Two Worlds Are One

BY TONY ORTZEN

WHEN it comes to art, I'm a complete philistine. Yes, it does have a lower case 'P' according to my dictionary, which defines the term as "a person deficient in liberal culture... uncultured."

No matter where, no matter whose works are on display, you won't find me traipsing around some old art gallery. Here's one who holds the appalling view that any picture worth its weight in canvas will end up on a chocolate box or jigsaw puzzle.

That said, I do like the works of John Constable, which are so relaxing and soothing upon the soul.

Anyway, I was sad to read the other day that a village he painted is now so overrun by yobs and vandals that residents have decided to pay for their own policing. So it is that Dedham Parish Council in Essex has agreed to pay half the cost of funding a police community support officer to patrol the village's streets for at least 30 hours a week.

On the same day that I came across that report, the government decided to announce a shake-up in the education system.

Education secretary Alan Johnson has insisted that extra emphasis should be put on various aspects of the curriculum, such as climate change life skills, cooking, healthy lifestyles and financial literacy. There will also be a move to replace European languages with others such as Mandarin and Arabic.

As I have said before, what is lacking in schools is any true notion of spirituality. The Spiritualists' National Union (SNU) has a grand set of principles. Amongst them are the brotherhood of man, personal responsibility and eternal progress open to every human soul.

These are the kind of principles which should be drummed into the little horrors – at home, at school, at everywhere.

At the risk of sounding unspiritual, I get thoroughly sick and tired of social workers, academics and do-gooders prattling on defending riff-raff youngsters who have turned so many towns and villages into drunken no-go areas with their loutish behaviour.

Me? I'd give 'em all detention and make them write out the SNU's princi-

We Never Said Goodbye

By Jenna Kirby

This is a true story of a love that refused to die.
This book is a testimony to all those grieving souls who believe they will never see their loved ones again. Do not believe it! It is not true!
Have you lost a loved one? Has a soul mate left you behind? Do you want to know where they are? Are you interested in where you are going when you die and leave the Earth plane? Yes! Then this book has been written especially for you.
Your loved ones never leave you. They have just gone ahead to a truly wondrous place, full of beauty, warmth and light. A place where there is no darkness, hatred, or greed unless that's how you want to live.
Be patient, my friends, you will be going there when it is your allotted time to leave this dreary Earth. And your beloved ones will be waiting, with hearts full of love and arms open wide to welcome you.
May God's peace, love and healing light be forever with you until eternity and beyond.

Readers comment: "I could not put the book down." "This book is a moving story written with courage and honesty rarely found today."

'We Never Said Goodbye' is available from J. Kirby, care of 'Two Worlds' at PO Box 55307, London SE16 6WW. Please make cheques payable to J. Kirby. The book is £8.50, including postage and packing within the UK. All copies personally signed by the author

EITHER I am going soft in the head or the Archbishop of Canterbury is speaking more sense. I prefer to think it's the latter option.

I really do believe that the government has gone out of its cotton-picking head with plans for a supercasino in Manchester and others dotted around the country.

In this earthly life of ours, you don't often get something for nothing. Although a liberal in certain areas, I don't back gambling or a casino culture.

No, I am not talking about wasting one pound on the lottery every week. But what I do dislike is the notion that gambling brings instant riches or, indeed, any riches at all except for the few.

Back to the archbishop, who said that the proposed supercasino would lead to "imprisonments for the soul."

Rejecting the idea that the Manchester-based casino would contribute to regeneration, Dr Rowan Williams added, "I am very concerned that we cannot think of better ways of regenerating deprived areas by developing institutions which may well contribute to the material and spiritual deprivation of the area in the long run."

Not far behind, the Bishop of Manchester, the Right Rev Nigel McCulloch, thought that problem gambling would escalate with "an increase in addiction and knock-on effects in terms of violence and family breakdown." I fear that he, too, is correct.

AS a strict vegetarian bordering on the vegan, I always shudder when shopping and seeing battery hen eggs and factory farm chickens in someone's basket. Seems to me that too many people neither think nor care about the suffering these poor creatures endure.

At the time of writing, avian flu has just broken out at a turkey farm in Suffolk owned by Bernard Matthews.

On TV, the turkeys' huts looked a bit like concentration camps to me, though I have no doubt whatsoever that Mr Matthews' company rigidly follows all the many rules and regulations regarding factory farming.

Apparently, at the farm in question, the 22 sheds each contained almost 7,000 turkeys.

What also upset me was the way various people on TV referred to the turkey "industry" and the poor birds as "crops." Hang on a minute; we're talking about living, breathing, sentient creatures, not a field of oats or corn.

Man's inhumanity to man knows little limits. Man's inhumanity to animals knows even less.

Like us, animals, no matter what their status, survive physical death, for they are also imbued with that vital spark of spirit which nothing can vanquish...

'The power of the spirit'

WISDOM FROM THE WORLD BEYOND

As last month's magazine explained, we decided to take a short break from serialising David Gow's book "Ask The Spirits" and feature some Silver Birch teachings instead.

There soon followed requests for more! Happy to oblige, here are some further points to ponder from Silver Birch.

YOUR world is full of difficulties and problems. It is a sad world, a drear and violent world in which too many have lost their sense of values and their priorities. There is a great war raging between the forces of good and darkness.

It is on instruments like you and others that we rely to stand fast and firm when the challenges come, to meet them by calling on the powers within that you possess and even greater powers that are at your disposal, and to triumph over every obstacle and handicap that comes your way.

In the many years in which I have been privileged to serve you, I have seen that however dark the shadows loom, they prove to be only shadows obscuring temporarily the eternal sun that is always there.

If only the people of your world, especially those who have the knowledge of spiritual realities, could see beyond the senses of matter and realise what is round and about them, they would never worry.

Matter is an obstacle; matter is heavy, leaden, dull. Spirit is light, delicate, sensitive. You have to use five physical senses through which the divine spirit can express itself.

It is like the violinist who has a poor instrument on which to play. He has within his soul the most inspired music, but the instrument is restricted and cannot convey it.

Your bodies are dull clods of earth. Yet these are the only means through which the spirit can express itself.

There are times when, apart from your personal conditions, the atmosphere surrounding you, and the earth on which you live, are full of hatred and violence, which does not make it easy for the spirit to penetrate.

