"V I B R A S O N I C S" - and Conditions of Space Transit.

(NOTE: The term vibrasonics refers to the upper stages of the sound spectrum or harmonic scale, beyond ultra-sonics. The word is coined by R.R. Russell, in his article in Flying Saucer R e - view (Lon.) for Nov.-Dec. 1955. *

(The following paragraphs are an Addendum to our Brochure 1-1-6 and to other BSR material relative to the phenomena of the aeroforms (UFOs). Mr. Russell's substantial agreement with our Etheric interpretation is the result of his own independent investigation and study).

1. It is true that a few human beings ('Earthians') have entered the Discs and other aeroforms and have taken short rides in them. But no earthian has travelled in an aeroform in free space, or has visited the Moon, Mars, or Venus or any other planet while in his normal physical body.

2. Such flight into free space or within the solar system may be possible in theory at least, provided the physical body be pre - conditioned by a time-measured dosage of high frequencies (ultrasonic or 'vibrasonic').

3. Persons who have travelled for short distances in the neigh - borhood of the earth have been exposed to the ultrasonic frequency field which surrounds the craft in flight, and may have been conditioned without their own knowledge.

4. The high frequencies referred to are generated by small electronic devices. Many mechanisms are employed by the Etherians, (as by Earthians) merely as a matter of convenience but not from necessity.

5. True space flight, if achieved by a human even under the protection mentioned, would result in amnesia and serious physical disorders. The conditioning itself affects the blood stream and the bone marrow. Further, the 'subconscious' or unconscious mind of the human is deeply conditioned to all factors of earth life, and will be unable to accept the immense frequency changes, even though the conscious self may give consent.

6. The ultrasonic frequencies convert the aeroform and the bodies of persons inside them, to the frequency of light waves. Under these conditions the Etherians retain full consciousness and full control of their 'ship', but no earth person could survive them, except by such preconditioning as has been mentioned; and even so it is doubtful that he could return to normal earth life.

7. Etherian craft in free space (or where desired) travel at the speed of light waves, or greater: there is no limit to the 'speed of light' in free space. This 'travel' is a matter of conversion of frequency rates and can be controlled by mind energy and by the use of ultrasonic (electronic) apparatus.
These frequencies can act as a gravity screen or shield. This statement will be verified by earth scientists and it is unnec - essary to point out its extreme importance.

8. Conversion to ultra-sonic frequencies affects all parts of the human body at the same instant and the Etherians experience no ill effects. They travel as conscious living light waves where the 'crossing' of inter-stellar distances is concerned. More correctly there is no transit of space, but only the change of fre - quency which is equivalent to a change of location.

9. An aeroform at rest is surrounded by a super-sonic field; when in flight it produces an ultra-sonic or vibrasonic field. These craft pass easily through each other and through other objects, and can penetrate the sea and the seeming solidity of the earth, merely by converting their frequency rate as the situation may demand.

As to the information contained in the foregoing paragraphs, I have only the following explanation to offer:

A. It comes through the deep-trance mediumship of a well - known medium, Mark Probert. The communicator in this instance is one Raymond Natalli, an astronomer and physicist contemporary with Shakespeare. Identities can never be conclusively 'proven', but they are comparitively unimportant. All that matters is the content of the communication.

B. I would not for a moment ask anyone to accept anything on the 'authority' of supernormal sources. I do respectfully ask that useful information should not be disregarded because of personal prejudice and hasty generalizations concerning 'psychism' or spiritism.

C. For five to 10 hours a week, for 7 - 8 years, I listened to the Probert controls and talked with them. They claim to be, and appear to be excarnate humans and fully integrated personalities. They have conducted themselves as honorable persons of good will. They are highly intelligent and widely informed, and havediscuss a wide range of cultural and scientific subjects. They have had the respectful attention of scholars, scientists, and technicians and have engaged in many discussions with them.

D. It was these controls who gave us, in the fall of 1946, the first (and best and only) interpretation of the aeroforms.-- They make no claim to omniscience but warn us against such a claim from any source.

E. They are not Etherians, but normal humans from various astr levels who possess knowledge superior to our own - and desire (al to share it with us.

Since the combined knowledge of our own time - our science, religion, and philosophy - has as yet no worthwhile interpreta - tion of the phenomena of the aeroforms, it might conceivably be the part of wisdom (and common sense) at least to listen to these would-be friends from the 'other side' - of course with all due reservations, suspicions, and face-saving provisos - and to put their offered knowledge to the test of study and practical appli- cation.

(I think our Associates, for whom this journal is publish- ed, are aware that I hold no brief for spiritualism as a religious 'movement' (and neither do the controls referred to); but I re - gard survival and communication as factual, as being inevitable & near-at-hand social acceptances, and as opening up immense re - sources of knowledge when properly utilized. Beyond this, 'each to his own place on his own path'. Vox clamantis non sum. *

In addition to the article "Vibrasonics" and the UFO, referred to on another page (by R.R. Russell), the Flying Saucer Review for November-December also prints Psychokinesis, by Dr. Rolf Alexander; Flying Saucers and Religion, by Monseigneur Otto E. Viking, Bishop of the Scandinavian Liberal Catholic Church; This Amazing Universe, by Arthur Constance; and Book Reviews by the Hon. Brinsley le Poer Trench. The World Roundup is concerned mainly with reports of sightings of UFO. In an earlier issue the FSR printed verbatim a statement by the BSR Director of the Etheric or "4-D" interpretation of the aeroforms - a very help- ful bit of publicity. We call the attention of our readers to the serious and receptive attitude of these English investiga - tors toward the whole "etheric" approach, in contrast to the in- difference shown in America. Flying Saucer Review may be ordered through W.B. Lansbury, Box 3-B, 55 W. 92nd St, New York City 25.

" THE FLYING SAUCER CONSPIRACY "

- by - Major Donald E. Keyhoe

The purpose of the flying saucer conspiracy, we are told byMajor Keyhoe, is to suppress, ignore and distort the whole huge body of important facts concerning the UFO. What is the motivation of this "silence group, why have they succeeded so incredibly, and why are they now failing dismally? Major Keyhoe's book is a remarkably fine attempt at answering these questions, should be a best seller, and if offered as science fiction probably would be.

