Two Worlds Are One

BY TONY ORTZEN

I GUESS that by now, for many people "resolution rot" will have set in. So many of those good intentions to smoke and drink less, exercise more, be a better person and a hundred-and-one other ideals have come to naught.

But hang on a minute! At least one tried. And there's another way of looking at failure too.

Over the last few weeks, just about every paper and magazine I've picked up has contained tips aplenty featuring succeeding at this and that.

It was all getting very wearisome and confidence lowering until I came across a quote from Thomas Edison. It appeared in an article about motivation.

After his 700th unsuccessful attempt to invent the electric light, Mr Edison was asked, "How does it feel to have failed 700 times?"

The great inventor replied: "I have not failed 700 times. I have not failed once.

"I have succeeded in proving that those 700 ways will not work. When I have eliminated all the ways that will not work, I will find the way that will work."

That superb quote really lit up my day since perhaps we are all guilty of focusing on our failures rather than successes. Let's also remind ourselves that our present physical frame is merely a temporary vehicle for the spirit within to express itself and that one day we shall inhabit a lighter, brighter, disease-free form.

But I do so hope that at least initially, one can obtain a packet of 20 Raffles in the Beyond and that the odd bottle of Burgundy will be floating around...

BECAUSE many Spiritualists care deeply about the animal kingdom, here's some excellent news... and it's no flight of fancy.

For once, the Common Market, as I still call it in my middle-aged way, has done something compassionate and sensible, and agreed a permanent ban on the import of wild birds into Britain and Europe.

It seems that popular birds such as macaws and parrots are included in the ban along with 3,000 other species that are traded internationally. What a shameful figure!

So is this. For according to various estimates, one million rare birds are trapped and sold annually. Almost 90 per cent are imported into Europe. Sadly, up to 60 per cent die before reaching collectors or pet owners.

David Bowles, of the RSPCA, called the ban "fantastic news. Its consequences will reverberate around the world."

Let's hope so. As a Spiritualist, I believe that animals were created to share the world with us and not be traded, caged or cooked for humans...

NEXT month sees a milestone-marking event in the Church of England. The Archbishops of Canterbury and York are to lead thousands of pilgrims carrying a giant cross through London.

The reason? To repent for the church's complicity in the slave trade.

The "walk on witness" coincides with the bicentenary of the abolition of the slave trade. According to draft plans, churches across the UK are being urged to bus up to 8,000 parishioners to London for this "act of public witness."

At one point, the procession will go across the River Thames to represent the Atlantic crossing made by over ten million Africans sent to the Americas between the 15th and 19th centuries.

Last year it emerged that at a Barbados plantation that was owned by the church's Society for the Propagation of the Faith in Foreign Parts, slaves had the word "Society" branded on their chests.

Another terrible aspect of slavery is that it continues in too many countries even today. Those attending the procession will be asked to sign a petition calling on the government to act against contemporary slavery, such as sex trafficking from Eastern Europe.

Well, we wouldn't argue with that, would we? But since it's examining its past, can we hope that the church will similarly apologise to countless thousands of so-called witches who were tortured and burned at the stake?

It seems obvious to me that many of them were natural psychics whose only crime was to commune with the world beyond and exercise other gifts of the spirit.

SADLY, the latest attempt to receive an official pardon for materialisation medium Helen Duncan has failed. Helen was jailed for nine months after being tried at the Old Bailey and being found guilty under archaic laws which have since been repealed.

Indeed, it was largely due to her trial and imprisonment that Spiritualism attained legal status in 1951.

But here's a thorny problem. I think I am correct in saying that under British law, we do not survive death, a classic case of "When you're dead, you're dead."

As Spiritualists we know otherwise, which just goes to prove that the law is often a total ass on both sides of the veil. Mercifully, in the Larger Life, spiritual law governs all and is perfect in its judgement and operation.

'The power of the spirit always triumphs'

WISDOM FROM THE WORLD BEYOND

For some months now, we have been serialising David Gow's book "Ask the Spirits." However, a change, as they say, is as good as a rest, so this month we decided to feature our old friend Silver Birch, whose timeless wisdom and majestic philosophy never fail to inspire.

DO not worry about the morrow: today is all that matters. Discharge to the best of your ability the duties you are called on to perform.

Do your best; that is all we ask of you. You are human. If you were not weak, you could not know what is strength.

Truth is simple yet paradoxical. In darkness you find light, in sorrow you find joy, in crisis you learn to find peace.

Hold your heads high. There is nothing that can obstruct what it is you have to do unless you choose to turn aside from the path that lies in front of you.

The signposts are provided to point the way. When mists obscure them, pause. Because they are mists, they will roll away and destiny will show the path to be followed. The sun shines even when clouds obscure it.

These things I teach because of what I have seen. So I rest my confidence in the Great Spirit and its infinite power. This cannot fail. We, with our defects, weaknesses and blemishes can fail, but failure is also a means of learning the lesson of how to succeed.

■ Life is not a monotone, neither is it inertia. Nature abhors a vacuum. Life is motion, radiation, vibration. There must always be movement, mostly forward, occasionally backward. The worst thing is to stand still.

You will have reverses, but they will enable you to appreciate the greater victories as they come. Learn to withdraw from the clangour and strident noises produced by your world's cacophony. Learn to allow inner peace to flood the whole of your being.

The soul is most active in peace, stillness, quietude, receptivity and attunement. Often you achieve far more spiritual activity when asleep than when awake. This is when strength and guidance come to you.

■ Our function is to show the way that leads to spiritual mastery, to the full flowering of the gifts with which you have been divinely endowed, so that those who are brought to you can be helped to find themselves and to know the purpose of being and how to order their existence so that they derive from it the beauty and richness which should be theirs.

All is going well. There is no need for depression or despair. We are on the winning, not the losing, side.

The forces of reaction are in disarray. They cannot out-manoeuvre infinite wisdom when it seeks to make its mark on receptive souls.

■ The tough jobs are for the tough people. It is no good giving them easy tasks. It is an index of attainment that the harder missions are assigned to those competent to perform them.

The generals in the great war against ignorance and superstition must have been tried in the battlefield before otherwise they will be incapable of exercising generalship. So, paradoxically as it may seem, the tougher the task means the greater the achievement that has made it possible.

