EVE, HEAR MY VOICE

I DREAM OF TERROR

HE WALKED THE AMERICAS

BY
L. TAYLOR HANSEN

$6.95 plus 25c postage & handling

Almost two thousand years ago a mysterious white man walked from tribe to tribe among the American Nations. He came to Peru from the Pacific, He traveled through South and Central America, among the Mayans, into Mexico and all of North America, then back to ancient Tula, from whence he departed across the Atlantic to the land of his origin. Who was this white Prophet who spoke a thousand languages, healed the sick, raised the dead, and taught in the same words as Jesus Himself?

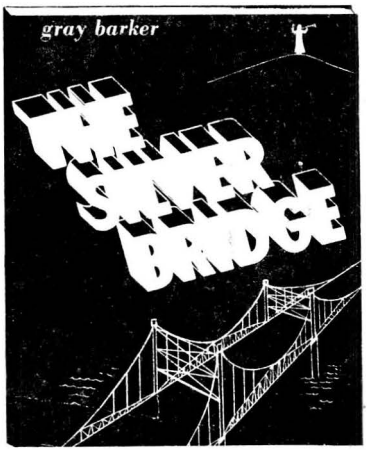

These are true Indian legends, gathered during twenty-five years of research by L. Taylor Hansen, archaeologist, from many different tribes all over the Americas. By consulting museums, libraries and experts on folk-lore, it has been possible to correlate the findings into this fascinating book, backed up by the spades of the diggers into ancient ruins, and by all the sciences with which L. Taylor Hansen is familiar. This is a book that will back up the New Testament of the East, with the Christian Indian legends of the West. In this book is proof that the Savior came not only to one continent, but to all the world. This book will strengthen your faith as no other could!

EDITORIAL

At the bottom of this page you will find a newspaper item reproduced. No doubt you will read it with interest, and you will be considerably concerned with the warning it gives; nobody wants to get the flu, especially a type for which there is no present vaccine, and for which you have no previous immunity because of already having had the

New Strain of Influenza on the Loose

United Nations, N. Y. –UPI– Added to the forecast of a severe winter comes a message from the United Nation's World Health Organization (WHO) warning that a new strain of influenza is on the loose.

The warning was sounded Friday after the organization's two main influenza centers, in Atlanta and London, reported their latest research results.

According to WHO's findings, a cold virus scientifically dubbed "A-H Kong-188" has undergone a number of changes in the first half of the year and developed new characteristics that may require a reformulation of current flu vaccines.

In other words, those immune to the Hong Kong and the previous Asian flu may no longer have protection against the new type.

WHO said its consultants estimated that it would take several months to prepare a vaccine to fight the new strain.

The new strain of influenza, dubbed "A-England-42-72," appears to have come from the same general area where its predecessors originated: in Southeast Asia and the Pacific region. Outbreaks were reported this year in Australia, Papua, New Guinea, Malaysia and Singapore.

so-called "Asian Flu". But what this writer finds frustrating is that possibly none of you will comprehend the real "news" being given you by this newspaper item. Even more frustrating is that the United Nations World Health Organization has not included the far more sensational (and vastly disturbing) news that it KNOWS exists in this story. There are several reasons why they have not included it, and we'll go into that a bit later—but for now, let's just speak from a personal viewpoint.

Several years ago this writer contracted "A-Hong Kong-188". There was no vaccine for it at that time. Also, to make matters worse, the flu was complicated by contracting virus pneumonia. In combination, these two are killers. And the combination is all too frequent. WHO officials were quite worried, as they are now about 'A-England-42-72". Actually, the symptoms are rather mild, and fever levels are not alarming; a fever of 99.8° to 100.2° degrees is coupled with a general feeling of debility, headaches, and all the symptoms of a "cold". But what is happening in the lungs is another matter. Lung tissue is being rendered incapable of removing oxygen from the air breathed into them, and transferring it to the bloodstream. And because you don't feel awfully sick, you become a "walking case", and continue to try to work and function as usual. When you finally reach the point where you collapse, the damage has been done, and there is great danger of death. If you recover, the lung damage you have suffered cannot be repaired. You are permanently "short of breath" and incapable of going into higher altitudes (such as the Colorado Plateau or the Rockies. Exertion causes a rather painful condition, rendered very disturbing because of the "panic" syndrome that comes with inability to "get air", which the body informs you with frantic alarms is a threat to your life.

In this writer's case, we did go to the hospital, but not until after about three weeks of underestimating the seriousness of the situation. At that time, only two "proven" cases of this strain of Asian Flu existed in the state of Wisconsin, and the other was complicated by the other patient having had hepatitis. Thus, his blood was unsuited for manufacture of a vaccine. A vaccine was successfully made from this writer's blood, and repeated return trips were requested for the purpose of making more. It is a matter of personal satisfaction to this writer that perhaps thousands of lives have been saved until now by the existence of this vaccine, and that many cases of flu have been either prevented or lessened in severity because of it.

Now, as you have seen by the clipping we have reproduced, the whole thing will have to be done over! New vaccines will have to be produced, and it will "take several months to prepare"; for the simple reason that the new strain is just now beginning to make its appearance, and it will take time to identify positively, and create the proper vaccine. It will take the contributions of some who contract the disease, and also contract pneumonia, to make a completely effective vaccine. We hope it will not be you who is the "guinea pig", and we are rather disturbed that our own "immunity" isn't as secure as we had hoped. We doubt if we could take another such attack! Our only hope is to avoid contracting the disease.

But it isn't this news we are most interested in imparting to you, it is something else that seems to be effectively concealed from the general public, and for reasons that can hardly be good and "moral" reasons. Some of our readers may remember that since as far back as 1957, we have been reporting a very significant set of facts relating to such things as Asian Flu and the testing of atomic bombs, and also involving the world's weather.

We won't go into detailed specifics, because we've done that many times; all we will do is make a few positive statements, tell you that they are facts, and point out that if you care to, you can look it up yourself, and you will come up with three sets of identical "graphs" which will startle you. What happens is this:

1. An atomic device is tested, either in the atmosphere, on land, or in the ocean.

2. Worldwide weather patterns are changed, namely a severe drop in seasonal temperatures (much below normal); a great increase in rainfall, particularly in very heavy downpours, which results in destructive floods. This increase in rainfall comes from the introduction into the atmosphere of enormous quantities of dust particles and salt particles. Since every raindrop requires such a particle to form, the introduction of vast quantities of particles brings an obvious and inevitable result. The moisture is available in our atmosphere in unsuspected incredible quantities, and gets just what it needs to be precipitated when those added particles are introduced into that vast atmospheric sea of water that exists in invisible vapor form.

3. Radioactivity is spread widely through the atmosphere via the particles, is precipitated to the ground by the rains, enters the water supplies, is deposited on plants and ingested by them, and thereby ingested by us as we eat them and drink water, and also eat the flesh of birds and animals in which they are accumulated by the animals' own diet. This radioactivity is deposited in the marrow of our bones, where the blood is manufactured, and can cause such diseases as leukemia. But the more significant and immediate effect of radioactivity is on those simple and primitive life forms we call virus and germs. What occurs is a mutative process that acts particularly effectively on such things as the "flu" virus. Each mutation is called a "new strain", and is precisely what the World Health Organization is warning us about in this news item.

What has happened can be and is correlated, EACH time there is a bomb test, there is an increase in atmospheric radioactivity; there is an attendent effect on the weather (the Earth gets the cold shudders) and rainfall increases; a new strain of flu virus appears. Once the bomb is exploded, the other two phenomena are inevitable, and NEVER FAIL to appear. When your writer had his bout with Asian Flu, it was just after such a test; at that time WHO warned of a "new strain" of Asian Flu. Now we have had new tests (perhaps the dirtiest in history, because two countries who did not sign the atmospheric test ban—which was signed in panic by the USSR and the USA and a number of other countries after Kwajalein and Siberia accidents—were guilty of the tests: France and China) and now WHO, not because they have isolated the new strain, but BECAUSE THEY KNOW IT IS INEVITABLE THAT IT WILL APPEAR knowing full well the sequence of events as I have outlined them, have issued another warning. Now they will have to wait for confirmed cases from whose blood they can develop a new vaccine.

Why is it that the people of the world have not been informed of the real reason for the new strains as they appear, and that the atom bomb tests are the cause? Very brutally stated, it is because there is such a thing as legal responsibility for damage caused to citizens of governments whose activities cause them harm; particularly in this country where the Constitution guarantees the "right of redress". In short, if you get Asian Flu, you might actually sue the government for damages (if it were an American test—suing France is possible, but the intricacies of international law in these things are enormous and ill-defined). Such things as the death of thousands of cattle some years ago from radioactive fallout, could have been eligible for "redress" IF THE GOVERNMENT ADMITTED THAT ITS ACTIVITIES HAD INDEED CAUSED DANGEROUS RADIOACTIVITY. You may have noticed the precipitate haste with which they always announce that the "levels are well below the national standard of permissibility and safety, and have no ill-effect on health".

Yet, it is true that thousands of deaths, and millions of illnesses have been caused by atmospheric tests of atomic weapons. By the Constitution, every person so damaged is entitled to and has the right to be recompensed by his government. That is why the denials of any such effect of the tests are so vehement.

When the French announced their new series of tests, you all know how the governments of the world, those who had signed the Atmospheric Test Ban Treaty, protested to the French government. You all know the arrogance with which they refused. What is regrettable is that the protests weren't made with accompanying bolstering by the real reasons for the protests—in that case, world opinion would have been overwhelming. You and I would certainly have protested mightily—it is our lives and health and prosperity and well-being that is being attacked!

You have noted the recent weather—the cold summer, the devastating floods, the crop-ruining rains, the early Fall, and as WHO predicts in the clipping we reproduced, A SEVERE WINTER is coming. And when it comes, watch also the devastation of this new strain of Asian Flu. You can blame the French and the Chinese for it. But even OUR government will deny that they are responsible. Talk about morality!

By the way, did you often wonder why the flu came to be called "Asian"? It is simply because the governments know that's where it got started—in Asian bomb tests. Even the Soviet tests were in Soviet Asia. And as you note in the clipping, the new strain comes from "southeast Asia and the Pacific region". And the outbreaks are in the countries surrounding this area. This winter the virus will have been borne by the winds around the world, and in this country many will die because France and China did not sign the Atmospheric Test Ban Treaty. The ghost of Napoleon still haunts the halls of the government of France. The virus of war and hate has graduated from bullets and bombs to viruses and radioactive fire! And it cannot be said that "they know not what they do" because they do know!—Rap.

The golden rule in life is moderation in all things.

HITCH YOUR WAGON TO A STAR

BY ZELLA H. GRANT

Winning speech at I.T.C. Council Meeting, Southwest Region, International Toastmistress Clubs.

"The stars lure a pilot with their movement through the heavens, when he follows them; no matter how stubbornly he tries to compensate by a change in heading. I can trust the stars; they're always the same—familiar constellations following each other slowly through the heavens. As long as I can hold on to them, I'll be safe."

These are the words of Charles Lindbergh, as he flew his little plane, "The Spirit of St. Louis" across the ocean. He was flying on a dark and stormy night, using what is known as celestial navigation—flying entirely by the light and guidance of the stars.

What do the scientists tell us of the stars? They say they are the group of heavenly bodies which are situated outside of our solar system (differing from the planets in being self-luminous). All the planets, when viewed through a telescope, present a sensible disc; but the stars appear as points of light, twinkling constantly. Arcturus, that star of great magnitude, which lighted the World's Fair in 1939, is the nearest to the earth; while Sirius is receding—Sirius, whose light surpasses that of the sun sixty-four times!

When the wise men of old, the teachers and philosophers, the viewers of the heavens, contemplated the stars and their movements; when they thought about themselves, they were moved to say: "When I consider the heavens, the work of Thy hands, what is man, that Thou art mindful of him? Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels!

Once upon a time, not so long ago, a new star appeared in the heavens! And the wise men of old followed that star; until it came and rested over a manger, where lay a little child, and the birth, the life, the death, and the resurrection of that child has changed the purposes and the plans of men of all the ages! The reverberations of that life are still ringing down through the halls of time challenging men to new life and hope.

Have you hitched your wagon to your star? Are you following your star of hope and light? And, America, this dear land of ours, is she following the star of her hope and destiny?

When that star shown in the heavens, in that time and place, the land and its people were in bondage—tyrants were abroad in the land! Man was treated as a chattel, a slave,—not allowed a mind of his own—buffeted about, often in chains, with no freedom of his own. Taxed beyond all reason.

Have you thought, have you felt, have you sensed that there is a force abroad in our land today that would once again reduce man to a slave?—take away his liberties, his rights as an individual—even deprive him of his sacred thoughts—O, America, beloved land, are you following your star of light and hope? Are you protecting this man, this pilgrim who came to your shores, because he found a place for his self-expression, his creative ability, his freedom of worship and search for truth?

"Hitch your wagon to a star". What does it mean? These are the words of one of our own philosophers. I think they mean—that all of us have a star of hope and light—we are the wagon which carries our innermost thoughts heavenward, until we find our star and make contact. Have you found your star of hope and light? Are you following that star?

I DREAM OF TERROR

by Ray Palmer

Last night I had a nightmare. It had to do with doors that would not open, and a frantic call to "Mother" which could not be made audible because of the terror that paralyzed vocal cords—you all know the phenomena: You try to call out, but no sound comes forth because terror has its grip on your throat. Also, in the nightmare, you attempt to flee, to pass through a door, but some strange power seems to slow your movements, prevent your fingers from grasping the doorknob with sufficient force to open the door, while all the while the terror at your heels rushes toward you unimpeded.

I have had this dream, this nightmare, often. It is a totally terrifying experience, and yet, it has always been a mystery to me. I have not understood why things happen as they do—and certainly I have never known why the nightmare occurs at all. . .until today! Now I know, and it is because of two very insignificant clues that led me to a solution. Let me tell you about it, because it is not what you might think it is, and although it does have some basis in the concepts of modern psychiatry, it cannot be explained in the conventional way. First, let me relate the nightmare to you:

I am in bed, I awake—because something, someone, is in bed with me! I lie there, paralyzed with fear, not daring to move, yet I can feel that intruding something or someone stirring at my feet and at my back. I am lying on the right side of the bed, facing toward the right, yet almost on my back—perhaps turned thirty degrees right of being flat on my back.

As I lie there, I remember why I am having the nightmare—it is because I was foolish enough to forget, and to go to sleep in this position. I have discovered through more than 50 years that when I lie in this position, the nightmare is apt to occur; so I avoid that position. I have often wondered why it is so? Is it because, lying in this position, I can view the entire room? Does it really help to lie on my stomach, and because, ostrich-like I cannot see what is going on in the room, nothing will therefore go on, or actually is not going on? Yes, I realize that is why I have trained myself to lie on my stomach—it is true that the nightmare does not come then!

But this, as any psychiatrist can tell you, will not solve the problem, will not put the nightmare away for good if we could but trace it down to its traumatic origin, and thus destroy it by understanding what it was that really caused it. So, many times I have deliberately braved the nightmare by going to sleep lying on my back as I have described. It is necessary to lie other than flat on my back, because I am hunchbacked, and lying flat is just not possible. Yet, to all intents and purposes, I am lying flat, and thus the entire room is visible. Always the nightmare has come! And never have I been able to learn enough about it to dig back into my childhood and discover what experience it was that has caused it. What was it, really, that was in my bed with me, in the blackness of night, and why can I not get the bedroom door open and escape from the room, except with enormous difficulty? I must escape from the room, because "Mother" does not come, simply because I cannot call out aloud. My voice comes out only as a strained whisper, audible only to me. My throat is tight with terror.

Yet, I do escape from the room, to find that "Mother" is not in her own bed, but in the lighted kitchen. I never get to her, because with all this fighting to open doors, and to make my way through the house, held back by the molasses-fetters of terror, I wake up, find myself in my own present-day bed, and now the frantic call for "Mother" actually becomes audible, and often I awake my wife with my hoarse voice. If she hears, she answers, and somehow, "Mother" becomes my wife, Margie, and I am confused. Was it really Margie I was calling? Have I just, as she says, had a bad dream? And trying to recall its details, actually all that is obvious is that some horror was in my bed (it certainly is not there now), it was very dark, and I was fleeing in the bonds of that awful detering clutch of terror familiar to all who have had such nightmares, and a door somewhere would not open.

But this nightmare, last night, was different—there were two clues. As I thought of them, memory began to flood back; I began to see the whole picture in all its details, and at last saw the truth, what had really happened, and who was involved.

The first clue was the bathroom. I had entirely forgotten the bathroom. We lived in a house at 3215 Mount Vernon Ave., in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. We lived on the second floor. Last night, as I finally managed to open the door of my bedroom, I remembered that "Mother" was not in her bedroom, but more likely in the kitchen where the light was. I reached the kitchen, only to find it deserted. So, engulfed in new and even worse terror, because now I felt I was alone in the house, I turned back to go once more to her bedroom, which was a fearful trip because to do so I had to pass my own bedroom, and I knew what was inside that! But as I passed the bathroom, I saw that my mother was inside, and I went in, and that is where I awoke. I awoke because I recognized the bathroom! I knew now exactly where I was! And better, I knew when. I knew it had to be sometime between 1913 and 1919. And because I could see that Mother was pregnant, I knew it was 1917. My brother was born in August of that year. It had to be my brother, because I was obviously more than two years old, more like six or seven, and my sister is only one year my junior. This placed the date sometime a month or two before August 22, 1917.

Now, as I kept the whole picture of that old house in my mind, trying to fix on what had really happened that original night when the "nightmare" had actually occurred, and which must be the cause of the recurring dream ever since, I began to remember everything that had happened.

I had awakened to find something in bed with me that moved! I had lain there petrified with terror, trying to call to Mother. Because my voice would not work, I had been forced to get out of bed, and to try to get to her. I had finally made it through that resisting door that stubbornly refused to open, gone into the bedroom where I thought my mother was sleeping, found it empty, turned and left the bedroom, saw the light in the kitchen, reached it and found it empty also. On my way back, I was confronted by my mother who had just opened the bathroom door and was about to come out. I began screaming hysterically, and as she tried to calm me, finally told her that "something was in my bed". She took me into the room, lit the gas-light, and showed me the bed was empty, the room was empty, and finally tucked me back into bed. She turned off the gas-light, and went out, shutting the door behind her.

And as soon as I went to sleep, the terror was back! Once more I awoke, experienced the fright, the inability to call out, and this time I could not open the door! I was trapped. And now, I saw the reason for my terror—there WAS something in my bed! And it was stirring under the covers at the foot of the bed. I have one strange quirk which I have often since warned people about—do not surprise me in the dark, because I will attack in sheer panic which throws caution to the winds. I once demolished a floor lamp which loomed up in front of me in the dark like a person, because it had been moved without my knowledge. So, seeing this lump in my bed, I instinctively moved forward. I could not run, escape was cut off, so nothing remained but to attack.

Just as I reached the bed, the figure managed to get the covers off it, and my outstretched hand felt the head of someone I judged to be a boy of slightly more than my own age. (I judged this in my retrospective memory search last night—what I actually thought he was at the original time, I do not know). I never saw his face, only the back of his head, and felt the hair on it. Then, seeing that the boy was staring at something at the other side of the room, seemingly just as terrified as I was, I turned and saw a tall black shape in front of the window, cutting off the light of early dawn behind it. I rushed toward it, intending to push it through the window, and as I remembered it, actually succeeded. What happened was that as I reached it, it did fly away from me, as though precipitated through the window, and it vanished. I think I must have either banged my head on the wall, or fainted, because I know I was lying on the floor. And when I got up, nobody was in the bed. Nor was there any black shape before the window.