The overwhelming importance of the subject matter actually militates against the sale of this book. Happenings of the sort narrated here, whether merely alleged or verified, involve the planet and the whole human race and must not be taken seriously if one can help it. We're not actually satisfied with things as they are, but it is best to let bad enough alone. Nor, to tell truth, are we really allured by com - pulsory reforms and unescapable utopias. Nor by anything at all which involves mental effort and psycho-physical readjustments.

The curse of mankind is fear, or its ten thousand fears. Even the atoms, it is said, are afraid. In physics this 'fear of the atoms' is called inertia. Why is the atom afraid of change? Perhaps b e- cause change involves the unknown, and the unknown threatens the integration of the known.

On behalf of our inertia, our contentment however small, our safety however dubious, I recommend this book only as science fiction.On behalf of our intelligence, courage, and increasing maturity as growing-up human entities I advise that it be read as a factual record and with profound attention.

This does not mean that it solves the problems raised or answers a great many questions. But the future historian of this decade will find in "The F.S.C." an invaluable historical document and social commentary. "The true criticism of anything is its history" was probably the most intelligent remark made in the 19th century; and the record of this last decade will evaluate our crumbling civilization as no other period can do.

There is no question, of course, about the existence of the great conspiracy or its effectiveness. Why was it so effective that for a decade (in a sense for several decades) it could flourish without uttering truth or reason or commonsense - but only denials, distortions, ridiculous 'explanations' and innumerable lies? All this, mind you, in the alleged interest of the public, of humanity, who must be spoon-fed even ad portas Averni, lest 'panic' supervene!

Panic! To be avoided by ignorance! To be forestalled by a crumbling tissue of lies! Why should a powerful governmental agency de - liberately abuse and destroy public confidence in itself? The onus lies, of course, on the top-level advocates of the "silence". The Air Force is a military organization; as the C.O. speaks, so a mul - titude of subordinates think or pretend to think, force majeure. And the disciplinary record of the A.F. is asclean-cut as the unquestion- able cour of its personel.

I have not heard of any other country, with one possible except - ion, where the conspiracy of silence has so completely smothered all inquiry in the matter of the Visitation. It has been considered else- where as a rational problem worthy of honest and open inquiry. Only in England has the silence policy approached that of the United States.

And oddly enough it is only in England that the 'etheric * interpretation' has received thoughtful and increasing attention. What is Major Keyhoe's attitude toward this one-and-only worthwhile approach? Apparently he has no attitude at all - i.e., only complete incredulity. He is personally convinced that the aeroforms ("saucers" UFO, Discs etc.) are 'interplanetary' and not only visit the various planets but originate on such bodies. (This last statement, accord - ing to BSR information, is in error). He is apparently convinced that with respect to their substance, power, and control they are 'out of this world' - that is, out of our science and craftsmanship.. The saucers (Major Keyhoe believes) are 'machines from outer space', but maybe from Venus, or Mars, or the Moon - where strange doings seem to be afoot. His scientific attainments are considerable, the book is a remarkable compendium of data, much of it unfamiliar to the public and of great potential importance. It is, in short, a must book for every earthian who can read or listen.

Nevertheless, the Major has written a drama with its Hamlet left out. There is a door to which he has no key, and it baffles him. Some of the most vital and obvious implications are not seen by him. It is a distinguished piece of reporting and drives home a problem and an urgency - but if he holds the thread of this labyrinth he does not reveal it.

This cannot be imputed as a fault, but it is a prime misfortune - since the clue exists and will be found by others.

Much of the material in this must book is so astonishing in char- acter (even to the habitue of the marvellous) that the temptation to quote is insistent. But reviews in this Round Robin journal are admittedly slanted toward the BSR interpretation. We are not primari- ly concerned with amazing our readers by fantastic events - and

Note:* I take this occasion to break in with something resem - bling a 'prediction'. It seems highly probable that we are about half-way through the preparatory period of public information, edu- cation, and new-world ideology generally, and that the new data have yet to be really accepted, elaborated and integrated. This 'second half' will probably last for another decade, with continued instruction from the etheric people and increased tempo of psycho - physical manifestations - and seismic disturbances of great magni- tude. (ml)

there are four-score other publications which can do that more efficiently. And when it comes to quotations - one reader's se - lection is another's boredom. Nevertheless here are a few nibbles of flavorable passages:

"Here's exactly what he says:" quoting astronomer Shapley". The radio executive watched my face. ' " There must be at least one hundred million inhabited planets." (58). . . It will be a wallop to all the people who think the earth is the only inhabited world.

"In Project Twinkle several of the strange missiles were tracked at speeds of nearly 14,000 miles an hour (92).

"Examination of the bodies and wreckage" said the Board Report, "definitely indicates the aircraft crashed with a high impact force... If there was mechanical failure it must have hap - pened without prior warning to the crew. . . The USNS Barrett sighted 25 bodies in the debris of rubber matting, luggage, life-rafts etc., No one was found alive. (111). (DC-6 Flight 12).

If sightings (other than military) equalled the tremendous number in 1952 - more than 2000 during the Mars opposition - they could set off another wave of hysteria... (122)

If newsmen put pointed questions to these Mars experts they could easily uncover a mass of evidence indicating that the planet was inhabited. For there was a long history to support such a claim. (123)...

About 600 windshields had been pitted in Canton (Ohio) and nearby areas. . . Could these possibly be linked with Dr. Zwicky's tests on the moon or the satellites. . . Perhaps this was a first warning, deliberately harmless, in case we were planning to fire more destructive rockets at the moon and planets (133).

"You said it could add up to the greatest adventure of all time, some advanced race helping us out ... but how are they go - ing to teach us... Will they say 'this is the way we do it; this is what's good for you?"

"You mean we'd be regimented? Redell shrugged. "We might seem to them like infants that had to be brought up the right way". (137)

"One thing is certain. The human race won't lightly give up the feeling of security it cherishes or the pet superstition that it constitutes the acme of intelligence in the universe. This monopoly of brains it believes it has is a deep-seated, near-religious conviction." (141)

"Have we actually fired at the UFO?