■ You will have problems. That is why you are on earth, to overcome them and in doing so finding new strength, greater developments. Welcome every problem as a challenge to be met and to be beaten every time.

■ The Great Spirit has so ordained life in your world that you will find strength when you think you have reached the limits of weakness.

It is when people seem at the end of their tether, and that nowhere can they find in the material world anything to help them, that they are ready to be illumined by the truths of the spirit.

■ You cannot escape the problems of earthly life. They are inevitable, the stepping-stones you must encounter.

But as you weather the storm so you are spiritually stronger as a result and helping to shape your character into a higher mould. It is the difficulty that enables you to achieve spiritual strength and growth, so do not be afraid of it.

Just regard it as a challenge to be met and to be conquered with the power that you have within and the power that you can call on from without.

The great thing when you have this knowledge is never allow shadows in earthly life to appear so strong that you are engulfed in darkness. They are only shadows; they are not reality.

The reality is the spirit. The spirit is the divine within you. The spirit is what gives you life. The spirit is the most potent force that you have within you and within your reach as well.

I know you are all human and so must fall by the wayside. But if only you could pause and remember as the shadows come closer that they cannot obscure the real light which is the light of the spirit, then you can be radiant, unmoved and strong in your complete confidence that you must come through. It is a hard lesson to learn.

If it were easy, it would not be worth while. You cannot have it both ways. If you want mastery, you have to discipline yourself. And if it were too easy you would not fulfil yourself.

Daily life in your world is a challenge to be accepted and, whatever its nature, to triumph over. If you allow the spirit to express itself, then nothing can stand in the way.

It sounds easy, but it happens to be true as well. I do not make the laws. I can only tell you how they operate. Each morn when you awake is the herald of a new day with possibilities for greater spiritual equipment.

Greet it so that when the day ends you can feel you have helped your spiritual growth, that your stature has increased and that as a result you are better equipped for what the morrow will bring.

■ Do not allow yourselves to be downcast no matter what the problems that come to you in your daily lives.

We cannot promise a bed of roses, an easy path with all the stones removed. What we can promise is that if you fulfil yourselves spiritually, you will be the better for it. As a result, you will have justified the reason for incarnating into the world of matter.

■ Every problem is a challenge to be met and to be overcome. In the process your spirit grows, develops, unfolds and more and more of latent divinity rises to the surface.

Do not express gratitude when things are easy, but when they are hard. Those are the tests that you must face and in facing them you emerge spiritually stronger as a result.

You must be sorry for those who surrender. If they have awareness and have seen the light, then it is a greater pity that they have given in.

It is for us the saddest spectacle of all when those who have knowledge behave not in accordance with that they know to be true.

■ We are all human. If we were perfect, we would not be where we are. Perfection, or its attainment, is an infinite process.

It is not possible in your world to have all-knowledge. Knowledge is infinite. The conditions under which you live provide restrictions on what you can receive and assimilate.

The plan is that in the darkest hour, when the world of matter seemingly has no opportunities to point the way, knowledge is given to you, first through evidence that life, because it is spirit, is a continuing process.

Then you become the recipient of that divine beneficial power which enables you to heal the afflictions of those who call on you.

These provide the foundation on which you have to build your faith. We do not decry faith, provided it is reasonable and not credulous.

The belief in that which is unreasonable is an insult to the intelligence which is one of the divine gifts that have been bestowed on every one of the Great Spirit's children.

Those you love and who love you may be separated from you physically, but spiritually you are as united as you always have been.

Love is stronger than death. Love, like the spirit, is among the most important forces in the whole universe.

It is not possible for us to prevent you from encountering the storms and troubles of earthly life. Neither can we shield you when you are buffeted by them.

Occasionally, we have to leave you to your own devices to see how you fare when trials beset you and there are lessons to be learned.

■ You must have the comparison, sunshine and storm, to appreciate the realities of your existence. After all, what is hate but love inverted and subverted from its true purpose? This is a matter of soul development.

It is in darkness that you find the light; it is in storm that you find peace; it is in sorrow that you find joy because life is a paradox and a polarity.

You cannot appreciate health until you have suffered. You cannot appreciate sunshine until you have endured the rains.

Suffering is the catalyst, the divine means by which a soul can come into its own and realise he or she is not only a body but an eternal spirit using it.

That spirit is the divinity within, the spark which spiritual healing should kindle so that it can grow into a radiant flame. That is the purpose behind all spiritual healing.

■ You must live for the day, for the hour, for the minute, for the second. Have no anxiety for the morrow and do the best you can.

The Great Spirit is aware of the fact that you are all very human beings and imperfect. This is why you are on earth. If you were perfect, you would not be where you are now. The function of your earthly life is simply to eliminate the imperfections.

■ Exercise the tolerance and charity which are the hall-marks of the evolving spirit.

None of you is perfect. You will not necessarily agree with one another. Sometimes, because you are human and imperfect you will make mistakes because your opinions will be wrong.

Therefore, toleration, charity, receptivity and love are the qualities that should be expressed. If the desire to serve is right, the means will be forthcoming.

You will not be abandoned. You will not be left entirely to your own resources. You will always be helped, whatever emergency arises.

■ If you do not like troubles, and I do not blame you because this is a human failing, then you cannot expect to grow spiritually. Growth comes only by meeting trouble, accepting the challenge and overcoming it.

You will triumph, not easily, not without difficulty, not without trouble, but you will come through. The power of the spirit never surrenders. It always triumphs.

The Margaret Holmes column

Got a problem concerning Spiritualism, the paranormal and allied areas? If so, help's at hand. Write to Margaret Holmes, our resident adviser, and she will do her best to investigate and advise. Please note that Margaret cannot enter into personal correspondence. You can contact her by post, fax or e-mail. The full details appear on the front cover.

Can you tell me something about Kirlian photography? I seem to recall reading somewhere that it allows the aura to be photographed – Raymond Thompson, Coventry.

Kirlian photography refers to a form of contact print photography associated with a high-voltage technique.

It is named after a Russian, Semyon Kirlian, who, in 1939, accidentally discovered that if an object on a photographic plate is subjected to a strong electric field, an image is created.

Over the next ten years, he and his wife Valentina developed and perfected apparatus for what we now called Kirlian photography.