This mass of obstacles surrounding your world presents a very grim picture when we approach it.

The difficulty is that you in your world would like us to produce the results in your way and in your time. But we cannot do that. We can only do it in our way and in our time.

Because our vision is more extended, I think it is true to say that we are the better judges of what is best for you. The worst thing that could happen to a lot of people would be if their prayers were answered.

The Great Spirit has no physical hands other than those which you provide. You are the tools for the operation of spirit power in your world.

Be open; be receptive; try to clear your minds of preconceived ideas. Be imbued with a desire to serve. In that spirit, you will attract all the help that is necessary for the service you have to render.

Keep radiant, optimistic and cheerful. Try never to allow yourself to be downcast.

The best atmosphere in which we can work, help and guide is one in which there is no gloom, no despondency, no despair. All these blanket the aura and create obstacles that have to be surmounted.

Punishment and reward are both due to what you inflict on yourselves. You make your own punishment. You make your own reward. This is cause and effect, sowing and reaping. The sequence is immutable.

It is never a bed of roses for those who have to serve. Even the most beautiful roses have thorns. In the attainment of spiritual mastery the road to be travelled is a hard one. As you walk along it, so gradually familiar landmarks have to be left behind.

The greater the mission that is to be performed, the greater the challenges that will be met. It cannot be any other way.

More is expected from those who have the gifts of the spirit, the perception to understand their implications, than others who do not possess these talents and are unaware of anything in your world except its surface.

I do not have to tell you and others that we always render service for service and that those who serve are not overlooked.

I cannot always convey it to you in the fashion that you would like, but we strive to instruct you so that it is conveyed to you in the fashion that you would prefer for your sake.

INNER VISIONS

We are a new organisation set up to broadcast the views and understandings of the spirit realms. Through the vehicle of spiritual mediumship, we wish to demonstrate there is life after physical death. Using the vehicle of trance, we wish to discuss in an open forum the workings of the unseen world By direct contact with those in the spirit world, we hope this will result in diminishing our fear of death as well as issues relating to low self-esteem and lack of confidence.

Overcoming such fears will allow you to achieve your earthy goals in an atmosphere of internal peace and harmony Eddie Martin, through his spirit friends Wan-chi-Lin, Julius, Tommy and Raj, will provide spiritual knowledge and wisdom. John Alexander will through his mediumship provide proof of survival. Our next demonstration of spirit communication will be held at Chessington Parish Hall,
220 Leatherhead Road, Chessington, Surrey KT9 2NB
on Saturday, April 28, 2007 at 7.00 pm
Tickets: £10 available in advance or at the door

A weekend workshop dedicated to spiritual mediumship, trance, trance healing and myofascial pathway healing will be held at the T&G Conference Centre, Eastbourne from 5-8 October, 2007

For further information regarding these events and other activities being planned, please contact us on 020-8570 1721 or 020-8715 3149.

It is better to raise you to our level than for us to come down to yours. This, after all, is the whole object of what we try to teach and the ideals we strive to inspire in you and others so that they can fulfil themselves.

I know it is not an easy path, but the captains in the army of the spirit must not expect things to go easily for them. More is required from ones who have the knowledge than from those who are completely ignorant of what the spirit has to offer them.

You are the repositories of the greatest power in the universe. It is the power of the spirit. There is nothing or nobody that can burke that power, that can overthrow it, that can prevent it from fulfilling itself.

You must always remember that if at the end of your earthly lives you have succeeded helping one soul to find itself, then your existence has not been in vain.

If you have this knowledge and fail to live up to it, then you must pay the price because ignorance is not your excuse.

Knowledge inevitably brings responsibility. More is expected of you when you have truth. And this is the great trust that is reposed in you.

It is my constant theme that knowledge brings responsibility. You cannot have all the benefits of knowledge without having at the same time the responsibility of what you do with it. That is your free will, and the measure of your responsibility which none other than yourself can fulfil.

The natural laws of the Great Spirit ensure that divine justice is ultimately meted out. None can escape the natural law.

Provision has been made for you and for every manifestation of being in your world and in other worlds.

The law is supreme. The law overlooks none. The law ensures that all you need for your spiritual growth and development will be available when you are ready to receive it.

Motive is the acid test. You cannot cheat the law. The millionaire who gives money to charity does not increase his spiritual growth by doing so. But the one who gives what he cannot afford because he knows it will help, his stature will increase.

Compassion is one of the attributes of the spirit. I have said it so many times. Love, affection, friendship, compassion, mercy, tolerance, kindness, service, are the attributes of the spirit. When you express them, you are manifesting yourselves spiritually.

There is nothing in the world of matter that can quell your spirit. Your spirit is greater than anything that appertains to the physical body. When things and people seem difficult sometimes, withdraw into the silence.

Allow the great love emanating from our world to enfold you in its embrace and to recharge you with its power, so that you emerge stronger as a result.

You have to be fluid in your outlook. Fluidity is the only way to approach matters of the spirit. Dogmatism leads to sterility. You must have an open mind. The power of the spirit is infinite; therefore it is limitless.

What you have achieved in your world is merely scratching the surface of the vast range of spiritual treasures awaiting you.

We do not dictate. We do not regard you as puppets or marionettes to be manipulated.

We desire to co-operate so that you develop your receptivity to become greater instruments for the power of the spirit, whether it be in the form of inspiration, communication, healing, or any aspect of mediumship. There is room for all.

At some stage in every individual's earthly life there comes a moment when the soul is ready to receive. This is the opportunity the Great Spirit affords every one of His children.

Sometimes it has to be achieved through sickness, bereavement or crisis. But this is the catalyst which enables the soul to unfold.

Spread knowledge wherever you can. Remember, you are the emissaries of a power greater than anything to be found in your world.

That is not only a privilege, but a responsibility. Never behave in any way that would diminish the love and respect in which you are held.

Strive to be tolerant, compassionate, sympathetic, humane, wherever you can. If others misjudge you, regret it for their sake.

If you can help, extend a hand. Serve whenever you can. These are simple but profound truths. Go your way; do your work the best you can. That is all that is expected of you.

Can you please give me some information on Dr Edward Bach, his flower remedies and where to obtain them? – Brenda Wilkins, Slough.

The word "Bach" is derived from Edward Bach's name and is pronounced "Batch" unlike the German surname "Bach."