"In 1949 the Air Force told me they had been ordered to get a flying saucer by any possible means. . . Major Jere Boggs told me that one A.F. pilot had fired at a saucer over New Jersey. Later on I found that fighters had fired at a saucer over New Jersey. Later I found that fighters had fired at a UFO over Luke Field in 1945. . .

Then I told Captain Ed. Stone about the Port Townsend case. "Where do you think these creatures are from?" he said. "Mars? "

"The way sightings have jumped each time Mars approached us - yes. I'm convinced they're at least operating from Mars, and from the moon as well."

"The moon?" said Stone. "You mean there's evidence of a base there?"

I told him about the discovery of the strange bridge, Frank Mannings moon road, and the secret studies now being made.

"It sounds unbelievable", said Stone finally. "But that bridge ... couldn't possibly be natural. That means somebody has been on the moon for over a year."

"Maybe even longer", I told him. "It's possible that the moon has been occupied for centuries ... (183). . . .

Within a few days I learned of another moon study - this one supposed to be secret. For months astronomers at Palomar had been observing the moon, making long observations whenever conditions permitted. Not only had their photographs confirmed the exist - ence of the mysterious bridge, but a spectographic analysis had proved it was constructed of metal . . .

"Well, we've had proof they use giant mother ships," Redell responded. "In that Gulf of Mexico case, the one-half inch blip on the scope shows the mother ship was over 1000 feet long - probably nearer 1500. . . I'm just temporarily assuming the capt- ure explanation. If it's true it might serve also to explain the Navy Super-Constellation's disappearance over the Atlantic in October of 1954 ... There were 42 people aboard, some of them navy wives and their children. . . The Constellation vanished exactly like the six planes from Fort Lauderdale. Radio silence, even tho they had two transmitters. Not a trace of wreckage or bodies tho hundreds of planes and ships searched for days. . . " (298)

"I believe this accounts for the black-out, even if the cen- sors don't have the complete answer."

"Yes, you can see why they would fight to keep it secret."

"Even so, they're wrong to hide what they have learned. No matter what the explanation is, the world should be prepared.

Redell did not answer. I turned and saw him stare up into the night.

"Paul, what do you honestly believe?"

He looked back. "I really don't know", he said gravely. "It's haunted me for weeks. What do you believe?

Slowly I shook my head. "I don't know either, Paul. I can on- ly wonder." (299)

THE MORLEY-MARTIN EXPERIMENTS *
- and - Experiments of Dr. Charles W. Littlefield*

Flying Roll Alpha III (March, 1948) carried an article entitled The Littlefield Experiments, describing the investigations of Dr. Chas. W. Littlefield of Seattle, as set forth in his book "M.M.M." (1937). The gist of this matter was, that the crystallization of solutions of the organic salts could be modified by mental energy, directed through meditation of the use of mantrams - and that the crystals could be made to assume a great variety of shapes, such as letters, human-like figures, a map, an open book, a pyramid, a serpent, or a crown. All these figures were of course microscopic in size (the maximum field diameter being 1/32"), but a great many photographs were taken, and a considerable number of these are reproduced in the book. Dr. Littlefield claimed also that "the subtle magnetism which is the vital force" of all living things, is generated by the evaporation of water, and that the saturation of organic mineral salts by this magnetism rendered them susceptible to mental control. Strange as these assertions may sound, it is difficult to explain the evidence of the photographs by any available hypothesis.

Dr. Littlefield also adds, somewhat casually, that on one occasion "a living octopus was produced" on the microscope slide. Since this first Flying Roll article was written, one of our F.R. Associates has sent the editor the larger work by Dr. Littlefield, entitled "The Beginning and Way of Life", and in this the production of organic forms is treated at length. The development of microscopic octopi is shown in ten photographs, and there are many plates showing forms of fishes and reptiles, and even shapes which are plainly and undeniably those of human or human-like beings - homunculi indeed, beneath the cover-glass of a microscope slide! These forms are, as we have said, organic - but Dr. Littlefield does not, so far as this writer has discovered, speak of them as actually living - i.e., as showing independent movement, assimilation or reproduction. His own thesis is, that "a mind-image of a form posesses the power to group the elements of organic life in the exact proportion necessary to build an organism like itself, endowed with all the functions and attributes that are embodied in the mental picture." But this does not mean that all these numerous organic forms were produced in response to a deliberate mental demand and image, or any conscious effort on the part of the observer. Many forms, apparently, can be produced in that way; nevertheless the organic mineral salts, after having been vitalized by a series of evaporations, will crystallize into both organic and inorganic shapes, as if 'of themselves' - that is, in obedience to some other power than that of a consciously held mental image. (con)

* Note: This article consists of the opening paragraphs of our new re-print of the M-M experiments. Mimeo, 27 pgs., $1.00.

We appear, in short, to have here (1) a spontaneous creative action of a life-force (2) the possibility of directing this life-force by mental action, with conscious intent (3) the chance that the subconscious mentation (if there be such a thing) of the experimenter may also produce specific forms (as perhaps it does in"thought photography").

We should also mention here, because of similar facts reported by Morley-Martin, that complete shell forms, both of fresh and salt water, also arise from the solutions of mineral salts. These, however, grow from droplets, as single cells, while the organic forms grow from droplets by a process of 'cell-division'.

But even in the case of the living octopus, Dr. Littlefield does not wish to speak of the "spontaneous generation of life." This phrase, he says, is meaningless. "Life arises from a complex co-operation of energy - psychical and physical - with matter"(p 171). "In the grouping of mineral compounds and the environing forces lies the cause of all physical life-forms - this is the underlying principle of abiogenesis". (page 176).

We do scant justice to the 600-odd pages of this book - but it is packed with facts, evidence and arguments utterly destructive of the biological creed originating with Huxley, Darwin, Tyndall, and Haeckel - that all forms of life come from one original cell, the origin of which is unknown, that life comes only from antecedent life and that 'spontaneous generation' is impossible. Abiogenesis, by Dr. Littlefield's evidence, is a fact, and life-forms as known to us are emergents out of energy-complexes, hence are themselves energy-forms. This, however, is not at all the concept embodied in the phrase "spontaneous generation" - if the words make any sense at all, which is doubtful. "Antecedent life" is indeed a postulate, but it is life in the sense of the action of cosmic energy, and not as Huxley and Darwin understood the term.