But as I lay remembering last night,

I remembered that I was not asleep during the whole occurrence. I had been awakened by something in my bed. Everything after that happened. It was no dream, no nightmare, nothing in the bonds of sleep. There was a boy in my bed, there was a dark, adult shape, a human form, standing before the window. And all my life that nightmare has been in my subconscious, triggered by going to sleep on my back.

Psychiatrically speaking, now that I know the origin of the nightmare, it will not occur again. I hope it will not, because I have run out of positions to sleep in because of pathological changes which necessitate sleeping in the one of two more-or-less comfortable positions that remain to me. Lying on one side, because of lung damage from the flu, means I cough; lying on the other, two old broken ribs which, when compressed, pinch nerves that cause my arms to "fall asleep"; and similar results are caused by other varied positions. So, I will soon discover if my knowledge of the true cause of my nightmare will now render it harmless, and even iliminate it.

But there is still one more thing to tell you. That old house was the most "haunted" house you will ever find! I have told many times of the things that I saw and experienced in that house. Those were things which were not complicated by the factor of sleep, and I have full memory of them. But last night I finally "remembered" the most terrifying of them all, which obviously I have thrust back deep into my subconscious, refusing to remember it all these years. Now, I trust, it will be just another of the memories of the "ghosts" of that terrible house.

And I know now that I was not the only little boy to see those fearful shapes! I am not afraid of him, cowering under the blankets in my bed. I remember the feel of his curly hair beneath my hand, and how he trembled. He was as full of terror as I was. I hope I really did drive that sombre black spectre away from him in that world of spirit in which he was obviously lost. I wonder who he was?

MEDICINE MAN

Mike Cruz, a 28-year-old White River Apache who farms in California, moved his hands in a wavelike motion around each of the 15 professionals to exorcize "the devil" from them.

After the demonstration one man said that his knee, hurting for the last three days, had stopped aching; a woman said she felt "exhilarated"; and another man said he felt no particular sensation but believed in what Mr. Cruz does.

Mr. Cruz's work classifies him as a "curandero," a Spanish word that means a medicine man, herbalist, folk healer and, to some, just a quack.

In the Southwest there are some 35 curanderos like Mr. Cruz, who says he has treated with success patients with arthritis and sugar diabetes.

Traditionally trained Navajo "singers" work on the belief that illness is a result of a disharmony with the universe, according to a report in the latest issue of The Sciences, published by the New York Academy of Sciences.

The report, "Medical School for Medicine Men," describes how they bring about the restoration of harmony through the proper ceremony or song. All members of the patient's family must take part in a sing. The duration depends on the intensity of the illness. In a very serious illness the sing or ritual chant may go on for five to seven days.

Dr. Jose Angel Fuentes, professor of public health at Loma Linda University, Calif., believes such practitioners deserve a place of respect in modern medicine.

"There is no question about it. They can do things physicians cannot do and modern science is turning back to them to learn what they do," Dr. Fuentes said.

350-MILLION-YEAR-OLD FOOTPRINTS

Norman Wakefield, 53, head of the biology department at Melbourne's

Monash University, found the footprints of an animal that roamed the Earth more than 350 million years ago in a rugged gorge in eastern Victoria.

He said they may be the oldest footprints known to man.

Dowser, Raymond C. Willey

LONG DISTANCE DOWSING

Raymond Willey can locate water by holding a pendulum over a map! Mr. Willey is the editor of the American Society of Dowsers' quarterly magazine. He was one of the founders of this society which has grown to 1100 members.

Although Mr. Willey has been dowsing for 40 years, he didn't realize he could "map dowse" until about 22 years ago.

Perhaps the ability to dowse runs in the family. Willey has one daughter and three grandchildren who are able to dowse. His other two children and nine grandchildren do not.

THREE TON BLOB OF PLASTIC FALLS FROM SKY

A plastic "thing" fell on the Herbert Jackson farm near Sardinia, Ohio. About 40 feet in diameter and weighing an estimated three tons, the origin of the "thing" remains a mystery.

The Federal Aviation Administration in Cincinnati and the U.S. Weather Service both claimed that they had no such weather balloons used by either department.

PHANTOM CAR TOOK TOUR

From the Middletown Journal in Ohio comes this account:

"CARLISLE—For 20 minutes yesterday a 1969 car sat in the parking lot of the Park-N-Save Supermarket on Dayton-Oxford Road.

The driver, Mrs. Ramona G.

Lainhart, 18, was inside the store shopping.

What happened next comes from people in the parking lot who told the following to Carlisle Ptl. Robert Pell:

The car began to make a noise, then the engine started up.

The driverless car started moving forward and a man obviously acting on impulse, jumped in front of the car and tried to hold it back. He quickly jumped aside unhurt but was able to see that the gearshift was set in neutral.

The car, picking up speed, hit the front of a pickup truck, then swung toward the store and smashed into a plate glass window and corner post, breaking the window glass and glass in a door.

The engine stopped, the gearshift still in neutral. The car had traveled a total of 40 feet.

Ptl. Pell said Mrs. Lainhart had the car keys with her and she and her father, Thomas Blevins, both said emphatically the car had been giving them no trouble.

Total damage to the store was estimated at $2,500, and to the pickup truck $200.

The car received only $100 damage.

After it was pulled from the shattered glass of the store by a wrecker, Blevins got inside, put the car in drive and headed for home, everything operating normally."

THE BEST THINGS IN LIFE

The best and sweetest things in life
Are the things you cannot buy
The music of the birds at dawn
The rainbow in the sky;
The dazzling magic of the stars,
The miracle of light,
The precious gifts of health and strength
Of hearing, speech and sight.
The peace of mind that crowns
A busy life of work well done-
A faith in GOD that deepens
As you face the setting sun;
The boon of love, the joy of friendships
As the years go by;
You find the greatest blessings
Are the things you cannot buy.

HEAR MY VOICE

FOR CONFUSED WOMEN EVERYWHERE, HERE IS A PLEA FOR LIBERATION OF A DIFFERENT SORT.

BY M.J. BLOOR

I have created thou not as an inferior mate, but as a finer instrument, attuned to hear My voice. Yet thou has closed your mind to me. I have attuned your emotions to a higher key that you may know My presence, yet you dull them with the wicked ways of man. I entrust you with My most priceless possessions, My children. You enthrust them to man to confuse and corrupt. We walk through the Valley of Death together to bring life. . .we overcome its threats. ...and you still deny Me.

I restore your health over and over again that you may be with My children, to remind My children to obey My laws and to let them know "I AM". You put them in churches and in schools to be crippled in spirit and inspiration. You again and again submit to man's inner will, wars and murderous ways. Your gentleness has turned to wantonness. You have permitted yourself to be removed from the throne I created for you. By following like sheep to their slaughter, the dictates of fashion and status formed by advertising men. Your Adams are still tempting you with their gifts, and you deny yourself of Eden by accepting them.

You have become nothing more than a toy for man's pleasure. You utter, "the Bible says,". . .Again, I say, "look only for the truths!" Your priests have hidden my meanings to benefit themselves. Knowing Adam's weakness, I endowed you, Eve, with a finer fabric that you could overcome all of Adam's schemes, and yet you permit Adam to judge and condemn you. My work of art and my final creation: Oh Eve, I cry out to you, "Why will you not hear me?" Your Adams sit on all the thrones of my planet, judging themselves as "Gods". They tell you when my children must die. They tell you whom you must hate, they ruin you. . .and judge and condemn you harshly. Yet in that tomb of flesh you are struggling in, I have not forsaken you. I am with you if you will but be still and hear Me. I have given you the wisdom to show Adam his errors, yet, some of you encourage his ways. I have created Adam to revere you. You have degraded yourselves to be nothing more than a hollow echo of your greatness.

I have created some tender Adams to help restore you to your throne. You see them not! You have permitted yourself to be conditioned by the wiles of Adam. The storm clouds are gathering. The world will be aflame with greed, power, lust. My little ones hunger for food of body and soul. Adams are warring amongst themselves. For to remove the flesh, the spirit has no color.

I created one and all. Eve! Eve! Hear My voice. Teach My children from your heart and spirit from whence I Am speaking to you. Lead Adam away from the path you are permitting yourself to follow. The path leads to final destruction. . .and your final death. Life everlasting can only come to those who hear my Voice. Your time runs out. I cannot send my little ones to a faulty planet to be destroyed. Oh hear My Voice, Eve. Only you can tip the scale. Destruction. . .or Eden?

I have created you as woman and endowed you with the wisdom to recreate, to call My little ones to you. . .that you may have job and happiness. You have abused this honor by denying My presence in their guidance. They are loaned to you for your loneliness is great. Eden has closed its gates to you. I Am a patient and just Father. I still forgive you and send you My little ones. In turn, you corrupt them and return them bloody and maimed by their brothers. I speak to you. "Return to your high estate. Let your Adam learn your ways. Teach him to look to you from whence he cometh. I again will give him his great wisdom and knowledge. This can be your only redemption.

Let My planet live. It was created by Me with a good purpose and function. Stop your mad rush through life in pursuit of worldly goods. They are yours only for today. Take a good look at your brothers and sisters. You will not see a skin pigment. You will hear and feel my Love enveloping you. You are all My Creations and fit into My Scheme. You cannot comprehend it. You must not deny it!

The reeking odor that comes to My heavens from your corrupt living and shallow graves fill My children "yet to come" with terror. I shudder with remorse and shame for you will not hear Me. The once fine instrument I have created you have corroded with drink and the foul flesh you put before My children to eat. In time, their senses too have dulled. . .and not hearing Me any longer, feel foresaken, rebellious, intollerant. . .falling to all the evils that roam your planet.

I have sent you a good Adam to help you back to your Creator. You have crucified Him. I send you others. You will not hear. You, Eve, are my only hope. You were created to hear My Voice. You are the salvation of this planet. Mend your ways. Return My children with the same love I have shared with you. Fill not their hearts with the terror of living. Reject the filth that has permeated you through the years. Climb back to your rightful throne, never again let it be lured away from you with temptations. Reach out your arms to Adam and let him too find his way back to Eden. . .For without him you are nothing. He is the driving force that builds or destroys. You are his direction.

Eve! Eve! thou has fashioned thyself to please Adam. My voice be stilled.

That which giveth joy to thy fellow and rendereth peace and goodwill unto all—is called light. That which giveth sorrow to thy fellow, or discouragement to others—is called darkness.

A CASE FOR THE LEGITIMACY OF ASTROLOGY.....

HOW ASTROLOGY WORKS

By Dennis Fassler

For many years people have been arguing both for and against astrology. In most of these arguments the people supporting it would try to prove their point by citing case histories of individuals whose horoscopes in the past had proven true or illustrations of successful predictions of world events. But always they were rebutted with the same question; But what scientific evidence do you have to prove this? At this point the believer in Astrology was usually stymied for he had no answer.

But now that is in the past because today science has finally gathered enough evidence to prove that Astrology does work. Furthermore, it even shows us for the first time which planets exert the strongest influences on man. This information should end much of the disputing among Astrologers as to what planets are most important. The following report is presented in its simplest form possible so as to enable the reader who is unfamiliar with science to understand its principles.

Each step of the proof is supported by scientific data that can be found by referring to the references cited. This report is a summary of data which would fill two or three volume sized books and is all that is necessary to establish a case for the legitimacy of Astrology. It is not to be taken as a final and absolute proof but only as a beginning, to guide others interested in proving it more fully. It also intends to serve as a beginning for the removal of the stigma of superstition from it.

This report is solely to prove that the positions of the planets to themselves and the sun, influence human behavior. It does not support the theory that the future can be predicted by Astrology. It does, however, go so far as to admit that the future actions of an individual can be predicted in so far as knowing how an individual may react in a certain given situation. By knowing how a person thinks and acts, and by knowing how the planets influence a persons' moods, one can say that on such and such a day this persons' mood will be happy and light-hearted, thereby causing a certain degree of carelessness which may result in an accident. Planetary configurations plus the person's basic mental and emotional make-up will cause the person to be impelled in certain directions, but these forces can never force anyone to do anything unless the person allows themselves to be so compelled. Unfortunately the majority of civilization allows itself, to a great degree, to be, pushed, thereby fulfilling somewhat the so called "predictions". This report will show how man, as a result of being affected by the planets, experiences certain emotions and conditions of health. As for how he reacts to these stimuli is left over to the field of psychology.

Almost all man's information is gained through his five senses. In fact all contact with the physical world depends on them. It should therefore not be surprising to realize that Man's body, and the condition that it is in, determine his worldly existence. It is the body that is affected by the planets and is responsible for his actions.

The universe is composed primarily of three physical forces, gravitational, nuclear and electromagnetic.[1] Due to the reaction and interaction of these forces any one or all of them might have some influence on the human body. It is unlikely that they are gravitational, for although the influences are present, they are not strong enough to establish any definite pattern. They could not be the nuclear as these operate over such exceedingly short distances that they are almost negligible. Therefore only the electromagnetic are left to influence us. As all our universe is determined by these forces, the living must also be, unless they are part of something else. This is improbable as both living and non-living things are made up of the same atoms.

This force is further divided into two concepts, that of Partical Physics and that of Field Physics.[2] Partical Physics attributes its workings to, the mutual action of particles, electronic currents alone, and constituant particles. Field Physics attributes its effects to, the form of motion of the particles, currents plus surrounding mediums, and the medium in which the body as a whole is imbedded and upon its structure. Of the two Field Physics applies best.

Such conclusions were arrived at by Dr. F.C.S. Northrup and his associates in an electrodynamic theory of life, the results of many experiments in the field of Bioelectrical Physics.[2] Although much had been accomplished previously in this field by men such as Davis, Derbyshire, Jasper, Gibbs and Berger, it was not until around 1935 that progress really began. At that time Dr. H.S. Burr and E.K. Hunt in association with Drs. C.T. Lane and L.F. Nims perfected an ultra-sensitive meter that made it possible to explore the electrical properties of living form without disturbing the thing being measured.[3] It could measure an electric current as small as a millionth of a volt. The results of these studies[4] showed that; in many vertebrates, plants and invertebrates there were relatively steady voltage differences between any two points, there were reproducible standing potentials in both plants and animals, and these potential gradients were not chaotic but existed in well defined patterns, characteristic of the species and to some extent the individual.[2]

For example: Studies of corn made it clear that there was a def-relationship between the electric properties of corn and the genetic make-up of the seed. By making accurate measurements it was possible to predict the future growth history of the individual seed. A potential difference was found in chicks as far as 1½ to 2 mm. away from their body.[5] A salamander rotating between two electrodes produced an AC type voltage. Such a voltage could only be produced if the object rotating had a field.[1-2] Mice showed a voltage increase across their chests prior to fast growth resulting in cancer. Characteristic patterns of potential differences were found in most of the laboratory animals as well as in man. In man in most cases his right side was positive and his left negative. Furthermore, the standing potentials changed during growth. A rise occurred in the first third of life, then levelled off for the second third and decreased during the last third.[1] But perhaps the most amazing discovery was that, in frogs' eggs it was found that the head end of the embryo developed at the point of greatest potential difference and this electrical asymmetry was present before the egg was fertilized and did not change after. Despite any change in growth, this field remained constant. Its presence before and after was just one of the bits of evidence which indicated that there is a positive relationship between an electric field and a living organism. More evidence proving man's electrical nature appeared from the findings that intense emotions such as anxiety and grief, as well as scratching, coughing, startle responses and gastro-intestinal cramps would cause changes in the potential difference of the body.[8]

An explanation for the creation of such a field was advanced by Teorell,[9] in 1935, when he reported that "the physical system undergoing chemical reactions produces ions which pass through body membranes with different mobilities. This results in an electrical field whose force determines the behavior and orientation of those components." Through these and many other researches, too numerous to mention, it was concluded that man's body is electrical in nature and possesses an electrical field.

Since man's body is electrical, it is axiomatic that it can be influenced by other electrical forces.[10] In this report the term electrical field will refer to the combined action of both electromagnetic and electrostatic fields. This is possible as whenever one exists the other must also be present.[11]

Operating within these fields our main concern will be with tiny electrically charged particles known as ions. These are made up of both clusters of atoms and parts of individual atoms and are either positively or negatively charged. An atom is neutral or combined with other atoms when it is not an ion, and is composed of a central portion called the nucleus (like our sun) and an outer part composed of a group of electrons (like our planets). Every atom has a certain number of electrons and this amount is what makes it neutral or charged. If it loses any of its electrons, due to chemical reactions or electrical influence it becomes a positive ion. If it gains any it becomes a negative ion. The electrons alone are negatively charged particles also and become ions when they are separated from an atom.

Our air is filled with billions of such ions and it is the amount of these present that influences our moods and feelings and the electrical condition of the human body.

One of the earliest discoveries of the effects these ions have on the human body was made in 1902 when Caspari,[12] as a result of many measurements on mountains and at various elevations, came to the conclusion that mountain sickness was due to the excessively high ion content of the air. A year later in 1903, Sokoloff,[13] working in the Caucasus', correlated rheumatism with high ion content. The results of these men plus the observed effects of various climatic conditions on gouty and rheumatic diseases, along with the noted unruliness of animals before a storm and the traditional increase in crime during the Föhn winds in the Alps, (Solano in Spain, Mistral in France) started Professor Dessauer of Frankfort[14] on a series of many experiments. In his experiments he artifically created ions of both type and had people breath them in. His results showed that the presence in the air of excess positive ions resulted in feelings of fatigue, dizziness, headaches, roaring in the ears, nausea, increased blood pressure, increased rate of respiration and discomfort.

The presence of negative ions produced feelings of exhilaration, decrease in blood pressure and quiet breathing. Further experiments by others in the field[15] showed that positive air also caused irritability, moroseness and rudeness while negative air caused gayiety, happiness, good fellowship and confidence.

Further evidence was discovered by Dr. Manfred Curry[16] one of Americas foremost Bio-climatologists, who discovered a substance which he called "Aran", which has the ability to alter the organic state of the human as well as the animal body. (NOTE: Correlations show that Aran is the same as powerful negative ions. This will become apparent as this report proceeds.) Dr. Curry found that very little Aran caused a higher pulse, higher body temperature, profuse perspiration, anxiety, trembling and hemorrhaging. Aran is found most prevalent at high atmospheres and latitudes and in brisk snappy air. (Note that negative ions exist in the same places and have the same effects.) The least Aran is found in warm oppressive air. It is an active substance closely associated with Ozone. Ozone is a form concentrated oxygen, being made up of three atoms of oxygen, whereas regular oxygen exists as two atoms. Negative ions also are oxygen ions[17] therefore are also closely related to Ozone.

Dr. Curry went further in his researches and found that people generally fell into three Aran categories; There are the "C" type who need heavy balmy air for best health. This type has a slow oxidation rate and can hold his breath for a long time. This group needs very little Aran. They hate cold weather and are very susceptible to drafts. Tensions in such people are eased in balmy air and such weather leaves them comfortable with less tendency to cramps, asthma, heart disease, and convulsions. They are paler in complexion and their eyes are insensitive to light changes. They are not ticklish and make good workers in sedentary pursuits such as, engineers, mathematicians, teachers, attorneys, etc. as they are not bothered by closed stuffy rooms.

The next Aran group is the "W" type. These people need much Aran and thrive best in mountain air and high latitudes. They enjoy cold windy weather, cold baths, and dress lightly. They get feelings of suffocation after a few minutes in a telephone booth. They become nervous when warm winds blow and are prone to inflamatory and feverish ills as well as bronchial and lung troubles. They are not susceptible to drafts and hemorrhage easily when brushing their teeth. They have rosy skin and make good workers in outdoor pursuits such as sailors, policemen, mailmen, fishermen, farmers, operatic singers, etc.