Dr Bach studied medicine at the University College Hospital, London and was a house surgeon there.

He worked in general practice, having a set of consulting rooms in Harley Street. A bacteriologist and later a pathologist, Dr Bach worked on vaccines and a set of homoeopathic nosodes still known as "The seven Bach nosodes."

Despite the success of his work with orthodox medicine, Dr Bach felt dissatisfied with the way doctors were expected to concentrate on diseases and ignore the people who were suffering them.

He was inspired by his work with homoeopathy, but wanted to find remedies that would be purer and less reliant on the products of disease.

In 1930, Dr Bach gave up his lucrative Harley Street practice and left London determined to devote the rest of his life to a new system of medicine that he was sure could be found in nature.

Just as he had abandoned his old home, office and work, so Dr Bach similarly abandoned the scientific methods he used up until then.

Instead, he chose to rely on his natural gifts as a healer and use intuition to guide him. One by one, Dr Bach found the remedies he wanted, each aimed at a particular mental state or emotion.

His life followed a seasonal pattern. The spring and summer were spent looking for and preparing remedies. In the winter, Dr Bach gave help and advice to all who came looking for them.

When he treated patients' personalities and feelings, Dr Bach found that their unhappiness and physical distress would be alleviated as the natural healing potential in their bodies was unblocked and allowed to work once more.

One difference between homoeopathy and the Bach flower remedies are the "potentisation" methods used to produce them.

Flower remedies are created using the sun or, for hardier plants, the boiling method. Both systems were invented by Dr Bach.

The sun method involves floating flower heads in a clear glass bowl filled with natural spring water. This is left in bright sunlight for three hours. The flower heads are then removed and the energised water mixed half-and-half with brandy.

The other system involves putting flowering twigs into a pan of spring water and boiling them for half an hour. The pan is then left to cool and plant matter removed. Again, the water is mixed half-and-half with brandy.

In both cases, the resulting mix is the mother tincture, which is further diluted to make the stock bottles sold in shops.

Another key difference is that Bach remedies are only used to treat mental symptoms believed by practitioners to be the root cause of many diseases.

Bach remedies are all derived from non-toxic substances with the idea that a "positive energy" can redirect or neutralise "negative energy."

In 1934, Dr Bach moved to Mount Vernon in Oxfordshire. It was in the lanes and fields around and about that he found the remaining nineteen remedies needed to complete the series.

Dr Bach discovered that he would suffer the emotional state that he needed to cure and then try various plants and flowers until he found the one single plant that could help him.

There are thirty-eight original Bach remedies, plus "Rescue Remedy." Each are prescribed for certain mental and emotional problems. They form a complete system with which practitioners treat every variety of emotional imbalance.

"Rescue Remedy" is a pre-blended combination of Rock Rose, Impatiens, Clematis, Star of Bethlehem and Cherry Plum. The ingredients are believed to relieve acute stress, anxiety and panic attacks, especially in emergencies.

"Rescue Remedy" is available either in a small spray-bottle or in a glass bottle with an eye-dropper. Drops are generally taken under the tongue.

Additionally, "Rescue Remedy" also comes in the form of a cream which is rubbed into the skin.

Dr Bach passed away peacefully on the evening of November 27, 1936. He was only 50 years old, but left behind him several lifetime's experience and effort, and a system of medicine that is now used all over the world.

Further details can be obtained from The Dr Edward Bach Centre, Mount Vernon, Bakers Lane, Sotwell, Oxon, OX10 0PZ.

Dr Bach's remedies are widely available in health food shops and some chemists. Many bookshops also carry titles about Dr Bach and his remarkable system of natural medicine.

Is there any evidence of spirit intervention regarding a lost or disputed will? – Betty Wilson, Manchester.

I found two cases of spirit intervention whilst researching this question. The first involves the famous seer Swedenborg.

Mme Marteville, a widow, was asked to pay a debt incurred by her "dead" husband. She remembered that it had been paid, but could not find the receipt.

During a visit to Swedenborg, Mme Marteville asked the seer if he had known her husband.

Swedenborg answered in the negative because he had lived the whole time in London while the husband was in Stockholm.

Eight days afterwards, the "dead" man appeared to the widow in a dream. He showed her where she would find a casket of the finest workmanship with the receipt along with a magnificent pin adorned with twenty diamonds that Mme Marteville believed was also lost.

She immediately got out of bed, ran to the place indicated in the dream – and found the casket and contents, including the receipt.

In the morning, Mme Marteville was hardly awake when Swedenborg was announced. Without having knowledge of her dream, Swedenborg told her that during the night he conversed with many spirit beings.

Amongst them was her "dead" husband. He cut short the conversation by saying that he must visit his wife in order to reveal to her the whereabouts of a paper of the highest importance and of a diamond breast pin she thought was lost.

Swedenborg had, therefore, called to see whether the husband had kept his promise.

The second case involves a second will. James L. Chaffin, the testator, was a farmer in Davie County, North Carolina. He was married and had four sons.

On November 16, 1905, Mr Chaffin made a will attested by two witnesses. He gave his farm to his third son, Marshall, whom he appointed sole executor.

The widow and the three other sons were left unprovided for. Some fourteen years later, Mr Chaffin had a change of heart and made a new will as follows:

"After reading the 27th chapter of Genesis, I, James L. Chaffin, do make my last will and testament, and here it is.

"I want, after giving my body a decent burial, my little property to be equally divided between my four children, if they are living at my death, both personal and real estate divided equal; if not living, give share to their children.

"And if she is living, you all must take care of your mammy. Now this is my last will and testament. Witness my hand and seal. James L. Chaffin. This January 16, 1919."

Although unattested, Mr Chaffin's second will would, according to the law of North Carolina, be valid as being written throughout by the testator's own hand on sufficient evidence being obtained that it was in his handwriting.

Having written out this will, Mr Chaffin placed it between two pages of an old family bible formerly belonging to his father, the Rev Nathan S. Chaffin, folding the pages over so as to make a sort of pocket.

The pages so folded were those containing the 27th Chapter of Genesis, which tells how the younger brother Jacob supplanted the elder brother Esau and won his birthright and his father's blessing.

So far as can be ascertained, Mr Chaffin never mentioned the existence of this second will to anyone. However, in the inside pocket of an overcoat belonging to him, he stitched up a roll of paper on which he wrote the words "Read the 27th chapter of Genesis in my daddy's old Bible."

