....Editorial...

Some time ago SEARCH ran an article on so-called "subliminal" advertising. In it we described how a theater audience had been persuaded to eat a lot more popcorn than they ordinarily ate at a performance by the simple means of flashing on the screen a very fast suggestion to buy and eat popcorn—so fast that the flash is not evident to the eye, but not so fast that the very wonderful subconscious mind cannot see it and cause the conscious mind to act on it all unaware that it has been "pushed" or "hypnotized" into an act not guided by considered judgment or by personal intent. Among other things, we thought such advertising was an invasion of privacy, a despicable trick, fraudulent, unconstitutional, and very dangerous. If one can be caused to buy popcorn by such sly methods, he can also be caused to vote Republican or Democrat, or to become a drug addict. It can be used to enslave the mind, to destroy personal freedom, to obviate free will.

As the months went by, we heard nothing about subliminal advertising. We watched our TV screens confident that all we were seeing was a cigarette or beer commercial we could turn off if we wished, and which, certainly, we could ignore, since we were aware of its trickery and deceit. (Oh, so you think it isn't trickery and deceit to state that a certain cigarette is "tested by the United States Testing Company"? In the first place, the intent of the advertiser is to suggest or infer that this cigarette is okay to smoke because your government has tested it. The words United States actually do not refer to the United States, but to a private testing company which in this case tests nothing but the cigarette of the advertiser, and is probably a company owned by the advertiser. But the advertiser knows full well that you are a patriotic loyal citizen, and that you are just a bit inclined to be thoughtless and to take things for granted. Thus, he knows that you will be impressed by his inference, accept it for truth, and buy his cigarettes rather than those of his competitors because after all, his is sanctioned by the government. The advertiser is perfectly "legal". He actually has his cigarettes tested by the United States Testing Company. They do report the facts that they report, which are very favorable to his cigarette. He is telling the literal truth. He cannot be prosecuted for false advertising, because it is all 100% fact. But all the same, he is a liar! Go ahead, sue me! Prove to me that the United States Testing Company is actually the United States (all 50 of them) testing company. That's what it says it is, but EVERYBODY knows it isn't! It's a PRIVATE company, having nothing to do with the United States.

Annoyed as we are at this type of advertising, we are able to evade its influence. It sells us not one cigarette. Rather, it assures that we will never buy that particular product (even if we smoked!). However, now we discover, to our horror and to our intense anger and indignation, that we've been deluding ourselves! All this time, subliminal advertising has SECRETLY been flashed before our eyes hundreds of times each evening (or whenever we get time to watch television, poor and degrading as most of it is). Want the proof? Then read the next paragraph and when you've read it, write your Congressman and demand that he investigate and halt this unconstitutional practice at once!

The October 16-22, 1960 TV Section of the Washington Post states the following on page 6: "Though subliminal advertising has been in effect on TV only a couple of years . . . "

Has been in effect!

BY WHOSE AUTHORITY? BY AUTHORITY OF THE FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION? However it is being done, we believe it to be a scandal that makes the give away shows seem like a pink tea party! Supposedly we have the FCC guarding us against such invasions of our privacy, such harmful practices. But if the Washington Post is right, we are being subjected to a secret attack on our free will, our right to choose, our right to know what is going on in our own home, our right to reject unwanted and unappreciated influences. It is well known, for instance, that cigarette smoking causes lung cancer. Any person persuaded by this subconscious method of advertising to take up smoking is being bodily harmed by the advertiser, and is no less constitutionally violated than if he had been choked to death or stabbed or shot by a sneak intruder!

According to the pollsters, there was a large "undecided" vote in the last election. Now we wonder why they voted as they did when the time came to make the decision at the voting booth? Was there a subconscious urging deep down that had come from repeated suggestions via TV that the proper thing to do was to vote thus and so? If subliminal advertising is actually being used on TV, would the political advertisers overlook such a powerful method of getting votes? They'd be fools if they did! How many of you Americans would like to vote again, considering that your TV set may have betrayed you? How would you have voted if you had been able to see those rapidly flashed messages as they flitted invisibly across your screen? Would you have liked to pass judgment on the advertising? Remember, your subconscious mind is incapable of judgment—it can only act on suggestion, disregarding reason or any moral or other implications!

Let's find out if subliminal advertising actually is being used without the knowledge of the American People. It is hard to believe that the Washington Post is an irresponsible newspaper given to false statements.

Recently a reader of ours, and also one who claims to have been cured of cancer by the Hoxsey Cancer Clinic (which naturally we cannot say is so one way or the other because we have no way of proving it), sent us a newspaper clipping which reads as follows:

Driven from Pennsylvania by a Federal Court order two years ago after a lengthy Pittsburgh trial, the fraudulent Hoxsey cancer treatment has now been banned from the United States itself.

George P. Larrick, commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration, announced in Washington that the Hoxsey clinic in Dallas, Tex., is being closed.

A Dallas Federal court issued a consent decree to close the clinic there and prevent Harry M. Hoxsey from sharing in its profits.

Hoxsey's Dallas Clinic was the last place in the United States known to be dispensing the fake cancer treatment.

There is only one actual comment we can make: It is true that Mr. Larrick, nor any other Federal Agency, ever proved that Hoxsey's treatment was a fraud. In the state of Texas quite the reverse is true—the judge and prosecuting attorneys admitted that cures had been effected. But in this clipping, it is stated that the treatment is fake, fraudulent. The Federal court in Dallas issued a "consent decree" to close the clinic, and to prevent Hoxsey from sharing in its profits. Even if the treatment is fake, how can the court deny Mr. Hoxsey his profits (if any) earned prior to the "decree" issued by Larrick that it was fake? Our purpose here is not to defend Hoxsey, or his cure. We only want to remark that in all the investigating we've done, we've never seen any proof that it was fake, any disproof in any of the cases actually brought into court as evidence. These cases were simply ignored, dismissed by legalistic maneuvers, and the evidence deprived of its right to become "exhibits A, B and C, etc." The whole thing was decided simply on a basis of the labeling on bottles, and the facts that these bottles were mailed or shipped across state lines. It is mislabeling to state that any concoction cures anything if there does not exist legal proof that it does. For instance, there is no legal proof that whole wheat cures starvation or indigestion or beri-beri or the teen-age stomp. There is no legal proof that green lettuce cures rickets or dysentery. To sell lettuce as a "cure" is forbidden by law. It must be sold as a food only. To say that lettuce is "healthy" for you is unlawful, and you can be prosecuted if you put that statement on the label. You can put it on, but if you do, you must state which disease it cures, and you must list the dosage.

Anyway, if you are one of these people who have cancer, and failing all else, would actually turn to Hoxsey, quack or not, you will have to forget it—because the clinics are closed. We mention it so that you will stop writing us letters asking us for the address of Mr. Hoxsey. We commiserate with you who are afflicted with cancer, and doomed to die in agony, but your doctor is your only hope, and this may be a real hope, because we understand that now cancer researchers are discovering that chemotherapy (Hoxsey's method was chemical) may be the answer to cancer. Let's hope that the medics soon develop a chemical cure that will work—because if so, the Hoxsey affair may well have been of some help after all, by pointing the way. Many people have been cured by fakes—notably by the "sugar pills" that all doctors give, knowing full well that they are administering a "fake" medicine, condoning it because it will have the effect of inducing a psychological cure.

As you read this, our first issue of THE HIDDEN WORLD will be coming off the press (we hope—because we can never be sure of our printing schedule, which must be fitted in between more important magazines than ours such as "Sin Girl", "Party Dame" and "Sex Pot" which, although they sell under the counter, manage to sell ten times what we do!). This new kind of publishing venture, which we call the "Subscription Book", contains 192 pages, heavy slick paper covers, and as much wordage as two average hard cover books, will be published four times yearly, and for the first three years, at least, will be devoted to giving the famous Shaver Mystery in its entirety, from the very first letter written by Mr. Shaver back in 1944, to the very latest material that has come to us. Nothing in magazine history has ever equalled the Shaver Mystery. No "story" published in a fiction magazine has ever aroused so much controversy (even Life magazine devoted 8 pages to it!), nor had so many followers. Millions of people are very much interested in it, and hundreds of thousands claim it is literally true, that they have participated in the identical events described by Mr. Shaver.

This mystery was presented partially as fiction by your editor back in 1945, and for twelve years thereafter, but now it is to be presented wholly as fact. Not one item is to be left untold, and there are many filing cabinets and packing boxes full of material, never before published, and considered at the time "too hot" even for the pages of Amazing Stories, where the Mystery became famous. For years people have asked me what I personally thought and knew about the Shaver Mystery. When asked such a question, what answer can there be? It is like calling on the President and asking him to tell you "everything". In the first place, it would take years, and in the second place, how do you begin with one who hasn't even been aware of the simple beginnings?

In these series of books, we will begin with the simple beginnings, proceeding down through the years, omitting nothing, pointing out all the factors which were fictionally introduced, giving the reasons for them, correcting the misapprehensions, and most important, giving all the facts, all the accumulated research, all the related lore that goes to make up what actually is the proof so many people have demanded.

One thing is certain—these books will be a real adventure! They will startle you beyond words; they will awaken your thought processes as nothing else ever has. Your editor's experiences have brought him many interests, many hobbies—but none can compare with the Shaver Mystery. For seventeen years we have lived an adventure so exciting few of our readers realize what it really means to us. We have never been able to explain the whole thing thoroughly to those hundreds upon hundreds of people who have traveled thousands of miles (even from other continents) to face us and learn "all we know". We have regretted our inability to satisfy them. We have given them only a sketchy outline, hoping they will then be able to search out the truth for themselves. We have never even mentioned our secret files, because then, inevitably, they want to see them—and this is a job that would take many months; further, we could not let a single item out of our hands. And invariably, these earnest people would have requested: "Let me take this along and study it—I promise faithfully to take good care of it, and will certainly return it to you." Now you will all be able to "take it along" and study it, because everything will be put between covers. Nor will it cost the large sum that as many as twenty books at $4.00 each would entail, but each book will cost only $1.50 and you can subscribe for as few as four at a time, or buy the first one singly (as long as they last!). Don't miss this chance to get the truth about the Shaver Mystery; it will be your last chance.—Rap.

IS THERE A RULE FOR MATING?

Is there a rule for choosing a wife or a husband, which, if known and followed, may lead to a happy marriage and to good health for the partners, and if broken, whether by ignorance or intention, may lead to an unhappy marriage, to possible psychosomatic distress or illness, perhaps even to divorce? Is there something deeper than personality which may give rise to personality conflicts, something which the best of honest intentions and good will may bend but perhaps not truly change, something which affects us all? Are we even in this age of science, of modern medicine and psychoanalysis, still failing to see vital factors in the marriage relationship which are very important for us to know?

This talk about a rule for mating may strike many as superstition that properly belongs back in the dark ages. Others may wonder if some truth is hidden here. The author of this article belongs in the last category. Without intending to be dogmatic, without saying that there is a rule for mating, I am asking questions. Perhaps millions of thoughtful Americans may find these questions of interest. It is with this thought in mind that this article is written.

Many will say that chance is the most important factor in finding a wife or a husband. The boy and the girl meet by chance, they like each other, and economic, social, and religious conventions permitting, they get married - and live happily ever after. We even have a fairy tale about it.

Looking at the over-crowded calendars of our divorce courts, watching unhappy couples with the best possible intentions struggle with something they do not understand, considering the incidence of psychosomatic illness, we can perhaps see where the fairy tale part comes in. It's the bit about their living happily ever after.

Yet, in spite of the statistics on the rising number of divorces, in spite of the evidence before our eyes of unhappy marriages among our friends - people who are sticking it out for the sake of the children or their religion - each of us treasures in his secret heart the conviction that the fairy tale ending ought to come true, the boy ought to meet the girl and they ought to get married and live happily ever after. Why are so many of us not doing it?

Psychiatrists, medical doctors, and social workers state almost unanimously that a happy marriage is founded upon the bedrock of a happy bed, in other words, upon a mutually satisfying and sustaining sexual relationship. They write books and do endless counselling telling how to achieve this goal. While their efforts may be wholly or partly successful in some instances, there are many baffling cases where the best efforts of the doctor or psychiatrist and the best of good will and intention of the married partners result in failure and end in the divorce court. Why does this happen? Is there some rule unknown to the average doctor and psychiatrist which governs this most intimate of human relationships, something beyond personality but giving rise to personality conflicts when it is violated, something that perhaps once was known but which has been lost in a modern world grown too complex to give heed to the simple foundations upon which it actually rests?

Is it possible that there is actually a rule for mating that will not only explain many baffling marriage failures but which will also give the young men and the young women of today a better chance to become happier parents in the world of tomorrow?

Some of the astrologers claim there is such a rule and suggest the sign under which one's marriage partner should be born in order to give the best chance for harmony and happiness. Usually they do not consider that health is a component of this same situation. The source from which I take the mating rule is not an astrologer but is astrologically oriented. This source says that good health is linked to the situation. Since much psychosomatic illness can be considered as resulting from stress, which is often accentuated in an unhappy marriage, it seems permissable to consider, or at least to think about in a general way, the health of the partners.

If this article were to be truly scientific, it would be necessary to define my terms clearly. This is hardly possible in a popular article written by a layman and intended for laymen. However, it may be well to consider what is a good marriage. Most couples just married will say they have a good marriage. Will they say the same thing five years later? Ten years later? Twenty years later? If they say it ten to twenty years later, is this because they know it to be true or because they are putting up a good front for the sake of the children, the family, and their friends. Also, if they have never had a good marriage, how will they know what a good marriage is? Obviously, it is not a good marriage if it ends in the divorce courts. Is it a good marriage if either or both partners are suffering from stress that is sending them to the bars for relief or from a psychosomatic condition that is sending them to a doctor or a psychiatrist? Of course, this question cannot be answered except in reference to a specific case, and then only by a trained specialist.

Considering what I see in the world around me, I sometimes wonder, almost despairingly, if there is such a thing as a good marriage in which both partners are truly happy. Is the fret, the tension, and the suffering which I see many people patiently enduring necessarily the common lot of man? Is this the best we can do?

Or are we missing something that we ought to know?

Many will object to the use of ideas from astrology, feeling that such beliefs are unscientific. Without endorsing all the claims made by the people in this field, it is well to point out that to refuse to look at evidence, no matter from what source it is drawn, is even more unscientific. One purpose of this article is to review what evidence there is for a rule for mating. Actually, in the United States and in Europe today, there is a large upswing of interest in astrology. One magazine with a huge national circulation recently ran an article on this subject.

I am using terms from astrology because they fit the subject, they have been used for perhaps 8,000 years, and they explain what I am talking about - the mating rule.

These terms are fire, water, air, and earth. Ancient sages said the whole universe was built out of these four elements, but when they said this, they did not mean the kind of fire that burns in your kitchen range or the water that runs out of your tap or the air you breathe or the earth you walk upon. They used these terms as symbols for something far more basic than chemical elements or chemical reactions. It is as symbols that I am using them now. Using these symbols, the mating rule can be stated in this way: For a happy, healthy marriage, the man and wife should be of the same element, meaning, fire with fire, water with water, air with air, or earth with earth but of a DIFFERING SIGN, which means a different birth month. Our birth date determines the element under which we are born, it also determines our Zodiacal sign. As always, to every general rule, there are exceptions. This rule has its exception, which says alterations can occur because of planetary positions at birth, but the explanation of this is beyond the scope of this article.

I realize this seems complicated and hard to understand. Actually it is very simple. Prepare a chart that will clarify it. Show on the chart the twelve signs of the Zodiac and the time each begins and ends. Show also on the chart the four related elemental symbols, fire, water, air, and earth.

The general rule says that a man and wife should be of the same element but of a different sign. Thus if a man were born on 10 June, he would be an air element. According to the rule, his wife should also be an air element, but since she should be of a different sign, she should be born between 23 September and 24 October or between 20 January and 19 February - the year of birth being not considered in the general rule. The same is true of the other elements. A glance at your chart and a quick recall of your own birth date and the birth date of your spouse - past, present, or to be - will quickly tell you how you fit into the rule.