The couple employed a high-frequency oscillator or spark generator that operated at 75,000 to 200,000 cycles per second. They took photographs with no camera, but merely with electric current and photographic film.

The Kirlians then moved beyond static photography to develop an optical filter that allowed them to witness the phenomenon in real time; they saw miniature fireworks displays of light and colour playing around their hands.

Gradually, the Kirlians' activity began to attract attention from professional scientists. The couple made many photographs of the leaves of various plants. By 1949, it was determined that Kirlian photography could detect incipient plant disease that was not otherwise detectable.

In the same year, the Kirlians received a Soviet patent on their basic device, "a method of photographing by means of high-frequency currents."

Experimenting further upon themselves, the couple acquired the first results showing that Kirlian photography could provide an index of a person's physical health and illuminate the acupuncture points of the human body.

However, it was not until the early 1960s that the Kirlians' efforts attracted widespread recognition and official support once popular journalists wrote a series of newspaper and magazine articles about their photography.

Kirlian proposed and promoted the idea that the resulting images of living objects were a physical proof of the life force or aura which surrounds all living beings.

This claim was supported by experiments by the couple that involved cutting part of a leaf off. The Kirlian images still showed the leaves as whole, as though the cutting had never happened.

However, some researchers found that they were unable to reproduce the effect when the glass used to capture the original leaf was replaced with new glass before the freshly cut leaf was photographed.

This led them to conclude that the "cut leaf" phenomenon was caused by microscopic etching in the surface of the glass which occurred during preparing the images of the uncut leaf.

Later, the Kirlians were awarded a pension and provided with a pleasant new apartment and a well-equipped laboratory in Krasnodar.

Their first scientific paper on Kirlian photography was published in 1961 in the Russian "Journal of Scientific and Applied Photography." Scientific institutions around the former Soviet Union were set to work on Kirlian photography in 1962.

In a psychic book I read recently, mention was made of the appearance of apports. What are they? – Kevin McDonald, Portsmouth.

Apports are defined by "Collins English Dictionary" as "The production of objects by apparently supernatural means at a spiritualists' seance."

The word comes from the Latin "To carry." The Spiritualist interpretation would probably be "The arrival of various objects through an apparent penetration of matter with or without the aid of spirit entities." In other words, objects are somehow paranormally transported into seance rooms as spirit gifts.

These differ in size and may be of animate or inanimate matter. Instances have been cited where living birds and small animals were produced at seances with all the doors closed and locked.

In her book "Modern American Spiritualism," pioneer Victorian medium Emma Hardinge gives an account of the apport of a white dove. This happened in a circle called "The Olive Branch of Peace" in Boston, Mass.

Emma states that eleven reputable men attested to the fact that the room was sealed and examined before the phenomenon occurred.

Yolande, the beautiful spirit control of Mme de Esperance, was able to apport flowers and even fully-grown plants into the seance room under the strictest of test conditions.

There are many instances where apports, both large and small, have been projected into a seance. Some writers use the word "asport" when an object is paranormally taken out of the room.

After a seance given by the famous physical medium Ethel Post-Parrish, when the lights were switched on, "we discovered that a large vase filled with gladioli which had sat on the table in the middle of the room had entirely disappeared. It was later found in the lobby.

"We asked Silver Belle (the medium's control) about it on the following class night. The vase was of heavy pottery. To remove that and the gladioli seemed almost miraculous."

Silver Belle's reply was: "I told you that it was hard work and it was. You see the vase and the flowers were of different vibrations.

"I had to dematerialise the flowers first and then when I got them out in the lobby, I materialised them again. I then came back and on a different rate of vibration did the same with the vase. I put them together and set them on the table."

How is it done? There are several theories advanced by spirit operators who produce the phenomena. The most popular idea seems to be that of changing the vibration of the article to be apported.

We know that the status of matter is controlled by its rate of vibration. Science gives us three different states – gaseous, liquid and solid. The dense matter is slower in vibration than the lighter.

We also know, for instance, that water can be frozen and become solid matter. Heated until it boils, water turns into steam. But it is still matter. Only its rate of vibration has been changed.

Spirit operators know how to change the vibration of matter so that it may be passed through other matter. In other words, they dematerialise the article they wish to apport and in its new state are able to pass it through solid matter. They then materialise it again.

Mediums in the past who were well-known for producing apports include Charles Bailey, Kathleen Barkel and Estelle Roberts. Some of the objects were thousands of years old.

With all our knowledge, the production of an apport is still an intriguing mystery. There are many spirit manifestations that we cannot reconcile to earthly conditions – and perhaps we shall never be able to do so until we too manifest in a spiritual body!

What is kundalini? A friend mentioned it the other day, but I did not like to admit that I didn't really know what he was talking about! – Margaret Robinson, Liverpool.

Kundalini is a Sanskrit word meaning either "coiled up" or "coiling like a snake."

The symbol of coiling snakes is thought to be an ancient symbolic representation of kundalini physiology.

The concept of kundalini comes from the yogic philosophy of ancient India. According to the yogic tradition, kundalini is curled up in the back part of the root chakra in three and one half-turns around the sacrum.

This appearance is also referred to as "pranic awakening." Prana is interpreted as the vital, life-sustaining force in the body.

Within a western frame of understanding, it is often associated with contemplative or religious practices that might induce an altered state of consciousness brought about spontaneously through a type of yoga, via psychedelic drugs or a near-death experience.

Kundalini experiences are often understood in terms of the Hindu chakra system, the understanding of psycho-spiritual energy centres along the spine.

According to Hindu tradition, the kundalini rises from the root chakra up through the spinal channel. It is believed to activate the chakra it goes through. Each one is said to contain special characteristics.

In raising kundalini, spiritual powers are also believed to arise, but many traditions see these phenomena as obstacles on the path and encourage their students not to get hung up with them.

Spheres in the spirit world

BY JOHN WHEELER

Even if you did not like geography at school, we can guarantee that you will thoroughly enjoy this lesson about the various spheres to be found in the spirit lands.

A VERY interesting question is this – "When revisiting earth, does a spirit entity see material scenes and people as vividly as when in the body or are they seen only vaguely as through a veil?"