Finally, there is the "G" type. This is the happy medium group whose members can exist in either environment and have traits of both groups. It is these groups and their various combinations that are the "Astrological types."

The key to the method through which these ions influence the body was discovered by Dr. Ravitz[18] who by measuring the body's voltage changes, found that high body voltage accompanied increased irritability where-as low voltage always accompanied a sense of well being. He further found that, the most disturbed emotional conditions in people always corresponded to the highest voltages. Indications showed that the body voltage rose first then was followed by the emotional changes. These changes in voltage were due to the change in the ionic potential of the air. The change in the number of ions of one potential, (either plus or minus) would change the type of electric influence on the body. As the electric influence on the body changed so did the body's electric field, this being followed by a change in body voltage and therefore a person's mental attitude. Later it will be shown that the amount of ions present in the air is dependant on the positions of the planets and the sun.

It is now clear how the various Aran groups and their variations came about in the past and still do now. At all times our atmosphere is in some ionic condition. Therefore, when a person is born, the first impression they receive will be an instantaneous change in body voltage due to this ionic condition. (While in the mother this influence is the mother's body.) As this sudden voltage change is the first bit of conditioning the person receives, it falls on the most fertile ground and is therefore the most powerful of all. It forms the basis upon which all subsequent conditionings will fall and is what "stamps" a person with a certain astrological influence. Perhaps here is a way in which mankind can build a super race. By controlling the ionic content of the air, of the room a person is to be born in, one can influence to a great degree the future personality of the child. This can easily be done by our modern electronic equipment.

This "stamping" at the moment of birth is what determines to which Aran group the person falls into. From this time on the persons' reactions are influenced by the ionic condition of the atmosphere and by how close the ion amount approximates or deviates from that at birth.

In general the number of positive ions in the air is slightly higher than the negative number.[9] This number is also subject to fluctuations from hour to hour and place to place and in general is usually larger in summer than in winter. Ions increase as altitude does causes mountain air to have a much greater content than sea level. Although this amount varies with altitude, the ion influence is still proportionately the same. Most ions near the earth are formed by the radio-activity in the soil which emits ions of both charges. Due to a process known as adsorbtion, more positive ones escape than negative. This is what causes the excess in the air.[20] Although most of the ions are drawn out of the earth by changes in temperature and atmospheric pressure, the amount that can escape is governed by the electrical potential of the earth.

To clarify this point, one must realize that from 60 to 120 miles above the earth is an electrically charged layer known as the ionosphere.[2] This region is composed of various gases but mainly of oxygen, nitrogen hydrogen and helium. Radiations from the sun, such as x-rays, ultraviolet rays and high speed atomic particles, enter this region and cause these gases to break up into ions. This process is known as ionization and is what gives this region its name. These ions are similar to those on earth with the exception that the sun is responsible for their creation where-as on earth they are caused by the radio-activity in the soil. The amount of ions formed, and therefore the degree of ionization, is naturally dependent on how many emissions reach the ionosphere from the sun. This number varies from day to day, season to season and year to year. During the daylight hours, when the sun is strongest, the ionosphere is greatest. The ionization is greater in summer than in winter. It also varies according to hemisphere, for it is stronger in the Southern Hemisphere when they are experiencing their summer and we our winter and vice-versa. The strength of the ionosphere is what determines the amount of ions that can escape from the earth. The ionosphere is at a positive potential with respect to the earth.[22] This potential is always kept fairly constant by nature which means that, if the ionosphere becomes less positive the earth must become more negative and vice-versa.

According to physics, like ions (or charges) repel each other whereas opposite ones attract. An example of this may be seen in the phenomenon of lightning. A thunder cloud has many negative ions on the bottom of itself. These ions cause millions of positive ions to collect directly under the cloud, on the earth's surface. (The positive ions come from the ground and earth's surface.) When enough have collected the positive ones on the ground are pulled up by the attracting negative forces on the cloud. The result of this is what is seen as lightning.[23] The difference in the attractive power between the cloud and earth is called the potential difference between the two. In the same way the potential between the ionosphere and the earth causes ions to collect on the surface of the earth, only here the ionosphere is too far away to pull them up so they must remain on the earth's surface. The amount of pull exerted by the ionosphere determines the amount of ions that will be in the air. When the ionosphere becomes stronger it becomes more positive. This causes the earth to become more negative, (as many negative ions are pulled to the surface.) This increase in the negative earth charge also results in a strong attractive force for the positive charges in the air, pulling them back to earth, as well as preventing any others from escaping. This results in the reduction of the positive ions in the air. Then as likes repel likes, most negative ions on the surface of the earth are "pushed" into the air, filling it and making the earth still more negative. When the ionosphere decreases and gets weaker, the reverse occurs and the result is a large excess of positive ions.

The electrical charges arriving on the ionosphere from outside alter its potential in proportion to the amount arriving.[24] These particles from the sun are the by-products of tremendous hydrogen bomb explosions which occur within the sun. That such particles are emitted and do influence our ionosphere was proven by our rocket researches into space[25] and by the dramatic opening of the 1957-58 Geo-physical year when a huge solar flare disrupted communications throughout the earth for days.[26] This was an exceptional flare and resulted in ionospheric and magnetic storms which tore it apart. Similar flares occur constantly, only of much smaller size. These flares plus emissions from the corona of the sun are what govern the ionosphere's strength. The general term for events which cause emission of particles from the sun is solar activity. Any increase in solar activity usually results in more electrical particles leaving the sun and greater positive ionization of the ionosphere.

This activity is controlled by the positions of the planets of our solar system. Much information is available on this as all our radio communications depend on the condition of the ionosphere. Back in 1947 radio-wave analyst J.H. Nelson, working for RCA Communications, Inc.,[27] discovered that a direct relationship exists between radio communications and the positions of the planets with respect to each other and to the sun. Subsequent research showed that these configurations have a specific effect on the solar activity of the sun. Mr. Helsons' observations from 1942 to 1949 showed that the following influences were exerted on the ionosphere; (1) The most disturbed 12 month periods, (when the ionosphere was at its worst,) were those just before and after configurations of 0, 90, 180, and 270 degrees between Saturn and Jupiter. (2) Within this 12 month period the even more disturbed conditions were those in which Mars was 0, 90, 180, or 270 degrees from Saturn and Jupiter. (3) Within the period mentioned in (2) the worst disturbances occurred when Earth, Venus, Mercury and Mars were near the 0, 90, 180, or 270 degree arms of the Jupiter-Saturn configuration. (4) When Saturn and Jupiter were separated by 120 or 60 degrees, there were least disturbed conditions. It was further noted that during configurations of 180 or 270, etc. degrees, solar activity was at a minimum while at 120 and 60 degrees such activity was at maximum. The results of J.H. Nelson's observations indicated that the most influential planets were Saturn and Jupiter due to their great size and slow motion. The arrangements by the other planets either added or subtracted from this over-all influence. It was also discovered that these configurations correlate for a plus and minus of 5 degrees from exact arrangement. Here then we see the final link of this report. It furnishes the proof that Astrology can and does influence human behavior. Summarizing the method:

1. The positions of the planets influence the solar activity of the sun.

2. The solar activity determines the number of electrical particles and rays that leave the sun.

3. The particles and rays leaving the sun determine the strength of the ionosphere.

4. The strength of the ionosphere determines the amount of positive and negative ions that are on the surface of the earth and in the air.

5. The amount of ions in the air, by acting on the electric field of the body, determines the voltage level of the body.

6. The voltage level of the body influences the physical, mental and emotional state of the individual, this state dependant on its similarity to that at birth.

This is a picture of Space as it is today, and will be tomorrow, in the opinion of a leading Space scientist and one of America's top Space artists. We are going out into the realm of the saucers, to take our place in that strange community of unknown peoples. We should have some facts at our disposal so that we will know what it will be like "out there". This book is one you will find tremendously exciting, scientifically plausible, emotionally staggering, inspiring yet frightening.

BEYOND TOMORROW has 168 pages, 53 full color plates, 47 black and white illustrations, 11 charts, 11¼"x8¾", simulated leather binding, gold stamped.

HE WALKED THE AMERICAS

BY
L. TAYLOR HANSEN

postage & handling

Almost two thousand years ago a mysterious white man walked from tribe to tribe among the American Nations. He came to Peru from the Pacific, He traveled through South and Central America, among the Mayans, into Mexico and all of North America, then back to ancient Tula, from whence he departed across the Atlantic to the land of his origin. Who was this white Prophet who spoke a thousand languages, healed the sick, raised the dead, and taught in the same words as Jesus Himself?

These are true Indian legends, gathered during twenty-five years of research by L. Taylor Hansen, archaeologist, from many different tribes all over the Americas. By consulting museums, libraries and experts on folk-lore, it has been possible to correlate the findings into this fascinating book, backed up by the spades of the diggers into ancient ruins, and by all the sciences with which L. Taylor Hansen is familiar. This is a book that will back up the New Testament of the East, with the Christian Indian legends of the West. In this book is proof that the Savior came not only to one continent, but to all the world. This book will strengthen your faith as no other could!

The magnificent biography of an ocean! From the "beginning" when the continents were one, down through the eons encompassing ancient Atlantis and Lemuria, noble Greece and Egypt, to the present when science is rediscovering the peoples who lived prior to the great destruction, before Eden.

Where did man come from on this planet? How long has he been here? Who has he been - who is he now?

THE ANCIENT ATLANTIC is a scientific, scholarly book, being, literally, the story of the Atlantic ocean from the very beginning, with the creation of the continents, the formation of the ocean itself, the tremendous geological events that have culminated in the world we know today. It is also an archaeological and ethnological history of the development of the civilizations of man around that ocean - for it was on Atlantis, in the center of this ocean, where mankind began.

Thirty Years Among The Dead

This is a condensed version of Dr. Carl A. Wickland's Classic (and now out of print) book on abnormal psychology. It is a record of his work with obsession carried on with Mrs. Wickland, who was an accomplished medium. Together they cured many obsessed persons, persuading discarnate spirits to give up their hold on their victims, and thus restored their patients to normal, happy lives. This book is still years ahead of present day research in this field.

The original flying saucer book! It was Kenneth Arnold who gave the saucers their name, and he wrote the best book of them all. Here it is, in print after ten years! This is the famous book that tells the true story of the death-dealing "Maury Island Incident" in which two Air Force Intelligence men lost their lives, and Arnold himself barely escaped with his skin. To those in the know, this story is the key to the whole U.F.O. mystery. Perhaps the entire significance of this amazing adventure will never be told, but what you will read in this book will stagger you. No fiction mystery could ever match this true story.

YOUR ASTROLOGY CAPSULE

Loretta Van Dam

AIRES March 21-April 20.

Dec. '72—Jan. '73: You may feel restless and think of faraway places, yet travel plans may be delayed but for the best as it turns out. Echoes from the past may be exciting, stir the romantic imagination a bit—but be practical, realistic. To Aries though this may not come too easily. A financial or legal matter may pose a problem. Something urgent regarding a message that comes from a foreign country. Avoid [illegible]sy, both in yourself and in [illegible]irring it in others. Be t[illegible]o-workers, employers and in-laws; take care of health and avoid mishaps.

TAURUS April 21-May 20.

Dec. '72—Jan. '73: You will be winding up some things that maybe stem from the past. Some frsutrations likely—so curb some of your enthusiasm, Taurus—also try seeing the others viewpoint, and avoid strife with the mate or other partner by so doing. A job or business change of expansive nature beckons on the horizon, with more money. Others look to you for comfort and you do not let them down. You may love one of another nationality than you or one of foreign birth. Many Taureans will be gaining through in-laws or again through foreigners. Don't neglect health and cultivate calm, serenity.

GEMINI May 21-June 21.

Dec. '72—Jan. '73: Watch health—there could be a tendency to overdo, burn the candle at both ends, all of which can take a toll on your nerves as well—so watch this Gemini, as Mars is stirring up health matters rather discordantly. Be calm, tactful, with co-workers. There seems to be much activity on the work or job front around this time. . .and with Saturn still in your sign, you surely don't need any more responsibility than is fair and wise, as this heavy planet tends to bring burdens and to lower the vitality as well. . .so be advised, and be good to yourself, Gemini—don't take on more than you should, as this wouldn't be smart. Partnerships, marital or otherwise, continue to be sensitive, and partners may seem over-aggressive, need to be handled with your innate Gemini diplomacy, now especially. Matters will work out, don't be too sensitive.

CANCER June 22-July 22.

Dec. '72—Jan. '73: Love is exciting, with Mars in your house of love matters. . .and personal magnetism is high. Young people's matters also are challenging and you contribute much to these now. Excellent period for artistic, creative projects as you have zeal and real ability for such now. The entertainment field can be your true medium during this time as you display talent therein. Watch health, and be moderate in all ways. Expenditures may be heavy with the money planet Jupiter in your opposite sign for a little while longer.

LEO July 23-August 22.

Dec. '72—Jan. '73: Something definitely exciting occurs in home and/or property matters. Yet—in regard to property purchased, consider how it could be in need of much repair, etc. and look into any so-called bargains before you buy. Give family some of your time and attention. You may make some important love or marital decision. Don't be too hasty in a domestic situation. . .avoid family dissention, also mishaps in the home. You bask in the response and appreciation of others. Employees, co-workers, or relatives hold some exciting surprises, happenings, for you. Job change of a more renumerative sort is likely now. Love is truly glamorous for most Leos. Your mind turns more speculative than ever but remember to investigate before you invest.

VIRGO
August 23-September 22.

Dec. '72—Jan. '73: Relatives and neighbors seem to be the touchy spots over this period, and use care in travel, too, don't rush into anything. You may be fired up, on more than one front Virgo. Anyway, a very busy period, mentally and physically, much correspondence, phone calls, appointments. Early December might bring some confusion or change of schedule in travel plans. Love shines right on your doorstep but don't wear yourself out, Virgo, or frayed nerves could be the result of trying to do too much. You seem to be looking at home and family in a new light and one that has more to offer you realize, than in the past. You are outgoing, tolerant, and with this you have a new awareness of the adventurous in life. Home, or residential changes could be in the making for those Virgos wanting this change.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23.

Dec. '72—Jan. '73: Home changes should be occurring now or soon, for the better. You are positive and outgoing, hospitable to all. Develop rapport with a relative who is genuinely fond of you and able to help in your ambitions. Watch health, over-doing could deplete your strength. Avoid mishaps in travel, or in traffic. Transportation, communication problems could arise, through misunderstanding and plans could be altered. You are magnetic to the opposite sex, have charm-plus. A celebration takes place in the home now or soon. Many Librans will marry. Take care of money, possessions.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 21.

Dec. '72—Jan. '73: Marriage closer now for many Scorpios, home changes that give a new and brighter outlook. You are a go-getter now more than ever, yet don't be too impulsive or hasty either, as you may be inclined, with Mars in your sign all month. . .yet you are persuasive, magnetic. You can iron out differences with others if you try. Finances, property matters still subject to peculiar influences from time to time, with Neptune in this house in your chart, and you can't affort to take these matters for granted. You are delving deep within for certain answers and will be reaching a new self-understanding and insight. You soon acquire some lovely possessions. Don't cross your bridges before you come to them, Scorpio—no need to. Get enough sleep and rest, be good to yourself. . .and don't jump to any wrong conclusions. Things will work out by themselves.

SAGITTARIUS
November 22-December 21.

Dec. '72—Jan. '73: Certain matters, certain people, may continue to plague you as you somehow sense they are suspect. . .It's true, you can't trust everyone so don't be too gullible, as your feelings on this may well be correct, that is, intuitive. You are ready for action, romantic, independent when you are not worried or uneasy. Best not to rush into anything and rather to be more deliberate over this period. A partner or one courting you may come out of their shell. Increase in income shown, with Jupiter in your house of finances. . .but best not to lend any money, as with Neptune in your sign you might not get it back, and promises would come to nothing. You appreciate beauty, harmony now, more than ever. . .are also aware of invisible forces and from time to time have lightning-like visions of truth.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20.

Dec. '72—Jan. '73: With Jupiter back in your Sun sign, you are ready, set, go. Friendships are warm but there can be rifts too or again some strife or anxiety over a child or young person. Social life active, get enough rest for your health's sake. You see life as an adventure and yet some background influences could disturb, hidden or private matters. Don't be jealous or over-possessive, control unruly emotions generally. Sho your fine Capricorn sense of humor now, and come out of your shell. . .too much introspection, not good. Relaxation your key to inner-outer beauty.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18.

Dec. '72—Jan. '73: Quiet benefits now for Water-Bearers, with Jupiter in your 12th house which also is a good spiritual guidance and protection. Unknown (now) benefactors. Your courage, confidence admired but some "smaller soul" could be envious too. Follow your own course quietly. Don't be too impulsive however in speech or action but think through things, all around. Avoid getting too involved with others who may lean on you unfairly. Social life expands as this period progresses, and there could even be a reunion with one who has been away. Some Aquarians will have secret loves. Many Water-Bearers will be preparing for major personal changes that occur after February, '73.

PISCES
February 19-March 20.

Dec. '72—Jan. '73: You mix business with pleasure well now. An old love returns. Your general enthusiasm pays off both in a business way and in personal contacts. You likely come before the public in some way or a talent you have is recognized and rewarded. Home or domestic, parental matters still somewhat restrictive. Be realistic and not too overly idealistic in regard to others as Neptune, the highest planet in Pisces' chart now is making them a bit unpractical at times especially in romantic matters. New revelation can be yours.

Improve thyself, O man, to be sincere in thyself and in all thou doest; and when thou hast attained this, thy words shall be with power.

THE ABOMINABLE SNOWMAN EXPLAINED

ARE THEY HUMANS SUFFERING FROM GLANDULAR DISORDER?

BY JOHN V. FORAN

Hundreds, possibly thousands of people in different parts of the world have seen Sasquatch, Abominable Snowmen, or Yeti. They have been seen for hundreds of years in Tibet, Mongolia, the Caucasus Mountains of the Soviet Union, and remote areas of the Western Hemisphere. Although there are many unanswered questions regarding these humanoid creatures, there is one question that can be cleared up.

We can conclude that a certain type of endocrine or glandular disorder called acromegaly causes normal-looking men to change form into a Sasquatch, or Yeti. Bones thicken, head and face become larger, torso broader, enlargement of hands and appendages, great increase in growth of body hair producing an ape-like or bear-like appearance. Acromegaly is an abnormal resumption of growth hormone after maturation. A malfunction in pituitary tissues may be one cause. At maturation the bones fuse and can no longer elongate and must grow by thickening. Acromegaly usually occurs in persons in their twenties and thirties, and one person in every ten thousand is known to have it, to a greater or lesser extent. A person suffering very severely from this affliction, with abnormally long hair over his body, and large appendages and torso, sounds like a description of a Sasquatch or Bigfoot. It seems that acromegaly becomes prevalent in successive generations. A mother with a degree of acromegaly will carry an acromegaly-oriented fetus. After this glandular disorder has been inherited through enough generations, one of two situations would occur: a point would be reached where the offspring would already have the characteristics at the moment of birth, or the characteristics like the earlier generations, would be acquired at maturation. In order to find out one way or the other, a Yeti or Sasquatch still in its infancy would have to be captured.

An abnormal increase of growth hormone in the pituitary gland in childhood before maturation causes gigantism. In this case an elongation of bone structure rather than a thickening process takes place. The Easter Island statues would be a good description of the appearance of these giants. A mother with a varying degree of gigantism will carry a gigantic-oriented fetus. In Gen. 6:4, "Now there were giants upon the earth in those days", and in the pseudipigraphical Book of Enoch where it mentions the great giants, Mighty Men, Men of Renown, Naphilim, and Gibborim; it suggests there may have been more than one giant race.