But how can such a thing as your birth day, and the relationship between it and the birthday of your spouse, affect your happiness in marriage, your success or failure in it, possibly even your general health?

To answer this question fully would take us far beyond the scope of this article. To give a brief explanation, we have to assume that there is something called frequency and something called polarity in the universe. Frequency means rate of vibration. Each time you tune your radio set or change the channel on your television receiver, you are demonstrating what a change of frequency can mean. A simple flip of the dial can change the scene from a romance to a boxing match. Another illustration of frequency can be found in any piano. Hit one key and you get one note. Hit two keys, however, and you get a blend of two notes. Is this blend harmonious or is it a discord that sets your ears and your nerves jangling?

But you are not a radio set or a piano and you have no frequency and frequencies do not affect you. It's your wife's nagging that is causing your troubles - or your husband's unromantic ways. But why does your wife nag and why are your husband's ways unromantic? Does she nag because of some unheard discord that is setting her nerves jangling at very deep levels and are his ways unromantic for the very same reason? Is it possible that you do have a basic frequency established and fixed in you by the first breath you take after you are born, a frequency at so high a rate of vibration that you can't hear it and which no instrument yet devised by science will measure, a frequency which affects your harmonious or discordant relationship with every person you meet?

This frequency is one thing the astrologers are talking about, it is what I am discussing here. The astrologers say it exists, modern science and your radio set say that frequencies exist, but do they exist in us? I don't say they exist, I say I am asking questions and trying to find out if this could conceivably be true?

As to polarity, magnets have polarity, they have north and south poles, but we don't have polarity and nobody can prove that we do. However, in simple magnets, the opposite poles attract each other, the same poles repel each other. Does this phenomenon exist in us? Something exists, because men and women certainly find each other attractive.

At this point, we have a theoretical general rule for mating, we have something called polarity that may possibly play some part in bringing men and women together, and we have something called frequency, which the astrologers claim is established by the first breath we take after we are born. Does this frequency have anything to do with our health and happiness after we become adults? Do two basic frequencies exist, one in a man and the other in a woman, unheard and unfelt by either, and does the blending of these two frequencies result in a harmony which enables them to live in health, happiness, and general contentment with each other - or does it exist as an annoying undertone which sets their nerves jangling and may send them to the doctors and to the divorce courts if it becomes sufficiently severe?

In the composition of music there are definite laws or harmony. Anyone who has ever heard a beginner learning to play the piano has been given proof of disharmony as a wrong note was struck and jangling discord resulted. At the level of sound, there is no question of the existence of frequency, of harmony, and of disharmony.

Is there also in existence a far more subtle realm of frequency in which laws analogous to those of music operate? Does this realm of higher frequency exert powerful influences in our lives, marrying them or building them into contentment all unknown to us? Do we experience results without knowing causes? Do we dance to the tune of an unheard piper?

If these mysterious realms exist, can we find out about them, can we be sensible about them, can we understand them and use them in ways that increase our happiness and which give our children a better chance at a good life?

When I first came across this mating rule, I saw that if it had any validity, it could be checked statistically. While statistical proof would involve thousands of cases, I could get a very rough estimate of its accuracy by simply talking to my friends, by asking them their birth dates and one or two questions about their general health and marriage history. As I did this, I began to uncover facts which startled me.

Here, presented very briefly, are the case histories just as I uncovered them:

Case Number 1. Although he was and still is, by best friend, in many ways he was my most difficult interview. Middle-aged, with the marks of physical pain and emotional suffering so deep on his face that I was sure they had penetrated to his soul, he was full of questions, doubt, and blunt language. He said, "If there is any meaning for the word hell that I have not personally experienced since the breakup of my marriage, I hope I never find it out. Though correlated with heavy emotional shock from another source, my marriage breakup marked the beginning of physical pain and emotional suffering for me. The medical doctors and the psychiatrists have told me that the entire condition from which I suffer is psychosomatic - which does not make it any less real - but they have not been able to correct it in ten years. No, I have never blamed my wife for divorcing me, though there was no reason for it beyond incompatibility, no other woman, no drinking, no gambling. In all conscience, I cannot blame her, for nothing will ever convince me that she did anything short of her very best to make a go of our marriage. She even went through psychoanalysis in an effort to find out what was wrong and to change the picture. This effort failed. She was a splendid woman and she was, and still is, a wonderful mother to our daughter. I don't know where I failed her or where she failed me —" Here the lines deepened on his face—"But fail we did."

At my prodding questions, he went on. "No, I have not considered another marriage. Financially, I couldn't even think of it, but more important, before I would consider marrying again, I want to know what went wrong with the marriage I had and how to correct it. Any man can make one mistake but only an idiot makes the same mistake twice. Where did we go wrong in our marriage? It was not through lack of good intentions, you can bet on that."

When I asked him for his birth date and for that of his ex-wife, he snorted. This smacked of astrology. He was well educated and well read. He wanted facts, not superstition. But he also wanted to know and he was willing to look a fact in the eye, if, as he put it, "I can find one."

This was the fact of his marriage. He was an air element, his wife was a water element. They had one child, a daughter. After 14 years of marriage, they had divorced. The marks of pain on this man's face confirmed that he knew intimately the meaning of the word suffering.

Case Number 2, in her mid-forties, she was a beautiful woman and a very sensitive person. She told me, with a semi-forced calm, "Yes, we had stress, far too much of it. I know my husband did his best, but —" Her voice had faltered into silence at this point. No, they had not been divorced. In his early forties, her husband had died of an acute coronary attack. He had been a fire element, she was an air element. No children.

Case Number 3, a secretary in her middle fifties, living alone and resigned to it. As she talked to me, I could barely discern the thin white line circling her throat where years before surgeons had removed her thyroid gland. "We were married 16 years and had four children," she told me. "Then we were divorced. My birthday? What's that got to do with it?"

"Maybe something, maybe nothing, I'm just trying to find out," I told her.

She was an earth element, he was a water element, it turned out.

Was the rule for mating being borne out by randomly-uncovered statistics? Here were three cases where it had been broken unknowingly, here were three results—two divorces and one death from a disease becoming more and more prominent - heart failure.

Here are more cases: Case Number 4, married three years, wife had a nervous breakdown, one child, divorced. She was an air element, he was an earth element. In the next case, a fire element had married an earth element They had lived together almost three years before the divorce. In the next case, an air element had married a water element. Both had had very high IQs. They had lived together one year before the wife had had a nervous breakdown. Then the divorce. In the next case, an air element had married a water element, then - you guessed it - the divorce.

At this point, my collection of case histories, while far from conclusive, was beginning to look interesting. Of course, it was possible that my friends were just sore-headed freaks who couldn't get along with anybody anyhow, it was possible that I was distorting data by unconsciously selecting people for interview, it was possible I wasn't digging deep enough, and it was certain I didn't have enough data.

Here I ran into Case Number 1 again, that stubborn fellow who was willing to look a fact in the eye, if he could find one. He had questions. "But what are we talking about?" he asked.

"We're talking about something called polarity and about something called frequency, and about something called magnetic field, which is non-physical and which cannot be detected by any instrument I know, within which the polarity and the frequency exist,' I told him.

"You're hunting for a non-existent needle in a hay-stack that never was!" he snorted. When he had calmed down enough, he asked another question. "Where is this so-called magnetic field located?"

"It's deep in the abdomen, in the pelvic area, in both sexes, and the act of sexual intercourse beings these two magnetic fields - one in the man and one in the woman - of differing polarities and frequencies into the most intimate possible human contact," I told him.

"Two magnetic fields of differing polarity interpenetrating each other —" His head shot up. "That is the principle used in dynamos to generate the current burning in every electric light on earth!"

"That's interesting," I said. "But when two humans mate, when two human magnetic fields interpenetrate, what is generated?"

"Children, sometimes," he answered. "That is one meaning for the word generation." his eyes snapped a question at me. "Are you hinting that something else may also be generated in the mating act?"

"I wonder if something else is generated in mating?" I mused. "Does sex have a second function, a second purpose which is not necessarily reproduction? If the frequencies of the two partners blend in such a way as to be harmonious, is something else generated, some subtle but very powerful energy that makes them both healthy and happy?"

This question shook Case Number 1. He was almost talking to himself when he went away. I know he went to libraries and checked reference books, that he talked to electrical engineers, and that he even went so far as to find and visit a college of astrology, as he tried to prove or disprove this hypothesis.

I went on with my case histories. I suspected, even if the mating rule turned out to be true, that there were other factors in the picture which might mar even a correct mating - greed, fear, anger. There was also the ancient astrological dictum, "The stars impel but do not compel." This had some interest, but at the level I was exploring, my major interest lay in the frequency relationship between two magnetic fields of opposite polarity in that most wonderful experience - or most horrible, if it is wrong - the love relationship between the sexes. Also to be considered were such aspects as personality, economic, social, and religious factors, the whole conditioning process of education, and the impact of trauma of various kinds. These aspects were all beyond the reach of my investigation and all I could do was nod at them in polite recognition. What I wanted to do was to find out if something more fundamental than any of these factors was also involved in the marriage relationship, something so fundamental that personality depended on it, something that could perhaps be swayed or postponed by the good will, or the free will, of the individuals concerned? Also I knew at this point that even if the mating rule was true, it was usually not dramatic or sudden in its operation. Case Number 2 had lived with her husband for 18 years, with both stoutly insisting to each other and to the world that they had an excellent marriage. Case Number 3 had lived with her husband for 16 years. If the rule existed, it was nothing for anyone to be immediately alarmed about; it usually worked with the slowness of water wearing away stone. Instead of being something to worry about, it was something to think about.

Case Number 7, stress part of the time, happiness part of the time, no children. After 17 years, the husband had died of collapse of arteries around the heart, the wife was still living. He had been a fire element, she was a water element. Case Number 8 had tried marriage three times. In the first marriage, she had lived with her husband for 12 years, they had had two children, then had been divorced. She was a water element, he was an earth element. The second time she had married another earth element, they had had one child, they had lived together two years before divorcing. Just married again, this time she had mated with a fire element. Twice she had tried, twice she had failed. What would happen to this third marriage? She wanted to know. I told her I did not know the answer, but in any event she would have to keep right on doing what all the rest of us were doing, the best we could, that even if changes were to be made, they must come slowly, and as a result of scientific exploration and education in these matters.

Many of these people had had for a time what seemed to the world to be good marriages. This made me wonder if the measurement of the world is the best possible standard. Is there something in this picture which may be called a law of nature which has its own standards?

The more case histories I collected among my friends, the stronger seemed to become the case for the mating rule. Then I talked to my last couple. They had been married 20 years. Both were in good health and both were very, very happy with each other. The husband was an air element, the wife was an air element. She had been born on 9 October, he on 14 February. Both were of the same element but of differing signs, differing birth months.

Though neither partner even knew it existed, the mating rule had been exactly kept - and the result had been what everyone seeks but few find, good health, happiness, and a successful marriage.

I do not pretend that anything has been proved by this article. The study is too limited in number of cases to be more than slightly indicative. Perhaps all that has been done has been to suggest the need for an exhaustive study, possibly involving thousands of cases, but this is a matter for an agency equipped for such work, with trained personnel, possibly enough has been said to indicate that the ancient beliefs of astrology need further investigation, possibly along new lines, plus re-evaluation in the light of modern knowledge.

Can marriage in complete ignorance of the rule for mating be called anything but random mating, with physical attraction, nearness, social position, and money playing more prominent parts than the laws of nature possibly recognize? In such random mating, if the mating rule is true, the odds are close to five to one, against achieving a healthy, happy marriage, by luck.

Many will object to what I say and will point out the difficulty of developing simple rules for laymen on so intricate a subject. Unfortunately neither a human being nor the universe in which we live are simple. We have to face ourselves and our world as we are, and look to what we are to become. Eleven generations ago my forefather landed on the inhospitable shores of what a long time later became the State of Massachusetts. They faced a wilderness in that day of long ago. Today I write these words on top of a mountain overlooking Hollywood and Los Angeles. Below my eyes is spread a mighty city. It took more than 300 years for my family to cover the distance between Massachusetts and California. We didn't get here the easy way. But eleven generations ago we made a beginning. Perhaps the most we can do today is to make another beginning, of another kind. We must make it, for truly we face a wilderness, also of another kind, the wilderness of human relations. If we do this with good courage, perhaps our descendents in some future day will thank us for laying the foundation for another mighty city, of another kind - their happiness. Can we do any less than this?

By the time I had finished my short study, Case Number 1 had returned, with questions, plus a look of wonder, as if something had happened to him that he had never believed could happen, something decent, fine, and good. I answered his questions as best I could but mostly I watched this look of wonder that was on his face. "If this rule for mating is true," he said slowly, "then it wasn't the breakup of my marriage, it wasn't the divorce, that was wrong, it was the marriage in the first place. My wife and I were married because we were handy to each other and it was time for marriage. The price she and I have paid - and it has been a high price - is the price of ignorance, of not knowing the truth. Neither of us did anything wrong, really, in our marriage, we didn't fail each other, we just made a mistake, through ignorance, in getting married at all."

As he spoke these words, I watched the needless guilt of ten years standing, the pain, the shame, the feeling of failure, begin to go away from the face of this man. I knew the source of the look of joy and of wonder that was on him. I knew also beyond any possibility of doubt that this man had been helped. He had achieved understanding and in this measure has gained security within himself. Perhaps others had also been helped.

How can I say beyond the shadow of a doubt that I know this man was helped, how can I be sure of this? The answer is really very simple. I am Case Number 1: This is the story of my psychosomatic pain, my guilt, my feeling of failure in marriage. The other cases are also true. These are real people in a real world living real lives and knowing intimately the meaning of the word suffering. And through understanding of the meaning of the mating rule, it is also the story of the stride I have personally taken toward freedom from the dark forces of ignorance and despair. It is also the story story of my own personal fight for freedom for—Remember I said Case Number 1 had a child?—for freedom for my own daughter from the dark forces of ignorance and despair that swept away so many years of my own life.

When she comes to the age of marriage - as coming now she is - my prayer, and the prayer of uncounted millions of other parents, is: "Let there be at least a little more light on this path than there was when my feet trod it."

If this light comes from modern medicine, fine, if it comes from psychiatry, religion, or science, well and good. Just so it is light and it does come.

If it comes from the ancient beliefs of astrology, this is all right too. Light from any source is welcome in a world where the dark ages may not yet be ended.

The SUN and MOON in ASTROLOGY

By Hannes Bok
NO. 4

"Tain't so!" a lady astrologer told me, charmingly and deliberately ungrammatical for the sake of emphasis.

"This notion of yours, that the Sun and Moon mean entirely opposite things in male and female horoscopes—it just ain't so!"

She was of course taking exception to some things I'd said in one of these SEARCH articles.

What I'd said, and still persist in saying—and the idea isn't my own, but was handed me by another astrologer, years ago—is that in a man's horoscope, the position and aspects to other birth-planets of the man's Moon-at-birth denotes the true man, the "inner man," his ego-identification and motivation, "what he's trying to prove" and is thus the "driver" of the physical vehicle for self-expression—his body or his birth-Sun. In a woman's chart it's just the reverse. Her birth-Sun denotes the inner woman or the "driver" and her birth-Moon constitutes the vehicle of self-expression, or her "car".

This is because of the Law of Polarity (or the Law of Opposites or Complements) which applies in all things, including the sexes. If for no better reason, the position and aspects of a woman's birth-Moon denotes her physical body because the Moon undergoes a monthly change —same as the female body.

But my lady-astrologer-friend is an adherent of Solar Astrology, which says that if you're born in May, whether you're male or female, you're "a Taurus" and bound to have a "Taurean career".

Quoth she, "All life from the Sun, so it stands to reason that nobody's body can be represented by the Moon!"

And she's not the only one. Practically every one of my female clients does a double-take when I look at her chart and announce something like, "You were born February 17, 1935, which puts your Sun in Aquarious and your Moon in Leo. You probably think you're 'an Aquarius', but you're not—if anything, you're 'a Leo'. And if you've been reading those forecasts in the various astrology magazines, you've probably been reading under 'Aquarius' and wondering why the predictions don't check. What really you should be reading is the forecast for 'Leo'."