On September 7, 1921, Mr Chaffin died as a result of a fall. His third son, Marshall, obtained probate of the first will on September 24 of that year. The mother and other three brothers did not contest this will, as they knew of no valid reason for doing so.

Four years later, the second son, James Pinkney Chaffin, began having a series of vivid dreams. In one of them, his father appeared "dressed as I had often seen him dressed in life, wearing a black overcoat which I knew to be his own coat."

Mr Chaffin took hold of his coat, pulled it back, said "You will find my will in my overcoat pocket" and then disappeared.

The overcoat had been given to his brother John. Inside was a roll of paper referring to the Bible. The will was found in the old family Bible as Mr Chaffin had indicated.

Soon after its discovery, this document was tendered for probate as Mr Chaffin's real will.

The case was heard in December 1925. After a jury was sworn, the hearing began. The court later adjourned for lunch.

When the hearing was continued, one of the lawyers announced that during the interval, an amicable agreement had been arrived at and that the new will would be admitted to probate without opposition.

James Pinkney Chaffin commented: "Many of my friends do not believe it is possible for the living to hold communication with the dead, but I am convinced that my father actually appeared to me on these several occasions. I shall believe it to the day of my death."

Spirit flowers are blooming lovely!

BY MONSIGNOR ROBERT HUGH BENSON

In a red-letter day, the classic volume "Life in the World Unseen" has just been reprinted. It is based upon a series of spirit scripts given to medium Anthony Borgia by an old friend, Monsignor Robert Hugh Benson, the son of a former Archbishop of Canterbury.

In this extract, we join monsignor soon after he passed on. To obtain the book, which contains graphic details of life on the Other Side, please see the details at the end of this feature.

THERE was another astonishing feature I noticed when I drew near to the flowers, and that was the sound of music that enveloped them, making such soft harmonies as corresponded exactly and perfectly with the gorgeous colours of the flowers themselves.

I am not, I am afraid, sufficiently learned, musically, to be able to give you a sound technical explanation of this beautiful phenomenon. Suffice it for the moment, then, to say that these musical sounds were in precise consonance with all that I had so far seen – which was very little – and that everywhere there was perfect harmony.

Already I was conscious of the revitalising effect of this heavenly garden to such an extent that I was anxious to see more of it.

In company with my old friend upon whom I was here relying for information and guidance, I walked the garden paths, trod upon the exquisite grass, whose resilience and softness were almost comparable to "walking on air," and tried to make myself realise that all this superlative beauty was part of my own home.

There were many splendid trees to be seen, none of which was malformed, such as one is accustomed to see on earth, yet there was no suggestion of strict uniformity of pattern.

It was simply that each tree was growing under perfect conditions, free from the storms of wind that bend and twist the young branches, and free from the inroads of insect life and many other causes of the misshapenness of earthly trees.

As with the flowers, so with the trees. They live for ever incorruptible, clothed always in their full array of leaves of every shade of green and forever pouring out life to all those who approach near them.

I had observed that there did not appear to be what we should commonly call shade beneath the trees and yet there did not appear to be any glaring sun. It seemed to be that there was a radiance of light that penetrated into every corner yet there was no hint of flatness.

I noticed, too, that a comfortable warmth pervaded every inch of space, a warmth perfectly even and as perfectly sustained. The air had a stillness yet there were gentle perfume-laden breezes – the truest zephyrs – that in no way altered the delightful balminess of the temperature.

Here let me say to those who do not care much for "perfumes" of any sort, do not be disappointed when you read these words and feel that it could never be heaven to you if there were something there you do not like. Wait, I say, until you witness these things and I know that then you will feel very differently about them.

I was struck by the fact that there were no signs of walls or hedges or fences; indeed, nothing, so far as I could see, to mark off where my garden began or ended. I was told that such things as boundaries were not needed because each person knew instinctively, but beyond doubt, just where his own garden ended.

There was therefore no encroaching upon another's grounds, although all were open to any who wished to traverse them or linger within them. I was whole-heartedly welcome to go wherever I wished without fear of intruding upon another's privacy.

I was told I should find that this was the rule here and that I would have no different feelings with respect to others walking in my own garden. I exactly described my sentiments at that moment, for I wished, then and there, that all who cared would come into the garden and enjoy its beauties.

I had no notions whatever of ownership personally, although I knew that it was my own "to have and to hold." That is precisely the attitude of all here – ownership and partnership at one and the same time.

Seeing the beautiful state of preservation and care in which all the garden was kept, I inquired of my friend as to the genius who looked after it so assiduously and with such splendid results.

Before answering my question, he suggested that as I had but so very recently arrived in the spirit land, he considered it advisable that I should rest or that at least I should not overdo my sightseeing.

He proposed, therefore, that we should find a pleasant spot – he used the words in a comparative sense because all was more than pleasant everywhere – that we should seat ourselves and then he would expound one or two of the many problems that had presented themselves to me in the brief time since I had passed to spirit.

Accordingly, we walked along until we found such a "pleasant" place beneath the branches of a magnificent tree, whence we overlooked a great tract of the countryside, whose rich verdure undulated before us and stretched far away into the distance.

The whole prospect was bathed in glorious celestial sunshine and I could perceive many houses of varying descriptions picturesquely situated, like my own, among trees and gardens.

We threw ourselves down upon the soft turf and I stretched myself out luxuriously, feeling as though I were lying upon a bed of the finest down.

My friend asked me if I was tired. I had no ordinary sensation of earthly fatigue, but yet I felt somewhat the necessity for a bodily relaxation. He told me that my last illness was the cause of such a desire and that if I wished, I could pass into a state of complete sleep.

At the moment, however, I did not feel the absolute need for that, and I told him that for the present I would much prefer to hear him talk. So he began.

"'Whatsoever a man soweth'," he said, "'that shall he reap.' Those few words describe exactly the great eternal process by which all that you see, actually here before you, is brought about.

"All the trees, the flowers, the woods, the houses that are also the happy homes of happy people – everything is the visible result of 'whatsoever a man soweth.'

"This land, wherein you and I are now living, is the land of the great harvest, the seeds of which were planted upon the earth-plane. All who live here have won for themselves the precise abode they have passed to by their deeds upon the earth."