Throughout the ages, so called "little men" have been seen by reliable witnesses in Europe, South America, parts of Canada, and in this country. Their skin color has usually been described as brownish or Indian-looking. Hypothyroidism is the most logical cause of the physical stature of these dwarf-type beings. Hypothroidism or cretinism is a hormone disorder involving the thyroid gland. The thyroid gland controls the mechanism of body metabolism. One cause of cretinism is a malfunction of the gland itself. Another cause is dietary. Iodine in trace amounts is necessary for the body metabolism, and when iodine is lacking in the diet, hypothyroidism results. A lack of calcium, cadmium, copper, cobalt, sodium, potassium, flourine, manganese, and salts of bromine in the diet could bring about hypothyroidism or cretinism, too. The characteristics of this kind of affliction are an average height of three to four feet, a disproportionately small body but a normal sized head. The Olmec statues in Mexico would be a good likeness of these dwarf humanoids. Like gigantism, a mother with a degree of cretinism will carry a cretin-oriented fetus, and the disorder takes place before maturation.

There are many different types of humanoid creatures (Etidorhpa-types, fairies, teros, deros, men-in-black, and Mothmen), as well as the Dwarf creatures, Giants, and Abominable Snowmen.

THE OAHSPE CIRCLE

SOMEBODY NEEDS YOU

The people who write in are looking to you for help, and friendship and understanding. Don't let them down. Grab a pencil and share what you know with the people who are asking the questions. Helping one another. Isn't that what it's all about?

The Oahspe Circle is YOU. . . .and YOU. . . .and YOU.

QUESTIONS, QUESTIONS

The Oahspe Circle:

I would appreciate it if you would please answer a few questions concerning "Oahspe".

Is the green copy of "Oahspe", of the first or second edition?

According to the index, in the front section of "Oahspe", Joshu is sometimes known as Jesus. Now does this mean that he is the original Saviour, as by the beliefs of the Christians?

I came across a book that helps to understand "Oahspe" a little better; it is a summary form of "Oahspe", the name of the book is "Darkness, Dawn And Destiny" by Augustine Cahill.

Now I will mention some gathered information from "Oahspe" concerning Reincarnation; The Book Of Wars Against Jehovih, Chapter LV, verse eleven, page 464 (Green Text); "Come! Come! The Father's kingdom is free! Come! Come! In peace and quietness thou shalt be thine own master! Behold, the Father's places rise higher and higher! Not downward, to the lower kingdoms, nor to the earth, nor to re-incarnation, the invented tale of drujas; but upward to wisdom, goodness, love and happiness." Also in The Book of Judgement, Chapter IV, verse eleven, page 779 (Green Text); "But of such as are below grade one, there are more than six thousand millions, which compriseth such angels as know nothing more than babes, though, for the most part, they were full grown adults as to earth-life. Some are fetals, some engrafters (professional re-incarnators), who dwell with one mortal during his life-time, and then engraft themselves on another mortal during his life time, and so on, calling themselves re-incarnated, and, in fact, knowing no other heavens, being disbelievers in the All Person and in my exalted kingdoms."

It seems that from these two verses that the teachings of "Oahspe" has a different concept of Reincarnation, than what is commonly taught and believed by people who believe in Reincarnation.

I also will quote from a strange belief concerning Reincarnation, by Frank Rudolph Young: How There Is No "True" Re-incarnation: My long-searching ancestors found out from the psychic masters the never-yet-revealed secret of past astral-incarnation. They learned from them that there really is no such thing as reincarnation, or the belief that the spirit of a person, after his death, reappears sometime later in the body of a newly-born person as that person's astral body; the belief that you, for instance, have already lived at least one life on the earth before your present one, a life the very opposite of the one you live now. If you lived like an affluent member of the nobility before, for example, you might be living like a hard-pressed nobody now. The most secretive of the psychic masters, with whom my ancestors lived for so long, had discovered that there is, instead, past astro-incarnation. Past astro-incarnation means that the spirits of dead persons who had natures and who lived existences the very oppostie of yours in past lives, are prone to unite with, or enter into, your body at different times during your present life. They gain entrance into it either sneakily and unexpectedly, or you can draw them into you with the right spirit-thought magic, because opposites attract.

That is what is universally mistaken for re-incarnation. When such an opposite-to-you spirit enters you unexpectedly and you live through the life of its former "owner", that phenomenon is erroneously called a re-incarnation because the occultists have assumed that you must have lived that very life yourself before. According to the most secretive of the psychic masters, however, you exist on this earth but once. And so does your spirit. But—you can "exist back" astrally in many different past lives of others simply by being invaded, or by drawing to you, the departed spirits of deceased people who had natures and who lived existences the very opposite of yours in their own lives on earth.

That is called past astro-incarnation.

Are Ray Palmer's index to "Oahspe", still available for purchase?

Mr. Carl Griffin

• The "Green Oahspe" (the photo-offset copy) is a reproduction of the 1882 edition of Oahspe, which is the FIRST edition published.

There is no doubt that Oahspe refers to Joshu, and means the same person (Savior) as Christians know as Jesus. Don't confuse Looeamong, the false pretender (he calls himself Christ), with Jesus.

Your presentations on reincarnation are quite correctly quoted. To this school of thought, reincarnation cannot be rationally justified. Oahspe is very positive in rejecting it.

Yes, the Index to the "Green Oahspe" is available to all those who have purchased the book. Future editions will have this index incorporated into the book, and the paperback supplement will no longer be necessary.—Rap.

Dear Ray,

Could you please tell me where to find the Book of Gratiyus (not contained in Oahspe)? Also the Book of Sarah!

• We don't know where the "Book of Gratiyus" can be obtained, but we are thinking of reproducing it in the near future. The "Book of Sarah" is a new one on us.—Rap.

Dear Mr. Palmer:

In the July edition of Search you stated that Dr. John Newbrough himself started a colony in 1884 to establish "Jehovih's Kingdom on Earth" as suggested in Oahspe—the project failed.

My question is: Does anyone know of a detailed account of Dr. Newbrough's colony, such as would appear in either his autobiography or biography. I would appreciate someone's writing to me telling me either where to find such a book, loaning or selling it to me, or telling me of it if they read it and the material is no longer available.

MEETING PLACE

Dear Mr. Palmer,

I have had for some years now a copy of your photocopied edition of the 1882 Oahspe. I've been a student of the Occult for many years and Oahspe was the nicest thing that's happened to me. None of my other books seem important to me now. Our family are completely vegetarians and of course try to live the rules for living in Oahspe.

I am very interested in any other information about Oahspe and the other people who believe in it. What connection, if any, is there between the Faithists and Jehovih Witnesses? (None.—Ray Palmer.) Have there been organized any reasonably successful colonies or groups as suggested in Oahspe? (No.—R.P.) How many known Faithists are there? (Over 100,000 copies of Oahspe have been sold.—R.P.) How may I identify them? (Names of Groups)

I am a Commercial Artist and would gladly donate art work to a group with standards anywhere near what is set forth in this book.

Are there annual conferences, seminars, etc? I would so like to meet some people of a similar interest. We feel very much alone in our belief—especially living in Mormon country.

I'll be most appreciative of any help you can give me with these questions.

Thank you very much.

Dear Sir:

I have your name and address from the back of a book titled OAHSPE, loaned to me yesterday by a friend here in Colorado Springs.

I have only had time to glance through the book today, and to marvel at it, but I want very much to get in touch with you, and whomever was associated with OAHSPE.

I came up through the degress of the Rosicrucian Order, was initiated into the Hierarchy of the Masters April 4th, 1947. My experiences with tuning in on the Great Ones, my admission in 1963 to discipleship, and my constant studies in the field of what I call Higher Philosophy and Higher Science and Cosmology, make me intensely interested in this huge volume called OASHPE. I want contact with persons who study as I study, in this field.

As you perhaps know, all too often when we pursue to its source, some great piece of literature, we "get lost" somewhere along the way. I seem to almost always "get lost" in this way. I hope pursuing your OAHSPE will net positive results.

Recently I got a book from the Wheaton (Illinois) Theosophical library, a book called The Earth and its Cycles, which was written by a woman who was clairvoyant and clairaudient. The record of Cosmogony and Cosmology it revealed is startling, to say the least—but I believe every word of it.

May I hear from you?

DO YOU DREAM OF JOINING A FAITHIST COLONY?

There are many Faithists who have read OAHSPE and are striving to find a brotherhood. Many Faithists dream of a colony but do not know where to find one or how to begin. Some Faithists feel bound to their homes and jobs but would love to someday join a colony, and there are many zealous Faithists who are eager to build Jehovih's Kingdom on earth—NOW!. . .yet, for all their differences of age, background, and environment, most Faithists dream of joining a colony, as described in the Book of Jehovih's Kingdom on Earth.

Jehovih saith: "When I begin to call them, My chosen shall come and found My kingdom; and they shall come faster and faster every year." (Book of Jehovih's Kingdom on Earth, ch. XXV, v. 9) Perhaps the Creator has not begun to call. Maybe Johovih has been calling for many years, for what is a century to the Father of All Time, Who is forever creating and dissipating worlds.

Please, if you dream of joining a Faithist Colony—now, or in the future—write us. . .that we may begin compiling a list. If you have plans of establishing a colony or know others who are striving to build the Father's Kingdom, please tell us.

By comparing and sharing our dreams, we may discover ways of accomplishing our goals, for all Power is through Jehovih and concerted oneness of thought. As you write in from around the continent, we can form a conception of where Jehovih's Faithists live and the areas of highest Faithist population. Perhaps, if it is the Creator's Will, we can call a convention of Faithists and meet to discuss our plans for founding the Father's Kingdom on earth.

But remember, O all ye Faithists who dream and wait and hope, you must stretch forth your hands and try! We, as Jehovih's builders, must go forth in faith, knowing we shall accomplish.

STRANGE REMEDIES

PRESENTED WITH "TONGUE IN CHEEK" AND "A GRAIN OF SALT"

BY LARRY CARTER

I. To get rid of warts, (it is said) take an elderberry stick and rub some on each notch for each wart, bury it and never look back, and it would certainly relieve one of warts. Placing this shrub about the house will also rid one of insects and the like.

II. If you want to see the Devil, take a rooster's head and bury it in a place where two trails are separated. Then take a fiddle and play upon it for a nights' season, and about dawn when the rooster will crow, you will see the Devil, as the legend was told, about 4 o'clock.

III. To stop nose bleed (which is a sure remedy) take a pair of scissors and push them into the ground and the nose will surely stop bleeding. This has been proved and certain.

IV. There was once a woman who had been troubled by some influence; she inquired of a wise man to what the cause might be. He told her not to use anything from a certain woman who had been bringing her milk. He told her not to give her anything, no matter how small. The next time she came back, she did as she was told. Also he told her to take the milk and heat it over a fire in a frying pan; and to take a brush from a thorn tree and beat the milk while it was frying in the pan. It certainly put a stop to all her troubles which her neighbor had caused and she never had trouble from her again.

V. To make an undesired visitor leave your house or dwelling, stand in the middle doorway of your house and lean upon the door-post and they will leave, for it has been proved and certain.

VI. When it is raining, you may in some cases, speak the word "Aristomatoist," and it will rain harder.

VII. It was said, that to make one love you, take hairs from their head and put them about your person and you will gain their love; also when you meet them, hold to their hand and rub it gently, putting all your forces of love into their eyes, and with a smile and soft spoken words, you would gain their love for certain.

VIII. In some books, it is claimed that giving oil to anyone, or certain things which are pertaining to dress, such as buttons, bows or ribbons, would cause one to lose their love for you; especially the giving of oil which was supposed to be a curse upon them.

IX. The name given to one at birth, marks the hand with palmistry, sets their life span by the stars, sun and moon, and by numbers to set their character, which molds and shapes themselves and their own destiny.

X. To find water by a "Water Witch", take a stick from a dogwood or wild cherry tree, forked or straight; hold it limber in the hand and walk along; when you walk over a stream of water, it will move up and down; each time counts a foot underground.

Placing a piece of silver on the end of the stick was supposed to find silver in like manner. Probably many others could be found in the same way, who knows?

XI. It was said, that to make good molasses, take a pumpkin, boil it and strain off the juice and sweeten; it was supposed to be pretty good.

XII. Vinegar and peach kernels (ground) is a good tonic for the hair, and to stop the hair from falling out. (They are also a good appetizer, and if eaten before meals, will relieve one of drunkennesss.)

XIII. A sure cure for a bald head is common machine oil. It is said that it would grow hair on a log.

XIV. It is a strange thing that women who wear red dresses are sure to be wanton and an harlot, it is said by those of old time; is it witchcraft or league with the Devil in some way? The tale is told from the pages of the past, and whether to be believed or not, is uncertain, but a witch has always been believed to wear black dresses!

XV. To stop blood, it was said to repeat Ezekiel 16:6.

XVI. It was said that if anyone did not cast a shadow after a rain, they were supposed to be a witch–which would be pretty reliable–who knows?

XVII. It is sure and certain–and found to be true–that if one moves into a house before it is finished, it will never be, and is bad luck for certain!

XVIII. To keep rabbits from destroying crops, common "Purex" in a small bottle will make their meals disagreeable and they will not touch whatever is planted.

XIX. The recipe for old age is cleanliness, plenty of exercise, loafing and not too hard work (which will cause one to worry). Be carefree as possible, but it is impossible for everyone to do this, because of their surrounding conditions.

XX. In the morning, wash up instead of down, and the blood will circulate more freely and keeps one looking younger than they really are!

XXI. Chicken feathers burned under the child-bed will stop hemmorhage.

XXII. 'Thrush' may be cured by having one who has never seen his father, blow his breath into the patient's mouth.

XXIII. 'Buck-shot' solution will cure the hives.

XXIV. 'Sheep-pill' tea is an unfailing remedy for measles.

XXV. Rattlesnake oil, goose grease etc., were said to be a sure cure for many dangerous diseases.

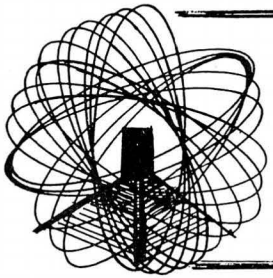

XXVI. Many 'yarbs', catnip, hoarhound, mullein, poke, elderberry, when gathered on the dark of the moon, and brewed with the proper mystic ceremonies, were many cures for almost any maladie, like planting on this time was sure to make crops grow better, as to the light or the dark of the moon.

XXVII. A ball of Asafetide, wrapped in a frog skin and suspended from the neck by an eel-skin string, rendered the wearer immune to many of the contagious diseases.

XXVIII. Women who take blood from the ear-lobes and put it in a man's food, will make him love her more dearly, and forget about everything else. (Witch-craft)

XXIX. It was once said that honey and butter was a good food for long life, like John, the Baptist, who lived on locust with honey for his common food.

TRUE EXPERIENCES

FUZZY'S FAREWELL
By Everett George

We once picked up a very small and hungry kitten that some inhuman fiend had dumped by the road side to starve. We named her Fuzzy. At once she took a deep liking for me. She followed me about the place and sat on the back of my chair or on my shoulder when I was in the house. When we talked to her she always answered back. We came to call her the talking cat.

Fuzzy developed into a very beautiful creature and was at my feet all the time. One day Fuzzy caught the dreaded cat flu. It is always fatal to cats. We did what we could for her but nothing helped. She grew steadily weaker each day. At last when she could walk no more, we put her to bed in a box of straw and placed her in the shop by the oil stove. For 24 hours she lay without moving. That night, before going to bed, I visited her to see if she was still alive. As I bent over the box, she raised her head slightly and with stricken eyes looked at me with mute appeal as if to say, "It's all over now". Fuzzy died before morning.

The next morning as I carried the body out to bury it, I positively felt something around my feet. I looked and there was nothing. I walked on to where I was to bury the body and started filling the grave. When half full of dirt something again rubbed around my legs like Fuzzy had always done. I stopped and looked but saw nothing. I finished filling the hole and stood still for a moment, tears filling my eyes for the furry friend who had gone out of my life, and then Fuzzy's voice sounded clear and plain. There was no mistake as she meowed in familiar fashion around my feet. Then the voice became weaker and it faded into the distance. I then understood Fuzzy had rubbed around my feet as I buried her body, and then bid me farewell as her spirit receded into the realm of Spirit vibrations.

DR. HOLT'S DOUBLE

By Vaughn Knight

During the last world war I was returning late one night to Bridgeport from New York City. I dozed off and the bus driver carried me several miles beyond Bridgeport. Then he set me off at an isolated all-night eating place, where he assured me I could catch a bus back.

But the counter man soon informed me there would be no buses till 5:30 in the morning. It was now one o'clock. While I pondered over the situation, knowing I had to be back early to report for work, I saw car lights pull in.

A man came in and climbed on a stool near me. I glanced up at him, and with surprise was about to say, "Why, Dr. Holt, how are you?"—when I checked myself. I was not sure. And then I could see that he was not Dr. Holt, but a man so closely resembling him he could almost have passed for a twin brother. It was hard to keep from looking at him—it fascinated me.

I had known Dr. Holt very well, a well-dressed young medico, good-looking and with eyes that were sharp and penetrating.

The counter man took his order. Then he said: "Here's a man the bus left stranded here. He'd appreciate a lift into Bridgeport. Are you headed that way?"

He said he was, and that he would gladly take me along. When we had eaten we got in his car and drove off. He inquired where I was from, and when I told him Maine he asked what section. I mentioned the town and he said,

"Why, that's right next to Dutton."

"You must have been up that way?" I said.

He laughed softly. "I used to keep company with a girl from that town, a nurse—June Budge. I hear she married a doctor that practices in that town."

A strange tingle shot through me. I peered at the man in the dim light of the car. I knew there was but one doctor in that town—a Dr. Holt. And I also knew he had married a nurse—June Budge. Could this nurse have had two boy friends, who looked so much alike?

"And do you happen to hail from the state of Maine," I queried. "And what section?"

I could detect a faint smile on his face. Then after a moment he said, "Oh, I'm from everywhere." But he didn't give me his name.

"I know Dr. Holt very well," I told him. "I've worked for him."

"Much of a doctor?" he asked, after a moment.

I had an eerie feeling I must be talking to Dr. Holt—or his double. I carefully worded a brief statement. By this time we had reached Bridgeport. He let me out at a street corner.

The street light gave me a good last view of his profile. I watched his tail light vanish in the distance, with a strange feeling creeping over me. And walking slowly to my rooming place, I tried to puzzle things out. Was he Dr. Holt's double? Who was he? The mystery never has been solved.

THE WINGS THAT FAILED
By Elizabeth Reams

I shared a hotel room with a woman named Minnie and her daughter, Josephine. Josephine kicked and Minnie snored. The room had but one big bed and I had the middle stall. It was a nightmare without having one in your sleep just to stay with these two. I had a job, but no pay check yet, so I was stuck there.

My very best friend in the world was Ora Lacy, a cousin of my father. On this night while trying to get just forty winks of sleep, I had a real nightmare! I suddenly found I had wings and was trying to use them to reach my cousin Ora. She was calling my name over and over again!

"Elizabeth! Elizabeth! I need you. . ." pleaded the voice of Ora.

In vain I tried to make the wings work, but each attempt they failed me. Then all of a sudden I was no longer asleep, but wide awake! And perfectly miserable between these two people. Then again Ora called my name. Again I tried the wings, but they would not lift me off the ground! I sat up suddenly gasping aloud and cried out:

"Something's happened to Ora!"