Or such, at any rate,we understand to be Dr. Littlefield's position. And the factual data he presents are incredible and devastating - and have been consistently ignored. They were widely publicized at the time, yet we do not know of any standard work in the biological sciences which now takes account of them.

We come now to the proper topic of this article, the Morley-Martin experiments. Professor Charles J. Ryan, of the Theosophical University at Covina, took note of the article on the Littlefield experiments, and sent the present writer a work by Maeterlinck, La Grande Porte, which contains a chapter dealing with Morley-Martin, and called attention to articles by himself in The Theosophical Path. There is probably nothing more astonishing, and more dis - ruptive of orthodox scientism, in the whole field of modern discovery, than the Morley-Martin reports - many of which came to Professor Ryan direct from that scientist himself. They integrate closely with the work of Dr. Littlefield and should be studied in that connection. Their implications reach out in every direction, and are particularly important in connection with 'occult' and esoteric concepts concerning the nature of matter and energy, the origin of life, the meaning of evolution, and the innumerable related problems which confront us at every turn. But it is not for the present writer to attempt any profitable comment on such material; we reproduce the larger part of Maeterlinck's chapter from La Grande Porte, and a portion of Professor Ryan's extremely valuable articles. These data are extremely important, and neither occultists nor physical scientists can afford ignorance of them, nor to let them lie in neglect.

The following 16 pages of booklet quoted above, contain (1) a a translation of Maeterlinck's account of Morley-Martin's work, as set forth in his La Grande Porte (Paris, 1939): 2: the comments of Professor C.J. Ryan (Astronomy, Theos. Univ. of Covina), as publishd in the Theosophical Path in 1953: (3) Experiments of Andrew Crosse, under the head of Animal Life by Electricity: (4) The article on the same subject by Lieut. Com. R.E. Gould, in his book called Oddities (1928): (5) A generalized comment on the whole subject by the trance control Natalli (Mark Probert Seances). The nature of this material may be gathered from the following excerpts:

... That plants and animals continue to live in miniature and in a latent state in the rocks which geologists call azoic, millions of years old, in which no traces of organism have been found ... that life is immortal, universal, and indestructible, and that the mother idea, the image or prototype of everything, is anterior to what we call matter ... He took azoic rock or a bit of glass and sterilized it at 3000 deg. F, reducing it to a light ash containing scoria ... from these ashes he isolated a "primordial protoplasm", which after passing through a crystalline stage gave birth to organic life forms- although the conditions of sterilization were perfect, the tests often repeated, and observed by competent witnesses'(Maeterlinck). "The animal loses its body" (writes Morley-Martin) but does not lose its life ... Nothing dies ... the contrary of life is not death, but latency"... "The most extraordinary discovery that science will have to record since Newton's gravitation and the discovery of radium". (Maeterlinck).

The experiments of Andrew Crosse, detailed in this BSRA-1 booklet, show the production of living organic forms (acari or mites) out of highly poisonous solutions, when these were subjected to certain electrical treatments. This material, supplemented by the work of Weeks, Bastian, and Twining constitute the most remarkable collection of psycho-biological data in modern science. Its import is revolutionary, yet it has been studiously ignored by contemporary science. So far as is known to us, the 27 pages of the BSR booklet contain the only existing synopsis of this research.

CANCER CLINIC INFORMATION -

Memo. from Ralph M. Holland, M.E., Editor of Voice from the Gallery

Regarding the cancer clinic information which was in the last Voice from the Gallery, and which you repeated in your current CQC: several readers have sent in additional information on the subject, and a few errors have been pointed out which I shall correct in the next issue.

Hoxsey Treatment: According to an official of the clinic, my statement that it is a "secret remedy" is incorrect. The ingredients of the various medications used at the clinic are a matter of sworn court record. The only thing not stated was the proportion of each ingredient. This was not done in an effort to keep the medication secret, but because the proportions vary with each patient. The prescription is worked out according to the requirements of each case, as shown in the examination of the individual.

Krebiozen: Since writing my article I have read a copy of "K - Krebiozen, Key to Cancer"? by Herbert Bailey, and note that I have made some errors. It was not developed by Dr. Ivy, but instead by Dr. Stevan Durovic, a Yugoslav refugee who developed the treatment in the Argentine and brought it to the U.S. Dr. Ivy, at that time a Vice-President of the University of Illinois, Head of its Chicago Colleges of Health Professions, which included their medical school, agreed to test the treatment - and thereupon became its enthusiastic advocate.

Persons connected with the research program also wish me to emphasize that no one has ever paid one cent for treatment with Krebiozen. Dr. Durovic and his brother Marko have donated the entire supply of the medication, which has been made available without any charge whatever to certain patients (about 200 in number) whose cases fitted in with the research program.

There is also an organization for the purpose of furthering this treatment:

THE COMMITTEE FOR KREBIOZEN RESEARCH: Mrs. James Henderson, Chm. - 5959 No. Kenmore; Chicago 40, Ill.

It seems regrettable that these various committees could not be combined to the end of promoting ALL the treatments of probable value in the treatment of cancer, since there is evidence, according to many researchers, that each one is superior for treating one type of cancer, and a doctor should really have all of them available in order to treat his patients most effectively.

The BSR publications are free to use the foregoing information if desired, according to the wishes of the Director.

Spacecraft of the Super-Solar Sirian System

By - Edward S. Schultz,
- B.S.R.A.

The first thoughts of space travel (fact or fiction) came to be associated with our own moon because of its relative close - ness. As our understanding of such matters increased and the current era of saucer sightings and activity came into focus, it was logically postulated that spacecraft could and probably did come from anywhere in the solar system..