I was already beginning to perceive many things, the principal one of which – and that which touched me most closely – being the totally wrong attitude adopted by religion in relation to the world of spirit.

The very fact that I was lying there where I was constituted a complete refutation of so much that I taught and upheld during my priestly life upon earth.

I could see volumes of Orthodox teachings, creeds and doctrines melting away because they are of no account, because they are not true and because they have no application whatever to the eternal world of spirit and to the great Creator and Upholder of it. I could see clearly now what I had seen but hazily before – that Orthodoxy is man-made, but that the universe is God-given.

My friend went on to tell me that I should find living within the homes that we could see from where we were lying all sorts and conditions of people; people whose religious views when they were on the earth were equally varied.

One of the great facts of spirit life is that souls are exactly the same the instant after passing into spirit life as they were the instant before.

Death-bed repentances are of no avail since the majority of them are but cowardice born of fear of what is about to happen – a fear of the theologically-built eternal hell that is such a useful weapon in the ecclesiastical armoury and one that perhaps has caused more suffering in its time than many other erroneous doctrines.

Creeds, therefore, do not form any part of the world of spirit, but because people take with them all their characteristics into the spirit world, the fervid adherents to any particular religious body will continue to practise their religion in the spirit world until such time as their minds become spiritually enlightened.

We have here, so my friend informed me – I have since seen them for myself – whole communities still exercising their old earthly religion.

The bigotry and prejudices are all there, religiously speaking. They do no harm, except to themselves, since such matters are confined to themselves. There is no such thing as making converts here!

Such being the case, then, I supposed that our own religion was fully represented here. Indeed, it was! The same ceremonies, the same ritual, the same old beliefs, all are being carried on with the same misplaced zeal in churches erected for the purpose.

The members of these communities know that they have passed on and think that part of their heavenly reward is to continue with their man-made forms of worship.

So they will continue until such time as a spiritual awakening takes place. Pressure is never brought to bear upon these souls; their mental resurrection must come from within themselves. When it does come, they will taste for the first time the real meaning of freedom.

My friend promised that if I wished we could visit some of these religious bodies later, but he suggested that as there was plenty of time, it would be better if first of all I became quite accustomed to the new life.

He had, so far, left unanswered my question as to who was the kindly soul who tended my garden so well, but he read my unspoken thought and reverted to the matter himself.

Both the house and the garden, he told me, were the harvest I had reaped for myself during my earth life. Having earned the right to possess them, I had built them with the aid of generous souls who spend their life in the spirit world performing such deeds of kindness and service to others...

A WARM WELCOME AWAITS YOU

Finding God in the garden

BY SYLVIA COMMON

Late last year saw the passing of Eileen Caddy, one of the founders of the now famous Findhorn community in Scotland. Below, Sussex Spiritualist Sylvia Common charts Eileen's early days and describes the astonishing results achieved with the help of nature spirits.

IN the middle of December 2006, there was a short announcement on BBC Radio 4 reporting the "death" of Eileen Caddy. The name seemed familiar so I checked my bookshelves to refresh my memory.

Eileen and Peter Caddy – together with their friend and colleague Dorothy Maclean – were the inspired people who began to create a garden in the early 1960s on barren and windswept sand dunes at Findhorn in the north of Scotland.

Here, against overwhelming odds, they were able to grow the most wonderful plants, flowers, fruit and vegetables not only through their own hard labour, but via spiritual contact with nature spirits and devas.

No artificial fertilisers were ever used on the ground, which was mainly sand and gravel. Leading soil experts have stated that compost and good organic husbandry alone were not responsible for the sensational results achieved.

The existence of nature spirits, devas and elementals has been known and acknowledged for many years by mystics, clairvoyants and people who are in tune with nature, such as gardeners, some of whom are able to see the "Little people."

They seem to make their presence known in areas where there is very little materialism and to individuals with whom they feel an affinity. For instance, the Irish poet W. B. Yeats acknowledged their existence. Some of his poems reflect this.

At first, the faith of these three inspired people must have been tested to the utmost. It was a cold November day in 1962 and starting to snow when Peter Caddy moved their 30ft caravan on to a site at Findhorn Bay Caravan Park. They were to live in that small caravan with their three sons and Dorothy Maclean for the next seven years.

They had been led there by the guidance Dorothy received in meditation. Although they did not know it then, eventually there would be a flourishing garden on the site of the caravan park and – much later – a thriving spiritual community of two hundred people.

In spite of all his efforts to find work more congenial to his new life, Peter remained unemployed, drawing only £8.00 per week benefit. He had resigned from his job as manager of a local hotel and all the benefits it entailed.

Spirit obviously had plans for him that did not sit easy with a materialistic lifestyle! Guidance told them to live for the moment and enjoy it, so they set to work to improve their surroundings, putting their trust in God and Spirit.

The weeks of unemployment grew into months. Every time a job came up, something prevented Peter from getting it. Eventually, officials sent one of their investigators round to seem him.

After going through his file, he said, "Would you say that God is preventing you from getting a job?"

Amazed at his perception, Peter replied, "Why, yes, indeed."

"Well, then, presumably if we cut off your money, God will provide for you?" said the investigator, who had played his ace card.

"Yes, I expect He will," said Peter. So that was how it was.

Just as they received the last payment, donations started coming in from the first publication of Eileen's guidance, "God Spoke to Me."

Peter, Eileen and Dorothy spent evenings and bad weather days poring over gardening books, never losing faith in spite of the inconvenient and cramped conditions.

They had to brave the elements every time they needed to use the toilet because they were situated on a narrow, sandy peninsula jutting into the north sea waters of the Moray Firth and exposed to almost constant winds with only a narrow belt of conifers to the west to provide some shelter.

Worst of all was the material in which they planned to sow and plant – just sand and gravel held together with clumps of couch grass.

They did not find the books very encouraging. Besides containing discrepancies and different opinions, they had been written for gardens in the south of England where conditions were far more favourable than in north-east Scotland.

Furthermore, they were written for gardens with soil, not sand on top of a mass of stones and gravel.

In the spring of 1963, Peter inserted his spade and started removing the couch grass, turning it upside down into the trench and adding manure from a nearby riding stable.

They also started collecting materials for their own compost heaps and were off to a good start when told that a bale of straw had fallen off a truck in a nearby road and was just waiting for the right person to collect it!