There is some difference of opinion about this, so I will give two opposing views. The first is that on entering earth conditions, a spirit entity has no difficulty in seeing familiar surroundings and recognising his loved ones. He is sometimes able, through a medium, to describe their movements and other personal matters.

The second view is that spirit people are aware of earth conditions and contact with mortals only through a blending of auras, but they do not intrude upon our privacy.

Instead they "read" the mental atmosphere around those in whom they are interested and learn such facts as they wish to acquire. To a spirit person not in such auric attunement, the earth appears as a mass of moving vapour and human forms are imperceptible.

It is very easy at times to forget how little the newcomer into Spiritualism may know regarding its terminology. Indeed, references to many things of the spirit are often worded by knowledgeable Spiritualists in terms which must sound almost like a foreign language to the uninitiated.

This fact was brought to my mind by a reader who wrote to me concerning a book she had read containing some details of what the spirit world is like.

She put these questions to me: "In pulling down one structure – the heaven of our childhood – with what do we replace it? Of what nature is the new structure?"

So, where is the spirit world? It is all around us, not away in some far distant location "beyond the clear blue sky" as the hymn has it.

Space is not an empty void. It contains a substance we call ether. In that dwell the so-called dead, living in a world as real and as solid to them as ours is to us.

This etheric world is a real place. It encircles and interpenetrates our earth as do the belts around the planets.

This etheric world is composed of spheres. One can liken them to the many skins of an onion, one upon the other, ever outwards, with the earth as centre.

The first of these spheres, usually referred to as the astral world, is just outside or beyond the earth's surface. It is into this astral world all souls go after departing from earth life, some to dwell there for an indefinite time, others to pass quickly through it to the next sphere beyond.

The astral-world conditions are very similar to those of earth – it is only one step removed, after all. There are houses, vegetation, animals, birds and many other familiar things.

The inhabitants are primarily people of unprogressed or limited evolution who still retain the desires, virtues and vices they had on earth. Some find it so much like the earth they have left that they cannot realise and accept they have left it.

The second sphere is a world of more advanced though still limited evolution. The inhabitants are more intellectual, but still restricted by a retention of earth ideas. Animals, birds and vegetation also abound there.

Then comes the third sphere, the Summerland, a term familiar to all Spiritualists. This is the family sphere.

Pet animals and birds are more numerous; flowers and fruit grow in rich luxuriance; there are pleasant houses and gardens. It is the principal sphere of children, where they receive their education on arriving from earth.

The fourth sphere is sometimes called the philosopher's sphere. Birds of rare beauty are found here.

The spirit people dwell together in brotherhoods, devoting their time to intellectual, artistic and ascetic pursuits. They are practically disconnected with the affairs of earth.

So to the fifth sphere – the advanced and contemplative spirit world – and a plane of great beauty with flowers and foliage highly developed in form and colouring.

The inhabitants devote their time and effort to contemplation and aspiration, and helping those in the lower spheres.

Then, we are told, comes the love sphere, the sixth. Everything here is of a rarefied nature, as in the seventh, the Christ sphere, a world of such dazzling and crystalline a nature, with an atmosphere so rarefied that long years must elapse before man's soul is fitted to dwell there.

This, then, is an attempt to describe the "geography" of the spirit world. I have given it as detailed by discarnate beings who claim to have knowledge and experience of such conditions.

I know it has to be admitted that accounts vary as to conditions in the spirit world. But would not that be a truism of this earth also?

Ask two people to describe a place and whilst they may agree in the main, they will most likely differ vastly in many of the smaller details. So let us not be too analytical, but accept individually what appeals to our reason and reject the rest.

Where did we get to? We learned that the spirit spheres are ranged in a series of bands forming a number of concentric circles around the earth.

These circles reach out into the infinity of space and are invisibly linked with the earth world in its lesser revolution upon its axis.

With the spirit world thus encircling the earth, we are told that the spheres are subdivided laterally to correspond with the various nations of the earth, each subdivision being situated immediately over its kindred nation.

This indicates clearly how the spheres are extensions of our world, and how each will bear the characteristics of its earthly counterpart.

We are further informed that this dividing of nations extends only to a certain number of spirit realms. Beyond that, nationality, as such, ceases to be, and the peoples residing there retain only their outer appearances.

Each sphere has its ruler, or president, all of whom belong to a more advanced sphere than that over which they preside.

Whilst we try to absorb these facts, we must keep continually in mind that this etheric world is not composed of physical matter, as is our earth.

It is of a finer substance composed of atoms that differ from those that make up our world, though equally as tangible and real.

It is a world of higher vibrations and where the power of thought is far more effective than here. Indeed, it is thought creative in the fullest sense, with its processes speeded up so that their effects are instantaneous.

A WARM WELCOME TO ALL WHO ENTER

Seance solves mystery of famous explorer

BY MAURICE BARBANELL

MESSAGES from the spirit world have solved one of the world's greatest mysteries – the fate of Colonel P. H. Fawcett, the famous explorer who vanished in the heart of a Brazilian jungle.

For years there were rumours, speculations and theories. But none of these was the key to a riddle which set thousands guessing. Expeditions were sent to locate him, but met with no success.

Is Fawcett still alive? Is he held captive by tribes? Has he lost his memory? Has he chosen to end his days living a life, which even at the best, is only fit for animals?

These questions have been asked again and again, but no one could give an authoritative answer.

I can reveal that Fawcett is dead. He passed on in 1935, and has communicated that fact at seances.

The dramatic story of Fawcett begins in the early summer of 1925, when, with his son Jack, and a young Englishman named Raleigh Rimell, he led an expedition into the heart of Brazil to explore unknown territory, the Central Brazilian Plateau.

From the time they left the last outpost of civilisation, no word reached the outside world – except for spirit messages given at seances.

Fawcett's expedition into this unknown and dangerous terrain was surrounded with romance and glamour, for its object was to discover a lost city of the South American continent, believed to have been one of the chief cradles of prehistoric civilisation.

Then probably less was known of the interior of Matto Grosso, the scene of his search, than about any other inhabited area of equal size in the world.

Fantastic tales had been told about these mystery regions. They include stories of buried cities, hidden treasures, wealthy mines of gold and silver, and prehistoric beasts.