Later on the more informed saucer researchers, noting the 'out of this world' behaviour of such craft, concluded that they were not only interplanetary but intra-dimensional as well, and that they could and often did 'emerge' from their own octave of physical manifestation, and then just as easily 'de-mat' back into their own dimension. In short, that these craft were able to shuttle to and from both visible and (to us) invisible worlds or planets, within and outside of our solar system.

Any effort to astronomically locate such planets as Bethurum's "Clarion", for example, would therefore be meaningless if Clarion happens to belong to an octave of physical manifesta - tion that is invisible and intangible to us. They could not be seen with our present types of optical telescopes, but they might be detected with more refined designs of the so-called radio telescopes, and there is every possibility that they are already being recorded via this equipment.

I now offer some thoughts helpful in pin-pointing the origin of the saucer craft that come from outside our solar system. I came across research information to this effect in "Super-Physical Science" by A.P. Sinnett (Theosophical Press, Wheaton, Ill.). Sinnett's wide range of superphysics, by the way, does not refer to saucers in any way, but his chapter on the Sirian Cosmos and the rest of his book came to him (about 1910) from a rather extraordinary super-sensory source and provides some excellent fill-in research information on current phenomena.

This information is to the effect that the sun and its family of planets is itself part of a super-solar system, revolv - ing around the giant star Sirius, which is about ten light years away from us. He adds that the Sirian super-solar system, (isolated in space from other systems of the same order, includes up to about 100 solar systems like our own, all gravitating around the Sirian central sun.
It becomes immediately logical and apparent, that within this vast Sirian system, of which our solar system is a part, there has been room, time and special opportunity for vast and varied fleets of spacecraft to evolve and that most of the saucer craft seen in our skies undoubtedly hail from somewhere within this Sirian system; even though there must be some traffic between the Sirian and other systems of the same kind still farther out in space, hundreds of more light years away.

Apropos of all this Sinnett mentions a fact of superphysical astronomy that serves as a corroborative climax to what the BSR has been patiently maintaining for the best part of a decade, i.e., that saucer craft are inter-dimensional as well as interplanetary.

Sinnett said: "I am told that of all the 100 solar systems involved in the Sirian cosmos, only about 25 are at a stage of development or growth resembling our own system and thus appealing to the physical plane senses.

Noting the above percentage of physical vs (to us) invisible worlds, it is evident that spacecraft that can and do 'mat and demat' are the rule, and not the exception in the cosmic scheme of things, and that it is our physical octave of manifestation that is relatively abnormal, and open to cautious observation by outer-space beings.

As a worthy bit of follow-up reading to the above, consider the feature article by Arthur Constance in Flying Saucer News (Autumn, '55). It is entitled "What Blazed Over Britain", and is an 8-page summary of an 18,000 word report:

"The THING was over Britain for ten minutes, and 3000 miles an hour in 10 minutes is 18,000 miles per hour. . . But the speed varied. Careful analysis of all reports gives the THING a speed of ten miles - not a minute, but per second, which amounts to 108,000 miles per hour ...

" The THING was seen by tens of thousands, probably by hundreds of thousands of people. Dismiss mass hallucination. It could not have been a meteor because it went in several directions at once, and changed shape and color; its speed was variable and it sometimes hovered. Dismiss meteor. It could not have been an earth craft. Its speed was far too great. Its shapes and colors, its white hot temperatures at times, its noiseless - ness in flight - all these nail down the earth-craft suggestion.

> "It is typical of thousands of cases, but even if we dismiss all others this one incident provides abundant proof that non-terrestrial intelligences are coming to, or emerging from other dimensions into the atmosphere of this planet, or (perhaps more accurately) the field of human consciousness."

It is a source of satisfaction to us, to note that Arthur Constance accepts a number of basic concepts long urged by our BSR publications.

"COMING WORLD CHANGES"

(We are in receipt of a communication from Dr. George Hunt Williamson, who is at present conducting the Telonic Research Center, (PO Box 1654-) at Prescott, Arizona. We regret that we cannot publish the whole of this article, due to the limited space in ROUND ROBIN , but we offer our readers the following excerpts.

The article is a summary from the ms. of Dr. Williamson's forthcoming book, "Other Tongues - Other Flesh", published by Ray Palmer, Amherst, Wisc. About $4.00. 400 pgs., fully illustrated with photos and drawings.

". . . . In this short report, I am NOT going to give you my 'opinions' for they are the opinions of only one man... but I do feel that my experiences are important... for if 'Saucers' are coming from outer space (which I firmly believe they are)... then that fact will change the life of every man, woman and child on the planet earth! And these changes are already taking place... are in evidence in our daily lives!

". . . . Of course, space visitors are here! So, now what happens? Space visitors have said that the world will NOT end, but that there will be changes, physically, mentally and spiritually! They are not here to stop our atomic wars, nor are they here to hand over the secrets of the universe to certain "goodie-goodie" earth children!

"Their purpose in coming is two-fold:

1. Our entire solar system is moving into a new area of the universe and the cosmic bombardment has increased tremendously (this has been confirmed by recent scientific experimentation.) This increase will cause changes in our Fault lines; weather; death of humus-producing bacteria; mental reactions, etc. Atomic detonations, as such, cause increase of strain and destruction on the earth's surface... but the ray increase is the real cause... atomic bombs merely accentuate the already dangerous condition.

2. They wish to awaken mankind on earth t o the fact that human life exists elsewhere in the cosmos... that we here are not "alone" ... that we have friends and brothers on millions of worlds.

". . . . Evidently, we on earth are facing a crisis, and 'Saucers' are here to stay!! They say that if our United Nations is successful and we develop one world, they will land and assist us in building a great peaceful society....However, if we resort to a civilization-destroying atomic war, then they will WAIT until this chaos is over... and will land to assist the "remnant"in creating a new world where war, lust and greed will be banished forever.

"After thousands of years, the earth has a "harvest" of people who could live in peace and love with their fellowmen... these are the individuals who will inherit the New Age!

"Therefore, we are now undergoing a thorough psychological conditioning by our space friends. Look at the record, it speaks for itself! First, strange lights were seen in the sky...then a glimpse of the metallic objects... then someone caught a 'Saucer' on film.... then another spoke to the occupants by radio shortwave... another spoke with the occupant of a craft, face to face... then someone else was inside the space ships... the program is becoming intensified!