Then they were told about a large field with horses in it that produced more of the precious manure that they needed. The owner of the caravan park delivered grass cuttings whilst shops in the town gave old potatoes and vegetables.

Dorothy and Eileen cut seaweed from the rocks on the shore and collected potash from fires connected with forestry. They felt love and appreciation for each free gift from natural sources.

Slowly but surely the garden began to take shape. Peter was told that by working with total concentration and love for what he was doing, he could instil that love into the soil.

He states in his book that he was actually aware of radiations of light and love passing through him as he worked. This did not happen until he got the spade in his hands and started digging. Then, like connecting up positive and negative poles, the energy flowed through him into the soil. Thus an intangible wall of light was created around the caravan.

Their days were interspersed with times of quiet and meditation, out of doors whenever the weather was suitable.

Peter's guidance took the form of intuitive flashes of inspiration that carried a sense of conviction, a deep inner "knowing." These were sometimes confirmed and amplified by the guidance received by Eileen.

Of the three of them, Dorothy always had the closest link with nature. One morning in May, she received a message during meditation that brought them into a totally new phase in the garden's development.

Dorothy directly contacted a spirit of the kingdom of plants – the deva of the garden pea. Devas and nature spirits are an integral part of the creative process – and here was the pea diva offering to help them in the garden.

They were able to ask questions and receive answers to all the things that had stumped them over the past weeks, put to the deva of the species concerned. If something was wrong, they were told what to do about it, things any gardener might know through years of experience.

But Peter, Eileen and Dorothy were beginners; the conscious co-operation between man and the nature forces was a pioneering experiment for them all.

The trio were establishing a harmonious relationship with the devas, who had previously been so shy of modern man with his destructive ways. They worked with nature, the devas and elementals, and gradually found harmony with them.

By the end of June, they started to enjoy the fruits of their labour, but there were still problems to overcome, such as cabbage root fly.

The deva concerned told them to think of the plants as strong and healthy while they would charge them with sufficient light to withstand attacks. They drew up soil around the stems and poured love into them. In other gardens in the area cabbages died.

Those in their garden managed to hang on until the larvae had eaten all the roots below and developed into chrysalids. Then the plants developed new roots higher up and continued to grow.

Many similar problems were overcome and the garden began to attract local attention. People could scarcely believe it was only three months since the first seeds were sown. How could there be so much greenness and vitality when all around was dry and dead?

Of course, they could not tell them of the co-operation of the devas! As the life force developed in the soil, plants thrived and became resistant to disease and pests.

The devas told them that they would like as many varieties of fruit and vegetables as possible because contact with them was essential and this could only be done when each plant was actually growing.

Also, as many devas as possible would like the opportunity of taking part in this pioneering experiment because it demonstrated that myriads of intelligent beings were at work amongst the fruit, vegetables and flowers.

Peter says in his book that in 1964, they grew sixty-five different types of vegetable, twenty-one kinds of fruit and forty-two different herbs. Dorothy welcomed the deva of each.

As well as the spiritual connection there was, of course, a great deal of hard physical work. Peter was kept busy from dawn to dusk in the long summer days, Dorothy joining him in the mornings and Eileen in the afternoons.

The list of jobs must have seemed endless – constructing fences and frames, gathering materials for compost, making liquid manure, sowing, thinning, planting, weeding, watering, etc.

Against all the rule books, this was a very intensive garden because of the limited space. On one occasion, Peter was prompted to grow and plant out thousands of seedling lettuce, not knowing what could be done with so many.

They had lettuce everywhere – along celery trenches, planted on each ridge, between radishes and fruit trees. The whole garden was a mass of bright green.

As it happened, there was a shortage of lettuce in the area that year and shop owners and individuals came from miles around to buy them as well as radishes, spinach and parsley.

The taste and quality of the organically grown produce from this special garden accounted for the speed which word went around. Money from sales enabled them to buy more seeds and plants.

This verdant, thriving, highly productive garden confounded experts. At Peter's request, a county horticultural adviser came to take a soil sample in the autumn of 1965.

He admits that he felt the soil might be lacking in some ingredients, although the devas had told them that if it was deficient, they, with the help of nature spirits, could produce from the ethers the elements needed for perfect growth.

On arrival, the adviser voiced his doubts, saying that he knew the type of soil well and it would certainly require a dressing of at least two ounces of sulphate of potash per square yard as well as a few other ingredients. He returned six weeks later baffled. There were no deficiencies whatsoever.

I could go on and on about the wonder that is Findhorn. It is a reminder to all of us who love to garden to spare a thought for the devas and nature spirits.

Try to approach gardening not as a chore to be done as quickly as possible, but slowly with love and consideration for the unseen ones as you tend the soil and plants.

Pause a while and listen to the birds; look at the delicate beauty of a dragonfly's wing when it rests on a bush. Perhaps you may find that the love you give out is returned to you by the guardians of the natural world.

I hope that this year you will indeed feel closer to God's heart in your garden than anywhere else on earth.

Branch out – and hang troubles on a tree!

WISE WORDS FROM THE WEB SELECTED BY VANESSA ATTWOOD

I HIRED a plumber to help me to restore an old farmhouse. After he had just finished a difficult first day on the job, a flat tyre made him lose an hour of work, an electric drill broke down and then his ancient van refused to start.

While I drove him home, he sat in stony silence. On arriving, he invited me in to meet his family.

As we walked toward the front door, he paused briefly at a small tree, touching the tips of the branches with both hands.

When opening the door, he underwent a truly amazing transformation. The plumber's tanned face was wreathed in smiles as he hugged his two small children and gave his wife a kiss.

Afterwards, he walked me to the car. We passed the tree and my curiosity got the better of me. I asked him about what I had seen him do earlier.

"Oh, that's my trouble tree," he replied. "I know I can't help having troubles on the job, but one thing's for sure – those problems don't belong in the house with my wife and children.

"I just hang them up on the tree every night when I come home and ask God to take care of them. Then in the morning, I pick them up again.

"The funny thing is," he smiled, "that when I come out in the morning to pick 'em up, there aren't nearly as many as I remember hanging up there the night before!"

■ Say "Hello" to people. It's amazing what a "Hello" from you can do for individuals. Likewise, say "Please" and "Thank you" even when you don't really have to.

■ To live a life in fear is cowardly. Learn to face your fears head on.