Fawcett's imagination was stirred by these accounts of the ruins of a lost world. He wrote that its whereabouts were known, as far as "the general location and surrounding topography are concerned," to three men.

"One was a Frenchman, whose last attempt to get there cost him an eye," said Fawcett, "and it is probable he will make no more efforts.

"The second was an Englishman, who before he left the country was suffering from an advanced stage of cancer and is probably no longer alive. The third is the writer."

Fawcett was determined to reach his goal. As an explorer, he had achieved world fame, but kept very quiet about his ambitious plans and set out on April 20, 1925, with his two companions and two guides.

On May 29, they reached a place called Dead Horse Camp, where, on a previous expedition five years earlier, one of Fawcett's animals had died.

The explorer sent a dispatch and promised further messages from time to time. These he hoped to send by making use of a friendly tribe of Indians.

From the time he reached the edge of the dangerous and unknown country, nothing more was heard of the intrepid explorer. His expedition never returned.

Fawcett expected to be away for twenty months. When, after that time, nothing was heard of him, the world wondered about his fate.

Friends made inquiries of the Brazilian government, who replied that their officials in the interior had failed to trace Fawcett and that it was feared he and his party had perished.

Even after this official notification, his wife refused to give up hope and declared she was sure her husband was still alive. Then mysterious stories began to appear in the newspapers.

In 1927, a Brazilian engineer named Robert Courteville reported that he had met Fawcett about 170 miles from the capital of Matto Grosso.

Fawcett, he said, was shaking with fever and his legs were terribly bitten by mosquitoes. The explorer seemed to resent Courteville's interference, so they parted.

At that time, the Brazilian engineer did not know that there was any mystery concerning Fawcett's disappearance. When he was told the facts, he said he would organise a search party and bring him back to civilisation. This expedition never materialised.

In 1928, a relief expedition was financed by an American newspaper syndicate. This was led by Commander George Dyott. They followed Fawcett's three-year-old trail, starting from Dead Horse Camp until reaching a village of Anauqua Indians.

There Dyott found a chief's son, who had swinging round his neck a small brass plate stamped with the name of a firm which had supplied Fawcett with some airtight cases in 1924.

From the inhabitants of this village the new expedition gleaned news of Fawcett. They learned that Fawcett had rested there with his two companions, both lame and exhausted. Then Fawcett had pushed on into unknown country.

The Indians said that for five days they saw smoke from the fires of Fawcett's expedition as it blazed its way through the tall grass.

On the sixth day, no smoke was to be seen, so they assumed that tragedy had overcome the gallant band. Fawcett and his companions must have been murdered, declared the Indians.

Dyott was then within four or five days' march from the place where Fawcett was supposed to have met his death.

Although he made a long search, Dyott could find no evidence of the suggested tragedy. He returned in 1928, unable to throw any light on the mystery of Colonel Fawcett, unable to say whether he were alive or dead.

In June, 1932, I was present at a direct voice seance with Estelle Roberts as the medium. I was surprised to hear one of the spirit communicators talk about Colonel Fawcett.

This spirit visitor told a friend of mine, Alice Liddell, that he wished to confirm what he had said at an earlier seance about Colonel Fawcett being a prisoner. Fawcett was mentally well, he said, but physically ill.

I asked Mrs Liddell whether she had received any previous communication concerning the fate of Fawcett. "Yes," she replied and told me these facts.

Mrs Liddell was a friend of Mrs Fawcett. Two years earlier, at one of these voice seances, she asked a spirit communicator – the same one who spoke to her when I was there – if he knew who she was meeting the following Sunday.

"Yes," he replied, "the wife of the explorer – Mrs Fawcett." This was correct, but not known to the medium. Then, in response to her questions, she was told that Fawcett had found the lost city.

In 1933, Mrs Fawcett had a seance with Estelle Roberts. She was taken anonymously by E. A. Reeves, former Map Curator and Instructor in Surveying to the Royal Geographical Society.

Reeves, a friend of many explorers, knew Fawcett very well, for he was one of his first students at the Royal Geographical Society.

Just before Fawcett started on his last journey, he came with his son to see Reeves and to say goodbye. They had often discussed psychic matters.

Although Mrs Fawcett was not introduced by name to Estelle Roberts, Red Cloud, her spirit guide, revealed that he knew who she was, for he addressed her as "little Fawcett lady."

Red Cloud told Mrs Fawcett that her son had passed on, but her husband was then still alive. "He is an advanced psychic," said the guide.

His wife understood the reference, for Fawcett had made a great study of occultism in India and in Ceylon, and was known to be a "mystic" by many of his friends.

At subsequent seances, Reeves received spirit communications from Fawcett not only through Estelle Roberts, but through two other mediums. These clearly proved that Fawcett had passed on.

When Reeves told me, I arranged for a special seance with Estelle Roberts, so that I could talk to Red Cloud and learn from him what had happened to Fawcett during all the years of his long silence.

"I was talking to Fawcett in my world," said the spirit guide to me. Then he referred to the occasion when Mrs Fawcett came for a sitting.

"I told her then that her husband was in the jungle, living amongst the people," said the guide. "He travelled up-country, inland, after sending to his wife a necklet, which she sent to a museum.

"For a number of years he dwelt with a tribe who looked upon him as their king, a gentle, loving soul whom they worshipped and looked up to. They endeavoured to learn the white man's magic, as they called it.

"He dwelt more or less as a prisoner with them and found it difficult to get away, so he endeavoured to become reconciled and to learn the magic which they knew, understood and practised.

"Thus he sent many mental messages to his wife and to others whom he contacted."

This was a reference to Fawcett's occult powers, for many people have spoken of receiving telepathic messages from the missing explorer. Indeed, I had one strange experience of Fawcett's powers.

At a seance, one at which I obtained some remarkable spirit photographs, I was amazed to receive a picture of Colonel Fawcett. His face appeared physically on one negative at a time when he had not passed on! It was a striking demonstration of the explorer's psychic powers.

Red Cloud told me of Fawcett's sufferings. "He had various bouts of fever," I was informed, "caused by the humid and dense atmosphere in the jungle, the habits of the people and the insects.

"Although he recovered once or twice from the fever, it left its mark on his physical body. It was this fever that caused his passing into my world.