Minnie grumbled angrily, "Awh, shut up and go to sleep, you never did have a lick of sense!"

"I can't sleep, something has happened to Ora—" I sobbed, "she needs me—I was trying to reach her and I couldn't."

"Oh, all right, all right! If you must have a nightmare, have it, but don't keep us awake with it!" snorted Minnie.

"You and your dreams," hissed Josephine, sneering.

"But I tell you something has happened to Ora," I wailed, tears trickling down my cheeks.

"All right, if anything did happen, they'll let us know, so go to sleep!" ordered Minnie.

I was a nervous wreck on the job that morning, but noon came at last, I skipped my lunch to go to the hotel

THE WARNING VOICE

By R.K. Hase

The story which I'm about to relate happened many years ago. Up to that time, I never believed nor disbelieved in the supernatural. It was just a subject which I knew nothing about nor was I interested in knowing. Anyway, it was the farthest from my mind when I went to bed that night.

The very next day, I was to sign papers that would make me owner of, to my mind, the most perfect place I would ever find. The family, which were my invalid husband and four children were very elated over the prospects of living in this new home. I went to bed this night without a doubt whatsoever. I awoke rather suddenly by what I thought was someone whispering, "Don't touch it".

I sat up and listened. The room was dark and I was about to lay back down, thinking I had been dreaming, when I heard it again closer and more emphatic. I was not frightened, but wondering what it was, I was not to touch. Then this place I was going to buy flashed across my mind followed by a dark cloud over the whole picture. Thinking this is nerves or imagination, I lay back down and slept the remainder of the night.

The next morning, I arose and went ahead with my morning activities as usual, but there was something wrong. My desire for this place had vanished during the night. With no other excuse to my family other than I had changed my mind, I called the owner and cancelled all negotiations. The couple of times I passed this place after this, I wondered if I had been wise in my decision.

Less than six weeks later this house burned to the ground, the new tenants barely escaping with their lives. Eyewitnesses report that a black smoke cloud so dense that it hampered the firemen's efforts to save the place. Though, I have never told this to anyone before. I've often wondered and will listen to the voice in the dark if I ever hear it again.

"THE NEW AGE TEN COMMANDMENTS."

The "Shalt Nots" Rephased.....

(1)--Thou shalt love thy Creator without any other god, with all your mind, heart and soul, and because you find Him so lovable you want to be good just for goodness sake to please Him, and not from fear of hell or bribe of heaven, or what He can do for us.

(2)- Thou shalt be loyal to that love of the One and Only, no matter what happens to you.

(3)--Thou shalt be pure in thought, heart and deed, for sex is sacred and should be researved for true love and procreation

(4)--Thou shalt be generous in giving and honor the right of others to their possessions.

(5) Thou shalt always tell the truth and speak well of others or keep silent.

(6) -Thou shalt have reverence for any kind of life and help also others to preserve their lives.

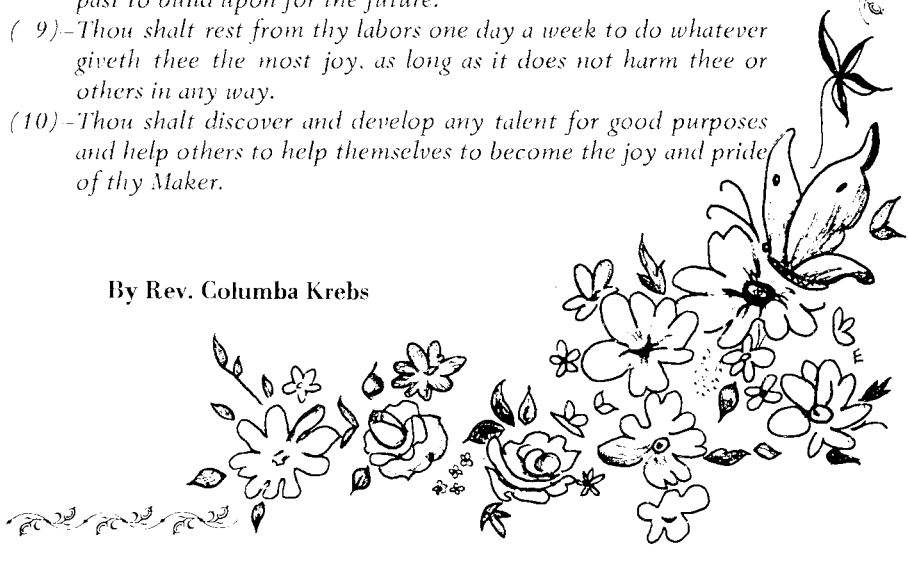

(7) Thou shalt rejoice in the success and/or luck of others and wish them well under any circumstances.

(8)--Thou shalt honor thy ancestors and select the best from the past to build upon for the future.

(9)-Thou shalt rest from thy labors one day a week to do whatever giveth thee the most joy, as long as it does not harm thee or others in any way.

(10) -Thou shalt discover and develop any talent for good purposes and help others to help themselves to become the joy and pride of thy Maker.

Dr. Ann Wigmore

Dear Doctor Ann

Dear Doctor Ann: I have been a long time subscriber to "Search Magazine" and I always look forward to reading your article. A few years ago you had an article in the magazine on Wheat Grass. I thought it was very interesting.

I have recently found out that I was diabetic. I want to be cured of this disease. I have been going to the doctor and he has been giving me pills for it and keeping my sugar count down.

Please Doctor Ann explain in detail again on how you go about curing diabetes with Wheat Grass.–M.S.–Wisconsin Heartfelt Greetings: I was very happy to hear from you. Especially I was glad to learn that you like the Search magazine. It is a fine publication indeed. I have read it for many years myself.

Your health problem cannot be banished unless you remove the cause–which is generally wrong eating. Too many starches, cooked food, etc. These have clogged up your tiny tubes. Naturally the body must be cleansed before new cells will grow. The best way is to only eat the food that is not cooked.

I am sending you a sheet on diabetes. Study it carefully. Then put into practice Mother Nature's methods.

The last person visiting us had been a diabetic for twenty years and in three weeks she had dropped her insulin taking completely. Nature does NOT fail.

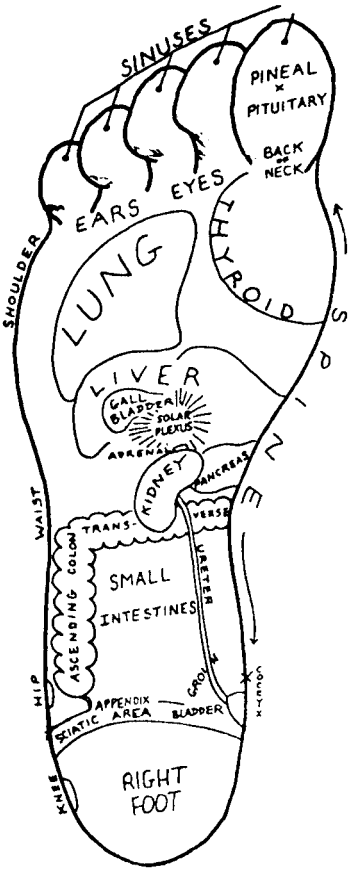

Dear Dr. Ann: Can you tell us about "spot therapy", using the feet?–T.B.–Oregon

SPOT THERAPY: On the surface of the body and especially on the feet there are zones which influence every internal part of the body. A sore spot on the bottom of the feet is an indication of the formation of crystalline deposits on the nerve caused by disease in the related organ of the body. These zones are also on the head, face, hands, and spine. The sore spots should be worked upon by pressure even though they may be painful to the touch, for this pressure helps to activate the afflicted related part and rid it of impurities.

How to do it: Grasp the foot in one hand and with the other hand press the area with a rotating motion with the palm of the hand or the thumb. It is good to message the foot first, rub toes, arches and heels for a little while, to relax the sufferer or to have the sufferer soak the feet in warm water for five minutes and then scrub the soles with a stiff brush. Do not massage the foot for more than fifteen minutes. Watch the face of the sufferer and if the pressure seems to cause too much pain, reduce the pressure.

Two persons can do each other's feet by sitting opposite one another; both then should be quiet. One can do his or her own feet by observing the zone chart carefully and following instructions. Another very good method is to use a large coke bottle and roll it over the entire body, pressing it rather hard. Some people use golf balls. The very best aid to the feet is to go barefoot. This helps recharge the body with electrical force of the earth and at the same time gives the feet freedom to breathe.

Spot therapy, by activating nerves to congested, crystallized parts of the body, can relieve headache, constipation, indigestion, stiff muscles. It is a tremendous aid to the healing process, relieving the cleansing symptoms and at the same time furthering the healing of the body. A twenty-minute spot therapy session on the area for constipation can relieve long-standing constipation and within half an hour the person will have a bowel movement.

Dear Dr. Ann: I have an allergy (eczema). I'm using herbs which are outlined in a book "Back To Eden" but they do not seem to give me results especially when I try to eat fruit or rather eat fruit every day. I seem to have extreme acid condition in my body and I don't know how to overcome it in spite of the fact that I try to eat alkali foods.

We raise an organic garden and buy food from the Natural Food Store that I cannot raise and freeze. So you see I ought to have good food and well balanced as I have read and studied books written by nutritionists. Perhaps I have all the books except the right one.

I'm very discouraged. Please help me. Thank you.—Mrs. M.F.S.—Pennsylvania.

Heartfelt greetings: You say you have an allergy and you are afflicted with a real health problem. Yet you have been studying many health books. This is definite proof that you must learn to be your own doctor and be able to select simple nourishment. Books, generally, are far too complicated.

When a human being is sick, the underlying cause is deficiencies of some sort. Thus the body is thrown off balance and this, in turn, permits the bloodstream to become polluted. This upset blood manifests its presence in the weakest part of the body.

Using herbs or other treatments certainly will not solve the problem although they manifestly are safer than drugs.

Living food—organically grown and eaten uncooked—seems to be the only correct solution to the problem and the body will do what is necessary to correct itself.

I am sending material covering instructions. Following these simple rules will give Mother Nature the proper tools with which to work.

READERS: Send in your questions to DOCTOR ANN, SEARCH magazine, Amherst, Wisconsin 54406. Please enclose a large, self-addressed and stamped envelope.

SECOND SIGHT

MARGARET TREVOR

.....SOME ARE "FEY"

.....SOME "JUST KNOW"

.....AND ONE COULD "SMELL" THIEVES!

Time was when owning to experiences that could not be laid to the working of the five senses branded one as a candidate for a mental institution. Now, thanks to a small measure of scientific investigation of the mysterious sixth sense, the mantle of respectability is slowly but surely descending upon the extrasensory experiences of certain sensitive individuals, though they are still hesitant to discuss them except with those similarly endowed.

This ability is a heritage handed down to some members of my family in every generation. We originated in the south of England. It is possible that the mystic Druids had a place in our family tree, for Stonehenge is only a few miles from the seat of the family for generations beyond reckoning. The Cornish belong to the aborigenes of Europe. They are the Celts related closely to the Scotch Highlanders, the Irish and the Welsh. Many of the blood are "fey", having an unexplainable sixth sense which they term "second sight".

They say they "dream straight" and set great store by this faculty which often manifests in hypnagogic visions, clairvoyance, clairaudience and kindred extrasensory phenomena. This faculty is largely lost to our present generation through the feverish bustle of modern day living and the stern suppression through fear of ridicule of any experience that cannot be attributed to the working of the five senses.

To admit to a belief in dreams brands one as being superstitious, but frankly, I believe in the prophetic dream, but there are dreams and dreams, many are meaningless, coming from a cramped position in sleep, or a disordered digestion. The difference is recognized at once. There is always an intuition accompanying the prophetic one that proves its definite meaning. I have had too many of these vivid dreams to dismiss them as coincidental, for they are easy of interpretation and the event forecast comes to pass within the next few days. Many times they have served as warning or as assurance that there was no reason for worry. To me they have become as normal as any experience on the physical plane.

In my young womanhood I met a problem that seemed to be entirely beyond my solving. For days it caused me no end of worry. At last came the prophetic dream, my first that I recognized as such. I was trying to cross a muddy swollen river that was raging out of bounds. It seemed a matter of life and death to cross and the bridge had gone out. I was driving a horse hitched to a light buggy, our usual mode of transportation at that time. I halted on the bank in terror, but soon an old man with a calm smiling face assured me that there was a good bridge a few miles up the stream. I drove on and there it was with a placid flow of crystal clear water running under it.

My grandfather smiled when I told him my dream. "You're 'fey' like the rest of us. Think no more about it; your anxiety has been needless," he assured me.

He was right. The happy solution was immediately at hand. For well over fifty years since that time I have kept a close account of my dreams and visions and find that a warning of good or evil invaribly precedes the event, often the next day but never more than two or three days in advance. At long range prophesy I am a complete failure. The event foreshadowed must be near and personal to register in my waking consciousness.

At one time we were very much engrossed in raising chickens on our little country place. I had set a hen and the night before the eggs were due to hatch I dreamed that I lifted her off the nest and examined the eggs, noticing that three chicks were hatched, five pipped and the others showing no signs of producing. Out of a setting of fifteen eggs this was a very poor showing. At breakfast I mentioned my dream and then went out to see how things were coming. It was just as I had dreamed, three chicks, five eggs pipped and the others a total loss. A trivial matter one might say, but so accurate as not to be denied.

For the first time in her life my young granddaughter told her dream at the breakfast table. "Grandpa dropped his hat in deep muddy water and fell in trying to get it," she shiveringly told of her terror, but concluded, "I had an awful time getting him out, but I got his hat, too. I helped him walk home. He was terribly sick and muddy."

At ten that morning her grandfather suffered a stroke from which he was months in recovering. The symbology was exact and the prophecy unerring—grandpa got safely out of the deep muddy water. The little girl had come into her heritage.

Another type of extrasensory perception is the hypnagogic vision, which might properly be termed a waking dream. So far as can be determined from the scant data at hand it seems to be fairly common to the human race. Some individuals have only one or two experiences in a lifetime, with others it is a regular occurrence. In my case there is an ebb and flow of these manifestations. Sometimes there is a lapse of weeks or even months, and then suddenly it seems that the door to the inner plane opens. The hypnogogic vision appears just as the borderline between sleeping and waking, when the body is completely relaxed and the mind calm and inactive. With me there are different forms. Sometimes there are beautiful pictures that form with the closed eyelids as a screen, at others the same familiar symbols that appear in dreams. Often, when in perplexity, I have tired to induce a vision with indifferent success—the fact that my mind was troubled prevented it. The door to the inner plane of consciousness was shut and locked.

The pictures that use my closed eyelids as a screen have always delighted me. Like all other psychic manifestations they are sharp and clear and do not fade from memory. There are great flashes of vivid color changing and undulating and rapidly merging and blending into strange unknown hues. Often exotic flowers and strange beautiful landscapes emerge. Sometimes processions of quaintly garbed people move slowly before my closed eyelids. Faces and full forms are common, but I have never seen a familiar face. No one I know who has passed into the "Great Beyond" has ever appeared to me. The people I see are unaware of me. It is as if I were viewing an act on the silver screen.

My firm belief is that the pictures I see have been indelibly etched on the finer ethers which the Bible calls the "Book of God's Remembrance," that everything that has ever occurred is pictured there. The sensitive unknowingly tunes into the right vibration and picks up the scenes when his mind is still. I give this as my honest opinion, but stand waiting to change it when scientific men have reached a different conclusion that they can prove.

Symbolic visions, like prophetic dreams, that forecast the immediate future have time and again aided me immeasurably. Difficult problems have been solved for me in an almost miraculous manner.

Tatting was all the rage when I was a young woman. Having always spent my scant leisure engrossed with a book I was sadly deficient in such womanly skills. My two sisters set out one hot August afternoon to teach me the art of manipulating the tatting shuttle. I labored mightily for two hours with set teeth, but could not draw the thread and make the puckered little knot. The thread became dirty and the so called lace uneven with my frantic efforts, while these two expert needle-women ribbed me unmercifully. I hated to be beaten and kept doggedly at it until I was fairly exhausted.

I gave it up, deciding that such skills were not for the likes of me. I dismissed the whole matter and went to sleep. Toward morning I lay fully awake with closed eyes, when there appeared a rope with the identical knot used in tatting. I had seen that knot often enough, having lived on a stock ranch, but just didn't recognize such a prosiac thing in an elegant new form. That's a double half hitch, I laughed to myself, used for roping steers. I threw the shuttle easily enough in the morning and my interest in tatting was over.

Once, after carefully saving money, I bought a roll-top desk, only to find that it would not go through the door of the little room I used as a study. That desk became a grievous thorn in my flesh. I never passed it without wishing that some way to get it into the study could be devised. Then one night the hypnagogic vision came. I saw the under side of the top. It was fastened to the lower part by plates at the four corners, each screwed in place. I looked in the morning and there they were just as I had seen them in my vision. By taking the top off it was a very simple matter to move it through the door.

A phenomena, which the Society for Psychical Research terms a phantasm of the living, is by no means common though there are many well authenticated cases on record. I have had a number of such experiences. When about twelve years old, one of my sons asked permission to stay after school to play ball. He was refused for he had been neglecting his chores lately. Knowing well enough how to soften me, he telephoned and put in an urgent plea to stay and play ball just this once.

"Mother," he told me in complete bewilderment when he came home, "I saw you when I called. You were washing something in the bathroom—looked like stockings. You did not wait to dry your hands on a towel but waved them in the air and started for the telephone."

That is exactly what I did. This might be explained by shrewd guess work, or coincidence, but it does not seem probable to me for he has had many such experiences as have other members of my family.

For two or three nights running a beautiful woman came and stood by my bed. She smiled and seemed glad that her presence was recognized. A few days later I attended a lecture and the beautiful woman was the speaker. She was a physician from Los Angeles on a speaking tour. Later she located in my city and we had a most rewarding friendship that lasted until her death.

I suffered a severe illness and was often sleepless. On this night moonlight streamed into my room. I opened my eyes and there beside my bed stood Doctor Williamson, as immaculately groomed as always. He stood looking down at me, one hand cupping his chin as if in perplexity. He was there when I fell asleep. I wanted to tell him about it, but thought he would just attribute it to the vagaries of sickness, so did not mention it until long after I recovered.

One day we were discussing psychic phenomena and I told him about his visit to me. "I'll tell you the very night it happened," he said. "I had gone to bed perplexed and baffled by your symptoms, and had very little hope for your recovery. I just made a professional call in my sleep," he smiled.

He came up with an explanation. In his anxiety he had projected what might be called his mental body for want of a better term into my room. In my weakened state, being as much aware on the mental plane as on the physical, I had been able to see him clearly.

Another time a dear friend, bedridden with an illness that she knew would soon prove fatal, opened the door and came into my bedroom. I was reading and the light was good. She made an effort to tell me something. Her lips moved but no word reached me. Not being endowed with the gift of clairaudience her message did not register. It will be noticed that in both of these instances the projection came as the result of anxiety and great physical distress.

Thought transference or mind reading is fairly common. People not particularly sensitive often experience it in striking form. Always keenly interested in anything that smacked of psychism, I attended an exhibition of mind reading, by Swami, something or other. The glaring advance publicity announced that he had just lately arrived from India and would demonstrate the miraculous powers of the Yogi from whom he had learned his system at the cost of years of self discipline. I could scarcely wait. Now I was going to get somewhere in the investigation which I fondly told myself was in the interest of science.

The posters advised the audience to write questions and seal them in the envelopes that would be passed out before the meeting. Being on guard against spotters or such hocus pocus, I prepared my question and sealed it in my own envelope at home. There was no way in which what I had written could be known to anyone.