The client blanches and protests, "But I always thought I was an Aquarius! None of the magazines ever said I was a Leo!"

So I have to explain: "Looky, Cookie—the astrology magazines feature Sun-Sign or Solar Astrology —meaning that they base all their conclusions on the position of your birth-Sun alone, paying no heed to the nine other celestial bodies (Moon, Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, Neptune and Pluto)."

"But why do they do that?"

"Because otherwise they'd have to know everybody's exact birth-date, since the 'planets' all move at varying velocities and thus never form the same patterns twice. Births two days or more apart can cause radical differences in character and destiny. But our calendar is based upon the Sun's returning to the same area of the zodiac once every year, so that every February the Sun is in the zodiacal sign Aquarius, and every August it's in Leo. But the Moon returns to the same zodiacal area once every month or more accurately, thirteen times a year. Hence, while you may have your birth-Sun in Aquarius if you're born in February, you can also have your Moon in any of the other eleven zodiacal signs."

"Oh. Oh? Oh! But I still don't see why it makes me a Leo!"

So then I explain about the Moon and the female body both undergoing a monthly period, and I give some examples of "astrological twins", a subject on which I'm pretty much enthused at present.

Ideally, astrological twins are persons of the same sex born on the same year, month and day, at the same hour and in the same place. Alas, I've never encountered ony of these. But I have found a few persons born on the selfsame day—though at different hours and in different places. And it's amazing how similar their lives have been.

Of course there are cases wherein boy-and-girl twins are born a few minutes apart, so that they have almost identical horoscopes, but with a difference of a few degrees in their Rising Signs or Ascendants.

But I've yet to see boy-girl twins ever having even remotely similar careers. This of course is because the boy's motive-for-being is expressed by his Moon, while the girl's motive-for-being is expressed by her Sun. Hence each—according to the location of Sun and Moon in the mutually shared chart—is trying to prove something different from the other.

Ladies, if you want really to know your man, don't just look to his Sun position—because it will show you only his outward self, not the real man at all; it'll show you the car, but not the driver. Or sure, if you see a guy in a Cadillac, you can draw conclusions as to his bank account, but how do you know he's a good driver? If you want to get down to what really makes your man tick—find out where his Moon is!

We gents have it a lot easier. While the Fair Sex often lies about its age, it seldom changes the month and the day of birth—just the year. And since the month and day of birth tell us where the gal's Sun (or Ego) is, we know right off the bat what type of ego she possesses. Hence if I were a gal, I'd never admit to owning Sun in Aries, because it's a tip-off to being a poor marriage-partner.

Now, to show you how alike and how different people can be, and in what way the man's birth-Moon proves what he really is, unto himself—in spite of what people think he is when judging him merely by his outward seeming—I'm going to give you an example, not of astrological twins but of astrological quadruplets!

The male Sun is the man's performance, and naturally we tend to judge others by their performance. The male Moon is his intentions—and I have a hunch that God judges us by our intentions, even if in this mortal world they pave the road to Hell.

Here we have four guys, all born a few days apart. They're all 22 years old at present. I'll change their names . . . better still, I'll call them by their Moon positions.

Since the Moon moves very swiftly, covering 12 to 15 degrees of zodiacal space per day, while next-fastest Mercury never exceeds 3 degrees per diem, even though these kids all were born days apart, in essence their birth factors are identical except for their Moon-locations and aspects.

Which means that in every particular, save for motivation, their lives should basically agree. Do they??

All are cursed by a "T-Cross" consisting of the same planetary elements—and if I wax too technical for those of you who don't know beans about astrology, please bear with me: I'll try hard to clarify as I go along. A "T-Cross" consists of an opposition of two or more planets, squared by still another planet —which means two sets of birth-and-character-factors at opposite poles to each other, with a third element in conflict to both of them. Something like a catch-as-catch-can wrestling match, with two wrestlers in opposite corners, and a third wrestler in a third corner, ready to jump on whomever's getting the worst of it.

In our quadruplets' case, this mutually-shared T-Cross consists of Sun-Mercury-and-Mars in one corner, opposing Jupiter in the opposite corner, and Uranus in a third corner just waiting his chance to jump the others.

Which, broken-down, means:

Sun-Mercury-Mars in conjunction and "afflicted": all these kids are reckless types, craving "excitement and adventure".. They've brilliant but undisciplined minds and are inclined toward shrewdness rather than reasoning-power.

Sun-Mercury-Mars opposing Jupiter: their opportunism quarrels with their use of logic, and their methods of "putting themselves across". They all want a fast buck with a minimum of work, are inclined toward risks, and "dream Big"—too big for their britches and their capabilities.

Uranus thrown in: each has "got to be independent" and will throw away any good opportunity for gain if it won't let him "be himself." Method conflicts with initiative, so that they sometimes have to work too hard for what they want, or again, don't work enough.

And to round things out, all have Venus opposing Saturn besides. Which means that in love-beauty-pleasure matters, they can't face facts; they always set their hearts on having what they can't have, and whatever they get, they don't want, and manage to drive it away from them.

Shiftless skonks, all? Fools? Poor well-meaning pawns of wicked Fate? I don't call them any of these: to me they're just clinical cases: equations in characteristics rather than in numerals.

Now let's see what their Moon-positions (which provide us with their motivations, showing "what they're trying to prove") do to differentiate them.

First there's Moon-in-Aries. This kid was born in a London slum. At thirteen he was gathering old boxes from gutters to break 'em up and sell the splinters for kindling. At nights he'd hide in a park across the street from a High Society Night Club, and watch the well-dressed, well-heeled patrons come and go. He'd wish so badly to be among their number that he'd cry. He'd vow repeatedly that some day, by golly, he'd be there!

In a male chart, Moon in Aries "inclines toward leadership" because it indicates a fellow who's got to be first in his class; call it selfishness or call it "the spirit of competition", that's still the basic motivation. Moon in Aries cuts corners: "The shorest distance between two points is a straight line." Kind of rough on any pedestrians standing on the corner, though.

This kid's pretty good-looking, and being young, the vitality of youth adds enthusiasm and "fire"—something pleasing to jaded, world-weary oldsters with lots of coin and nothing much to do with it. When he gets older, he won't look like much of anything.

Moon-Aries got himself a job on a luxury-liner and was very attentive to, and solicitous of, the wealthier passengers. And made some good contacts. When ashore, he liked to dress-up like a "Society Swell" and frequent the more exclusive hotels. The expensive garb (which he'd saved many months to buy) and the manners he'd picked-up from his shipboard acquaintances provided entree.

Unfortunately, whenever he opened his yap, his outrageous Cockney accent gave the whole show away. It amused the blase well-to-do habitues: the kid's brash naivete was enchanting, so they made him their mascot. He still sports this weird accent: "Hi sye, 'Annes, do you believe hin a 'ell hand 'eaven?" And it still works for him, for a while—then against him

He lived with a movie-producer for a while, and attended conferences on production as an underling. When his charm wore off, he found himself out in the cold on his ear, so he returned to his luxury-liner job. Then went to Hollywood hoping for a film career ("Hit's honly the top for me!") and shared a room with another lad who didn't quite make the grade either. Whenever he had the money, he'd put on evening clothes and head for the better night clubs, always alone.

"I like to keep myself mysterious," he told me. It didn't pay to let others know too much about oneself. They lost interest.

He made contacts, played golf at the best places, attended swank film-star parties and so on—until once again the charm wore off, for others.

When I met him, he was "temporarily" a waiter in a big New York hotel, marking time until he could go back to the steward-job again.

He has a fantastically deep voice, and he's catnip to the ladies—of all ages. He likes to get them into bed—once. Not being a lady myself, I don't see what the women see in him, but I've seen him add scalp after scalp to his trophy-belt. Whatever it is he needs, he's certainly got!

But he told me, aside, that he didn't really care for any of these women, or even very much for sex. "Hi just want to be sure Hi'm not losing my grip," he told me.

Maybe he sounds despicable. I get a bang out of him—he reminds me a lot of Clovis Sangrail, the hero of many of "Saki's" short stories.

And now let's consider his "twin", Moon-in-Capricorn.

In a male chart, Moon in Capricorn too often indicates a "superiority complex" Its possessor feels that he was "born to be on top" and therefore is exempt from having to work for status—it ought to be handed him on a silver platter, and the world owes him a living (This of course is a negative Moon-in-Capricorn attitude—the positive types aren't nowhere nearly as crass.)

He therefore tends to belittle others' accomplishments. He knows that he could do just as well or better—and when you know something, there's no need of having to go to all the work of proving it.

This kid is good-looking too, mostly for his pretty and pink complexion and youthful verve. When he gets older, though, he won't have even that much in his favor. In manner he's a bit loud and gauche. It's his quickness of mind which intrigues me—I like alert people. He misses nothing, if it's to his possible advantage—same as Moon-Aries.

I never did learn if Moon-Aries had trouble with the police at any time, but the other "twins" have had it. Including Moon-Capricorn, over trying to get his penny back from a recalcitrant vending machine: the policeman happening by didn't see any humor in it.

Far as I know, this lad never has had a job. His parents put him through some school; when he left home, he shacked-up with an older woman, a Greenwich Village Beatnik-ess who ran a bar, but that didn't last long. He's had mad passions for girls who won't give him the time of day. Recently he married (and I shudder for his poor bride, because the marriage can't last—at least not as what marriage ought to mean) because her family will finish putting him through college. Hey ho!

Next comes Moon-Cancer. This poor kid has the usual Moon-Cancer inferiority fixation. He's been told so often that everybody's right, and he's wrong, that's he's come to believe it. He can't stand himself. So he runs away from himself—into drugs.

He's a good-looking red-headed Irish type with plenty of ingratiating mannerisms, but absolutely no self confidence—hence no self respect. You can't very well respect what doesn't exist (a hint which nagging wives ought to take to heart, if they don't want to drive their hubbies to greener pastures).

He's had plenty of police-trouble. He's broken into apartments in this area to steal whatever he could pawn, the money going for dope. You see, when you're hopped-up, "you" don't exist—nothing at all exists except lovely colors and sounds and scents, and you're nothing but a happy wisp of appreciation floating untrammeled around in them; who or what you "are" no longer matters, because there isn't any "you" to be shamed or scolded by others.

If I were laying blame at any door, I'd be inclined to ascribe it to his religion, which has convinced him that he's a wicked sinner with no hope of redemption, because every one of his natural instincts is "evil". It's a case of "Give a dog a bad name and he'll live up to it." Coueism and Hitler's Big Lie at work, and the philosophy of Frederick Wakeman's "Hucksters": irritate people enough with the same old chiche and in time they'll become conditioned to it like one of Pavlov's pooches. (Now you know why I use cliches.)

I dunno about his love-life, beyond that he likes others' children, but is dead set against marriage (which makes him smarter than the others—he at least, senses his romantic destiny).

A couple of years ago he committed himself to Lexington. When he came out, his family was so ashamed of him that they moved away. He hung around a while doing odd jobs in the same old environment which had helped put him in Lexington. Recently he recommitted himself—it's easier than working, isn't it?

And now for our fourth type,

Moon-in-Scorpio. This kid's a Puerto Rican, and was a beautiful child, but now that he's maturing, he's beginning to be ugly—craftiness and a certain coarseness starting to show in his face.

Puerto Ricans have a raw time of it here. Overcrowded for one thing, in what amounts to rat's nests. This kid has never had a room to himself, has never slept alone, and has galloping cabin-fever. In school he was picked-on as being a "dirty Spic", and had to run with the gang if he didn't want his brains knocked out. Teachers somehow don't approve of gangs, so his teachers picked on him. He got to hate school. He played hookey. Don't ask me how, but he got through the Ninth Grade, unable to read. He distinguishes words by their shape, as I learned when he read "dish" when the word was plate—"Something to eat off of, ain't it?"

Don't think he's stupid. This kid's one of the canniest little connivers I've ever encountered!

Since he can't read decently (to him, "handsome, handy and handle" all are one word—"hand") he can't get even a messenger's job. If sent to Clifton Street, he'd spend all day looking for the "Cliff Street" written on the package. He did get a job in a grocery for a whole week —putting cans on shelves. As long as the cans had pictures of the contents, he knew where to put them. When they didn't have pictures, he lost the job, but was inwardly pleased, because it had bored him.

Typically Moon-Scorpio, he's mother-dominated, and his mother drinks. In her cramped, destitute, frantic position, I can't blame her.

All this kid can do is hang around street-corners with others of his ilk, whistling at the pretty girls, yearning for the snazzy clothes he sees on others, and craving a shiny big car Since he can't wade through one printed sentence without forgetting the meaning of the first word due to all the stumbling and guesswork involved in reaching the last word, the boy has no means of forming decent standards. All he knows is whatever the other guys talk about, and the kinds of desirable things as are magnified in the movies.

He's always trying on roles for size. For two months after he saw "The High And The Mighty", he went around being John Wayne, the Fearless Pilot. Then he saw a detective movie and swaggered around being a private eye. Then it was a gangster movie . . . and so on.

He had to have money, so at seventeen he was selling marijuana (don't ask me where he got it, I dunno—I think from his cousin, who's now in jail on a dope rap) and long before that he was in reform-school for swiping parts from cars.

I've tried to teach him to read, but it's not my forte. I feel both like smiling and bawling when I hear him at his age sing the alphabet song I taught him. Now I'm trying to get him to learn to use a dictionary. If this kid ever does learn to read at all well, he'll be the brilliant one of the bunch—because with Moon in Scorpio, he's one big question mark. He started out being "Why not?" and getting into mischief, but now it's just plain "Why?" which is a lot more sensible. He wants to know what makes himself and the universe tick, but as yet not desperately enough to make himself read. (I tried to get him to go back to school, but his pride wouldn't allow him to sit with much-younger children, and at Night School he was ashamed to be the only kid among illiterate adults.)

In his love-life, he's also catnip to women—of all ages, and married ones too. He's forever nursing a Grand Passion for some new babe, but once she capitulates, he decides she must be "bad". (In his latest fling, the woman indeed was "bad" —married and with two small children, though only 19—and she gave him a venereal disease. If this shocks you by its "sordidness", I'm sorry, but no evil condition ever was cured by pretending it wasn't there—Christian Science to the contrary; in fact I'd just love to see how Christian Scientists would handle this situation! When I think of two little innocent babies exposed to venereal disease by an unfaithful wife, my blood not only boils, it sizzles!)

He's tried to enlist in the Army, but he can't read the questionnaires he's supposed to fill out. Oh, if only somehow, somebody could teach him to read!

So there they are, the "astrologic quadruplets"—so very alike to be so very different, and vice versa. It's scarcely the fault of their all having Sun in Virgo. Textbooks tell us that all "Virgo" types are: practical, industrious, efficient and cautious, though of course an "afflicted Sun in Virgo", which these lads all have, would point to the reverse.

Nope, I think that their Moon-positions make all the difference, because their moons tell us what these kids know themselves to be, which in turn governs their actions. Some advanced astrologers might say that I'm not considering the "influence of their Rising Signs"—and I'm not; in this instance it's not necessary, and I want to keep this simple.

I've often yearned to start an "Astrologic Twin Correspondence Club", because if somehow people born on same year-month-and-day could compare notes about themselves, and it could be used in astrologic research, it might lead to evidence which would force "science" to sit up and take notice.

Thus I kind-of-sort-of-rather wish that in this magazine's "Personals" columns, one could see a squib like this: "Lady born March 3rd, 1920 at 3:17 PM in Nagasaki would like to correspond with astrologic twin".

Could be that every one of you has something which can help or hinder the cause of astrology, even if you know nothing of its mechanics. But then I suppose there'd always be the joker who'd pretend to be born when he wasn't, merely to throw a monkey-wrench into the research, ha ha, big joke, you know, very funny.

In closing I hope I haven't scandalized you with my description of these four rascals. I figure that if Christ consorted with tavernkeepers and sinners, I shouldn't be above it myself. And the funny part of it is that each of these fellows in his own way is pretty lovable.