"Fawcett's frame had become emaciated owing to the difficulties and privations he had experienced.

"Since I spoke to Reeves, Fawcett has endeavoured to communicate with him again." This statement was later confirmed by Reeves.

When I asked Red Cloud about the explorer's psychic picture, he said it was received at the time when Fawcett's spirit body was beginning to leave its physical counterpart, getting ready for the process of dying.

Reeves told me an interesting story. In 1932, he attended a public seance for psychometry given by Estelle Roberts.

Articles were handed to the medium, who gave psychic delineations based on the association of the objects with their owners. Reeves took with him a small pocket aneroid barometer which Fawcett had carried on an earlier expedition to Brazil.

There was nothing on it to say to whom it belonged. Reeves kept the secret to himself and in fact only made his choice an hour or two before the seance.

As she handled the article, the medium said she thought the owner had carried the instrument abroad.

He had been to Africa, but later gone to some other wild part where there was a lot of smallish people, dark in colour, running about quite naked.

Then Estelle saw the owner with another man, walking in high pampas grass, with a pack on his back, wearing a brimmed hat and shorts.

He was of strong character, but of a restless disposition, she said, did not like civilised life and could not settle down in England.

Now all of this fitted Fawcett perfectly, although the medium could normally have known nothing about it.

But when Estelle Roberts went on to say that the owner of the article suffered from a bad leg, Reeves shook his head.

Later he discovered that Fawcett's horse had fallen on him and seriously injured the muscles of his leg.

When he turned up the "Geographical Journal," he found that Courteville stated that when he met Fawcett, the explorer was dressed in shorts and wore a wide-brimmed hat!

At the end of the seance, Estelle Roberts said that Fawcett had passed on and was anxious to get into touch with Reeves.

A few months later, however, when Reeves went to hear Red Cloud give a trance address, the guide corrected his medium's mistake and said that Fawcett had not passed on.

Using his psychic powers, the explorer had projected his spirit body. The medium had confused this astral travelling with the appearance of the spirit after death.

Later came the spirit messages from Fawcett, telling of his own passing into the Beyond.

Lighten your load through life!

BY M. H. TESTER

Below, spirit healer M. H. Tester explains why he believes that a spiritual revival is long overdue and offers some excellent advice on lightening one's load through life.

THIS is a sick world. Ask any doctor or healer, or look at the statistics of sickness, disabilities and terminal diseases.

Not only are we suffering from physical sickness, but there is also an epidemic in the western world of spiritual ailments.

The time is ripe for a spiritual revival. God knows, we need one right now. Selfishness, greed, the lust for power, the target of personal gain irrespective of the cost – these are the symptoms of this ailment.

Many illnesses respond to the old-fashioned remedies. Let me list some that may cure the sickness from which our society now suffers.

The first – and perhaps the most important initial step we can take – is to re-establish the home and the family as an essential social and economic unit. The words "home" and "family" should be indivisible.

Home is a sharing, loving and working unit. It is the lowest social and economic unit in the national scale. Yet it is the most important.

Home is where mother and father bring up children in a harmonious atmosphere, where they feel a sense of belonging, where everybody in the family is secure, wanted and loved.

The most powerful way of influencing children is by example. Home is the place where you demonstrate how to live, how to cope with problems, how to share pleasures and pain, and where you can see the magnificent power of love at work.

The second precept is to teach your children always to do their best and to show them by your own example just how to do this.

It is right that at some time you ask for help. You can ask your parents, brothers or sisters for help. You can ask your friends or professional associates.

You can ask God, whatever you conceive Him to be, for help. But only after you have done your very best and are satisfied in your heart that this is so.

"Ask and ye shall receive." This is true. But you have to become receptive – and the way to do this is to do your very best in any circumstances.

If you have a task to perform invariably, do it as well as you can. Try and stand on your own two feet.

Work at it. Then, and only then, ask for help. For then, and only then, have you put yourself in a position to receive it.

There is a symptom of the social and spiritual sickness that engulfs all levels of society. This is the assumption that work is a drudge. There are people who would rather accept national assistance than work.

Meanwhile, there are thousands of others who get up every morning and hate the idea of going to work. How wrong they are!

Hard work is good for you. Early retirement brings early death. This is not a theory. There is ample statistical proof. There is no way any man or woman can live a full, happy life in idleness. It is just not possible.

We need to work. We need to be fully, gainfully and interestingly occupied. Work is an essential element to a full and long life.

You may be doing a job you hate. That is bad for you. Change your attitude or change your job. You may not find this easy. Why should it be? Anything that is too easy is probably not worth doing, anyhow.

You may find that the new job pays less. No matter. Find a job you like and enjoy – and the rewards will be immeasurable.

These are simple, well-tried methods. You may even say they are old-fashioned. Perhaps they are. Perhaps all great truths are old.

There is nothing new. Everything has been known before. But these rules of living have been forgotten and the sickness of society is the proof.

If there is a common denominator among the sick who come to me for healing it is that most of them are muddled thinkers. They are not fools. Nor are they uneducated.

My patients are a good, representative, cross-section of the community. Some are educated to a high standard. Many are well read. All have the knowledge and ability to analyse their troubles. None of them do.

One of the most common muddles is about prayer. People think that if they pray hard enough, in the right manner and in the correct place, God will listen.

He will see where He was unjust, where He went wrong and who deserves better treatment than He meted out.

He will then reorganise things so you win the football pools, enjoy robust health and have all your problems solved. This is rubbish. God plays no favourites. You have an equal opportunity with everybody else to draw on the enormous power available. What you do with it is up to you.

Another example of muddled thinking is that ill-health is a punishment for something. Patients feel guilt. They think their aches, pains and disabilities are there because they have done something wrong and are being punished. This, too, is utter nonsense.

You have free will. The way you behave is up to you. You have a free choice. You punish yourself when you go against the natural laws and principles.

Any fool can profit from his successes. It takes a wise man to profit from his losses. We all make mistakes. From these we learn.

Practise looking for the lesson. Whenever anything happens which you regard as bad, look for the good. Look for the lesson this teaches you. It is a part of the university of evolution we call life.

For your life here is merely that – an education. You know when it starts. The end of term is also known. So is the syllabus.

What you do, the lessons you learn, your behaviour here and the extent to which you benefit by the course – like that at any other college – is up to you.