". . . . We are no longer employing radio in our research... it is too easily monitored. We are using what we call a Master Unit Communicator that utilizes infra-red and ultra-violet frequencies and optical/electronic devices and principles. It is for DIRECT planet to planet communication and for contacting UFO's in the earth's atmosphere. Infra-red light beams are the perfect medium for interstellar communication!

"For years science has believed that high wattage and high frequency was absolutely essential to such communication. But we at TRC say: 'It's not the POWER that's important... the BRUTE FORCE means nothing... but the TYPE WAVE used is important!' There is an accompanying beam with infra-red (unknown to orthodox science at this time) that makes for its extreme penetration! It seems impossible, I readily admit, that you can reach the other worlds with 3-watts or less of infra-red... but it is true, nevertheless!

"We are also conducting research in tone-color, radiesthesia, etc. We have started the UFO PATROL which is a world-wide organization of amateur radio "hams" and astronomers and photographers. All interested in the work of the Patrol should contact TRC's Patrol Coordinator, A. David Middelton, W5CA, Tijeras, New Mexico.

". . . . There will be mass-landings eventually, but not to prove the existence of solid, three-dimensional ships or people.... it will be to assist a world already psychologically prepared for such a meeting of divergent cultures!

". . . . So don't look to the space men for a 'cure-all'... they aren't going to help you pay the landlord... they aren't going to take away your aches and pains by some magic ray. Formerly, we asked God for this and for that... now we expect to ask our cosmically wealthy space brothers for gifts to delight us! How long will it be before we realize that we don't receive anything if we don't work for it and deserve it!

"Therefore, look to the present space visitations, as the "signs of the times"... when men shall be free at last from age-old dogma, creedalism, and ignorance."

NEGLECTED RESEARCH

(Under the title of Hypnotic Adventure, Newsweek* magazine for January 9, 1956, relates the story of one Ruth Simmons, of Pueblo, Colo. Mrs Simmons is "convinced that she existed 100 years ago as the wife of an Irish barrister", and also in the 17th century as a child in New Amsterdam. This belief springs from her own account "given in a series of deep hypnotic trances" and recorded on tapes under the direction of Morey Bernstein, an experienced hypnotist.

(Mrs Simmons recalled, while in trance, many details of her Irish phase of existence as Bridey (Bridget) Murphy, b. 1798, and also facts of her inter-life experiences, up to her present incarnation in 1923. None of these are remembered by her while in normal consciousness, but detective work on "names, places, terminology and folk tales given by her" brought many verifications.

(A much more extended account by author Bernstein also appears in TRUE magazine for February 1956, and disc recordings made from tapes are obtainable as shown below. ). The story has also gone the rounds of the press, and I refer to this fact because it illustrates once more the ignorance of both press and public concerning investigations of this type. The interest displayed is a hopeful sign, but the naivete of the commentators is hopeless. Author Bernstein himself is far from being naive, and the TRUE article quotes a score of distinguished names favorable to the concept of reincarnation - out of possible hundreds, we might add. Thus the book is interesting and valuable, but at the same time has no surprises for the informed. The proper use of hypnosis is of course scientific procedure and very productive, but it is neither novel nor sensational.

(Witness in this respect the sad neglect of the research carried on by A.R. Martin, M.A.  Under what may be called light suggestion or light hypnosis his subjects developed an 'extended memory' or 'memory regression' which took them back not only to the time of birth, but into the inter-life between incarnations, and seemingly into former earth lives. The data are impressive, apparently veridical, and NOT evoked by questioning or suggestion. He applies, in short, the maxim approved by Bernstein, that the hypnotist should be primarily a guide and helper, without domination of the subject.

Martin's technique, however, was his own, and while he did not conceal it he made little attempt to put it into print. The present writer once questioned him about this, and under the circumstances (of Martin's recent decease and the growing importance of his work) feels that it is now proper and useful to print the content of the reply. But before doing this let us quote briefly from a typical section of the RESEARCHES, "Experience No. 43" (pg 102 ff). It should be noted that Martin's subjects (whom he refers to as reviewers) are able to recall their experiences after returning to normal consciousness, and often wrote them down - as in the passages quoted below:

"The first thing I saw were many covered wagons. The horses were untied and placed in corrals. I saw two women in long hoop skirts, small aprons and large bonnets, cooking the evening meals over an open fire. A number of dogs were playing nearby.

"When I entered into the review of this experience I was 14 years old. My name was John Taylor. The year was 1825. In my family there were my mother and father and a younger brother named Paul who was 12 years old. We were in a wagon train travelling to California. There were about 500 people in this train. We were camped somewhere in the State of Kansas. The leader of our train was John Smith. It was the Fall of the year . . .

".... The next scenes took place in Wyoming. The land seemed very flat in places and the mountains seemed to rise up straight around us. A stream ran close by. The water was very clear and I could see the different colored rocks at the bottom . . . We were attacked by a small band of Apache Indians and immediately made a circle and began to shoot and they gave up the fight in a short while . . .

"The next scenes took place in California when I was 15 years old . . . The next scenes took place at the age of thirty, in the State of Washington where I practised law. My wife's name was Agnes and we had two children. . !" (The following scenes cover the subject's life up to the age of 73. "That was all there was of that life and things became dark").

Researches in Reincarnation and Beyond contains 50 of these "experiences". The descriptions are given by the sub - or unconscious mind of the reviewer (the 'subject), verbally, are recorded on tape, checked up historically where possible, and remembered by the subject. The analytical discussion by the author is penetrative and deserves close attention.

I now quote in part Mr. Martin's letter to me of Dec. 1945:

A.R. MARTIN, M.A.)
to BSR Director) . . . Regarding your point of putting little or no clue to my method of procedure given in the book itself, this is something for which we have certain reasons as follows: The whole procedure is a matter of attunement, and one who does not understand this on the inner planes might easily follow that procedure if it were given promiscuously to the public without the proper attunement, and could secure results which might easily be far from their liking.

They might also not understand just what to do under certain circumstances, and leave an unsatisfactory condition in the mind of the reviewer, and might even get scared and secure unsatisfactory results therefrom.