Astrology is a great leveler, because once you get into it, you see that we all have the same basic character-factors, but that they're scrambled into different patterns, which makes us all individuals. The same building-bricks, but arranged into different structures. Kind of creepy, because you realize that a push here and a nudge there and you could become almost any one of your fellow-men: "There but for the grace of God go I". Yes, indeedy.

And when you begin to see that All is Pattern—it's then, man, that you really go into orbit!

Which is where I'm going now, until next article. 'Bye!

THE END

IT HAPPENED TO ME--

From time to time SEARCH magazine passes on accounts of true experiences from our readers. The following stories are given to us as actual happenings, and the editors are pleased to present them at face value. "It Happened to Me . . ." is just one phase of SEARCH'S presentation of evidence upon which its readers can draw their own conclusions. Names and addresses are printed, or are on file at the office of SEARCH in the case of those to whom identification might prove to be a source of embarrassment or inconvenience. SEARCH does not pay for these contributions, but presents them as a service to those readers who request actual happenings going on today, and in the lives of living people.

ASTRAL JOURNEY

On January 31, 1960, I had a strange experience. A few days previously I had received a letter from Mrs. E. Dyczewski, Eastlake, Ohio, requesting me to find, through psychic power, a Robert Owens in New York. While I have never tried to find objects or persons before, I decided to try.

Sitting before an open fireplace, alone, I composed myself, freed myself from all tension. I fixed my eyes on the flames until I could no longer keep them open. I felt a sinking sensation. I seemed to have slid out of my body, for I seemed to feel my knees double up under my chin. I felt as though I were riding a slide backward. Then I had an ascending feeling, shaking or shuddering off all bodily limitations.

But while I was in the same room, I saw that the furniture was different. The fireplace was still burning, but instead of the leather upholstered chair in which I had been sitting there was a wooden bench. The large chandelier had candles instead of light bulbs.

Now people began coming into the room, passing by as though I were not there. I could feel a chillness as they passed. Even small children raced about from room to room with no notice of me.

I remembered what I had intended to do, but now I couldn't remember the name. I knew I was trying to help find someone, but I couldn't even remember if it was a man or a woman. I had to get to New York. How would I do that?

A blackness came over me. I was falling into a large hole. I thought I would never reach the bottom. When I stopped, I wasn't standing on anything. I reached down to my foot and there was nothing underneath. I couldn't understand what was holding me up. I began to grow frightened, for all around me was blackness. I shouted as loud as I could, but there was no echo.

I ran to my left, then back. There had to be walls somewhere, I reasoned, for I felt as though I was in an enclosed space. Yet, I found no walls. I walked in one direction for an hour, but got nowhere. I fought off the panic, stood still, tried to think my problem out. I looked hard through the blackness, and saw a pinpoint of light as though miles away. I fixed my eyes upon it and started toward it. Then, as I saw the light was coming toward me, I stopped and waited for it. As it came close, I saw it was an opening. I walked through into the light on the other side. I was in a world of pink and white. Beautiful organ music was being played. Somewhere someone was plucking the strings of a guitar . . . or a harp.

Then I heard a familiar call: "Hey, Big Feet!"

In my youth I had been tall — over six feet, wearing a size twelve shoe. My highschool classmates called me Big Feet.

I looked around and saw a "The Jeep," whose name was Eugene S. Down, who had boarded with my mother in 1937. We had gone to school together. I looked at him. "You are supposed to be dead!" He had died in 1940 at Philadelphia General Hospital of consumption.

He smiled. "Yes, I died . . . freed myself from the world of sorrows."

I said: "You never talked like this before, Jeep. You sound like you've got yourself an education."

He nodded and smiled.

"Have you seen my Dad?" I asked. Dad had died in 1938.

"Yes, once long ago. He is waiting for your mother."

"What about me?" I asked. "Am I dead?"

"No, but you are as close as you'll be for years to come."

I felt a sense of relief. Interested in my surroundings, I began to look around. I saw buildings, like in Athens, Greece. I saw one building that looked like the Pantheon in Rome. I asked Jeep if we were in Italy.

"Far from it!"

Now another figure was coming toward me, and I recognized my Dad. He looked the same as the day he died, but had lost some of his girth. I started toward him, but he drifted back. I recognized his voice: "Don't come near me, Son."

As I looked at my Dad, there was a bluish flash, and he was gone. I turned to Jeep and he explained that Dad had to return.

In the distance I saw a mass of dark figures hurrying toward us. Jeep said: "Come on, let's get out of here quick!" I could hear the voices of the dark figures shouting — "don't go, stay here, please don't go." I seemed surrounded by dark figures. There was a loud noise, like thunder, and Dad was at my side. Another man, my grandfather, D. O. Hanes, was with him. He said: "Son, you are going back!" There was another loud crash, bright lights . . it seemed thousands of fireworks were going off. I felt drawn into a whirlpool, spinning me around and down. Voices were all around me, shouting, crying, screaming. Another explosion, blinding light. And I was standing back before the fireplace, beside the leather chair. I was drenched with perspiration, and felt extremely nauseated.

One day I intend to try again. This time I would like to set up a movie camera, with a timer, and photograph my body while I travel. I wonder if I could photograph my astral body, if the proper type filter were used on the lens? Or by use of infra red film?

But careful preparation will be necessary — this sort of thing is much too close to death to risk it often.

The Curse of Tippecanoe

By L. Taylor Hansen

"Tippecanoe! And Tyler too!"
The voters screeched that night,
Burning their torches; a wild-eyed crew
Laughing and yelling till dawnlight threw
Away her dark blanket for a gown of blue;
For their idol was here, and now they knew:
As a leader this man was right.

From the town the trumpet shrieked like a shrew
While answering horns dismayed
With a drum-like chant of "Tippecanoe."
A battle to remember! And who Won it? Yea! Yell for Tyler too;
Yell until your tongues are blue,
In his torchlight parade!"

Yet among the lodges that summer night
The Indian fires burned low.
A sachem sat in the pulsing llight
Turning that slogan's laughing bite
Inward to weave a spell of blight:
A curse which would not soon take flight with time's strange ebb and flow.

Tippecanoe! That very name
Was poison to his soul.
Here his people had found their shame,
His boys had died in battle's flame.
And now his heart throbs slowly came with bitterness naught could tame
Save the death-drums' steady roll.

" 'Tippecanoe and Tyler too!'
They scream as if throats were torn.
So they want to remember Tippecanoe?
I will mix for them an ancient brew
Which recurs to a nation shocked anew;
A spectre parade of a darker hue
To grandsons yet unborn!"

The bitterness of an old man's soul
Was mixed with the winner's jeer,
And the words were stirred in a bottomless hole
Where time was not. Turned into a scroll
Was an ancient curse like a devil's roll.
Then he called in tones of the death-bell's toll,
And a boy crept to him in fear.

"To the white man's town I bid you go.
Find Tyler and stop that parade!
Speak in a voice both clear and low
Of things which none of these men can know.
Tell Tyler of the honors which to him will flow;
And after that will descend the blow
Which scatters all he has made.

"Turn then and speak to the marchers too,
Who scream in this torchlight parade
Tell them their grandsons will remember anew
This fatal slogan of Tippecanoe:
When a spectre comes, the long years through,
To lead a parade of a darker hue
For their leader every second decade."

Tyler's laugh was an ocean wave which splashed in scornful disdain.
"If a spectre comes I'll make him behave.
I'll use death's sickle my hair to wave,
And then I'll give the fellow a shave!"
But when they followed his hearse to the grave,
Men remembered his campaign.

They remembered those words: "This shall not fade
when death has taken you.
For the spectre returns every second decade
To lead once more a dark parade
From your House-Of-Snow to Dead-Man's-Glade,
Leaving again a nation dismayed
And remembering: Tippecanoe."

Forgotten these words until Lincoln's form
Was struck by the assassin's gun.
But then came Garfield! Still another storm
Took jolly McKinley, kindly and warm.
Long dead now those makers of harm;
Passed to shadows the sachem's form
But the spectre: had it only begun?

Wilson escaped, but his features grew pale
As the spectre's shadow grew.
Then it fell upon Harding, handsome and hale
Now many began to remember the tale!
Would IT keep returning or would IT fail;
This curse of Tippecanoe?

They warned FDR of the second decade.
His features grew pale, but in vain.
He laughed: "Indeed? Should I be afraid
Of an old wives' tale? A death-parade?
A spectre which leaves a nation dismayed?
I shall run again in spite of this shade,
And IT never will come again!"

Once more a President's face has grown pale
As nears the second decade.
Is it indeed an old wives' tale?
Perhaps these men were too old and frail,
But now our man is young and hale,
Laughing at Spectres as he enters the vale,
Youthful and unafraid.

Yet remembering Lincoln's sad-eyed shade
In a convention's smoke filled blue.
One cannot but wonder if a dark parade
And a death-bell toll will come or fade
Leaving once more a nation dismayed
As we enter again that second-decade
Of the Curse of Tippecanoe.

LETTERS

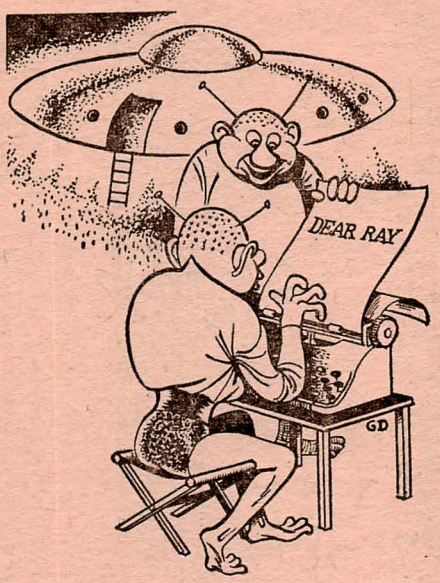

I am writing in regard to the article on 'Voices in the Mind' by Jim Wentworth, which appeared in December, Search. You have asked for comment on the article or data on cases concerning the Voices. Primarily that was the most thought provoking thing I have ever read. It has lain so on my mind, that I feel compelled to write to you.

No, I have never heard 'Voices', read only such a little of Shaver as you printed in Search (it terrified me and my daughters). I did not dispute Shaver, as we are not all the same, and not one of us is so well informed as to know what is in the great unknown, and beyond our small sphere. However Wentworth's article was so clearly spelled out, and suddenly it dawned on me that I knew of people who claimed to be tormented by wicked beings. As I read Jim's account it hit me that he was giving details of 'Voice hearing' that actually backed up the stories of my unfortunate friends. Then only I realized these 'tormented' were not nuts, queer, victims of hardening of arteries, victims of a bump on the head that set them off. No they were not crazy, they must have heard something, and to whom could these poor tortured souls turn, to whom could they tell those strange stories, without danger of being put in an asylum and rotting away.

For myself, I have dabbled in spiritualism, etc. but not so far as to lose myself, or leave myself wide open for some malicious entity to take me over. I believe in, if you think of it that way, a white magic, and a black magic, and I prefer to stick with the winning side. I try to keep myself strong within, and to try to cast out any evil. (No, I am not a religious nut either.)

But if it interests you, let me tell you the story of poor Julia. This was some twenty-five years ago, and I was young and not too interested in the occult etc. perhaps my interest only went as far as myself, and then too, I never had heard of Shaver.

At that time, as I write of, I lived with my in-laws and Julia was a friend of their family, she was just as normal as you or I. She was an extremely good looking girl, a fine housewife, good mother to her small daughter, and a good wife to her husband (who in turn understood nothing but normal behavior).

Julia had an unfortunate accident, fell over a second story railing, lying for many hours un-noticed. She was found, when taken to the hospital, to have a ruptured spleen and liver. There was a long operation, wherein the ruptured organs were patched with pieces from the diaphragm. Her broken arms were set, and in this condition she lingered, close to death, for weeks on end.

I moved away from my in-laws and had no meeting with Julia for perhaps more than a year. However when I did return to my in-laws home, I naturally inquired of different folks, and when I mentioned Julia's name, my Mother-in-law said, "Oh honey, I'm afraid she is quite crazy. I do believe her accident has unhinged her mind, she talks so queer at times although she seems very normal in most things." She went on to diagnose Julia's case as follows, "I do believe she must have struck her head when she fell so badly, although X-ray showed no fractures, and I also think she must have wakened up on the operating table, seen the Doctors around her, and received a terrible shock. Now she imagines some fantastic story about a Doctor following her about, and Julia's own people have begged her husband to have her put away, but he is still stubborn and refuses." Then my Mother-in-law added, "She gives me the willies when she talks that way, and if she starts that kind of talk with you, just ignore her, she is crazy and will only upset you."

It did not disturb me too much when Julia did stop to visit and made a couple of brief allusions to being followed. (She was a pretty girl.) However when her husband came to pick her up, he asked rudely, "Have you been saving things I told you not to talk about?" The way Julia turned white, the panic stricken look on her face, the way she wrung her fingers, and her voice trembling as she said, "No, no, nothing," all gave her away.

My Mother-in-law added the fuel by telling the husband, "she did say a few odd things." At this, the husband rushed toward Julia, his face working in rage, and his hands opening and closing, he roared at her, "I've told you time and again, don't let me hear you tell your silly stories; when we get home I'll slap your face black and blue until you can't talk. I don't want to hear anymore of this." Then by way of explanation he said to us, "Every time she tells me her nutty stories I slap her mouth, I don't want her to talk about that stuff, and if it is necessary I will beat this idea out of her head until she forgets it."

Mother-in-law was quite smug, and declared, "Well that is the only way, knock it out of her."

Some months later Julia came to visit and I was alone at the time. Now, I am a very sympathetic person, I listen everyone out, and I neither try to exalt nor condemn. I keep a confidence and my friends know this. Julia was very rational (as she always was) finally she made a few false starts and then she said, "You know a Doctor follows me, but I can tell no one, no one believes me, my friends think I am crazy. I would like to tell you about it, you will listen I know, and it is real and true to me."

"What is this Doctor's name Julia, who is he?" I asked.

Her hands began to knit and her face and eyes looked so tortured, every once in awhile she looked up at me, as much as to ask if I believed her. As she searched my face, she would give a short nervous laugh and say, "But I am not afraid of him, I'll beat him yet. You don't think I am crazy, do you? I must tell someone about it, it's so hard to be alone with this, no one believing me, and it's so real."

To my question she answered, "I don't know who he is. I have never seen him or his face. I only hear his voice talking, talking, telling me things I must do, things I must not do, telling me what I am even thinking, telling me I must destroy someone, telling me to kill myself, telling me people are laughing at me, plotting against me. Sometimes at night I go to bed early, to get away from him, I lock my bedroom and sometimes lay awake all night long, frozen, just listening to the ugly things he says to me, about me. And oh sometimes he says such filthy, dirty things, that I cannot repeat them. I have never heard such dirty words, nor even thought of the obscene things he describes. I have asked him who he is and he says only that he is the Doctor, that he was in the operating room with me and he was the only one who had his face completely covered so I could not see him." But Julia went on, "I know all of the Doctors who were with me," she ticked their names off on her fingers. "but he was not among them. I knew each one. I have no other name for him except the Doctor." She continued, "Sometimes he is quiet for days and I feel so free, I am rid of him. Then he starts all over again. He threatens, I will get you yet! At times I drop everything, tell no one where I am going, I go to town. I think he will not find me, and suddenly I hear him laughing at me, saying I found you Julia you can't run away, I know what you are doing and what you are thinking every minute of the day."

Julia kept looking at the doorway as she spoke, "See even now he has found me, I can hear him breathe. He is listening to everything I am saying to you, sneering at me. He's quiet now, but he is just waiting, listening." With this she tiptoed to the doorway and looked down the flight of steps to the first floor. She looked wracked when she turned around, she said, "All I ever see of him once in awhile are what I imagine are his eyes, and all I can say is they glow like two little orange red balls of fire. Let him listen, I am going to tell you anyway."