■ Look after your teeth even though they can be replaced. Likewise, look after your eyes: they cannot be replaced.

■ Do not feel guilty if you don't know what you want to do or would like out of life when in your twenties. The interesting people I am friendly with still don't know what they want to do with their lives... and they're in their forties!

■ Don't worry about the future. You cannot plan or change what is coming.

■ Be on good terms with as many people as possible.

■ Make your point quietly and clearly, and listen to others, even the dull and ignorant: they too have their story.

■ Avoid loud and aggressive people. Also avoid those with a negative outlook or opinion.

■ Don't expect anyone else to support you. You may have an inheritance or a wealthy spouse. Buy one day either one could run out on you!

■ Do not compare yourself with others as you may become bitter or vain. There will always be greater and lesser people than you.

■ Decide for yourself what is important to you in your life.

■ Keep interested in your chosen career, however humble. It is a real possession in the changing fortune of time.

■ Exercise caution in your business affairs. Sadly, the world is full of con-men, get-rich-quick schemes, deceit and fraud.

■ Accept that other people will always appear to have more luck than you in health, jobs, love, wealth, friends and life in general. Don't feel bad or aggrieved about this. Be happy with your lot. It's your life and no one else's.

■ Enjoy your achievements and look forward to your plans.

■ Don't waste time. It is a precious commodity.

■ Life is short, so enjoy it to the full; it is not a dress rehearsal.

■ Hang onto your dreams whatever they may be. Ignore the doubters; they're just jealous because they do not have any.

■ There is more to life than a job. When it gets you down, find a new or better one, even if it's at a lower salary. Money is not everything.

■ You cannot buy happiness or love, so don't even try. Money can only purchase material goods. Some of the best things in life really are free.

■ To be loved and wanted is one of life's greatest feelings. Return the favour in equal measure.

■ Do not fake affection. Be honest and truthful about your feelings. If you love and care about someone, tell them. It is the things you don't say that you regret the most.

■ In a loving relationship, do not count the years; count the moments.

■ Keep all of your love letters. Read them when you are down and feel unloved.

■ Get to know your parents. Be loving to your children. They are your link to your past and future.

■ You're not going to get much out of life if you only ever do what's safe.

■ A person who passes on rich does so in disgrace. Donate money to worthy causes.

■ Make the best possible effort in everything you do in your life. Be part of life and participate to the fullest extent you are able.

■ Enjoy your freedom. You will appreciate it more if it's taken away from you.

■ Pass on your wisdom, but learn from others.

■ Do not criticise your children too much, as they could be bitter towards you afterwards. Praise them more than you criticise.

■ If you do not have anything good to say about someone, don't say anything at all.

■ Practice the Teflon technique where others' negativity simply slides off you.

Everybody suffers insults and put-downs.

■ Fear of failure is an excuse for not trying. There are only two failures in life – not trying and giving up. Nothing comes to those who will not try.

■ Stop moaning! Instead, put your energy into doing something positive about a problem.

■ Learn to cancel and continue. When actors make a mistake, they instantly have to put it behind them and give their all to the next part.

■ When things go wrong, just try again. Do not fear future mistakes or hang on to past ones.

■ When you are angry with someone, do nothing until you have cooled down or you will say something you'll always regret.

■ Try to be calm, for you will have a better chance of being heard. If you shout, the person you are telling off will hear your anger rather than the point you're trying to make.

■ Dance or sing on a regular basis – by yourself, with your spouse or in a group, but just do it. It will make you feel good!

■ Every year, make five promises. Try to accomplish one of them.

HERE are some symptoms of inner peace – and we can all obtain them if we try!

An unmistakable ability to enjoy each moment. A tendency to think and act spontaneously rather than on fears based on past experiences.

A loss of interest in interpreting the actions of others and judging people. Similarly, a loss of interest in conflict along with the loss of the ability to worry.

Frequent, overwhelming episodes of appreciation. Contented feelings of being connected with others and nature. To that, add frequent attacks of smiling.

An increased susceptibility to the love extended by others as well as the uncontrollable urge to extend it.

Inner peace is contagious... so do all you can to pass it on!

NOW here is a lovely Native American prayer from which we can all learn something:

Oh Great Spirit, Whose voice I hear in the winds and Whose breath gives life to all the world, please hear me.

I come before You, one of your children. I am small and weak. I need Your strength and wisdom.

Let me walk in beauty. Make my eyes ever behold the red and purple sunset. Also make my hands respect the things You have made and my ears sharp to hear Your voice.

Please also make me wise, so that I may know the things You have taught my people and the lesson You have hidden in every leaf and rock.

I seek strength not to be superior to my brothers, but to be able to fight my greatest enemy – myself.

Make me ever ready to come to You with clean hands and straight eyes, so when life fades like a sunset, my spirit may come to You without shame.

Painting a portrait of your life

BY M. H. TESTER

This month, spirit healer M. H. Tester likens life to a painting – and urges readers to try and produce a masterpiece.

THE basic difference between the mental process of an artist and that of a critic is his ability to anticipate.

The critic looks at the picture and tries to visualise the original scene. He makes an assessment of the way the artist saw it and the technique used to transfer it onto canvas.

But the artist anticipated the picture. It was there in his mind's eye. His technique was merely a method of recording what already existed.

A man who cannot anticipate the finished picture – and who does not possess the technique to record it – may still retain his faculties of appreciation.

A man's life is a picture. Everything that happens to you draws another line. The lessons that failures teach add another touch of colour.

The services you render, the happiness you spread, the laughter, love, compassion and understanding are all there – golden, silver and white.

The intolerance, greed, lust, gluttony, envy and ill-will are there, too, in green, grey and black.

Some of your picture shows already, in your manner, through your reactions and on your face. At 20, you have the face God gave you. At 40, you have the face you gave yourself.

When his picture is completed, the artist steps back so that he may appraise his labour. It is his life's work – this picture of his existence.

He steps out of our world. He sheds the artist's smock, the body he has worn. He takes a long, searching look at what he has completed.

His guides welcome him. They are his critics. They look at the picture that was his life. But he is the most critical of them all because only he knows how much better he could have done.

In time this will happen to you. When your earthly span is over, your body will be discarded. You will leave this world.

But before your spiritual evolution can continue, there will be this moment of appraisal. You cannot avoid it.