It might be much like placing a person in an automobile who knew nothing about controlling it - like showing them how to start it but not how to drive it.

While the subconscious mind protects the person under certain conditions from violence or injury, yet I believe researches of this nature should be conducted for constructive results (with such results as often attend lower types of spiritual mediumship. I have no objection to explaining my procedure to qualified persons who are seriously interested) *

(Concerning my use of hypnotism) "that all depends on what one means by the term. . . Hypnotism as popularly known involves control and domination by the operator. I do not think this is right, though it might be permissible in certain cases for constructive purposes. . . I have taken people into trances where they did not have sufficient power to make the grade themselves ... there are different states of attunement for atleast three different objectives (these depend on levels of development and psychic status)*

'Our procedure is to completely still the physical and mental activity thru relaxation, get into the realm of the subconscious and go back thru childhood to lives beyond the present one.

'The questions following this are important and will depend on what results are obtained with each individual reviewer.

'So far as I know there is no set form which could be followed, and this must be determined by the operator, by his attunement with the reviewer and the results obtained therefrom - and he will have as many variations of these results as he has reviewers.'

A.R.M.

(* Material in brackets ( ) condensed by M.L.)

I conclude this article by quoting from Glossary of Terms Used, page 207 ff., Researches in Reincarnation and Beyond. Vol. I. By A.L.Martin, M.A. Published by the Author, 146 East State St.,Sharon, Penna. 1942.

LIFTED MEMORY, the attunement by which the memory is lifted over and beyond the advent into the current physical life and one is able to remember and reenact that through which the consciousness passed before coming into the present physical life,--to relive that which is recorded in the soul. Able to see the scenes and objects, hear the sounds and sense the vibrations, feelings and emotions of past experiences and remember all that was so reviewed whenever desired. This can reach back through any time or space,--one life-time, a dozen or thousands,-- for in the realm of soul, consciousness is not confined to the limitations of time or space.

This attunement is very definitely different from either hypnosis or spiritualistic trance.

In hypnosis the subject is very clearly under the influence and control of the hypnotist, he does what the hypnotist tells him to do, within certain limitations, either then or in a prior hypnotized state. After he is awakened from the hypnotic sleep he usually knows nothing of what he did or what took place during the hypnosis.

We often find cases where people experienced reviews, either wholly or in part, by themselves without the assistance of anyone; if it be hypnosis, who hypnotized those persons? Your researcher has conducted these reviews before persons who were hypnotists themselves, had been deep students of hypnotism for years, they watched closely everything that was done--every move that was made--these people said lifted memory was definitely NOT hypnotism.

Many of the reviewers get much more of the review several hours, days or perhaps weeks after the time when your researcher was assisting them (and, as stated above, sometimes before) often they review entirely different lives than the one or ones with which your researcher assisted. This is further proof that it is not hypnotism.

In spiritualistic trance the medium surrenders his organism to a discarnate entity to use for the duration of the trance. The medium usually knows nothing that takes place during the trance. All that takes place or is said by the medium during a complete trance is done entirely by the discarnate entity.

This process of lifted memory is like taking one by the hand spiritually, leading him into the soul record room and having him tell and relive what he finds there.

The reviewer has possession of his faculties and complete organism during the entire process just as he had possession and use of them during the life or lives he reviews. If he was a cripple, or deaf, dumb and blind in the life he reviews he will act the same in the review. -- He may even speak the language he spoke in the life he is reviewing even though he may not know any of that language in the present life. What he contacts, reviews and knows during his review he can bring back and clearly remember when he returns to the consciousness of the present life; this he can clearly remember, when properly brought through, and passage of time does not seem to dim that memory.

VALUE FOR ETHERIC PRESSURE ON THE PROTON

by Lindy Millard.

Associate Lindy Millard has computed a value for the etheric pressure which holds a proton together. He says:

"In C.Q.C. B-10, pg. 3, Ramon Natalli, Exc., MPC., gave 10^{11} pounds per square inch as the nuclear 'force'. Pressure must be a force per unit area, and therefore 'pounds' should be called pound weight or pound force. This English unit is equal to the metric c.g.s. value of 4.4482×10^5 dynes. One square inch equals 6.4516258 square centimeters. Therefore by long division one finds that 10^{11} lb.force / in.^{2} equals 6.89469×10^{15} dynes / cm^2, or approx. seven quadrillion dynes / cm^2 .

"The cleavage pressure in a proton is as high as 100 septillion dynes per sq. cm. Other determinations to be made in the future will be compared and interpolated for the correct order of magnitude. I assume these postulates:

"The tiny core of a proton consists of two vortex rings which maintain an equatorial influx and two polar sources, one of which is the more forcible squirt pencil by means of which the ether of the gravitational influx field is enabled to escape again into inter - stellar space. The proton pulls through itself the space ether at a rate of .2.937 quadrillionths of a cubic cm per second. When the ether being sucked in by the proton thus reaches the clearance between the two vortex rings it is rapidly accelerated to the speed of light and is ejected with this maximum velocity.

"The stream surface that meets the stagnation point at the center may be called a cleavage surface, and its flow velocity causes a Bernoulli pressure drop, which causes the two vortex rings to stick together. With the aid of integral calculus I have estimated a cleavage pressure of 1.48×10^{26} dynes / cm^2 for the proton. The proton structure which forms also a constituent portion of a neutron, has essentially the same field properties as those above, despite some distortion of its external streamline map or flow pattern. You may think the implosion of a collapsing TV picture tube is startling, but what would happen if the weaker half of a proton were severed by a suitable direct hit of sufficiently superlative energy?