The Swami made a striking appearance in a yellow satin robe and a huge turban. The envelopes were taken to the stage where he read them by holding them to his forehead. The accuracy of his answers surprised the writers, but mine gave him pause. He made a number a futile attempts and then announced that this was an abstract query and he could not read it. At last he came down into the audience and made his swift unerring way to me. He took both of my hands and his whole body quivered with his effort at concentration. Being just fresh out of India I had supposed that he could answer any question. Finally he got it, but did not read it aloud. He whispered an invitation for me to come back stage after the performance.

Naturally I was delighted to oblige. He ushered me into his dressing room and sank on a divan in complete exhaustion. His turban was askew and curly red hair showed under it. He knew that I understood him and grinned at me and winked; close up he was very young though skillful makeup gave him the appearance of middle age. His yellow satin robe was very much the worse for wear and could have done with a good laundering. He hadn't been in India any more than I had. His remarkable power had been handed down from Irish ancestors whose blood stream ran parallel to mine. He was "fey," just a poor boy making a living with the gift he held in his hand at birth. We became fast friends in that brief visit. He sent me a reading list and a number of books from a mid-western city.

Of course his representing himself as a Swami just returned from sitting at the feet of a master in India, was dishonest, though how could he draw an audience otherwise? His demonstration was genuine. If fraudulent, he was most amazingly clever. One would be forced to admire the subterfuge for its perfect execution.

An incident which I attribute to "thought transference"—though there are those who would have a different opinion—amazed me no end. One very hot August day I took my young son shopping. We soon became exhausted and stopped into a metaphysical center to rest a bit and get a magazine called Azoth, long since defunct. A well-known spiritualist medium was in charge that day. She stopped to talk as we rested. Finally, she said abruptly, "you could tell me my mother's name if you wanted to."

"How would I know your mother's name, I've never seen you before?"

"Go on and tell me," she urged.

Suddenly it came to me. "It is Mehitable," I said positively.

She laughed. "I knew you could do it. Her name is Emily Mehitable, but the family always called her Hittie. Now, "she urged, "tell me my father's name."

My mind was a complete blank. "I do not know."

"Look at the magazine on your lap and you can tell me," she persisted.

The A in Azoth stood out as I looked. "His name is Anthony," I said positively.

"You're a natural medium," she exclaimed delightedly. "Very few professionals can do that. You should develop your powers. There was a spirit standing at your elbow who told you those names. How else could you have known?"

The very last thing I would have considered was training for mediumship, never having been in complete accord with the cult. I could not accept her interpretation. It was easily explainable to me. Being in a state of momentary exhaustion she had been able, unbeknownst to herself, to project her knowledge into my open receptive mind. To me this is a satisfactory explanation of much of the spiritualist phenomena, though I may be wrong.

One Sunday morning when I was very tired and ill, my husband insisted that I spend the day in bed, a rare luxury for the mother of a young family. I dozed blissfully until about eleven, when I found myself up and dressing frantically. My husband tried to persuade me to go back to bed, but I knew what must be done and with the utmost speed. He declared angrily that he should have my head examined, but I paid no attention to him, continuing with deathbed speed.

I was going to my grandparents who lived about fifteen miles away. They were very old but with a strong-minded persistency insisted upon living alone, resenting the slightest effort of their children to manage their affairs.

I barely caught the bus, and all the way up felt the impulse to hurry it along. I ran to open the kitchen door—like old-fashioned folk they lived in their large homey kitchen where grandma was always cooking something on her polished black stove. Grandpa read in his chair beside it or dozed on the sofa—they called it a lounge.

That morning he lay full length on it, his face covered with blood, his long white beard crimson. Grandma was crying and wringing her hands in her helplessness. Our grandsire was stubborn as an army mule—he refused to have the doctor called. He had fainted after the fashion of the aged, and fallen cutting his chin on the edge of the stove. After the blood was washed away the cut proved not to be deep just terrifying against his flowing white beard.

This episode can be explained in more than one way. My grandparents had had a large hand in my upbringing, so the tie between us was a close and tender one, so this could be a clear case of mental telepathy. In their extremity they were subconsciously calling me, and being in a relaxed state just between sleeping and waking, the message had registered with me. Or it could have been what is commonly called a "hunch" which is really a form of intuition.

Now, the hunch is perfectly respectable and can be openly discussed anywhere without encountering the shrug and the raised eyebrow, for most everyone has had this form of intuition at some time or other. It is the first swift impression which is generally correct, even if it seems highly improbable, but after a split second reason takes over and the conscious mind scornfully denies it. A form of this wonderful sixth sense called "inknowing" is just the hunch raised to the Nth degree. The sensitive in some unknown manner taps the Universal Mind where all knowledge rests. Here there is neither past nor present, but the "Eternal Now."

An old lady who was a boon companion of mine was a most prodigious inknower. She was a reduced gentlewoman, brilliantly educated, and proudly independent. She eked out the scantiest livelihood by peddling soap powder from door to door. I loved and admired her greatly, though she was considered very queer in our community. One Sunday she visited me. It was a lovely spring day and after dinner we set out for a walk. Just a few blocks from our house she stopped and sniffed the air like a setter on the trail of a bird. "I smell thieves," she ejaculated.

"You're very wrong." I rose indignantly to the defense of our neighborhood. "Everything is quiet and well ordered here. We've never had any lawlessness."

"I'm only telling you what I smell," she laughed. "Just you wait and see."

Attributing her pronouncement to the vagaries of old age, I thought no more about it. In a few days police raided the house she designated and unearthed a large cache of merchandise stolen from a down town department store.

My sister-in-law is a nurse. Once she paid us an unexpected visit and hurried through the house to find my husband in the garden.

A dear old lady who happened to be present spoke up when she left the room. "Some one owes Miss Trevor quite a sum of money, but she'll never collect a cent of it," she observed quietly.

Mrs. Beatty had never met my sister-in-law, of that I am positive, but she was correct in her prophecy. Martha had come to ask my husband's help in collecting from the heirs of a patient who through some hitch or other were cheating the nurse. True to my friend's prediction she lost payment for over three month's work.

There are others, who while not exactly doubting my veracity, will shudder and state positively that my mind has been unbalanced since early childhood, that I've always lived on the border-land between sanity and insanity. If this were true, surely I'd have gone off the deep end long before this for "Second Sight" has

ON THE SHORES OF THE INFINITE

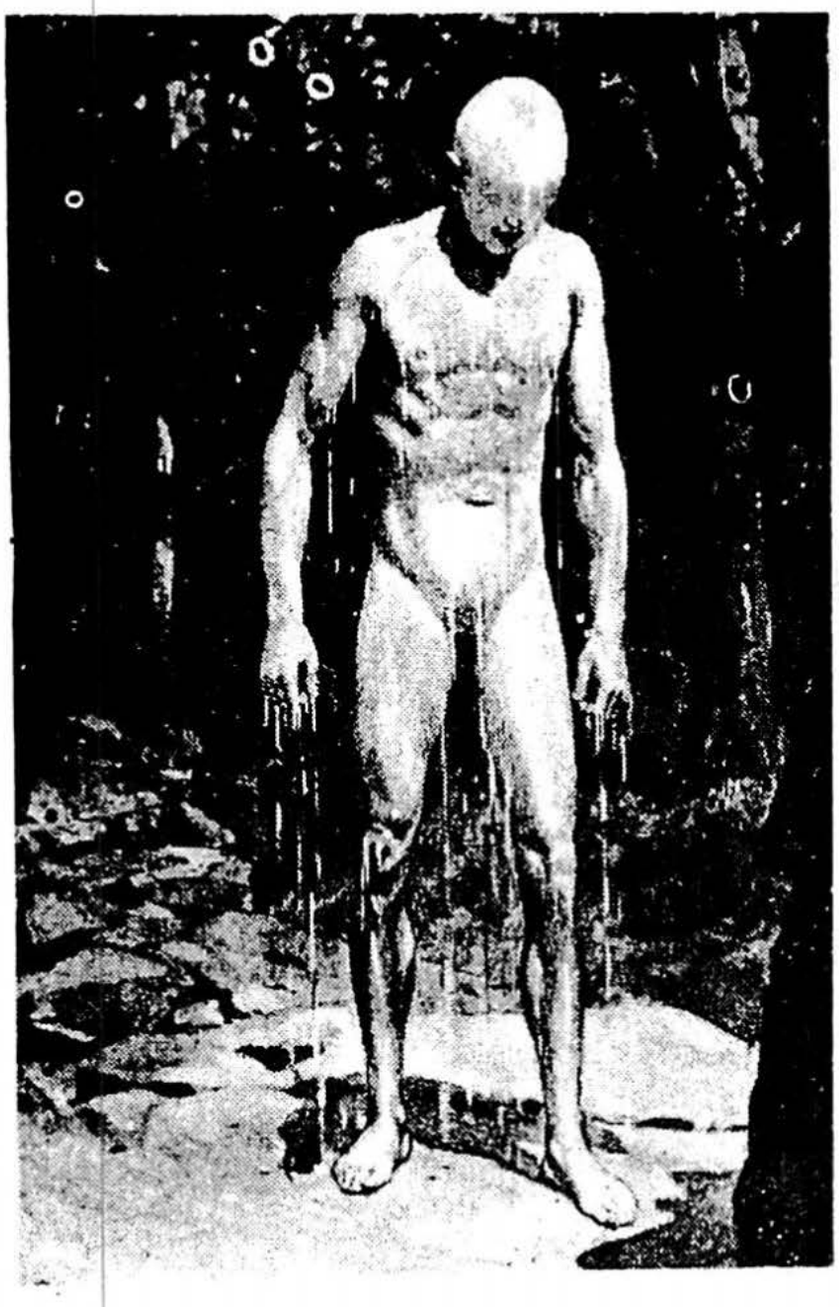

Out of print for many years, Mrs. G. Stuart's wonderful book on incarnation and reincarnation, and life on many planets, is once more available. 320 pages in paperback format, at a price within the reach of everyone.

This is the book that caused a great stir when it was first published. It cannot properly be called a "novel", although it is written that way; it is a psychically inspired presentation of the mysteries of the recurring life-experiences of a group of great spirits who "become flesh" in order to carry out a great panorama of human progress and destiny.

If you have ever suffered the fear of death, this book will prove to be a great inspiration and comfort to you. Its message is a clear one of great hope and promise, and it delves into the secrets that have remained murkily hidden in the clouds of doubt and wonder that surround all living people. What lies beyond the veil? What contact can we have with that other dimension? Can we travel to and fro between the spirit world, and between the planets of this solar system, all of them inhabited by those great souls that have gone before us, and who have come from only the Creator knows where to teach us the Way of Life, and to lead us and inspire us to our Destiny?

A truly important book! In all respects the worthiest concept of occult teachings that has yet been written. Fiction? None but the ignorant would believe that! The author was an advanced student of occultism, and in his sensational book he has tried to place before his fellow men a tremendous reality he discovered concerning this earth of ours, and life on it, in it, and beyond it.

THE ADVENT OF THE COSMIC VIEWPOINT

OUTER SPACE — THE PSYCHIC WORLD?

BRYANT REEVE

We on Earth are entering the Space Age. Our traditional cosmic isolation is ending. Earth is in touch with outer space! What will this mean to us? How can we prepare ourselves for the vast changes that are on the way? As we begin to study the impact on our civilization, what is happening to the minds of men on Earth is more important to understand than what is happening in our skies. In other words, we must comprehend the terrific impact of the space ships on our human norm of life, the challenge which these and similar events pose to our concepts of reality beyond the confines of Earth's gravity. We know a great deal about human life on Earth; what can we learn about life in outer space, about life on a cosmic scale? Once it dawns upon us that outer space is indeed inhabited by beings expressing themselves in different planes of matter and reality, it then becomes important for us to try to develop some understanding of their greater view of life and to compare it to our own. This book is pointed toward the goal of developing—from every possible source—the space view of life.

OAHSPE

FACTUAL—SCIENTIFIC

WHAT IS the real history of the human race on this planet (and on all others)? What is Man's origin, purpose, destiny? How did Man rise from the beast? What are the secrets of submerged continents, of the Great Pyramid, of the Sphinx? What is the history of the Earth's major religions? Do they exist on other planets?

THE KEY TO THE PAST
History of 79,000 Years
THE KEY TO THE PRESENT
Forces Behind Events of Today
THE KEY TO THE FUTURE
Preview of the Destiny of This Planet

This edition of OAHSPE contains 1008 pages. It contains nearly three quarters of a million words.

Do you think flying saucers are new? Then read OAHSPE! A whole panorama of aerial and space vessels, described as though from today's newspapers.

Do you wonder at Einstein's theories? Then read OAHSPE! He could have gotten his information there! Uncounted thousands of tons of meteorites fall to Earth each day, yet space is nearly empty of them. OAHSPE knew it in 1882! Space is dark, say our daring astronauts. So did OAHSPE in 1882, and tells us why! Archaeologists have made amazing discoveries of ancient races and dead cities and civilizations since 1882. They might have discovered them sooner had they read OAHSPE.

Just where is Heaven? What do you do there? Is there anything for YOU to do when you get there — what kind of occupation? Is there really a Hell? Who manages the Earth, the Solar System, the Universe — and how? How do the different religions fit into God's one Universe? OAHSPE tells all this, and a thousand more answers to man's most difficult questions.

Men Among Mankind

By BRINSLEY le POER TRENCH

What happened to mankind after the Atlantean civilization was lost? How did humanity react when Nature went mad? Where did the seeds of human culture survive? When did the world begin to recover from the effects of catastrophe? Who initiated the process of rehabilitation? Has knowledge of the source of world progress been suppressed and withheld from maturing mankind?

This book presents a scholar's answer to these and many other questions. Historical facts long obscured by Roman and Mediaeval propaganda have been examined and evaluated against an unusual but never fanciful background. The result is a new picture of mankind's history during the last ten thousand years.

One of the themes discussed is that the course of history has been changed abruptly, from time to time, by certain unusual men who have suddenly appeared upon the human scene. They have been few in number, but their thought and action have influenced succeeding generations.

GODS OR SPACEMEN?

By W. R. DRAKE

If the literature of antiquity could prove that Spacemen visited our Earth long ago would this wondrous revelation not transform the past, inspire the present, give hope to the future, bring new meaning to Man himself? Our religions, philosophies and culture were based on the belief that our world was the center of the universe and mankind the sole preoccupation of God. Would proof the Earth was once ruled by Beings from other planets not seem the fundamental discovery of our century?

The spaceships now haunting our skies suggest Extra-terrestrials mastering millenia of science, therefore surely it seems logical that they also visited Earth centuries ago, when primitive Man worshipped them as Gods from heaven.

The word 'God' has at least two distinct meanings. The Absolute, imagining the universe in Whom we live and move, and the local 'Gods' or Space Beings, who originate from some advanced planet and from time to time manifest among men.

Today we realize our Earth is not the center of Creation but a grain of dust in a space-time universe including universes of various dimensions co-existing within our own, all paralleled by a possible universe of anti-matter.

Many of our fundamental conceptions are based on false promises. We should sweep away the dust and dogma of centuries and study phenomena as they really happened.

This book is the result of fourteen years of research into those realities as recorded in the history of the ancients.

been my guide and comfort through a long and active life. I consider myself an ordinary normal woman with an ordinary history. My sons, grown men now are a credit to the family. I have followed an honorable profession with a measure of success since young womanhood. There are many women and a fair sprinkling of men whose powers far surpass mine, though very few will discuss psychic experiences except with those similarly endowed.

Crystal gazers, card and teacup readers, professional fortune tellers and the ilk who make a living by the various forms of divination, are many of them sincere and honest, at least at the start. To a needy woman with a degree of second sight giving readings provides an easy way to make money. She reasons the "the laborer is worthy of his hire." So he is, but it has never once entered her simple trusting mind that there are immutable laws governing her. Ebb and flow is a law of the universe. If she accepts a fee, she must produce or clients soon fall away. So many a talented seer is obliged at times to resort to guess-work or even outright fraud at the ebb tide.

Questioning soon becomes a fine art with many such seers. They do this so adroitly that the sitter practically tells his own fortune.

The keen observer, making a systematic study of seers, will note that giving accurate past history is more frequent than forecasting the future. As earlier stated, it is my firm conviction that everything that has ever happened is sharply etched in the aura, that is in the finer ethers, surrounding us. Prophesying is a very different matter. It stems from intuition, or "in-knowing." Some rare souls have this faculty well developed, but in most it flashes on occasion and even then in a very rudimentary form.

It is to be clearly understood that the conclusions I reach here are the result of my observation of my own and the verified cases of my friends, as well as a close analysis of professional seers whose performances I have studied carefully for a great many years. With feet firmly planted on the ground and an open mind, I am trying always to find the answer to the riddle that is as old as man himself.

It remains for scientific men to explore the far reaches of the mind and bring forth proof that man has hitherto undreamed of faculties that function on a plane beyond the physical. The day will surely come when this scoffed at sixth sense will be deemed as normal as a talent for music or any of the fine arts.

Then it will be as the prophet, Joel, who lived long before Christ predicted: "Your sons and daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions." And this shall be to the benefit of mankind.

SEX DETERMINATION OF CHILDREN

BY F.G. HEHR

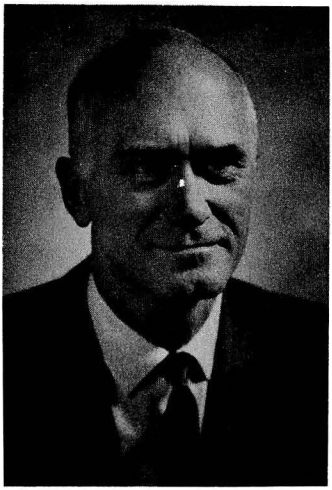

SAYS MR. HEHR. . .I have, with my advice, broken many a long line of either girls or boys, as many as 16 in a row. The next was what they wanted and the poor woman got a rest. Once one knows the laws involved it's very easy. My children all were pre-determined and my boys are of very good to super intelligence and my girls beautiful and IQ over 150.

"Boy" or "girl" is at times a very important question confronting parents. All the people who are fairly average want both sexes represented in their children. And a knowledge of the laws governing conception makes it easy to control the offspring within wide limits.

About 50 years ago an illiterate farmer in Russian gave me the first clue. Bits of knowledge added later completed the picture. The determinant factor in conception control is emotion. Who enjoys himself most in a selfish way will select a child of the own sex. But who enjoys the other during the act and wants to give ecstacy selects a child of the others sex.

But there are other factors, even more important than the gender of the child. The depth and purity of the love expressed also determines the character of the child. The greater and purer the love for the partner the lovelier and finer the child. In fact, the child expresses what the determining parent saw in the partner at the time of conception.

All this points towards the fact that children should not be accidents. If they are they turn out as such, which is very noticeable at the present time with its low standard of morals. Conception should be planned as the culmination of a joyous holiday. Both should be rested and on their toes and deeply in love with one another. They should be full of joy emotionally and mentally. A child conceived under such curcumstances will be supremely healthy, intelligent and of high moral standards. In it the parents have expressed the best that is in them. Under such circumstances parents can conceive genius even if they are just healthily normal and average. But if conception takes place in a la-di-lah manner or under deep resentments and even hate, then the child will also document that. Thus, it rests with the parents to have offspring for which they are proud or sorry.

THE Beautiful WORLD OF SPIRIT

Contributed By VERN OVERLEE

"Our aim is to put spirit in contact with those in your world who reach out to open the barrier which separates our two worlds, which in reality, are one".

Question: Can I contact space people?