Your life here is going to be criticised, action by action, brush stroke by brush stroke. It will be examined in broad canvas and in the minutest

Open Circle every Tuesday at 7.15 pm. Open Platform at 7.30 pm for budding mediums held on the third Wednesday of each month. Healing. No appointment necessary. Last slot is 15 minutes before end of healing session: Mondays 2.00 pm-3.00 pm (except Bank Holidays) and Fridays 7.00 pm-8.30 pm detail.

When you divest yourself of your earthly body, you also cast off the costume, the make-up and the props of the part you have played.

The real you emerges, the distilled essence of you, the spiritual you. You are free of the role and the prejudices, ignorance and short-sightedness.

Now you can see it all – not only the picture, but the frame. You see not only the brush strokes, but the motivations. You see not only the colours, but the form.

Although every artist knows he will take a final truthful look at his work, he takes every opportunity of evaluating what he is doing during its progress.

Watch him in his studio. He will pause, take a few steps back and cock his head to one side.

Suddenly, he will pack up, clean off his palette, put his brushes away and leave it all for a couple of days. When he starts again, the eye is fresh, his inspiration is renewed.

You, too, can appraise, adjust and amend your life's work as it progresses. Why wait until it is finished? Step back a few paces. Take a long, critical look at what you are creating.

The essential ingredients that make a successful work of life have been defined by many philosophers and religious leaders.

Among them are unselfishness, service, love, compassion, spiritual appreciation of truth, righteousness and survival of the human soul.

In art circles, a man may remain a critic. He need never paint a picture, yet may become an authority.

In the world that we now know this is not possible. Each one of us is producing the picture of his life. You create now and criticise later.

You know what will be the basis of criticism. What you do not know is when the picture will be finished.

Your life here may end tomorrow. It may yet take several more decades. Therefore, you must proceed on the assumption that your workmanship will stand up to inspection at any time.

You may not have the opportunity of finishing or improving your work. When the time comes for you to go to the next world, will you look back on your life here with affection?

Could you say, "The world is now a better place because of me"? Will you look lovingly at the broad canvas you have painted and feel you did your best?

Perhaps when you know you can do no more you will feel remorse for the poor picture you have painted. You may say: "Let me stay a little longer; let me scrape the canvas clean and start again. I am sure I can do better."

But the canvas is dry, the palette is clean, the brushes have been put away and the paint-flecked, worn smock has been discarded. It is done.

Few of us can produce masterpieces. All of us are capable of turning out a sound piece of work that is the very best that we can do with what we have. Will your life's work stand the test?

happened to him, even though there was no belief in an afterlife.

But, of course, it is better to possess knowledge and so be prepared otherwise some may take a long time even to realise that they have departed from the earthly world.

One of the first things of which Peter will be aware is the solidity and naturalness of his surroundings. Walls, floors, furniture – all will be as substantial as they were on earth whilst he will find himself clothed in a replica of the personal clothing he wore when here.

Then, as Peter looks out from his abode, he will observe that the trees, flowers, birds and other familiar things are all there, with the difference that all colouring is far more varied and vivid.

Should Peter require food, there it will be, just whatever he desires, but it is a fact that such requirements soon disappear as there is no longer a physical body to satisfy.

His arrival being known, friends and relatives who have earlier passed into the spirit world will flock to greet him. Indeed, there will be many happy reunions.

Generally speaking, the state of happiness to be found by each spirit arriving in the next world will depend upon the development and soul progress they have made in this world.

They will find no seat of judgement awaiting their appearance. All appraise their own virtues and faults, and have ample scope to right any wrongs and progress spiritually.

There exist schools and colleges, where it is possible to begin, continue or perfect one's own particular studies. We each possess within us the desire to follow some certain activity which, during earth life, may have been frustrated.

But in the next life there are no such limitations. There is every opportunity to occupy ourselves with the very task we have always longed for.

Let us follow Peter and see through his eyes more of what might await us at the time of transition.

The most natural things happen. The same guardian spirit who attended him from birth – and before – now receives him.

Parents, friends, ancestors and others who may have preceded him congregate to greet him with a joyous welcome. No one is neglected at death.

Even the outcast on life's highway is met on the threshold by spirit entities and all help possible given to aid adjustment to the new world he has entered.

It is a real world, populated with equally real and "solid" people. He can walk on its surface, travel, bathe in its oceans and lakes, and enjoy its magnificent scenery.

Peter will see beautiful trees, and flowers of exquisite colour and fragrance. He can pay social calls – and cultivate the arts and sciences.

There are schools and universities, laboratories and other establishments where learning can proceed; libraries for those who love books; great buildings for teaching and enjoyment of music; gardens for the gardener and workshops for those who desire to use their hands.

There are facilities for sport, recreation, rest and relaxation. Life continues – naturally – and very much as on earth. Does all this sound too good to be true?

If so, why? One of the first things Peter notices is that of familiarity. Just as he was familiar with things on earth, so does this continuation of everything become equally familiar there.

Sudden change to something entirely different would result in bewilderment and chaos of mind.

But – oh yes, there is a "but"! – only if one's earth life has justified it will such a spirit world be enjoyed.

Of course, we are not expected to have been saints. A normal, decent life will qualify us for that kind of world. Throughout our lives here we will have sent over the material of our thoughts and deeds to be fashioned there into our future spiritual homes.

There is something beautiful in the fitness of everything associated with spirit life. In form and substance they will be the best of everything we have thought and done. Nothing will have been in vain.

But there will be the other side of the picture, too, reflecting our imperfections and any darker aspect of our earthly life, but not in a way to discourage us.

Individuals who have lived low, degraded lives must of necessity enter the lower spheres for a while. For most people, however, spirit life can be anticipated with joy and pleasure. It will just be going home.

The Global Forum of Spiritual Healing

Caring first

The Forum was established to support the voluntary spiritual healer. The organisations associated do not pay affiliation fees. Neither do the practitioners pay a registration fee. Organisations maintain their own registers.

The Forum holds a register of the organisations as recommended in the House of Lords report.

Spiritual healing is an ancient method of healing. The Forum has agreed minimum standards for spiritual healing – the Holistic Approach to Best Practice.

Voluntary spiritual healers believe "Freely we receive, freely we give."

The Global Forum, the Registers of Associated Organisations and the Unified Training for Voluntary Spiritual Healers are affiliated to the Institute for Complementary Medicine