"Perhaps Nature has installed safety devices in every atom. I think that a cosmic ray proton travels with its weaker end as its 'stern'. (We should not extrapolate the mechanics of rocket jets into this domain of extremely small sizes. The weaker end of a proton helps to generate the central electric exchange field, as in Alpha groups and H_2 structures of an atom's core, and is thus practically hidden. Its protection from attack is afforded by the comparitively impenetrable massive flow-circuit field of the stronger end, which latter part generates and intrudes into the elastic bumper field. Every atom core is thickly enveloped by a bumper field which it generates. Krafft has estimated the depth of a bumper field to be about 17 times the radius of the core of a Helium atom.(Even in the orthodox journals of physics , the 'atomic nucleus of today is so different in its energy-level organization, from the marble-bag nucleus of 1945 that there is hardly any comparison. In order to split a proton by mechanical impact, it would be necessary to strike the weaker vortex ring (the less massive one) with a most piercing direct blow from its inner side; but the massive ellipsoidal field of the stronger vortex ring is too large and therefore 'in the way'. This is so in our physical plane during the present cy - cle of cosmic history.

The planet which had become a nova in the Sirius system, as so vividly related by Oge-Make in THe Fire Trail, was a planet which, prior to its 'protonic flash-point'holocaust had had an atmosphere with high humidity and vapor pressure. Its citizens who had utilized atomic power for a long time seem to have been fairy-like elementals. How small they were I cannot guess, but this consideration might explain how their radar-like atomic apparatus could attain to the high frequency of a proton's latent resonance. Perhaps their H and O atoms were more vulnerable than ours are. An aeon of time has lapsed since then. I am therefore not comparing Earth with the planet of Sirius. We have the same laws of physics but with somewhat different parameters or coefficients. Our atoms are more heavily clothed, pulsate more slowly, have more 'give' to them, and do not set up chain reactions so easily at the lighter end of the periodic table of elements.

"But the object lessons of cosmic history will stand. I hope the 'souls' of our atomic physicists will recapture memories of such lessons."

NOTE: Re reference to C.F. Krafft, para. 1, sup., l. 4: See the recent brilliant essay, The Ether and its Vortices, by Carl Frederick Krafft, published by the author, Annandale, Virginia (Rt. 2, Box 687); 66 pages. Free to University and Public Libraries, or at nominal price of $1.00.

The table of contents includes: The Hydromechanical Ether --Sub-Atomic Vortices --, The Three Elementary Forces -- The Origin of Consciousness -- The New Vortex Atoms -- Radioactivity and Atomic Fission -- The nuclear Theory Disproved -- Periodic Table of Elements.

The author maintains that everything in the field of mind or consciousness is as much within the province of science as within that of 'psychics' and religion. The viewpoint is ecclectic and assumes that "the external objective world really exists". The approach of our Associate Lindy Millard seems to differ mainly on grounds of semantics. We recommend both his essay and the book by Krafft to Associates interested in technical physics.

A FEW WORDS OF APPRECIATION

to Our Many Friends and Associates

In our issue of Clips and Quotes E - 11 of January 1st, 1956, we inserted a "card of thanks", similar in contents to what we have to say here. But this is our first opportunity to reach our entire mailing list with an acknowl - edgment of cards, letters, and expressions of good will for the holiday season and the New Year. We tried to reply individually, but this printed note seems to be the only practicable way.

A special word of appreciation goes to Regional Director MILT R. SWANSON (1015 Boston Post Road, Marlboro, Mass) Knowing that the BSR was in financial difficulties, Director Swanson prepared and sent out a letter to all Associates, and this resulted in donations, subscriptions and purchases sufficient to carry us over a very difficult period. We are all indebted to him - as we also are to YOU.

But the deepest satisfaction to me as National Director, to all of us here at Hdqrs., and I think to all our active Associates everywhere, is in the belief that the BSR publications are doing something really useful. And when the problem of how to be useful and interesting at the same time is too much for us, your cooperation saves the day. Our 'contact circulation' is now about 2500, we are gaining friends in other countries - and on certain controversial matters the tide now sets in our favor. So once again, 'thanks for everything'.

Divobequa - May the Gods prosper all that you do.

Meade Layne.

MISCELLANEOUS:

Clairvoyants needed: "A young graduate engineer needs help of clairvoyants who can see radiant energies emanating from metalic objects, magnets, crystals, living organisms etc., for scientific purposes. Small experimental kits have been devised. This is 'unorthodox' research extending the studies of Baron Von Reichenbach. Address all inquiries to BSR ASSOC. 6-8-5, C/o BSR Hdqrs., 3524 Adams Ave., San Diego 16, Calif.

Back Issue Wanted: We have several requests for Round Robin of May 1949, containing the article Two Inventors Return, by Dr. J. Gilbert E. Wright. We have only office copies left and will pay, give credit or exchange for any sent in to us. (M.L.)

Publication Schedules: As heretofore announced, we do not print our bi-weekly Clips, Quotes, & Comments on dates which coincide with the mailing dates of Round Robin. This latter publication goes into the mails the first week in February, April, June, August, October, and December. On these dates CQC does not appear. Subscriptions to CQC are merely extended by six issues - there is no loss to our readers. It is only that we are under - staffed and have to 'stagger' our office work. ml

Once Again - a Thank-You Note: This is addressed especially to our friends who have sent us small sums to help with the "Personal Bulletin" (P.B.) service - in addition to the stamped and self - addressed envelopes (10 or less). There is no regular publication schedule for the P.B. but it may be very useful if the censorship continues in force or is increased. And NO regular charge for PB's.

The Electronic Medical Digest, engaged in a legal struggle with the A.M.A., has suspended publication, but is now organized as The National Health Federation - see colored leaflet enclosed with this Round Robin. It deserves BSR support in every way. Back issues for the last five years are available, not less than 15 for $5.00. Copies of Abrams "New Concepts" at the same price. Order from National Health Federation, 2452 Van Ness Ave., San F'co 9. This is a fight against medical monopoly and dictatorship.

Waukegan Contact Group; 2135 Hyde Park, Waukegan, Ill. announces a Research Bulletin, and will send a small folder describing it and the organization. Or send .50 for one copy of the Bulletin. We hope to review this publication in our Clips & Quotes.

MEMO from Hoxsey Clinic: "It probably has not been called to the attention of the BSR that there is a Hoxsey Cancer Clinic in Portage, Penna. (911 Caldwell Avenue). We are on the verge of having our institution licensed by the State as a Clinic and Hospital." (Dr. Newton C. Allen, Medical Director.)