She continued her story, "Once in awhile I hear him and he talks with other people, he says filthy things, things about me too, and they all talk and laugh, only when he laughs it makes my blood run cold. Only last night I heard him talking to some other men, the voices came from outside so he must have been on the street. He was telling these other men he was going to get me that night and what he was going to do to me. He said 'Let her lock her doors, I can get in any time I want to. I can put my finger up to the keyhole, turn my finger into a snake, and turn the key in the lock; I can get through the keyhole like a snake, or even under the door, and she is afraid of snakes too. I'll get her tonight.'

Then Julia said, "It sounds foolish doesn't it? But sometimes he says such foolish things that I must laugh at them. Imagine such a ridiculous thing as saying he would turn his finger into a snake. But you know I am deathly afraid of snakes. How does he know all of these things about me? At times" she said, when I am crossing the street he calls out don't walk Julia, at other times his voice says go ahead walk Julia there is nothing there." And she said to me, "But it is not true, if I would walk when he told me to, I would be killed in the heavy traffic. There are times when the Doctor says to me 'don't eat that, they are trying to poison you.' But why would my friends do that to me, and I just eat the food they offer me anyway, and oh the Doctor just gets furious, you ought to hear the way he curses me out."

Soon we heard Julia's husband coming for her, and she cautioned me not to give her away, and ended with "oh if only someone understood me, no one knows how hard it is to fight this alone."

Later on Julia's husband took two rooms close to the downtown district feeling that she may have had too much work in a large house, and that she could always entertain herself by going through the shops, or attending the numerous movie houses about. He refused to bring her visiting saying he wanted no one to laugh at her. Three or four years later I met Julia at a gathering; she seemed subdued, and her spirit broken; she was very glad to see me and said how she would like to talk with me, a long talk. Her looks were imploring, but she noticed I was an almost helpless arthritic and she said she supposed I'd never see her again. A couple of years later I heard of her death, which to me sounded suspicious (someone else's description).

After I read Wentworth's article, it struck me 'weren't these the things Julia said, weren't these the incidents, threats, obscenities that she spoke of'. Her stories all tied in with the 'Voices' articles. After all how many people can go crazy the same way and all hear just about the same things?

Some years after this episode I married again. My husband drank quite heavy at times, was or became paranoid, and later on became what I guess is called schizophrenia, hearing voices. My husband was a secretive person, and could not open up and pour out his feelings or fears. He had a streak of meanness in him and became slightly sadistic, and perhaps through his weaknesses and drink he let himself open for a certain evilness. He seemed in a vicious circle of not being able to sleep well, he would jump out of bed panting for breath, he would be agitated, walk back and forth and sit up for hours. When I asked what was wrong he would say 'nothing, nothing, I only had a bad dream', at times he asked 'did you wake me up talking to me?' When I assured him, he had wakened me he would say forget it, just a bad dream. He would drown himself in drink for days, then he would stay sober. At both times, drunk or sober, he would say I see what I must do, I must kill you and put the children in a home so that I am free. I can't be free until you are dead." Then he would describe ways to kill me, he would say "I was told to do it, but it must be planned so that it will look as though you were killed by accident, you fell and hit your head, because if I kill you the police will let me go, they won't blame me, they'll say it was an accident." He would say things like "on the radio last night the whole thing was laid out for me." (For a time we didn't even have a radio.)

One time he explained how the car door was sprung, and as he went around a certain curve he was to jerk the car, and elbow me so that I fell out of the car and was run over. He said "I must kill you tomorrow. The next day we had to make a trip over this curve he spoke of; I sat stone cold waiting for him to move to push me. He drove very slowly around the curve, when we got past, he closed his hand over mine, "You thought I was going to push you out and kill you, didn't you?" he asked. "I can't though, I can't, I know I'll have to do it someday, but I love you too much. I couldn't kill you." How many times I heard him say those words.

My husband would sit down to eat dinner, suddenly he would jump up and bring a fresh loaf of bread. He would eat nothing but the bread, and then he would smile slyly at me saying, "Fooled you didn't I. Thought you were going to try today. Well someone put me wise to your scheme." He would tell me he knew what I was doing all day long, someone told him. He would mouth filth and obscenities by the hour, then say, "I have someone who watches all day, and tells me what you are doing, and that you are trying to kill me." I slept in a downstairs bedroom, he slept upstairs with the children. He would lie on his bed fully dressed, and he would ask the children if they could hear the voices too? Could they hear me downstairs, talking to men, laughing, jeering at him, saying bad things about threatening to kill him.

He would jump off the bed, rush downstairs like mad, shouting at me, "Where are the men you were talking to, where did they go? Who was the man I saw just going out of the door, I saw his leg." Then he would run into the basement, open the windows and look out. When he came up he was breathless, sometimes he would begin to weep. "My own wife, and so faithless. Who can I trust if I can't trust you? I saw those men running up the road." He would say strange people stopped him on the road, got into his car and told him horrible tales about me. (The tales were some of the rankest, most foul things I myself have ever heard.) At times he would look up on the wall at the height of about 6½ or 7 feet, and he would actually carry on a conversation with someone. He would discuss me, and sometimes he would turn suddenly and ask if I had spoken to him. I would assure him I had not, and he would ask of me, "Did you hear anyone speaking just now?" I would assure my husband I had heard no one speak, then he would ask of me, if he had been speaking out loud. Of course I always denied this and he would go on speaking to someone, and most of the things I knew definitely were not meant for me to hear. I have seen him sober, and holding a conservation with what must have been a lot of people, he would listen to what were evidently jokes, laugh and comment on them, he accepted introductions, passed a pack of cigarettes around, lit matches and held them to non-visible cigarettes, even going through the motions of tying a man's shoe, for him. This was so uncanny, because he used all the expressions of face and eyes, that a person would use while serving or talking to humans.

Finally becoming afraid for our lives, I divorced this man. I did not bring up this part in court. (He even had the bit about governments plotting against our government; and our government plotting horrible things against our own country. Two or three times he forgot and became too chummy, or mouthy in revealing this supposed information on subversive plots; he was reported to and interrogated by the F.B.I. They wanted to know where he got his information, and suspected him of being a Bundist.) Now this was no dumb man, he traveled a lot, was an interesting and witty speaker, a good workman. He was in the tool and die trade where the mind must be alert, calculations must be accurate, and he did not act this way among his friends.

I could write on for hours in this vein, but I am very tired and I only hope this interests you in your search. But Wentworth's story pointed this up so well; are these people damned, hounded, tortured, or do they all go crazy in the same way. Hearing, fearing and saying almost the identical stories. It is not possible they could all make up the same tales.

I only thank God I am humble old me, not beset by some terror I hope I never experience.

Dear Ray:

I am doing a little research of my own and wondered if a reader of "Search" could give me information about:

"During the 2nd World War, as each new plane was being made to reach new altitudes, an aviator sent back a message he was landing, as his plane ran through what he thought was a cloud and instead it was full of black-spiders. I remember seeing spiders all over the plane, inside and out, over the aviator also. I'd like to know if any one remembers which magazines the photos were in Then . . .

1st—Harold T. Wilkins mentioned in his book "Secret Cities of Old South America" that a well known scientist had told him spiders did not originate on this earth.

2nd—Churchward mentioned in "Sacred Symbols of Mu" the fact spiders were feared and respected by the ancient Egyptians - feared, because of its sting of death; respected because, because they could spin an invisible ladder and go up into the sky and travel indefinitely.

3rd—In this hemisphere, Near East India and Egypt the spider symbol is found with a devil-face or head to show they had more intelligence than man, they could go up into the sky and stay - man could not.

4th Then I have read the spider-symbol is associated with "Mars".

5th During the 1st World War one morning when we were out-side - spiders were all over the place, trees, bushes, windows you couldn't walk without stepping on them. The papers said they crawled here from the South. If they had crawled other States would have seen them. These dropped in the night. Outside our kitchen window a little bluebird had its nest. The bird flew to investigate this new insect and immediately the spider wove quicky its web around the little bluebirds beak and the birds wings were fluttering to get away from the spider and couldn't, so I ran out to kill it. Then I thought of the many birds they did kill. The spiders only survived two winters

6th On a small oriental rug I have from Armenia (Turkey today) the center has a spider on its back the solar-symbol and around this 7 satellites - Why? Did these rug-makers possess the knowledge that as the ancient Egyptians knew spiders came from other planets?

7th You read of fall-out of dead birds and birds lost migrating South - who knows maybe they are caught in the clouds the spiders weave and travel in.

8th Last of all, and this I saw, one evening this summer. We had so few sunsets and this evening every indication showed it would be a splendid one and it was! I stayed in. Across from our home is the new blue fluorescent street lights which you can look at and it does not effect the eyes. Near dusk the bats came swooping down now and then for a moth or insect.

Suddenly they scattered in opposite directions. I wondered why! It wasn't long before I found out for down from the sky dropped 3 round objects and started to swing back and forth like a pendulum; only they increased the speed and came back with lightning-like speed. There was intelligence in their formation as two remained opposite each other; the 3rd higher up, but in the center. What the lower objects missed the center one caught. When they reached to catch the insects and moths, I saw they were huge spiders. They were not hanging from the wires as the light was on the opposite side and no tree limbs for the spiders to hang from. It wasn't long before the insects were all gone then these spiders shot up into the air - just the way they dropped down.

Dear Ray:

I liked your editorial very much. It so happens that I have a message which is enclosed herewith. There is also something else which you may not wish to publish for it might nullify a full page ad for which you receive good money. Or are you above being influenced by such petty details? The ad appears on page 51 of the December issue of Search and it contains several logical fallacies, all of one type. Morris Katzen attempts to make use of the syllogism as follows: (A) Jesus is the Christ (Matt. 1:16) (B) The seed is Jesus (Galatians 3:16) (C) Therefore, Jesus is the seed. The "slippery" part of his reasoning is the fact that he is using the word "seed" in two entirely different ways as he concludes, "That should prove that the human seed is the Messiah-Christ of the Bible."

Since he appeals to the Bible as his authority he should be willing to let the Bible decide whether or not he is correct. Therefore, we will examine the Bible to learn whether "seed" as used in the Bible refers to what he chooses to call "human seed."

The Bible uses the word "seed" in the sense of offspring. We read of Eve that "she bare a son, and called his name Seth for, said she, 'God has appointed me another seed instead of Abel; for Cain slew him.'" (Genesis 4:25.) The same word occurs twice in Genesis 3:15 which reads "I will put enmity between you and the woman, and between your seed and her seed; HE shall bruise your head, and you shall bruise his heel." It is hard to see how "human seed" could have a "heel."

It must be obvious to anyone who can reason correctly that the promises were made to Abraham and to his offspring after him and Morris Katzen's "human seed" in the sense he uses this expression, though necessary in producing offspring, is not even alluded to in this connection. (Genesis 15:2-7, 13-16, 18; 16:10-12; 17:7-21; 21:2-4; 22:15-18; 24:60; 26:2-5, 28:10-15.)

Concerning Abraham's seed, THE CHRIST, Paul had much to say, including this statement: Now YE are the Body of Christ, and severally members thereof. And God has set some IN THE CHURCH, first apostles, secondly prophets, thirdly teachers, then miracles, etc., etc., etc." (I Cor. 12:27,28.)

Let us re-examine Paul's statement at Galations 3:16 which was cited by Morris Katzen to "prove(?)" that Christ is "human seed." This is correctly translated in the Revised Standard Version as follows: "Now the promises were made to Abraham and to his offspring. It does not say, "And to his offsprings," referring to many; but, referring to one, "And to your offspring," which is Christ." (Galatians 3:16.)

It is my confirmed opinion that, before teaching others, one should first teach himself. As for the rest of his "Biblical(?) Mathematics(?)" it likewise is neither Biblical nor Logical.

Dear Ray:

Quite obviously, I am interested in the sort of material you publish, or I would not be a subscriber to Search Mag. But you really hit the jack pot in the December article, "Voices in Your Mind". Not the Shaver Mystery, which I have written about to you previously; but the story of William and the strange events on the assembly line.

Now I am a musician and a teacher of music and some of those effects are familiar to me as the result of musical sound, though the ultra effects of force fields is greater as described by "William" than I ever felt it myself. However, I became quite sensitive to the thoughts of others, and could write a book (or books) about the strange events which I have lived through. But there is only one of them which is pertinent to this article, and that one I wish to tell you.

In connection with the experiences of thought transference which I experienced, I discovered that I could "project" my consciousness long distances, in fact, this happened without my volition repeatedly, and then by experiment, I realized that it could be done deliberately. So I decided once upon a time to try the experiment in connection with the Flying Saucer Mystery. I thought out carefully how I would conduct this experiment, and decided to fix my mind on one specific event which had been written up recently in Fate Magazine. (This is, recently to that date which was a few years ago.)

You will no doubt remember this story: It concerned an auto driver in Texas who was followed by a strange flying object. I believe it stopped his car, and he got out of the car to investigate. I do not now remember all the details of the story. But I decided to concentrate my mind as closely as possible on this location, the event as clearly visualized in my mind as I could make it from the story as printed; then I commanded my mind to follow this flying object to where-ever it went and come back and tell me what it saw there.

I let myself doze off into a dream state, or reverie. In due time, who knows how long, I came to myself almost paralyzed with terror. I had been in some underground workshops where those flying objects were being built by slave labor. This slave labor was people who had been abducted from their homes, to disappear into the unknown, never to be heard from again in this world. But down there in the underground caves, they knew they would never be released to their homes again because they would reveal to an amazed world what their masters wanted kept secret. But this location was Hungary, and the slave drivers the Russians.

Now there may be some deeper caves as talked about by Shaver and the like, but to my mind the activities of monsters right here on the surface are of vastly more importance to us than the deeper unknown. And how do we know that the telepathic messages these writers talk about may not be coming from underground factories which the Communists are running. The day may come when we will wish we had gone to the rescue of the Hungarians when they tried so valiantly to overthrow the yoke of the Red Monsters. (Name Withheld)

Red-Hot Chain Falls From Sky Onto Bulldozer

A 78-inch length of chain fell out of the sky and struck a bulldozer on May 15, 1959, in the Crestvale subdivision under construction on Crestvale avenue, Rock Hill.

The chain consisting of 13 links, dropped on the hood of a bulldozer being driven by Wallace Baker. It was red hot, and he burned his gloves in removing it.

Baker and other men working at the scene saw one plane high in the air at the time, but did not see the chain falling.

Chief of Police Marshall Whitecotton said he had determined that McDonnell Aircraft Co. had no planes over that area. He was continuing an investigation.

Mystery Object Sighted In Sky Over Montreal

A mysterious object was sighted April 12, 1959 over the Royal Canadian Air Force base at St. Hubert. Reports said it also hovered for several minutes over a playing field in Montreal's north end.

Claude Mercier said he and about 10 of his neighbors saw the object.

"It looked like a big round balloon about 10 ft. in diameter, with a yellow light inside," said Mercier. "Fiery sparks came from the under side of the object as it hovered over the field.

He said the sighting was made about 8 p.m., approximately the same time people in suburbs on the south shore opposite Montreal were reporting a mysterious red light over the RCAF base.

RUSSIA'S CONQUEST of the MIND

By

Alfred W. Pritchard

Did you know that there are thousands upon thousands of highly trained Russian Psychopoliticians in these United States? Did you know that it is one of their jobs to so influence our politicians that legislation will be passed which will eventually give the Communists authority over us? Did you know that these beasts in professional cloak are highly trained in the ways and means of instilling insanity in the masses of people? Did you know that they are highly skilled in the art of MURDER?

If you want to read a book that will make your blood boil, read "BRAINWASHING." This is a synthesis of the Russian Textbook on Psychopolitics. In this book is described the principles, the ways and means by which the Russians intend to conquer the United States. And if you think for a minute, that they are not fulfilling their plan, it's time to think again. As you read the book, you can see all about you the fulfillment of the plans set forth years ago by the Russian Psychopoliticians. Their conquest of the minds of our people started about the turn of the century. These professional murderers are almost everywhere in the United States. If they are not holding office of authority, they are right over the shoulder of those that are in authority, and by use of their sly techniques, accomplish their evil ends. These ends I might add, eventually add up to a loss of YOUR rights, YOUR freedom, YOUR health, and perhaps YOUR very life.