Again like any other course, from time to time you have examinations or tests to see how you are getting on. The experiences you have, and the problems you must face, comprise these tests.

Try and meet them constructively. When you have met them philosophically, you will see the good they do not only to you, but also to the people around you.

Get out of the habit of blaming outside circumstances for the things that do not happen to you. Do not seek an alibi. A disability is there to be overcome. A weakness has been given you to see how you cope with it.

Turn every disadvantage to an advantage. Develop your ability to link with the great power around you to overcome it.

The price you have to pay to earn your share of the health, wealth and happiness waiting for you in this world is the effort to control your attitude, thinking and actions so that they comply with the spiritual philosophy common to all great religious teachers.

Resolve today to go forward and never to look back. Be optimistic at all times. Replace negative thoughts with positive ones.

Fear nothing. Supplant worry with faith. Never surrender to despair or discouragement. Live each day to the full. Learn to draw on the great power available to you.

Are you carrying a burden? Does it seem too heavy? It is probably three times heavier than it need be!

Imagine you have a pack on your back. It is a great weight. You have to carry it a long way. It is becoming too much for you. Then you meet a man who stands in your path and laughs at your discomfort.

He examines your load and quickly shows you that two-thirds of it is unnecessary packaging material. He helps you discard it.

Then when you lift the now-lightened burden on your shoulders again, he shows you the road is much shorter than you imagined. You thought it was many miles. It is only a few yards.

With a burden only one-third its previous weight, and a journey much shorter than you anticipated, you go on your way whistling.

I am the man. This is our meeting. Stop! Put down your load. Let us look at it together.

Part of the weight you carry is the past. Remorse, regret, sadness, longing and guilt for the past. Throw it out. Forget it. Nothing you can do can alter anything in the past. It is finished, done with, over – throw it out!

Dry your eyes, put aside your remorse and stop blaming yourself. Feeling better? Of course you are. Your load is already one-third lighter.

Let us examine it again. You are over-concerned for the future. You worry about what might happen to you, your money or your family. You are filled with apprehension. Throw it out!

The future is not here yet. When it arrives we will deal with it. Until then listen to the words of Albert Einstein. He was a clever man.

"I never think of the future," he said. "It comes soon enough." Yet Einstein was only repeating what many men had said many times before.

We find in Matthew VI, 34, "Take therefore no thought for the morrow; for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself."

I am convinced that the things we worry about most never happen. You may die in your sleep tonight. There may be no tomorrow.

If it does come, it could be radiant with hope, happiness and fulfilment. When it comes, deal with it. Until then do no think of it. Cast out fear, apprehension, worry and dread.

This is two-thirds of your burden gone. The load that is left is light and easy to bear. All you have to carry is the present.

What about the road ahead? Is it not a long one? No. It is short, very short. Let me show you. Your journey stops tonight. All you have to do is carry the burden of the present for one day only.

Tomorrow does not yet exist. Tomorrow you may be in the next world. Tomorrow never comes. Today is all that there is. Until today ends, that is the length of your road.

When you awake in the morning, thank God for today. Resolve to do your best with it. When it is over, give thanks again for it. Forget it and go to sleep.

Your road is short. Your burden is only a third of what it was. Step out with a light heart. Today you met a man who lightened your load and shortened your journey. It has been my privilege.

Heavenly howlers out of the mouths of babes...

WISE WORDS FROM THE WEB SELECTED BY VANESSA ATTWOOD

■ Three-year-old Reese: "Our Father, Who does art in heaven, Harold is His name. Amen."

■ A little girl was overheard praying. "Lord, if you can't make me a better girl, don't worry about it," she said. "I'm having a really good time like I am!"

■ A Sunday school class was studying the Ten Commandments. Pupils were ready to discuss the last one when the teacher asked if anyone could tell her what it was.

Susie raised her hand, stood tall and replied, "Thou shall not take the covers off the neighbour's wife."

■ After the christening of his baby brother in church, Jason sobbed all the way home in the back seat of the car. His father asked him three times what was wrong.

Finally, the boy replied, "That preacher said he wanted us brought up in a Christian home, but I want to stay with you guys."

■ I had been teaching Caitlin, my three-year-old daughter, the Lord's Prayer for several evenings. At bedtime, she would repeat the lines after me. Finally, she decided to go solo.

I listened with pride as she carefully enunciated each word right up to the end of the prayer.

"Lead us not into temptation," she urged, "but deliver us some e-mail."

■ As they were on their way to a service, a Sunday school teacher asked her children "And why is it necessary to be quiet in church?" One bright little girl replied, "Because people are sleeping."

■ Six-year-old Angie and her four-year-old brother Joel were sitting together in church. Joel giggled, sang and talked out loud.

Finally, his big sister had had enough and told him "You're not supposed to talk out loud in church."

"Why?" Joel asked. "Who's going to stop me?"

Angie pointed to the back of the church and said, "The hushers!"

■ A father was at the beach with his children when his four-year-old son ran up to him, grabbed his hand and led him to the shore where a seagull lay "dead" in the sand.

"Daddy, what happened to him?" the son asked. "He died and went to heaven," his father replied.

The boy thought a moment and then added, "Did God throw him back down?"

■ A couple invited several people to dinner. At the table, the wife turned to their six-year-old daughter and asked, "Would you like to say the blessing?"

"I wouldn't know what to say," the girl replied.

"Just repeat what you hear your mummy say," suggested one of the guests.

The daughter bowed her head and said, "Lord, why on earth did I invite all these people to dinner?"

A MAN was walking down a deserted Mexican beach at sunset. As he happily ambled along, he saw someone else in the distance.

Getting nearer, he noticed that the other man kept leaning down, picking something up and throwing it out into the water. Time and again he hurled something into the ocean.

As our friend approached even closer, he noticed that the man was picking up starfish that had washed up onto the beach. One at a time, he threw them back into the ocean.

The first man was puzzled. He approached the man and said: "Good evening, friend. I was wondering what are you doing."

"I am throwing these starfish back into the ocean," came the reply. "You see, it's low tide right now and all these starfish have been washed up onto the shore.

"If I don't throw them back into the sea, they will die."

