking us directly to the great Evangelical doctrines of the New Testament. The Holiness of God, Justification by Faith, the Virgin Birth, Christian Perfection. The Apostle tells us that " we have this treasure in earthen vessels." " The mistake we have all made " (the Doctor tells us that he includes himself in the error) " is that we have abstracted the spiritual message of the Bible, and in endeavouring to present it unclothed, we have made it so ghostlike that most people cannot see it, and many have ceased to believe in its existence." We can come into conscious contact with the spirits of embodied men, and rejoice to do so ; but we shrink from meeting them without the body. We love to meet the spiritual teaching of the Bible when it is in earthly vessels, and the man-in-the-street is shrinking from it because we have disembodied it and made it ghostly.

The Justifying of Abraham by his Faith is that " Abraham believed God," God in His Covenant relation with Israel, " and it was counted to him for righteousness."

" Holy, Holy, Holy, is Jehovah Elohim." Here is no question of sin or sinlessness ; we are singing of a manifestation of God as Jehovah, in which manifestation He has dedicated, consecrated, separated Himself exclusively to one task alone, the task of the administration of His Kingdom-nation Israel. When He says, "Be ye holy, for I am holy," He means an utter surrender, devotion, consecration to the service of His Kingdom Israel. In the Revelation of the Holy God, the vessel that contains it is the corporeal body of His nation Israel.

THE VIRGIN BIRTH—A FACT.

The Virgin Birth—which is recorded as a FACT, not a doctrine (and no theologian has the right to transform the statement of fact into a statement of doctrine)—was a sign given to Ahaz, at the time of great distress, that the Throne of David which he occupied should never be overthrown (Isaiah vii). "You believe the Virgin Birth of Jesus Christ; can you accept the sign given, and deny the thing signified?"

Now we reach Romans ix, x, xi, the heart of the Evangelical teaching of the New Testament. It commences "Hath God cast away His people? God forbid." (Rom. xi, 1.) Follows the statement of God's then relation with Israel who, at that time, as the Apostle declared in the same chapter, had never heard of Christ. From this we go on to God's continued purpose to Israel until the end of time. When he has brought again the national development of God's purpose, and the spiritual regeneration which shall grow through it, he sends out the call, "I beseech you THEREFORE, brethren, that ye present your bodies. . . ." The doctrine of Christian perfection has its roots and reason in the development of God's purposes to Israel and through them to the world.

"Thus we see," Dr. Goard concludes, "that we are not preaching a separate Gospel, or even a separate phase of the Gospel, but we are bringing back that 'earthen vessel' of which Paul spoke."

This is truly a magnificent conception, magnificently wrought out. To many it must come with sufficient of a shock to make them at first turn away from it in disapproval; but the more one digs into it, the more one sees its force and truth; and we go home thanking God that "every steward that is instructed in the mysteries of the Kingdom of God is like unto a householder that bringeth forth from his treasure things new and old."

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 8TH.

Again the two meetings are held side by side, and while the delegates discuss very fully the means whereby our message can be most forcibly presented to the man-in-the-street, Dr. Goard takes the Ministerial Session through the first eleven chapters of Genesis.

We find ourselves in the fields of the latest scientific research; we are led into the realm of the Fourth Dimension, which we find in the inner depth of the infinitely small; "that we may know the height, and length, and breadth, and depth; and might know the love of God." One by one, in quick succession, the great problems of life origins, of historic foundations, of critical exegesis, are dealt with in these chapters which form "the Foreword to the One Book, all the sections of which are sequent and con-sequent. In these chapters we have a synopsis of all preceding Revelation, necessary to an understanding of all that follows; a majestic introduction to Universal Knowledge. The modern scholar, and the Evangelical also, have both formed cast-iron opinions about it and have fought for their opinions rather than for the Book itself. The Commentary of 1930 is Archæology, National Development, and the uncovering of the secrets of Nature in scientific research."

"Dr. Oliver Lodge writes to say: 'I am prepared to give my testimony in any place and at any time, that the first chapters of Genesis and the findings of physical science are in general agreement.'"

The meeting is graciously interrupted at noon by the arrival of our veteran champion, Dr. Mountain, at whose entry the whole meeting rises to its feet in glad and honoured greeting. The very presence of this "father in Israel" is a benediction to the session, and his few choice words of thankfulness to God with which the meeting closes will not soon be forgotten. It is characteristic of such giants of the faith as Dr. Mountain that he should declare that, now that the Lord has restored him to such a measure of strength as is his this day, he is hoping still to be able to go about and continue his witness on the public platform to the faithfulness of our Covenant-keeping God. Truly, as Dr. Goard told us the other day, "there is NO discharge in this war."

When, in the afternoon meeting, the audience at Westminster catches their very first glimpse of Dr. Mountain being escorted up the steps of the platform, they break into a round of applause which continues without cessation, in affectionate insistence, until he seats himself beside the Chairman, Major Knowles.

The Chairman calls for the help of all who are present to be given to the great work which the Federation is doing. By joining the Federation, subscribing to THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, by buying and distributing our literature, and by introducing the subject to our friends, we can do great things to spread the Gospel of the Kingdom.

After Mr. Garrison has read cablegrams and letters from New York, California, Toronto, London in Ontario and elsewhere, he brings to our notice the recent declaration of the Bishop of Chelmsford with regard to the present need of England. The Bishop diagnoses our condition as one of spiritual sickness, manifested in the chaos of the age as just "symptoms of a deep-seated disease, which can only be healed by the people of this country being brought back again to the feet of God." Mr. Garrison declares his intention, amid much applause, of inviting the Bishop to join us in our great work of bringing the nation back to God.

Now the Rev. W. Brown Pollock introduces us to the teaching of the prophet Micah with regard to the nation Israel. "In the last days," we read in chapter four, the Israel Kingdom shall be established over all nations. "What a wonderful Book," he declares, "to be able to tell us the destiny of a nation so many generations beforehand. Surely this is the greatest proof of its Inspiration?"