Did you know that under the provisions contained in "Mental Health" legislation, you can be "put away" and your funds confiscated without trial by jury or court hearings? Did you know that this accomplishment on the part of communist psychopoliticians is only a small part, a drop in the bucket, of the things they are doing, and have done, to place the chains of slavery around YOUR neck and the necks of your loved ones, If you didn't know these things, YOU better pay close attention to what I am going to say. You have a lot of things to learn, to protect yourself, your loved ones, and your country.

Herein I will quote from the book "BRAINWASHING" as I did in my previous article, "PSYCHOPOLITICIANS - THE MONSTERS AMONGST US."

All Washington officials are not Psychopoliticians, neither are they under the influence of Psychopoliticians. Congressman Edgar Hiestand is a good example. He introduced a bill which would keep sane people from being railroaded into insane asylums upon the accusation of a neighbor, relative, friend stranger, or Psychopolitician. I shall quote it in its entirety for you.

H. CON. RES. 145 - CONCURRENT RESOLUTION

"Whereas among the thousands of persons committed to mental institutions there are many who are needlessly committed: and

"Whereas among the thousands of persons confined in mental institutions there are many who are needlessly confined; and

"Whereas this situation constitutes an unwarranted deprivation of constitutional and individual rights for these persons; and

"Whereas a continued legalization of unfair commitment proceedures and confinement practices is not in the interest of the individual, the state, or the nation; and

"Whereas we must halt enroachments on our constitutional freedoms; and

"Whereas serious and patriotically motivated questions have been posed as to the ideological beliefs and intents held and fostered by some among those active in the field of psychiatry;

"Therefore be it RESOLVED in the House of Representatives (the Senate Concurring) that an investigation into mental health programs now being promoted be conducted by the Congress of the United States." (Referred to the Rules Committee.)

This resolution was not adopted by the Rules Committee. However, just because this Resolution was not adopted by the Rules Committee, did Mr. Hiestand give up and consider his efforts a failure? Not on your life! He came right back with - "H. RES. 548," which I will also quote here in its entirety for your study. You have a right to be informed, and after being informed, Mr. Hiestand has a right to expect your support. He is working for you — to regain and maintain — YOUR Constitutiononal FREEDOMS.

H. RES. 548 — RESOLUTION

Creating a select Committee to conduct an investigation and study of the commitment of persons to mental institutions.

By Mr. Hiestand

June 7, 1960

Referred to the Committee of Rules.

RESOLUTION

RESOLVED, That there is hereby created a select committee to be composed of seven Members of the House of Representatives to be appointed by the Speaker, one of whom he shall designate as chairman. Any vacancy occuring in the membership of the committee shall be filled in the same manner in which the original appointment was made.

The committee is authorized and directed to conduct a full and complete investigation and study of the extent to which persons in the United States are being needlessly or unfairly committed to or confined in mental institutions, and the extent to which such commitment or confinement deprives, or enroaches upon, the individual or constitutional rights of such persons. The committee shall formulate a model proceedure for the commitment of persons to mental institutions for purpose of affording to the States a model of such a proceedure which provides adequate protection both to the individual concerned and to society.

For the purpose of carrying out this resolution the committee, or any subcommittee thereof authorized by the committee to hold hearings, is authorized to sit and act during the present Congress at such times and places within the United States, including any Commonwealth or possession thereof, whether the House is in session, has recessed, or has adjourned, to hold such hearings, and to require, by subpena or otherwise, the attendance and testimony of such witnesses and the production of such books, records, correspondence, memoranda, papers and documents, as it deems necessary; except that neither the committee nor any subcommittee thereof may sit while the House is meeting unless special leave to sit shall have been obtained from the House. Subpenas may be issued under the signature of the chairman of the committee or any member of the committee designated by him, and may be served by any person designated by such chairman or member.

The committee shall report to the House as soon as practicable during the present Congress the results of its investigation and study, together with such recommendations as it deems advisable. Any such report which is made when the House is not in session shall be filed with the Clerk of the House." End of Quote.

Congressman Hiestand stated a series of facts that are worthy of your sincere consideration, and these facts concern you and your family, their health and their FREEDOM.

Psychopoliticians are Communist Agents, highly skilled in the art and science of Psychopolitics. The word Psychopolitics is defined as :"The art and science of asserting and maintaining dominion over thoughts and loyalties of individuals, officers, bureaus, and masses, and the effecting of the conquest of enemy nations through "mental healing."

The real war Russia has declared upon us will never be fought with guns, rockets, missiles, or material warfare. The real war has been going on for many years, and while the people and our public officials slept, Psychopoliticians have exerted their influence in almost every important office in the country. Those who have risen up and tried to tell the people the truth have been ridiculed as "radicals," as "trouble makers," and "crackpots." I don't care what "title" they attach to me, I shall continue to fight this battle so long as I am able. Whether or not it is too late to make the necessary corrections, is to be seen. Perhaps the tide can be turned. But, it can only be turned by each and every one doing his part. R. A. P. is doing his; Russell Maguire of the American Mercury Magazine is doing his — each in his own way — are you going to do yours?

Do you think these Psychopoliticians are playing? Here is a quote from their textbook. "Psychopolitics should avoid murder and violence, UNLESS it is done in the safety of the institution, on persons who have proven to be insane." Nice parlor talk! While reading this, did you remember that anyone, under the provisions contained in the "mental health" bills can be taken into custody and declared to be insane without the right of a trial or court hearing?

Yes, for any emergency reason that an insane Psychopolitician or his dupe might want to name, and without right of trial, you or your loved ones can be taken into custody, declared insane, and murdered in the safety of an institution.

Let us endeavor to gain a true viewpoint of what Communism really is. These are their own words, taken from their textbook. "Communism has already spread across one-sixth of the inhabited world. Marxist doctrines have already penetrated the remainder. An extension of the communist social order is everywhere victorious. The SPREAD OF COMMUNISM HAS NEVER BEEN BY FORCE OF BATTLE, BUT BY

CONQUEST OF THE MIND. IN PSYCHOPOLITICS WE HAVE REFINED THIS CONQUEST TO ITS LAST DEGREE."

Never let anyone fool you into thinking that the sustained freedom of American people depends upon superior material warfare. While we have been pouring billions of dollars into that which we have been led to believe will save us from communist aggression, no official effort whatsoever has been directed to the very root of the true threat to our people and our nation.

On the 4th of July 1960, Independence Day, I wrote the President of these United States an 11 page letter. I made it very clear where the roots of the problem lie. Copies of this letter were sent to the Vice President, the Cabinet, all Members of both Houses of Congress, about 250 top level government officials, and about 200 newspapers. I have a few copies left, and while they last you may have one if you wish, by sending me the sum of $1.00 stating "President's Letter."

In their own words, the Russians state that the real war is the "CONQUEST OF THE MIND." This is born out by the evidence that surrounds us, by the legislation that has been passed regarding "MENTAL HEALTH" organizations, and other legislation that is gradually tightening the rope of slavery around YOUR neck.

Whether you know it or not, YOU are now contributing toward the billions of dollars being wasted in "MENTAL HEALTH" programs. Don't you care where your money is going? Here is another quote from the textbook, study it well, for your freedom, your health, your very life may depend upon YOU understanding these matters.

"Mental Health organizations must carefully DELETE from their ranks handling or treatment of mental health." Here is another from the textbook: "A Psychopolitical Operative has no interest in "therapeutic means" or "cures." The greater number of insane in the country where he is operating, the larger number of the populace will come under his view, and the greater will become his facilities."

Here is another: "The entire field of human behavior, for the benefit of the country, can, at length, be broadened into abnormal behaviour." Here is another: "The long view is the important view,. Belief is engendered by a certain amount of fear and terror from an authoritative level, and this will be followed by obedience." Are you planning on being obedient to communist tyranny? NO! Then there is work to be done, there are things you must understand, there are things you must be willing to understand.

Listen to this one, and then think about it a few minutes: Quote - from the textbook: "The cleverness of our attack in this field of Psychopolitics is adequate to avoid the understanding of the layman and the usual stupid official, and by operating entirely under the banner of authority, with the oft repeated statement that the principles of psychotherapy are too devious for common understanding, an entire revolution can be effected without the suspicion of a populace until it is an accomplished fact." Did you know that it is, right at this minute, almost an "accomplished fact?"

You should write R.A.P. and thank him for bringing you this information. Such true citizens as he, in the publishing business can be counted on your hands with fingers left over.

Let's take a little more from the textbook and then I will do my best to explain to you the "what" the

"why" and the "how" to protect yourself and your loved ones. From the textbook: "Exercises in bringing about insanity seizures at will, simply by demonstrating a signal to persons upon whom pain-drug hypnosis has been used, and exercises in making the seizures come about through talking to certain persons in certain places and times should also be used."

Pretty clever operators, don't you think?

"Brain surgery, as developed in Russia, should also be practiced by the Psychopolitical Operative in training, to give him full confidence in (1) the crudeness with which it can be done, (2) the certainty of erasure of the stimulus-response mechanism itself, (3) the production of imbecility, idiocy, and discordination on the part of the patient, and (4) the small amount of comment which casualties in brain surgery occasion."

Do you think they would dare to do these operations to our people, in our hospitals? You think these things are for novels. Well, the Hon. Usher L. Burdick, of North Dakota, speaking in the House of Representatives didn't think so. He's got the data, and he told them so. He explained how the pick-like instrument is inserted under the victims eyelids and then with a hammer, driven through the eye sockets of the skull and into the forepart of the brain, and with a few deft motions back and forth, the doctor severs the prefrontal lobes of the brain from the rest of it. It's the same operation that Hitler used on millions of his subjects. The same operation that Stalin used on 10 million of his subjects, turning them into slaves, beasts of burden. But! how does this concern you? Simply because the Hon Usher L. Burdick told the House of Representatives that this same practice is being conducted in the United States, and that an estimated 100,000 persons have already been subjected to it. YES! My friends, it is time to wake up. He also stated, and I quote: "It is another way of putting the patients to death under the advice of skilled psychiatrists. In the United States today a large percentage of the psychiatrists are foreigners, most of them educated in Russia. The percentage runs as high as 80." There is something to think about for awhile.

If we are in any measure going to understand WHAT the Russian Psychopoliticians are doing, and plan on doing; and HOW they have done it, and plan on doing it, we shall have to gain an understanding of the word "HYPNOTISM." Hypnotism is the key. It is the key by which they unlock the deeper areas of the mind, therein instilling seeds of insanity, therein instilling in the minds of our politicians, COMMANDS that result in legislation which take away all your individual rights that our forefathers gave their blood to gain. Are you going to let them get away with it?

They state in the textbook, and I quote: "The Psychopolitical Operative in training should be thoroughly studied in the subject of hypnotism and post-hypnotic suggestion." They also state: "The subject of hypnotism is a subject of belief. What can people be made to believe? They can be made to believe anything which is administered to them with sufficient brutality and force. The obedience of a populace is as good as they will believe." Also: "The first thing to be degraded in any nation is the state of Man himself. It is the basic purpose of Psychopolitics to reduce that state of mind to a point where it can be ORDERED AND ENSLAVED.

Thus, the first target is Man, himself. (That's YOU they're talking about.) He may be degraded from a spiritual being to an animalistic reaction pattern. He must think of himself as an animal, capable only of animalistic reactions. He must no longer think of himself, or of his fellows, as capable of "spiritual endurance," or nobility." How do you like that one—and they are spending your tax dollars to do it! Are they making progress? You know they are, look at the hospitals, sanitariums, rest homes, mental hospitals, etc., loaded to the gills, and billions around the world, disturbed, confused, worried and almost beaten. Yes, they are making tremendous progress. IT MUST BE STOPPED!

Before endeavouring to explain what hypnotism truly is, let me lay a little groundwork for understanding, let me build a foundation upon which to construct an understanding of the word and the phenomena.

No where in the world is such a good explanation found as in the ancient writings. At the present moment, I am going to draw upon the wealth contained in the Hebrew and Greek writings found in the Bible. Those of you that have lost faith in the Bible, do not run away, your faith may be restored.

First of all I shall have to explain that we live in a world of words. If we do not know WHAT the words we use truly represent, we are in a state of profound confusion. Not one in ten million persons know WHAT they are talking about, simply because they do not know the meaning of the words they use. Language was an invention of the Ancient Egyptians, and those of you who think that we are at the summit of learning, let me inform you that we are in no such state, we are deep in the Valley of Darkness, of utter ignorance, for we do not know the true meaning of the words we use. Noah Webster did a wonderful work in recovering the true meaning of many words, only to have religious tyrants, after his death, change many of the true definitions of Bible words to false "theological" definitions of words. You have been raised in a world of words and do not know their meaning. I recently had a college graduate argue with me on this point. He did not deny the fact that we do not know the meaning of the words we use, but argued, "it didn't make any difference." Yes, some of our colleges are very proficient in the art of turning out idiots.

Look at your hands. Do you see them? They are THINGS. Look around you. WHAT do you see? They are THINGS. Language and words are supposed to tie our minds to a world of THINGS. If we do not truly know WHAT THINGS our words tie us to, we are in confusion, we are living in a world of FANCY. We are in a state which in truth and fact is called "INSANITY." The modern usage of the word "insanity" is not correct.

WE ARE AT WAR! If we are to win that war, we shall have to know WHAT we are talking about; we shall have to understand the KIND of a war we are in. In the Russian textbook on Psychopolitics, the word insanity is in part, used incorrectly. Since the false religionists substituted fancy for truth, the world population has been in a state of "insanity." The imaginative faculty has taken rule over reason. Noah Webster defines the word "insanity" as: "The state of being insane; unsoundness or derangement of mind; madness: lunacy. ALL power of FANCY over reason is a degree of insanity." Modern false religion consists completely of "FANCY."

Noah Webster defines the word "FANCY" in part as follows: "TO BELIEVE WITHOUT SUFFICIENT EVIDENCE; TO IMAGINE SOMETHING THAT IS UNREAL)."

While we are discussing the word "FANCY" and its definition, and the fact that "any" degree of FANCY is a degree of insanity, let us consider the latest attempt of false religion to instill INSANITY into the minds of our children. I do not have all the details yet, but, I hope to have for my next article in SEARCH, and I, hope to be able to bring you a FULL REPORT. However, one of the large organized "religions" has stated, according to reports I have received, that the characterization of Jesus Christ with beard and flowing robes is NO LONGER effective in "CAPTURING THE IMAGINATION" of the children. They have spent millions of dollars, and several years effort, in reconstructing the characterization to a modern, shaven person, wearing sports attire. This they claim, according to reports, will be more effective in "CAPTURING THE IMAGINATION" of the children.

I ask—is there no place in religious affairs for the TRUTHFUL FACT?

The attempt to "CAPTURE" the IMAGINATION by a FALSE image, or by a means that is not true—is according to Webster—according to the true meaning of words—a DIRECT attempt to instill "FANCY" into the child's mind,—ANY degree of which is a degree of "insanity." Are we going to allow these rats operating under the cloak of "NOBLE PURPOSE," to destroy our children? My efforts here is MY answer—what's YOURS.

If we are to know what we are talking about, we must understand the words we use. This was known to the Ancient Egyptians that understood WHAT they were doing when they invented language. Even today, if we want to truly know WHAT we are talking about, we have to go back to the roots in Egyptian to find the true and original meanings of words. The English language is loaded with Egyptian words, but we cannot go into that at this time. I only want to establish the fact that we live in A WORLD OF WORDS, and that words are the cause of our confusion, simply because we do not understand WHAT they mean, or to what THING they refer.

Now, spiritual teachings and spiritual schools are supposed to be an aid to mankind on the rough and stormy sea of life. However, I fail to find even one such school that shows evidence of even understanding WHAT the word means, let alone, to understand the importance of knowing the meaning of the word.

Do you know WHAT the word GOD means? Do you know WHAT the words JESUS CHRIST means? Do you know what the word SOUL means? Do you know WHAT the word SPIRIT means? Do you know WHAT the word MIND means? Do you know WHAT the word REPENT means? Do you know WHAT the word SLEEP in the Bible means? If people would DEMAND of their minister to tell them WHAT he is talking about, and prove it, as the Bible instructs to do, we would not be in the mess we are in today.