Answer: When one is in contact with those in the world of spirit, he must decide who he has reached through evaluating that which he has received. Those who claim communication with those commonly called space people, are, in all probability, contacting those in spirit of a playful nature who wish only to please. They imitate what is desired in order to please. What is received is nothing which would, or could be, of any value. There are those who contact people in spirit of a higher range of activity where they do not play tricks or bring through that which would please the receivers' fancy. They bring only that which is of a spiritual nature. That which would be of help to the recipient in preparing their life by guiding them to a higher ideal or goal. Those who seek spirit for fun, shall receive spirit of pleasure. Those who seek spirit for truths, shall receive spirit directions and be assisted by those from our world. Those whose only interest lies for self-gratification or for a thrill, will receive nothing which would be of a helpful nature. There are many who can prepare themselves to communicate with spirit, but it is up to spirit to communicate with man and when spirit decides to do so, he will do so. You need but set a goal and should the goal be termed worthy of this, it shall then be attained.

Question: Why are most animals and humans born at night?

Answer: All birth is guided. All life is in the company of other life. It is even more so with birth, as there are those in spirit who assist in birth. They are able to draw from those of the flesh the strength needed to manifest in the flesh in darkness. Rays which are in your sun and in electric light are harmful to the spirits assisting in birth. Should you assist in a birth, do so in a darkened, secluded area. To introduce bright light robs much of the power of spirit forces aiding in birth. Should your medical people heed these words, much good could come of them. They could use light which would not hinder these forces as much as those they now use and you could then have a natural birth with the needed assistance from your world.

Question: How does the female know what to do?

Answer: She is given direction by those unseen forces who assist and accompany all life from conception throughout life and beyond death.

Question: Why are there different religions?

Answer: When one is not sure, he changes and these changes attract followers. All religions follow the churches rather than God.

Question: How can I read the future for myself and others?

Answer: You cannot read the future. You can guess or you can reason and then guess, but you cannot see into the future. There are those in spirit around every soul who know what the future will bring for that entity and his relationship to the future of mankind, as mankind's future is within each and all. With those who have the gift of prophesy, those spirit forces give glimpses of that which is to be. These are then interpreted and man can profit by these glimmers should he utilize them for what they are intended. When man is given these gifts, he will widen them through proper use. Through improper use he shall close them. His level of character of acceptance or denial of good or evil shall decide the sources and level of predictions. This is a most interesting form of development, though usually of little actual value, but one most sought after.

Question: I would like to levitate. Would you help me?

Answer: Should there be some real value for the betterment of your world, and should you attain the opening, by all means you would receive assistance from those in spirit who are given that duty to perform.

They would indeed lift you from your feet, suspending you on their invisible (to the physical eye) bodies for support and movement.

Question: What form of development should I seek?

Answer: You need not seek development. You need only to place your life in the hands of the Father to be used as he would use you.

Question: How can I project myself astrally?

Answer: You do so when you sleep in your deepest dream-state. To maintain a balanced life, you must dwell in the astral for a portion of each day cycle. To recall it is the gift.

Question: What is an astral projection?

Answer: Astral projection as it is commonly known today, is a dream-state which is remembered. This in itself can be cultivated by asking, before going to sleep, to be taken to see that which you should know, and that you be allowed to remember it. Keep a pad by the bed and whenever you awaken from a dream or 'journey' write down what has transpired. What might seem to be a frugal beginning, with practice will become more real and remembered. True astrals are controlled and, or, requested trips. One places oneself in a trance-state and is then taken by friends or controls in spirit, to the place where the experience can be consumated. These experiences are more real and clearly remembered than any experience which you can have while in the body. Your eyes will only see what is there; your ears hear only the audible sounds; the body can only feel and sense what conditions exist. While on this astral adventure, you are completely aware of all that exists. Your mind is expanded, able to receive more than your limited physical mind can comprehend. The experience would prove memorable and it is to be experienced as this is to be your life when you leave your body permanently. This is a form of psychic phenomena; it is not, or is it intended to be used for your enjoyment or for attainment of anything other than a spiritual nature.

Question: I would like to see someone materialize. Where can I go to see this?

Answer: You need go nowhere. You can but look at your own body and the bodies of your companions, as they are flesh, materialized within the spiritual body. With the company of one whose body is developed to release the vital force required to build around the spiritual body of a spirit entity who is to be shown. Perhaps only a mask-like face or head will be able to be made, draped in a shroud of filmy, mastic ectoplasm which is the vital body force taken from the control medium. Unfortunately, there are few mediums empowered to bring forth materializations. Those who have been empowered before were either abused or they themselves abused this most interesting form of phenomena.

Question: What or who are angels?

Answer: Angels are misunderstood by many in your world as well as in our world. We term those who have been given life, but never lived in the body long enough to become contaminated with the desires of the earth, Angels. They welcome the Father and those of the Father, as a child would his parents, which is the proper perspective. They grow in stature mentally and spiritually, but the physical never develops. They remain as child-like in appearance, but more developed spiritually than it is possible for those who have been emersed with the physical life. They dwell in the celestial realms and affect those who strive to awaken their spritual qualities and they assist those in spirit who cannot quite reach to the Father. Through them, they are helped closer to the Father; they are truly Angels, indeed.

We are workers, not angels. We bring through that which is of the Father. This cannot be misconstrued as angel-like. It is what we do; we are doing what we can in our small way to help others to bring that which needs to be brought. Alone we are naught—together we are the Powers of the Father. We are of a society which has a goal in which we all partake uniting our efforts in what we feel to be good.

Question: When we reincarnate, do we come back as the same person?

Answer: You are you; you will always be; you are now in your personality formative years. This you will hold and be; you return when drawn to learn through a new entity that you will accompany on its journey in the flesh—its formative years. You return to learn new ways; by controlling another's life you learn to control yours.

Question: Can I see God?

Answer: When you see a nearness, you will know an ecstasy which defies description, for it is all of the glories wrapped into one.

BLACK AND WHITE MAGIC

SOME GUIDELINES FOR PRACTICING MAGIC

JOAN MERRILL

You may be practicing magic without even knowing it. With magic, mind masters the forces sufficiently to control elements in the minds and souls of others. Suppose as an illustration of the simpler types of magic we contrast two similar cases, similar in tactics but not results, one white and one black magic.

Suppose you know a man who has fallen into the clutches of alcoholism. Suppose further that your words to him have fallen on deaf ears. His family is hard pressed for even food and rent money. If he continues he'll lose even his health. His doctor, his clergyman, even Alcoholics Anonymous admit they are powerless to help a man who has no desire to be helped. With white magic you have at least one more recourse. It's so simple that you may have done it unconsciously, calling it "wishful thinking"—or you may have called it prayer.

Here's how it's done when you call it white magic. Pick the time when you know the man is preparing to go to sleep for the night. Sit yourself down in a quiet room alone and shut your eyes. Concentrate on the man until a picture of him appears seated before you in all natural detail. Observe the image further until natural typical mannerisms in it are noted and you feel he is aware of you and then address him (mentally).

Have a heart to heart talk with the man. Tell him what he is doing to himself and to others. Visualise him at his worst as you do so for in doing so you are projecting a series of mental pictures which are being conveyed to him and as he sees them through your eyes (the he now asleep, not your vision) he will be shockingly aware of his degradation. But make sure you do not stop here! The most important part is yet to come. Continue to talk to him mentally. Tell him he wants to improve his lot. Tell him he can and will improve his lot. Assure him that it is easy. Tell him he will feel better, be happier. Think pictures of this and let them flow out. Think more pictures of his wife and children being happier. Think of him as relatively proud, prosperous looking, loved and contented. Do this for a few minutes every night over a period of ten days or two weeks. Then note the change you have helped the man effect in himself.

Very likely he will have gone on the wagon and taken up a more constructive approach toward life.

You needn't ever tell him of your nightly activities but you don't have to leave him there either. Occasionally go through the same routine in an effort to sustain the situation.

Now contrast this with similar tactics in black magic. You hate a person. You hate him with such a passion and vengeance and intensity that you are obsessed with a thought that comes frequently and if you examine it closely you can see wish for harm to him in it. Hate is a strong thing—it can easily become an obsession. Your thoughts are electrically charged forms that go out to him, surrounding his head until eventually (unless he is spiritually developed enough to be vibrating at a higher rate than you are) he takes these thoughts into his subconscious. Now, if you were to do this with prolonged enough attention, you might actually make the man ill. Furthermore, in black magic you can will the victim to die.

But the worst thing about this is that it may be done unintentionally! You hate a man with a black intensity, you do not wish him to die, but your dark thoughts pour out until he is stricken!

A case occurred recently in a nearby neighborhood. In a section of a housing project several women bitterly condemned one woman because her habits, which were none of their business, didn't pass their judgement of standards. Understand they said nothing to her—they said it all among themselves, repeatedly, constantly, strongly and venomously. After a few weeks of this the condemned woman became oddly distressed, deeply depressed, then suddenly went berserk, grabbed a kitchen knife, severed an artery in one of her wrists and jabbed herself about the chest and shoulders. As she was being carried out on a stretcher she said, "There! I hope you're satisfied!" to the staring women she passed. Exaggerated? This is the truth! The woman is now in a state hospital but when she is discharged in another few weeks she will go back "home" to a very different situation. Her neighbors know nothing of black magic or the fact that their combined thoughts were far more effective than the thoughts of any one of them alone but they do have sense enough to realize that their attitude, however indirect they think of it, nearly caused a death. And they will try to make amends.

Our thoughts are potent. That's why we must learn to control them. Love and hate are the difference between white and black magic.

Many years ago there was a case in England (cited more fully by Abbe Constant in C.L. Hunt's "Private Instructions in Organic Magnetism") in which a hypnotized subject was told to go to hell and report on conditions. The entranced girl protested but the hypnotist demanded it. A death rattle came from the girl, she said, "I'm there," her head fell. her arms hung limp and she never came out of the trance. She was dead. This of course brings up the question as to whether or not a subject can be made to do anything against his will—nevertheless, this actually happened after the hypnotist said, "I will it," leaving the poor girl with no recourse at all supposedly but to go.

As the power of hate may kill, the power of love may sustain life. A person may even transfer his state of health to another, taking on another's illness in his stead. In "Forever Young, Forever Healthy," Indra Devi tells of her own nobly intentioned but nearly tragic fated case in which she sought to help a man who was suddenly striken only to discover later she had taken on his heart condition while transferring to him a state of health and well being he had not enjoyed in years.

It is a well known but scoffed at principle that if you seek to influence a person and want that person to love you it can be effected by taking a bit of your own hair, putting it in a locket or ring to be worn by him, and taking a bit of his hair and wearing it likewise yourself. This is not so much to be scoffed at. Try it if your intentions are right. The reason why it works is that in so doing you are setting up a magnetic link between yourself and the other person.

Modern scientists scoff at and ridicule these so termed "superstitious" things yet ancient doctors and philosophers were sure of these facts. Who can say for sure that modern scientists have any more native intelligence than the ancients? May not their scoffing be partly that they refuse to examine any evidence on the subject?

TALL TREE, GRANDSON OF NIGHT HAWK

BY EVE ROE

THE INDIAN LAD IGNORED HIS GRANDFATHER'S TABU AND LOST HIS LIFE.

"In 1914," said our neighbor, Dr. John Gimbel, "I was appointed health director to the Blackfoot Indian Reservation. The tribe still retained its primitive faith in its medicine man, Night Hawk, who was then an aged sachem, bereft of all his family, save one infant great grandson, named Tall Tree, who was the idol of the old man. The toddling little boy was never very far from the old man who watched over the child with unremitting care.

My admiration for his fine qualities kept increasing as I noted his devotion to his charge, though the love of the Indian for his children is too well known to require comment. I admired the old man also for his healing prowess and for his astounding herbal knowledge. This won for me the Sachem's friendship. Our friendship was cemented when we both took care of a stripling cowboy who rode into the village and reeling fell off his horse. We carried him over to the shade of a tree and both Night Hawk and I diagnosed his illness as La Grippe. It was the same sickness we all got to dread later as "Flu". Night Hawk immediately began to concoct a draft for the sick man of the dried herbs and bark assembled in his tipi. To my amazement the next day the invalid was sitting outside in the Sun, weak but convalescent. In three days he was well and on his way, as merry as a grig.

My sincere admiration of his art won Night Hawk's sincere regard. He invited me to drop into his tipi and showed me the various herbs he used and what for. In his own indescribable way he explained that sometimes he discovered people who were not body-sick; but soul-sick; and these victims of the evil spirits he treated with Peyote—a tiny shrivelled, wild and poisonous mushroom, which is medicine for the spirit. "It work very fine for Indian spirit. . .maybe no for Paleface," he said.

I memorized his pharmacopeia as well as I could and noted the names and uses in my memoranda.

That first winter Night Hawk became very ill. To ease his mind, as I was nursing and treating him, I promised that little Tall Tree should be as my own son. When he had my solemn promise the aged man relaxed and went to sleep. When I came to take his pulse again, I found that he would never waken. I took little Tall Tree into my home and soon learned to love him as if he had been born my own.

When my tour of duty was ended I moved to the San Fernando Valley outside of Los Angeles. Here Tall Tree was a prime favorite with other lads in his age group, both at school and at home. One of the favorite pastimes of the suburban lads was hunting rabbits. The land was overrun with these pests. Tall Tree knew very well that the rabbit was tabu with him. He knew that the old Sachem had made me swear to forbid the lad to touch, or to eat, or to hunt rabbit. And so far, up to his sixteenth year, the boy had been obedient to the law of his people.

He accompanied the other lads but he never used his gun to shoot rabbits as they did.

Then a group of the lads with their packs and guns were taken on a real hunting and camping trip by a neighbor. When they returned two of the boys were not feeling well. Tall Tree and Bob Hammond, his pal. My boy soon had a high temperature and was so sick I took him to the hospital. Friends and colleagues rallied round and everyone did all that could be done, but my handsome fine boy died in less than seven days.

"Nobody could do much when Tularemia strikes, and gets a head start," one of my physician friends told me.

"Tularemia!" I exclaimed.

"Yes, rabbit fever, you know."

Later on, I heard how the lads had chivvied Tall Tree into consenting to shoot rabbits. They ridiculed his bowing to an old medicine man's dictum. They reminded him he was no Indian any more. He ate white, lived white, talked white and he ought to do as the rest did. In other words, shoot rabbits. Clean rabbits. Cook rabbits. And eat rabbit.

My boy was reluctant to defy the tabu but he was too much Americanized to really whole-heartedly believe in the wisdom of the Indian medicine man so he fell in with his pals desires.

And the wild rabbits were infected with tularemia or rabbit fever which is deadly.

But I am still wondering by what occult powers did old Night Hawk discern this, way back when Tall Tree was still an infant? Did the Great Manitou come and whisper it to him? How could he know that rabbit was to be deadly to the youth while he was still a toddling infant with milk upon his lips? The Indians on the Reservation killed and snared and ate rabbit without any hesitation. But for some reason, rabbit was tabu to Tall Tree. I am still wondering. . . .

The highest peace is the peace of the soul which cometh of the consciousness of having done the wisest and the best in all things according to one's own light. For, after all, is not the earth life but the beginning, wherein we are as in a womb, moulding our souls into the condition which will come upon us after death? In which case, we should with alacrity seize upon the passing time and appropriate it to doing righteous works to one another.

THE PULSE OF CREATION

(A 7-Volume Book Series)

THE VOICE OF VENUS

(Volume 1 of the Series)

History reveals that in past ages and civilizations and at crucial periods of transition in man's life on planet earth, there has always arisen some great movement or some great Avatar, who has somehow succeeded in turning the tides of destructive, materialistic confusion into more constructive channels.

From OTHER PLANETS and Higher Spiritual Worlds, great movements are already in motion pouring in revitalizing wisdom and energy, thru various intuitive channels, into the minds of the more receptive.

Keystone in the Arch of these 7 great Books, is the Book, "The Voice of Venus," which is an amazing revelation of life on OTHER PLANETS. Thru this book you will be taken across the limitless voids of space to our nearest sister planet, Venus, and conducted on a personal tour, thru the beautiful VENUSIAN CITIES, constructed of pure Crystalline Energy.

"The Voice of Venus" will leave you in awed amazement at its astounding revelations.

Authentically portrayed in ACTUAL WORDS of a Great Venusian MASTER through the channelship of the scientific and clairvoyant mind of Electronic Engineer Ernest L. Norman.

Illustrated, $4.95. Plus 21¢ postage.

"The TRUE LIFE of JESUS of NAZARETH — The CONFESSIONS of ST. PAUL"

Slashing through 2,000 years of Christian fanaticism, this book presents the true life story — before and AFTER crucifixion — of Jesus; and exposes for all time the great hypocrisy of the Christian religion as the culmination of a villainous plot, contrived by the arch-villain, Saul of Tarsus (later called Saint Paul) and his cohort Judas Iscariot; a plot which changed the world's history for thousands of years!

Contained in a long-hidden book is this amazing revelation, delineated by no less than Saul himself; the true life story of Jesus . . . who his real mother and father were . . . His truly espoused . . . and His true teachings!

The included booklet, "The Eye Witness Account," taken from the actual ancient parchment, is the true account of the crucifixion and the life of Jesus after this tragic event!

An amazing revelation which will, once and for all, erase false and harmful doctrines from the minds and hearts of all who read it!

This book will also completely vindicate the Unarius mission and its re-establishment as a continuation of the mission of Jesus; and will effectively help prove that Unarius is the beginning of the "Second Coming."

YOU COPIED MY THEORIES!

Dear Rap:

Note in January Search your observations on the theory of the earth's being formed by a vortex. I don't mind your copying my theories, but I wish you would mention source.

Also, I have discovered the relation of the electron to its counterpart in the solar system, a sort of "skin" between Mars and Jupiter and another outside of Pluto.

The atom will be found to be in two parts. One inside the other as it approaches proximity to the center.

The creation of the inside mass is "finer" matter, and the "Grosser" matter manifests when the outer cover is (only then) formed.

Wish you'd set a nuclear physicist to work to learn to destroy the outer part, leaving the inner. It would take the grossness out of the world.

UNSTABLE PSYCHICS

Dear Rap:

Your editorial is very revealing. My fifteen years of association with the largest psychic center in the United States reveal this: people who go around claiming too many psychic insights without actually proving this to the public, and show signs of unstability in their daily lives are not to be trusted—that is, they are likely to be mentally ill.

Also be wary of people who tend to be religious—it reveals a Jeykle and Hyde personality. A "compassionate" Buddhist will persecute a child if he happens to be an ETA (untouchable)—get the picture?

Psychics with proven ability very often are very spiritual people. Very spiritual people also tend to become psychic.

BEARS CRUCIFICATION SCARS IN HIS PALMS

Dear Mr. Palmer,

It may be of interest to you Ray, as I note the picture of Mark on your January cover, that Yada, one of his contactees, related to the Moderator and his wife in his circle in 1955, "There is one among you who bears the scars in his palms of the crucifixion of 2,000 years ago, also, that he was the Pharaoh Akhenaton; is this not so Brother?" Earnest L. Norman was the only man present with the five other ladies and Irene. They all wanted to see the psychic nail scars. This was the first I have heard of any one else knowing who he was. And now, nearly 18 years later, it has been proven through the great and vast collection, the nearly twenty books he has written—not via trance as such, for He is one of the Higher Beings who came to earth for that purpose.