"I understand," the questioner replied,

"but there must be thousands of starfish on this beach and you couldn't possibly get to all of them. There are simply too many.

"Don't you realise that this is happening on hundreds of beaches up and down this coast? Can't you see that that you cannot possibly make a difference?"

The local man smiled, bent down and picked up yet another starfish. As he threw it back out into the sea, he replied, "Well, it sure made a big difference to that one!"

The moral is simple. You may feel as if you cannot make a difference in the world, but you can make a difference in one life at a time.

A WOMAN came out of her house and saw three old men with long white beards sitting in her front yard. She did not recognise them.

"I don't think I know you, but you must be hungry," she said. "Please come in and have something to eat."

"Is the man of the house at home?" they asked.

"No," she said. "He is out."

"Then we cannot come in," they replied.

In the evening when her husband came home, she told him what had happened. "Go and tell them I am home and invite them in," he said. The woman went out and did so.

"We do not go into a house together," the men explained. "Why is that?" the wife wanted to know.

One of the old men replied, saying, "His name is Wealth," pointing to one of his friends.

Indicating another one, he added: "He is Success and I am Love. Now go in and discuss with your husband which one of us you want in your home."

The woman went in and told her husband what was said. Her husband was overjoyed.

"How nice!" he said. "Since that is the case, let us invite Wealth. Let him come and fill our home with wealth!" His wife disagreed, saying, "Why don't we invite Success?"

The couple's daughter-in-law was listening from a corner of the house. She jumped in with her own suggestion.

"Would it not be better to invite Love?" she asked. "Our home will then be filled with love!"

"Let us heed our daughter-in-law's advice," said the husband to his wife. "Go out and invite Love to be our guest."

The woman did so and asked the three old men: "Which one of you is Love? Please come in and be our guest."

Love got up and started walking towards the house. Just then, the other two also got up and followed him.

Surprised, the wife asked Wealth and Success, "I only invited Love, so why are you coming in?"

Together, the old men replied: "If you had invited Wealth or Success, the other two of us would have stayed out.

"But since you invited Love, wherever he goes, we go with him. Wherever there is Love, there is also Wealth and Success."

TODAY, I will not strike back. If someone is rude, impatient or unkind, I will not respond in a like manner.

Today, I will ask God to bless my "enemy." If I come across someone who treats me harshly or unfairly, I will quietly ask God to bless that individual. I understand that the "enemy" could be a family member, neighbour, colleague or stranger.

Today, I will be careful about what I say. I will carefully choose and guard my words, being certain that I do not spread gossip, hurt or harm.

Today, I will go the extra mile and find ways to help share the burden of another person.

Today, I will forgive any hurts or injuries that come my way.

Today, I will do something nice for someone, but secretly. I will reach out anonymously and bless the life of another.

Today, I will treat others the way I wish to be treated. I will practise the golden rule "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you" with everyone I encounter.

Today, I will raise the spirits of someone who is discouraged. My smile, words and expression of support can make the difference to someone who is wrestling with life.

Today, I will nurture my body. I will eat less and choose only healthy foods. I will thank God for my body.

Today, I will grow spiritually. I shall spend a little more time in prayer, meditation or quiet thought.

"The Art of Being Psychic." By June-Elleni Laine. Paperback. 146 pages. £12.99, plus p and p of £1.65 UK, £2.75 Europe and £4.35 rest of the world. O Books.

WHY do some beliefs turn out to be nonsense and others all too true? Similarly, why do some stubbornly believe that God is helping them even when disaster strikes while others can consciously open themselves to spirit guidance?

Here's one answer – it all depends on which side of the brain is being used, the left or the right.

In 1981, Roger Sperry won a Nobel Prize for work on the human brain. He revealed that it is divided into left and right hemispheres, each with very different skills. They can function almost independently.

The left is the rational, deliberative part. It likes to be in control. It not only pontificates on what it does know, or thinks it knows, but also tends to reject what it doesn't know. A decision reached in this way is often what the world calls a belief.

The right is the intuitive part. It has the capacity to decipher information that the left would find irrational or haphazard and make sense of it. Psychic impressions and spirit communications often come like this.

Earlier in her life, June-Elleni Laine experienced the power of both. As a fashion designer, she found she could bypass the normal thinking process and work psychically.

The result? June-Elleni's designs flowed rapidly and more freely. They were also more successful and sold better!

Next, curious about possible life after death, June-Elleni visited a psychic artist. Both the portrait of her "dead" grandfather and the reading were evidential, but the left brain just could not accept them. It put up a barrier that brought about closure.

"Now I see," she writes, "that no matter what details were given, it wouldn't have made any difference. Until I was ready, I couldn't believe."

In most of us, one side of the brain is dominant. Those with a dominant left generally lead well ordered if somewhat clinical lives. Meanwhile, others with a dominant right tend to be more inspirational, but less well ordered – and even chaotic.

June-Elleni's solution was that ideally the left brain should be taught to co-operate with the right. Hence she developed the "Five-Step Technique" for obtaining information by psychic means.

This involves perception, awareness, acknowledgement, intention and validation. It is designed to achieve harmony, develop psychic awareness and validate the information received.

June-Elleni has also devised tests to show the habitual thought patterns of the left brain and its tendency to interfere or show a lack of perception. For instance, one illustration shows a star on the side of a cube. Is it at the back or on the top? It depends on how it is viewed.

Neither view is more right than the other is, but to see only one would be literally to perceive half the picture. There are also illusions in which lines of apparently unequal length are found to be equal.

Exercises follow in opening and closing the chakras, memory and psychic perception.

The author subsequently developed as a psychic artist and now teaches at the College of Psychic Studies in London, where the book was launched.

June-Elleni's spirit-inspired pictures show a remarkable accuracy. One featured in the book is of a man in his prime at the time of the First World War. Beside it is a contemporary photograph. They are virtually identical down to the hair parting, eyebrows and moustache.

If this isn't evidence, what is? It would be a very determined left brain that would attempt to explain away this one, especially when at the time the sitter did not know who he was!

What I like about this book is the practical help it gives. For instance, I am a little psychic, but not enough to be of much practical use.

Until I began these exercises, I did not realise the extent to which the left brain had been interfering. It accepted psychic evidence from others, but apparently objected to the right producing any itself.