I have not forgotten that I was to explain WHAT hypnotism is, but it was a rather long way around. The word comes from the Greek word "Hupnos," which means "sleep," but not the kind of sleep that you are in when you lie down to rest. It means the kind of sleep you are in right now, because of the fact that all your mental faculties are not working, because of the fact that you do not know the meaning of the words you use.

Man was designed and created to be a THINKING individual. Yet not one in ten million use the mental faculties with which they were endowed. Why? Simply because of the fact of HYPNOTISM. Simply because of the fact that man has a double mind. Simply because of the fact that certain faculties of the mind have been inhabitated for countless centuries by tyrants.

While the Communists and their Psychopoliticians have invented some new techniques in the administration of HYPNOTIC STIMULI, the art has been used by religious tyrants for countless centuries to keep the people in ignorance and subject to the church, - and its so-called "Divine Authority."

The "Infallibility of the Church" —who ever heard of such rot; especially when the founder was a cold blooded murderer. I don't know that any of the Russian leaders have a record as bad as that of Constantine. Do you want to take a look at it?

In addition to the estimated 90 million murdered at his command, this is his personal slaughter list.

He drowned his wife Fausta in a bath of boiling water. Licinianus, his nephew was only a boy of 12. Constantine beheaded his eldest son Crispus the same year he presided in the Council of Nice. He was converted to the Christian Religion on the night of the 26th of October, A.D. 312. All, but one of the above slaughters were committed AFTER his "conversion." He died on Whitsunday, May 22nd, 348. No man, if he may be called such, is responsible for so much misery as he. Under his reign Christianity (so-called) became the established religion. To him we give thanks for "historizing" Eternal Truths. In historizing Eternal Truths, and misapplying spiritual terms and titles, and by enforcing his false teachings with the power of the sword, he has caused the greatest confusion, the greatest misery, the world has ever known.

After reviewing the "proof" that Constantine presented concerning the Truth of the Christian Religion, Robert Taylor in "Taylor's Diegesis" states: "Surely it was any thing rather than such a palpable forgery as the Sibylline Verses, or such infatuate irrelevancy as a heathen eclogue, that we should have a right to see assigned as a demonstration of the truth of the Christian Religion! We wanted not allegories, nor mystifications, but the plain MATTER-OF-FACT evidence, which might have excused a man to himself as a rational being, in believing. Where is that evidence? Where the plausibility, the seeming, the shadow of an historical fact?—in heaven?—in hell?—in Brobdignag! 'Tis nowhere upon earth. Then rail at us, ye consecrated successors of Constantine! Persecute us, ye lawyers! Denounce us, ye hypocrites! Curse us all ye priests! Rail, rant, and roar for it: - but never talk of evidence."

Constantine was Emperor. The court records were in his possession, yet never once in his writings in which he tried to prove the truth of the Christian Religion did he ever mention or bring forth the court records of a so-called Judge by the name of Pilate. Why? Simply because the records did not exist! These stories, allegories, mysteries, were all carried over from an earlier time in Egypt.

Here is startling evidence, proven by archaeology, linking ancient civilizations and the mysteries of their temple rituals with the remote beginnings of humanity and visitations from Outer Space. This "highway" is grander and longer, but one on the Earth plane; yet it often touched the green hills of Earth, and the contact was recorded in the most ancient records of humanity It is the highway linking the stars together and moving out beyond the known Universes into the infinite vastness of galactic space.

For 1635 years, the time of Constantine, the world has been held in the hypnotic grip of tyrants, religious tyrants, who SUBSTITUTED FALSE THINGS for the TRUE THINGS referred to in the ancient writings.

Let us now look at the word "hypnotism" and see if we can tie it down to some definite THING.

As I have stated before, the word is derived from the Greek "Hupnos." Let us see how the ancients used the word. We will take a Greek scripture to use for example. St. Matthew 1-24: "Then Joseph being raised from SLEEP did as the angel of the Lord had bidden him, and took unto him his wife." The Greek word which the translators rendered as "SLEEP" was "HUPNOS." It is defined as "SLEEP, SPIRITUAL TORPOR." Noah Webster defines the word "torpor" as follows: "(1) Loss of motion, or of the power of motion; a state of inactivity with partial or total insensibility; numbness. (2) Dullness; sluggishness; inactivity; as, a torpor of the mental faculties."

We therefore find that the word "HUPNOS" or "HYPNOTISM" concerns the matter of the LOSS OF MOTION, OR THE INACTIVITY, OF THE "SPIRITUAL" FACULTIES OF THE MIND. Before we can come to any conclusion here, we will have to investigate the nature of the word "spiritual" and see what true THING we can tie it to.

Since you were a child you have probably been subjected to much conversation concerning the "soul" and the "spirit." The religious tyrants know better than to define words, for if they did they would expose themselves as the biggest liars their Creator ever put breath into.

The New Testament was written in Greek, although there are so-called originals in other languages. In the Greek versions, the English word "soul" is represented by the word "Psuche," which is equal to the English "Psyche." Also, in the Greek versions the English word "SPIRIT" is represented by the word "PNEUMA."

We cannot talk about these words without tieing them down to some definite and true thing, lest we drift off into a world of FANCY, which is SLEEP, which is HYPNOTISM, which is Hupnos.

The word "Psuche" is defined as follows: "THE ANIMAL SENTIENT PRINCIPLE ONLY;—Thus distinguished on the one hand from "PNEUMA" which is the RATIONAL and IMMORTAL SOUL (mind); and on the other ZOE, which is mere VITALITY, even of plants. These terms thus exactly correspond respectively to the Hebrew Nephesh, Ruwach, and Chay."

Let us now examine the definition of the word "PNEUMA." "A SPIRIT, i.e. (human) THE RATIONAL SOUL, (Mind), (by impl.) VITAL PRINCIPLE, MENTAL DISPOSITION, etc., or (superhuman) An Angel, daemon, or (divine) God, Christ's Spirit, the Holy Spirit:—ghost, spirit, life, mind."

Now, if you will remember, in the Bible teaching there was not only one Adam, there were two. The first Adam was of the earth earthy, and the second Adam was of the heavens. This is just another way of speaking of the dualness of the human being. As brought forth before, the dualness consists of soul and spirit. The soul being the mind of the body, the animal sentient principle, and the spirit which is not OF the body, although it is IN the body. The Pneuma Mind is IN the body, but is not OF the body.

I think it would be well to examine the word "natural" and see if we can bring in some further understanding. We will take the word "natural" as it is used in the scripture found in I Cor. 2:14, for an example. "But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned."

This scripture is loaded with valuable information as you will see when we bring out the true meaning of the words used. Let us first look at the word "natural" used in this scripture. The original word that was translated as "natural" was "Psychikos," pronounced Psoo-kheekos'. It is defined as follows: "From Psuche; sensitive, i.e. animate (in distinction on one hand from Pneumatikos, which is the higher or RENOVATED nature; and on the other from Phusikos, which is the lower or bestial nature):—natural, sensual."

Now, this "natural" man that "receiveth not the THINGS of the Spirit of God," is tied to the THING called the Psuche Mind, which is the animal sentient principle. I should also explain here that in the scripture that reads: "God is a spirit," the word "spirit" is translated from the word Pneuma. It could and does read: "God is Pneuma." Therefore the "natural" man, the man of the Psuche Mind cannot receive the things of the Pneuma Mind, because the THINGS of the spirit (Pneuma) are spiritually (Pneuma) discerned. This is not double talk. It is merely saying that the THINGS of the PNEUMA MIND can only be understood by the PNEUMA MIND. If the ACTION, the movement, of the forces of the PNEUMA MIND has been inhibited by the conditioning of the PSUCHE or NATURAL MIND, the THINGS of the PNEUMA MIND cannot be understood, and not being understood they are considered foolish.

We see in the above, that man has three natures, to wit: the natural nature, the higher renovated nature, and the lower bestial nature. The higher nature is related to the Pneuma Mind, and the lower nature is related to the THING called PHYSIKOS, which is defined as: "Physical, i.e. by impl. instinctive."

Now, the Psuche Mind is the mind of the senses, it is the animal sentient principle, it contacts the outer world by means of the senses. It has no inherent knowledge, it has no inherent wisdom, it is a recording mechanism, it is a plastic mechanism, like putty that can be formed to any shape. It is without reason, and it is suggestible. Being suggestible and without reason, knowledge, or wisdom, it will accept anything as truth regardless as to its falsity, if it is presented to it in the right way.

It was a long way around, but we are now approaching that which I had hoped to explain.

The distinction between the false religionists and the communists is this. The false religionists, have taken advantage of the hypnotic suggestible nature of the Psuche Mind, to bind their subjects in an hypnotic state, by destroying the proper and correct association of WORDS and THINGS. This at once established a state of mental confusion, a state wherein the spiritual forces or the forces of the Pneuma Mind, which is the seat of inherent Knowledge, Wisdom, and Reason, are inhibited. By "inhibited," I

FAITH

The Magic Story Of You!

Yes, faith is magic—and if you understood it properly, you would know the equally magic story of YOU. Do you want to "develop" faith so as to work miracles? The answer: faith is not "developed"—you can only understand its real nature, realize that you've always possessed it, then learn to redirect it. Would you like more material things, money, health, ability, a better life? The answer: the life you now have you yourself created without knowing it through those negative forms of faith called worry, fear, doubt, depression—and you need to learn how to remove negative faith forever. See the point now? Faith is truly the magic story of your life, from childhood to now, this very minute; what you've been, what you've had—AND WHAT YOU WILL BE, AND WILL HAVE TOMORROW! NEXOLOGY is the new science that gives you the real "know-how" on faith and miracles; in short, how to get rid of what you don't want—and how to get what you DO want. Thousands of its students have told how they "changed their lives," obtained health, money, friends, bubbling confidence and even telepathic abilities—yes, all the things they wanted in abundance. If you'd like to read about these things, and to know more about NEXOLOGY, the science that re-establishes YOUR miracle-powers, send 10c (coin or stamp) for free booklet to:

mean, "LOSS OF MOTION, OR THE POWER OF MOTION. This is HUPNOS - a state of SPIRITUAL TORPOR - a state wherein the populace may be "ORDERED AND ENSLAVED."

In this state, the Psuche Mind is on its own. In this event, all it can do is to record words and feeling (without meaning) until it establishes what is known as stimulus-response mechanisms. At best it becomes a "computing mechanism," which computes according to the data that is recorded therein. A fellow attending one church becomes "conditioned" with certain words and associated feelings; a fellow of another church, becomes conditioned in a completely different way. These states which limit the individual's mental activity to the area of the Psuche Mind, are called "SLEEP," or "HUPNOS," which is a state of hypnotic sleep, a state of hypnotism, a state of WAKING HYPNOSIS, a state of Spiritual (Pneuma) torpor. It has been the practice of the false church for centuries to keep the people sound asleep in the forces of the natural, or Psuche Mind, and to inhibit the activity of the Pneuma Mind lest the Church lose control of their subjects and they become Children of God, being led by the Spirit, which is the Higher Mind, the Pneuma Mind.

The Communists are not satisfied to rest at such a state as this. Man having three natures, the lower two are the targets of the tyrants .The false religionists have inhibited one already, and if the Communists are to gain control of billions of hypnotic subjects, they seek a more powerful means. This they find in the lower or bestial nature. Instead of being satisfied with just putting their subjects in a state of confusion and thereby seek their control, they seek to go further than that, and imbed in the natural mind that which will ultimately destroy itself. They seek to inhibit the function of the natural mind and bring forth a controlled and ordered, and enslaved, bestial mind. By this evil means, humanity goes another step DOWN the ladder.

It should be recognized that tyrants, false teachers, can drag mankind downward, but, the upward trend is only accomplished by individual affort; by following true instruction.

Man's "natural" state is an hypnotic state, a state wherein false "beliefs" are established—and which seem true and real.

Every mother, and possibly every father, has used hypnotic techniques extensively upon their children.

While the professional hypnotist defines the unconscious state which is induced by suggestion—a state of hypnosis—the fact is and shall always be, that man is already in a state of suggestibility, a state of sleep of HUPNOS - of HYPNOTISM. Those which the hypnotist defines as "hypnotic states" are only DEEPER states than the natural WAKING HYPNOTIC STATE. Man's true purpose on earth, which should be the aim of every person—is to awaken from "HUPNOS"—which is accomplished ONLY by releasing the energies of the Pneuma Mind, which in turn enlighten the dark forces of the Psuche Mind. The accomplishment of this seeming miracle, is the purpose of my Home Study Course, "UNLEASHING YOUR INNER POWERS." The "INNER POWERS" being the Powers of the Pneuma Mind. The Bible truly states, "THE KINGDOM OF GOD IS OF POWER." This is a direct reference to the Pneuma Mind.

The crying child is "put" to "sleep" with "Rock-a-bye-baby." In fact and truth, the child is "PUT" into a deeper state of "HUPNOS," which gradually changes over into natural sleep. While in the deeper state of hupnos, the child is EXTREMELY suggestible. This means that words feelings, attitudes subjected to the senses while the child is in this state, become DEEPLY imbedded. All care should be used around a child in such a state so as to not IMPRESS negative or destructive feelings or words.

MEANS OF SELF PROTECTION AGAINST FALSE RELIGIOUS AND PSYCHOPOLITICAL HYPNOTISM

There is only one means of self protection from the tyrants use of hypnotism against an unsuspecting public. First, the public must not be "unsuspecting." They must know the things I have already told you about the two minds and that the Psuche Mind is suggestible, that it will accept lies as truth and endeavour to control the thought processes accordingly. Next, they must know the hidden meaning of the word "repent." The false minister, seeking to control you hypnotically, will tell you that it means: "to be sorry for sin." He may even refer to the Webster dictionary to prove his point. If he is only proving his ignorance. Some time ago, I had a fellow write to me saying that his brother was a college professor, that he had traced the word repent to its roots, and that I was completely in error in stating in a previous article that the word "REPENT" means "TO EXERCISE THE MIND." Perhaps I was, for I did not mean that the word "repent" means "TO EXERCISE THE MIND." I thought I had made it clear that I was referring to the word in the Greek that was translated as "REPENT." I have never traced "REPENT" to its roots, I do not know any more about what it means than what Webster states. However, I do know that the word "REPENT" was used by the translators of the Bible to replace four (4) different words, with vastly different meanings in the Hebrew and Greek originals. The word repent, or the word that was translated as repent in certain Greek scriptures, is your KEY to FREEDOM from HYPNOTISM.

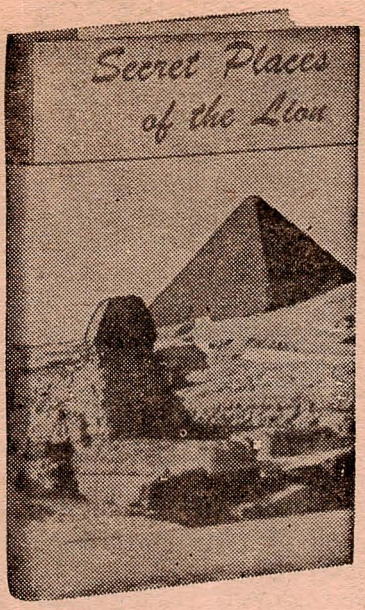

The unadulterated liars in ministerial cloak will tell you anything to freeze your mind in hypnotism. Their leaders long ago "arranged" the dictionary to their convenience. If you want to know the fact—you must go to the original words. The translators of the Bible used the word "repent" to represent the Hebrew "nacham" and "shuwb"; also the Greek "Metanoeo" and "Metamellomai." Not ONE of these words is defined as "to be sorry for sin," although one of them, the Hebrew "nacham", in the Old Testament, means to "Be sorry, to pity, to console."

In St. Mark 6:12, it is stated; "And they went out and preached that men should REPENT." The Greek word used here was "Metanoeo.' It is derived from "Meta" and "Noieo." The meaning is: "TO EXERCISE THE MIND (OBSERVE), i.e. (fig.) TO COMPREHEND, HEED: CONSIDER, PERCEIVE, THINK, UNDERSTAND." This is your key to FREEDOM!