Great and miraculous have been the healings due to His visitation to the earth, and now he channels to his wife Mrs. Ruth Norman, these higher healing frequencies, bringing about miraculous healings. The enclosed sheets relate a few healings which occurred recently. So Yada's prophecy has been proven. They, the Moderator and his wife, did not at the time give much credence to it. Mrs. Norman saw and felt of his deep scars and knots in the palms of her husband which appeared psychically as he again (in the present life) recontacted Caiaphus, one of the evil priests who set him up in Jerusalem. Thus, he drew the entity into his consciousness to heal him of his evil past, and which was accomplished not only with him, but with all others who had to do with the crucifixion.

I shall enclose with this note, the True Life of Jesus of Nazareth, the Voice of Venus, and the Story of the Little Red Box, to which you should relate. The files of Unarius are filled with stories of student experiences which could keep a dozen magazines filled for years—and they are not fiction. And by the way, Ray, reading your last June Search, re your problems of the goings on with the telephone, I am sure that the existing channel, Mrs. Ruth Norman, (Ioshanna) could be a great psychic help to you. Should you desire to reply after reading the books sent, I would appreciate hearing from you.

AFTER DEATH— NOT ONE THIN DIME AND NO SHOES

Dear Ray:

Sometimes people seem to think that they will lay in a cemetery somewhere, for only HEAVEN knows how long, before JESUS will come, so why get too serious about something so far away?

Let me tell you about my experience.

When my husband died, I felt that the world was completely empty,cold and boring.

I looked at him in his casket, and he didn't look like the man he was supposed to be. I put my hand on his, and a cold shiver went through me because it was so hard and cold almost like a railroad iron. He always had a nice soft and warm hand. The contrast was shocking. And, then I felt him beside me, I looked at him again in his casket, and then the thought suddenly hit me. After a life time of hard work, he was laying there without even one thin dime in his pocket. Just how futile can life be, when there is no life.

PAUL said that he could see those in Spirit so clearly, that he couldn't tell whether they were in the body or out of the body. Then I was thankful to GOD that I was privileged to have the understanding of life after death.

So far as my husband was concerned it was the end of the world for him because he was not in this world anymore. His physical body was without life, and he was without one thin dime in his pockets and he had no shoes on, of course other people never thought of that.

So it was time for him to reap his reward in Spirit according to the record that he had in his BOOK OF LIFE. Now instead of dimes, he needed credits for "Charity given to others." Of course, that, I had no way of knowing how much he had.

How can anyone lay in their grave and wait for Judgement Day, when they have been cremated, their ashes thrown on the sea, or perhaps just returned to dust because of time?

Lots of people can see and talk to their departed loved ones, and sometimes they are of great benefit in a time of desperate need.

Thoughts like these can help one to hold their tongue a little bit in their hour of emotional disappointment.

Everybody must read their own hand writing upon their wall of life.

WHY DON'T YOU JOIN?

Dear Mr. Palmer:

I have read many of your publications, Search, Fate, Forum, etc. They have been both informative and enjoyable to me. Dr. Dowd of this city and I exchange books and magazines.

There was a letter in one of the Search Magazines from John F. Kennedy. . .I passed over it and later came back to it. I am convinced that this man is J.F.K. of and for the Creator. Why and how I am not sure; I am sure that the Creator could and did bring him back.

I also believe your position is more in favor of the Faithists than against them. Oahspe is or has the only set of Doctrines I have found to be true and steadfast. I would feel honored if you would openly join this position.

Wallace M. Leffler

• I am not a "joiner", simply because it entails a commitment, and a commitment must be honored. Thus, if it turns out you have made a mistake, you are stuck with it. No one book or doctrine can be the "only" one. Why not consider everything to the best of your ability, and remain free to think? However, I can tell you that I am much impressed with Oahspe, and many other things. Taken in toto, they all add up to something very exciting! – Rap.

THE PROPHETIC YEAR– –1972 OR 1975?

Dear Madam:

A few comments on the article "The Prophetic Year 1972" on pages 68 to 73 of your May issue:

As one who has made an intensive study of chronology from various sources, as well as prophecy, I realize the difficulty of harmonizing various features of past time periods.

It was therefore quite surprising to find the chronology given on pages 68 to 73 substantially correct and in harmony with the most recent research.

There is possibly a small error of two or three years in the period from Solomon's death, which page 71 places in 999 B.C. and the destruction of Jerusalem in the summer of 606 B.C., as shown on page 72, making the period 393 years in length. It is quite difficult to interharmonize the chronology of the kings of Israel and Judah during this period, but is it not likely that Ezekiel 4:5,9 covers this period as 390 years?

If so, it would place the creation of man as given in Genesis two or three years later than 4028 B.C. as shown on page 68. Possibly 4026 B.C. is nearly correct, with 6,000 years ending in the autumn of 1975 A.D. or thereabout.

The items listed at the top of page 71 check out well with the latest research, except possibly this one point mentioned above.

It might also be noted that the dedication of Solomon's temple (I Kings 6:38 or 3 Kings 6:38 Septuagint) may have been divinely intended as a half-way point of 6,000 years of human history before the millenium. This was about 1027 or 1026 B.C., about half-way between the creation of Genesis man and the start of the seventh 1,000-year period. In 2 Esdras, Chapter 10 of the apocryphal books (not the 2 Esdras of the Douay version, but a 2 Esdras said to have been approved by the Council of Carthage but dropped by the Council of Trent) we read (in the Syriac and other versions, not the Latin): This woman, whom thou savest, is Sion. . .there were three thousand years in the world wherein there was as yet no offering offered in her. And it came to pass after three thousand years that Solomon builded the city and offered offerings (etc.).

From the top of page 71 of your May issue it is seen that from the Covenant with Abraham to the end of 1 B.C. is 1945 years (possibility of it being two or three years out). So from the time Abraham left his home to go to a far country (Hebrews 11:8,9) till the public ministry of Jesus started was about 1975 years; likewise from the time the Word left his Home to come to earth until the times of restitution (Acts 3:21) would appear to be of the same length. This backs up Mary Elsnau's chronology of 1972, rather than my suggested correction, as Jesus was likely born about 2 B.C.

When the Israelites entered Canaan they were to start counting for Sabbath years and Jubilee years. This would be in 1475 B.C. according to Mary Elsnau's time list, as there were 430 years from the Covenant to the Exodus, and 40 years in the wilderness. The 70 years desolation began in 606 B.C., ending at the Decree of Cyrus, 536 B.C., a well-established historical date. This desolation fulfilled the Sabbaths (2 Chronicles 36:17-21 or 2 Paralipomenon 36:17-21 Douay). The method of counting, multiplying the seventh year by seven made the cycle which led to the fiftieth or Jubilee Year. Likewise the great cycle of 50 x 50 or 2500 years would lead to the great antitype, the 1,000 year millenium. But the great cycle could not begin to count until the observance of the type ceased. As the land was keeping sabbath till 536 B.C., we have the sabbath system at least partially operating from 1475

B.C. till 536 B.C. or 939 years which would cover 18 fifty-year periods, with the next fiftieth year in 525 B.C. This would be an unobserved one, as the Jews under foreign domination did not have full control of the land for the land to observe a Jubilee. So then the great cycle of 50 x 50 or 2500 years began to count from then until 1975 A.D. (possibility of 2 or 3 years out) leading to the great antitypical Jubilee of 1,000 years, the seventh 1,000 year sabbath.

NEARLY UNTOUCHED BY FLOOD

Dear Ray Palmer:

Things are happening!

We're in the flood area (Pocono Mts.) our 4 children were in the center of disaster flood areas--we all came through untouched–except our daughter in Harristown, Pa. who had water in the basement–in and out fast flow–1 day–and water supply cut for a few days–otherwise all O.K.

A letter from a dear friend in disaster State of Maryland wrote to me, received letter today–they too, had some water in a part of their basement and she said–"Funny how the storm missed all the Light workers and their families".

Speaking of UFOs–had a strange experience–believe it was May 9th or there about–was awakened out of a sound sleep to see a bright red circular light shining through our bamboo blinds in our western exposured windows. I stared–thought it might be the moon–but it was pitch black out the northern windows- turned my head, closed my eyes–only to awaken to still see it. Got out of bed and really looked–was there! I did not awaken Bill, who was really "sawing wood" at that moment as I felt I might upset whatever the vibration or reason was. Bill does not awaken easily or quietly. Some minutes passed–went back to bed–closed my eyes a few seconds and upon reopening them the light was gone. We are on the north side of the Blue Ridge Mts.–practically alone in this immediate location. Also, my friend wrote–"Leska" tells us she is about ready to divulge what preparations have been going on toward the Space Brother's appearance. What are your thoughts in this instance? Do you suppose there is a connection? or perhaps a message?

You are busy–in time you'll send a reply–and thank you!

Marion N. Bucher

• Of course there is a connection! There is nothing I know about that is not related to everything else. It is the nature of the relationship that interests me, and what I devote my attention to. The conclusions I come up with are called "knowledge", and that is a personal thing.–Rap.

WHAT'S WITH "THE MARTIAN DIARY"?

Dear Ray:

You have stated that you are changing the format of your Martian Diary. I do not care whose toes you step on, I wish to hear what you have to say in the way that you wish to say it. Please explain in what way you are changing the presentation of your diary. I hope you are still planning to tell it like it is, with no holds barred. I have been reading your editorials for several years and I am repeatedly intrigued by your fascinating mind. I would be pleased if you would attempt to write more in the future.

Thomas D. Montell
409 Pleasant Street
New Lexington, Ohio 43764

• I have not changed my purpose in writing Martian Diary, but I have decided that it has to remain as "open" as all my previous writings, and not become dogmatic–which is what I saw it becoming! I intend to be a "no holds barred" thing, but it has to be my "diary", not my "conclusions". You see, nothing has been concluded, only begun! I want to open my readers' minds, not close them!–Rap.

ATTENTION: DR. EIDSON

Dear Ray:

I would like to address the first portion of this letter to the attention of Dr. Rex Eidson, if I may.

Dr. Rex Eidson:

Not realizing it was verboten to comment on "only one area" of your article (your letter July 72 SEARCH) I, in my ignorance, committed the unforgivable sin of doing so. Please accept my apologies Dr. Eidson. In the future I shall do my best to comment on your entire article but I can guarantee nothing.

As for your feeble attempt to call into question and so discredit, without having to be specific, what I had to say by charging ". . .much of what she declares to be true must be pure hearsay." I can only answer: Although you use the word "hearsay" in a pejorative sense, is it not true that ALL INFORMATION ACQUIRED BY MEANS OTHER THAN PERSONAL PARTICIPATION– FIRST-HAND EXPERIENCING OR OBSERVATION– IS "HEARSAY"? What we hear from others, be they teachers or just the person next door (even if he were Dr. A. Einstein), what we learn through reading no matter how well authenticated or documentated, scientific or technical, even what we see on T.V. is, in the strictest sense, "hearsay". This does not make it invalid. We are not in a court of law, you disprove nothing by calling it hearsay. Do you, Dr. Eidson, actually intend to claim that most of what you declare to be true is NOT "pure hearsay" also? It is not my "logic" that is "the thinking of a child"!

I take it as a compliment you choose such picayune nonsense to deride and berate me about (a paraphrase which you call, incorrectly, my "thesis" and a couple of cliches). It would appear you could find nothing more relevant to challenge or correct. If or when you do I shall be happy to answer. But please be specific. Quote me. Confine your imagination to writing articles, not to creating paraphrases or putting words in my mouth and by them claim I imply such-and-such nonsense. I cannot be held responsible for what you think (?) I say. I will only defend what I actually say. So above all BE ACCURATE, if you can't be accurate. . . . .

Ray, have there been any new developments on the question of the "hole in the pole"? I was reminded of it the other day when I heard it announced that the up-coming joint American-Russian space-shot would include (by the Americans anyway) eleven days of mapping the earth's natural resources. That should prove even more interesting than the weather cloud-cover pictures.

Am enclosing an article (you've probably already read) that mentions incidental to its main subject "mysterious open waters in Baffin Bay. . .surrounded by thousands of miles of frozen sea." Dr. Tom Smith, marine biologist at the Artic Biological Station said it is believed some sort of eddy or self-sustaining current probably prevents the open sea from freezing over. It seems incredible that such a seemingly inexplicable occurrance is passed over in such an off-handed way. I would be most curious to learn the source of these "self-sustaining" currents of the size and temperature necessary to prevent areas of the polar seas from freezing in mid-winter. As I've said before, I think, if there is a "hole" you are going to have to pin-point its location first by indirect means, then go after direct evidence.

• I fully intend to give you much, much more about the hole at the poles! As to that mapping "ecology" satellite you speak of, it is in an orbit around Earth inclined 20 degrees off the geographical pole, the ONLY orbit that can be successfully maintained in the area of the pole, and consequently, it cannot photograph the pole area for a distance of 515 miles from the pole. I will explain that fully in an article I am preparing. The scientific fact is, the entire Earth cannot be mapped by a photographic satellite in orbit, and photography from deep space is also inconclusive because of a simple factor of optics, the "focal length" of any lens, and "the field of vision" of any optical instrument, such as binoculars, telescope, camera, etc. Did you ever observe how railroad tracks seem to come together at the horizon? That is because of the "focal length" of your eyes. At sea level, the horizon is generally conceded to be 23 miles away. Now, if you took those railroad tracks, which you know to be parallel, and not to come together anywhere, no matter how long, and stood them on end, and instead of looking toward the horizon, they would still seem to come together. And that point would still be 23 miles away. Yet you know there are tracks further away than that. You can't see beyond that focal point. Does this suggest anything to you? Well, if there was a train on that track, beyond that point, it would be invisible to you, wouldn't it? Yet it would be there! What means would you use to bring this train into range of your vision? Start thinking, Marilyn, and write me what ideas occur to you. It should be interesting!--Rap.

MANY THANKS

Dear Ray,

I thank you for publishing the article "I Am Here, Jesus" by Rev. Gibson in your May 1972 Search.

Many people would not publish this kind of thing even in a Mag such as this.

It was very wonderful to me and answered many questions for me. I have written them for more literature.

Many such good things are in this Magazine and I always find much to enlighten and uplift me.

So many thanks.

RAY WOULD "GOOF" AS GOD!

Search readers:

This letter has been triggered off by a statement Rap has re-iterated: that if he were God, he would clear this world of its wicked people by the use of a nuclear bomb or two. I think "God" knows better than to do that. Our trouble is not wickedness but ignorance because of the wickedness of others. Whether you believe in reincarnation or not, you believe that there are "on the other side" spirits without bodies. When you die, you also (all of us) shall become spirits without bodies. Would death by nuclear means "plough the bad crop under"? Would it not just release us from our bodies to be added to the "unfinished products" going at present into etherea as a "bad harvest"? Death to the body is, therefore, not the answer to our problem.

What is? Knowledge of the law, universal law, such as I tried to outline in part in the booklet, "The Growth of a Spirit". A nuclear explosion would do more than drive the spirit out of our body. It would break the spirit into its parts, probably erp, but maybe lower. Would these parts be acceptable as a "good harvest" at their own level of knowledge? It is very doubtful. Would they be willing to live as erp to learn all that erp should know? A moot point. It might be that to get to the root of the trouble, the individual erp might have to be taken apart for examination. It might be that the individual erp might have to be sent to live in an ever lower state to learn something he/she did not know. Each individual spirit, be he/she erp, valkyri, or solar (that is, human disbodied) has to be dealt with on his/her own merits. Does a doctor mass-examine or mass-heal his clients? No, it is individual, and so it is in etherea where the krysts lead the spirits at death to be judged (i.e. examined to see that all is well.)

Can you imagine the result of a nuclear explosion to clear the people off this planet? I can. The battle field of Mons or Ypres in the 1914-1918 war would be Heaven in comparison. The cries of the wounded spirits would not be moans and groans. Their fear would not be controlled as was the fear of our soldiers at the Dardanelles. (I compare this with the 1914-1918 war because in World War II there was nothing to compare to these three battles I mention, unless it was Pearl Harbor).

Remember that my etheral contact who now writes by my hand was present among the krysts when the H-bomb fell on Hiroshima. He knows.

No, God would never use a nuclear weapon to clear out bad stock. This planet shall be depopulated eventually as all planets are, and as we die to our body as naturally as we can, God and his helpers shall teach us the law. The classes must be kept small in etherea. Therefore let us live here till our time comes to be taken one by one to be taught what we should know.

The depopulation of this planet is already begun. It may take a generation for the drop in the birth-rate to be noticed. For that is how a planet is depopulated. If the birth-rate drops and the death-rate is normal, a planet is depopulated. We need no second Flood. The last one taught the most ignorant ruler that mass depopulation was not the solution.

The Bible says that God made a promise and set the rainbow in the sky as a sign—a fanciful idea to point a truth, that rainbow idea! Yet a truth it pointed, and the truth remains.

• Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00) reward to anyone directly responsible for personally introducing this writer to that "Special Miss" briefly described below. Reward offer is conditional, valid for limited time only and not collectible unless/until mutual affinity/compatibility is established. Briefly, her description is as follows. . . . .She is unorthodox, caucasian, unattached, without dependents and financially secure. She knows where she's been, where she is and where she is going. She is not haunted by regrets, tho she has made mistakes. She is keenly aware, not only of what she wants, but also what she doesn't want. . .and she knows very much how to think. Unlike the herd, she refuses to be taught what to think. She's not a monomaniac programmed to conform to the ways of the masses. . .she's an eclectic thinker forever in search of "truth" however disagreeable it may be or seem to be. She is a positive thinker and doer; she is a seeker of facts: she has an insatiable thirst for knowledge and she loaths the term can't and its negative implications. She subscribes to a strong code of ethics and she practices what she preaches. She is responsible, dependable and very self-confident. She is analytical with gentle and affectionate persuasions and feels a deep kinship with nature and all its creatures and she is very much opposed to hunting and fishing. She has a fertile and active imagination. She finds classical music relaxing or stimulating depending on her mood. She is monogamous and is not preoccupied with status symbols and worldly possessions. She does not live to eat, but rather eats to live. She is very conscientious about personal hygiene and she does not conceal herself behind a maze of cosmetics and wigs. She is, has been or would like to be active in the investigation and exploration of psychic phenomena. . .including UFOlogy. Hopefully, she is familiar with Shaverisms, Palmer Publications, Fort, Oahspe, Fodor, Blavatsky, Velikovsky et al. . .and furthermore, she has a vast supply of theories and ideas about the unknown, other dimensions. . .and she is not afraid to experiment in the areas mentioned. She is a genuine explorer. She enjoys Edgar A. Guest's "It Couldn't Be Done". She agrees with Louis Anspacher's Definition of Marriage and she appreciates Mill's "To Question All Things". As for me–I'm caucasian, born 9/18/29; financially independent; unattached; interests are as described above, and then some..... Persons interested in offering assistance may contact Mr. S. The Ancient Atlantic

By L. Taylor Hansen

The book contains 440 8-1/2 x 11 pages. It has 96 full-color illustrations and full-color maps.

The magnificent biography of an ocean! From the "beginning" when the continents were one, down through the eons encompassing ancient Atlantis and Lemuria, noble Greece and Egypt, to the present when science is rediscovering the peoples who lived prior to the great destruction, before Eden.

Where did man come from on this planet? How long has he been here? Who has he been - who is he now? Was there really an Atlantis, a Lemuria? Were there true civilizations hundreds of thousands of years ago?

THE ANCIENT ATLANTIC is a scientific, scholarly book, being, literally, the story of the Atlantic ocean from the very beginning, with the creation of the continents, the formation of the ocean itself, the tremendous geological events that have culminated in the world we know today. It is also an archaeological and ethnological history of the development of the civilizations of man around that ocean - for it was on Atlantis, in the center of this ocean, where mankind began. Every scientist will want this book; every library, every school. Yet this book is written so EVERYBODY can understand it.