Man was born to be a THINKER, but stinkers, religious tyrants, inhibited the free process of THOUGHT by introducing hypnotic stimulus response mechanisms. These mechanisms, the chief tool of the Psychopolitician may be overcome, and their fears that someone would discover a way to overcome them has been realized, for this is the main objective in my Home Study Instruction, "UNLEASHING YOUR INNER POWERS."

I have a little article titled: "THE "Flying Saucerama" should open the eyes of the skeptic, for this unique and excellently documented book, written by a minister of the Gospel who has investigated and gathered material for over twelve years, offers a thorough-going survey of the facts about UFO (Unidentified Flying Objects). Sober, dispassionate, highly informed, it traces widespread reports of flying saucers back to their orgins, separating truth from fiction and fantasy from reality.

BIBLE WORD "REPENT" DEFINED." It is only 8 pages long, but it contains a wealth of information and lays the false minister bare, with his mouth wide open, with nothing to say from his lying lips, which heretofore said, "If ye will be saved ye must be sorry for your sin".If you want a copy, send $1.00, and ask for it by title.

"SIN" simply means error. It means that you made a mistake, it means that you "missed the mark", it means that you allowed the natural mind, the hypnotic mind to govern your thought processes. The term comes from archery. If one misses the bull's eye, he is a sinner, he sinned, he "missed the mark."

"REPENTANCE" is the only means of avoiding "SIN". As I have explained so many times before in my articles, the Greek word translated as repent means to "exercise the mind" - (observe) which means to "take notice with care" "heed", which means "careful consideration"; "consider", which means "to fix the mind on, with a view of careful examination; to think on with care; to ponder; to study"; "perceive", which means, "to obtain knowledge of through the senses; to receive impressions from by means of the bodily organs; to take cognizance of the existence, character, or identity of, by means of the senses, to see, hear, or feel". "Think" -which means "to employ any of the intellectual powers except that of simple perception through the senses; to exercise the higher intellectual faculties". "Understand", which means "the power to understand; the intellectual faculty; the intelligence; the rational powers collectively conceived and designated; the higher capacities of the intellect; the power to distinguish truth from falsehood, and to adapt means to ends."

This is not "dogma", this is not "opinion", this is not an ideology, this is getting to the root of the problem, by establishing a proper correspondence between words and things. Please note that the above words in this ancient instruction are placed in a certain sequence.

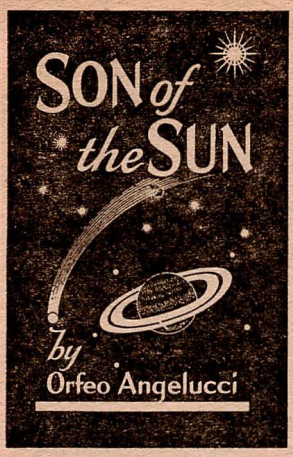

Yes - your freedom lies in understanding the Greek word that was falsely translated in the Bible as "repent". Let us use these instructions. Let us wake up from HUPNOS. Let us help our fellowman to wake up from HUPNOS. Let us give the children an opportunity to be taught true knowledge, instead of dogma, opinion, ideologies, which all serve to enslave the minds of our people. Are you with me?

In my earlier years, I "accepted" or "rejected" certain parts of religious teachings. Since being stricken with multiple sclerosis which has now been totally cured, I have traced religion to its source. I have found the true purpose therefore, the true principles involved, which when understood, reveals modern religion as a gross forgery and a means of tyrannically controlling the thought processes of the populace.

This is the exact opposite of the true purpose of true religion. True religion was developed as a means whereby individuals could develop their own true individuality, with their own higher reasoning mind as the governing "authority."

All religion started in Egypt - it grew out of their superior knowledge of the forces or powers inherent in the constitution of the human being. They recognized that the forces which I have defined herein as "natural" were "self-operating" and therefore hypnotic.

The people were supplied with "mystery stores" which would cause them to "exercise their minds", thereby awakening the faculties of the higher mind. If we are to protect ourselves against tyranny, and to develop a state of humanity as the Creator intended, the true ancient knowledge concerning the inherent powers of man must be restored and publicly taught.

This means that our system of "education" must be extremely revised. But first, we must develop individuals capable of making adequate revisions. Education, within itself, must contain the necessary ingredients for awakening the faculties of the higher mind. All care must be used to avoid the development of destructive stimulus-response mechanisms, which are the direct cause of illness, disease, and physical and mental misery, due to the laws of psycho-somatic (mind-body) medicine.

While I have given the false-religionists a bad time in this article - this is meant mostly for the leaders that know better than they teach—truly tyrannic leaders.

Many individuals in the ministry are extremely sincere, though badly misled, doing everything in their power to help our people. Sort them out - find them - inform them - they are lost in a world of words. Help them to understand where the error is—help them to understand where the truth is hidden. They have ability - let's get it going in the right direction. Let's all of us get to work and correct this evil thing.

There is a positive and negative polarity to mental action. The Positive is constructive; the negative destructive. The false religionists—all down the line—have twisted the positive instructions in the Bible to negative interpretations.

BEWARE OF FALSE RELIGIONISTS - AND - BEWARE OF PSYCHIATRISTS. The most of them are not out for the good they can do. It all adds up to the fact that the Communists are competing with the false religionists for control of the people's minds. The methods they have devised are tremendous. Where so-called normal means of inducing deep hypnosis fail, they resort to chemical aids, and when they fail, they resort to brain surgery. They have an answer for each and every individual type of person.

ARE YOU GOING TO SIT BACK AND LET THIS THING DEVELOP? —ARE YOU GOING TO LET THESE RATS MAKE ZOMBIES OUT OF YOUR CHILDREN—AND PERHAPS —YOU? Are you a man or a mouse —NOW is the time to prove it—not to me—to yourself!

The correction of this, the greatest evil of all times—is many fold. The Psychopoliticians must be stopped in their tracks. Our rights as citizens of these United States as guaranteed in the Constitution must be returned to us. We must pound our legislators on the head until this is done. We must protect ourselves on the city and county level, as well as the state and federal level, to see that our law makers do not fall into the traps set for them.

Already Los Angeles County has agreed to "share" expenses with the Federal Government for the installation of the "Mental Health" Program. At once upon hearing this news, this writer wrote a "Letter to the Editor" of one of the largest newspapers in Los Angeles. Was it published? No! The odds are against us, but is that a reason why we should take it lying down? We must overcome them.

Listen once again to the twisted mind of the author of "BRAINWASHING". Quote - "Authors of literature which seek to demonstrate the picture of a society under com-

It is not an attack upon doctors in general, nor on the practice of medicine on toto; it is directed only against those knaves whose nefarious practices must be exposed to save the lives and health of thousands who will suffer or die needlessly because of greed, carelessness and ignorance. Also: "Any legislation liberalizing any healing practice should be immediately fought and defeated. All healing practices should gravitate tirely to authoritative levels, and no other opinions should be admitted, as these might lead to exposure".

Do you know where R.A.P. and myself have put ourselves for you? Well, listen: "Should any whisper, or pamphlet, against Psychopolitical activities be published, it should be laughed into scorn, branded as immediate hoax, and its perpetrator or publisher should be, at the first opportunity, branded as insane, and by the use of drugs, the insanity should be confirmed". How do you like that one? I wonder who will be the first to write to R.A.P. and try to laugh this into scorn. They will have to get up early in the morning to laugh into scorn the true definition of words!

Here is more: "An enslavement of a population can fail only if these rebellious individuals are left to exert their individual influences upon their fellow citizens, sparking them into rebellion, calling into account their nobilities and freedoms. Unless these restless individuals are stamped out and given into the hands of Psychopolitical Operatives (Psychiatrists) early in the conquest, there will be nothing but trouble as the conquest continues".

As R.A.P. would say—"LET'S START A STORM".

Must we defend our ignorance? Must we act like stubborn children? Or, can we get behind this thing and rid this country of murdering tyrants? There is still time, if YOU and YOU, every single one that is reading this article will wake up and get to work. Tell these things to those in "Authority," whether it be in the legislature, in the church, or public office. Let's get busy, let's stop this evil thing. Let's protect that FREEDOM that our forefathers fought for, gave their lives for. Let us be able to look in the mirror and say "There is a MAN" or "a WOMAN" as the case may be, - not a coward, that is afraid to do his or her part. You have one life to live here. When you lie down to leave, are you going to look back and say "WELL DONE" or are you going to die in a state of regret for the things you didn't do? These are questions that you must answer. I am doing my part, R.A.P. is doing his part. WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO?

Our Creator intended that man should be FREE. He intended that man should be taught true knowledge; He intended that men (and women) should have the right to develop their higher inborn spiritual nature. My work is not political in any sense of the word, although at the present time we must deal and deal severely with politicians, legislators that are selling us down the river.

My work is Spiritual, and I have already defined the word. It pertains to the complete development of the HU-man being, releasing individuals from the grip of hypnotism, allowing them to develop into reasoning beings, fulfulling the intention of the Creator, to live in Introduction by the Hon. Brinsley Le Poer Trench.

Major W. Tudor Pole certainly throws new light on a number of important topics, and his personal experiences described in these pages are varied, illuminating and always intriguing. His one request is, that it should be read with a mind free from preconceived ideas or set opinions.

Each chapter deals with some aspect of the mind, be it clairvoyance, precongnition, dreams, memory or imagination. Nevertheless, all are connected for they are different facets of the whole.

I think millions of copies should be distributed—but—did you know? Printing costs money! Distribution by mail costs money. How many are you willing to purchase and distribute? Are you willing to help us - START A STORM?

I have the courage to fight this evil thing. I have the knowledge, the ability to fight it effectively. Do you have the money - but - lack the courage, the ability, or the opportunity to fight this thing?

I have access - for a price - to millions of names of people who are excellent prospects to become "soldiers" in this WAR against TYRANNY. Would you help me to get reprints of this article to them? Can we get get together like Jack Spratt and his wife and lick this platter clean and make this world a fit place to live in? Write and tell me how many hundreds, or how many thousand reprints of this article you are willing to purchase and distribute. Tell me how much you will contribute toward the mailing of the reprints and other efforts of this organization to expose the rats infesting our country and drive them back to Russia where they will be "eliminated" for their failure to succeed.

You can't take your money with you, and it's going to be worthless if we don't win this war, so, why don't you INVEST a little (or a lot) in FREEDOM—NOW—WHILE YOU HAVE THE OPPORTUNITY. I can only function for you as the profits from my publications and contributions come in. I function through an organization known as the INNER POWERS SOCIETY. This organization is a California non-profit Corporation. Our profits and the contributions we receive, are turned into efforts for you, for your FREEDOM, for your HEALTH, for your PROSPERITY—are you willing to help us? Are you willing to help us make our efforts felt where it will do some good? Very well, I'll tell you about my plan.

I have a plan - a plan to drive these Psychopolitical rats back to Russia where they will be disposed of by their own fellow experts in the art of murder, for their failure to succeed in their assigned duties in the United States.

Up to now - I have fought this battle almost alone. I need your help, I need it bad, and I need it now. THINK! How can one man, without financial support, make his efforts sufficiently effective to offset the work of Psychopoliticians, supported by billions of your tax dollars that are placed at their disposal?

My plan is two-fold. (1) To expose Tyranny regardless of what cloak of "noble purpose" it may be hiding behind. At the moment, the so-called "Mental Health" bills are a vital issue. These must be stopped. They must be stopped at all cost. (2) Many people in dire distress from the effects of destructive stimulus-response mechanisms, who, after reading my book, "Using the Magnetic Forces of your Mind", have sought my personal assistance in the solving of their problem.

I have five acres on the high desert (3300 feet elevation) with clear blue skies and healing sun. This

The HIDDEN WORLD

Here it is at last! The entire Shaver Mystery in book form! The greatest single obstacle to publication has been cost — the average book costs $4.00. And the Shaver Mystery, in its entirety, will take a whole series of books, perhaps as many as ten. Now we've solved our problem — we can give you these books, 192 pages (large size), fine quality book paper for permanence, excellent printing, in heavy paper bindings, at a saving of $2.50 per book! The difference is in the binding, plus regular quarterly publication. We will publish one book every three months, and sell them by subscription only, one year for $6.00. Each book will contain 115,000 words, twice the average book! Now, via the Subscription Book, the researches of thirty years can be published. You've wanted to know what I REALLY know and think! Here's your chance at last, at a price you can afford.

RAY PALMER, Amherst, Wisc.

In more recent times there has been a growing realization that on other worlds than ours, even in other universes there are other living beings. The idea that earthbound man may someday journey into the heavens to discover other men and women like or unlike himself, grows by leaps and bounds. Within man's soul lies the truth—mortals exist on other spheres!

In this book, many references and quotations are given from the latest authentic reports on Saucer phenomena. Because many believe there are contradictions in some of the reported happenings, it has been necessary to show that there is a great story and purpose behind all these experiences.

Here, in this book, is the history of OTHER TONGUES, and of OTHER FLESH; calm, scientific evidence that there are brothers of ours in the skies overhead.

is enough space to construct buildings to house supplies and equipment to carry on our war against tyranny. It is also enough space to construct numerous dwellings to house unfortunate individuals in dire need of effective help. I have given my ALL to promote this plan. I have the property, I have my office; I need buildings, equipment and supplies. I need millions of reprints of this article. I need postage to mail them out. I need help, and I need it now. I think I have proven the need, and I think I have proven my ability to recognize the reason why we have this need, and also what should be done about it. Are you with me?

Why don't you write me personally and tell me that you are, that you are willing to contribute to the building fund and to our efforts to restore constitutional freedom, and to our efforts to enlighten the people, and to our efforts to help disturbed people in dire distress.

If you cannot pay it in a lump, why not agree to make regular contributions? Remember, we are a non-profit corporation, working for you.

AVAILABLE AT LAST

AFTER 75 YEARS!

The 1882 Edition of the Wonder Book of this Age, Photo-copied from the original, not a comma changed!

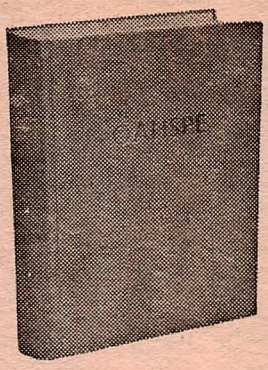

In 1891, John Ballou Newbrough and Andrew M. Howland issued a "revised and corrected" edition of OAHSPE. These revisions and corrections (and omissions and additions) have never been satisfactorily outlined, and because since 1885 the first edition could not be purchased anywhere, the public has been unable to ascertain what these changes were. With this photocopied edition of OAHSPE, the 1882 edition is once more made available to the public.

OAHSPE is, in the words of the book itself: "A sacred history of the dominions of the higher and lower heavens on the Earth for the past twenty-four thousand years, being from the submersion of the continent of Pan in the Pacific Ocean, commonly called the Flood or Deluge, to the Kosmon (present) Era. Also a brief history of the preceding fifty-five thousand years, together with a synopsis of the cosmogony of the Universe; the creation of the planets; the creation of man; the unseen worlds; the labor and glory of gods and goddesses in the etherean heavens; with the new commandments of Jehovih to man of the present day. With revelations from the second resurrection, formed in words in the thirty-third year of the Kosmon Era." The purpose of the book is: "To teach mortals how to attain to hear the Creator's voice, and to see His heavens, in full consciousness, whilst still living on the earth; and to know of a truth the place and condition awaiting them after death."

This edition of OAHSPE contains 928 pages. It also contains nearly three quarters of a million words, and calculating from actual time of writing, it was written at the rate of 120 words per minute! This on an 1880 Sholes typewriter is a maracle in itself. Many of the drawings in OAHSPE were done at the same time . . . in the dark! The Book of Cosmology might have been written by today's space scientists! Much of the science in OAHSPE has only recently been "discovered". Newbrough could not have "guessed" so rightly, especially in the face of all the authorities of his day. Today space satellites are discovering "how it is" out in space, while in 1882 OAHSPE contained the same information! As an instance, the now famous Van Allen radiation belts, complete as to nature and height!
